Common Core anger prompting changes

The changes are mostly cosmetic, though, and 'Core' essentially intact.

By GARY FINEOUT
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Fueled by parents angry over contentious new national education standards called Common Core, the Republican-controlled Florida Legislature is pushing through a series of sweeping changes.

But shhh — don't tell anyone this — Common Core isn't really going away in Florida, just the name.

GOP lawmakers are advancing a bill that repeals more than 30 mentions of Common Core that were placed into state law just a year ago.

Some Republicans are also pushing ahead a bill that would mandate school districts adopt their own textbooks even though small school districts are complaining they don't have the money or the time to take over a job typically done at the state level. This comes after some conservatives complained that a high school world history textbook approved by the state gave too much attention to Islam.

The Florida Senate has already passed a far-reaching data security bill (SB 188) that would ban school districts from collecting any type of biometric data, including fingerprints or palm prints, from students or parents. The measure is going to force Pinellas County to scrap a system it's been using to verify that students qualify for free or reduced lunches.

But legislators have refused to jettison Common Core standards. Bills from Republican legislators that called for a pause on putting the standards in place have not been debated during this year's session.

The call for changes came nearly three months after Gov. Rick Scott promised Republicans attending an annual state party convention that officials would respond to complaints about Common Core. Scott's remarks were made a day after a state party caucus passed a resolution opposing the standards.

Top Republicans insist the changes aren't an effort to just answer critics of Former Lake City Police Department Capt. Robert Smith Jr. and the City of Lake City have reached a $40,000 settlement in Smith's federal discrimination suit against the city.

The case, which was to be heard in US District Court, Jacksonville, was formally dismissed March 24 by Judge Brian J. Davis, who ruled each side would pay its own attorney fees and costs.

March for babies

'5-mile street party' starts Saturday morning at 8.

By STEVEN RICHMOND
srichmond@lakecityreporter.com

Hundreds of local residents will take to the streets Saturday for the 45th annual March for Babies, a fundraiser supporting healthcare and research for infants.

Teams of local businesses, families and individual fundraisers will take a five-mile trek centered around Olustee Park while raising money for March of Dimes-backed research for birth defect, premature birth and infant mortality prevention and treatment.

"This five-mile street party is a celebration of the lives we are changing through outstanding fundraising efforts in Columbia and surrounding counties," according to the March of Dimes Suwannee Valley's website. "Guaranteed to be a wonderful morning, join us for plenty of food, fun and festivities as we continue the march for stronger, healthier babies."

The March of Dimes Suwannee Valley includes Suwannee, Hamilton and Columbia counties, and is part of a larger North Central Florida division which also encompasses Dixie, Gilchrist, Levy, Marion, Putnam and Alachua counties.

The North Central Florida division of the March of Dimes has raised roughly $2 billion since their March for Babies events began in 1970.

As of press time, the Suwannee Valley

MFLs up for discussion Thursday

Santa Fe minimum flows, levels subject of public hearing.

Local residents will have a chance to learn and ask about the new Minimum Flows and Levels (MFLs) proposed for the Santa Fe and Ichetucknee Rivers at a public hearing in Live Oak Thursday morning.

Hosted by the Department of Environmental Protection in conjunction with the Suwannee River and St. Johns River Water Management Districts, the public hearing will cover a variety of environmental concerns facing North Central Florida water systems.

"Establishing MFLs is part of the [SRWMD's] planning for adequate water supplies while also protecting water resources from significant harm," according to a March 17 fact sheet published by the district. "MFLs protect nonconsumptive uses of water that include water necessary for navigation and recreation, and for fish and wildlife habitat, and other natural resources," in accordance with Florida law.

Tampa mom won't face death penalty

TAMPA

Prosecutors say they are no longer seeking the death penalty for a Tampa mother accused of fatally shooting her two children.

The State Attorney's Office in Hillsborough County informed Julie Schenecker's attorneys Monday that it was withdrawing its notice of intent to seek the death penalty.

A spokesman for the State Attorney's Office said in an email that the overwhelming evidence of mental health issues would make a death sentence unlikely to withstand the scrutiny of the Florida Supreme Court.

Schenecker is scheduled to go on trial April 28 in the Jan. 27, 2011, slayings of her two children, 16-year-old Calyx and 13-year-old Beau.

Schenecker's lawyers have notified the court they intend to argue she was insane at the time of the killings.

Woman getting deported in NY gambling case

ALBANY, N.Y. — A federal judge in upstate New York has sentenced a 30-year-old Florida resident to probation for laundering more than $8 million for a widespread illegal sports gambling operation.

Michele Lasso was detained by immigration officials in Albany for deportation to her native Panama after sentencing Tuesday.

U.S. District Court Judge Mae D'Agostino says Lasso helped authorities recover $7 million from foreign banks and the new mother spent the past year in home confinement, but her motive was greed.

Lasso apologized.

Defense attorney William Shepherd notes sports betting and managing bank accounts in various countries is neither illegal nor uncommon in Panama.

The ringleader, 52-year-old Philip Gurian of Boca Raton, Fla., faces sentencing April 15. He has also pleaded guilty to conspiracy to launder money.

Water managers may appeal Clean Water ruling

FORT MYERS — South Florida's water managers may appeal a federal judge's ruling over the pumping of water from farmlands into public water supplies such as Lake Okeechobee.

Environmental groups have hailed last week's ruling by U.S. District Judge Kenneth Karas in New York's Southern District. Karas said the practice of "back-pumping" violates the Clean Water Act.

South Florida Water Management District spokesman Randy Smith tells the News-Press that day-to-day operations won't immediately change while the district considers filing an appeal.

The nonprofit environmental law firm Earthjustice first filed its case in 2002 over polluted water from sugar cane and vegetable fields pumped into Lake Okeechobee which is the drinking water source for millions of Floridians.

Damages sought in Bieber lawsuit

MIAMI — A celebrity photographer sought to boost the potential damages he could win from Justin Bieber in a lawsuit that accuses the singer and a bodyguard of battery in a confrontation outside a recording studio.

The photographer's attorney, Mark DiCowden, said at a Tuesday hearing that he has documented at least 11 similar alleged assaults against photographers over two years involving Bieber and his security personnel. DiCowden said a punitive damage award for Jeffrey Binion could deter future assaults against celebrity photographers, known as "paparazzi."

"It's not a financial fishing expedition," DiCowden said in asking Miami-Dade Circuit Judge Sarah Zabel to allow him to pursue unspecified punitive damages. "It is well known around the world that Justin Bieber does not like to be photographed in public."

Zabel did not immediately rule.

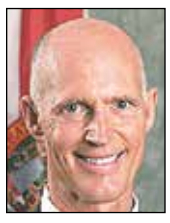
Scott signs bills aimed at ending 'awful tragedies'

State to crack down on sexual predators.

By JIM SAUNDERS
The News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — After a disturbing newspaper investigation and the murder of a Jacksonville girl, Florida legislative leaders vowed to get tough this year on sexually violent predators.

And Tuesday, Gov. Rick Scott moved quickly to sign a package of bills aimed at keeping sexually violent predators locked up so they can't attack again.



Scott

"Florida's going to be scorched earth for these monsters," said Sen. Rob Bradley, a Fleming Island Republican who worked on the bills.

Scott signed the package (SB 522, SB 524, SB 526 and SB 528) during a ceremony in the Capitol's Cabinet meeting room that included sheriffs, prosecutors, lawmakers, sexual-assault victims and victims' family members. Scott and other speakers said the bills will make Florida's children safer.

Supporters hope the bills will prevent a repeat of incidents such as the kidnapping, rape and murder last year of 8-year-old Cherish Perrywinkle in Jacksonville, a case that drew widespread attention. A registered sex offender, Donald Smith, has been arrested in the case.

> 'Florida's going to be scorched earth for these monsters.'
> — Sen. Rob Bradley (R-Fleming Island)

More broadly, supporters hope the legislation will address problems raised in an investigative report by the South Florida Sun Sentinel. The newspaper reported that the commitment of sexually violent predators under the state's Jimmy Ryce Act had slowed to a crawl. Also, it found that since 1999, nearly 600 sexual predators had been released only to be convicted of new sex offenses — including more than 460 child molestations, 121 rapes and 14 murders.

House Criminal Justice Chairman Matt Gaetz, R-Fort Walton Beach, said the bills will mean Florida will not be a "catch and release state" for sexual predators.

The bills make numerous changes to the state's criminal and civil-commitment laws. As an example, SB 526, which was spearheaded by Bradley and Gaetz, would lead to mandatory minimum sentences of 50 years in prison for what are known as dangerous sexual felony offenders.

Taking part in the bill-signing ceremony was Lauren Book, a sexual-abuse survivor who has founded a group called Lauren's Kids. Also taking part was Diena Thompson, whose 7-year-old daughter Somer disappeared in Clay County in 2009 while walking home from school. The child's body was later found in a South Georgia landfill.

Bradley, who lives in Clay County, pointed to the Thompson and Perrywinkle cases and said the sexual-predator issue is "personal and raw" to people in Northeast Florida.

"We've been rocked by these awful, awful tragedies," he said.

2012, claiming racial discrimination, and retaliation. Smith was seeking damages in excess of $75,000 for each of three claims.

City Manager Wendell Johnson said he and Chief Argatha Gilmore were both opposed to settling.

"The insurance company decided to settle and with what Smith was asking, that $40,000 is a small amount," he said. "The risk carrier had budgeted $40,000 for this case, for the trial and the appeal, and (Smith's) attorney approached our attorney to settle. I was opposed to it and the chief was opposed to it, but when our risk carrier is paying the bill, it's out of our hands."

The city has a $10,000 deductible through Florida Municipal Insurance Trust, which will pay the remainder of the $40,000 settlement costs.

"There is no question in my mind (Smith and his attorney) did not want to go to court, that's why they approached us with the settlement," Johnson said.

> 'I was opposed to it and the chief was opposed to it, but when our risk carrier is paying the bill, it's out of our hands.'
> — City Manager Wendell Johnson

Smith was placed on administrative leave with pay in November 2011 after he filed a complaint against another LCPD captain. City officials launched an investigation into Smith's claims, which centered on allegations of employment discrimination and "internal operations disagreements" with Chief Argatha Gilmore as well as "conflict" between Smith and another LCPD captain.

While on administrative leave with pay, Smith filed a lawsuit alleging he was the victim of discrimination and says he was retaliated against by his superiors for his involvement in a civil rights case filed by another former LCPD captain, Rudolph Davis. The Davis case, a race-based employment discrimination action brought on against the city, was later dismissed by a federal judge.

Smith, who was named a Lake City Police Department captain on Oct. 4, 2010, was fired in April 2012 because he refused an order to appear for a final internal investigation interview, police officials said. Smith had been on paid administrative leave for six months before he was terminated, after filing a racial discrimination complaint against the police department.

He also referred to the new MFLs as "historic" since they would apply to both the Suwannee and St. Johns water management districts — the state's first such cross-boundary legislation to date, he said.

"New water use permits in both districts that are predicated to cause impacts to the MFLs will be required to provide reasonable assurance that the proposed use will not cause significant harm to the water resources or ecology as defined by the MFLs," the fact sheet said.

Common Core.

"I don't think we're walking a fine line, it's common sense," said Sen. John Legg, R-Trinity and chairman of the Senate Education Committee.

Common Core State Standards are a result of an initiative sponsored by the National Governors Association and the Council of Chief State School Officers and have been adopted in 45 states and Washington, D.C.

Opponents see them as the nationalization of education policy and standards, something they say should be left to the states. Supporters contend that having a shared set of standards will allow for a more accurate state-by-state comparison of student performance.

Scott initially backed Common Core standards, which set uniform benchmarks for reading, writing and math. But amid complaints from grassroots conservative groups and activists, Scott called for public hearings last fall and set the groundwork for the state to pull out of a consortium developing a national test to see if school children are meeting the new standards. The hearings generated harsh criticism of the standards from some parents who called them a plan by federal bureaucrats to assert more control over schools.

Earlier this year the state Board of Education made some tweaks to the standards and state officials started calling them "Florida standards."

Former Gov. Jeb Bush, a champion of Common Core, says he doesn't care what the state calls them long as the standards require "critical thinking" among students. He praised Florida legislators for addressing issues such as student data security.

"Unlike other states that have gotten nervous because there's a lot of heat...I'm kind of proud of what Florida has done," Bush said.

That doesn't mean there won't be ramifications from this year's legislative actions.

One of the biggest changes could be whether or not legislators completely eliminate all state review of textbooks and shift complete control to the state's 67 school districts. Part of the impetus was a flare-up in Volusia County over the world history textbook that some parents wanted pulled.

"There is a great deal of legitimate concern about centralization of education, and that's been a lot of pushback in our struggle with our standards," said Rep. Dennis Baxley, R-Ocala. "This is an effort to decentralize the process a little."

School districts and superintendents have raised alarms about the legislative proposal and the potential costs. The House version of the textbook bill (HB 921) was amended on Tuesday to let school boards decide whether to review instructional materials at the local level.

But the revamped legislation sponsored by Rep. Matt Gaetz, R-Fort Walton Beach, would require a public hearing before final adoption.

"We should set the bar as high as we can but then trust the districts to pick the materials to get them there," Gaetz said.

ANOTHER VIEW

The Obamacare exchange problem

Even after President Obama and the Democrats enacted Obamacare, they didn't know what was in it, despite Nancy Pelosi's assurance that Congress would find out what it had done once it was the law.

With each passing week, the Obama administration invents new exemptions, delays and revisions, though the Constitution clearly says that Congress enacts laws and the president executes them. Mr. Obama's short-cuts and inventions could yet be the end of the health care takeover.

The fiercest battle is being waged in Halbig v. Sebelius, which the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit heard last week. The three-judge panel must decide whether Congress meant what it said when it wrote that penalty mandates and the power to grant tax credits applies to taxpayers who enroll in qualified health insurance plans "through an Exchange established by the State under Section 1311" of Obamacare.

The statute clearly limits the tax credits to state exchanges, but only 17 states have created these exchanges. Democrats naturally assumed that everyone would leap at the chance to bring government medicine to their state. The IRS joined the party by declaring that it had the authority to apply penalties and tax credits to the federal exchange used in the other 33 states.

The federal exchange was established under Section 1321 of the statute. In the surreal world of Obamacare, expanding eligibility for the tax credits expands the penalties. Taxpayers who by the letter of the law shouldn't be fined by the IRS, are fined. Alice is not the only dowager in Wonderland.

[R]eporting requirements in the law meant that anyone forced into a federal exchange would be told what he would have received in tax credits if the state had established an exchange.

This requirement was meant to put pressure on the states to establish exchanges. To insist, as the administration now does, that Congress intended identical tax treatment of state and federal exchanges defies logic.

Mr. Obama has unilaterally modified Obamacare 27 times ....

The IRS, by choosing to read language which Congress did not put into the law, says it can collect taxes and pay subsidies of $500 billion over 10 years without congressional authorization.

Had the Democrats who wrote the law intended the subsidy to apply to the federal exchange, they could and would have said so. Congress certainly knew the language required to treat something that's not a state as if it were a state for legal purposes, and it could have done that for the federal exchange.

Instead, the law as enacted sets out a clear distinction between federal and state exchanges.

These arguments found a receptive audience in the three-judge appellate panel last week. "There is an absurdity principle," said Judge A. Raymond Randolph, "but there is not a stupidity principle. If the law is just stupid, I don't think it's up to the court to save it."

We agree. There's no good reason to save this law.

Lake City: All over the map

Robert Bridges
rbridges@lakecityreporter.com

We like to think of our little corner of the world as unique, and surely it is, in all the ways that count.

But Lake City really isn't one of a kind. Across America there are more than a dozen other places that call themselves "Lake City," it turns out. There's even one in Pakistan.

In the age of social media, it can be confusing.

Some months back on Facebook, a friend posted news reports of a deranged killer who'd escaped from a Lake City mental institution. Problem is, it was Lake City, S.C. Another quick post cleared the matter up and everybody breathed a little easier.

Sometimes the mix-ups are more mundane.

I once got a frantic series of automated emails imploring me to cover a musical production because a Lake City teen would be performing. This time it was Lake City, Wash., a neighborhood in Seattle. No harm done in that instance.

Not all Lake Citians are pleased with the appellation.

Folks in Lake City, Tenn. want to change their town's name. They want to be called Rocky Top instead, as in the song.

Federal copyright law may thwart them.

The publishing house that owns the rights to the name and the song recently threatened legal action. At last check, the Tennessee Legislature had taken up the matter.

"Lake City" pops up all over the map.

There is Lake City, Minn., but that should come as no surprise, in the Land of 10,000 Lakes.

In addition, there are Lake City clones in: Arkansas, California, Colorado, Georgia, Idaho, Iowa, Michigan, Pennsylvania, South Dakota and Texas.

There is even one in Pakistan. Sort of. "Lake City" is the name of an exclusive resort planned for Lahore, a city of roughly 10 million.

All this data comes by way of Google Alerts, a cool feature that lets me know when something of interest pops up on the Web in regard to "Lake City," "Fort White" or "Columbia County." We're only after local news, but plenty of flotsam get scooped up in the process.

And never let it be said the Internet is wanting in more or less useless – but still kind of entertaining – trivia.

Stranger on a plane becomes connected compatriot

Sharon Randall
www.sharonrandall.com

Call me old-fashioned or just plain old, but one of the things I like about airline travel is being required to shut off cell phones – no talking, texting, emailing, Facebooking or whatevering for the duration of the flight.

The reason I like it is simple. People who aren't glued to cell phones are somewhat more likely to turn to the stranger who is wedged in beside them and engage in what was once known as polite conversation.

This, of course, can be good or bad, based on the social skills, mental health and personal hygiene of the stranger.

Sometimes it's not a give-and-take conversation, but a mind-numbing monologue that makes you want to get in the overhead bin and refuse to come down. I can only imagine what the FAA would have to say about that.

But usually, in my experience, getting to know someone I've never met and will most likely never meet again is a pleasant way to pass a flight. It also helps me to forget the sobering fact that I'm hurtling through the air 35,000 feet above the earth.

Once in a while, if I'm lucky, I strike gold and get to sit next to someone like Sasha – young, 17 or so, gracious, well-mannered and brimming over with life.

I wish you could've seen her.

We started with the question we were both dying to ask: The killer eyelashes on the flight attendant. Real or fake?

"When you get a chance," I whispered, "ask her."

Sasha grinned. "I will."

Then we played a fun game that my kids used to call, "Mom Asks Too Many Questions."

Sasha told me that she was born in Serbia, but had lived in California with her mother since the age of 6.

"I go back every summer to see my family. I love Serbia! It's such a jewel of a country!"

She was on her way to Las Vegas to spend her spring break with the family of a friend.

"Where do you go to school?"

"Monterey High," she said.

I laughed. "Do you know Randall Gym?"

"Yes, sure," she said. "That's where I play volleyball."

"It's named for my late husband," I said. "He taught and coached at Monterey High for years. Our three children all went to school there, too."

With that, Sasha pulled out her yearbook and we spent several minutes comparing notes on how some things have changed while other things have stayed the same. Isn't that always the way life goes?

She told me she's not quite sure yet what she wants to do, but she might like to be a writer.

I nodded and smiled. "I bet you're a wonderful writer."

She said she loves to write and I said I like it, too, though what I really like is having written.

Just then the flight attendant came down the aisle and Sasha asked politely in a whisper, "Your lashes. Are they real?"

The attendant smiled, batted her eyes and shook her head no.

After she left, Sasha said, "I might try lashes for the prom."

Heck, I thought, I might try them tomorrow. At my age, you don't want to wait for a prom.

For a moment, I recalled the tall skinny girl I was at Sasha's age, when my life lay before me, a blank page waiting to be filled.

Suddenly we were landing and it was time to go. I gave Sasha my business card and said if she'd ever like to talk about writing or whatever, I'd be glad to hear from her. Then I wished her the best and said goodbye.

In the cab on my way home I found myself wondering: What will Sasha do with her life?

What will I do with mine?

What will you do with yours?

Every morning, at any age, we wake to find our lives shining before us, another fresh blank page waiting to be filled.

It's a small and wonderful world, with or without killer lashes. Especially if we can shut off the distractions once in a while, and take a little time to turn strangers into friends.

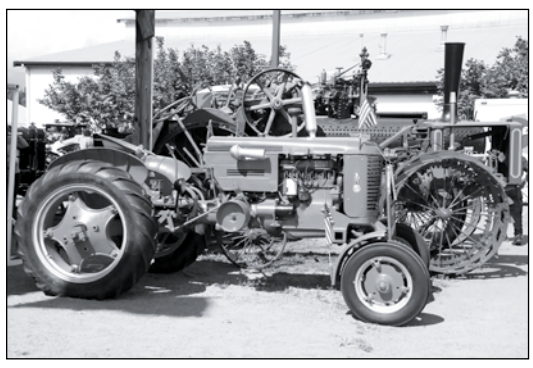
Stephen Foster to host 26th annual Antique Tractor show



COURTESY

Antique tractors like this one will be on display at the 26th Annual Antique Tractor and Engine Show this weekend.

Visitors are invited to educational exhibits on America's farming history.

From staff reports

Stephen Foster Folk Culture Center State Park will host the 26th Annual Antique Tractor and Engine Show Thursday through Saturday, April 3–5. Antique tractors and farming equipment reflecting 200 years of rural American history will be on display.

Demonstrating the craftsmanship and durability of American farm machinery, the show's participants will operate working equipment and compete in tractor races. Visitors will be able to watch demonstrations of shingle milling, corn grinding and unusual engines for everyday purposes. Exhibits will include collections of flywheels, hit and miss engines, water pumps, vintage pedal tractors, antique cars and farm equipment.

Competitions for adults will include tractor pulls, barrel races and a blind race. Children can participate in pedal-powered tractor races, an old-fashioned game of needle-in-a-haystack or a rooster-crowing contest.

Food concessions will include root beer floats, hamburgers and hot dogs, barbecue and more. On Saturday afternoon, an antique tractor parade will feature everything from customized lawn tractors to restored farm machinery. Admission to the public is $5 per vehicle with up to eight passengers. For more information, call (877) 635-3655.

Celebrating the peanut as planting begins

Columbia County farmers are preparing land for peanut planting and getting the last-minute maintenance completed on their equipment before taking their planters to the field. In fact, with the warmer weather I have even seen a few farmers planting peanuts this week.

UF/IFAS Extension Agents in eight north Florida counties recently took a poll of planting intentions for this spring. The results pointed to a likely 10% increase of acres planted to peanuts in north Florida. Our locally-grown peanuts go straight to Georgia to be shelled and made into many peanut products.

Americans consume 1.5 million pounds of peanuts per year. In fact, peanut butter is consumed in 90% of American households. There is perhaps no other food that we identify so closely with the American childhood. The average American child will eat 1,500 peanut butter sandwiches before graduating from high school. Americans also have a unique fondness for peanut candies. Peanuts are more than two-thirds of all snack nuts consumed in the United States, and four of the top ten selling candy bars contain peanuts. Here are a few "Peanut Facts."

- It takes about 540 peanuts to make a 12-ounce jar of peanut butter.
- There are enough peanuts in one acre to make 30,000 peanut butter sandwiches.
- Americans eat enough peanut butter in a year to make more than 10 billion peanut butter and jelly sandwiches.
- Sixty percent of consumers prefer creamy peanut butter over crunchy.
- Peanuts and peanut butter contain over 30 essential nutrients and phytonutrients.
- Rumors say that there's enough mental stimulation in one peanut to produce 30 minutes of serious thinking. That may or may not be true, but peanuts are a good source of protein and the B vitamins, nutrients that help prevent "brain fatigue."
- Peanut oil is valued as premium cooking oil by cooks and chefs worldwide. Tasteless and odorless, peanut oil doesn't transfer food flavors.
- Peanuts contain no cholesterol. Recent studies show that peanuts may be helpful in reducing cholesterol levels in the body.
- Peanut butter was the secret behind "Mr. Ed," TV's talking horse. Spreading peanut butter inside the horse's mouth created a natural talking movement every time the animal moved his sticky jaws.
- The peanut butter and banana sandwich was reported to have been the favorite of Elvis "the King" Presley.
- In Barbara Mandrell's hit song "I Was Country When Country Wasn't Cool" she sings about putting peanuts in her Coke. This method of enjoying peanuts was developed by southern farm workers as a practical snack solution in the interest of time and cleanliness, plus it's flavorful.
- Everybody loves peanuts; so much so, that there's a saying: "Will power is the ability to eat one peanut!"

New lawn irrigation measures in effect

House address to determine irrigation days each week.

From staff reports

LIVE OAK —New year-round lawn and landscape irrigation measures went into effect on March 24 for homeowners within the Suwannee River Water Management District's 15-county region.

The measures limit irrigation to two days per week during Daylight Saving Time and once weekly during Standard Time, and designate specific days to irrigate. Additionally, irrigation should not occur between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Residents may irrigate based on their address. During Daylight Saving Time, residents with even numbered addresses may water on Thursday and Sunday; residents with odd numbered addresses or no addresses may water on Wednesday and Saturday; and nonresidential properties may water on Tuesday and Friday.

During Eastern Standard Time, residents with even numbered addresses may water on Sunday; residents with odd numbered addresses or no addresses may water on Saturday; and nonresidential properties may water on Tuesday.

An even numbered address means an address ending in the numbers 0, 2, 4, 6, 8 or letters A-M. An odd numbered address means an address ending in the numbers 1, 3, 5, 7, 9 or the letters N-Z.

The irrigation measures apply to residential landscaping; public, commercial, and industrial property; hotels and motels; and public medians. They also apply to those who receive water from utilities, private wells, or surface water. However, they do not apply to users of reclaimed water.

Homeowners are also encouraged to irrigate only when necessary, to use Florida-Friendly Landscaping principles, and skip irrigation days when it rains.

The new year-round lawn and landscape irrigation measures are part of a statewide consistency effort among the state's five water management districts.

For more information on the new lawn and landscape irrigation measures, contact Carree Olshansky, Water Conservation Specialist, at 386.362.1001 or cro@srwmd.org, or visit www.mysuwanneeriver.com/waterconservation.

SPIRIT OF THE SUWANNEE MUSIC PARK

X Hale and Shotgun Redd take the stage

Bands to perform Friday, Saturday.

From staff reports

LIVE OAK — Shotgun Redd will be rockin' the house April 4 and X Hale April 5 at The Spirit of the Suwannee Music Park. Both bands are from Jacksonville where they play many of the large venues.

Billed as North Florida's newest country band ready to blast you out of your seats, Shotgun Redd was formed in 2011. Shotgun Redd will be in the house Friday, April 4 at the SOSMP. The band has made several trips to the SOSMP where it has picked up many new fans. Shotgun Redd wants to bring back country as the band members know it and are succeeding. The band includes Chris "Stump" Fowler, manager; Dion Fowler, rhythm guitar; Scott Fowler, bass guitar; Dustin Robert, drums; Glenn Meyer, lead guitar; and Scott Nelson, lead singer.

Saturday, April 5, X Hale Band will bring its high energy, current country band to the SOSMP armed with a wide variety of many popular genres of music. The band plays more than 150 dates a year. Set apart by a tasteful combination of male and female lead vocals, X Hale is a powerful group of musicians producing a powerful mix of sound packed with awesome vocal harmonies, dynamics and technical capabilities. Band members include Chelsea Dierickx, lead vocals; Joe Morgan, lead vocals/guitar; Bill Eason, keyboards/mandolin/vocals; Kevin Lucas, lead guitar; Kerry Lucas, bass/vocals; and Jimmy Lee, drums.

The band's popularity began in early 2010 when it debuted its first live performance in North/Central Florida at the SOSMP. From then on, its name has spread throughout all the popular social networks, and X Hale has released more than 10 original singles with more currently in the works.

Stopping severe pain in its tracks

DEAR PHARMACIST

Suzy Cohen
jostery@comcast.net

Dear Pharmacist,

I have neuropathies all over my body, it feels like pins and needles. I take pain medications. Is there anything natural I can do or take? — G.D. Seattle, Colorado

Answer: Neuropathy may cause more than the discomfort you describe. It can also cause pain, weakness, dizziness when standing up, burning sensations (even in the tongue), shooting pain, trigeminal neuralgia, tingling, numbness, cystitis, urinary urgency, and vibration/buzzing sensations. In men, erectile dysfunction is possible.

Recognizing that your neuropathy is related to another disorder is huge. If you treat the neuropathy as a disease in and of itself, then you miss the big picture, and the opportunity to cure yourself.

Neuropathy is a symptom of post-herpetic neuralgia (shingles), high insulin, diabetes, gluten sensitivity or Celiac, heavy metal toxicity, autoimmune disorders, Lyme disease and medications. A little known fact is that medications can mug your body of nutrients that would otherwise protect your nerves, so neuropathy pain is a side effect. The list of drugs that can indirectly do this goes is in the hundreds and some classic 'offenders' include antacids, acid blockers, oral contraceptives, hormone replacement therapy, corticosteroids, statin cholesterol reducers, breast cancer drugs and fluoroquinolone antibiotics. That last class of drugs, the fluoroquinolones (Cipro, Floxin, Avelox, Levaquin) have a fluoride backbone. Fluoride is known to harm the thyroid gland, reduce thyroid production and cause irreversible damage to the nervous system.

One solution for neuropathies is to reduce insulin and blood sugar. My book, Diabetes Without Drugs offers natural remedies to help. I'd get off medications that cause neuropathies (with physician approval) and simultaneously get on medications that support nerve growth. Thyroid medications, specifically "T3" and/or growth hormone shots can help.

If your doctor approves and supervises you, you could take a few of the following supplements. It's all trial and error, I don't know what's right for you:

Thiamine: A glass of wine every night can steal nerve-protective nutrients like vitamin B1 (thiamine). You can also try benfotiamine, a fat-soluble form of thiamine.

Probiotics: Sounds strange, but here's a connection: Probiotics allow you to make methylcobalamin (vitamin B12) which you need to produce myelin and protect the nerve cells.

Methylcobalamin (B12): When your body starves for B12, you lose the myelin sheath and your nerves short circuit. This can cause neuropathy and depression. There are dozens of drug muggers of B12, including the diabetic medications that you take as well as processed foods, sugar, antibiotics, estrogen hormones and acid blockers.

Lipoic Acid: You can buy it as "alpha" at any health food store, or "R" lipoic acid as a more bioavailable form. This antioxidant squashes free radicals that attack your myelin sheath and 'fray' your nerve wiring. It reduces blood sugar too. High doses are needed to improve nerve pain, however, if you take high doses, you need to also supplement with a little biotin. The reason is because lipoic acid is a drug mugger of biotin.

What are Mini Dental Implants?

Mini Dental Implants are titanium screws that can replace the root of missing teeth. Mini Dental Implants are thinner in size making the easier to fit into resorbed bone.
Mini Dental Implants may also be an excellent option for permanently replacing missing teeth as a more affordable option than Standard Dental Implants.

■ From staff reports

Lady Tigers still alive at districts

From staff reports

Columbia High's girls tennis team is tied for second place entering today's final matches at the District 3-2A tournament hosted by Oakleaf High.

Columbia's doubles teams — Cassidy Lear and Megan Zahnle at No. 1 and Tori Jackson and Brittany Helms at No. 2 — were both seeded first and both advanced to today's semifinals.

Sophomore Jackson is the veteran on the two teams. The other girls are freshmen.

Jackson was seeded No. 2 at No. 3 singles and won her opening match. No. 1 Lear, No. 2 Zahnle, No. 4 Helms and No. 5 Chase Broome all made it through the first round of singles, but none advanced to play today.

Along with the CHS wins in doubles, it was good enough for a tie with Fleming Island High. Gainesville High leads the tournament.

Columbia's boys did not make the second day and placed fifth.

No. 1 Brandon Lavance won a singles match in a walkover and Daniel Rendel won his opening match at No. 2. Both lost their second matches, while No. 3 Brandon Helms, No. 4 Braeden Lehman and No. 5 Noah Robinson lost opening matches, as did Columbia's doubles teams.

FILE

Columbia High's Megan Zahnle won a district tournament match at No. 2 singles. She and partner Cassidy Lear were top seed at No. 1 doubles and are in today's semifinal.

Fort White High's Shea Chesney chases down a fly out against Bradford High on Tuesday.

Tornadoes softball too strong for Fort White

By TIM KIRBY
tkirby@lakecityreporter.com

FORT WHITE — Bradford High threw its No. 2 pitcher against host Fort White High on Tuesday and that was good enough. Bradford closed out its district with an 8-0 win over the Lady Indians.

Shelby Wilkison notched the shutout with a two-hitter. She walked one and struck out 13. Fort White had a bunt single by Morgan Cushman in the fourth inning and a one-out double by Chelsea Nieland in the seventh inning.

Cushman pitched and kept Fort White in striking distance before Bradford (14-3, 8-2) racked up four runs in the seventh inning.

Fort White's biggest threat came in the fourth inning after Cushman led off with her single. Mallory Sealey entered as a courtesy runner and moved to second base when Shea Chesney was hit by a pitch. The runners advanced on a wild pitch. On a bunt by Alexa Hatcher, Sealey was caught off third base and Chesney was stuck at second. Bradford got out of the inning with a force out at third and a pop foul.

Fort White played solid defense. There were two errors, but both on hot shots to third. Shortstop Ashley Chesney made a diving catch in foul territory for an out and started two double plays on infield pop-ups.

For Bradford, Jaci Atkinson (triple, RBI, run scored), Ashton Adkins (two RBIs) and Annie Luke were 2-for-4.

Fort White (4-11, 0-9) plays at Interlachen High at 6 p.m. Thursday, then hosts Chiefland High at 6 p.m. Friday.

DEAR ABBY

Woman in relationship can't resist flirting with other men

DEAR ABBY: I have been with my current boyfriend for a year and a half and I love him dearly. However, I often find myself drawn to other guys who I know are nothing but trouble. It never goes further than simple flirting, but I still feel guilty for doing it when I'm in a relationship. How do I keep myself from temptation? — HARD TO RESIST

DEAR HARD TO RESIST: Temptation to do what? To involve yourself with a man who is nothing but trouble? A way to discourage that would be to ask yourself how you would feel if you lost your boyfriend. That would be a high price to pay for acting immaturely.

However, if you're asking how to overcome the IMPULSE, my advice is to have an honest conversation with yourself about why you feel the need. Most of the women (and men) who act this way are constantly trying to prove to themselves that they are attractive. If this could be you, then start working on your self-esteem, because if you don't, I predict you'll ruin a good relationship.

DEAR ABBY: I'm in my 50s and overweight. I work hard, eat three meals a day and am – more or less – healthy except for sore feet after work. I'm aware of the medical warnings. Who isn't? But I have decided to accept myself as I am, relax and be happy.

For years I have been hard on myself for not being slim. This is me in my 50s. I don't expect myself to be slim like I was in my 20s. Now I can smile, breathe easier, have a good time, and finally buy the new clothes I have put off buying until I was thinner. My new spirit is weightless and my new attitude has made my life more meaningful. Any thoughts? — LIVING FREE AT LAST

DEAR LIVING FREE: Only this, that we all have choices to make about our health, what is important to us and how we want to live our lives. You have made yours, and at this point it appears to have been the right one for you. May it ever be thus.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has a paralyzing fear of driving over bridges. It interferes with our life together. He is otherwise healthy, but will not see a therapist for this problem.

We have been married for 27 years. I am 63 and he is 67. I am very sad that our life is so limited. Any advice? — LANDLOCKED IN VIRGINIA

DEAR LANDLOCKED: It would be interesting to know how your husband developed this phobia. But because he refuses to do anything about it and you feel restricted, consider traveling with another companion.

■ Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

HOROSCOPES

THE LAST WORD
Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Take the plunge and get into the groove. It's time to get fit and fabulous. Sign up for a rigorous routine that will help you look and be your best, both mentally and physically. Any challenge should be welcomed. ★★★

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Share your feelings. Taking care of the needs of others will help you put your life in perspective. Dealing with matters concerning older or younger people in your life will be rewarding. An important partnership will develop. ★★★

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Prepare to make last-minute changes based on what others do or say. Don't expect everyone to be honest or give you a proper assessment of a situation you face. Do your own fact-finding and make your choices based on your needs. ★★★

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Take on an interesting project or challenge that someone presents. Your ability to think outside the box will help you grab the attention of someone with clout. Discussions will help put you in control. Avoid taking on too much. ★★★★

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Jumping from one thing to another may suit you just fine, but it will make those around you nervous. A deal or contract will favor you as long as you keep your emotions hidden. Home improvements will make your life more entertaining. ★★

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Turn up the volume and take on whatever comes your way. Show your mental and physical abilities. You can stabilize your position among your peers and colleagues. A change in an important relationship will add to your happiness. ★★★★★

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Feeling free to come and go as you please and to enjoy friends who offer excitement and adventure will keep you satisfied and enthusiastic about the future. Overspending will be your downfall. Find a way to have fun without being extravagant. ★★★

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make important changes at home that will help you accomplish personal goals and expand your interests and friendships. A different lifestyle will help you manage what you want to do with what you are responsible for. Use your imagination. ★★★

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get your work out of the way and get on with more enjoyable pastimes. An investment may interest you, but the information you are given will not divulge how high a risk you will be taking. Proceed with caution. ★★★

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't leave anything to chance. If you leave anything unfinished, you will face complaints and opposition. Stick close to home and work hard to complete what's expected of you and you will avoid a dispute. Accomplishment will make you feel good. ★★★★★

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Put what you want in writing. Draw up contracts and negotiate your position. You will win in the end if you have a solid plan of action. Socializing is highlighted. Getting together with an old friend will bring back fond memories. ★★

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A money matter or joint venture will cause upset. Back up and view your situation from a different angle. Use your imagination, and you will come up with a solution that will be acceptable. Listen, observe and take a smart position. ★★★★

GOLF REPORTS

Thursday blitz field grows

COUNTRY CLUB at LAKE CITY
Ed Goff

The field continues to grow for the Thursday blitz. The trio of Brent Lyons, Ed Snow and Kyle Hunter took this week's event over five other teams with a round of -6.

Dwight Rhodes, Shannon Davis and David Rhodes finished a shot behind the winners.

The pot hole carried over.
