HARRY TRACY, OUTLAW

When a Mere Boy He Became a Desperado.

EXPERT AT UNDOING HANDCUFFS

Desperate Criminal Who Has Terrorized the State of Washington Has on Several Occasions Sprung Handcuffs and Shackles While Walking With His Guards.

When Harry Tracy, the desperado who has terrorized all the state of Washington, was a small boy, he established his reputation as a dangerous criminal in Monroe county, Ia., says a dispatch from Albia, Ia., to the Philadelphia North American. Late in the fall of 1887 a fine road team belonging to R. O. Cramer of Albia was stolen from a stable in the heart of the city. The theft occurred at 9 o'clock in the evening and was so bold that persons who saw two men drive away from Cramer's barn with his blooded team supposed that the horses were being taken away with the permission of the owner.

After spending several thousand dollars in recovering his team Mr. Cramer and Sheriff Milt Forrest of Albia connected Tracy with the crime and found him in jail at Wymore, Neb. Extradition papers were secured, and Tracy was brought back to Albia for trial. But the work of the officers had only begun. The prisoner was locked in the county jail only a few hours when guards discovered that he had picked all the locks between himself and freedom and was about to make his escape.

Unwilling to trust the man in a cell, Sheriff Forrest ordered that he be taken to the Cramer hotel and kept in a room under the constant watch of guards. George and Frank Harris, two of the sheriff's deputies, were selected as the man's guards. Tracy warned them that they had undertaken a big job, and they exercised great care in making the prisoner's escape impossible. His clothing was all taken from him, and he was given wearing apparel which was known to be free from any sort of weapons or tools. The room was cleared of all furniture that was not absolutely necessary for the use of the prisoner and his guards.

Frank Harris agreed that he would be handcuffed with the prisoner and would sleep with him, thus making escape impossible. The door leading into the third story room, in which the man was imprisoned, was securely locked, and George Harris stood guard in the hall outside. In the middle of the first night the prisoner was kept in the hotel Frank Harris awoke and discovered that Tracy had sprung the handcuff from his wrist and was standing at the door, which he had unlocked without the aid of any tool. A broom straw afterward found on the floor was supposed to have been the means of picking the lock.

On other occasions Tracy sprung handcuffs and shackles while walking with his guards. His great skill at manipulating locks baffled all guards, and finally Sheriff Forrest was compelled to send the man to the state penitentiary at Fort Madison, Ia., where he was kept until time for his appearance in court. During his trial a small army of men watched him constantly. A woman who gave her name as Minnie Allen was arrested in connection with the theft of Cramer's horses, and it was shown that she joined Tracy and his partner somewhere in Missouri and traveled with them to St. Joseph, Mo. She was tried at the same time Tracy was, but was not convicted.

Tracy was convicted and sentenced to seven years in the Fort Madison penitentiary. He made the b[illegible] he would escape from th[illegible] the way to prison, but [illegible] made his escape impos[illegible] landed him behind the [illegible] remained for five years [illegible] model prisoner, and his s[illegible] commuted on account of h[illegible] behavior. He was employed in the blacksmithing department during his imprisonment and proved to be a skillful workman.

PAID $5 FOR VIOLIN SOLO.

Visitor at Ocean Grove, N. J., Bids For Repetition of a Hymn.

"I'll give a dollar to have that young lady violinist repeat that solo!" exclaimed a man who said he was from Alabama at the young people's meeting in the Temple at Ocean Grove, N. J., the other morning, says the New York Times, after Miss Cecilia Bradford had played "Safe In the Arms of Jesus."

"You'll have to bid higher, brother," Leader Yatman remarked.

"Well, $2, then."

"Make it $5 and I'll ask Miss Bradford to repeat the solo."

"Here's the money," said the southerner, handing the evangelist a greenback.

Miss Bradford then played the hymn again. When she had finished, Mr. Yatman said:

"Half of the money I will turn into the fund being raised for the marine carnival on Wesley lake, and the other half I will give to Miss Bradford to spend for ice cream."

As soon as the meeting adjourned the violinist gathered her friends about her and started for a nearby ice cream parlor.

HEAD OF NEW OIL TRUST.

Untold Wealth of John D. Rockefeller and Standard Oil Company.

The Standard Oil company, which is at the head of the new oil trust, is capitalized at $110,000,000 under the laws of the state of New Jersey, but is worth at least a billion and a half because of the appreciation of its stock, says the New York Journal.

This octopus, which has from its modest beginning brought about a community of interests in the oil business of the world, forcing the house of the Rothschilds to come to its terms, is the owner of fleets, buildings, towns, plants that cover miles of territory, thousands of railroad oil cars and 20,000 miles of oil tubing.

In its possession is nearly all of the oil land in America north of Texas, some of it—and the greatest holding—being in western Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Its grasp has extended to nearly every country in the world, controlling the trade in nearly every section, and so profitable has become its trade that in 1899 the profits amounted to $48,000,000 and have been increasing at a prolific rate every year since.

Of John D. Rockefeller's holdings in the Standard Oil alone an intimate of the financier remarked in Wall street recently, "I should say that Mr. Rockefeller was worth today a little less than a thousand million dollars. Take his holdings in Standard Oil alone. They have been worth during the present year more than $300,000,000. But it must be remembered that Mr. Rockefeller, who squanders less than most rich men on his personal wants, has been growing rich at the rate of compound interest.

"I don't think any man will deny that Mr. Rockefeller has made an average of $30,000,000 a year for ten years. The reinvestment of this sum alone, supposing he had no principal, at 5 per cent compound interest would mean the addition of more than $400,000,000 to his riches.

"But the securities from which this income has been derived have steadily increased in value. His Standard Oil holdings in three or four years have doubled in market value; his railway and other securities have advanced tremendously, and in the past three years his wealth has increased in a sum which would astonish the American people if the actual figures were laid before them.

"There are few first class railroads in which he does not own some of the stock. There are few trusts in which he has not been compelled to reinvest his constantly increasing income. At the present quotations for securities it is impossible that he should be worth much less than a thousand million dollars."

GIFTS FROM WU TING FANG

Chinese Minister Overwhelmed With Souvenir Requests.

The genial Chinese minister at Washington, Wu Ting Fang, is already beginning to pack his household goods preparatory to giving over the legation to his successor, Sir Liang Chang.

According to the minister, if he responded to all the requests for souvenirs which he is now receiving from admirers all the country over he would not have much to pack, says the Philadelphia Press. If Mme. Wu sent as many slippers to museums and libraries as have been asked for, she would go back to China barefooted.

Mme. Wu, at the minister's request, brought with her last year from China a large collection of rare porcelains, tapestries and old ivories, and these he has presented to friends with true generosity. Many of the garments of Mme. Wu have been offered up as a sacrifice to the curio collector, while the minister also has distributed his headgear and silken coats with great prodigality.

Few diplomatists have been so generous as the retiring Chinese minister. There is scarcely a woman in Washington or in other cities to whom he owed debts of hospitality that has not received a costly fan, a curio ivory or silk for a gown. At the balls next winter robes made from Chinese crape given by Minister Wu will be a popular feature. Wu has also sent some rare gifts to the officials with whom he came in contact.

He has formed many friendships in the United States and will be more sincerely regretted than most envoys. His friends hint that he is showing wonderful insight of our national characteristics by distributing such costly gifts as a farewell. He is making doubly sure of being remembered.

Notice of Election.

Whereas, The legislature of 1901, under the constitution of 1885, of the state of Florida, did pass two joint resolutions proposing amendments to the constitution of the state of Florida, and the same were agreed to by a vote of three fifths of all the members elected to each house; that the vote on said joint resolutions were entered upon their respective journals, with the yeas and nays thereon, and they did determine and direct that the said joint resolutions be submitted to the electors of the state at the general election in November, 1902;

Now, therefore, I, H. Clay Crawford, secretary of state of the state of Florida, do hereby give notice that a general election will be held in each county in Florida on Tuesday next succeeding the first Monday in November, A. D. 1902, the said Tuesday being the 4th day of November, for the ratification or rejection of the said joint resolutions proposing amendments to the constitution of the state of Florida, viz.:

ARTICLE XIX.

That the following amendments to the constitution of the state of Florida be, and the same are hereby, agreed to, and shall be submitted to the electors of the state at the general election in 1902 for ratification or rejection:

Section 2 of Article V of the constitution is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

The supreme court shall consist of three justices, except as hereinafter provided, who shall be elected by the qualified electors of the state at the time and places of voting for members of the legislature, and shall hold their office for the term of six years, except those first elected, one of whom, to be designated by lot in such manner as they may determine, shall hold his office for two years; another, to be designated in like manner, for four years, and the third for six years, so that one shall be elected every two years after the first election.

The chief justice shall be designated by lot by said justices, and shall be such during his term of office. The first election for said justices shall take place at the first election for members of the legislature after the ratification of this constitution, and their term of office shall begin on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in January after their election.

Upon ratification of this amendment to the constitution, the governor, by and with the consent of the senate, shall appoint three more justices of the supreme court, each of whom shall have the same powers and shall receive the same compensation as each of the other justices of the supreme court, and each of the justices so appointed shall hold office until the first Tuesday after the first Monday of June in the year 1905, and may further hold office until his successor shall be elected and qualified, if it shall be so provided by law. For the year 1905, and for the subsequent years the legislature may provide by law for the election of such number of justices of the supreme court as it may determine, and prescribe their terms of office, not to exceed six years; provided, that the number of justices of the supreme court holding office at the same time shall not be less than three, and shall not be greater than six, and provided that no justice of the supreme court can by such an act of the legislature be deprived of his office during the term for which he was elected.

Section 4 of Article V of the constitution is hereby amended so as to read as follows: The majority of the justices of the supreme court shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of all business. But when there shall be six justices of the supreme court, the court may hear and determine cases and exercise any of its powers when sitting either in a body or in two divisions, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law or by the rules of said court not inconsistent therewith. The concurrence of a majority of the members of the court sitting in any cause wherein the court shall sit as one body shall be necessary to a decision; and when any member of a division of the court shall dissent from the majority of such division on any question, such question shall be submitted to the court sitting in a body. The number of terms of the supreme court and the time of holding the same shall be regulated by law. All terms shall be held at the capital of the state.

ARTICLE XX.

That the following amendment to the constitution of the state of Florida be, and the same is, hereby agreed to, and shall be submitted to the electors of the state at the general election in 1902 for ratification or rejection: Section 8 of Article V of the constitution is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

Section 8. There shall be eight circuit judges who shall be appointed by the governor, and confirmed by the senate, and who shall hold their office for six years.

The state shall be divided by the legislature at its first regular session after the adoption of this section, into eight judicial circuits, and one judge shall be assigned to each circuit. Such judge shall hold at least two terms of his court in each county within his circuit every year, and at such times and places as shall be prescribed by law, and may hold special terms.

The governor may, in his discretion, order a temporary exchange of circuits by the respective judges or order any judge to hold one or more terms or part or parts of any term in any other circuit than that to which he is assigned. The judge shall reside in the circuit of which he is judge.

This section shall not be operative until the legislature shall have divided this state into eight circuits, as hereinbefore provided for; and the seven circuit judges holding office at the time of such division shall continue to exercise jurisdiction over their several existing circuits as constituted at the time of such division, until the judge of the additional circuit shall have qualified. The circuit judges holding office at the time of such division shall severally continue in office until the expiration of their then existing term of office as judges of the circuits, respectively, in which, under such division, the county of his residence may be included; and a judge for the additional circuit shall be appointed for a term equal to the unexpired term of the other circuit judges upon such division being made. The salary of each circuit judge shall be two thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars.

The votes cast in compliance with said proposed amendments, and the canvass, declarations and returns thereof, shall be subject to the same regulations and restrictions as are provided by law for general elections in the state of Florida.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the state of Florida, at Tallahassee, the capital, this the first day of August A. D. 1902.
