THERE ARE OTHERS.

My darling wife is pretty firm.
Beneath her sway I sometimes squirm.

But there's one thing that I must say—
She doesn't always have her way.

She puts her foot down mighty flat—
There's not a bit of doubt of that.

She's not one that I love to cross,
But, all the same, she's not the boss.

She often orders me around.
It's best to humor her, I've found.

Still, there are times, no doubt of it,
When she must gracefully submit.

I am by nature mild and meek
And she's strong-minded, so to speak.

Yet she has not been slow to find
That others have some strength of mind.
That she must tremble at a frown
And humbly take a calling down.

On such occasions I am free
To say it rather tickles me.

It does me good to see her shrink,
She needs the discipline, I think.

She's pretty often brought to book,
By me? Good gracious, no! Our cook.

LADIES' WAIST.

A pretty design for a dressy waist of silk or some soft material is shown in the above illustration. The bodice was made on a lining. The lining was cut away under the yoke and cuffs, which were of embroidered chiffon. Three tucks on each shoulder give the desired fullness; the tucks run over the shoulders down the back to the waistline. The sleeves are trimmed with tucks and buttons. The waist closes in the back.

FOR PIMPLES, TOO

New Discovery Cures Eczema and Eradicates Minor Skin Trouble Overnight.

A few months ago the dispensers of poslam, the new discovery for the cure of eczema, decided to allow the druggists of the country to handle it. Previous to that time it could only be obtained direct from the laboratories.

Since this change in the method of distribution, poslam has met with the most phenomenal success of anything introduced to the drug trade in the last 30 years. All leading druggists, including The Crystal Pharmacy, Pensacola, are now carrying the special 50-cent size recently adopted, also the $2 jar.

This great success is not surprising when it is remembered that, in eczema cases, poslam stops the itching with firt application, proceeds to heal immediately, and cures chronic cases in a few weeks. In minor skin troubles such as pimples, blackheads, acne, herpes, blotches, rash, etc., results show after an overnight application. Experimental samples of poslam are sent to anyone by mail free of charge, by the Emergency Laboratories, 32 West Twenty-fifth street, New York City.

HINTS FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

No matter how regular and classic the features of a young girl may be, unless her complexion is likewise perfect, the effect will not be a pleasing one. Broad and sweeping rules will not cure every individual ill, but if the average girl who is just coming out into society would follow the recipe of the famous beauty Lilly Langtry she would help nature a great deal. The recipe she gives is "Work sunshine, exercise, soap and water, plain food, fresh air and cheerfulness." Simple enough, isn't it—as far as it goes, and I grant you it covers a wide field, but there are other ills.

For instance, the girl who goes to a dance is often bothered by "ugly locks" that never will stay in place. These stray locks at the ears and at the back of the neck detract from an otherwise well-groomed girl. Of course they should be brushed in place every night with fifty strokes, but on the night of the dance a little brilliantine can be brushed on them and will go far toward holding them in condage.

Then, too, there is the girl with a perfect complexion, curly locks and dainty gowns, but with an ugly streak around the neck, caused by wearing high, tight collars. To destroy all traces of such a disfiguring streak about the neck the following lotion should be applied two or three times a day until it is bleached out. First bathe the neck in quite hot water and then apply the lotion:

Rose water, two ounces; boric acid, one dram, and distilled witchhazel, two ounces.

Since earrings have come into vogue again it brings the ears into much greater prominence, and the girl who wants to appear well at night under a brilliant white light will tint the lobes of her ears just a little. Perhaps liquid rouge is best for this. It can be applied rather freely, as the lobe of a healthy ear is often very pink. And then there is the girl who suffers from extremely red ears and nose and the one great remedy for this is a plain, very simple diet and exercise which produce better circulation. The red ear can be softened in color by rubbing first with a little cold cream, working it into the flesh and then adding a goodly coat of powder.

If the lips are pale and gray looking a harmless salve can be used and will make a girl look ten years younger. Liquid rouge is sometimes applied to the lips, but it is not practical, as the moisture of the lips weakens it so that the color fades in less than an hour.

The young girl just out in society should have no reason to use rouge, for her youth and her health should give her rosy cheeks. Let the tired mothers put a dash on at night to brighten up their faces, but the debutante should get along without it. However, there are cases where a girl is naturally very pale and at night under the artificial light she has shadow's on her face, and such girls should apply a little rouge, well distributed. I think the most harmless of all rouge is the liquid form, but it certainly will fade quicker than the paste. If rouge is applied it should be done immediately after the cold cream has been rubbed into the skin and before the powder is applied. And if you use it, do so judiciously. Don't put it on in one perfectly round spot but scatter it just as nature does. The girl with the high cheek bone and hollow cheeks should apply it low and not up to the temples, while the girl with the long thin face should rouge well up on the cheek bones and over the temple, trying to give a broader effect.

Have a good light over your dressing table. Sit down and take plenty of time and use plenty of common sense as well as cosmetics. At night when the party is over and you are once more before the mirror, cover the face with cold cream and take off all traces of powder, rouge and salves. Then wash the face in warm water and soap and dry thoroughly and once more apply cold cream, leaving on a thin coating of it overnight.

The first step is to apply cold cream to the skin and rub it in well, then wipe off the face with a bit of soft linen. The best powder puff is made of lamb's wool; the down puff is good for dusting over the body, not for applying powder to the face. Go over all of the face thoroughly and then have another puff or soft piece of chamois, and literally work the powder into the skin until it takes on a velvety sheen. Lastly powder the nose once more—the nose will generally stand two coats of powder.

Having applied the powder give some attention to the eyebrows and lashes. Make sure that they are free from all traces of powder. A tiny brush should be used, dipped in cologne, and they should be brushed upward and outward. An eyebrow brush can be purchased at any druggist's.

And now we have come to the one great accessory of the complexion—powder. Cheap powder is always an expensive investment. The best is none too good, so economize on your ice cream sodas and buy a reliable powder made by a reputable firm—about 75 cents or a dollar a box is an average price. In making a selection of powder you must match the complexion exactly and you will find that it comes in three or four shades. The pink and white girl will look ghastly if she buys a brunette powder, and vice versa. And remember that it takes time and some sense of the artistic to apply it.

Mrs. Elizabeth George Henderson, who read a paper at a recent meeting of the North Carolina peace congress, said that she had written to the heads of the associations of the Daughters of the Confederacy, asking how they felt in regard to the congress, and they declared themselves in favor of peace by arbitration.

It is interesting to read that during the late demonstration around the house of commons, Mrs. Asquith and Miss Asquith were taken for suffragettes and so roughly handled by the police that they had to make their identity known in self defense. The suffragists have all along declared that they are often arrested and roughly treated when they have really done nothing to deserve it and the mishap of the Asquith ladies goes far to prove it; for no one can suppose that the prime minister's wife and daughter were behaving in a disorderly way.

When one has a resting time forced upon her is the psychological moment to get busy with the hair. Every woman knows the benefits of tonic treatments, but every woman knows equally well what a sight she is during the process. Therefore, instead of bemoaning when the baby gets the measles or Ruth or Bob comes down with chicken pox, shutting one in the house, improve the opportunity to strengthen your locks. You can even resort to crude petroleum without afflicting callers. Separate the hair into strands and apply tonics nightly without fear of flattening; rub in vaseline often, and let the hair hang for ventilation.

Queen Alexandra, who is retaining her beauty marvelously, makes her daily menu something like this: Before rising she eats a few thin slices of brown bread, spread with unsalted butter. Her 11 o'clock breakfast consists of fruit, a couple of coddled eggs and dry biscuits. A little delicate fish or chicken, a salad and fruit comprises her luncheon. With her 4 o'clock glass of milk she eats a couple of honey cakes. She never eats the heavy elaborate dinner served to the rest of the family. Instead she has little private dishes of tiny French oysters grilled on toast, stewed celery and a green salad dressed only with oil and salt. She never eats any more elaborate sweet than apple baked with honey. When at Sandringham she makes butter in her own cedar churn in the dairy every day, and then has a luncheon of whole wheat bread and buttermilk, which she says is a "meal fit for the goddess," and the most wholesome any pretty woman can eat.

You can get along without Ivory Soap; of course you can.

But why should you? It is one of the things that help to make life easier and pleasanter. Its cost is trifling, and its uses are so varied that it has a place of honor in the homes of millions.
