Mayor denies wrongdoing

Report: Cain suspended for falsifying report

CHIPLEY — Chipley Mayor Linda Cain denied falsifying Florida Department of Correction records in a news conference Friday morning at Chipley City Hall.

"There was no intent on my part to falsify the reports in question.

LINDA CAIN

In the course of the investigation, I answered each question posed to me the only way I knew, honestly and truthfully," Cain said in a prepared statement. "My friends know that's who I am. I cannot account for the interpretation of the answers given."

Cain said she intends to seek re-election as mayor.

"I look forward to continuing my service to the city of Chipley, its employees and its citizens," she said. "Over the past 24 years, I have strived to do what is best for Chipley, and to serve the city with honesty and integrity. I will continue to do so."

Cain received a 80-hour suspension from her job with the Florida Department of Correction in Jackson County for, among other things, "falsification of reports or records," "conduct which violates state statute" and "failure to answer truthfully questions related to the performance of official duties," according to a DOC report released April 27.

The findings of the report were said to be sustained by the DOC Office of the Inspector General's administrative investigation report and the addendum report.

The report details an investigation into misdeeds at Jackson Correctional Institution in Malone uncovered an affair between the

Caryville joins WCHD against candy-flavored tobacco

By CECILIA SPEARS

cspears@chipleypaper.com

CARYVILLE — Representatives from the Washington County Health Department and volunteers from Tobacco Free Washington County visited the Town of Caryville during their regularly scheduled meeting on Tuesday, May 8 to pass a resolution disagreeing on the local sale of candy-flavored tobacco targeting youth in Caryville.

Guest speaker and volunteer for Tobacco Free Washington County Milton Brown came before the council to answer any questions and address any concerns the council may have about the resolution.

"We've got a small town and smoking is bad but imagine the revenue that it would be taking away from us," said Chairman Henry Chambers.

Brown assured that it wasn't a law that was being passed, just a request that the local convenient store not sale candy-flavored tobacco.

"This is just requesting that the store not sale candy-flavored tobacco, excluding menthol, which is blatantly targeting our youth towards tobacco products," Brown said. "This is just a resolution saying you disagree with what they're doing."

Town Attorney Lyndia Spears concurred that it wasn't a law-binding contract, just a request.

"It won't prevent them from selling it, it's just the town saying they disagree with these tobacco companies targeting children," Spears said.

The Town approved of the resolution.

Chambers then informed the council that there was a light out at the basketball court and that Gulf Power would need to be notified to see about replacing it.

Spears informed the council that they have yet to hear back from Gulf Power.

During the previous meeting April 10, Spears reported she was able to talk with a representative from Gulf Power about the town's proposal.

Caryville Town Council approved to pursue a settlement with Gulf Power during their regularly scheduled meeting March 13 after a lumber company recently employed by the town cut down trees on land owned by Gulf Power.

"The Town of Caryville's land borders Gulf Power's land and the man we hired went too far when he was cutting," said Caryville Town Attorney Lyndia Spears. "Unfortunately we are unable to see how much money he received for the amount of trees he cut and if that money was included to the city when he paid for the trees."

Spears said that Gulf Power estimated an amount by the stumps left on their land, but instead of charging the town with the amount they would usually receive for their trees from their contractor, which would've been estimated at over $9,000 and decided to go with what the town would have received, which is $5,272.

Harmon seeks seat in District 5

From Staff Reports

CHIPLEY — John Harmon announced his candidacy for the District 5 position on the Washington County Board of Commissioners on Thursday.

JOHN HARMON

A lifelong resident of Washington County, Harmon said he has deep family ties to the Orange Hill area, through Oscar Harmon. He is president of H & R Construction and is an avid farmer. Harmon said he cares about the little man.

"Like a farmer, I want to sustain positive growth for District 5 and Washington County as a whole," Harmon said in a news release. "I plan to use tools available on the county and state level to attract companies to our area.

"It is no secret we are ripe for development, I want to make sure it's the type of people want, paying livable wages and shortening commutes. Ultimately this will keep more tax revenue and business dollars within our county, while lessening travel expenses on commuters," Harmon said.

A county the size of Washington County, with a 10.9 percent unemployment rate, needs at least one more major employer to move within our county, Harmon said. Land abatement, tax cuts, an eager work force are all incentives for employers to relocate here, he said, and House Bill 7087 and HB 7029 will reinforce county initiative on the state level.

"I started work at a young age on the family farm with my father, Joseph Harmon, a World War II vet, and my eight siblings," Harmon said. "I graduated Chipley High and then went to Santa Fe Community College in Gainesville.

"A father and no stranger to hard work, I bring dedication, patience, and the business savvy (needed) to be an effective problem solver," Harmon said.

"A part of problem-solving is transparency — in this way you can gain as much feedback from citizens as possible. Coupled with public participation in the civic process, this will allow for better service to all of the citizens of Washington County," he said. "I know our triumphs, I know our customs and I know our determination. Let's work together."

City Council hears harassment complaint

By RANDAL SEYLER
638-0212| @WCN_HCT
rseyler@chipleypaper.com

CHIPLEY — Police harassment of the black community needs to stop, a Chipley resident told the City Council on Tuesday.

"For some reason, there is a problem between our community and the police," Dorothy Harper said. She said drivers are being pulled over by Chipley police when they are coming home from working on the night shift and said it was profiling.

"One lady got pulled over, taken out of her car and her car searched," Harper said. "I'm glad that wasn't me, because I'd be in jail. No one is going to search my car."

Harper said some people are afraid to speak to the council about the police.

"I'm glad Chief (Kevin) Crews is here, maybe he can talk to his officers," Harper said. "The police have other things to do besides harassing people."

Harper said the only trouble she had ever had with the law was the occasional speeding ticket.

She said another young person driving through the neighborhood was also pulled over for no apparent reason. "People shouldn't have to be living like that."

Mayor Pro-Tem Karen Rustin asked Harper to sit down with Crews and City Administrator Dan Miner to discuss the problem.

Mayor Linda Cain was not in attendance at Tuesday's meeting.

Following Harper's address to the council, Rustin adjourned the meeting.

Council Member Roger Sloan objected to the sudden adjournment. "I have something I want to say," Sloan said.

"I've already adjourned the meeting," Rustin replied. Rustin asked at the start of the meeting if any of the council members wanted to be added to the agenda.

"The mayor usually asks each council member if they have something they want to say before adjourning," Sloan said.

"I'm not the mayor," Rustin replied. "I'm the mayor pro-tem.

warden and a nurse, doctored, deleted and shredded reports, negligent care of inmates, lies to investigators, and a host of other problems.

The investigation ultimately led to the termination of Warden Ted Jeter and Assistant Warden Carolann Bracewell.

"I have been told by the Department of Corrections that this unfortunate situation is behind us and we are moving forward. I am still proudly employed with the Department of Corrections and look forward to returning to work on May 18," Cain said in her statement.

Cain, a senior health services administrator with the DOC, submitted two incident reports that were found not to have been created on her work station but on Bracewell's work station, according to the report.

The report states that Cain signed both of the incident reports on July 25-26, 2011, the dates typed on the reports. Jeter's signature and handwritten dates were the same as Cain's, indicating the reports were reviewed by Jeter the same day they were created by Cain.

According to the investigation report, "it was determined that the reports were not created until Aug. 11, 2011, it was not possible for Health Service Administrator Cain to have written and signed, nor Warden Jeter to have reviewed and signed, copies of the reports prior to that date."

The report states Cain falsified reports by providing false information and a false date on an incident report, that she knowingly submitted inaccurate or untruthful information when she provided false information and a false date on the incident report, that her conduct violates state statute due to her falsifying a report and submitting inaccurate information on an official document, and for "conduct unbecoming for committing the aforementioned violations."

"On July 25-26, 2011, I prepared, dated, and signed two incident reports regarding health issues of two inmates," Cain said in her statement. "The information I provided in the reports was correct and accurate to the best of my knowledge. These reports were sent to the warden's office where they were processed. When I signed the completed reports, I used the date they were originally created by me. The information contained in the warden's reports was the same as prepared by me. No changes had been made. The reports reflected the situation as I reported on July 25-26, 2011."

According to the addendum investigation report, an allegation that Cain failed "to answer truthfully questions related to the performance of official duties" was sustained, based on the information gathered during this follow-up investigation.

On April 13, Cain said in a sworn interview conducted by Inspector Louis Cordova, that she was instructed by Jeter to submit the incident report about the construction of medical bins, while in her initial interview with inspectors, Cain said she was not directed by anybody to submit the incident report related to construction of medical bins.

Jeter instructed Cain to write the information in the incident report about a neurological protocol form being absent. Cain said the form was not in the bins, although it was in the file book and could have been copied, according to the report.

Cain said neither Jeter nor Bracewell instructed her on what to say during an interview.

According to the report, problems began in July 2011 when a nurse, Tara West, allegedly failed to provide proper medical care for an inmate. The inmate ultimately was taken to a hospital to be treated. However, details of the inmate's medical issue and the result of the alleged failure to provide proper care are not public record and have not been released by the DOC.

A second inmate was given negligent care by nurses Chastity Sandusky, Mary Tanner, Mark Starkey and Sheila Hines, according to the report.

It was during and shortly after these incidents that reports about the negligent care began disappearing, being deleted and routed outside the normal channels straight to Jeter and Bracewell in order to keep certain employees "out of the loop," the report states. Reports also were shredded, according to the report.

An investigation into the initial negligent care problems recommended the prison's physician, Dr. Efiong Andem, be terminated. The doctor is no longer employed by the prison, although DOC could not say whether he was terminated or resigned.

Along with the termination of Bracewell and Jeter and the suspension of Cain, Lt. Lisa Lawrence was suspended for 56 hours, and Capt. Eddie Jones was suspended for 56 hours.

Florida Freedom Newspapers S. Brady Calhoun contributed to this report.

Since the town council agreed that they didn't authorize for the contractor to cut down the trees, the council approved to pursue only paying half of the $5,272, which is $2,686.

The council is also going to see about paying the amount to Gulf Power in payments while looking into getting the contractor to pay the other half.

"Just going to court alone would cost over $4,000 in legal fees," said Spears. "It would be best at this point to minimize the damages as much as possible."

She said she spoke with the representative and the representative said that he would present it to his superiors and he would contact her with a reply.

Also during the last meeting the Town approved of the request of owner of Paron's Produce at Caryville Flee Market, Paron Beeco, to pay half of the $250 to place a light pole at the flee market so they could have power.

"We're still willing to pay half if you pay the other half," Chambers said.

Beeco informed the council that he was having trouble getting the other three venders to pay their portion.

"They just don't seem to understand where the money's going and I can't get them to understand it's so that we can have electricity at the flee market," said Beeco. "So as soon as I can get them to give me the money I'll be down here to pay."

Chamber said that the offer still stands because the request has already been approved and they await payment.

Resident Bobby Hipburn was present to inform the council that his water bill had drastically spiked the previous month and that the records would indicate that he normally has the minimum required payment every month.

"We checked and there isn't a leak, we just think it might be because it's an old meter skipping," Hipburn said. "I just want you to look into it and credit me the extra money on the next bill."

The council agreed to credit Hipburn's account for the next billing cycle.

The next regularly scheduled meeting is scheduled for 6 p.m. Tuesday, June 12 at the Caryville Town Hall.

There's a great deal to be said for the benefits of physical exercise. We're often reminded about the importance of staying physically fit, especially as we begin aging. There are also mental exercises designed to keep the mind sharp.

But what about spiritual exercises?

Many religious traditions offer spiritual exercises, such as meditation, chanting, prayers, devotions or the reading of sacred texts. Just as physical exercise builds up the body, spiritual exercises can fortify the soul.

One spiritual exercise that continues to grow in popularity is centering prayer. Centering prayer is part of the Christian contemplative tradition, but people of other faiths have found it useful, as well. Some people equate meditation with Eastern religious traditions, not realizing that Christians have used it for centuries as a spiritual practice. Spiritual exercises are nothing new. The spiritual exercises of St. Ignatius of Loyola, for instance, were composed in the 1500s and are still in use today.

Here's a rather over-simplified explanation of centering prayer: Select a special word of your own choosing. Don't tell anyone what it is, but keep it as your own private word. This word represents your desire to be open to the presence of the Divine. Some people choose a sacred name (Jesus, God and so forth), while others choose words that hold spiritual meaning for them (Love, Holiness, Yes, Silence, Spirit, Light etc). It can be any word you like. Sit comfortably in a relaxed position, with the spine erect. Close your eyes, relax deeply, and feel yourself in the holy presence. Don't speak. Remain immersed in silence. Many people spend a great deal of time talking during prayer, but do very little actual listening. Stay open to God. If thoughts come, and they will, use your secret word. Don't speak it aloud, but merely think it. That word is your anchor, centering you once again in God's presence. One thing I found helpful during a centering prayer session was being advised that thoughts are like toy boats passing beneath a bridge. Let them float past. It would be absurd to jump off the bridge and try to ride a toy boat, and it's just as absurd to get attached to passing thoughts. The thought that your left elbow itches, that you have a meeting tomorrow morning, or that you could really go for a Caesar salad may very well float by, but you don't have to jump on board. Your connection to God is what's important here, not the random thoughts.

Part of developing a spiritual exercise is to do it intentionally. After all, one doesn't develop a physical exercise plan by doing things completely at random. You wouldn't lift a couple of weights and then haphazardly do a pushup, followed by some jumping jacks. You'd develop an orderly and specific plan and stick to it, at least if you wanted to see actual results.

Think about what kind of spiritual exercises you might find meaningful. It could involve setting aside a special time to read scripture, agreeing to pray at a certain time of the day, or just taking some time out to be mindful of spiritual things. I know someone who turned a simple observation of the sun into a spiritual exercise. He would step outside at dawn, noon and sundown every day and meditate upon the sun's travels across the sky. His thoughts naturally turned toward the unseen force behind the sun's movements. Sometimes, spirituality can be as simple as directing one's attention to the commonplace. That's one of the reasons breathing exercises are popular in several different religious traditions. The sun above us, or our very breath, are nothing short of miraculous. Yet, we're so busy running around worrying about trivia that we scarcely notice them. We take them for granted. Nearly anything you're worrying about at the moment pales in comparison to the existence of your breath, your heartbeat, or even the sun. If you think your breath isn't worth paying attention to, just imagine where you'd be without it. So even being mindful of the very air you're taking in can constitute a spiritual exercise.

Sometimes, physical movement can be incorporated into spiritual exercises. Many people have discovered the benefits of sacred dance, while others have found refuge in the spiritual aspects of yoga, Tai Chi, Falun Dafa, qigong and other systems. Many of these practices have their roots in Eastern culture, but are now widely practiced across the U.S. One may merely regard them as a set of physical movements, but quite a few people also reap spiritual benefits from them.

Another spiritual exercise is saying novena prayers. A novena is a nine-day prayer cycle. It's an interesting exercise, because it forces one to actually think about praying in a sequence. It's not a one-time prayer that one walks away from and forgets. The idea is to return to it for nine consecutive days. Many people associate novenas with Catholicism, but anyone can pray them. There are many different types of pre-written novena prayers to choose from, such as the Novena to the Holy Ghost or the All Souls Novena. These prayers can easily be found online.

Much like developing a physical exercise routine, it may take a bit of time to pin down exactly what you wish to achieve and then find a set of exercises that will help toward that goal. But many people have found spiritual exercises helpful. Just as nobody wants physical muscles to atrophy, getting out of shape spiritually isn't a good idea, either. Like physical exercise, one can start at any point. Millions of Americans came to realize that they didn't have to be as physically fit as the late Jack LaLanne in order to exercise with him on television. Whatever your physical or spiritual level may be, there's always a chance to expand capabilities and push toward new growth. So the next time you're out getting a little exercise, don't forget to get some exercise for the spirit, as well.

Chipley team competes in robotics event

Special To The News

MARIANNA — Once again the hardwood floor was alive with competition at the old Marianna High School Gym on May 1. This competitive event was the fifth annual Robotics Competition sponsored by the Chipola Regional Workforce Development Board.

Students from the 5 counties that make up the CRWDB, Holmes, Washington, Jackson, Calhoun and Liberty were represented by 22 different teams. Each of the teams used robot kits originally supplied by the CRWDB. Although the kits were the same, the contest saw 22 uniquely designed robots in the competition.

The robotics portion of the contest consisted of teams competing head to head in one of three arenas. In three-minute rounds, the teams were challenged to lift, carry and deposit round balls and small barrels into cylinders of various heights and with different scoring values.

Each of the teams went head to head for the highest scores that were used for rankings in the playoff.

The final competition saw the Marianna High School team named Robotic Unicorn Death Squad, take on the Chipley High School Team Gearatio, with the Marianna team being victorious and finishing in first place. Gearatio placed second, Optimus from Altha High School placed third and Gods of the Arena from Holmes County High School placed fourth.

The teams also documented the development, building and testing of their robots and submitteda log book for judging. The Log Book contest required the team members to face a panel of judges and answer questions about the development of the robot and the challenges they faced.

In the Log Book Competition, the winning team was The Shoal from Altha High School, followed in second place by Chipley High School's Gearatio and finishing third was Optimus from Altha High. The Chipley High's team Dream Team received the Sportsmanship Award for their overall sportsmanship and positive attitude during the contest.

Richard Williams, executive director of the Chipola Workforce Board said, "This was our fifth contest and we just continue to be amazed at the creativity and problem solving ability of our local high school students. These kids are our future workforce and we are so pleased with the way our local schools have used this contest to teach these students lessons that will help them as they move from school to work."

In addition to students in the contest the competition was viewed by young students from the Jackson County Early Education Center. These young students were excited by the competition and added to the overall excitement of the contest.

Several of the teachers commented on how much the students looked forward to the competition and were already talking about the next upcoming competition.
