J. R. NIX & CO. IS NEW FIRM NAME

Mr. Nix Buys Out Partner In Firm of White & Nix.

Jas. R. Nix.

A business deal of some importance was consummated yesterday when J. R. Nix, of the well-known clothing firm of White & Nix, purchased the interest of his partner, A. Henry White and announced that the business would hereafter be conducted under the name of J. R. Nix & Company.

The firm of White & Nix began business at 29 South Palafox street in March, 1906, and its success was phenomenal from the start and the business at this time is one of the best paying businesses in the city.

The rise in local business circles of Jas. R. Nix is one of the most remarkable examples that Pensacola affords of what thrift, economy, and strict attention to duty will accomplish. Mr. Nix is a young man and up until less than two years ago he was a clerk in one of Pensacola's various clothing stores, drawing the same kind of salary that other clerks draw, but looking ahead to the time when he would have a business of his own. That time came much sooner than it does with most salaried men, and Mr. Nix's business success has also came much sooner than it does with most business men.

His many friends will congratulate him on the acquisition of the new interest in his business which, under his good business management, is sure to become very much more valuable as the city grows larger and the business gets older.

SLEEPING OUTDOORS.

The Practice Not Limited to Consumptives Nowadays.

Outdoor sleeping has grown in favor with recent years. Time was when it was limited to consumptives and faddists, but nowadays every one advocates the practice more or less. Especially is it to be recommended for children as tending to increase their strength and improve their health, fitting them, in fact, for the battle of life in a manner which no system of favors and pampering could ever do, says the Philadelphia North American.

This does not at all mean that the method is to be a rigorous one. Above all, the child should be warmly and comfortably wrapped and protected from draughts of all sorts. In the first place, this open air slumber is primarily intended for daytime naps, and should not become the regular nightly practice unless the whole household is accustomed to it. As to the sleeping couch, it may be either a sofa on the porch, a cot furnished as hereafter described, a swinging hammock or even a large armchair. Whatever piece of furniture may be chosen should be well provided with pillows and with a warm shawl, quilt or summer rug.

The cot should be spread with a mattress of some colored goods—cretonne or chintz—and a small pillow to match. Then around three sides, excepting only that which is protected by the wall or some other object, a stiffly quilted, very thin mattress should be placed in such a manner as effectually to shut out the wind.

This outdoor sleeping should begin early in childhood. Probably when the child first walks is the best time to initiate him in this new fad, which is, after all, not a fad, for it is highly conducive to health and—a point of interest to the mothers of girl babies—is even said to increase the child's chances for future beauty.

It is never, however, too late to mend, and no matter how much older than this your child may be let him start now to sleep outdoors. The warm weather will keep him from any discomfort now, and by autumn it will probably be a hard task to drive him indoors at all.

DOUGH RAISER.

Easy Method of Hastening the Bread to Rise.

A heater especially intended to raise bread by means of the heat of a lamp has been recently patented by a Wisconsin man. As shown in the illustration, the casing is of sheet iron, the lower portion having openings for the admission of air. The casing is bottomless. A partition having an opening in the center divides the upper and lower sections, a lamp being placed below this opening when the heater is in use. Supported above the opening is a deflecting cone, the point of the cone being directly over the lamp. Near the top of the upper flared section are a number of holes. The sides of the bread pan are flared, the edges of the pan neatly resting and fitting on the edge of the casing. The supposition is that the hot air from the lamp rises and is deflected by the cone, so that it reaches the sides of the bread pan and escapes through the holes at the top, preventing excess heat around the pan. The time saved by the use of this heater will be instantly recognized.

Lady Baltimore Cake.

One cupful of butter, two of sugar, three and a half cupfuls of flour, one of sweet milk, the white of six eggs, two level teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of rosewater.

Butter and sugar gradually, beating continuously, adding the sugar as you go on, then the milk and the flavoring, next the flour, with which the baking powder has been sifted. Lastly, fold in lightly the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs with long, horizontal strokes of the beater; loaf and bake in three layer cake tins. The oven should be hotter than for layer cake.

Filling—Dissolve three cupfuls of granulated sugar in one of boiling water. Boil until the sirup "threads" and pour over the stiffened whites of three eggs, stirring constantly.

To this icing add a cupful of chopped raisins and the same of chopped nut meats—pecans are best—and five figs shred into thin strips. Ice the tops and sides of the cake with this after filling it between the layers.

Homemade Floor Polish.

A good floor polish of home manufacture can be made as follows: Cut up half a pound of beeswax finely, place in a pot and cover with turpentine. Let this stand on the stove until dissolved. Apply to the floor with a piece of flannel and thoroughly rub it in with a stiff brush.

FIRE FIGHTING AT SEA

Methods of Extinguishing Flames on Board Ships.

RIGID DISCIPLINE THE RULE.

When the Alarm Is Sounded Every Member of the Crew Has His Station and Carries Out the Particular Duty Intrusted to Him.

Of all disasters that can befall a ship none is more dreaded by the mariner than a fire at sea. Indeed, the annals of Lloyd's record few greater ocean tragedies and, be it said, no more conspicuous instances of gallantry and heroic effort than those connected with ships afire.

No wonder, then, in view of the dreadful possibilities of an outbreak of fire on board, that a thorough knowledge of the proper steps to be taken in extinguishing the flames at the outset or at least holding them in check is expected of every officer from the captain downward.

Most vessels are nowadays fitted with hydrants, several on each deck, and in the case of large liners hose is kept in handy places, ready to be attached to the hydrants at a moment's notice. Moreover, every large passenger boat carries a number of portable extinguishers which can be strapped on a man's back. The spray from these is, of course, thin, but very effective in subduing small outbreaks where the fire has not secured too firm a hold.

Fire drill forms a weekly feature in the routine on every ocean liner. Every member of the crew literally, from captain to cabin boy, has his "fire station" allotted to him, at which, when the signal is given, he takes his position and carries out the particular duty intrusted to him.

When an actual outbreak occurs the fire alarm is if possible avoided, so as to prevent panic among the passengers. Word is passed quietly around, the passengers being kept in ignorance as long as possible. In fact, more than one fire at sea has been extinguished without any suspicion on the part of the passengers that the outbreak was other than an imaginary one engineered by the officers to give the passengers a chance of seeing what could be done in the event of the real thing occurring.

In many cases, of course, the passengers have to be informed, but the news is always broken as lightly as possible, and some special entertainment—a concert, a dance, theatricals, and so on—is got up to allay any natural feeling of nervous anxiety. Of course if the fire shows signs of becoming unmanageable the boats are got ready and swung out in case it appears necessary to abandon the ship.

Every boat on large liners is kept fully provisioned, food sufficient for several days being contained in air and water tight tanks.

The worst fires at sea are those which cannot easily be got at. These usually occur amid the cargo in the lower holds and are often spontaneous in their origin. In such cases it is highly dangerous to open the hatches. The fire, which may have been smoldering for days, will naturally burst into a blaze as soon as the air is admitted.

The proper course is to exclude the air in every possible way; consequently even the ventilators are stopped up. If the holds are fitted with steam pipes, the steam is at once turned on; otherwise holes are cut in the deck, just large enough to admit the nozzles of the fire hose, and water is vigorously pumped into the hold.

In one form of extinguishing apparatus, instead of steam or water, sulphurous fumes are injected into the hold, the fumes being generated in a machine specially fitted for that purpose. This injection method is highly effective and rarely fails if the pipes are properly placed in each hold. The steam or fumes are turned on from the upper deck.

If a fire breaks out in the hold and assumes such dimensions that steam injection is powerless to check it, the vessel is, when possible, got into shallow water and, if necessary, beached.

In any case the sea cocks of the particular hold are opened and the hold allowed to fill with water. This can usually be done with very little fear of the vessel foundering, as modern built ships are divided into many compartments separated by strong water tight bulkheads of steel or iron. Such is the buoyancy of a vessel so constructed that instances have been known of a craft remaining afloat with only one or two of these compartments dry.

If the burning hold is a very large one and by flooding it with water there is danger of the vessel foundering, the cargo in another hold is thrown overboard or "jettisoned," as it is called at sea, to counteract the weight of water admitted into the first hold. As a last resource, the vessel, if in dock or shallow water, is scuttled by opening the sea cocks. This has been done more than once in Tilbury docks.

We seldom hear nowadays of fire breaking out in the passengers' quarters on large liners. The introduction of electric lighting on board ship has no doubt conduced greatly to this improved state of matters. When a fire does break out in the cabin, it is usually soon detected, for a constant watch is kept by the officers and night stewards, who make periodical tours of inspection during the nocturnal hours.—Pearson's Weekly.

Look on the poor with gentle eyes, for in such habits often angels desire alms.—Massinger.

DISTINGUISHED COLORED MAN

Rev. J. S. Jackson of Birmingham is Entertained by A. M. E. Zionists of Deep Water City.

The Zion pastors of the city tendered Dr. J. S. Jackson, of Birmingham, a big reception last Wednesday night at the residence of Dr. N. R. Rhodes, whose guest the distinguished colored visitor was. Dr. Jackson is one of the leading negroes of the country, and is a candidate for the office of Financial Secretary of the A. M. E. Zion church, with headquarters in Philadelphia. This is a very lucrative, as well as important office, and when a man reaches it he has but one step more to make—the bishopric.

Dr. Jackson is quite an orator, and spoke at Mt. Moriah, Big Zion church and at the Zion parsonage during his stay here.

The Florida conference is pledged to support him in the 1908 general conference. Dr. Rhodes took the initiative step in getting up the reception. Those present were Dr. Rhodes, Revs. Shinn, Gaffney, Burns, Norris, Leggett, Myricks, Holt, Father Moore and Aaron Brown.

HAD AN AWFUL TIME

But Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy Cured Him.

It is with pleasure that I give you this unsolicited testimonial. About a year ago when I had a severe case of measles I got caught out in a hard rain and the measles settled in my stomach and bowels. I had an awful time and had it not been for the use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy I could not have possibly lived but a few hours longer, but thanks to this remedy I am now strong and well. I have written the above through simple gratitude and I shall always speak a good word for this remedy.—Sam H. Gwin, Concord, Ga. For sale by all druggists.

We know the meaning of words and will do as we say. We claim to be the lowest priced Whiskey House and Largest Mail Order Concern in the South. We ship more whiskey to customers residing in the southern states than all of the northern and western houses combined. Common whiskey here is unknown. All the whiskey we sell is good—there is no bad. People here about don't know what adulterating means, and wouldn't adulterate if they knew how—they are too honest! The trouble with most whiskey sellers nowadays is their greed for mixing, blending and watering. We give our customers more genuine old whiskey and less water than any known competitor. Casper's Whiskey put up in blue bottles is a liquid joy. It's made by honest "Tarheels" in the mountains of North Carolina and Virginia, bottled over open furnaces wood fires, in old style copper stills, just as it was made by our grandfathers a century ago. First rate whiskey is sold at $5.00 to $6.00 per gallon, but it's not any better than Casper's. It is the best made and most pleases every customer or we will buy it back. We are incorporated under the laws of North Carolina and Virginia, and the People's National Bank and the Piedmont Savings Bank of Winston-Salem, N. C., and the National Exchange Bank of Roanoke, Va., will tell you our guarantee is good. To introduce this old, honest, mild and mellow whiskey, we offer 5 Full Quarts of Casper's Whiskey in blue bottles—two sample bottles Free, one 15, one 18 years old—a corkscrew and a drinking glass—all for $4.95. If $5.90 is sent, we will double the above and put in free One Bottle of Peach Brandy. We ship in plain boxes with no marks to indicate contents.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—We deliver the above Express prepaid anywhere in N. C., Va., and W.
