School district left with $900K budget shortfall

LIVI STANFORD | Staff Writer
livi.stanford@dailycommercial.com

The Florida Department of Education recently underestimated the number of students reported in the state's school districts by 9,230.

As a result, school districts statewide will be losing $51 million over the next two months, with Lake County's share estimated at $916,222.

Lake's school district actually had a reported increase of 140 students in February.

Officials said cuts to make up the shortfall could affect schools.

"We are doing our best to hold schools harmless," said Chris Patton, district spokesman. "It is not going to be painless. There could be a delay in hiring to make up that budget loss and money that has not been spent out of supplies and materials."

Because of a budget surplus, Florida lawmakers are pushing for $500 million worth of tax cuts this Legislative session. School Board Member Bill Mathis, and others, think lawmakers need to get their priorities straight.

"If you have an obligation, which Florida has to education, how can you think of a $500 million tax cut when

Sinkhole reopens under homes

Despite being packed with truckloads of concrete over the weekend, a sinkhole between two houses in The Villages has reopened and grown wider.

The hole in the 2000 block of Chalmer Terrace is now 65 feet wide and 70 feet deep. It also has consumed more soil beneath the foundations of both houses.

"The plan is to save these homes. The mitigation company is hopeful that it will be able to do that; they are working very hard to be able to do that," Gina Lambert, emergency management specialist for The Villages Public Safety Department, said Wednesday of engineers, geologists and other officials working with Helicon Property Restoration of Tampa to assess the situation and to devise another plan to save the houses.

"The plan, at this point for them, is to fill it with fill dirt and monitor it for the next 24 to 48 hours to look for signs of settling or if the hole is going to grow, and then they will look at a long-term fix for it," Lambert said.

She added Helicon will study if there is normal settling or if there are deep crevices that are opening up and allowing the dirt to continue to filter on down.

Lambert said both houses appear in good condition.

"We are not seeing any exterior cracks," Lambert said, noting the concrete mixture

Man who murdered Sorrento couple executed in Raiford

Rachel Scott was only 5-months-old in 1990 and lying in her crib when Robert Eugene Hendrix stabbed her father — his cousin — and shot him in the head.

Hendrix then stabbed her mother 30 times, slashed her throat and shot her twice in their Sorrento home.

On Wednesday, 24 years later, it was Scott who would see Hendrix die, lying on a gurney in a Florida death chamber. After he was given a lethal injection about 6:11 p.m., he gasped his last visible breath about 6:16 p.m. and was pronounced dead at 6:21 p.m.

Perched at a podium in front of the Florida State Prison in Raiford late Wednesday and surrounded by family members, Department of Corrections officials and media, Scott said she has kept her parents in her heart and asked for the public to do the same.

"Thank you for allowing my parents to not be forgotten," said Scott.

Prosecutors said Hendrix and his cousin, Elmer Scott Jr., 25, were arrested for breaking into a house in 1990. Scott accepted a plea deal that would keep him out of prison if he testified against Hendrix, who was offered a plea agreement of four years imprisonment

US weighs clemency for inmates

ERIC TUCKER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration is encouraging many nonviolent federal prisoners to apply for early release — and expecting thousands to take up the offer. It's an effort to deal with high costs and overcrowding in prisons, and also a matter of fairness, the government says.

On Wednesday, the Justice Department unveiled a revamped clemency process directed primarily at low-level felons imprisoned for at least 10 years who have clean records while in custody. The effort is part of a broader administration push to scale back harsh penalties in some drug-related prosecutions and to address sentencing disparities arising from the 1980s crack cocaine epidemic that yielded disproportionately tough punishment for black drug offenders.

"These older, stringent punishments that are out of line with sentences imposed under today's laws erode people's confidence in our criminal justice system," said Deputy Attorney General James Cole in laying out new criteria that will be used in evaluating clemency petitions for possible recommendation for the president's approval.

Deputy Attorney General James Cole gestures during a news conference at the Justice Department in Washington, Wednesday.

Though the criteria apply solely to federal inmates, states, too are grappling with severe prison overcrowding. In Nebraska, for example, prisons were at 155 percent of capacity at the end of March. And in California, courts have ordered the state to reduce the inmate population to 137.5 percent of designed capacity, or 112,164 inmates in the 34 facilities, by February 2016.

The White House, sometimes criticized as too stingy with its clemency power, says it's seeking more candidates for leniency in an overcrowded federal prison system whose costs comprise a sizable percentage of the Justice Department's budget.

The system's population has rocketed in recent decades, creating rising multibillion-dollar expenses that officials say threaten other law enforcement priorities and that an inspector general's report last year characterized as a "growing crisis." The United States incarcerates about a quarter of the world's prisoners. Of the roughly 216,000 inmates in federal custody, nearly half are imprisoned for drug-related crimes.

But officials say now's the time to consider releasing more prisoners early.

"These defendants were properly held accountable for their criminal conduct. However, some of them, simply because of the operation of sentencing laws on the books at the time, received substantial sentences that are disproportionate to what they would receive today," Cole said.

Officials say they don't know how many of the tens of thousands of drug-related convicts would be eligible for early release, but an ideal candidate would meet six criteria — including no history of violence, no ties to criminal organizations or gangs and a clean prison record. He must also have already served 10 years or more of his sentence and be likely to have received a substantially shorter offense if convicted of the same offense today.

The Bureau of Prisons will notify all inmates of the criteria next week and provide electronic surveys to those who think they deserve clemency.

The Justice Department expects the vast majority of applicants to be drug prisoners but didn't foreclose the possibility that inmates convicted of other crimes — financial fraud, for example — could be considered.

that was used over the weekend is how Helicon often mitigates sinkhole damage. "That is common practice," she said.

Lambert said the sinkhole getting bigger was not foreseen.

"It's Mother Nature," she said. "Unfortunately, Mother Nature has her own agenda."

Helicon officials placed yellow caution tape around a wider perimeter and neighboring homes for safety and to minimize traffic, Lambert said.

Crews also worked across the street from the sinkhole trying to locate the water lines.

"We want to be prepared so if the sinkhole does come out toward the street, we can act very quickly, shut off that water because the last thing you want with sinkholes is to add more water to it," Lambert said.

The homeowners are seasonal residents and no one has been inside either house since Saturday. Lambert said the homeowners were notified of the latest situation and both have sinkhole insurance.

"This could have happened to any one of us," said Villager Ellen Deslam, who was among the onlookers watching from a distance. "How bad is this going to get and is it going to happen again? I can't even get sinkhole insurance. I tried when I first bought my house and I'm going to try again."

As a horde of television media, including ABC Nightly News, descended on the scene, Lambert told reporters that sinkholes are not uncommon in Florida.

"It's just the topography of our state, so there is not any reason and nobody has done anything that could have been averted," she said.

"It's just Mother Nature," Lambert added. "We're working with her and we're trying to figure out what her next step is and go from there."

DID YOU KNOW?

- Sinkholes can develop quickly or slowly over time.
- They are caused by Florida's geology — the state sits on limestone, a porous rock that easily dissolves in water, with a layer of clay on top. The clay is thicker in some locations making them even more prone to sinkholes.
- Other states sit atop limestone in a similar way, but Florida has additional factors such as extreme weather, aquifer pumping and construction.
- Though most are only 10 to 12 feet in diameter, sinkholes have been known to expand to hundreds of feet in diameter. In fact, many of central and north Florida's lakes actually are the result of old sinkholes.
- The state Office of Insurance Regulation says reported claims from sinkholes have risen in recent years. More than 2,300 claims were reported in Florida in 2006 but that figure jumped to almost 6,700 claims in 2010.

you haven't met your obligation already?" he said. "I am concerned because of the inadequate funding we already receive, we are going to have to make cuts."

Indeed, school officials said they will need at least $1 billion worth of buildings, equipment and other capital items to keep up with a projected surge in student growth and technological advancements over the next 30 years.

Board Member Tod Howard is also not pleased with the FLDOE's miscalculation.

"We made a budget based on their numbers and now they are going to change the budget in April?" he asked. "It is aggravating from a board member standpoint to know things we have in progress have to be cut and put off."

Cheryl Etters, spokeswoman for the Florida Department of Education, said Wednesday she was still waiting to hear back from finance staff concerning the issue.

Because of savings from cuts to courtesy busing and transportation, Howard said he is hoping the district may have an additional half a million dollars to work with to soften the blow.

Even so, Howard said everything is on the table, including the issue of administrative pay, which had been postponed for discussion at a recent board meeting until at least next month.

Florida has 67 counties and Lake ranks 20th in terms of highest administrative pay, according to Stuart Klatte, president of the Lake County Education Association.

"Administrative pay was decided long ago by the previous board," Howard said. "Anytime we start to tinker with that it puts the board in a difficult position. We know that teachers are moving to a performance based system. We need to start moving our administrative staff to a performance based system."

School Board member Rosanne Brandeburg said she did not know where the school district would find the dollars to make up the shortfall.

"Where are we going to find $916,222 to finish out the school year?" she asked. "Are we going to start next school year in a deficit?"

Kracker performing 3:30 p.m. Sunday.

Rapper and reality TV star Vanilla Ice, aka Rob Van Winkle, exploded on the pop music scene in the 1990s with his CD "To The Extreme," which sold more than 17 million copies and his single "Ice Ice Baby" remains a pop classic hit. Vanilla Ice has been appearing in concerts all over the world and he serves as a spokesman for Habitat for Humanity and also supports Make-A-Wish Foundation, The Little Smiles Organization and Toys for Tots organization, according to his website.

Vanilla Ice will be coming to Leesburg following a performance today in New York.

Jackyl became famous in the early 1990s with its hard rock, heavy metal and Southern rock, and Uncle Kracker, aka Matthew Shafer, is known for his country/pop songs, including his hit singles "Follow Me," "Smile" and "Drift Away."

There was also "When the Sun Goes Down," the No. 1 country hit that sat on top of the charts for six weeks with Shafer's friend and sometimes tour mate Kenny Chesney, plus the multi-format smash hit, "All Summer Long" which he co-wrote with Kid Rock.

"There's stuff to take serious," Shafer said on his website, while noting overall it doesn't make sense to get worked up on most things. "Take it as it comes. It's pretty simple. I'm trying to lift people's spirits… Make 'em feel good 'cause everybody needs that."

Shipes believes there will be something for all music lovers at Bikefest, everything from blues, rock 'n roll, and country, along with more than 250 vendors and several TV personalities from TruTV, including Lizard Lick Towing and Full Throttle Saloon here to sign autographs.

"We continue to mix it up and we continue to bring in new acts," Shipes said, noting the overall goal is to keep crowds happy and to keep Bikefest "fresh and exciting."

and five years of probation. But Hendrix had other plans. A day before the trial, Hendrix killed Scott and then his wife, Susan Michelle Scott, 18, when she tried to intervene.

Hendrix was eventually convicted of the murders and sentenced to death. Shortly after the U.S. Supreme Court denied his last-minute request for a stay Wednesday afternoon, Rachel Scott and other family members sat in a white rectangular room and waited for the curtain to open to see Hendrix lying under a starched white sheet — with needles in his arms.

At 6 p.m., death penalty opponents, in a designated area in front of the prison, rang a bell to signal the oncoming death.

But Lisa Hunt, the younger sister of Elmer Scott Jr., said that the day had come for justice to be served.

"I just wish our parents could see (this)," Hunt said.

Hours before his scheduled execution Wednesday night, Hendrix ate a dish of pork chops with sausage gravy, biscuits, German chocolate cake and a Mountain Dew drink, according to a spokeswoman with DOC.

His final visitors were his parents and a Catholic spiritual advisor.

When asked if he had any final words, he replied "No."

Dog mauled by bear finds a new home

Staff Report

A plucky little dog that survived a bear attack in late March has found a new home.

"When Deana Osenieks' 7-year-old son saw Percival on the news, he knew that the Treeing Walker coonhound would make the perfect addition to the family," Elisha Pappacoda, a county public information officer, said in a press release.

Percival was picked up as a stray by Lake County animal control officers in the Ocala National Forest. The dog had a grapefruit-size wound on his back.

"He went to a couple of vets and I think they weren't sure exactly what happened to him, but the last vet said 'bear attack,'" Pappacoda said. "She said definitively it was a bear attack."

The Osenieks family from Volusia County — including two kids with three dogs in tow — visited Percival at the Lake County Animal Services shelter in Tavares and held their breath that Percival would be theirs, Pappacoda said.

"I had to tell them if it's meant to be, it's meant to be," Deana said.

The family realized Percival, or Percy, would make an ideal best friend for the family's dog, Shotgun, a redbone coonhound who got his name after suffering two bullet wounds, Pappacoda said. Coincidentally, Shotgun was a Lake County Animal Services shelter dog before being adopted by the Osenieks last year through a local rescue group.

"Percy has the same demeanor as Shotgun, real gentle and sweet, and we are really excited," Deana said. "The kids adore the hounds because they are so cuddly and affectionate."

Percy, along with Shotgun and the family's two other dogs, will be treated to a carefree life on 2.5 acres in New Smyrna Beach, where there is plenty of room to roam and explore.

"I think he is going to have an awesome life," Deana said. "He's a good fit. He is a sweet dog."

Popular goat among animals missing from petting zoo

ROXANNE BROWN | Staff Writer

Nearly two years ago, Patrick Borsey, one of the owners of Redwing Restaurant in Groveland, found himself appealing to the community for the safe return of a baby goat stolen from a fenced-in petting farm at the eatery at 12500 State Road 33.

Soon after that, and just as mysteriously as he'd disappeared, Elvis the goat was returned. Over the past two years, he's been joined by other goats, pigs and animals that Borsey has either rescued, is fostering or that have been born throughout the months.

About a month ago, though, Elvis vanished again, this time with many of his companion animals.

SUBMITTED PHOTO

Along with Elvis, seen here, and his father, Donald, someone has stolen 13 fainting goats and two pot-bellied pigs from a petting zoo at the Redwing Restaurant in Groveland.

"I was very upset at first and thought maybe they'd gotten out somehow, but that wasn't the case," Borsey said. "They were just gone. Some of the little kids are really upset, too, because they like feeding the animals and the goats are a big part of that."

Along with Elvis and his father, Donald, Borsey claims someone has stolen 13 of his 14 fainting goats and two pot-bellied pigs.

Unlike the first incident, Borsey called law enforcement to report the theft and is offering a $500 reward for information leading to the safe return of his animals.

Lake County Sheriff's Office spokesman Lt. John Herrell confirmed that Deputy Sherriff Brett Rutzebeck is on the case and actively investigating leads as they come in.

"I just want them (animals) back," Borsey said. "I have taken them on and they are like family. Every single one of them. Some have been born on the farm. I'm just hoping none of them had made it to anyone's dinner tables."

Since filing the theft report, one of the two

District nixes idea of dress code for parents

Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH — An unlikely proposal to create a dress code to sway unkempt parents from showing up at school functions was quashed Wednesday.

The discussion spurred by Karen Brill, a member of the Palm Beach County School Board, generated national interest for turning the tables on adults, who for generations have nitpicked children's appearance. But the suggestion was met by nothing but dissent from other board members during of debate and showed no sign of being resurrected.

"I want to make sure that every school is inviting to parents," board member Marcia Andrews said. "And whatever they're wearing is secondary in my mind."

as hypertensive cardiovascular disease, all were contributing factors in the death. It is not clear if Reid was high on the drugs at the time of his death.

The State Attorney's Office is reviewing the incident for possible charges and has not reached a decision on the case, the office's supervisor, Walter Forgie, said Wednesday morning.

The incident occurred Jan. 31 at South Lake Hospital.

According to earlier reports by police, Reid was slated to be transferred to a mental facility by the Lake County Sheriff's Office when he became combative with the hospital staff and security. Clermont police officers Jason Sayre, Daniel Moser, John Lee and Jeremy Kevitt were called to the scene. When they arrived, Reid calmed down but became combative again with police and deputies.

Sometime after being restrained by law enforcement and medical staff, Reid died.

One law enforcement official who didn't want to be identified said the man died after doctors gave him a sedative.

None of the officers or deputies were suspended because of the incident.

SUSPECT

Hilliard in April before his arrest Saturday in the Lowe's bomb scare incident, including "suspicious person" reports at a Walgreens on April 17 and a Home Depot on April 18.

Hilliard, 55, also is accused of pulling a knife on several guests at a Palms Motel on April 7, as well as chasing people with a stick in a Bank of America parking lot and driving "erratically" near the Leesburg International Airport the day before he was arrested at Lowe's on Saturday.

Capt. Rob Hicks, a Leesburg police spokesman, said Hilliard wasn't arrested for any of these incidents before Saturday because there was no evidence he had done anything illegal or was a danger to himself and others. Hicks said Hilliard never actually threatened anyone at the motel and when officers reached the bank, they could find no witnesses to give statements.

"He did nothing for us to Baker Act him," said Hicks, referring to involuntary commitment to a mental facility.

No police reports were made in those nine run-ins, except for a car burglary earlier Saturday morning. However, that report, released Wednesday morning, sheds some light on Hilliard's state of mind leading to Saturday's bomb scare.

Police were called to the Bank of America parking lot on U.S. Highway 441 just about 2 a.m. Saturday where Hilliard had reported some gloves were missing from his Mercedes.

The responding officer noted he was familiar with Hilliard after being called to the same area the day after Hilliard's car had run out of gas and was blocking traffic on U.S. 441, as well as from five previous run-ins officers had with him in the "last two days."

Hilliard told the officer he had run out of gas as part of an experiment he was conducting.

And when the officer asked for Hilliard's driver license, vehicle registration and insurance papers, Hilliard said his car was too packed to find the documents — a car the officer noted was filled to the roof with rotting fruit, trash and clothing.

The report adds the officer could not find any evidence the car had been broken into and the burglary was determined to be "unfounded."

Later Saturday, about 9:45 a.m., police received reports of a suspicious man outside of the lumber department entrance at the nearby Lowe's.

Officers said they found Hilliard sitting on the curb applying duct tape to what appeared to be a Molotov cocktail, a simple incendiary device, which Hilliard said was an accelerant to send a rocket to outer space.

A second suspicious item was discovered sitting near Hilliard's car, and two other containers were found inside the vehicle, determined to be fake bombs after being detonated by a bomb squad.

Hilliard was charged with three counts of possessing a hoax bomb, disorderly conduct and carrying a concealed weapon. He remained in the Lake County Jail Wednesday on no bail due to a probation violation on a fraud charge.

Hilliard's previous run-ins with Leesburg police include a dog being removed from a home on Friday and his blocking traffic at a Bank of America on April 17, according to police records.

missing pigs has been returned, found through a Facebook posting of someone kissing a pig that looked much like Borsey's.

Borsey said a friend noticed the posting and showed it to him. Immediately, Borsey recognized the little fellow and called Rutzebeck, who followed up and got the pig back.

No arrest has yet been made however, pending further investigation, Herrell said.

"We're working the case and they've (Red Wing) also got their own investigation going through social media," Herrell said, adding that he encourages anyone who knows anything to call the department so the animals can be returned.

"I am just asking that whoever knows something just come forward and step up because I want my animals back," Borsey said.

Anyone with information about the missing animals can call the LCSO at 352-343-2101 or Central Florida Crimeline at 1-800-4236-TIPS, where one may be eligible for a reward for information leading to a felony arrest.

Borsey has posted pictures of his missing animals on Facebook on the Red Wing restaurant page.

which have been in the talking stages for almost a decade. Two phases — the easternmost and westernmost — have been allocated funds but the middle portion remains unfunded.

It would cost an estimated $8 million to start the project.

Adding urgency to the effort, commissioners are expected to approve the first reading of an ordinance tonight to change the city's Future Land Use Map, Comprehensive Plan and zoning to accommodate development of 2,053 new homes in the Villages of Fruitland Park, which fronts on one mile of CR 466A from the Sumter County line east.

Villages officials expect to start construction of new homes on the site starting next spring. If all goes according to plans, the new homes will be completed and new residents moved in before the end of next year.

Lake County Public Works Director Jim Stivender plans to present city commissioners with an update on highway improvements during tonight's commission meeting and Bell said Stivender agrees that a concerted effort to widen the highway is critical to the city's future — and Lake County's as well.

"Next year 4,000 new residents will start arriving in the Villages of Fruitland Park, and I'm worried that they won't be able to get access to the city and the rest of Lake County if 466A is under construction," Bell said.

"If all those new residents orient themselves toward Wildwood and Sumter County, Fruitland Park will be out the back door and it will take us years to introduce them to Lake County," Bell said.

"Lake County has a great deal to offer those new residents as well as all the residents and visitors drawn to the area by The Villages," he added.

The Villages plans to widen and improve the portion of CR 466A that fronts the Villages of Fruitland Park from the Sumter County line about one mile east to Timber Top Lane.

Bell said Florida Department of Transportation has funding for the first phase, which starts from U.S. Highway 27. The middle portion — about 1.3 miles — is not currently funded.

Community Development Director Charlie Rector said officials in The Villages have already indicated they would be willing to do the construction if funds are available to pay for it.

"We know they did a great job on SR 466 and it didn't take forever and a day," Bell said.

Bell was referring to the years-long effort to widen U.S. 27/441 through the city, which has forced some businesses to close and others to cut back.

Ukraine finds itself in security bind

YURAS KARMANAU
Associated Press

DONETSK, Ukraine — Russia's foreign minister warned Wednesday that attacks on Russian citizens or interests in Ukraine would bring a firm response and drew a comparison to the circumstances that opened the war with Georgia in 2008.

"Russian citizens being attacked is an attack against the Russian Federation," Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov said, a day after Ukraine announced it was re-launching a campaign against pro-Kremlin insurgents occupying government facilities in the mostly Russian-speaking east.

"If we were attacked we could certainly respond," Lavrov said, speaking on the Kremlin-funded satellite TV channel RT.

Lavrov's warning came as the Russian Foreign Ministry issued a separate statement demanding that Ukraine pull its armed forces out of the crisis-ridden region.

"If our interests, our legitimate interests, the interests of Russians have been attacked directly, like they were in South Ossetia, I do not see any other way but to respond in full accordance with international law," Lavrov said, referring to the 2008 war that led to the breaking away of the Georgian republic of South Ossetia.

SERGEI GRITS / AP

A pro-Russian masked gunman patrols a street in the center of Slovyansk on Wednesday.

In that conflict, Russia launched an invasion of Georgia after it unleashed an artillery attack on the capital of the separatist region, where Russian peacekeeping forces were stationed. However, unlike the conflict with Georgia, Russia has denied having troops or agents in eastern Ukraine.

The Russian warnings came as an accord reached last week in Geneva to defuse the Ukraine crisis continued to crumble, with pro-Russian insurgents in the east defying calls for all sides to disarm and to vacate the buildings they are occupying.

On Tuesday, Ukraine's acting president, Oleksandr Turchynov, ordered resumption of an "anti-terrorist operation" against the pro-Russia forces. However, the highly publicized move produced little action on the ground Wednesday.

Florida's crime rate dropped 4.7 percent

TAMARA LUSH
Associated Press

TAMPA — Florida's crime rate dropped last year to its lowest rate in more than 40 years, officials said Wednesday.

"We're at a 43 year low in our crime rate, and that's impressive," said Gov. Rick Scott.

The overall number of crimes fell by 27,380 or 4.7 percent, to 698,607, according to the Florida Department of Law Enforcement, which has been keeping crime statistics since 1971. There were 970 murders in 2013, a 3.9 percent drop from the previous year.

There was a 2.8 percent drop in all sex offenses. Most major crimes saw a decrease, according to statistics. One exception was pickpocketing, which rose nearly 10 percent from 2012.

Violent crime is down 2.4 percent, while nonviolent crime decreased by 4 percent, said Gerald Bailey, the commissioner of the Florida Department of Law Enforcement.

Bailey said data sharing among agencies and new technology has helped officers in crime reduction.

Crime in Florida's biggest counties is down — 2.9 percent in Miami-Dade County, 6.4 percent in Hillsborough, 6.3 percent in Broward, 4.3 in Jacksonville and less than 1 percent in Pinellas.

The overall number of crimes fell by 27,380 to 698,607. There were 970 murders in 2013, a 3.9 percent drop from the previous year.

Law enforcement leaders were quick to credit the officers on the street.

"At the end of the day it's that deputy sheriff, that police officer, that state trooper who is out on the road at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning, who makes a difference," said Hillsborough County Sheriff David Gee.

A total of 904,634 arrests were made in Florida in 2013.

Florida's law enforcement agencies had an overall case clearance rate of 26 percent, according to statistics provided by the FDLE. Clearing a case generally means that there was an arrest, someone was charged, or that the case was turned over to the court.

Some counties solved cases better than others. Hillsborough County, for instance, cleared 32 percent of its cases. Miami-Dade County cleared 18 percent of its cases.

Court scraps $3.4M award to child porn victim

MARK SHERMAN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court on Wednesday rejected a plea to make it easier for victims of child pornography to collect money from people who view their images online, throwing out a nearly $3.4 million judgment in favor of a woman whose childhood rape has been widely seen on the Internet. Two dissenting justices said Congress should change the law to benefit victims.

The justices said in a 5-4 ruling that a 1994 federal law gives victims the right to seek restitution from offenders, but only to the extent that the victim's losses are tied to the offenders' actions. In this case, Doyle Randall Paroline was held liable by a federal appeals court for the entire amount of the woman's losses, though his computer contained just two images of her, among more than 150 illicit photographs.

The case involved a woman known in court papers by the pseudonym "Amy." Her losses for psychological care, lost income and attorneys' fees have been pegged at nearly $3.4 million, based on the ongoing Internet trade and viewing of images of her being raped by her uncle when she was 8 and 9 years old.

She said she was "surprised and confused" by the decision, according to a statement her lawyer posted online.

Justice Anthony Kennedy said for the court that the appellate judges went too far when they said that Paroline was responsible for all of the woman's losses, without determining how much harm he caused her. Kennedy said federal judges have to figure out the right amount, but he provided only "rough guideposts for determining an amount that fits the offense."

A federal judge now will work out what Paroline should pay the woman.

The ruling steered a middle ground between the woman's call for full restitution and Paroline's claim that there was no relationship between his conduct and the woman's losses.

Wellness programs become more popular with employers

CATHERINE LUCEY and TOM MURPHY
Associated Press

That little voice nagging you to put down the cake and lace up the running shoes is increasingly coming from your employer and is likely to grow louder with a looming change under the federal health care overhaul.

More companies are starting or expanding wellness programs that aim to reduce their medical costs by improving their employees' health. They're asking workers to take physical exams, complete detailed health assessments and focus on controlling conditions such as diabetes. Along with that, many companies also are dangling the threat of higher monthly insurance premiums to prod workers into action.

The Affordable Care Act is one reason the programs are spreading. The federal law calls for a 40 percent tax on expensive benefit plans starting in 2018, and many companies that offer employer-based coverage already have begun looking for ways to lower costs and avoid that tax.

"It is a very powerful ... visible wake-up call to all employers," said Helen Darling, chief executive of the National Business Group on Health, a nonprofit organization that represents large employers on health care issues.

Businesses see wellness programs as a win for themselves and their workers. But studies have shown that the programs have a limited ability to reduce costs. They also raise concerns about privacy and discrimination against older workers or those who are more likely to have chronic conditions.

Penalties also can hit lower-wage workers harder than they would executives because premiums already consume a larger portion of those workers' paychecks.

"The top-line concern is that it has a huge potential to be discriminatory," said Lydia Mitts, a health policy analyst with the nonprofit Families USA.

Benefits consultants say federal regulations help guard against that. Companies can be penalized under the overhaul for offering coverage that is considered unaffordable.

Businesses also are required to offer alternatives that help workers avoid penalties like a higher premium because they can't meet a wellness program goal.

Despite employee concerns, the idea of prevention as a way to reduce health care costs has been largely embraced by employers, who provide the most common form of health insurance in the U.S.

Apple increases stock buyback

MICHAEL LIEDTKE
AP Technology Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — Apple is diverting more of its cash to shareholders and preparing to split its stock for the first time in nine years in an attempt to win back investors fretting about the iPhone maker's slowing growth and pace of innovation.

The moves announced Wednesday as part of Apple's fiscal second-quarter earnings report are aimed at boosting its stock price, which has been hovering about 25 percent below the peak it reached in September 2012.

Apple Inc. earmarked at additional $30 billion for buying back its stock through next year, bringing the total to $90 billion during that time frame.

The Cupertino, Calif., company also is raising its quarterly dividend 8 percent to $3.29 per share, up from $3.05 per share.

Since Apple's last split in February 2005, the stock has increased by nearly 12-fold. But CEO Tim Cook told analysts in a conference call that Apple's stock price "does not reflect the full value of the company."

Apple's stock soared $39.78, or 7.6 percent, to $564.53 extended trading after the news came out.

The results for the first three months of the year illustrated how Apple Inc. can afford to spend so much money on its own stock. The company ended the quarter with nearly $151 billion in cash, including $132 billion it is keeping overseas to lower its U.S. tax bill. The money being held outside the U.S. isn't available to buy back stock or pay shareholder dividends.

Apple's earnings rose 7 percent to $10.2 billion, or $11.62 per share, an amount that exceeds what most technology companies make in an entire year. Revenue climbed by 5 percent to $45.6 billion. It represented the highest revenue that Apple has generated in any quarter occurring outside the holiday shopping season.

Reaching that milestone still couldn't mask that Apple's revenue growth has been stuck between 1 percent and 6 percent for the past year. By contrast, the quarterly revenue of rival Google Inc. has been rising at 12 percent to 19 percent during the same stretch.

The quarter was highlighted by a 17 percent increase in iPhone sales from the same time last year to 43.7 million units, boosted by strong demand in China, the U.S., Western Europe and Japan.

But iPad sales fell 16 percent from last year to about 16.4 million tablets.

There wasn't a new model of either the iPhone or the iPad during the quarter.

Investors have been worried about the future of Apple since Steve Jobs, its co-founder and chief visionary, died in October 2011. Those worries have been compounded by the fierce competition that Apple faces in mobile devices, particularly from Samsung Electronics Co., which has been widening its lead in the smartphone market.

Better quarter?

Financial analysts predict Southwest Airlines' earnings and revenue increased in the first quarter from the same period a year earlier.

The company, due to report its latest quarterly results today, benefited in the final three months of 2013 from lower fuel costs and higher average fares as the airline sold fewer seats at sale prices. Earlier this year, Southwest said that first-quarter bookings were strong.

What we don't know about the killing of Anwar Awlaki

Two and a half years after a drone strike in Yemen killed New Mexico-born Anwar Awlaki, a federal appeals court has ordered the Obama administration to release a confidential memorandum that explains the legal justification for its extraordinary decision to assassinate a U.S. citizen. The administration should promptly comply.

Monday's unanimous ruling by a three-judge panel of the U.S. 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals was the result of a lawsuit by the New York Times and the American Civil Liberties Union to force release of a memo prepared by the Justice Department's Office of Legal Counsel.

A federal district judge had ruled that the memo and other materials were covered by an exemption in the Freedom of Information Act for classified materials and internal government deliberations. But after that decision came down, a 16-page Justice Department "white paper" was released that contained an explanation of the legal theory behind the killing of Awlaki. The appeals court concluded that publication of that document, coupled with public statements by administration officials, amounted to a waiver of the exemption.

It has been clear since the release of the white paper in February 2013 that the administration believes it may legally kill a U.S. citizen abroad if he is a "senior operational leader of al-Qaida or an associated force" who can't easily be captured and who poses "an imminent threat of violent attack against the United States." (The administration's definition of "imminent threat" is alarmingly elastic.)

Still, release of the actual memo, even with redactions to protect sources and methods, would provide important context. Instead of appealing the 2nd Circuit's ruling, the administration should announce that it will abide by it. Not only that, it should make good on the president's statement in a speech last May that he might be open to additional oversight of presidential decisions to use deadly force against Americans — including, potentially, "the establishment of a special court to evaluate and authorize lethal action."

Executing an American without trial — even one who has allied himself with terrorists — can be justified only if he poses a truly imminent threat to Americans and can't be safely captured. But by refusing to fully explain its rationale, and asserting the "state secrets privilege" in seeking to block a lawsuit by Awlaki's family, the administration made it look as if it had something to hide.

The government must be forthcoming not only about the legal rationale for this extraordinary act of violence but also about the factual evidence. That is a standard the administration has failed to meet in the Awlaki case.

U.S. lags far behind in gender equity

Rekha Basu
MCCLATCHY-TRIBUNE NEWS SERVICE

On her first day back at work after having a baby, Angela Ames, a loss mitigation specialist at Nationwide Insurance in Des Moines, tried repeatedly to find a clean, private place to pump her breast milk. As anyone who has done that knows, it can't easily wait, but she said no appropriate room was available. In pain from the pressure, Ames approached her department head, who handed her a pen and paper and dictated a resignation letter for her to sign. So contends an appeal in a suit in which the American Civil Liberties Union Women's Rights Project — supported by the Iowa ACLU and 11 other organizations — has filed a friend of the court brief. It claims Ames' superior told her, "I think it would be best for you to go home and be with your babies."

Thinking she was being ordered to quit, Ames did as told, the suit alleged. But the U.S. District Court dismissed the case, not persuaded the boss's comments implied that. And last month, the U.S. Court of Appeals upheld that ruling. It is now being asked to rehear the case. Ames' suit alleges the same department head called her during her maternity leave to say the company had miscalculated her leave, and she'd have to return weeks earlier or face problems. Also on her first day back, Ames' immediate supervisor allegedly told her she had two weeks to complete what didn't get done during her eight-week leave or face discipline. And the appeal says the company requires nursing mothers to wait three days after returning to work before using the lactation room — something the company denies.

Nationwide said in a written statement that lactation rooms were occupied, and alternative options were provided but were declined. It also said, without specifying, that many comments attributed to Nationwide personnel were inaccurate or taken out of context.

It's shocking to think that in a nation where so much lip service is paid to encouraging childbirths by discouraging abortions and birth control, businesses could haggle over simple accommodations for working mothers. We are long past the time when mothers routinely stayed home with kids and fathers worked — if not because of changes in family structures and lessening of sex roles, then because of economic necessities. "The picture that emerges is of a workplace that is at best inhospitable and at worst overtly hostile to pregnant women and new mothers" says the brief, alleging a violation of Title VII, the Civil Rights Act provision that prohibits sex-based employment discrimination.

If more women held high positions in government and business, maybe more attention would be paid to ending gender disparities.

Whatever the court decides, the United States lags behind many countries in legally protecting the rights and well being of working women and mothers. It's one of only four countries that doesn't require employers to provide maternity leaves. In Bulgaria, mothers get 56 paid weeks off. Norway offers paid paternity leave.

Working women in New Zealand are the most likely to be treated equally at work, based on their labor-force participation, comparative wages, proportion in senior jobs and child-care costs compared to wages. Iceland has almost closed the gender gap in economic opportunity and participation, political empowerment and other areas, according to the 2013 World Economic Forum report. The United States ranks 23rd out of 136, lagging behind Scandinavian countries, Philippines, Ireland, New Zealand, Switzerland, Nicaragua and South Africa.

We rank 60 of 136 in the political empowerment of women and 67 in wage equality for similar jobs. Maybe that has to do with being the only G20 country not to have ratified the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women.

If more women held high positions in government and business, maybe more attention would be paid to ending gender disparities. But only 18 percent of our Congress members are female, compared to 52 percent in Nordic countries' Parliaments. Bangladesh, India, Pakistan, Philippines, Sri Lanka and many more countries beat us in electing female heads of state.

Only 10 percent of U.S. companies' boards are women, according to the WEF. By contrast, in Norway the boards of all publicly held companies are required to be 40 percent male and female, respectively.

Empowering women is said to be key to a nation's economic well being. We've done well in closing the gender gap in education and health, though America has 21 maternal deaths per 100,000 live births, compared to Canada's 12. But when our businesses lobby hard against regulations, and political candidates run from affirmative action and mandates, we leave too much to fate.

Whatever the merits of the Nationwide case, it's ironic and distressing that a country with our riches and legacy of inspiring people around the world to seek gender equality should be on par with only Swaziland, Lesotho and Papua, New Guinea in not requiring maternity leave. Laws need to change before attitudes will.

Raiders head list of local lifters at state finals

FRANK JOLLEY | Staff Writer
frank.jolley@dailycommercial.com

Lake and Sumter counties will be represented by a solid contingent at this week's Florida High School Athletic Association Weightlifting Championships at the Kissimmee Civic Center.

A total of 16 area lifters will compete in the state finals, with the Class 1A schools competing on Friday and the Class 2A student-athletes stepping onto the platforms on Saturday.

South Sumter will lead the way with seven lifters competing. Umatilla will have two, while Eustis, Tavares, Mount Dora, East Ridge, Lake Minneola, Leesburg and South Lake will have one representative. East Ridge, Lake Minneola, Leesburg and South Lake will compete in Class 2A, with the remaining five local teams lifting in Class 1A.

"We have one of the largest contingents of kids lifting," South Sumter weightlifting coach Ty Lawrence said about the Raiders. "When you take into account the number of lifters from our area going to state, this might produce the most points scored by local teams as a whole in a long time."

For South Sumter, Alan Macias and Valentino Avant will compete at 119 pounds. Jalon Taylor will lift at 154 pounds and Joey Mohler earned a spot in the 199-pound classification.

In addition, Caleb Simmons will compete at 219 pounds, Anthony Yurich is in the 238-pound classification and Montel Presley will lift as a heavyweight.

At 139 pounds, Umatilla teammates Brett Bush and Chris McEntire earned a spots in the state finals, as did Eustis' Corey Davis.

Tavares' Jose Barajas will represent his school and District 5 at 169 pounds. Barajas has the top qualifying-weight this season at 169 pounds with a Bench Press of 335 pounds and Clean-and-Jerk of 275 pounds for total of 610 pounds.

His qualifying total is 15 pounds more than his closest competitor, Jacob Stalvey of Glen St. Mary Baker County.

"Barajas probably should win a state title," Lawrence said. "The Eustis and Umatilla lifters at 139 pounds, I think, will finish in the top five."

Mount Dora's Richard Marinacci is the lone Hurricane in the competition. Marinacci will lift as a heavyweight.

In Class 2A, Lake Minneola's Angel Perez-Santos will compete at 119 pounds.

Leesburg's Bryant Benton will represent the Yellow Jackets at 154 pounds. Benton qualifying total of 500 pounds, including 265 pounds in the Bench Press and 235 pounds in the Clean-and-Jerk.

At 199 pounds, East Ridge's Alexander Angelidis will compete and South Lake's Anthony McCoy will lift as a heavyweight.

Competition on Friday and Saturday begins at 10 a.m., with Flight B — 183 pounds and above — lifting first on both days.

Admission is $9 and parking at the Kissimmee Civic Center is free. The Kissimmee Civic Center is at 201 East Dakin Ave.

Pair of district title baseball games on tap for area

FRANK JOLLEY | Staff Writer
frank.jolley@dailycommercial.com

Lake County will host a pair of district championship baseball games today.

Eustis and Umatilla will square off for the Class 5A-District 13 title at 8 p.m. at Fred Stover Sports Complex in Tavares, while Leesburg and Lake Minneola will play for the Class 6A-6 championship at 6 p.m. at Lake Minneola.

The Leesburg-Lake Minneola game was originally scheduled to be played at Ocala Forest, but after Leesburg upset Ocala Forest 3-0 in Tuesday's district semifinals, a decision was made to move the game to Lake County. Ocala Forest was the lone Marion County team remaining in the tournament after Lake Minneola beat Ocala Vanguard 7-4 in the game prior to Leesburg's win.

Eustis reached the Class 5A-13 title tilt with a 5-2 win against Mount Dora. Wesley Moulden picked up the win for the Panthers.

Chase Rimes tossed a two hitter and struck out eight in Umatilla's 4-0 win against Tavares. Tanner Frabott went 1-for-2 at the plate with two RBIs.

For Lake Minneola, Drew Mendoza hammered three home runs and had four RBIs against Ocala Vanguard. Brandon Hartley struck out six to earn the win for the Hawks (14-11).

Brett Coffel went 2-for-3 with a pair of doubles and had two RBIs for Lake Minneola.

By beating Ocala Forest, Leesburg earned its first berth in the regional tournament since 2007. A win in today's games is worth a home game in next week's regional quarterfinals, with the loser having to play on the road.

Leesburg (10-16) got a dominant effort from pitcher Jason Baita in the win. Baita went the distance and allowed six hits while striking out nine.

The Yellow Jackets scored all its runs in the seventh. Turner Long, Actativous Edwards and Blake Perdue scored for Leesburg, with all runs being charged to Ocala

Arizona and the Chicago Cubs begin a game on Wednesday at Wrigley Field in Chicago. Wednesday was the 100th anniversary of the first game at the ballpark, between the Chicago Federals and the Kansas City Packers.

Happy Birthday Wrigley Field

Cubs, fans throw party 100 years in the making

ANDREW SELIGMAN
Associated Press

CHICAGO — There was a giant replica cake right next to the Ernie Banks statue, and an old-time band played as fans made their way through the main entrance.

The famed marquee had a message, too.

"Happy Birthday, Wrigley Field," it read.

Exactly 100 years after the Chicago Federals pounded the Kansas City Packers in the first game at the famed ballpark, Wrigley was the scene of a joyous birthday bash on Wednesday afternoon. Banks and other Hall of Famers such as Billy Williams, Fergie Jenkins and Andre Dawson were on hand, and so were Bears greats Dick Butkus and Gale Sayers.

The Cubs and Diamondbacks went retro, wearing throwback 1914 jerseys, and the famed scoreboard listed Kansas City and Chi-Feds in their place. It was a day of celebration, a day of reflection. And a day that ended with another loss, the Cubs falling 7-5 after blowing a ninth-inning lead.

But before that, the memories, the stories, flowed like runs in a big rally.

"It just gives me

Seattle Seahawks quarterback Russell Wilson stands by the Vince Lombardi Trophy as he winds up to throw the ceremonial first pitch on April 8 at the Seattle Mariners' home opener. The Seahawks, winners of Super Bowl 48, learned Wednesday they will open the 2014 season against Green Bay on Sept. 4.

Seahawks to open upcoming season against Green Bay

BARRY WILNER
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Mike McCarthy promises there won't be any bad memories plaguing his Green Bay Packers when they open the NFL season on Sept. 4 at Super Bowl champion Seattle.

The last time Green Bay visited CenturyLink Field was in Week 3 of the 2012 season, a 14-12 Seahawks victory clinched on what now is often dubbed the "Fail Mary." Russell Wilson's desperation pass on the final play was called a touchdown reception for Golden Tate by the replacement officials.

A few days later, the lockout of the regular officials ended.

"This game won't be about the past," he said. "It will be about the 2014 Green Bay Packers.

It's the third straight season the Packers have traveled to face the defending Super Bowl champions.

"It's a tremendous opportunity for our football team," Packers coach Mike McCarthy said. "We have experience playing in the kickoff opener three years ago, and we will draw on that. Obviously, being the visiting team this time presents new challenges. It will help sharpen our focus even more during training camp and the preseason."

That Thursday game is the first of four primetime games on opening weekend. Also at night will be a Sunday matchup of AFC champion Denver and Peyton Manning hosting his former team, Indianapolis; and a Monday night doubleheader with the New York Giants at Detroit, followed by San Diego at Arizona.

The NFL will play three games in London: Dolphins-Raiders on Sept. 28; Lions-Falcons on Oct. 26; and Cowboys-Jaguars on Nov. 9. The Detroit-Atlanta game will kick off at 9:30 a.m. ET in an experiment to test the NFL's audience draw on a Sunday morning.

A Saturday doubleheader in Week 16 has San Diego at San Francisco and Philadelphia at Washington.

For the first time, games in Weeks 5 through 10 can be flexed from Sunday afternoon to night, with a limit of two. Beginning with Week 11, a Sunday game can be moved to prime time each week. Also, a select number of Sunday afternoon games are being "cross-flexed," moving between CBS and Fox to potentially draw more viewers.

The Thanksgiving tripleheader features three strong division rivalries: Chicago at Detroit, Philadelphia at Dallas, and Seattle at San Francisco, a rematch of the memorable NFC title game last January.

That game will be played in 49ers' new stadium in Santa Clara, Calif., which opens in Week 2 when they host Chicago in a Sunday night match.

Looking for the latest installment of Manning vs. Tom Brady? The Patriots host it on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 2.

And for those looking for the rematch of the Super Bowl, Seattle's 43-8 rout of Denver, it's on Sept. 21 at Seattle. Denver opens the season against three 2013 playoff teams: Indianapolis and Kansas City at home, then at the Seahawks.

"I think when you look at it, we have to start fast," Broncos general manager John Elway said. "We knew it was going to be a tough schedule playing the NFC West, and when we finish first in our division like we have the past three years, it is always going to be a tough schedule with a lot of good football teams on it."

Bye weeks begin in Week 4 when Arizona, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Denver, Seattle and St. Louis are off. They end in Week 12 when Carolina and Pittsburgh are idle.

The season ends Dec. 28 with all divisional games.

goose bumps because I had a chance to play here," Williams said. "I often said this was my playground during the summer for so many years. So I have enjoyed it and I still enjoy it."

The celebration was held as Cubs ownership and the neighboring rooftop owners remain in a standstill over proposed renovations. The $500 million project, which includes a giant Jumbotron, is on hold because the Ricketts family wants assurances that it won't be sued over obstructed views.

"You can't ask a team to be competitive and you can't ask people to do things and then tie their hands and their legs," baseball Commissioner Bud Selig said. "It's just wrong. Somebody has to say it so I'm happy to say it."

The rooftop owners, who charge fans to sit in bleachers atop their buildings, have a contract under which they share 17 percent of their revenues with the Cubs. The Tribune Co., the previous owner, signed the deal and "this ownership didn't," Selig said.

He said the treatment the current owners — the Ricketts family — has received is "beyond unfair" and that he'll do everything he "possibly can" to help them.

He also said the Ricketttses have not approached him about moving, that they're committed to renovating Wrigley and staying there.

"They know the right thing to do for this franchise and this sport is to preserve this, just like the Red Sox preserved Fenway," said Selig, who made his first trip to the ballpark in May 1944.

Assuming they eventually go ahead with the renovations, it'll be up to the Ricketts family to preserve that charm while bringing the stadium into the 21st century. Wednesday was a day to turn back the clock, a day to celebrate the century that was at the neighborhood park on Chicago's North Side.

Ushers wore party hats, and fans received birthday cupcakes and throwback jerseys. There was a replica Wrigley Field cake from Carlo's Bakery, setting of the hit TLC show "Cake Boss," just outside the ballpark.

On his way in from suburban Glen Ellyn, Illinois, Williams thought about all the events besides baseball games that have taken place at Wrigley Field over the years. The ballpark has hosted everything from boxing to soccer to pro wrestling to the circus to the rodeo to concerts to a Chicago Blackhawks game. There was even this: On back-to-back weekends in January 1944, ski jumpers leapt from scaffolding covered in snow and ice and landed behind second base.

Wrigley Field, it seems, has seen everything but a World Series championship. The Cubs haven't won one since 1908 — eight years before they started playing at what was then known as Weeghman Park.

Of course, the Bears celebrated a few at Wrigley. They won NFL championship games there in 1933, 1941, 1943 and 1963 before they moved to Soldier Field in 1971.

Williams recalled watching the Bears at Wrigley, back when Sayers and Butkus and Mike Ditka were playing and when George Halas was running the club.

Butkus had a few good stories, too.

He mentioned the stench one time in the locker room, one he thought was coming from Doug Bufone's "ratty" gym shoes.

Bufone insisted the smell wasn't coming from the shoes. Butkus didn't believe him at first. Then, he said, they were putting something on top of a locker when a tile fell and out plopped — you guessed it — a dead rat.

"I said, 'Oh, there it is,'" Butkus said.

To Butkus, a South Side product who starred at Illinois and his hometown team, playing at Wrigley meant he'd made it — not because of his Chicago ties, but because of the stadium itself. Because of its quirks, its imperfections

"Pros aren't supposed to play where everything is perfect," he said.

Dawson agreed.

''The ballpark itself, there's just something about it," he said. "The intricate angles. You came out and you walked around and looked around, and you just said, 'Wow.'"

SEC pitchers having banner season

DAVID BRANDT
Associated Press

Now more than ever, the key to success in the Southeastern Conference is pitching.

The league has the lowest ERA in the country, and aces abound as postseason play approaches next month.

LSU's Aaron Nola (7-1, 0.88 ERA), Arkansas' Jalen Beeks (5-3, 1.49) and Mississippi's Chris Ellis (5-0, 1.72) are among those dominating almost every time they take the mound.

That's not necessarily surprising. The SEC has a long history of successful pitchers who go on to Major League Baseball prominence, including current stars like David Price, Lance Lynn, Cliff Lee, Tim Hudson and Mike Minor.

But the difference this season is depth. The league had a 2.72 ERA at the halfway point this season, down from 3.14 at the same time a year ago.

"Some guys throw hard. Some guys can work the corners. But they're all getting it done," Ole Miss coach Mike Bianco said.

Nola may be the league's best. The 6-foot-1 junior right-hander has given up just seven earned runs over 71 2/3 innings and struck out 91 batters. Opponents are hitting .159 against him.

He's expected to be a first-round draft pick in June.

"It's pretty much all focus for me," Nola said. "Every time I'm on the mound I have to get my mind right. I start making mistakes when I lose concentration. When runners get in scoring position, I try to slow things down."

Nola is part of a pitching staff for LSU (31-10-1, 10-7-1 SEC) that has a 2.31 ERA, which ranks fourth in the SEC behind South Carolina (2.05), Ole Miss (2.25) and Arkansas (2.29).

The Gamecocks threw their 12th shutout of the season in an 8-0 victory over Davidson on Tuesday.

The shift to pitching's dominance can be traced to four years ago when the NCAA mandated changes to the sport's metal bats, which made them much less powerful. The high-scoring slugfests that were once ubiquitous disappeared almost overnight, and coaches were forced to build rosters around pitching, speed and defense.

"Every change in the game over the past four or five years has favored pitching and defense," Mississippi State coach John Cohen said. "So you've got to adjust."

Hitters might finally get some help next season when the NCAA debuts a new baseball with lower seams that is similar to the one used in the pros. A raised-seam ball is now used in college games.

But at least for the rest of 2014, pitching is undeniably king.

Cohen's Bulldogs have thrived in the low-scoring era. They advanced to the College World Series championship series last season before losing to UCLA.

Mississippi State (27-15, 10-8 SEC) is right in the middle of the conference race again this year despite hitting just seven home runs over 42 games.

Cohen said he believes another reason the SEC's ERA continues to drop is because pitchers are throwing harder.

"When I played at Mississippi State, during my senior season in 1990 I bet I saw 10 guys all year who legitimately threw 90 miles per hour," Cohen said. "Today I probably have 10 guys just on my pitching staff who can touch 90. Every other team in the SEC is the same way."

Not everyone in the league has to throw hard to dominate. Mississippi State left-hander Ross Mitchell is 6-3 with a 2.13 ERA despite throwing in the mid-80s, thriving by mixing his pitches and living on the corners.

Mitchell made the transition from the bullpen to the starting rotation midway through the season and has helped the Bulldogs recover after a slow start.

"In a lot of ways it's an advantage not throwing as hard," Mitchell said. "It takes a while for hitters to adjust sometimes."

Albert Pujols hits 500th HR of major league career

HOWARD FENDRICH
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Albert Pujols reached 500 homers in a hurry.

The Los Angeles Angels' first baseman hit a pair of shots off Washington Nationals right-hander Taylor Jordan on Tuesday night — a three-run homer in the first inning and two-run drive in the fifth — to become the 26th player in major league history to reach the milestone.

PUJOLS

Pujols is the first player to collect his 499th and 500th homers in the same game, according to STATS. About three months past his 34th birthday, he's also the third-youngest to get to 500; Alex Rodriguez and Jimmie Foxx were both 32.

Making a quick recent surge, Pujols has eight homers this season, all in the past 13 games.

The 500th went to left-center field at Nationals Park, on an 89 mph pitch with the count at 1-2. Pujols clapped his hands together a few strides before trotting home, then pointed both index fingers to the sky. As soon as he touched the plate, Pujols was greeted by his Angels teammates, who streamed over from the visiting dugout.

Fans gave the three-time NL MVP a partial standing ovation, and he acknowledged the spectators by tipping his red batting helmet as he approached the dugout. After heading down the steps, he came back out for a curtain call.

In other at-bats Tuesday, Pujols struck out swinging in the second inning and grounded to shortstop in the seventh.

After a couple of down-for-him years with the Angels following 11 transcendent seasons with the St. Louis Cardinals, a healthier Pujols appears ready to reclaim his spot among the game's elite hitters. He homered Friday and Saturday in games at the Detroit Tigers to lift his career total to 498, and now he's reached the round number of 500 — a total that remains hallowed despite losing its luster in recent years because so many players have surpassed it.

Of the 26 members of the 500-homer club, 11 have reached the mark in the last 15 years, according to STATS. Gary Sheffield was the most recent player to do it, hitting No. 500 on April 17, 2009.

The Cardinals selected Pujols in the 13th round of the 1999 draft, with the 402nd overall selection — a steal if ever there was one. Pujols stormed onto the scene as a 21-year-old rookie in 2001, hitting .329 with 37 homers and 130 RBIs.

He won a batting title in 2003, National League MVP awards in 2005, 2008 and 2009, and World Series titles with the Cardinals in 2006 and 2011. Pujols was the first player to hit 30 homers in each of his first 12 seasons and the second — after Al Simmons in 1924-34 — to reach 100 RBIs in each of his first 10.

A nine-time All-Star, Pujols hit 455 homers with the Cardinals.

The District will not accept a petition sent by facsimile (fax). Mediation may be available if you meet the conditions stated in the full Notice of Rights (see last paragraph).

The right to an administrative hearing and the relevant procedures to be followed are governed by Chapter 120, F.S., Chapter 28-106, F.A.C., and Rule 40C-1.1007, F.A.C. Because the administrative hearing process is designed to formulate final agency action, the filing of a petition means the District's final action may be different from the position taken by it in this notice. Failure to file a petition for an administrative hearing within the requisite time frame shall constitute a waiver of the right to an administrative hearing. (Rule 28106.111, F.A.C.).

If you wish to do so, please visit http://floridaswater.com/nor_dec/ to read the complete Notice of Rights to determine any legal rights you may have concerning the District's decision(s) on the compliance report(s) described above. You can also request the Notice of Rights by contacting the Director, Bureau of Regulatory Support, P. O. Box 1429, Palatka, FL 32178, tele. no. (386)329-4268.

The St. Johns River Water Management District (District) gives notice of receipt of the following consumptive use permit application(s):

Standard General Consumptive Use Application(s)

DOT Clay, LLC, PO Box 289, Windermere, FL 34786-0289 application #20-069-91867-3. The applicant proposes to withdraw 0.483 million gallons per day of surface water and 0.0008 million gallons per day of groundwater for commercial/industrial and mining/dewatering type uses associated with the operation of a sand mine. The withdrawals used by this proposed project will consist of Groundwater from FAS - Upper Floridan Aquifer via 1 active well; Surface Water from Dredge Pit via 1 proposed pump in Lake County, located in Section: 27, Township: 24 South, Range: 26 East, known as DOT Clay, LLC Sand Mine.

The file(s) containing the permit application(s) are available for inspection Monday through Friday, except for District holidays, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the District's Headquarters, 4049 Reid St., Palatka, FL 32177-2529. You may also view files at one of the District's service centers, but you should call service center staff in advance to make sure that the files are at a specific service center. Service center contact information is available online at floridaswater.com/contactus/offices.html. Additionally, most permit application file documents can be viewed online at floridaswater.com/permitting/index.html. To obtain information on how to find and view permit application file documents, visit floridaswater.com/permitting/index.html and select the topic of choice from the "Find permits and application" heading, and then follow the directions provided under "How to find a Technical Staff Report (TSR) or other application file documents."

Decisions on Standard General permit applications will be made at the District's service center where the application is processed, unless the application is upgraded to an Individual permit application as explained below. A substantial objection to a Standard General permit application must be made in writing and filed with (received by) the Director, Bureau of Regulatory Support, P.O. Box 1429, Palatka, FL 32178-1429, or by e-mail at application tionsupport@sjrwmd.com, within 14 days of notification of the application. Please include either the Permit Application Number or the Project Name in the objection. Notification of the application is either the fifth day after the date on which the written notice is deposited in the U.S. mail (for those persons who receive actual notice by U.S. mail), the date on which the notice is e-mailed (for those persons who receive actual notice by e-mail), or the date the notice is published in the newspaper (if actual notice is not provided by U.S. mail or e-mail). A "substantial objection" means a written statement directed to the District that identifies the objector, concerns hydrologic or environmental impacts of the proposed consumptive use, and relates to applicable rule criteria. A timely substantial objection will cause the Standard General consumptive use permit application to be considered an application for an Individual consumptive use permit. If the District receives a timely substantial objection from you, then you will receive written notice of the District's intended decision on the permit application.

Decisions on Individual consumptive use permit applications will be made by the District's Governing Board. Notice of Intended District Decision will be provided to persons who have requested individual notice. A request for individual Notice of Intended District Decision on an application must be received by the Director, Bureau of Regulatory Support prior to the date the Notice of Intended District Decision is generated. For Individual permit applications, you are advised to notify the District within 14 days of notification of the application(s) if you have questions, objections, comments, or information regarding the proposed consumptive use. If you make a written request to the District for additional information regarding a specific permit application, you will be provided an opportunity to obtain the available information. Please note that filing a written objection does not entitle you to a Chapter 120, Florida Statutes, administrative hearing.

CHICAGO — When 17-year-old actress Claudia Lee landed a role on the 1991-set sitcom “Surviving Jack,” she set out to discover what that neon-soaked, scrunchie-lovin’ decade was all about. Born in 1996, Lee was 3 when partying like it was 1999 gave way to Y2K fears.

“I was looking up Tori Spelling, Kelly Bundy and all the ‘Saved by the Bell’ girls to see what they wore and how they did their hair,” Lee said recently at the Four Seasons Hotel while in town to promote the show. “I was very specific about my character. I wanted to create a look for her, and we really did that.”

Buckle your seatbelts: ‘Boeing Boeing’ is filled with physical comedy

Audiences who remember the mayhem from the 1965 movie “Boeing Boeing” starring Jerry Lewis and Tony Curtis are in for more laughs as Bay Street Players bring the comedy to the stage.

The farce runs through May 11 at the historic State Theatre, 109 North Bay St., Eustis.

“It is just absolute fun. It’s a fun comedy that has a ‘nice naughty’ to it,” said Jim Meadows, producer and co-director with Brendon Rogers, who believes theatergoers are going to love the show’s physical comedy. “We expect to have people laughing throughout the evening.”

Set in the 1960s, the play features American architect/bachelor Bernard (Rick Paulin) living in Paris as he juggles schedules and his life around three fiancées, all young flight attendants, who are unaware of each other.

Set in the 1960s, the play features American architect/bachelor Bernard (Rick Paulin) living in Paris as he juggles schedules and his life around three fiancées, all young flight attendants, who are unaware of each other. The women regard Bernard’s flat as their home during their Paris layovers.

“He balances them all out by having one in the air, one at the airport ready to take off, and the third one is at his apartment,” Meadows said, noting the apartment has seven doors, “so you have people running in and out all the time.”

Gloria (Bre Lewis), Gabriella (Lauren Morgan) and Gretchen (Kami Spaulding) star as the three flight attendants, and Bernard’s so-called perfect life gets rather bumpy when his friend Robert (Paul Castaneda) comes to stay and a new and speedier Boeing jet throws Haden Church and Margo Martindale) to turn against the Burpo family.

Though Todd sticks up for his son, his faith is also tested. "We ask these kids to believe this stuff," he says to his wife, "but I don't even know if I believe it myself."

But Todd is captivated, as we are, by his son's innocence — especially when Colton tells him things he couldn't possibly know, such as how he saw his parents cope, each in their own way, during his near-fatal surgery.

As Colton, Corum does an excellent job of speaking softly, yet with conviction, and holding his gaze so we have time to study his sparkling blue eyes. But it's the casting of Kinnear that offers the film's strongest chance at transcending the faith-based demographic, as the actor never fails to embody the everyman.

Kinnear's Todd is not just an inaccessible preacher. He's also a volunteer firefighter, coaches high school wrestling and is a garage door repairman. His family is also in debt. Their house, which was offered as "part of his salary," sits near railroad tracks and shakes with every passing train. Thus, many of the Burpo family's struggles mirror those of others in the heartland, and effectively so.

But in the way of gripping dialogue, Kinnear doesn't have much to work with. We might have expected more from writer-director Randall Wallace, who brought us the Oscar-nominated "Braveheart." But the material is pretty cookie-cutter and more typical of an afterschool special. However, Wallace and co-writer Chris Parker do a good job of weaving in moments that should appeal to a mass audience.

Just when it seems we're being subjected to too much of "the Word," Colton cutely diverts our attention. During a road trip, he suggests the family sing "We Will Rock You" instead of a hymn. Kinnear and Reilly's chemistry also offers a favorable element. They appear genuinely sweet on each other and subtle sexual innuendoes add a bit of adult flavor.

With the impressive computer-generated effects available today, this film could have used a more sophisticated depiction of heaven. OK, so it's hard to imagine what heaven would look like, but this version looks far too generic, awash with glaring light and blurred angels.

It's no surprise that faith, hope and family prevail in this one. After all, says Todd in one of his sermons, "In the end, it's about not feeling alone."

"Heaven Is for Real," a Sony release, is rated PG by the Motion Picture Association of America for "thematic material including some medical situations." Running time: 100 minutes. Two stars out of four.

off his careful planning. The mayhem comes to a climax during a scheduling mishap when all three flight attendants end up in Paris and at Bernard's apartment at the same time.

What are Bernard and Robert going to do?

"The way that I like to describe it is that you've got three beautiful, intelligent females who are all flight stewardesses with two idiot guys," Meadows said. "The only thing that has changed from the 1960s and now is that we call them flight attendants instead stewardesses … the guys in the 1960s are idiots and they are still idiots. They try to keep control of things, but the guys find out that they have no control."

And because of the lack of control, Meadows said the physical comedy in "Boeing Boeing" is at its best.

"Bernard and his best friend visiting from Wisconsin are going crazy trying to balance it all out," the producer said, and there's also the long-suffering housekeeper Berthe (Liz Curtis) who is caught in the middle of it all. "Robert is forgetting which lies to tell to whom, and even with the help of Bernard's housekeeper, catastrophe looms."

"Boeing Boeing" was initially penned by French playwright Marc Camoletti and translated by Beverly Cross and Francis Evans before it was Americanized for the 1965 movie with Jerry Lewis and Tony Curtis.

"Deliciously, deliriously innocent" is how The New York Times has described the farce, which recently enjoyed hit revivals in London and New York. It was also bestowed a Tony Award for "best revival."

The local production features set design by Scott Fattizzi and Tom Mangieri, lighting design by Jon Whitely and costumes by Sara Gray.

"It has been really, really exciting for me to work with Brendon Rogers and co-direct this production," said Meadows, who also noted it has been just as much fun working with the cast and crew.

Tickets for "Boeing Boeing" are $18 for Wednesday and Thursday shows and $21 for Friday, Saturday and Sunday performances. Students with ID are admitted for $11. Matinee shows are at 2 p.m. and evening performances are set for 8 p.m. Tickets may be reserved by calling 352-357-7777.

Parents are appalled by man's indifference to his young son

JEANNE PHILLIPS

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: My 23-year-old son, "Wayne," who is single, has a 3-year-old son. We didn't learn about the child until he was more than a year old, when Wayne was asked to take a paternity test. Luckily, we have been able to form a good relationship with our grandson's mother and see him often. However, our son has shown no interest. He pays child support, but has little interaction.

Wayne is an only child. I love him, but I never wanted another one. I was never comfortable around or interested in young children except for my own son. Could he have gotten this from me?

Friends and family have commented on Wayne's lack of interest in his son, and I'm tired of making excuses or telling people to mind their own business. Wayne says he feels resentment and doesn't want to be around this child. I have tried to explain that he'll regret it in years to come, but he won't listen.

My husband is appalled that our son would act this way, but he seems to forget that I was the one who did everything with Wayne. I did the Boy Scouts, movies, horses, trips, etc. He did almost nothing with Wayne and his friends. At this point, I don't know what to do and would like some advice. — MOM IN ILLINOIS

DEAR MOM: Your son is displacing his anger at himself onto his son. He should have used birth control and he knows it. It's not fair, but Wayne does not appear to be the most mature of 23-year-olds.

Rather than blame yourself for the fact that he wants no involvement, consider that children usually model themselves after their same-gender parent. Because your husband was so uninvolved with Wayne, it is possible that Wayne has no idea of what a father's role ought to be. A parenting class could fix this — if your son is willing to take one.

Until then, continue to be the supportive and loving grandparents your grandson needs because, aside from his mother, it appears you're all the backup the little boy has.

DEAR ABBY: I come from a troubled family. I am just now realizing that there is more to life than posting bond for family members and getting people out of jail at 3 a.m. I got my GED and started college this year. Although I try to keep them at bay, they call me with one family crisis or another, and it's putting stress on everyone around me.

I'd love to have a positive relationship with my family, but drama seems to follow them everywhere. Should I just let them go and move on with my life, or continue doing the same as always? Must I drop everything I'm doing to jump and run every time the phone rings? — FAMILY DRAMA IN TEXAS

DEAR FAMILY DRAMA: Every time you come to the rescue, you further enable your relatives to do whatever it is that has gotten them in hot water. That you have managed to separate yourself to the extent you have, and achieve to the level you have reached, is admirable. But if you're going to continue to accomplish your goals, you cannot allow your family to distract you from your studies. Set limits. Let them know when you can't be disturbed and turn your phone off. They'll survive and you'll thrive.

JACQUELINE BIGAR

BIGAR'S STARS

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Thursday, April 24, 2014:

This year you will have the opportunity to socialize and network till your heart's content. You also will see a long-term desire become a reality. Don't hesitate to go for what you want. If you are single, you easily could tumble into a new crowd, where you will meet a special person. Enjoy the process of getting to know each other. If you are attached, as a couple, you have a lot to celebrate. You are likely to achieve one of your mutual goals, if not more. This year could be very special for you both. PISCES is an emotional but enduring friend.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Tap into your knowledge and listen to what is being said. Avoid personalizing comments, as you are more vulnerable than you have been in a while. Count on your imagination going to extremes, but know that a great idea could be the result.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You might be overly concerned about a situation. Keep your long-term objectives in mind. You could be very interested in what goes on around a work-related matter. You also might decide to finally clear the air.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You have more at stake than you realize. You might be more creative on one level, yet on another level, you'll see the role of structure in your life. A partner whom you thought you finally had an agreement with suddenly could change his or her mind.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Let your mind wander, and worry a little less about form and what is appropriate. You can take a great idea and make it conform later. A brainstorming situation could cause a slight rift, as someone is likely to get a little too personal.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Relate to a key person in your life directly. You might have difficulty getting through to this person on some level, so use this obstacle as an opportunity to open up to more creative modes of communication. You are bound to get a reaction.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You would be a lot happier if you allowed others to take the reins. Consider everything you could do if you were less available and didn't need to be present. You might catch up on your loved ones' news or take part of the day off just for you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You might want to rethink a situation in your life. You have high ideals, and it is important for you to meet them. Be realistic in setting goals. A boss or someone you must be responsive to might have a pleasant surprise for you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Listen to your ingenuity, and you might be able to materialize a special idea. Be aware that there is a strong possibility that you could sabotage yourself. Make an effort to be more in touch with your anger. Your emotions often come out in strange ways.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You might want to spend some time talking to a family member or roommate. Just because you are related or live in proximity does not mean that you can take each other for granted. It is important to make time for each other.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Return calls and see what is necessary to complete before the workweek ends. With some organization, you could leave on Friday afternoon feeling great. Your intuition is in high gear, as you seem to know who is calling before you even answer the phone.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You might not realize how possessive you can be. Make an effort to get past this issue. Your instincts could point to a money matter and taking a risk. Still, be careful. If you are not right about this, you'll want to make sure that you can handle the damage.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You'll feel as if you are unstoppable. You will be, and because of your charisma and drive, it is unlikely that anyone would want to stop you anyway. Check in with a friend or co-worker about an important get-together or meeting.

The bidding:

Opening lead — ten of hearts.

When a contract depends solely on the favorable distribution of a suit or the success of a finesse, all you can do is hope that the Fates will be kind to you. However, some hands that may seem to depend on luck can be salvaged by finding a way to reduce the luck element.

Consider this deal where South is in five diamonds and West leads a heart. East wins and plays another heart, ruffed by South.

There's no denying that after this start, declarer has an excellent shot at the contract. He can draw trumps, play the K-x of clubs and finesse the jack. If the jack wins, he is home free. But even if it loses, the clubs might be divided 3-3 and, failing that, the spade finesse might work.

All these possibilities added together make South a huge favorite for the contract. Yet, as the cards lie, he would go down one by pursuing this line of play, since both finesses fail and the clubs break 4-2.

However, South can improve his chances of getting home safely by altering his play slightly. After drawing trumps, he should cash the A-K of clubs, spurning the finesse. In the actual case, this safety play succeeds, since East has the doubleton queen.

Note that rejecting the club finesse doesn't hurt South's chances one bit. If the queen doesn't appear, South simply leads his remaining club toward the J-6. If West has the queen, or the suit divides 3-3, the contract is home, since dummy's fourth club becomes declarer's 11th trick.

By playing in this fashion, South makes the contract not only when West has the queen of clubs or the suit breaks 3-3, but also when East has the Q-x. The club finesse should therefore not be attempted, since declarer's maximum chance is attained by refusing the finesse.

Tomorrow: Bidding quiz.

Film review: 'Bears' is engaging, vividly shot

MICHAEL RECHTSHAFFEN
The Hollywood Reporter

LOS ANGELES — Keenly following the scent of "African Cats" and "Chimpanzees," Disneynature's "Bears" combines sweeping vistas and remarkably intimate wildlife photography to typically stirring effect as it documents a year in the life of a mother Alaskan brown bear and her two cubs.

Save for some particularly playful narration provided by John C. Reilly, the film, clocking in at a tidy 77 minutes, adheres closely to the successful blueprint first laid out by 2007's Earth, pitting a wildlife family unit against the not necessarily nurturing elements.

Released just ahead of Earth Day, "Bears" could snuggle up handsomely with family audiences looking for some holiday weekend adventure, although it will have to fight for a share of the turf claimed a week earlier by the exotic birds of Fox's "Rio 2."

The adventure takes place along the breathtaking Alaskan peninsula, where first-time mom Sky and her two tiny cubs, Amber and Scout, have emerged from hibernation and need to start addressing the food situation.

For a baby bear, getting to that sustenance isn't exactly a piece of cake, what with avalanches and predatory animals to deal with, including some of their own kind, like Magnus, the dominant alpha male in their neighborhood, and Chinook, a very hungry outcast who constantly poses a threat to clingy Amber and mischievous Scout.

OLIVER SCHOLEY / AP

This image shows a bear named Chinook in a scene from "Bears."

By now it's a familiar tale of one family's survival instinct, but it's hard not to cuddle up to a cute cub, and all that fearlessly up-close-and-personal footage, set extensively against that untouched Alaskan coastline, nevertheless makes for a compelling excursion.

The inherent drama is boosted by George Fenton's seriously symphonic score and contrasts with those delightfully loose, animated voice-overs courtesy of Reilly, a big teddy bear of an actor if ever there was one.

JACK

quick quips, gold medal-worthy eye rolls and closet full of denim and spandex, Lee's research paid off in spades. Indeed, her version of the popular, too-cool-for-school '90s vixen is just as "fly" as either of the Kellys (Tiffani-Amber Thiessen's Kapowski and Jennie Garth's Taylor, of course).

Lee plays Rachel Dunlevy, the oldest daughter of Christopher Meloni's titular Jack, on Fox's newest comedy, "Surviving Jack." The show follows the Dunlevy family as the matriarch (Rachael Harris) decides to start law school, leaving Jack, an oncologist, former military man and parenting newbie, to take on a larger role in raising their kids, Rachel and Frankie (Connor Buckley).

This arrangement — and Jack's abundance of unforgiving, blunt advice — isn't preferable to anyone involved, especially not wild child Rachel.

"It's funny, because on the show our father is surviving us just as much as we are surviving him and his new parenting skills, which the kids are not used to whatsoever," Lee said.

Out of her character's '90s makeup and clothes and in a stunning Ted Baker dress, Lee carries herself with a maturity and poise that is rare in teenage girls. And, frankly, she looks much older than 17.

"I know, I get that a lot," she said with a smile.

Lee, whose full name is Claudia Lee Mirkowski, grew up in West Lafayette, Ind. Her father, Klaudius Mirkowski, emigrated from Poland, and Lee said that culture has always been a big part of her life. Her family often traveled to Chicago to visit friends in the Polish community, and Lee spent her summers between the ages of 8 and 13 living in Poland and studying the language.

For as long as she, and her dad, can remember, Lee has been obsessed with the arts.

Claudia "would always perform at home," Mirkowski said. "She would have me build stages in her bedroom with full backgrounds."

She began taking dance classes at 3 and started singing, playing piano and acting with the Civic Theatre of Greater Lafayette at about 10. The activities "fed the beast that was growing inside me," Lee said.

"I remember watching TV when I was younger, knowing that was what I was going to do for the rest of my life," she said. "I would ask my parents, 'Why am I not on TV?' and my mom would say, 'Well, we don't live in California,' and I would say, 'When are we moving there?' I was 5, asking for an agent and a manager."

At 13, Lee begged her parents to go to an arts camp in Vermont sponsored by the New York Film Academy. A fellow camper's parent introduced her to an agent, who told Lee that if she really wanted to make a go of performing, she needed to move to LA.

Her parents gave her three months to prove she could make it in show business.

By the end of her first week in California, she booked a national commercial opposite Zachary Levi, who was starring on NBC's "Chuck." (The commercial was for Comcast.)

Four years later, Lee has recorded an album, filmed a major motion picture ("Kick-Ass 2") and landed regular roles on two network shows: "Surviving Jack" and "Hart of Dixie," on which she plays Magnolia Breeland, an uptight, slightly arrogant Southern belle.

"I think Claudia tackles every role, regardless of what it is, with this fearlessness and desire to really walk in someone else's shoes and show the journey of the character," said Kimberly Crandell, Lee's acting coach in LA. "She really loves what she does, and that shows in her work."

By all accounts, Lee nailed the audition for "Surviving Jack." Producer Bill Lawrence (who also created "Scrubs") said Lee "crushed" the reading, and fellow producer Patrick Schumacker said he had "never seen someone, especially a 16-year-old girl, come in that poised."
