Parade of Homes to showcase builders April 28-29

Momentum builds as event draws near.

From staff reports

The 2018 Parade of Homes event continues to grow in participants with 18 new homes now signed up for the showcase set for the weekend of April 28-29.

The new-home-building event is rejuvenated by the Columbia County Builders' Association, the Lake City Reporter and Currents magazine.

Platinum sponsorship is provided by First Federal Bank of Florida. Gold-level sponsorships of the event are provided by Florida Credit Union and Peoples State Bank and Silver level sponsors include Hallmark Realty, Security Safe Co., and United Country Real Estate Dicks Realty.

"Our feedback on this event has been all positive, just overwhelming," said Bryan Zecher, president of the Columbia County Builders' Association. "The timing is very good for this event. From the builders, to the vendors to the suppliers and subcontractors, everything we are hearing is all positive.

54 looking to succeed Johnson as city chief

Only names released; details to come when resumes made public.

By CARL MCKINNEY
cmckinney@lakecityreporter.com

Columbia County's former economic development director is among the dozens of applicants vying for Lake City's soon-to-be-open city manager position.

City Hall stopped taking in resumes at noon on Friday with 54 contenders for the job. One of the new applicants is Jesse Quillen, who headed economic development for the county before Glenn Hunter took over in May 2014.

Also applying are Nick Harwell, the city's former airport manager who resigned in 2016, and David Kraus, who serves the county in multiple capacities.

The city could not fulfill a public records request for the resumes by press time, but did provide a list of the applicants' names, three of which were identifiable as current or former public officials here.

Retiring City Manager Wendell Johnson is officially out in June, inviting resumes from around the country.

There were only 10 applicants as of March 16, one-fifth the size of the current pool.

Man faces charges for bank fraud

By CARL MCKINNEY
cmckinney@lakecityreporter.com

A Lake City man deposited multiple fraudulent checks into his recently opened Ameris Bank account and withdrew cash through an ATM, according to a Lake City Police Department Report.

Brian Edward Owens, 30, of Northeast Rebecca Terrace, was arrested March 28 on three grand theft charges after an officer spoke to a manager at to the Ameris Bank on U.S. Highway 90. The police report was made available Friday.

Owens

The manager said Owens opened an account recently and began depositing checks from accounts with TD Bank and Columbia Bank, even though he knew the money wasn't yet available, according to the report.

On March 8, Owens deposited a $600 check from his TD Bank account and immediately withdrew the money, the report states.

The next day, he did the same with his Columbia Bank account in the amount of $1,845, according to the report.

The manager brought Owens into her office on March 28 so the officer could speak with him.

When asked about the deposit and withdrawal he made for $1,845 on March 9, Owens said he had been out of town for two and a half weeks and only returned within the last few days.

Video surveillance footage shows Owens making the transaction.

The manager verified with TD Bank and Columbia Bank that one account was closed and the other one was in the process of being closed.

Owens knowingly wrote one of the checks off a closed account, according to the report.

The officer asked Owens who wrote the checks, saying, "he could tell that it was a female's handwriting," the report states.

Arson suspect stokes fears in south county

By CARL MCKINNEY
cmckinney@lakecity

An armed arsonist who deputies say struck a Fort White neighborhood in the Three Rivers area Friday night also ignited a panic on social media.

Williams

David S. Williams, 41, of Branford, was arrested Friday night on charges of fleeing law enforcement and arson.

Columbia County deputies say they found a home fully engulfed in flames when they responded to Southwest Roberts Avenue at 4:50 p.m. Friday.

While responding to the scene, dispatch reported that home had been set on fire on the corner of Roberts Avenue and Southwest Utah Street at 5:07 p.m.

A dark-colored SUV sped away from the home, heading west on Utah Street.

Deputies followed the fleeing vehicle, which finally stopped about a mile down the road.

Willliams, the driver, was detained and read his Miranda Rights.

He denied being at either house and said he didn't start any fires.

But his hairline was burnt, and the deputies could smell it.

The SUV was towed away following a search.

A witness identified Williams as the arsonist, who she said threatened her with a handgun as he drove away from the burning house.

A Branford man is suspected in this fire, one of two Friday in Fort White.

The witness found Williams' fishing license in her driveway.

The State Fire Marshal took over the investigation.

Williams is a suspect in several other arsons in the county, CCSO said.

Further charges are pending.

As the situation developed, Veronica Thompson McGuinness took to Facebook to warn the community.

"Three Rivers residents — there is an armed arsonist in the neighborhood. He has set homes on fire on Roberts and Utah and pulled a gun on one resident. This is not a rumor. Please stay inside your homes but be vigilant," McGinness posted.

Dozens of comments were posted in response.

After Williams' arrest, Charlotte Hull described the incident as the "scariest thing" she'd ever been through.

Yesterday, this column described how lightning sparked an oil fire in San Luis Obispo in 1926. On this date, the fire was so hot that it spawned tornado-like vortices. One of these vortices traveled 1,000 yards, picked up a house, and dropped it 150 feet away. Both occupants inside the house were killed.

Still no ID on driver in fatal I-10 crash

By COREY ARWOOD
carwood@lakecityreporter.com

Just after 5 p.m. Thursday a semi tractor-trailer traveling west along Interstate 10 cut across eastbound lanes resulting in a crash that killed its driver, Florida Highway Patrol reported.

The driver of the vehicle remains unknown at this time along with any other identifying information, pending next of kin notification, the report said.

"For unknown reasons, the semi traveled across the unpaved median of the roadway and across the eastbound lanes of Interstate 10," the Trooper's report stated.

The fatal, fiery conclusion occurred around three miles east of the U.S. 90 exit, in Suwannee County, it said.

"The semi then collided with multiple standing trees on the south shoulder of the roadway and became fully engulfed," the Trooper's report said.

Suwannee Fire Rescue shared images of the incident on its social media page.

The white trailer was peeled open and the cab was consumed by orange flames and black smoke.

Numerous highway patrol and fire engines were present at the temporarily closed section of the interstate, the images reveal.

No further information about the crash was available as of press time Saturday.

Numerous first responders arrived at the scene of a fatal crash on I-10. A tractor trailer left the roadway, hit several trees and burst into flames, according to a Florida Highway Patrol report.

Man convicted of soliciting 'minor' for sexual liaison

By TONY BRITT
tbritt@lakecityreporter.com

A Georgia man could spend up to 20 years in prison after a Columbia County jury convicted him of traveling to meet someone believed to be a minor with the intention of sexual activity and transmission of material harmful to minors Wednesday.

Carter

Matthew Franklin Carter, 34, was convicted after a jury deliberated about 30 minutes before returning its verdict to Judge Paul Bryan.

Carter was arrested during Operation Cupid's Arrow, a operation with several law enforcement agencies including the Columbia County Sheriff's Office and Florida Department of Law Enforcement.

Carter was represented by Ryan Davis and assistant state attorney Travis Munden prosecuted the case.

Carter's sentencing is scheduled to take place at 9 a.m. May 23

The charge of traveling to meet someone believed to be a minor with the intention of sexual activity carries a maximum penalty of 15 years in prison. The second count, transmission of material harmful to a minor, carries a maximum prison sentence of five years.

Carter's conviction on the charges both require that he be registered as a sex offender.

According to arrest reports, an undercover law enforcement officer created an online post using the persona of a 14-year-old girl and on Feb. 9, 2017, Carter contacted the undercover officer.

The two started a conversation via text messages and the child gave a telephone number.

Carter told the child he was looking for "adult fun" and "things adults do in the bedroom, that's what I need to relieve some stress." He later sent a photograph of a male sex organ.

On Feb. 12 Carter reportedly resumed contact with the undercover officer posing as the child, stating he was on his way to Lake City. After a discussion regarding meeting at a pre-determined location in Lake City, Carter instructed the child to "wear some sexy panties."

Carter was later arrested inside a parked 2011 Chevrolet pickup truck near the Lake City Walmart, reports said.

The Third Circuit State Attorney's Office has prosecuted at least 10 cases from Operation Cupid's Arrow. All involved adults sending illicit messages to minors to solicit sex.

OUR OPINION

Say no to aviation academy

We were pleased to hear Florida Gateway College President Lawrence Barrett distance FGC from a recent proposal to build an FAA-certified aviation academy here.

It has been shown to be an unworkable idea for a town our size, and the only question is, who's still pushing this crazy plan and why?

Back in the spring of 2017 it was HAECO that was behind such a project. The company sent a top executive here to tell the Chamber of Commerce how grand it would be to have a bona fide aviation academy in Lake City, despite the roughly $3 million price tag. HAECO would get a steady stream of qualified workers and the local economy would get a much-needed boost.

Everybody wins.

What HAECO had in mind would be modeled on the setup they had in place in Greensboro, North Carolina, they said.

After the Chamber powwow we did some checking. As reported in the following Sunday's paper, the Greensboro plan was an abject failure on all fronts.

Despite state of the art equipment and instructors, no more than two students annually enrolled in the Airframe and Powerplant certification program, which is what was envisioned for us.

Two students per year — and it's not clear that either ever graduated during an average term. (Those figures were unavailable, we were told.)

So much for the steady stream of workers HAECO said it so desperately needed back then.

Fast forward to today.

The push to build a "147 school" (the name refers to the FAA regulation that authorizes such programs) is on again.

FGC has been offered an $800,000 state grant that would cover a small fraction of the full cost.

But the strings attached are the real treat.

Under terms of the grant, the academy would have to graduate 149 students in the first year of its existence. Please note that only 180 students graduated from such programs in the entire state of Florida last year.

If this is someone's idea of a joke, it's not funny.

Even if the state were to pony up all the cash for a 147 school here, it's still wasted money — and every penny from a taxpayer just like you.

HAECO won't benefit and neither will the town.

It's not clear why the tired topic of an FAA-certified aviation academy keeps coming up. The notion needs to be put to rest once and for all.

A salute to Boy Scout values

It was a pleasure to attend the North Florida Council Boy Scouts of America Suwannee River American Values Dinner and awards ceremony last week. The annual event is always a great showcase of the accomplishments of the past year for the region's Boy Scouts.

The gathering also brings out the best of our community, serves as a gathering for a large segment of the Lake City business community that always answers the call when it's time to give back. The event serves as one of the Boy Scouts' annual fundraisers for the year and this year checkbooks came out at the event to the tune of $35,157 raised during the event.

Above all of this, every year, the event is a reminder of how Scouting is a foundational principle of American character building in some young men. This year's American Values Honoree who was saluted at the meeting was retired Third Circuit Judge E. Vernon Douglas.

Douglas accomplished a lot during his lifetime of service, including 36 years elected to the bench. Before his judicial career, he served as a Green Beret with the U.S. Army during the Vietnam War.

As an attorney, he has served as a criminal defense attorney and an accomplished family law attorney. He is a graduate of the University of Florida and the Stetson College of Law.

Douglas has served Lake City as a volunteer throughout his professional career, producing 20 North Florida Charity Air Shows and one year he even served as president of the International Council of Air Shows. During his career, he also was named Rotary Citizen of the Year.

Todd Wilson
twilson@lakecityreporter.com

Douglas took the podium to a well-deserved, but not nearly strong enough, ovation thanking him for his support of Boy Scouts through the years. He talked of the leadership lessons he learned as a boy through scouting and how he used those to focus and accomplish his Eagle Scout honor.

Douglas said his Eagle Scout accomplishment was a positive springboard for the rest of his life.

As much as anything, each year, the annual American Values Dinner brings out so many memorable stories like this from so many community leaders we meet on the street in everyday life in Lake City.

In conversation during the social hour with business owner Marc Vann, Vann recounted that one of the proudest moments of his life when, at 15 years old, Scout leader Morris Williams (the columnist sharing space with me on this page) pinned his Eagle badge on young Vann. Vann said he tries to convey Scouting lessons whenever he gives public speeches.

One of my favorite Morris Williams columns focuses on him as a young Boy Scout in Columbia County, standing tall with fellow Scouts in a ceremony at Ocean Pond honoring a young Civilian Conversation Corp servant who gave his life in World War II. Young Williams was scheduled to say the pledge, but was called on, by mistake, to give the invocation. His account of a young Scout overcoming his inner terror to do his duty and publicly pray in front of a huge crowd of townspeople is some of his best storytelling. It's a great Scout-based story of duty and honor, seasoned with Lake City pride that makes my heart swell. We encourage a re-run of this column every Memorial Day weekend.

At this year's American Values dinner, the keynote speaker of the evening was U.S. Rep. Neal Dunn, of Florida's 2nd District. Dunn, an Eagle Scout, National Merit Scholar, and a retired Army medical officer, described his positive Scouting experience in much the same way.

Dunn, who grew up in an Army family, said his Eagle ceremony was conducted at Fort Hood, Texas, and by none other than visiting Gen. Omar Bradley, at the time the last living Five Star General from World War II.

Dunn said as a skinny teenager, he was simply trying not to be blown off the stage by the words of the all-powerful Gen. Bradley, who at one time had been Gen. George Patton's commanding officer.

"Scouting develops maturity in our youth," Dunn said. "They learn the value of study and cooperation. … Time spent in Scouting is meaningful, a source of strength … Service is its own reward."

Boy Scouts teach such great values. Always have. Our country needs them more than ever for this generation and beyond.

Jury: Man shot wife in the face

She survived; he faces at least 25 years in prison.

By TONY BRITT
tbritt@lakecityreporter.com

Steven Matthew Moot has been found guilty of premeditated attempted murder in connection with the August 2017 shooting where he shot his wife in the face with a handgun in front of their four children.

A three-woman, three-man jury deliberated approximately an hour before reaching the guilty verdict in the premeditated attempted first-degree murder trial Thursday night.

Arrest records show that Moot got into an argument with his wife over statements the couple's older daughters made, went to another room in the residence and retrieved a .380 pistol from a gun case and shot her below the right eye.

Moot

Third Circuit Judge Leandra G. Johnson presided over the one-day trial in Courtroom 2 at the Columbia County Courthouse.

"The facts dictated that he premeditated and attempted to kill his wife and that's what the jury found," said assistant state attorney Chase Larsen, who prosecuted the case. "Obviously, we were happy with the verdict."

Sentencing for Moot, 32, will take place at 1:30 p.m. May 14.

Moot is facing a possible life sentence and a minimum of 25 years in prison.

According to Columbia County Sheriff's Office reports, on Aug. 8, 2017, authorities received a call from a child indicating her mother had been shot in the face.

When law enforcement arrived they found the woman at a home on the 400 block of Northwest Corwin Glen, pressing a towel against the back, left side of her head behind her left ear, where the bullet exited about the level with her ear lobe, according to reports.

She was standing in the driveway after she had gotten the gun from Moot, who had fled the scene in his employer's work truck.

The company was able to track the vehicle's GPS device and a team of deputies conducted a felony traffic stop on Moot as he was heading south on U.S. Highway 41 near White Springs.

Moot was arrested when deputies intercepted his vehicle, reports said, and authorities confiscated his blood-covered shirt as evidence.

When Moot was interviewed by authorities, he said he and his wife got into an argument and his wife threatened to leave with the children and he got upset, walked to the bedroom and got the handgun from a locked gun case.

When he returned to the living room where his wife was, the argument continued, and he extended his arm and pointed the gun toward her and remembered squeezing his fist and the gun went off.

He said he ran into the living room behind a chair where he thought about killing himself, but the victim stood up.

Moot told authorities she then walked over to him and took the gun from his hand, telling him that she loved him.

OBITUARIES

Sharon D. Tuning

Mrs. Sharon D. Tuning, 74, of Lake City, passed away peacefully on Friday morning, April 6, 2018 at the Haven Suwannee Valley Hospice Care Center after an extended illness. She was born in Washington State on December 27, 1943 to Harold LaShure and Margaret LaShure. She has lived in the Lake City area since the summer of 1994, moving here from Philippi, West Virginia. She was a nursery worker for the Broaddus Hospital in Philippi, West Virginia for many years, where she loved working with all the new born babies. She loved to bowl and was a member of a ladies bowling team for several years. In her spare time, she enjoyed reading, traveling, seeing new places and visiting family and friends. She also attended Parkview Baptist Church here in Lake City.

She is survived by her loving husband of 49 ½ years; George Tuning of Lake City; son; Max Slate of New York; granddaughter; Casey Slate of North Carolina, sister; Laura of New York and brother-in-law; James E. Tuning of West Virginia also survives.

Funeral services for Mrs. Tuning will be conducted on Monday, April 9, 2018 at 11:00 A.M. in the chapel of Gateway-Forest Lawn Funeral Home with Rev. Mike Tatem, Pastor of Parkview Baptist Church officiating. Interment will follow in Forest Lawn Memorial Gardens. The family will receive friends from 10:00-11:00 A.M. (one hour prior to the services) at the funeral home. Arrangements are under the direction and care of GATEWAY-FOREST LAWN FUNERAL HOME, 3596 S. US HWY 441, Lake City, FL, 32025. Please leave words of comfort for the family at www.gatewayforestlawn.com

Wendell C. Bailey

Wendell C. Bailey, 77, passed away on April 6, 2018 in Haven Care Center following a short illness. Born, the oldest of 3 children, to Clarence G. and Esther Graham Bailey, he grew up in the Ellisville Community. He worked in the local general store owned by Willard Graham. Both his parents as well as his sister, Gloria Vining, precede him in death. He graduated from Mason School with the class of 1958.

He married his high school sweetheart, Eudine Witt Bailey, on July 4, 1958 and they settled in their home on Tustenuggee Road.

He was a lifetime steward of the earth. He worked briefly at Piedmont Mobile Home Plant before he began his dream job as a full time farmer. With Eudine by his side, they grew tobacco, corn and hay and raised cattle and hogs. Their "U Pick" vegetable garden was well known throughout North Florida.

One of Wendell's passions was the holiday display they put up every Christmas. Wendell, Eudine and their entire family handmade many of the wooden displays. Wendell spent many hours adjusting each strand of lights. He enjoyed sitting on the front porch to watch the cars drive through just so he could hear the squeals of delight from the children.

He was a member of Bethlehem Lutheran Church where he served in numerous capacities including church council, financial secretary, Sunday school superintendent and many committees. He served on the Board of Columbia County Farm Bureau for over 50 years, on the Board for the USDA Farm Services for 12 years. He was also an honorary member of the Fort White FFA and Columbia County Resources. He was part of the committee to bring the Youth Livestock Show and Sale of the Columbia County Fair. He prepared many BBQ dinners for Columbia County Farm Bureau, Livestock sales, rodeo, and FFA Banquets.

He was also a founding member of the North Florida Farmer's Coop and worked at the North Florida Livestock Market until his death.

He is survived by his wife of 59 years, 2 children, Wanda (Randy) Jones and Aubrey (Kelly) Bailey, all of Lake City. His brother, Emory (Durelle) Bailey and brother in law, Freddie Vining. He was proud of his grandchildren: Bryan (Michelle) Jones, Leanne (Matt) Huesman, David (Casey) Jones, Daniel (Chrystal) Bailey, Rebecca (Clay) Paulk and Kimberly Bailey. His nephew, Stephen (Erin) Bailey: His nieces, Staci (Glen) Musgrove and Christe (Paul) Heinmuller. He is also survived by 10 great grandchildren and extended family including Michael (JJ) Pennington and Chris (Jessica) Pepper.

Visitation will be held on Monday, April 9 from 5-7 pm at Guerry Funeral Home. Funeral will be on Tuesday, April 10, 2:00 pm at Bethlehem Lutheran Church will burial in the church cemetery. Officiating the service will be Joy Bolander, Past of the Bethlehem Lutheran Church.

Also assisting with the service in will be Pastor John David Bryant and Butch Rhodenizer. He especially loved working with Eudine in the flower garden these last few years. As an option to flowers, donations to Bethlehem Lutheran Church Cemetery Fund, c/o Aldine Feagle, 834 SE Aldine Feagle Dr., Lake City, FL 32025.

Welcome mat out for autism

A new initiative for April, Autism Awareness Month.

By COREY ARWOOD
carwood@lakecityreporter.com

A woman and man are in a local grocery store picking out a loaf of bread and at that moment he has a meltdown.

Speaking in unintelligible sentences, rocking, pacing, he seems to be growing more agitated while the woman works to calm him.

He has autism, she's his mother and it's a routine part of coping with a family member with the disorder who is over-stimulated in a public place.

What do you think?

■ Let us know in a Letter to the Editor. See 4A.

What happens next, though, the actions of store management, the reactions of employees, might now be somewhat more predictable if there's a sticker with a smile on the door.

April is Autism Awareness month, but Angela Hart, the woman behind the stickers, has been aware of autism for roughly 21 years.

It's the age of Dustin her adult son who she says has the mentality of a 3- to 5-year-old and will likely develop no further.

"I've been actually asked to leave, because he has no filter," she said.

Hart's stickers are showing up in store fronts across central Florida.

A number now appear in Lake City, while others are in Live Oak.

They can be found in windows of local grocery stores, restaurants and even bowling alleys.

Autism is a spectrum disorder with a wide ranging set of behaviors associated with the varying degrees that an individual is affected by the condition. In contrast to Dustin, some autistic persons are quiet and withdrawn.

COURTESY

Angela Hart and her son Dustin, 21, who has autism. They are celebrating in front of a local store that has declared itself "'autism friendly."

There's also a difference between autism and Asperger's Syndrome. Though the same underlying disorder, Asperger's is considered a higher functioning degree of autism.

Despite the degree, and especially for those with family more heavily affected, Hart said, "The symbol is created to give a welcoming feeling when you go into places."

Stating "Autism Welcome," she said they're there to help moms like her break free from the confines of the home and venture into everyday places they might otherwise fear going.

Hart said she developed the idea about five years ago to help those are afraid to go in stores — afraid of nasty stares, frowns, scowls or of being asked to leave because of a family member's autism symptoms.

"People stare, make you feel like should never have walked through the door," she said.

Through her Strong Mothers Altering Autism's Reality Together (SMAART) website Hart set out to develop a sense of community and a resource for those with older children or family members with autism.

"I wanted to try to get a lot of us to come out of our isolation at home," said Hart. "I wanted to find a way to make those people feel the encouragement to come into public places."

Her experiences with her son, Dustin, were all the inspiration she needed to create the stickers and start the movement that now spans state and national borders, Hart said.

The more recent website relating to her solo effort to help stores identify as welcoming is found at autismwelcomed.com and has information related to the stickers.

She said the stickers aren't intended to indicate if store staff is specially trained, nor do they reveal whether its interior is "sensory friendly."

The stickers show that someone in the store understands the oftentimes plight of a family with autistic members in public places.

"I would love to have every place in the entire world to be autism friendly," Hart said. "But that's not realistic."

She said no amount of training could prepare most for the spectrum of behaviors it can exhibit.

"I made this decal for moms just like me ... I'm still learning everyday and my son's 21," Hart said.

Car hits culvert, goes airborne; driver seriously hurt, sent to UF

By COREY ARWOOD
carwood@lakecityreporter.com

A Lake City man had to be removed from the wreckage of a single vehicle accident off U.S. Route 90 in the Friday early morning hours, Florida Highway Patrol reported.

Jose Guadalupe, 32, was flown to UF Health Shands after the 2009 Toyota Corolla he was driving left the road for unknown reasons and began to overturn, according to the FHP report.

Traveling east on U.S. Highway 90, Guadalupe went off road around the area of SW Hunter Road.

The car struck a culvert, flew into the air, hit the ground and flipped several times along what was described in the report as the road's "grassy south shoulder."

The crash happened just after 2 a.m.

"The driver was extricated by Columbia Fire EMS personnel before being flown by Trauma One to UF Health in Gainesville for his serious injuries sustained in the crash," the FHP report said.

Guadalupe was wearing a seatbelt according to the report.

Woman ejected when second motorist runs stop sign, Highway Patrol reports

By COREY ARWOOD
carwood@lakecityreporter.com

A Like Oak woman was ejected from her SUV after a collision with a car whose driver failed to stop at a stop sign, Florida High Patrol reported.

Jesse Taylor, 20, of Live Oak was in a 1999 Infinity Q30 and Carla Patterson, 44, in a 2007 Chevrolet Envoy, the report stated.

All incident details are from the FHP report.

The wreck occurred around 2:50 p.m. Thursday at the intersection of County Road 136 and 193rd Road when Taylor approached a stop sign on 193rd Road while Patterson traveled east on County Road 136.

"Driver one failed to stop for a stop sign at the intersection of CR 136. Vehicle one struck the driver side of vehicle two with its front," the report said.

The Infinity spun counterclockwise, struck a stop sign and stopped.

Patterson spun clockwise, and her SUV rolled. She was thrown from it while it overturned, the report said.

It stopped in a ditch.

Taylor was not wearing a seatbelt according to the report, which said it was unknown if Patterson was.

She was transported to UF Health Shands at for treatment, the report said.

Alcohol was not a factor, FHP said.

Lightning kills 1 at mud bog

By ROBERT BRIDGES
rbridges@lakecityreporter.com

WHITE SPRINGS — Three people were struck by lightning, one fatally, at a popular Hamilton County mud-bogging site Saturday afternoon, officials said.

The names of the victims have not been released pending notification of next of kin, according to Hamilton County EMS Director Toby Witt.

The lightning strike occurred at about 3:30 at Woodpecker Mud Bog in White Springs, Witt said.

A female victim suffered a direct hit as she was standing outside an RV. CPR was administered at the scene and en route to Shands Lake Shore Regional Medical Center but she could not be saved.

"She was worked all the way to the hospital," Witt said.

Two others were struck but less seriously hurt.

A female victim was taken to Lake City Medical Center where she is in stable condition and expected to fully recover.

A male victim suffered minor injuries and declined medical attention.

A mid-afternoon storm brought lightning and torrential rain to the area.

"Everybody was trying to leave" when the strike occurred, Witt said.

PARADE

"People are very excited about this Parade of Homes event."

During the weekend event, 18 newly constructed homes will be on display and open for anyone to walk through and tour and meet the builder. Those attending will have the opportunity to meet the builder and ask questions and look at house plans of that model or possibly other options the builder may offer. The event is completely free.

"People who go out and tour these new homes will see new ideas in regard to floor plans, kitchen and bathroom ideas and innovations," Zecher said. "There are a lot of new building materials and appliances that are more energy efficient than they were in the past and these will be on display, as well."

The Parade of Homes at one time was an annual event, but during the economic downturn, the event went away for a decade. The last Parade of Homes event was held in Columbia County in 2008.

The Lake City Reporter and Currents magazine once again were selected as the exclusive partner to market the Parade of Homes event to the community in print and digital media.

"We're honored to partner with the Columbia County Builders' Association and very excited that building is back in our region and our local economy continues to strengthen," said Todd Wilson, publisher of the Lake City Reporter and Currents magazine. "This event has created a buzz in our community and people are talking about it positively and with anticipation. We hope that everyone will make a point to come out and take a look at some of these amazing new homes our talented local builders have constructed."

Zecher said through an event like this, consumers and builders alike should realize the value of doing business with or joining the Columbia County Builders' Association.

"The builders who are members of the CCBA are good, reliable builders and they do good, quality work," Zecher said. "When builders join, we check their licenses and make sure they are reputable. Being involved with CCBA, there is strength in numbers in our industry locally. The local CCBA provides an avenue to search local builders who are licensed and insured and this is very important in this day and time."

For more information about the CCBA or the Parade of Homes event, check out www.buildcolumbiacounty.com or www.lakecityreporter.com or email colcountybuild@comcast.net or twilson@lakecityreporter.com or call Todd Wilson at (386) 752-1293.

FRAUD

Owens was taken to Columbia County Detention Facility without incident.

The officer spoke to a woman who was with Owens at the bank.

When asked if she had been out of town with Owens for two and a half weeks, as Owens claimed, the woman said they hadn't.

The woman said she wrote the checks because Owens "did not know how to write a check properly" and had "very poor handwriting," according to the report.

She said she had no idea that Owens had no money in his accounts because he "he had shown her on a cell phone and account that had money in them," the report states.

The woman later returned to the bank and worked out a payment plan to repay money that Owens had deposited into her account — one check for $400 and another for $350.

She is not a suspect and no charges are being filed against her, according to the report.

James Blackman's learning curve continues at Florida State, 4B.

COLLEGE BASEBALL: Santa Fe

Former Tiger provides the Edge at Santa Fe

Santa Fe outfielder Brock Edge had the first cycle for the Saints since 2009 on Mar. 9 in a 13-5 win over Kalamazoo Valley CC. He's currently hitting .337 with three home runs and 22 RBI.

Santa Fe College's baseball team has put together another fine regular season this year with 33 wins already to date. The No. 2 ranked squad in the nation has received a boost from several different players, including outfielder Brock Edge, who tallied four hits in Saturday's 16-9 win over Daytona State.

The hard-hitting standout from Lake City has been a cog in the batting lineup thus far, toting a .337 batting average and 22 RBI, fourth most on the team.

He's part of a dynamic freshmen class at Santa Fe, a group that has the Saints in good position to repeat as Mid-Florida Conference champs. Edge says he loves competing at the junior college level, playing alongside his new baseball brethren.

"So far it's exceeded my expectations," he said of the transition from high school. "The pitching is a lot better than I'd ever imagined it would be at a junior college. The teams we play are actually really good. I never expected [competition] to be at this high of a level."

It hasn't taken Edge long to adjust to the learning curve. He went 3 for 4 with two home runs in Friday night's win over Seminole State

Indians hold off Blue Wave for district win

Mathews drives in two, makes big play at the plate to preserve win.

GAINESVILLE — Runner on second, down a run in the sixth, P.K. Yonge was poised to tie the game.

Corey Troiano singled into right field and Austin Sutton turned on the burners, rounding third base and heading home.

He never made it.

Fort White right fielder Caleb May rifled a throw to catcher Caleb Mathews that was on the money and Mathews tagged Troiano out at the plate to end the inning. It preserved the lead for the Indians, who held on for a 3-2 win over the Blue Wave in District 5-5A action Friday night at Bobby Hawkins Field.

"I just knew I had to get it out of my hands as quick as I could and get it to the plate because it was the game-tying run," May said. "I just had to get it done. Thankfully [Mathews]

Jones lifts his way to second place at state in the 199-pound weight class.

PANAMA CITY — Kaden Jones didn't know what to expect as he headed to the Class 2A State Meet for a second straight year.

"I was excited just to be there," Jones said.

He was ecstatic afterwards.

Jones placed second in the 183-pound weight class, benching 370 and posting a clean and jerk of 280 for a 650 total at Arnold High School.

Bartram Trail's Alex Newman took the title with 700 pounds.

The afternoon didn't start great for Jones, who missed his first bench press rep of 370. But he never allowed the pressure to bother him and he came back around to nail his next attempt.

"I took my two minutes and just got my head right and just thought about all the work I put in all season to get there," Jones said. "I couldn't let it slip like that."

Newman pulled away from Jones on the clean and jerk. The duo was actually tied after the bench press but Newman put up a clean and jerk of 330 while Jones needed two attempts to notch 280.

That 280 was enough to secure second place for Jones, who finished 30 pounds ahead of Navarre's Omari Green despite not posting a single personal-best.

"He had a good day. Any time you're finishing in that top six, you obviously had a good day," Columbia coach Brian Allen said. "He didn't have his best day but it was good enough for second place so I'm proud of the effort."

Jones entered the meet seeded third in his weight class after regionals, where he

PGA TOUR: The Masters

JASON GETZ/Atlanta Journal-Constitution
Patrick Reed celebrates his eagle chip on the 15th hole during the third round of the Masters Tournament on Saturday in Augusta, Ga.

Reed builds 3-shot lead over McIlroy

Leader posts another round below 70, pair set for Sunday duel.

By DOUG FERGUSON

AUGUSTA, Ga. — The only thunder was on the ground, not in the sky, a series of ear-splitting roars for Patrick Reed and his two eagles, Rory McIlroy and his final birdie, and everyone else who tried desperately to keep up with them in the Masters.

"The roars ... it's hard not to know what's going on," McIlroy said.

By the end of a wet and wild Saturday at Augusta National, Reed helped bring this Masters into focus.

Reed seized control with a pair of eagles on the back nine, two big pars and a 5-under 67 that gave him a three-shot lead over McIlroy as he goes for his first major in the city where he led undermanned Augusta State to two NCAA titles.

His primary challenger is McIlroy, in the final group at the Masters for the first time in seven years, this time with a shot at the career Grand Slam.

This time it's for a green jacket, not a gold Ryder Cup trophy.

This is for themselves, not for team.

Reed and McIlroy are indelibly linked to that Ryder Cup singles match at Hazeltine some 18 months ago when they traded big putts and uppercuts until Reed prevailed on the 18th hole.

"It won't be quite as intense as that Ryder Cup match, I don't think," McIlroy said, alluding to the partisan and at times rude nature of cheers rarely found at Augusta National.

"I think we'll still be feeling it. It's the latest round of a major championship. Patrick is going for his first major. And I'm going for ... something else."

He paused and smiled upon hearing a few chuckles.

That "something else" is something grand. At stake for the McIlroy is the final

Blaney third straight driver to win in No. 22

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Ryan Blaney became the third different Cup Series regular in a row to win an Xfinity race in the Team Penske Ford No. 22 car. He was the pole sitter and led 132 of 200 laps on an unseasonably chilly Saturday at Texas Motor Speedway.

Joey Logano won in the No. 22 car at California, a week after Brad Keselowski went to Victory Lane in Phoenix.

Joe Gibbs Racing is the only other team in the series to win three straight races with the same car and different drivers. Kyle Busch, Tony Stewart and Denny Hamlin won consecutive races in their team's No. 20 Toyota in 2008. That car actually made it four victories in a row when Stewart won again.

Christopher Bell finished 2.327 seconds behind Blaney in second place. Bell led twice for 10 laps, but isn't sure if a pit penalty that put him at the tail end on a restart after a caution had a big impact on his outcome.

McGregor's UFC future in doubt in wake of charges

NEW YORK (AP) — Conor McGregor was arraigned Friday on charges of felony criminal mischief charges and misdemeanor assault, menacing and reckless endangerment charges following a backstage melee he sparked at a UFC event in New York City.

McGregor was released on $50,000 bond — pocket change for a fighter who was guaranteed $30 million last year in his ballyhooed boxing match against Floyd Mayweather Jr. McGregor is due back in court June 14.

Video footage appeared to show the promotion's most bankable star throwing a hand truck at a bus full of fighters on Thursday after a news conference for UFC 223 at Brooklyn's Barclays Center.

Minnesota Duluth beats Notre Dame 2-1 for NCAA hockey title

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Karson Kuhlman had a goal and an assist, and Minnesota Duluth beat Notre Dame 2-1 Saturday night to win the school's second NCAA hockey championship.

Jared Thomas also scored and Hunter Shepard stopped 19 shots for the Bulldogs (25-16-3). UMD also won the 2011 title at the Xcel Energy Center.

Andrew Oglevie scored and Cale Morris made 33 saves for Notre Dame (28-10-2), winless in two national title games. The Irish lost to Boston College in 2008.

Minnesota Duluth lost to Denver in last year's championship.

NASCAR: Cup Series

Stewart-Haas off to sensational start, including 1-2-3 at Texas

By STEPHEN HAWKINS
Associated Press

FORT WORTH, Texas — Kurt Busch is on the pole, Clint Bowyer is coming off his first victory in six years and Kevin Harvick has won half of the races so far on the NASCAR Cup Series schedule.

Aric Almirola, the newcomer to the team, has been steady, too, finishing 14th or better in every race.

With Stewart-Haas Racing already off to a sensational start this season, the decade-old team will now have the top three starters in a race for the first time Sunday. Busch, Harvick and Bowyer qualified their Fords 1-2-3 at Texas Motor Speedway, while Almirola was 12th at the 1½-mile track.

"We unloaded off the truck here and went right back to the top of the board. That is pretty cool," said Bowyer, whose victory at Martinsville before the Easter break ended his 190-race winless streak.

"It is crazy how you can get your cars with a good balance on them and really roll them through the corners good," he said. "It seems if they are fast at one track they are going to be fast at the next."

All four Stewart-Haas cars are in the top 11 in season points through the first six races. Harvick is seventh, followed by Bowyer at eighth, Busch 10th and Almirola 11th.

Hendrick Motorsports also has all four of its drivers in the top 20. But Alex Bowman, Jimmie Johnson, Chase Elliott and William Byron are all below the Stewart-Haas drivers in the standings.

Busch is the first three-time Cup pole sitter in Texas, where he and Harvick will make their track-record 31st starts. TMS, which opened in 1997, is hosting its 35th race. Both have one win there.

When asked why Stewart-Haas is having so much success this season, Busch was admittedly biased in his assessment. Tony Gibson, his former crew chief including for the 2017 Daytona 500 win, is now off the road in what the driver calls "a perfect role" for Gibson, who is involved in building the cars for all four teams.

"If you go ask him now, he will say it is all about the people and process around him," Busch said. "But he has found some good people, rearranged them into different positions and I think that our team is doing a really good job of creating continuity between the four cars."

Harvick won at Texas last November, and this season has won the only two races on 1½-mile tracks , at Atlanta and Las Vegas, during his three-race winning streak.

This is only Stewart-Haas Racing's second season with Ford, after the team switched from Chevrolet.

"When you see what Stewart-Haas Racing has done with Ford, we still haven't reached the potential of where we can be," Harvick said. "We have, in my opinion, the most stable team in the garage. When you have the most stable team in the garage from a financial standpoint and manufacturer standpoint, that attracts good people. ... We are the drivers lucky enough to be in a position of where Stewart-Haas racing is right now. We have a very solid foundation."

Three-time Cup champion Tony Stewart was still driving with Joe Gibbs Racing in 2008 when he announced he would join forces with Cup owner Gene Haas to form Stewart-Haas Racing. The team made its debut in 2009 and is in its 10th season, marking 1,000 starts in the top series when all four drivers take the green flag in Texas.

Bowyer describes the team as feeling like family and at ease. He believes Stewart-Haas is even more stable now than it was when he joined last year.

"Everybody had the confidence in a champion going over there," Bowyer said, when asked if that stability was a credit to Stewart. "You can't leave out the boss, Gene Haas. Everybody knows that he steps up whenever needed. The conversation with Gene is: 'When are you going to win? How are going to win? What do you need to win more?' It's never anything about anything other than that."

Breaking clay targets at the Fort White Gun Club

By MONTY STEPHENS
Special to the Reporter

COURTESY PHOTOS

These are the various clay targets used in trap shooting.

I met Joe Hinkle, Match Director at the gate of the Ft. White Gun Club. Hinkle explained every Wednesday if the weather is good, the club has a "Trap" shoot. There are three main venues for shotgun competition, Trap, Skeet and Sporting Clays. The club has Trap and Skeet. If you are unfamiliar with Trap or Skeet, these are shotgun games where shooters fire a shotgun at a clay target (clay pigeon) hurled through the air at 40 mles per hour. To make it tougher, the normal routine is to launch two targets from opposing sides, one immediately after the other.

Trap and skeet were developed in the United States in the early 20th century to simulate bird hunting. Within a few years of its inception, it became competitive and was refined into a "sport" with official rules and scoring. Just like you see on TV, the shooter calls "pull" and that initiates the clay pigeon launch. Targets are considered "hit" whether a small piece breaks off or it is completely shattered by the shooter. Hit targets hit are called "dead birds." If the shooter misses completely, the target is considered a "lost" bird. Shooters keep their own scores on a sheet resembling a bowling score sheet. A full "round" consists of 25 clay pigeons from five different pads or locations.

I was privileged to watch a match with six of the Fort White Gun Club "regulars." They were all great shots. Once they warmed up with few rounds under their belts, the clay targets started breaking like clockwork. As far as scoring goes, all of them said they shoot for their own personal gratification. They just want to shoot well and no one seemed to care about who won. Never was there any chiding or joking about someone missing a shot.

The gun of choice for Trap and Skeet is the 12 gauge shotgun, but 20 gauge will also works well. An over/under shotgun is the configuration of choice although some shooters used autoloaders. Everyone shot 2 ¾ shot shells with 7 ½, 8, or 9 shot. Use of a larger shot is prohibited.

There are several kinds of clay pigeons. One is very small and called a mini. Then there is a battue, which is weighted to turn upside down in flight. Another clay target called a rabbit is extra heavy so it can withstand the stress of rolling across the ground. The standard or regular clay pigeon is the size used most. Through the course of a year, the club buys eight pallets of clay pigeons, which amounts to over 68,000 targets. These guys shoot a lot.

The Fort White Gun Club has been in existence for decades. Joe Hinkle shared the club and built their Skeet and Trap shooting range in 2008. Be forewarned, this club is private and is not open to the public. But in order to promote the "shooting sports," the club hosts special days for local Boy Scout Troops and Future Farmers of America students. In addition to Trap and Skeet, the club also has a rifle range, pistol range, and cowboy shooting range. Under the terms of their license, the Club is limited to a maximum of 500 members. But a few "openings" come up every year. Members come from a broad range of society and include both sportswomen and sportsmen.

For more information, go to http://fortwhitegunclub.org. Anyone wishing to join may have a long wait, but it will be worth the effort. Good shooting.

Gopher tortoises more active in spring, just in time for its big day

From staff reports

Spring days are a good time to spot a gopher tortoise, as Florida's only native tortoise becomes more active, foraging for food and searching for a mate.

If you see gopher tortoises or their half-moon shaped burrow entrances, it is best to leave them alone. It's illegal to disturb or harm gopher tortoises, their burrows or their eggs. You can help a gopher tortoise cross a road, by picking it up and placing it on the roadside in the direction it was heading. But only do this if it is safe for you to do so, and don't put the tortoise in your vehicle!Remember too, the tortoise is a land animal, so never attempt to put it into water.

On April 10, many Floridians plan to celebrate Florida Gopher Tortoise Day External Website and support conservation of this threatened species.

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) has encouraged Floridians to get involved in Gopher Tortoise Day since 2016 and share awareness of how people can help this species that is found in every county of the state. Communities adopting a Gopher Tortoise Day resolution this year include Alachua and Brevard counties, and the cities of Malabar, Melbourne, North Port, Palm Bay, Palm Shores, Rockledge, Sanibel and Tallahassee. In 2017, Gopher Tortoise Day resolutions were adopted by Charlotte, Collier, DeSoto, Indian River and Sarasota counties, and the cities of Cape Coral, Flagler Beach and Venice.

Anyone, or any group like a neighborhood association, can celebrate Gopher Tortoise Day and help conserve the tortoise. Go to GopherTortoiseDayFL.com External Website for information and activities for April 10 and all year long.

"If you're a fan of the gopher tortoise, help us spread the word on conserving this threatened species, whose burrows are home to hundreds of animals, including the eastern indigo snake, gopher frog and Florida mouse," said Deborah Burr, who heads the FWC's gopher tortoise management program.

ROUNDUP

UF baseball's offense explodes at Tennessee

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Florida used four crooked numbers to explode for a 22-6 win over Tennessee on Saturday in Knoxville.

The Gators recorded season highs in runs and hits (20) and extended their winning streak to eight games.

With the win, head coach Kevin O'Sullivan reached 200 wins in the Southeastern Conference. He has a career record of 200-109 (.647) in SEC play.

Senior Nick Horvath went 4-for-7 on Saturday with a team-high four RBI on the night. It was the first time in his career with a four-hit game and marked the second time this season Horvath had four RBI in a game. Horvath hit a three-run home run in the second inning to open the scoring, the second game in a row that he hit a three-run shot.

The Gators scored five runs in the second inning, seven runs in the fifth inning and seven runs in the sixth inning. Florida has now scored five-plus runs in an inning 12 times this season. Last season, Florida notched five-plus runs in a frame just nine times all season (71 games).

No. 4 Florida softball downs No. 15 Alabama

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. – The Florida softball team downed No. 15 Alabama, 6-1, to open the series Saturday, April 7, at Rhoads Stadium. Kelly Barnhill (16-1) picked up the win in the circle and limited the Crimson Tide to just one run on three hits.

Aleshia Ocasio led the team with three RBI despite going 0-for-2 at the plate. She pushed across runs with a pair of SAC flies and on a bases loaded fielder's choice. Hannah Adams registered a 2-for-4 performance at the plate for her eighth multi-hit game of the season.

Alexis Osorio (8-4) picked up the loss in the decision.

Florida (33-5, 8-2 SEC) and Alabama (24-10, 5-5) will return today at 3 p.m. for game two of the series.

Thomas stymies bats, FSU baseball falls at GT

ATLANTA – Georgia Tech (18-13, 7-7 ACC) won a pitcher's duel Saturday, beating No. 6 Florida State (24-8, 8-6) 2-1 Saturday afternoon under overcast skies in Russ Chandler Stadium. The game started two hours earlier than previously scheduled due to the threat of rain later in the evening.

Drew Parrish pitched six innings for Florida State, allowing eight hits but just one run while striking out four. Connor Thomas (4-3) pitched a complete game for the Yellow Jackets and struck out nine.

Conor Grady (3-1) allowed a seventh-inning run in his first inning of work for his first loss of the season.

Mike Salvatore tied a career high with three hits. Rhett Aplin had two of FSU's three other hits, including a sixth-inning triple that scored Salvatore and tied the score at 1-1.

Georgia Tech scored in the bottom of the fifth when Parrish allowed a single to Austin Wilhite and Oscar Serratos followed with a double to right centerfield. Wilhite scored, but Serratos was out at second base trying to return to the bag.

Serratos' second double of the game opened the seventh inning off Grady. Nick Wilhite sacrifice bunted Serratos to third and Wade Bailey reached on a fielder's choice to Nick Derr at shortstop – Derr threw home but not in time to get Serratos, and Tech had a 2-1 lead.

Thomas closed out his complete game in the ninth.

FSU softball's 30-game ACC winning streak ends

TALLAHASSEE — It was 15 innings of close-fought softball on Friday night between No. 13 Florida State (32-7, 10-1 ACC) and Pitt (20-14-1, 9-4 ACC) at JoAnne Graf Field. The Seminoles earned a 2-1 walk-off victory in game one and dropped a heartbreaker to the Panthers in game two by the score of 1-0 in eight innings.

The loss in game two snapped FSU's ACC winning streak at 36 games. It ends as the fifth-longest conference winning streak in NCAA history. Prior to Friday, the Seminoles hadn't lost a conference game since a 4-0 defeat to Louisville on May 7, 2016.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL: Florida State

Blackman's learning curve continues

By JOE REEDY
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Florida State quarterback James Blackman has done plenty of on-the-job learning during his first year on campus.

When Deondre Francois suffered a season-ending knee injury in last year's opener, Blackman became the first true freshman quarterback for the Seminoles since 1985. He started the final 12 games in a season in which Florida State went from playoff contender to narrowly keeping its 41-year bowl streak alive.

After last year's crash course in college quarterbacking, Blackman's matriculation is continuing during spring practices with new coach Willie Taggart and an offense that stresses speed.

Blackman though has not been fazed trying to learn Taggart's up-tempo system, which is more of a spread offense compared to the pro-style set the Seminoles employed under Jimbo Fisher.

"I am more comfortable in the pocket now because I know what type of pressure to expect from the defense. That is helping me to be more relaxed," Blackman said.

Blackman said that even though there are some similarities between the two offenses, the play-calling is simpler. Fisher's play calls were often three words compared to Taggart's one-word calls.

Blackman also noticed a greater balance between run and pass plays, but the quarterback must make more reads at the line.

"I think the transition is going well and executing the plays," he said. "The tempo helps keep the defense off balance. Often they don't know what we are lining up in so that allows us to hit them fast."

COURTESY

Florida State quarterback James Blackmon is expected to compete for the starting job with Deondre Francois and redshirt freshman Bailey Hockman.

The 6-foot-5, 174-pound sophomore — who threw for 2,230 yards, 19 touchdowns and 11 interceptions last season — also came into the spring more confident after the Seminoles closed the year with four straight wins. He threw 10 touchdowns during the winning streak, including four in the Independence Bowl win over Southern Mississippi. The last two wins occurred after Fisher resigned to go to Texas A&M.

"He's done pretty good and is keeping a level head right now," offensive lineman Derrick Kelly said. "It tells a good amount about him. He's still there. He's still that type of quarterback."

Taggart, who was hired on Dec. 5 , has also been pleased with how Blackman has been managing the offense.

"He's making quick, good decisions," Taggart said. "He's become a really good leader and again just continue to be more efficient with the offense and taking what the defense gives us."

Even if Blackman performs well the rest of the spring, including the April 14 Garnet and Gold game, he will go into preseason drills knowing there will be a three-way competition for the starting spot.

Redshirt freshman Bailey Hockman has been getting equal snaps while Francois is expected to be 100 percent by August.

Florida State could go into the season as the only Power Five program to have two quarterbacks that have started 10 or more games.

Taggart said he has seen improvement from all three but doesn't see any indication who will be the starter on Sept. 3 against Virginia Tech until preseason camp.

"I think those guys will have a better understanding of what we're doing offensively, and what we expect out of them," he said. "As they go through the summer time training with each other, and coming into training camp, I think that's when we'll see more separation between each other."

Francois says he is ahead of schedule seven months after surgery to repair a torn patellar tendon in his left knee. He is limited though during practices, only taking part in individual and non-contact drills.

MASTERS

leg of the career Grand Slam, achieved by only five other players, and completed only once before at the Masters by Gene Sarazen in 1935.

"It's going to be good fun," he said.

Reed ran off three straight birdies around the turn, and he stretched his lead to as many as five shots with his eagles.

The first one was a 15-foot putt on the 13th hole. The next one was far more bold. From just under 270 yards, with the rain making the air feel heavy, Reed hit 3-wood just over the water and short of the bunker. His chip from 80 feet slammed against the pin and dropped for eagle. Reed pumped his fist, the kind of emotion he typically saves for the Ryder Cup.

He was at 14-under 202.

McIlroy made up a five-shot deficit in eight holes when he chipped in for eagle on the par-5 eighth. Reed was in the group behind him, and perhaps the cheers inspired him. He holed a 10-footer for birdie, the start of three in a row to regain control.

"Any time you hear a bunch of roars, you're going to get excited, especially if you feel like you're playing some good golf," Reed said. "Felt like I was doing what I needed to do. Of course, I heard the roar on 8, but then to birdie 8, to make the putt on 9, and then hit a good shot on 10 and make birdie there ... I just felt like from that point, the crowds were electrified.

"You had to ride the momentum and keep it going."

McIlroy can only hope he didn't use up all his luck. He figures that chip-in at No. 8 was going off the green except that it struck the pin. He also feared for the worst when his second shot on the par-5 13th went into a sea of pink azaleas, and he wasn't sure he couldn't find the ball. He found it, and the bushes are thin enough he could chip out of the mess and escape with par.

"Just a great day," McIlroy said. "To get myself into the final group, and have a chance to win another major ... you couldn't ask for much more out of today."

The verbal gamesmanship may have started early.

"I feel like all the pressure is on him," McIlroy said. "He's got to go out and protect that, and he's got a few guys chasing him that are pretty big-time players. He's got that to deal with and sleep on tonight."

Reed didn't flinch when told of McIlroy's views.

"I am leading," he said. "But at the same time, he's trying to go for the career Grand Slam. You can put it either way. Honestly, I woke up this morning, felt fine. Didn't feel any pressure. Just came out and tried to play some golf. And I believe that's how it's going to be tomorrow."

CURTIS COMPTON/Atlanta Journal-Constitution

Rory McIlroy celebrates his eagle on the eighth hole during the third round of the Masters Tournament on Saturday in Augusta, Ga.

Both realize that even with their Ryder Cup connection, this is hardly match play.

Rickie Fowler made eagle on the par-5 second and was 5 under through eight holes. He cooled until the end of his round, when a pair of birdies over the last two holes gave him a 65 and left him five shots behind.

Jon Rahm of Spain also chipped in for eagle on No. 8 and saved par on the 13th after hitting into the creek in his round of 65. He was at 8-under 208. Henrik Stenson (70) was seven shots behind.

Tiger Woods had to significantly lower his goal this week. He shot 72, was 18 shots behind and now hopes to finish the tournament under par.

So many others who started the third round with a chance didn't do nearly enough to stay even remotely close to Reed. Justin Thomas (70), Jordan Spieth (71) and Dustin Johnson (71) all are at least nine shots behind.

More than any pressure with the Grand Slam at stake, McIlroy has a score to settle. He had a four-shot lead in the 2011 and shot 80 in the final round.

Now it's the missing piece of the slam. He says he learned from his mistakes — McIlroy won the first of his four majors at the U.S. Open two months later — and loves the idea that he has nothing to lose being three shots behind.

"I can't imagine there's going to be much chat out there tomorrow," McIlroy said. "Not that I have anything against Patrick. We've actually got quite a good relationship. But at the end of the day, it's business and we're both trying to do something pretty special.

Spurrier hired as Alliance league's first coach

Associated Press

ORLANDO — Steve Spurrier plans to be back on the sideline if a proposed new professional league gets off the ground.

The Orlando Alliance announced Saturday that it has hired Spurrier as its first head coach. Spurrier will coach in the planned Alliance of American Football.

Spurrier

The Alliance is the creation of Pro Football Hall of Famer Bill Polian and longtime TV and film producer Charlie Ebersol. The league plans to have eight teams and will play a 12-week season Feb. 9, 2019, and will be broadcast on CBS.

Orlando is the first planned team site, and Spurrier is the first coach.

The 72-year-old Spurrier says he's "fired up and ready to go."

Orlando has never had much success with startup football leagues.

The Florida Blazers lasted only one season in the ill-fated World Football League during the 1970s, followed by several other short-lived teams: The Orlando Renegades of the United States Football League, the Orlando Thunder of the World League of American Football, the Orlando Rage of the infamous XFL, and the Florida Tuckers of the United Football League.

Spurrier coached collegiately at Duke (1987-89), Florida (1990-2001) and South Carolina (2005-2015). The 1966 Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback also coached the NFL's Washington Redskins (2002-03).

He is the fourth person to be inducted to the College Football Hall of Fame as both a player and a coach.

TRACK & FIELD

Raffey, Collins shine at FNS

From staff reports

Columbia's track and field teams had a successful day Friday at the Friday Night Spikes at Bartram Trail High School, highlighted by performances from Asherah Collins and Yassin Raffey.

Collins took first place in the 200-meter dash (25.75 seconds) as well as the triple jump (10.7 meters), an event in which she currently holds the school record.

Raffey won gold in the 800 meter dash (1:58.32) and it wasn't even close, beating Creekside's Matthew Ortiz by nearly four seconds (2:02.11). He was also part of Columbia's 4x400 relay team with Burch Green, Martin Lee and Zhaquon Griffin that won bronze (3:35.84).

Lorinza Jelks also shined for the Tigers by placing third in the 100 meter (11.24). He was also on the Tigers' 4x100 relay team with Tracy White, Michael Seadrow and Jamari Pate that won silver (44:58).

White also placed third in the 100 meter (23.31), less than a second behind winner Ricky Smith from Nease (23.31). Jada Williams placed second in the 100 meter on the girls' side (12.38) and teammate Britinee Battles wasn't too far behind in fifth (12.93).

Talisha Pope also posted a top-five finish in the 400 meter (1:01.62).

Next up for Columbia is the District 3-3A meet on Apr. 14 at Ed White High School.

BRENT KUYKENDALL/Lake City Reporter

Columbia's Kaden Jones bench presses during the Region 2-2A meet on Mar. 21 at Columbia High School.

put up 655. Nick Yeager from Spruce Creek came in seeded second at 670 but he failed to complete his bench press, allowing Jones to vault up a spot.

"I learned (last year) to never count your competition out," Jones said. "It's unfortunate for (Yeager) but in the end, I got second so I can't complain."

"I came in ready to compete."

There was one upset though on Saturday.

Peyton MacDonald went in seeded first and was the favorite to win the state title in the 219 class, but things went terribly wrong for the senior Tiger. MacDonald was DQ'd on his first two bench press reps of 355 pounds because his rear end came off the bench, and he then failed to complete his last attempt, ending his afternoon before he could even attempt the clean and jerk.

"Those are lifts he's gotten all season. I'm sure it was fatigue at that point because had to go back-to-back because there was no lifter in between them," Allen said. "But his numbers were definitely good enough with what he did at regions to win state by 20 pounds so I'm sure he's very disappointed but it's definitely not the end of the world. He gets to graduate in a little bit and enjoy all the things that come along with that after graduation and continue to use the things you learn from sports to help you excel."

MacDonald is set to play football at Webber International this fall.

Marlon Pollock nearly joined Jones on the medal stand, where the top six lifters are recognized. He just missed out, placing seventh with a 320 bench and a personal-best 265 clean and jerk for a 585 total.

"That's kind of a big deal there that you're in the top seven in the state as a sophomore so his future is bright there," Allen said.

Ayden Masters placed seventh in the 169 class with a personal-best 295 bench and a 240 clean and jerk for a 535 total. Tyler Johnson-Jones finished ninth in the 219 class, posting personal-bests across the board with a 325 bench and a 290 clean and jerk for a 615 total.

Columbia finished tied for 15th as a team with five points. Spruce Creek won the title with 26.

One year after placing second as a team, Allen was pleased in what he deemed a rebuilding year just a couple of months ago.

"There's a bunch of kids that'll be back next year and have a chance to compete and do it again," Allen said.

Pelham and Dryden finish year at state

JacQuez Pelham was 25 pounds short of a medal at Friday's Class 1A State Meet, placing eighth in the 238 class with a 330 bench and a 275 clean and jerk for a 605 total. His teammate Corey Dryden placed 12th in the 199 class, benching 300 with a 270 clean and jerk for a 570 total.

EDGE

College. A month earlier, he became the first Saint in nearly a decade to hit for the cycle versus Kalamazoo.

"It was crazy," he said of the feat. "I actually didn't really think about it until I hit the triple. One of my buddies almost tried to jinx me, he said 'hey man, you should try to hit a double.' I told him you can't say that aloud. It was crazy, it was almost surreal."

Edge has made a name for himself within a short time at Santa Fe. His early success was no guarantee, though, entering college after tearing his ACL his senior year.

The former two-sport star at Columbia suffered the gruesome injury during a soccer game and was forced to miss his final high school baseball season. After about eight months of physical therapy, Edge grabbed a bat and strapped on his cleats.

But it took even more time after that, he says, before he felt like his old self again.

"It was actually really tough," he said of the recovery. "In the fall [season], I just struggled quite a bit with the running and hadn't seen pitching for like a whole year. It was really tough, but near the end I started catching my groove again…I feel like I was back to where I was at the start of spring."

Edge says he's considering a career in pharmacy and hopes to transfer to a bigger baseball program once he's done at Santa Fe. The Saints have a track record of sending guys to the next level, and Edge is working hard to be in next spring's signee group.

"Hopefully I'll stay here for another year and move on to Division I or Division II school and then just finish out my bachelor's degree."

got the tag down."

Mathews also had a two-RBI double in the third inning that broke a 1-1 tie. But he'll be remembered Friday night for his quick snatch and tag.

"It was a play that was a must-have late in the game," Mathews said. "If we're going to be a big team, we have to make big plays and that was definitely a big play."

It was their fourth win in a row, but more importantly, it pulled the Indians (9-7, 4-4) even in the loss column with the Blue Wave (13-6, 4-4) near the top of the district standings. Keystone Heights (5-4), Bradford (5-4) and Santa Fe (5-4) are also all in line with Fort White and P.K. Yonge for the No. 1 seed in next month's district tournament.

Just don't ask Fort White coach Rick Julius to figure it all out. He knows the district is wide open.

"It's going to come down to the wire. It's not really going to matter seeding wise but it's probably going to take a mastermind to figure out where everyone is seeded," Julius said. "But the biggest thing we're trying to do now is to come out each day, get better and build momentum for that one big week."

Jacob Sosa also had an RBI single, which put Fort White up 1-0 in the top of the first. P.K. Yonge answered right back in the bottom half when Sutton scored on Ethan Brunson's RBI ground out.

The Blue Wave also had an answer for Mathews' two-RBI hit in the third. Troiano, who went 4 for 4 all on singles, reach based and scored on DeVante Mitchum's RBI double.

But Fort White starter Tyler Shelnut didn't allow P.K. Yonge to strike again in his four innings on the mound. The Florida commit allowed eight hits and a walk with two strikeouts, also working his way out of two-bases-loaded jams in the second and fourth innings.

"The runners that got on shouldn't have gotten on. I didn't do my job and I needed to make up for it," Shelnut said. "That's what wins ball games, is getting out of big situations like that."

Tanner Trice finished the win for Shelnut, shutting out P.K. Yonge over the final three innings. The junior also had his fair share of base runners as the Blue Wave put runners in scoring position in the sixth and seventh but failed to score. P.K. Yonge also failed to take advantage of three Fort White errors.

Anthony Whelan, who defeated the Indians on Mar. 6, suffered the loss on the mound. He surrendered six hits, four walks and a hit batter with a pair of strikeouts.

"It was a sloppy win to be honest," Julius said. "I screwed up with a wrong sign once and we had guys missing signs. We battled through it, but it was not a pretty win. But I'll take it no matter what."

Next up for the Indians is a district game at home Tuesday against Newberry before traveling to Keystone Heights on Thursday. both games start at 7 p.m.

Lady Indians pick up district win at Palatka

Fort White defeated Palatka 10-5 on the road Friday night in District 5-5A action.

The victory kept the Lady Indians (7-8, 6-4) one game ahead of Bradford in the loss column for third place in the district standings. Bradford is 4-5 in the standings.

Next up for Fort White is a road contest at Hamilton County on Apr. 16 at 6 p.m.

First Federal absorbs CBC National

Local bank to add 10,000 customers, $600M in assets.

From staff reports

TONY BRITT/Lake City Reporter

First Federal Bank of Florida recently completed a merger with Coastal Banking Company. First Federal Bank of Florida's main Lake City branch office on US 90 is pictured here.

First Federal Bank of Florida is increasing its clientele and its assets after a merger, according to a news release. Coastal Banking Company, the holding company of CBC National Bank, has been merged into First Federal, which gains 10,000 customers, approximately $600 million in assets, $425 million in deposits and $400 million in gross loans through the deal.

Leibfried

The merger adds full-service banking offices in Fernandina Beach, Ocala and The Villages in Florida, as well as Beaufort and Port Royal in South Carolina.

The merger also provides for mortgage lending services in Florida, across the Southeast and Midwest and both SBA and USDA lending offices across Florida and in multiple states.

"The merger with CBC allows First Federal to grow our presence, customer base and range of products and services in Nassau County and in other vibrant, economically strong markets in both Florida and South Carolina, as well as add mortgage, SBA and USDA lending offices in numerous states," said Keith Leibfried, president and chief executive officer of First Federal, in a prepared statement. "We couldn't be more pleased to welcome CBC's employees and customers to First Federal and we look forward to serving the full range of banking and lending needs of all of our customers as we continue to integrate CBC's operations into First Federal."

First Federal will work to integrate CBC systems, processes, products and services over the next several months. The con-

Selling a car when you owe more than it's worth

DAVE SAYS

Dave Ramsey
CEO of Ramsey Solutions

Dear Dave,
How do you sell a vehicle with a lien amount that's higher than the actual value of the car?
Michael

Dear Michael,
First, you need to find a way to cover the difference between the amount of the lien and what you can get for the car. Let's say the car is worth $12,000, and you owe $15,000. That would leave you $3,000 short.

The bank holds the title, so unless you give them the payoff amount of $15,000 you're not getting the title. The easiest and simplest way would be if someone buys the car for $12,000, and you had $3,000 on hand to make up the difference. If you don't have the money to make up the difference, you could go to a local bank or credit union and borrow the remaining $3,000.

I really hate debt, but being $3,000 in the hole is a lot better than being $15,000 in the hole. Then, you could turn around and quickly pay back the $3,000 you borrowed.

You'd give the total amount owed to the bank, they would give you the title, and you would sign it over to the new owner. Hope this helps!
—Dave

Dear Dave,
My mom and dad are following your advice, and they are working hard to get out of debt. I was wondering, is it okay to buy things while you're paying off the debt you already have?
Leslie
Dear Leslie,
I'm glad you're paying attention to the finances around your house. Of course, there are some things you must have. We call these "necessities." Most things are not necessities, though. If your air conditioning breaks down, or you have car repairs, those are things you must spend money on to fix. Things like new furniture, vacations, and eating at restaurants are not necessities. They're things you might want, but they're not necessary — especially when you're trying to pay off debt.

I always recommend people take a hard look at their priorities, and remember there's a difference between wanting something and needing something to survive. It can be hard, and it may mean everyone has to go without a few things they want for a while. But if your parents are serious about getting out of debt, they'll do it. And it really won't take all that long.

Great question, Leslie!
—Dave

Cybercriminals are increasingly targeting online retailers

By ALLY MAROTTI
Chicago Tribune

Cybersecurity can be a cat-and-mouse game. Fix one weakness, and the criminals find another target.

It's a lesson industries from retail to restaurants to airlines are learning as consumers' data increasingly draws the attention of online thieves. Just this week, Sears and Kmart, Panera Bread and Delta Air Lines notified customers that their payment information and other personal data may have been compromised in security breaches.

The theft of payment information collected at checkout stands, once a more common threat, is declining. The use of chip-enabled credit cards as well as lessons learned from major consumer data breaches — like one at Target in 2013 that affected more than 41 million people — have encouraged retailers to step up their data defenses.

"That went a long way toward securing those point-of-sale systems and making them less of a juicy target for criminals," said Karl Sigler, threat intelligence manager at SpiderLabs, the research team at Chicago-based cybersecurity firm Trustwave. But in response, criminals are targeting payment information consumers provide when they shop online.

Data breaches affecting checkout systems in stores comprised 20 percent of the incidents Trustwave investigated in 2017, down from 31 percent the year before, according to the firm's Global Security Report, released Thursday. E-commerce incidents, on the other hand, were 30 percent of cases, up from 26 percent in 2016.

What's so insecure about online shopping? Sigler said e-commerce sites are getting more complex — with connections to vendors and outside credit card processors — and each added complexity is an added vulnerability.

Trustwave found security holes in every web application it tested in 2017, according to the report. And insecurities aren't an easy problem to solve, Sigler said. Web development teams are sometimes dispersed across the globe.

"You have teams that have to work together like clockwork in order to really produce good security and have that as a priority," he said.

Conversations about data security have gone from the data center to the boardroom in recent years, said Mohammed Elkhatib, founder and CEO of cybersecurity company Anomalix, which is based at Chicago tech hub 1871. Unfortunately, there are still issues — sometimes obvious ones — that slip through.

Companies need to establish a security framework and hold third parties that handle customers' data many accountable, Elkhatib said. No matter who's in charge of the data, they need to play by the same rules, he said.

"Whether it's an on-premise private data center or in the cloud, the risk never goes away because it's (their) brand," Elkhatib said.

The public is pushing companies to better protect their online data, be it from cybercriminals or advertisers. But there are measures consumers can take to protect themselves too.

When customers buy something online, many sites ask them to store their payment info to make their next purchase quicker, Sigler said. That is frequently stored in online retail sites' back-end databases, which hackers often target. Consumers should think twice before storing that information.

Consumers also should make sure their web browsers are updated because updates involve patches for security flaws, Sigler said.

When buying online, use a credit card instead of a debit card, Elkhatib said. Credit card companies are more likely to refund money from fraudulent purchases. Additionally, consumers should make sure the website they're buying from is legitimate.

"They have to be judicious about where they're putting their data," Elkhatib said. "I hate to say it, but they have to be paranoid."

For Delta, Sears and Kmart, the breach involved the same third-party online customer service provider. Hoffman Estates-based Sears Holdings Corp., the parent of Sears and Kmart, said in a statement that fewer than 100,000 customers had their credit card information accessed. The breach occurred in September through October, and the support company informed the retailers in March.

Delta said that several hundred thousand customers were potentially exposed, but couldn't say definitely whether any of their information was actually compromised.

The Panera breach affected customers who had registered for the cafe's online food ordering program, news site KrebsOnSecurity reported. Panera estimated fewer than 10,000 people were affected.

Retail was the industry hit hardest by cyberattacks in 2017, accounting for about 17 percent of the incidents Trustwave investigated. Companies need to be better at protecting consumer data, Sigler said. And they shouldn't think just about prevention, he said.

"How to investigate (a potential incident) and respond, if it is a breach, is just as important as anything," Sigler said.

If the company can detect the breach on its own, it can take care of the problem more quickly, minimizing damage, according to the report.

Ask the Fool

Stocks or Car Loan?

Q Should I use some extra funds to pay off my car loan or invest in the stock market? — K.M., Fort Wayne, Indiana

A If you have any high-interest debt, such as from credit cards, pay that off first. Otherwise, compare your car debt with your alternatives.

Say your car loan interest rate is 5 percent. If you invest in the stock market, the average annual gain in that over many decades is roughly 10 percent, but that's just an average and far from certain. The stock market can be volatile, especially over short periods. So consider your risk tolerance and decide whether you'd rather save a definite 5 percent or hope for a 10 percent gain.

It can be worth paying a little in interest while aiming to earn more through stock appreciation. Just make sure you're investing for the long haul.

Q What's a leveraged buyout? — L.B., Hendersonville, North Carolina

A Sometimes referred to as an LBO, a leveraged buyout is when a company is bought out by another entity (or entities), using a lot of debt. Private equity investors are typically involved, borrowing lots of money without using much of their own, and often using the acquiree's assets as collateral.

The acquired company is generally taken private, no longer trading publicly on the stock market. It's likely to go public again later, after some changes have been made (such as layoffs, the selling of assets or dividend increases or decreases).

While some LBOs are executed by members of management, others are hostile, executed by outsiders and not welcomed by their targets. Many LBOs don't end well for the company or its shareholders (there are substantial interest payments due, after all), though the acquirers often do well.

Bonds, Explained

Stocks have outperformed bonds over most 20-year and 30-year periods, and between 1802 and 2017, stocks averaged annual post-inflation gains of 6.8 percent, while bonds averaged just 3.5 percent. Despite that, you might include some bonds in your portfolio for diversification, especially if you're in or near retirement. First, though, be sure you understand what bonds are.

Bonds are essentially long-term loans. If a company or government issues bonds, it's borrowing cash and promising to pay it back at a certain rate of interest. Bonds sold by the U.S. government's Treasury Department are called Treasuries. State and local governments issue municipal bonds, while businesses issue corporate bonds. Companies on shaky ground attract buyers with high-interest-rate "junk" bonds.

If you buy a $1,000 bond with a "coupon rate" of 5 percent, you'll receive $50 per year in interest payments. When the bond "matures," you'll be repaid your principal (the sum you originally loaned, the bond's "par value"). Most corporate bonds have a par value of $1,000, while government bonds can run much higher.

Sometimes a company will "call" its bond, paying back the principal early. All bonds specify whether and how soon they can be called. Federal government bonds are never called.

Investors don't necessarily buy a bond when it's first issued and then hold it to maturity, for several years or decades. Bonds are often traded among investors, with their prices rising and falling in reaction to prevailing interest rates. When rates fall, people tend to bid up bond prices. After all, if banks are offering 2 percent, a 5 percent bond will be appealing. When interest rates rise, newer bonds with higher interest rates will be more appealing than older bonds with lower rates.

Bonds can make sense for your portfolio, but if you're looking for investment income, consider dividend-paying stocks as well. To see many stocks we have recommended, some of which offer dividends, try our "Motley Fool Stock Advisor" newsletter via fool.com/services.

My Dumbest Investment

A Guy Who Guessed Wrong

When I got back into the stock market in 2009 after inheriting some money, I made the mistake of listening to this guy who guessed wrong a lot. As a result, I lost money with some bad investments. Now I listen to him less, while listening more to The Motley Fool and a few others I trust.

Oh, the guy who guessed wrong a lot over the last eight years or so? Me. — R.L., Cincinnati

The Fool Responds: We're glad that you trust us, but don't sell yourself short so quickly. A big problem in the scenario you described can be boiled down to one word you used: guessed. The less guessing you employ in investing, the better your results are likely to be.

Sure, no one knows exactly what a given stock or the entire market is going to do in the next day or year, but the more you know, the fewer surprises you'll likely encounter. If you study a company you're interested in, learning about how it makes its money, what its competitive advantages are, how financially healthy it is and what its growth potential is, you can make an educated estimate of its value and its attractiveness as an investment.

Remember, too, that you'll never be perfect in your investment decisions. We've made our share of regrettable calls, and the world's best investors have erred, too.

The Motley Fool Take

A Biotech Bargain?

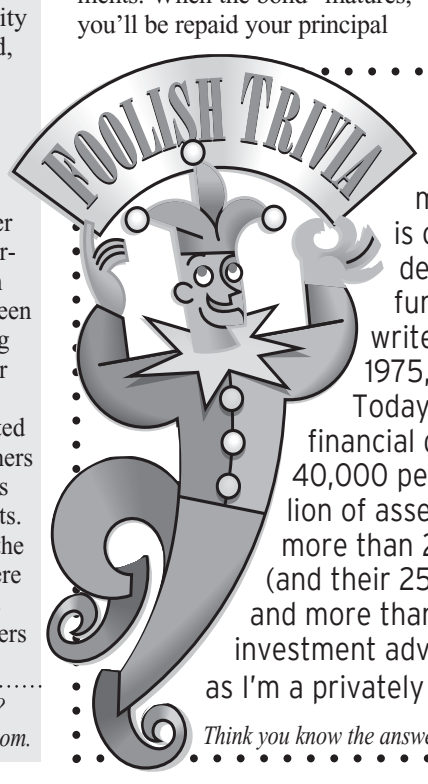
Not long ago, biotech company Celgene (Nasdaq: CELG) was a darling in the investment community. That's no longer the case. Over the past six months, Celgene stock has plunged some 40 percent.

What went wrong? A once-promising Crohn's disease drug flopped in a late-stage clinical study, Celgene's fast-growing psoriasis drug Otezla is facing competition and slowing growth, and the company lowered its financial outlook for 2020.

The market seems to think Celgene is in horrible shape, but the biotech still claims a compelling growth story, with adjusted earnings per share expected to increase by more than 19 percent annually on average over the next few years.

Celgene's current lineup, featuring blood cancer drugs Revlimid and Pomalyst, continues to perform well. Those two drugs contributed nearly $10 billion to the company's roughly $13 billion in sales last year. Celgene also markets the blockbuster cancer drug Abraxane. Thanks to label expansions, growing demand and price increases, the company's sales grew 16 percent year over year in 2017. Meanwhile, many expect Celgene's multiple sclerosis drug ozanimod to be approved and reach blockbuster status.

With a forward-looking price-to-earnings (P/E) ratio recently in the single digits, Celgene's stock seems a bargain for long-term investors. (The Motley Fool owns shares of and has recommended Celgene.)



Name That Company

I was founded in 1946, and my founder's granddaughter is currently my CEO. In 1974 I debuted the first money market fund against which investors could write checks. I began offering IRAs in 1975, a year after they were created. Today, based in Boston, I'm a global financial giant, employing more than 40,000 people and with more than $6 trillion of assets under administration. I serve more than 26 million individual investors (and their 25 million brokerage accounts) and more than 22,000 businesses. I offer investment advice, but you can't invest in me as I'm a privately held company. Who am I?

Think you know the answer? We'll announce it in next week's edition.

LAST WEEK'S TRIVIA ANSWER

I trace my roots back to 1955, when the United Business Services company, run by two Kansas City, Missouri, brothers, offered tax preparation services to its clients. Revenue more than tripled in a year. I started offering my services in cities where the IRS was discontinuing free tax-prep services and soon adopted the franchising model. My services became more computerized in the 1980s, especially after I bought CompuServe. Now based in all 50 states and with about 12,000 offices and 70,000 tax pros worldwide, I've prepared more than 720 million tax returns. I offer tax-prep software, too. Who am I? (Answer: H&R Block)

Welding certifications a 1st for CHS

By COREY ARWOOD
carwood@lakecityreporter.com

Darryl Thomas' class dropped its blowtorches and welding guns, let the glowing metals chill and took a minute for a photo op commemorating their new certification that was a first-ever for the school.

Thomas had just handed out all the certificates to the 15 students in his welding class who had received their Welding Level 1 certification from the National Center for Construction Education and Research.

"This is the first ever group of certified welders to graduate from Columbia High School," said Thomas. "Basically the introductory level in welding like basics and safety."

That introduction will count as college credit for those that continue their training after high school, saving money on tuition.

The certification goes up to a level four, and two of those can now be knocked out at CHS in Thomas' class.

"This certification is actually taught at colleges, but they can actually get two levels in high school if they have this class enough," Thomas said.

The big draw, he said, was the experience the students would have straight away out of high school.

The second, maybe bigger, draw was the advantage that experience would give them in the job market.

"Oh of course it would help them get a job," Thomas said. "That's the big thing. Like say for instance these two guys both apply for the same job. This guy's got the certification that's going to tell that employer that this kid knows safety. They don't have to teach him how to be a welder. It's a very good tool for getting jobs."

Thomas said he has been the welding instructor there for about two years now.

He said the entire department largely had been renovated and upgraded during that time, and mostly by his students.

"[The] entire welding unit, this is a total transformation. Every bit of this you see here is new. We put these [welding stalls] in this year. You could only run two welders last year or it would throw the breaker. So we just recently got all these stalls," he said.

Even the classrooms had a new look and industrial work shop feel, parts, labor and all thanks to the students, he said.

"The room, we did all that between last year and this year," Thomas said.

Twitter says it has suspended 1.2 million accounts

'Violations related to the promotion of terrorism' cited.

By JAMES F. PELTZ
Los Angeles Times

Twitter Inc. said Thursday it suspended 1.21 million accounts from its social media platform between August 2015 and the end of 2017 for "violations related to the promotion of terrorism."

Twitter also said the suspensions were on a downswing.

They included 274,460 suspended accounts in the second half of 2017, which were down 8.4 percent from the previous reporting period and the second consecutive period "in which we've seen a drop in the number of accounts being suspended for this reason," Twitter said in a blog post covering its 12th biannual "transparency report."

Twitter also said 74 percent of the accounts involved in the latest reporting period "were suspended before their first tweet."

"We continue to see the positive, significant impact of years of hard work making our site an undesirable place for those seeking to promote terrorism, resulting in this type of activity increasingly shifting away from Twitter," the company said.

Twitter said that 93 percent of the 274,460 accounts suspended in the last half of 2017 "were flagged by (the company's) internal, proprietary tools" and that government reports of such violations accounted for only 0.2 percent of all suspensions.

Twitter began mass suspensions of such accounts in early 2014 as the San Francisco-based company responded to criticism that it wasn't doing enough to crack down on users who promote or are linked to terrorist groups.

In December 2015, after the mass shooting in San Bernardino that left 14 dead, President Obama called on Twitter and other tech leaders to "make it harder for terrorists to use technology to escape from justice."

Last year, relatives of the victims of the attack filed a federal lawsuit against Twitter, Google and Facebook, accusing the tech giants of knowingly supporting Islamic State and its extremist agenda.

The lawsuit contends the companies allowed Islamic State to build an outsize online presence and propagate its extremist beliefs and draw recruits, such as the couple who carried out the attacks on the San Bernardino social services center.

Tech Q&A: Xbox has game, steals PC user's login account

By STEVE ALEXANDER
Star Tribune (Minneapolis)

Q: I recently bought my son an Xbox One game console. Because he had no email account, we used my Hotmail account to set up the console. But now my son's name appears on my Windows 10 login screen and I get messages on the PC screen about Xbox games he is playing. In addition, if I forward an email to someone, it lists the sender as my son. How can I put my PC and email back in my own name?

Rick Forrest, Oakdale, Minn.

A: By setting up your son's Xbox using your Hotmail account, you have made your son the named user of that account. That has altered the "sender name" on your emails.

The same account change has put your PC in your son's name, causing it to receive his Xbox game data. Why? Because you log in to your PC using a Microsoft Account network password (your Hotmail address, the same one the Xbox uses) rather than using a local password (one that exists only on your PC.) (See tinyurl.com/y9jk72o6). There are two ways you can fix this:

_ Let your son continue to use your existing email account and create a new account for yourself (see tinyurl.com/ek2al). The downside is that you will have to notify people about your new email address.

_ Get a new email account for your son and make it his primary sign-in password for the Xbox. Then reclaim your existing email address for yourself.

If you choose the second alternative, create a new email address for your son using the tinyurl above. Make the switch on the Xbox by first logging in to the console using your existing email address. Then change the Xbox settings by clicking "Your info" (see tinyurl.com/ydch8asn and scroll down to "How to change the email address or phone number you use to sign in to your Microsoft account online.") Once you have made your son's new email address the "primary alias" (sign-in account) for the Xbox, leave your address in the Xbox account list. Otherwise your email account will be wiped out.

You can reclaim your existing Hotmail account by changing the user name associated with it (see tinyurl.com/ybapqvgw). Erase your son's name and type in yours.

Q: I've been given a Gateway desktop PC, but the previous owner can't recall the Windows password. How can I gain access to the PC?

Charles Seaman, Thibodaux, La.

A: There are several free, downloadable programs that bypass Windows to either recover or erase a lost password. Erasing eliminates the PC's password protection. (See tinyurl.com/ya3doy2a). To use one of these programs, download it on another PC and store it on a flash drive. Then set the problem PC to boot, or start up, from the flash drive (see tinyurl.com/zj8qmpy). Insert the flash drive into the problem PC and restart the computer.

Q: I want to download my confidential Gmail messages to a flash drive. How can I do it?

Scott Waters, Minneapolis

A: It's fairly easy to download Gmail messages to a flash drive. Try this: (see tinyurl.com/lxprlzm).

UF has plan to save near-extinct tree

Novel approach could be applied to other species.

UF IFAS

Last month, scientists from universities, conservation groups and government agencies from across the country spent two days turning their best ideas for conserving this rare tree into a coordinated strategy.

GAINESVILLE — With fewer than 1,000 of them left in the wild, the Florida torreya tree is on the path to extinction. But now scientists have a plan to save it.

Last month, scientists from universities, conservation groups and government agencies from across the country spent two days turning their best ideas for conserving this rare tree into a coordinated strategy.

Their novel approach could set the groundwork for conserving other endangered plants, said Jason Smith, associate professor of forest resources and conservation at the University of Florida, and one of the organizers of the event.

This first Torreya Tree of Life event was sponsored and co-organized by ProForest, an interdisciplinary and multi-institutional initiative focused on forest health headquartered at UF, and of which Smith is a part. This event featured preeminent evolutionary biologist E.O. Wilson, whose keynote address emphasizes the importance of conserving endangered species and sustaining global biodiversity.

"Dr. Wilson is a giant in the study of biodiversity, and in the science world in general. I think having him involved in this project has been instrumental in creating the network of scientists who are now a part of this project," Smith said.

At one point during a hike in Torreya State Park, organizers planted a young torreya tree as a symbol of what they hope will be a second chance for the tree. The torreya's numbers have sharply declined due to a fungal disease discovered by Smith and his team with the UF Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences.

Later, participants broke off into four groups to hash out the plan to save the torreya.

Stakeholder outreach will focus on raising awareness among members of the public and directly engaging residents who live near or within the torreya habitat. Some landowners actually have torreya on their properties and are in position to become stewards of these natural areas.

Experts on the ecology of the torreya's native range will examine which environmental conditions help torreya's survive. Understanding which conditions are best could help scientists decide where to reintroduce trees in the future.

Large ex situ — off site — propagation programs for torreya exist at the Atlanta Botanical Garden, a sponsor of the event, and at other institutions. Ex situ propagation helps make sure that the torreya will survive as a species, even if it does disappear from its native habitat. This method also provides trees for scientists to study in the lab. These ex situ projects will complete a comprehensive survey to capture the genetic variance in their collections of torreya.

Finally, scientists will begin screening trees to look for those resistant to the fungus that's so devastated the species. Scientists will then determine which genes in these resistant trees make them more resilient. If they can identify this genetic component, the gene editing technology CRISPR can be used to produce trees that have these traits, Smith said.

"When funded, this holistic strategy, involving many scientists and institutions, could give us a fighting chance at saving the torreya. This isn't typically how conservation is done, so we're excited to be trying this novel approach," Smith said. "With the rate at which genetic technologies are advancing, as well as the programs we already have in place, the goal is to have a method we can implement in the next three to five years."

Center for self-driving autos is set to open

By MARK PHELAN
Detroit Free Press

DETROIT _ The only engineering facility built expressly to test self-driving vehicles officially opens Wednesday at the historic 335-acre Willow Run site just west of Detroit.

The American Center for Mobility will be home to automakers, suppliers and other groups developing technology for autonomous vehicles and smart infrastructure. It provides unrivaled facilities to test self-driving vehicles, just as public concern over the technology crescendos after a pedestrian was killed by an autonomous car this month.

"The fatal accident involving a self-driving Uber in Arizona clearly illustrates the need for intensive testing and validation of autonomous vehicles before they go out on public roads," said Cox Automotive senior analyst Michelle Krebs.

A number of companies have already run test laps at ACM, including Toyota, which was proudly first on track.

"This technology will revolutionize transportation, and ACM is the only facility in the United States purposely designed for the testing and development of automated and connected vehicles," ACM President and CEO John Maddox said.

"Companies can conduct tests here that they know are unsafe on public roads: What happens if the safety systems fail? We can re-create scenarios at the proving ground that are not safe for public roads."

That virtually guarantees that automakers, suppliers and tech companies from around the world will beat a path to Willow Run.

The sprawling facility has a 2.5-mile highway loop, a 700-foot curved tunnel, two double overpasses, intersections, traffic circles and more. It provides controlled conditions for tests away from the public. Every inch of road is connected to a fiber-optic network to collect data and so vehicles can communicate with each other, traffic signals and more. ACM also has proprietary WiFi and cellular networks

The center will also include a simulation center with dazzling computer power, the details of which are still secret.

"This will be a hub where we can interact with government agencies and other automakers on things that require vehicle-to-vehicle communication _ like platooning," when a pack of vehicles travels in tight formation at speeds higher than possible with individual drivers, said Andy Freels, president of the nearby Hyundai America Tech Center Inc., or HATCI. Hyundai contributed $5 million to be one of the center's founding sponsors.

"ACM will have the latest roadside units to communicate with vehicles about road conditions, weather, lane repairs ... all the things we need to understand to build a network where vehicles talk to each other and the infrastructure.

"It will also let us test advanced driver assistance and safety features and electrified vehicles."

Michigan's four-season climate is an asset that other areas can't match.

"The range of weather we have has great value to testers," Maddox said. "We've already tested in bright sun, snow and fog." Some of the center's roads were designed specifically to see how vehicles behave when early morning and late-afternoon sun can blind digital cameras.

The site includes part of old U.S. 12 and much of the footprint of the historic WWII bomber plant at which Ford built B-24 bombers and became a symbol of Detroit's reputation as the Arsenal of Democracy.

"The opening of the American Center for Mobility is another sign that Michigan is preparing to lead the way to future mobility," said Jeff Makarewicz, director of Toyota's nearby tech center. "We were honored to be the first automaker to join ACM as a founding sponsor to help create a test ground for advanced vehicle technologies right here in our backyard." The state of Michigan, Ypsilanti Township and other agencies cooperated to create ACM, which also has agreements with 15 Michigan universities.

The other founding sponsors are Ford, AT&T and Visteon. Any company can test at the facility, but the founders will have long-term presences, offices and garages. Subaru donated $2 million for a lower-tier sponsorship, and other companies are certain to join ACM won't say what other companies have already used the facility.

ACM has raised $110 million of its $135 million goal. Construction began in November 2016. The next phase will include an urban driving environment and a tech park.

Self-driving cars are the auto industry's future, unless accidents like the one in Arizona derail it. The ACM exists to develop the technology, test it safely and gain the public's trust.

UF: Big gains in joint-replacement costs

Redesign of program has yielded lower prices and higher quality.

From UF Health

GAINESVILLE — Hip and knee replacement surgeries represent the highest line item in the federal Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, or CMS, budget. Still, the federal government wants hospitals to make further improvements in cost and quality.

It's a daunting challenge since the procedures are already considered cost-effective.

A redesign of the joint-replacement program by the University of Florida College of Medicine's department of orthopaedics and rehabilitation, however, managed to lower costs while shortening hospital stays and reducing both readmissions and complications, according to a new UF Health study published in the journal Arthroplasty Today. Additionally, pain management and mobility after surgery were dramatically improved, allowing patients to recover at home instead of at rehabilitation facilities, the study said.

UF Health physicians said their experience may provide a blueprint for implementing a value-added program that does not "cherry-pick" patients to meet cost requirements imposed by the CMS.

"Our concept is that any change that decreases cost shouldn't affect patient outcomes," said one of the study's co-authors, Hari K. Parvataneni, M.D., an associate professor who is division chief of the adult arthroplasty and joint reconstruction program in the UF College of Medicine's department of orthopaedics and rehabilitation. "And that's the crux of value-based care. It's basically quality divided by cost. Every change has to be based on what is best for the patient."

The study looked at data for CMS and privately insured patients for the 12 months ending Jan. 31, 2017, comparing numbers to patients before the 2015 UF Health redesign. It found hospital length of stay fell from 3.5 to 2.1 days; discharge to home, rather than to a rehabilitation facility, improved from 62 percent of patients to 86.6 percent; and per-patient cost to CMS declined by 19.5 percent, or 11 percent below the target set by the agency.

Meantime, hospital readmissions fell from 4.9 percent to 3.9 percent, and joint-replacement complications fell from 2.3 percent to 1.9 percent.

Part of the impetus of the redesign was a bundled-payment model for Medicare and Medicaid reimbursement implemented by CMS to control costs, reward favorable outcomes and improve value in care, rather than traditional fee-for-service.

The study's lead author, Chancellor F. Gray, M.D., an assistant professor in the UF College of Medicine's department of orthopaedics and rehabilitation, said the department had been looking for synergies to refine care when the CMS mandated the changes in April 2016.

Starting in late 2015, the department created the patient- and family-centered care program, which emphasizes improving a patient's experience through their whole joint replacement episode. This includes getting a patient safely home after surgery and avoiding unnecessary stays in rehabilitation facilities.

Patients are at a higher risk of infection and other complications in a hospital and rehab facilities, and they recover faster and more safely at home, researchers said.

Spring and picnic ideas

TASTE BUDDIES

Genie Norman

TasteBuddiesLakeCity@gmail.com

METRO CREATIVE

It's spring in North Florida — time for food and fun, including picnics.

Growing up in the South, I have many fond memories of springtime. It's that time of year when bright green color begins filing our pastures, fields and bare trees. It's time to go to our favorite garden nursery and pick out new annuals and perennials that are bursting with color and ready for our yards. It's also that time to get out of the house and enjoy a nice spring picnic, a bike ride or simply a walk. We are so fortunate to live in North Florida where we have nearly limitless access to fresh fruits and vegetables straight from the local fields. KC's and Fifth Generation make it easy for us. Where we live we actually have more green than concrete.

As a young girl my friends and I would get in the kitchen and make up some picnic food, grab a paper bag and head for the woods, front porch or the backyard. Back then a picnic could have consisted of a baloney sandwich cut into four squares, Vienna sausages with a piece of cheese on top of a saltine cracker, a big dill pickle cut into strips and a cookie or two. If I was lucky there might have been some homemade pimento cheese that could be made into special sandwiches and a Baby Ruth for dessert. It was a magical time to be together with your friends to visit and have just plain fun. I think it's time to bring these back to this new generation.

Kids today are attached to their cell phones, television, iPads, computers and electronic games. Fun times with others needs to be rekindled in our Youth. What better way than to make time together centered around easy, delicious pick up and go outside foods. So, here are a few make-aheads you can turn into easy snacks to share without much effort or just make it for you and go outside and enjoy a good book.

Everybody has their own version of pimento cheese whether you make it from scratch or buy it in a carton at the grocery store. Even if you buy it you have your favorite brand. Pimento cheese is the Pate of the South. If you have ever been to the Masters in Augusta, Georgia. you have probably had one of their legendary $1.50 pimento cheese sandwiches served wrapped in green cellophane type paper. Yes, green like the traditional green jacket being awarded today. Pimento cheese lines up with barbeque, mint juleps, grits and cornbread in defining the South. To be authentic, when making a pimento cheese sandwich it has to be on white bread. The Master's version of pimento cheese comes from a closely guarded recipe and is not attainable by us mere mortals. I read several possible versions and they are basically the same recipe.

Masters "Possible" Pimento Cheese

16 oz. block sharp cheddar, grated
1 4 0z jar pimentos
Salt and pepper to taste
1-2 tsp. Duke's Mayonnaise (no substitute)

Mix all ingredients until spreadable consistency and serve on white bread.

I was lucky to have attended three Master's so I've actually eaten the Master's version and I think mine is better. Mine came from my Aunt Lizzie. Hers was the best I'd ever eaten. Since it wasn't a written recipe, I stood beside her one day and wrote the recipe down as she made it.

Lizzie's Pimento Cheese

1 stick Kraft extra sharp cheese (10 oz red wrapper, grated
1 stick Kraft Vermont cheddar (10 oz green wrapper) grated
2 jars (6.5 oz) Goya pimentos, drained and chopped
2-3 heaping Tbs. mayonnaise
1 tsp white pepper
1 pkg sweet & low, to taste, 3-4 shakes of Worchestershire sauce
Dash of Tabasco or cholulla

Grate cheese (you have to grate the cheese, packaged grated cheddar just isn't the same) mix in remaining ingredients. If it separates, add small amount of mayonnaise until it is a spreading consistency. Taste and if it isn't sweet or peppery enough add more sweet & low or more white pepper. Store in refrigerator. It will be better after it has a chance to blend. Note: you really need to use the white pepper. I have a container and making pimento cheese is actually the only time I use it. It has a different consistency and taste so do it my way this time, please.

Another spreadable that I want to share is so simple and yet so good. I don't remember who gave me this recipe but thank you if you are a Taste Buddie reader.

Cucumber Dip

1 8 oz. pkg. of cream cheese, softened
2 cucumbers, peeled, chopped or 1 English cucumber peeled and chopped
1 cup mayonnaise
1 Tbs. fresh lemon juice
½ - 1 tsp dried dill (to taste)
½ tsp hot sauce

Beat softened cream cheese and stir in remaining ingredients. Chill. Makes three cups and it is great on crackers or small cucumber sandwich. I served this last week to my Bunco group and they raved about it.

One of my spreadable favorites is my Chutney Cheese Spread. Now stick with me if it doesn't sound like something you'd make. When you do you'll see how easy and good it is and it'll go on your favorite list too.

Chutney Cheese Spread

2 (8 0z.) pks. Cream cheese, softened
½ cup Major Grey's chutney (hot)
1 cup toasted almonds
2 tsp. curry powder
½ tsp. Dry mustard

Place almonds on a cookie sheet and toast in 350 degree oven for about 15 minutes. Shake the pan about half way through. Almonds should be lightly brown.

Mix all ingredients except ½ cup of toasted almonds. When well blended roll into a ball then roll in the remaining almonds. Refrigerate until ready to serve on crackers.

I'm sure you've had the ham and cheese sandwiches that you find often at parties. You may even have your own rendition. If not, here is mine.

Mini Ham and Cheese Sandwiches

1 pkg. thawed Sister Shubert yeast rolls or Hawaiian rolls
½ lb. thinly sliced deli ham
6-8 slices of deli Swiss cheese

Mix the following and set aside:

¾ stick of butter, melted
2 tsp. mustard
1 tsp. worchestershire sauce
2 tsp. powdered garlic

Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

Carefully, using a long knife, slice the rolls in half and try and keep the rolls intact and attached to each other. Spread the butter mixture on bottom half and then layer ham and cheese. Place top half of rolls and brush the rest of the butter mixture on top. Cover with foil and bake at 400 degrees until the rolls are hot and lightly brown. (This baking may take 15-20 minutes depending on your oven.)

Hopefully I've given you some inspirations to make ahead so that when that walk or rocking time on the porch hits you, you'll have options to make quick snacks to go along with that iced tea, lemonade or other tall beverage. Go enjoy our beautiful weather and awesome surroundings.

DEAR ABBY

RV road trip with pre-teens is no vacation for teacher

DEAR ABBY: I'm the youngest of four sisters. The oldest sister is the only one who has children – three girls under the age of 12. I'm a high school teacher who works about 60 hours a week during the school year between teaching, grading, attending meetings, completing paperwork, tutoring before and after school, and planning lessons.

My second-oldest sister wants to plan an elaborate road trip this summer that involves renting an RV and driving cross-country with our nieces to visit Disneyland. She feels that since I have the summer off, I should be more than happy to go on this trek.

I love my students and nieces, but by the time summer rolls around, the last thing I want to do is spend a week or more in a camper with kids. I told her I have some summer training to go to, which is true, hoping she would drop the subject. She hasn't. I don't want my sister's or my nieces' feelings to be hurt, but I flat-out don't want to do this. What can I tell them? – SWEATING IT OUT IN THE SOUTH

DEAR SWEATING IT OUT: Forgive me if this is blasphemy, but Disneyland isn't everyone's cup of tea. That's why it's time to tell your sisters the truth. You deserve a child-free summer break if you want one, and that fact should not be regarded as a personal insult to anyone.

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have worked with a woman for a little more than a year. Her daughter is having a baby. I have never met her daughter, but hear only negative stories about her and her boyfriend, who both live with this co-worker.

Today in the mail I received an invitation to this daughter's baby shower. I was told by another co-worker that we all (seven office people) are invited, although none of us have ever met her. I am surprised the woman I work with would do this. Does it seem strange to you, and should I feel guilty because I have no desire to go? Because of the invite, I feel I "should" give a small gift, but I'm sort of miffed about it. If you were me, how would you handle this? – CONFUSED CO-WORKER

DEAR CONFUSED: The daughter and her boyfriend are living with your co-worker because they don't have enough money to live on their own. I don't know the reason for that, and neither do you. It's fair to assume that they will need things for their baby. I agree that by sending you an invitation to the shower, she has put you on the spot, but I can understand her doing it.

If I were you, in the interest of solidarity as well as charity, I would send a small baby gift – or consider a group gift with your other co-workers. Because I had heard nothing positive about the mother-to-be, I would send with it my regrets for being unable to attend.

DEAR ABBY: After I retired, I wrote a book. I sent a copy to old friends at no charge. Upon receipt, they gave lukewarm thanks and criticized me for not personalizing it by handwriting a few words to them.

How should I deal with these people who often tend to criticize? – PUZZLED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR PUZZLED: Some people feel that an inscription in a book makes it a more personal gift. That said, "deal" with it by accepting the criticism graciously and offer to autograph your book for them if they will return it to you.

HOROSCOPES | THE LAST WORD BY EUGENIA LAST

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Use your finesse, insight and ingenuity to redirect any negativity that comes your way. Be ready to outsmart anyone trying to discount what you have to say or offer. ★★

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't let impulsiveness take over when you should be refining your mental, physical and emotional health. Look for a way to improve your lifestyle and make an effort to bring about changes that will curb poor habits ★★★★★

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emotional manipulation works some of the time, but if you try to put something over on someone you've known for a long time, you'll find it difficult to get your way. ★★★

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Know what you want ahead of time and don't go into battle unprepared. Anger solves nothing, but practicality, common sense and fairness will help you put any situation that irks you to rest quickly and without resentment. ★★★

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emotional ups and downs will leave you wondering if you are on the right path. Tame impulsiveness before you take on something that will be impossible to finish. ★★★

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Physical improvements will pay off. A short trip or signing up for an interesting course or retreat will open a window of opportunity you didn't expect. Romance will encourage a commitment and greater emotional stability. ★★★★★

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take your time and consider the best way to handle a domestic or relationship matter. An impulsive response will add stress to a situation that needs a chance to mellow out before a rational solution can be put in place. ★★

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't let impulse get the better of you. Remain calm, take care of your responsibilities and look at all sides of a situation before you judge what others do or say. Everyone has a right to an opinion, including you. ★★★★

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The way you earn your living may be jeopardized if you haven't been paying attention or keeping up with the latest technology or trends. Do your due diligence and pick up as much information as possible to protect your future. ★★★

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make a commitment to yourself as well as to your loved ones to do your best and to take better care of your health and your emotional attitude. Ward off negativity by avoiding people who tend to bring you down. ★★★

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A change of plans can be expected. Don't count on someone to make changes or alter his or her opinion. Protect against unnecessary arguments and being taken for granted. ★★★

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If you are too easygoing, someone will take advantage of you. Only sign up to do the things you think you might enjoy or benefit from doing. Someone you love will need reassurance. Plan something special as a token of appreciation. ★★★★

SOLUTION:

Caribbean Hot-Pot Broth with Papaya Pica Sauce

Throw a Hot-Pot Dinner Party

FAMILY FEATURES

Heat up your next get-together by inviting family and friends over to try a DIY trend, the hot-pot party. It can be easy to prep and your guests can enjoy cooking and customizing their own meals.

First, prepare a rich, flavored broth and serve steaming-hot in a slow cooker or multi-cooker. Next, offer a selection of meat, seafood and veggies for dunking. Cook for a few minutes then garnish with sauces and various toppings to match individual tastes.

A traditional East Asian hot-pot broth is flavored with beef stock, soy sauce, chilies, ginger and garlic. Try a Mexican-inspired version by serving a spiced chicken broth with ancho chile pepper, cumin and oregano, or offer a taste of the Caribbean with a coconut milk broth and fresh papaya pica sauce.

Learn more about this hot-pot trend and all the latest flavor trends in McCormick's 2018 Flavor Forecast at FlavorForecast.com.

Caribbean Hot-Pot Broth with Papaya Pica Sauce

Prep time: 45 minutes
Cook time: 3 hours
Servings: 10

Caribbean Hot-Pot Broth:

- 2 pounds smoked ham hocks
- 2 cups sliced yellow onions
- 1 cup diagonally sliced carrots
- 1/2 cup diagonally sliced celery
- 8 1/4 cups water, divided
- 1 container (32 ounces) Kitchen Basics Original Chicken Stock
- 1 whole chile pepper, such as Scotch bonnet or habanero
- 2 McCormick Bay Leaves
- 1 teaspoon McCormick Thyme Leaves
- 1 teaspoon McCormick Ground Turmeric
- 1/2 teaspoon ground allspice
- 1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper
- salt, to taste
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 2 cans (13.66 ounces each) Thai Kitchen Coconut Milk
- 2 tablespoons lime juice

Papaya Pica Sauce:

- 3 cups cubed fresh papaya
- 1/2 cup cider vinegar
- 1/4 cup chopped, seeded Scotch bonnet (chile pepper)
- 1/4 cup chopped yellow onion
- 1/4 cup yellow mustard
- 1 teaspoon sea salt
- 1/2 teaspoon ground allspice
- 1/2 teaspoon McCormick Garlic Powder
- 1/2 teaspoon McCormick Ground Ginger
- 1/4 teaspoon McCormick Ground Cloves
- 1 pound uncooked bay scallops
- 1 pound uncooked shrimp, peeled and deveined
- cooked rice
- toasted shredded coconut (optional)
- fresh red or green bell pepper slices (optional)

To make broth: Place ham hocks, onion, carrots and celery in 6-quart stockpot. Cook on medium heat 5-6 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add 8 cups water, chicken stock, chile pepper, bay leaves, thyme leaves, turmeric, allspice and pepper. Add salt, to taste. Bring to boil. Reduce heat to low; cover and simmer 1 hour, skimming fat occasionally.

Remove cover and simmer 30 minutes, skimming fat occasionally. Remove ham hocks and skim fat. In small bowl, whisk cornstarch and remaining water. Add to pot with coconut milk. Cook on medium heat 30 minutes. Skim fat. Stir lime juice into broth.

To make Papaya Pica Sauce: In food processor on high speed, process papaya, vinegar, chile pepper, onion, mustard, salt, allspice, garlic powder, ginger and cloves until smooth. Transfer to medium saucepan. Bring to boil. Reduce heat to low; simmer, uncovered, 10-15 minutes. Pour into medium bowl.

To serve, pour broth into heated 6-quart electric slow cooker or hot pot. Cook shrimp and scallops in broth about 5 minutes, or until cooked through, stirring occasionally.

Place some rice in bowl then ladle broth and seafood over top. Stir in Papaya Pica Sauce and top with shredded coconut and pepper slices, if desired.

Dark Chocolate Souffle

Better, Healthier Baking

FAMILY FEATURES

Olive oil is a flavorful and versatile cooking oil that is often trusted in popular cooking methods such as sauteing, stir-frying, dressing, marinating and grilling. It can also earn your trust when it comes to baking.

With seven olive oil varieties to fit almost any need, each Filippo Berio olive oil has its own distinct color, aroma and flavor characteristics. Among those seven, the Extra Light Olive Oil offers a delicate aroma and subtle flavor that can complement your favorite baked goods. Its high smoke point helps keep those goodies moist, and with strong flavors like chocolate, it also lets the sweetness come through.

Additionally, it provides high levels of mono-unsaturated fat ("good" fat) and low levels of saturated fat ("bad" fat), making it a more nutritional choice when compared to butter or margarine. Because you need less olive oil than butter in baking, you'll save calories as well.

One easy way to incorporate olive oil in your baked goods is during the prep work: where recipes call for buttering or flouring pans, instead brush the pan with olive oil and dust with flour for the same effect as butter.

Dark Chocolate Souffle

Prep time: 10 minutes
Cook time: 18 minutes
Servings: 2

- 1/2 tablespoon Filippo Berio Extra Light Olive Oil, plus additional for coating pan
- 1/4 cup granulated sugar, plus additional for coating pan
- 4 ounces 70 percent cocoa dark chocolate
- 1 ounce 30 percent heavy cream
- 3 egg whites
- 2 egg yolks
- pinch of cream of tartar

Heat oven to 375 F. Grease two 6-ounce ramekins with olive oil and dust with sugar.

In double boiler, melt chocolate, 1/2 tablespoon olive oil and cream; let cool. Using electric mixer, beat egg whites until soft peaks form.

Whisk egg yolks into cooled chocolate mixture; fold in egg whites, 1/4 cup sugar and cream of tartar. Pour into prepared ramekins; bake 15 minutes.

Tips: This recipe can be easily doubled. Garnish with fresh berries, if desired.
