there. Then they began to have mechanics by the state that would go around and tune up the various vehicles and see that they were properly maintained.

CW: You spent 12 hours a day on that thing at least.

AF: Twelve hours a day, subject to call 24 hours a day. You never had a vacation time off on holidays. And you got two days off every two weeks. And that went from noon to noon. That's the way your days were. I have slept on the benches in police stations many a night on Saturday nights that I wouldn't go home because I knew that the minute I got the cover pulled up around me in the bed I was going to get a phone call.

CW: Did they make you have a telephone at your house?

AF: Yes. And they paid for that.

CW: What do you suppose the population of Broward County was?

AF: Well, the city of Ft. Lauderdale I know for sure was 18,000 people when I first got there in 1939. A beautiful little town, it wasn't a concrete jungle like it is today.

CW: And you were the only trooper within how many miles?

AF: Well, Tobe Bass was stationed there with me but he had like we said previously there, he was Sergeant of the, what do you call it, zone one I think it was. And he had to more or
