I think 21 years old is the age for me. I felt I had come of age and actually was considered an adult with all the rights and privileges that come with the designation. I must say, there is still so much to experience and learn and I am in my seventh decade.

Greg Young

John "JJ" Kenney recently took over as chairman of the Citrus County Commission.

Commission chairman JJ Kenney plans for year

CHRIS VAN ORMER
Staff writer

After three years in the District 2 seat on the Citrus County Board of County Commissioners, John "JJ" Kenney has moved to the chairmanship to steer county government in recovery from a year when ad valorem revenue declined through lowered property values and the decisions of Duke Energy, the largest private enterprise taxpayer, leading the board to increase the millage rate by 30 percent and impose a fee for fire services.

Kenney comes from a background of nearly 23 years in the U.S. Marine Corps. He describes how retirement bored him, his desire to serve and a glimpse of his goals for the year ahead.

"I was retired for about two years. I did the normal stuff a retiree does — the day trips, we did the cruises, I did the gardening and I found it absolutely boring."

CHRONICLE: How did you choose to come to Citrus County?

KENNEY: We had retired to New Jersey from the Marine Corps. I had a couple of issues and (my wife) was concerned about my well-being. So she said, "Let's go to Florida and live on your retirement."

I was retired for about two years. I did the normal stuff a retiree does — the day trips, we did the cruises, I did the gardening and I found it absolutely boring.

2014 to bring higher power bills

PAT FAHERTY
Staff writer

Residential customers of Duke Energy Florida and Withlacoochee River Electric Cooperative will be paying more for power starting in January.

After enjoying an average 6 percent rate decrease for 2013, household power costs for Duke customers will be going up about 8 percent in 2014.

In November, the Florida Public Service Commission set recovery charges for Duke and three other investor-owned utilities. The new rates take effect January.

According to the PSC, the majority of charges are related to fuel and included in the fuel charge on customers' bills.

In its announcement, the PSC explained that, by state statute and commission policy, utilities may recover certain expenses from customers. The expenses are adjusted annually. Duke may recover its costs for fuel and purchased power and meeting conservation and environmental requirements.

Environmental requirement costs include environmental controls at two coal units at the Crystal River Energy Complex and the conversion of the Anclote Power Plant from oil to cleaner-burning natural gas.

According to the PSC, the majority of charges are related to fuel and included in the fuel charge on customers' bills.

Other approved charges are included in the energy charge, $40.77, which also covers Duke's base rate charge and PSC-approved nuclear cost recovery charges of $16.44. A household power bill also includes the customer charge and gross receipts tax.

While fuel is one of largest power bill components, by law the company cannot make any profit off that part of the bill. The PSC approval included Duke's recovery of about $33 million of unrecovered fuel costs for 2013.

A Duke residential customer using 1,000 kilowatt hours per month is currently paying $116.06. Starting in January, this will increase to $125.20, a $9.23 change.

Duke spokesman Sterling Ivy confirmed the 2014 rate, which is slightly higher than the company-projected $8.24 announced in August.

Customers of Withlacoochee Electric Cooperative can also expect a rate hike in January. According to the utility's website, the residential rate based on 1,000 kilowatt hours will be $123.68, an increase of $3.70 from the current rate of $119.98.

NYC train derailment kills 4, hurts more than 60

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A New York City commuter train rounding a riverside curve derailed Sunday, killing four people and injuring more than 60 in a crash that threw some riders from toppling cars and swiftly raised questions about whether excessive speed, mechanical problems or human error could have played a role.

Some of the roughly 150 passengers on the early morning Metro-North train from Poughkeepsie to Manhattan were jolted from sleep around 7:20 a.m. to screams and the frightening sensation of their compartment rolling over on a bend in the Bronx where the Hudson and Harlem rivers meet. When the motion stopped, all seven cars and the locomotive had lurched off the rails, and the lead car was only inches from the water. It was the latest accident in a troubled year for the nation's second-biggest commuter railroad, which had never experienced passenger death in an accident in its 31-year history.

Joel Zaritsky was dozing as he traveled to a dental convention aboard the train. He woke up to feel his car overturning several times.

Citrus canker in Panhandle

Officials warn gardeners of citrus tree disease

Associated Press

GULF BREEZE — A highly contagious disease that could radically damage citrus tree growth has been found in the Florida Panhandle, agriculture officials said.

The first case of citrus canker in northwest Florida was recently confirmed in Santa Rosa County, the Pensacola News Journal reported. The disease is transmitted by a bacterial pathogen and harms healthy citrus trees, causing fruit to drop prematurely. It has previously been seen in south and central Florida.

Blake Thaxton, a commercial horticulture agent with the Santa Rosa County Extension Agency, said it's unlikely there is just one Panhandle case of the disease.

"We're pretty sure that there's more out there," Thaxton said.

County officials are working to schedule a removal day for infected plants or a similar effort to stop the spread of the disease, Thaxton said.

Signs of the citrus canker include the presence of lesions on the upper and lower surfaces of the leaves or fruit. The lesions are raised and usually surrounded by yellow halos. Any residents who suspect their trees have a canker infection should call the Division of Plant Industry's Helpline Center at 888-397-1517.

Thaxton advised gardeners not to try to remove infected plants. Citrus canker can spread through the wind, rain and via people on their hands, clothes and tools.

"If you move it or cut it down yourself and put it out by the road, it's just going to spread it quicker," he said. "Every car that drives by can pick it up and move it to another location. It's better to just leave it now before we have the proper protocol on how to remove it."

Gardeners are also advised to wash their hands with soap and water for 20 seconds or more to eliminate bacteria on the skin and use alcohol-based hand sanitizers. Any tools that come into contact with citrus trees should be disinfected with a solution of household bleach and water.

If the disease establishes itself in the area by spring, hobby-gardeners may be unable to grow the more susceptible species of citrus altogether.

"Citrus as we know it will never be the same," Thaxton said. "We'll always have this problem."

Puerto Ricans want equality back home

Associated Press

Puerto Ricans are U.S. citizens by birth, but because the island is only a territory, its residents can vote for president only if they move to a state.

MIAMI — Puerto Rican attorney Iara Rodriguez waved campaign signs and cheered at the 2012 Democratic Convention as President Barack Obama was nominated. But the delegate's euphoria faded when she returned home and, like everyone else living in Puerto Rico, could only watch as the rest of the country voted for its commander in chief.

By January, she had moved to Orlando, joining a record number of Puerto Ricans who have left the island in recent years — more than 60,000 in 2012 — the majority landing in Florida. Most are fleeing Puerto Rico's economic crisis, yet their presence on the mainland is drawing newfound attention to an age-old question back home of whether Puerto Rico should become the 51st state, remain a territory or become independent.

A loose coalition of civic leaders in Florida and on the island is seeking to leverage the state's growing Puerto Rican presence to turn this issue into something the rest of Americans can easily understand: a fight for equality and the right to vote. Puerto Ricans are U.S. citizens by birth, but because the island is only a territory, its residents can vote for president only if they move to a state.

"It's a citizenship issue. It's like when women weren't able to vote, when African-Americans weren't able to vote," Rodriguez said. "One of the reasons that my husband and I moved here to Florida was to not feel like a second-class citizen."

Florida is home to nearly 1 million Americans of Puerto Rican descent and is fast gaining on New York, which has around 1.2 million, according to the U.S. Census. Statehood advocates are counting on Florida's influence in presidential elections to amplify their message in a way that those in the Democratic stronghold of New York haven't been able to do.

The 3.6 million residents of Puerto Rico pay only Social Security and Medicare taxes to the federal government. They have one member of Congress, but they don't get a vote on the House floor. They also have no say in most federal laws and regulations that govern them.

In a 2012 nonbinding referendum, just over half of voters rejected the island's territorial status for the first time. In a follow-up question, over 60 percent of those who answered said they favored statehood over partial or outright independence.

For Puerto Rico to become a state, a bill would have to pass Congress, which can't happen without significant GOP support. But many in the GOP are unenthused about creating a new state with the population of Connecticut that they fear could add two Democratic senators, up to five House members and seven electoral votes for Democrats.

So far, all 37 states that have asked to join the union have been accepted. Hawaii earned statehood just two years before Obama was born in Honolulu.

Apply for sheriff's office Citizens' Academy

Special to the Chronicle

Members of the public are encouraged to attend the Citrus County Sheriff's Office Citizens' Academy, a 10-week educational program offered free of charge to all Citrus County residents. The next class begins Jan. 16.

Since its inception in June 1997, more than 2,000 people from all walks of life — students, elected officials, businesspeople, journalists, retirees and volunteers — have taken the time to learn more about the Citrus County Sheriff's Office.

The academy was designed to provide a better understanding of the sheriff's office. Beyond that, the underlying objective is to build a strong partnership between agency personnel and the people they serve.

Lt. Chris Evan, who works with the agency's accreditation process and special projects, is the Citizens' Academy director. Sheriff's office professionals serve as classroom instructors, and each hands-on, interactive session focuses on specific segments of the agency.

The program agenda includes instruction and demonstrations in road patrol, criminal investigations, vice and narcotics, intelligence analysis, the Emergency Operations Center/911, Sheriff's Fire Rescue Division, traffic, aviation, marine, the Sheriff's Special Weapons and Tactics Team (SWAT), K-9 teams, identification and evidence, crime prevention and more.

There is no cost to attend the academy, and classes meet on Thursdays at the Sheriff's Emergency Operations Center in Lecanto. While two classes are offered — an afternoon class, from 1 to 4 p.m., and an evening class, from 6 to 9 p.m., only afternoon classes are available for the session that starts in January. However, another session starts in March in which either afternoon or evening openings are available.

There are scheduled field trips that give participants a chance to interact directly with deputies and communications officers, as well as interactive demonstrations.

Graduates of the class are provided the opportunity to ride a shift with a patrol deputy, a marine deputy, fly in the helicopter during a patrol shift or sit at the communications center with dispatchers.

Applications are available at the Sheriff's Operations Center or any of the agency's community resource offices. Or go to the sheriff's office home page at www.sheriffcitrus.org to print out an application form. Interested candidates also may call 352-341-3457 for information or to have an application mailed to them.

Once they've completed the program successfully, graduates are eligible for membership in the Citizens' Academy Alumni Association. The organization provides continuing education opportunities for alumni members as well as an avenue for fundraisers and special projects that benefit the sheriff's office and the community at large.

Curling with Ferrell, aka Ron Burgundy

WINNIPEG, Manitoba — Will Ferrell, wearing his trademark Ron Burgundy moustache and "Anchorman" outfit, helped open the Canadian Curling trials Sunday.

He even tried his luck on the ice and donned a kilt, to the delight of fans. In speaking with reporters, he said the name Winnipeg was Latin for the small tundra bunny who lives in the hole on the hill.

As for curling jargon, Ferrell said he knows what "hurry hard" means, but uses it mostly when he's stuck in traffic to get the driver in front to start moving.

Ferrell is promoting "Anchorman 2," set for release before Christmas. He was part of the TSN coverage for the opening draw, with eight women's teams vying for an Olympic berth.

Actor Walker dies in fiery crash in LA

LOS ANGELES — Investigators sought to determine the cause of a fiery crash that killed "Fast & Furious" star Paul Walker while the 40-year-old actor's fans erected a makeshift memorial Sunday near where the Porsche he was riding in smashed into a light pole and tree.

Paul Walker

The Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department said speed was a factor in Saturday's one-car crash, though it will take time to determine how fast the car was going.

Because Walker is so closely associated with the underground culture of street racing portrayed in the popular "Fast & Furious" film franchise, the fatal accident had an eerie quality — a tragic end for a Hollywood hero of speed.

The crash also killed Walker's friend and financial adviser Roger Rodas, according to Walker's publicist, Ame Van Iden. She said Walker was a passenger in the car when the two drove away in a 2005 red Porsche Carrera GT from a fundraiser in the community of Valencia, about 30 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles.

Walker left behind two completed films. He stars in the upcoming Hurricane Katrina drama "Hours," which Lionsgate's Pantelion Films is to release Dec. 13. He also stars in "Brick Mansions," a remake of the French action film "District B13" that Relativity plans to release next year.

His "Fast & Furious" co-stars reacted in shock at the actor's death. Vin Diesel posted a photograph of him and Walker arm-in-arm on Instagram with the message: "I am absolutely speechless." Lucadris said on Twitter: "Wherever you blessed your presence you always left a mark, we were like brothers."

Walker is survived by his 15-year-old daughter.

'Catching Fire,' 'Frozen' on top

"The Hunger Games: Catching Fire" and 3-D animated musical "Frozen" dished up box office records over the Thanksgiving holiday.

Lionsgate's sequel earned a prodigious $75 million in its second weekend, while Disney's frosty fete opened with $67 million, according to studio estimates Sunday.

Time to end Duke tax battles

The Duke property tax situation is a mess, to put it politely.

A year ago, the utility refused to pay its full 2012 tax bill, arguing that Property Appraiser Geoff Greene put too high a value on its property. This created a revenue shortfall for the county commission and the school board, and both had to struggle to deal with it.

THE ISSUE:

Duke files another lawsuit over property appraisals.

OUR OPINION:

Time to reach a settlement and end the legal battles.

The utility also sued the property appraiser over the valuation, which led to the county commission and school board having to come up with money to defend the lawsuit, since Greene's office did not have a budget for this expensive litigation.

Lawyers billed almost a half-million dollars in legal fees as the suit has worked its way through the court system, and last spring Greene engaged outside consultants to perform a $330,000 appraisal of Duke's Citrus County properties. The appraisal said the utility property is worth a lot more than the company says it is worth — raising the 2013 tax bill to Duke from $36 million to $54 million, despite the utility taking the nuclear plant out of service.

Earlier this fall, the court removed a substantial underpinning of the 2012 valuation by ruling that $1.3 billion of pollution control should have been appraised at salvage value.

But the lawsuit over the valuation of the rest of the utility's property in 2012 is going forward. A week ago, the utility paid a "good faith" 2013 tax payment of $22.3 million — $3.3 million more than last year — and promptly filed another lawsuit over the 2013 appraisal.

If the current lawsuits continue through the courts, a judge will eventually determine if Greene has fairly valued the utility's property. In the meantime, uncertainty will continue regarding exactly how much the company will pay in taxes, and the litigation will continue to create an adversarial relationship between the county and Duke.

We are not experts in the complex field of determining utility property value, so we cannot judge whether Greene's appraisals are fair or inflated. But we do we have common-sense recommendations for the property appraiser and the commission.

First, Geoff Greene should engage in good-faith negotiations with Duke over valuations, reach a settlement agreement, and put the litigation behind us.

Second, the commission should put the extra money paid in this year's taxes into reserves as a hedge against the uncertainty of future tax revenues.

Protracted litigation has a cost both in dollars and relationships. Saving both is a worthwhile and laudable goal. At some point, the battle between the property appraiser and Duke will end, the company's tax liability will be finally settled, all legitimately due taxes will be paid and the county will know what future tax revenues are likely to be. Everyone will benefit if that is sooner rather than later.

LETTER to the Editor

Say no to Common Core

Recently, Edna Mattos wrote a letter to the editors criticizing Common Core State Standards — the Obama Administration's attempt to set nationwide standards for English, math and science in public schools. Her letter was most informative.

I would add that there is no reason to believe that even a well-intentioned government in far-away Washington could possibly know how to design an academic shoe sized to fit all.

But this administration? With its five-year history of blunders? Add to this, George Will's view.

"There is heated debate about Common Core, whose advocates say that it merely involves national academic targets for primary and secondary education.

OPINIONS INVITED

- The opinions expressed in Chronicle editorials are the opinions of the newspaper's editorial board.
- Viewpoints depicted in political cartoons, columns or letters do not necessarily represent the opinion of the editorial board.

Critics say 'it will inevitably lead to a centrally designed and nationally imposed curriculum.'

Common Core advocates say, in effect: 'If you like your local curriculum, you can keep it. Period.'

"If you believe this, your credulity is impervious to evidence.

"And you probably are a progressive."

I wish I had said that.

Barack Obama in retreat

David M. Shribman
NATIONAL PERSPECTIVE

The health care website is a bomb. Immigration overhaul is looking more and more like a bust. The allies are aggrieved about surveillance issues. Israel feels betrayed on Iran. The first black president didn't even bother to go to Gettysburg, where the 150th anniversary of the most important 270-word speech ever given — the 270 words that welded the nation forever to the all-men-are-created-equal doctrine of the Declaration of Independence — would have given him a respite, and maybe a reset.

What's up with Barack Obama, 44th president of the United States?

Often a president at around this stage of his second term is beset with scandal, but that's not really the case with Obama; even the Benghazi imbroglio may be fading following disclosures suggesting the case against the administration may be a lot less potent than earlier believed. No one seems to be supping at the public trough, or having a headline-ringing affair.

Yet this administration seems to be drowning. And while the speech at Gettysburg that the president didn't make may be a sin of omission — involving words he didn't speak — the Obama presidency seems to be floundering in sins of commission involving its own flood of words.

The words, for example, that said Americans could keep the health care plans they had. The words that asserted the president didn't know his world-leader colleagues were being bugged. The words that argued Israel had little to fear with negotiations with Iran.

But it's not only the words. It's the impression that Russia played the peacemaker in the Middle East, a role we're not accustomed to seeing, and the impression that France is the hard-liner in the conversations with Iran, unusual given the way the words "France" and "appeasement" are ordinarily employed in any sentence that also includes the words "crisis" and "negotiations."

The country just completed a fortnight-long immersion in sadness and solemnity over the death of a president who adjusted the nation's horizons, even as some of his critics thought he was (as Eleanor Roosevelt once put it, bitingly) more profile than courage. This is a critique that Obama might find particularly cutting.

John F. Kennedy and Barack Obama belong to different generations and govern in vastly different times. But the lesson from Kennedy is that he learned lessons.

Today almost everyone acknowledges that the 35th president was breathtakingly unprepared for the White House. An ingénue in foreign policy, a captive of clichés in domestic policy, he stumbled at the Bay of Pigs (four words that almost always are followed by the fifth word, "fiasco"), was humbled at Vienna in his meeting with Nikita Khrushchev ("He savaged me," Kennedy admitted, chillingly), and yet he recovered to avoid nuclear catastrophe the next year during the Cuban Missile Crisis — and perhaps to approach greatness in his last hundred days.

Maybe it started with this, three sentences delivered to James Reston shortly after the meeting with the Soviet leader: "I've got two problems," Kennedy told The New York Times newsman. "First, to figure out why he did it, and in such a hostile way. And second, to figure out what we can do about it."

Published this year, "JFK's Last Hundred Days," by Thurston Clarke, carried this subtitle: "The Transformation of a Man and the Emergence of a Great President." Historians will be debating a century from now whether Kennedy was a great president, but there is little question that in his last year he was a man transformed.

He came to grips with the moral imperatives of the Cold War, finally. He confronted the moral emptiness of mutual assured destruction in nuclear confrontations with the Soviet Union, finally. And in Berlin he used a remarkable speech to harness the enduring and alluring power of freedom, finally.

"(J)ust as ambition and realpolitik had characterized his congressional career and early White House years," Clarke wrote, "morality and emotion tempered his ambitions during his last hundred days."

Obama has conquered the morality part, though many Republicans believe his health care overhaul is at base immoral, or at least a departure from the American free-marketplace heritage. As for the emotion part, it's the Democrats who find him wanting. They wonder what happened to the brave words and the intuitive, charged connection with Americans of all ages and races that marked his 2008 campaign and have been elusive since his inauguration.

His battle to preserve his health care initiative, which extended into the government shutdown of this autumn, is where he stuck his emotional sword in the ground. He knew that protecting Obamacare was in effect preserving the Obama legacy, and he was prepared to fight for it.

For generations, every graduate of the elite French military academy at Saint-Cyr was familiar with this doctrine of Napoleon: Give me six hours' control of the Strait of Dover and I will gain mastery of the world. Obama sensed the contemporary domestic analogue: Give the GOP rebels control of the health care debate and they will gain mastery of American politics for the rest of the Obama years.

And then, fresh from his triumph in the shutdown showdown, everything collapsed. It became impossible to repress this question, or to answer it:

If the political figure who used the Internet with brilliant efficiency and to remarkable effect couldn't produce a simple website to perform what the president said was a simple procedure, then how would Washington handle the more difficult task of insuring good care for the sick when lives were at stake?

The website became the Strait of Dover of American domestic politics, and Obama and his forces have been retreating back into the white cliffs of failure for nearly a month. Despite the president's remarks Tuesday about rebranding the effort, they are still there.

One bad month does not a disastrous presidency make, but the challenge for Obama is to clear away the shadow of failure that seems stuck over his White House.

The goal for Obama is to be remembered as Kennedy, or Ronald Reagan, or Bill Clinton — presidents who overcame obstacles (Cuba, Iran-Contra, impeachment) — and not to be classified with Jimmy Carter and George W. Bush, who left Washington in disrepute and are waiting for historical revisionism that may never come. That is the task for the remainder of Obama's years in the White House.

Need a hardware store

I have lived in Citrus County for 25 years in Beverly Hills. We desperately need a hardware store here. Not a Lowe's or not a Home Depot; an Ace or a True Value would certainly go well. Please, would somebody give me the number for the EDC? Also, a very nice restaurant would be very nice in this area. And I'm thinking of Moe's – it's a great restaurant.

Editor's note: The EDC number is 352-795-2000.

Schools prepared

My granddaughter has asthma and a peanut allergy and they keep epinephrine at the school.

Someone wrote in to the Chronicle about schools having medical training. They don't realize how important it is.

Kids who have asthma, they must have inhalers.

And, like my granddaughter who has a peanut allergy, the epinephrine could save their lives.

TRAIN

"Then I saw the gravel coming at me, and I heard people screaming," he told The Associated Press, holding his bloody right hand. "There was smoke everywhere and debris. People were thrown to the other side of the train."

In their efforts to find passengers, rescuers shattered windows, searched nearby woods and waters and used pneumatic jacks and air bags to peer under wreckage. Officials planned to bring in cranes during the night to right the overturned cars on the slight chance anyone might still be underneath, National Transportation Safety Board member Earl Weener said.

The agency was just beginning its search into what caused the derailment, and Weener said investigators had not yet spoken to the train conductor, who was among the injured.

Meanwhile, thousands of people braced for a complicated Monday morning commute, with shuttle buses ferrying passengers to another line.

Investigators were due to examine factors ranging from the track condition to the crew's performance. Gov. Andrew Cuomo said the track did not appear to be faulty, leaving speed as a possible culprit for the crash. The speed limit on the curve is 30 mph, compared with 70 mph in the area approaching it, Weener said.

Authorities did not yet know how fast the train was traveling but had found a data recorder, he said.

One passenger, Frank Tatulli, told WABC-TV that the train appeared to be going "a lot faster" than usual as it approached the sharp curve near the Spuyten Duyvil station.

Nearby residents awoke to a building-shaking boom. Angel Gonzalez was in bed in his high-rise apartment overlooking the rail curve when he heard the roar.

"I thought it was a plane that crashed," he said.

Mike Gallo heard the same noise as he was walking his dog. He looked down at the tracks, saw injured people climbing out of the train and "knew it was a tragedy right away."

Within minutes, dozens of emergency crews arrived and carried passengers away on stretchers, some wearing neck braces. Others, bloodied and scratched, held ice packs to their heads.

Three men and one woman were killed, said the Metropolitan Transportation Authority, which runs the railroad. Eleven of the injured were believed to be critically wounded and another six seriously hurt, according to the Fire Department.

Three men and one woman were killed, the MTA said. Three of the dead were found outside the train, and one was found inside, authorities said. The victims' names had not yet been released.

To Cuomo, the scene "looked like a toy train set that was mangled by some super-powerful force," the governor said in a phone interview with CNN.

As deadly as the derailment was, the toll could have been far greater had it happened on a weekday, or had the lead car plunged into the water instead of nearing it. The train was about half-full at the time of the crash, rail officials said.

"On a workday, fully occupied, it would have been a tremendous disaster," New York City Fire Commissioner Salvatore Joseph Cassano told reporters at the scene. The affected line, called the Hudson line, carries about 18,000 people on an average weekday morning.

For decades, the NTSB has been urging railroads to install technology that can stop derailing caused by excessive speed, along with other problems.

A rail-safety law passed by Congress in 2008 gave commuter and freight railroads until the end of 2015 to install the systems, known as positive train control. Aimed at preventing human error — the cause of about 40 percent of train accidents — it can also prevent trains from colliding, entering tracks undergoing maintenance or going the wrong way because of a switching mistake.

But the systems are expensive and complicated. Railroads are trying to push back the installation deadline another five to seven years.

Metro-North is in the process of installing the technology. It now has what's called an "automatic train control" signal system, which automatically applies the brakes if an engineer fails to respond to an alert that indicates the speed is excessive.

Such systems can slow trains in some circumstances but not bring them to a halt, said Grady Cothen, a former Federal Railroad Administration safety official.

Sunday's accident came six months after an eastbound train derailed in Bridgeport, Conn., and was struck by a westbound train. The crash injured 73 passengers, two engineers and a conductor. In July, a freight train full of garbage derailed on the same Metro-North line near the site of Sunday's wreckage.

"Safety is clearly a problem on this stretch of track," state Sen. Jeff Klein, who represents the nearby area, said Sunday.

Earlier this month, Metro-North's chief engineer, Robert Puciloski, told members of the NTSB investigating the Bridgeport derailment and that the railroad is "behind in several areas," including a five-year schedule of cyclical maintenance that had not been conducted in the area of the Bridgeport derailment since 2005.

The NTSB issued an urgent recommendation to Metro-North that it use "redundant protection," such as a procedure known as "shunting," in which crews attach a device to the rail in a work zone alerting the dispatcher to inform approaching trains to stop.

Deadly train accident in NY

At least four are killed and dozens injured after a Metro-North commuter train derails on a curve near a train station in the Bronx borough of New York City early Sunday morning.

MONDAY

Military Officers Association, at one of the meetings I met Royce Carter. I asked him: Is there any chance to volunteer in your office?

That got me here to Citrus County, and then the rest is kind of like history. Mr. Carter went onto bigger and better things and I was fortunate enough to be advanced to the county's veterans service officer.

CHRONICLE: Your experience in the Marine Corps must have shaped the other parts of your life.

KENNEY: The Marine Corps set my foundation. I was raised poor. My dad only had an eighth-grade education, but he was the smartest man I ever met. You couldn't cheat him out of a dollar. He instilled a good work ethic in his children. He taught us the love of country. Of the five of us, four of us were on active duty during the Vietnam War.

CHRONICLE: What are your qualities that are good for doing county commission work?

KENNEY: My willingness to try to help people, try to understand what their needs are. There's a lot of bureaucratic stuff that gets in the way. I wish there was a way we could circumvent a lot of that stuff. Because when you have a person in need or you have a program that you want to get by some of the obstacles — it gets a little frustrating.

CHRONICLE: What are the challenges ahead?

KENNEY: Right now, we are in an extremely hard time with regard to county finances. The Duke Energy thing, that certainly threw a monkey wrench into the works, but, you know, we aren't dependent on them any more. But we had to raise the millage. I gagged when I saw it was over 9 (mills) and I went back to the administrator and I said I just can't live with this. So we got it down below 9. There are a lot of things out there and if we can just get a few things to fall in place, I could see the millage being reduced. I can also see where, with working with our budget, our budget is going to be easier to understand, not only for us but for the public. We will work to make it a document that anyone can understand.

We're looking at the agenda and how we are setting the agenda up for our meetings. For the consent agenda, we're looking at quite possibly — any item that falls under a specific area like public works, then those agenda items will go under public works. And then we'll move onto community service and items that affect community services shall be neat and orderly and also we had an issue that some backup, for one reason or another, it wasn't in the books. We'll make sure that backup's there.

Teddi Rusnak, I think, brought up the workshops. I think that's quite possibly a viable tool. We can get a lot of stuff out there and talk about it in the open and we don't have the constraints of doing it during the meeting.

We should take a look at the workshops and look into road projects, resurfacing. We haven't done any resurfacing in over a year. We'll take a look at some of these private roads to see some way we can get these people on board. There are a lot of roads that are unpaved. They are gravel roads. During the rainy season, forget it. You need an amphibious vehicle to get back to the houses.

These are all issues that we should get out to the public. Talk to them. See if they are interested in these private areas, if they want to get their roads paved and if they're willing to be assessed. Then we can prioritize them and go forward.

CHRONICLE: What's your chairman's agenda going to look like?

KENNEY: There's going to be a lot in it. I'm very big on team. It is my agenda; however, I am soliciting input from staff because they've got the day-to-day contacts. They know where the problems are.

When we have an issue, let's hold a town hall meeting. I think we're making some headway with Mrs. (Assistant County Administrator Cathy) Pearson's town hall meetings. I know this first one was poorly attended. I think the more we do that, I think it will work out fine.

CHRONICLE: Are these things you can accomplish during your year as chairman?

KENNEY: I think so. I could have come up with a long list, but we have to make it measurable because I don't want it to say that I'm going to bring the moon and the stars, because that's not something we can accomplish. But there are things I believe that are within our ability to accomplish or at least get them done.

One of my things was the sidewalk down in Old Homosassa running up Yulee Drive. They picked the engineering firm and by the end of 2014 that should be done. It should be wide enough for bicycles so we've got a safe way for youngsters to get up there to the library across (U.S.) 19.

Officials: Worst tech bugs over

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The worst of the online glitches, crashes and delays may be over for the problem-plagued government health care website, the Department of Health and Human Services said Sunday.

But that doesn't mean HealthCare.gov is ready for a clean bill of health.

Officials acknowledged more work remains on the website that included hundreds of software bugs, inadequate equipment and inefficient management for its national debut two months ago. Federal workers and private contractors have undertaken an intense reworking of the system, but the White House's chief troubleshooter cautioned some users could still encounter trouble.

"The bottom line — HealthCare.gov on Dec. 1 is night and day from where it was on Oct. 1," Jeff Zients told reporters.

More than 50,000 people can log on to the website at one time and more than 800,000 people will be able to shop for insurance coverage each day, the government estimated in a report released Sunday. If true, it's a dramatic improvement from the system's first weeks, when frustrated buyers watched their computer screen freeze, the website crash and error messages multiply.

The figures — which could not be independently verified — suggest millions of Americans could turn to their laptops to shop for and buy insurance policies by the Dec. 23 deadline.

"There's not really any way to verify from the outside that the vast majority of people who want to enroll can now do so, but we'll find out at least anecdotally over the coming days if the system can handle the traffic and provide a smooth experience for people trying to sign up," said Larry Levitt, a senior adviser at the Kaiser Family Foundation.

But, he added, HealthCare.gov is clearly working better than when it first went online. Its challenge now is to convince users who were frustrated during their first visit to give it another chance.

Associated Press

Part of the HealthCare.gov website is photographed Friday in Washington. The beleaguered health insurance website has had periods of down times as the government tries to fix the problems.

Politically, a fixed website could also offer a fresh start for President Barack Obama and his fellow Democrats after a wave of bad publicity surrounding the president's chief domestic achievement.

"This website is technology. It's going to get better. It's already better today," said Rep. Keith Ellison, a Minnesota Democrat who is a co-chairman of the liberal Congressional Progressive Caucus. "And we're only going to be working out more kinks as we go forward."

HealthCare.gov was envisioned as the principal place for people in 36 states to buy insurance under Obama's health care law. But its first few weeks were an embarrassment for the administration and its allies.

Obama set Saturday as the deadline to fix several significant problems and the administration organized a conference call with reporters Sunday morning to boast that 400 technical problems had been resolved.

Officials, however, declined to say how many items remain on the to-do list.

Even with the repairs in place, the site still won't be able to do everything the administration wants, and companion sites for small businesses and Spanish speakers have been delayed.

Airline reveals image of Hobbit dragon

AUCKLAND, New Zealand — New Zealand's national airline has unveiled a giant image of the dragon Smaug on one of its planes to celebrate the premiere of the second movie in the Hobbit trilogy.

Air New Zealand on Monday showed the 177-foot image that's featured on both sides of a Boeing 777-300 aircraft. The plane is scheduled to fly to Los Angeles in time for the premiere of "The Hobbit: The Desolation of Smaug," which screens Monday, Pacific Standard Time at the Dolby Theatre.

It's the first time fans have gotten to see director Peter Jackson's interpretation of Smaug. In the first movie, the director revealed only the dragon's eye.

The Hobbit trilogy was filmed in New Zealand.

7 killed in Chinese-run factory in Italy

MILAN — A fire early Sunday swept through an illegal, makeshift dormitory in a Chinese-run garment factory in Tuscany, killing seven, firefighters said.

The blaze, which partially collapsed the factory's roof, broke out in a loft where 11 people were sleeping, said fire inspector Stefano Giannelli.

The cause was under investigation. Two people remained hospitalized, while two were treated and released, Giannelli said.

The Tuscan city of Prato has become a center for Chinese-run factories producing low-cost garments mostly for international retailers — an activity that has all but decimated Italy's own lower-end clothing industry. Many of the workers aren't declared to authorities, sleeping, eating and living in the factories where they work.

China launches moon rover mission

BEIJING — China has launched its first mission to land a rover on the moon that will transmit images and survey the moon's surface. The spacecraft is expected to land in mid-December. The official Xinhua News Agency said a Long March-3B rocket carrying the Chang'e 3 lander blasted off Monday as scheduled at 1:30 a.m. from the Xichang Satellite Launch Center in southwest China.

If the mission goes as planned, the Chang'e 3 will become China's first spacecraft to soft land on the surface of an extraterrestrial body.

The moon rover will survey the moon's geological structure and surface substances.

Man cited after tossing cash

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — A 29-year-old Minnesota man who said he was trying to spread holiday cheer by tossing 1,000 dollar bills over an upper floor railing at the Mall of America has been cited for disorderly conduct.

Serge Vorobyov, of Apple Valley, admitted throwing his "last $1,000" from the fourth floor on Friday as a choir performed "Let it Snow." Vorobyov said he also kept tossing cash as he continued down the escalator.

Vorobyov said he's going through a divorce, lost his car-hauling business and hoped the positivity of throwing the money would come back to him.

"I wanted to do some sort of pay-it-forward kind of thing," Vorobyov said Sunday.

Egyptian security forces keep supporters of ousted Islamist President Mohammed Morsi away from Cairo's Tahrir Square on Sunday. Police used heavy tear gas to clear hundreds of supporters shortly after they took over the plaza.

Egypt police clear protesters

Associated Press

CAIRO — Police fired tear gas to drive hundreds of supporters of Egypt's ousted Islamist president from Cairo's famed Tahrir Square on Sunday, as a panel tasked with amending the constitution adopted during his time in office agreed on changes to the text.

The 50-member panel revising the Islamist-tilted charter adopted under former President Mohammed Morsi managed to resolve its differences after two days of clause-by-clause voting on the final draft.

The text gives women and Christians "suitable representation" but says a future law must decide the details. It also calls for elections, either parliamentary or presidential, within 90 days after the draft constitution is adopted. The other election should be held up to six months later.

The new charter would require future presidents to declare their financial assets annually, and allows lawmakers to vote out an elected president and call for early elections if they have a two-thirds majority.

Members agreed that a contentious proposed article allowing military tribunals for civilians would be scaled back, allowing them only in case of direct attack on military personnel or assets.

Rights activists had previously objected to the military's trial of some 10,000 civilians when it ran the country during the 17 months after Egypt's 2011 revolt that ousted longtime autocrat Hosni Mubarak.

The document is now to be handed over to interim President Adly Mansour, who has a month to call for a nationwide referendum on it.

If adopted by the public, a giant step in the roadmap announced by the military when it removed Morsi last summer will have been completed.

Morsi supporters have been staging near daily protests to demand his reinstatement, in Cairo and across much of the country. But for hundreds of them to enter and take over Tahrir, even briefly as they did Sunday, constituted a major, albeit symbolic, propaganda coup for them. They would have attracted many more like-minded protesters had they been able to gain a solid foothold in the square.

It was the first time in more than a year that Islamists entered the central square in significant numbers. The location has been the near exclusive domain of liberal and secular protesters since shortly after Morsi took office in June 2012 as Egypt's first freely elected president.

UN in Iraq worried about uptick in bodies found

Associated Press

BAGHDAD — The number of Iraqis slain "execution-style" surged last month, the U.N. said Sunday, raising fears of a return of the death squads that killed thousands during the darkest days of sectarian violence that followed the U.S.-led invasion.

The increase in targeted killings comes even though the U.N. reported that the overall death toll for November dropped to 659, compared with 979 in October. More than 8,000 people have been killed since the start of the year.

In an example of other dangers facing Iraqis, three bombs tore through the funeral procession of the son of an anti-al-Qaida Sunni tribal chief northeast of Baghdad, the deadliest in a wave of attacks that killed 17 people Sunday, Iraqi officials said.

"It seems that history is always repeating itself in Iraq," said Qassim Haider, a Shiite owner of a menswear shop in eastern Baghdad. He said he has stopped accepting invitations to visit friends in mainly Sunni neighborhoods due to fears of violence.

Widespread chaos nearly tore the country apart following the 2003 U.S.-led invasion that ousted Saddam Hussein. The violence ebbed in 2008 after a series of U.S.-Iraqi military offensives, a Shiite militia cease-fire and a Sunni revolt against al-Qaida in Iraq, but that trend was reversed after a deadly April 23 crackdown by security forces on a northern Sunni protest camp.

Iraqis have grown used to random explosions, but the recent discoveries of bullet-riddled bodies have many worried about a long-feared resumption of all-out warfare between Shiite and Sunni factions.

The November casualty toll included 565 civilians and 94 security forces killed and 1,373 Iraqis wounded in attacks, according to the U.N. mission in Iraq.

Baghdad and surrounding areas saw the highest number killed last month, at 224, followed by the volatile northern Ninevah province, with 107.

In all, at least 7,157 civilians and 952 Iraqi security forces have been killed since January, the U.N. said.

U.N. envoy to Iraq Nickolay Mladenov singled out an increase in the number of bodies found, including some that were beheaded, and urged the Iraqi government to move quickly to find the attackers and hold them responsible.

Last week, Iraqi police found 31 bodies of men, women and children who were shot in the head in three separate places around Baghdad, recalling the height of sectarian violence in 2006-07.

Cleaning house: Florida fires Pease, Davis

Changes made after first losing season since 1979

Associated Press

GAINESVILLE — Florida coach Will Muschamp didn't wait very long to start making changes.

The school confirmed Sunday that Muschamp fired offensive coordinator Brent Pease and offensive line coach Tim Davis less than 24 hours after the Gators (4-8) completed their first losing season since 1979.

Muschamp dismissed Pease and Davis a day after a humbling, 37-7 loss to rival Florida State.

The moves had been expected for weeks, as the losses mounted and it became clear Muschamp would revamp his offense. Pease and Davis spent the last two years in Gainesville.

Pease and Davis were the primary scapegoats for a dismal season that included a dreadful offense and the worst loss in school history. The Gators finished the season ranked 112th in total offense. Florida managed just 279 yards in a 26-20 loss to lower-division Georgia Southern on Nov. 23 and then 193 against the Seminoles.

"They are both good football coaches and even better people," Muschamp said in a statement. "There have been a lot of unfortunate circumstances this year, but that is part of the game sometimes. I want to thank each of them for their contributions to the program both on and off the field."

Florida's offense was ravaged by injuries, losing quarterback Jeff Driskel, running back Matt Jones, receiver Andre Debose and three offensive tackles for the season. Backup quarterback Tyler Murphy also missed the final three games with a sprained throwing shoulder, leaving third-stringer Skyler Mornhinweg to start.

The injuries surely were a viable excuse for this season, but they can't be blamed for Florida's offense being ranked in the triple digits for three consecutive years.

Panthers pummel Bucs, stops Tampa Bay's win streak at three

Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Cam Newton walked into the press conference Sunday afternoon, flashed that familiar smile and gave a tip of the hat to his former college team.

"War Eagle. War Eagle. War. Damn. Eagle," Newton said.

Less than 24 hours after the Auburn Tigers pulled off an incredible victory over No. 1 Alabama, Newton had another reason to smile.

Carolina's third-year quarterback capped a memorable weekend by throwing for 263 yards and two touchdowns and "Superman" leaped over the pile for another score as the Panthers (9-3) defeated Tampa Bay 27-6 Sunday for a franchise-record eighth straight regular season victory.

"It wasn't prototypical, or the way we wanted to win, but we found a way to win and that's the most encouraging part about it," said Newton, who rebounded from two interceptions.

The victory set up a huge game next Sunday night in New Orleans against the Saints with first place in the NFC South on the line.

"We're ready," said fullback Mike Tolbert, who had 48 yards rushing and 41 yards receiving in the win. "Around here we pride ourselves on being able to follow up one game with another."

The Panthers outgained the Buccaneers (3-9) 426-206.

FSU, OSU on top of BCS heap

Associated Press

Florida State and Ohio State are in position to play for the BCS national championship, though Auburn and Missouri are close enough behind in the BCS standings to put pressure on the Buckeyes.

The Seminoles grabbed the top spot in the BCS standings released Sunday after Alabama relinquished it for the first time this season.

The Crimson Tide's wild 34-28 loss at Auburn dropped Alabama to fourth. Ohio State is second and Auburn is third. Missouri is fifth. Auburn and Missouri play in the Southeastern Conference championship game Saturday in Atlanta. The winner should get a boost in the standings, but it might not be enough to catch the unbeaten Buckeyes.

CFB polls

See Page B5 for the latest BCS, AP, USA Today and Harris college football polls.

Ohio State (12-0) faces Michigan State, 10th in the latest standings, in the Big Ten championship game Saturday in Indianapolis.

Florida State is first in both the USA Today coaches' poll and Harris poll, and rated No. 1 in the compilation of six computer rankings used in the BCS standings.

The Seminoles' .9948 BCS average makes them a lock to get to the title game in Pasadena, Calif., on Jan. 6 if they can beat Duke in the Atlantic Coast Conference championship game Saturday.

The Buckeyes (.9503) are second in the polls and second in the computers. Auburn (.9233) is third in each. Missouri (.8428) is fifth in each.

An unbeaten team from a BCS automatic-qualifying conference (ACC, Big Ten, Big 12, Pac-12, SEC and Big East, now American Athletic Conference) has never been shut out of national championship game in favor of a team with a loss.

The SEC, which has won the last seven BCS championships, would like that to change.

"Any one-loss team in the SEC (should be considered) just because of the strength of schedule," Missouri coach Gary Pinkel said. "Hopefully that will be taken into consideration."

Jerry Palm, who analyzes the BCS for CBS.com, said there is no reason to expect the unprecedented to happen.

"I think the voters would have to abandon Ohio State, and that's never happened in the history of the BCS," he said Sunday.

Alabama (.8539) is fourth but the Tide would need both Florida State and Ohio State to lose to get back in the title conversation.

McIlroy wins Aussie Open

Associated Press

SYDNEY — Rory McIlroy birdied the 18th hole to beat Adam Scott at the Australian Open on Sunday, winning for the first time in 2013 and denying Scott the Triple Crown of Australian golf.

McIlroy started the last round four shots behind Scott, but drew even when he eagled the seventh and birdied the eighth.

Scott went a shot ahead with a birdie at the ninth. The pair then went shot for shot over the back nine before the dramatic finish.

Scott's approach shot went over the back of the green and his chip went well past the hole, with two putts bringing a bogey. McIlroy hit his approach to 10 feet and sank the putt to win by a shot.

"I wanted to get a win and finally I've been able to get one," McIlroy said. "But more satisfying than that is being able to take one of the best players in the world down the stretch and come out on top.

"Adam is a phenomenal golfer, a great competitor and probably an even better guy and I feel a bit sorry that I was the one that ruined the triple crown for him."

SPORTS BRIEF

AP source: Twins agree with Phil Hughes

MINNEAPOLIS — The Minnesota Twins have agreed to a $24 million, three-year contract with right-hander Phil Hughes.

A person with knowledge of the deal tells The Associated Press the two sides came to agreement late Saturday night. The person requested anonymity because Hughes still has to pass a physical before the contract can become official. The Star Tribune of Minneapolis first reported the deal.

Hughes went 4-14 with a 5.19 ERA last season for the New York Yankees. The Twins are hoping the 27-year-old will fare better in pitcher-friendly Target Field than he did pitching in hitter-friendly Yankee Stadium.

Hughes joins Ricky Nolasco in the new-look Twins rotation. The Twins had the worst starting staff in the majors last year and have spent $73 million to upgrade it.

Newton ran for 68 yards, 53 on a first quarter run to set up Carolina's first touchdown. Newton, who led Auburn to a national championship and won a Heisman Trophy with the Tigers, is enjoying the best stretch of this professional career with 13 touchdown passes and five TDs rushing during the win streak.

Carolina's defense came in allowing an NFL-low 13.7 points per game and forced two turnovers and sacked rookie Mike Glennon five times to snap Tampa Bay's three-game winning streak.

Glennon had thrown a touchdown pass in an NFL record eight straight games to start his career, but the Panthers kept the Bucs out of the end zone. The Panthers have not lost since a 22-6 defeat on the road to Arizona on Oct. 6 and confidence is at an all-time high in the locker room.

"There is no roof, no sky," defensive end Greg Hardy said. "We're going up. Every person on this team, every coach on this team has the same mentality right now. I feel like it's contagious. Fans are getting it. They feel like they can't be beat."

The turning point came in the second quarter with the Panthers holding a 7-6 lead.

Glennon rolled left on third-and-goal at the Carolina 4 and had the ball inexplicably slip out of his throwing hand without being touched and Panthers defensive tackle Dwan Edwards pounced on the loose ball at the 17.

"It just slipped out of my hand, and it really hurt us because we would have gotten at least three points," Glennon said.

The Panthers cashed in with a 23-yard field goal by Graham Gano.

Newton made it 17-6 with 25 seconds left in the half when coach Ron Rivera went for it on fourth-and-goal at the 1. With fans holding signs that read "Riverboat Ron" in the stands, Newton dove headfirst over the pile, extending the ball over the goal line.

The Panthers are now 8 of 9 when going for it on fourth-and-1 since his team's Week 2 loss to Buffalo, a big reason for Carolina's turnaround.

It was all Panthers in the second half.

Safety Mike Mitchell intercepted Glennon on the opening drive and Newton quickly took advantage. He moved the Panthers 78 yards in four plays, connecting on a 36-yard touchdown pass to Ted Ginn Jr., who beat Darrelle Revis on a double move.

Glennon was 14 of 21 for 80 yards with an interception.

"I don't know if it was a step back, but maybe he looked a little more like a rookie than he's looked in the past," Bucs coach Greg Schiano said.

"The ball slips out of his hand going to his left. That's an awkward deal, and unfortunate, but it happened. The throw to Vincent (Jackson) that gets intercepted and the flag gets picked up, it just didn't look like it came off his hand cleanly. I'm not sure if there's any reason."

It's hard to imagine the Panthers now have a shot at a first-round bye in the NFC playoffs after starting the season 1-3, when talk was rampant about Rivera's future with the team.

"It's unbelievable," said defensive end Wes Horton, who had two of Carolina's sacks. "When we were 1-3 it was tense, we were trying to find ourselves as a team. And now we're rolling and everyone is one the same page."

MCILROY

player after compatriot Robert Allenby in 2005 to win his country's Triple Crown by taking the Australian Open, Australian Masters and Australian PGA titles in the same season.

He carried his form from the Masters and PGA tournaments into the Open, shattering the course record with a 10-under 62 in his opening round.

He came into the final day at 16 under, with rounds of 62, 70 and 68, four shots ahead of McIlroy, who was four ahead of the next closest challenger.

That, in effect, made Sunday's final round a shootout between the No. 2-ranked Scott and Northern Ireland's McIlroy, who was the world's top-ranked player last year.

Scott was left to rue a series of missed birdie opportunities, failing to make six putts from within 12 feet during his final round.

"Nothing was going my way on the greens today," Scott said. "I could have put this thing away early on if the putter was behaving how it should have, how it did the rest of the week."

Both players took irons from the tee on the last hole and landed their shots adjacent to each other on the fairway. Scott's approach landed ahead of the hole, but a bounce sent the ball flying through the back of the green.

Rather than pitch and run back onto the green, Scott chose to give his chip some loft. It failed to pull up, rolling onto the lower tier of the green and he did well to salvage a bogey.

McIlroy stood assessing his 10-foot putt during Scott's excursions. After Scott holed out, McIlroy rolled in a slow putt that just made it to the hole.

"I didn't think it was going to unfold the way it did," McIlroy said. "It's hard not to feel some guilt in the way I won it. Having a one-shot lead going into the last having it taken away from you right at the very end, it's tough."

McIlroy finished with an 18-under 270. Scott finished six shots ahead of Australian John Senden (11 under).

Senden and Australians Bryden MacPherson and Rhein Gibson, who tied for fourth at 9 under, all qualified for next year's British Open.

Schwartzel defends title at Alfred Dunhill

MALELANE, South Africa — Charl Schwartzel successfully defended his title at the Alfred Dunhill Championship, shooting a 4-under 68 on Sunday for a four-shot victory and his first European Tour victory in a year.

Schwartzel finished with a 17-under total of 271 at Leopard Creek to secure his third Alfred Dunhill title. Richard Finch was second, while Simon Dyson, Ross Fisher and Romain Wattel tied for third.

The South African has four second-place finishes here to go with his three titles. It was his second title on the European Tour since winning the Masters in 2011.

Schwartzel's ninth career win on the European Tour returned him to the top 20 in the world rankings.

FIRED

"I know we came up short of our ultimate goal, but I will carry on knowing I gained valuable friendships and relationships during my time here," Pease said in a statement.

He replaced Charlie Weis after six years at Boise State, choosing Florida over Alabama — a decision he surely regrets now.

Pease was saddled with a first-year starting quarterback in 2012 (Driskel), a bungling offensive line and few, if any, playmakers. And the team's receivers coach resigned at the beginning of fall practice. Still, the Gators won 11 games last season and earned a spot in the Sugar Bowl.

Pease's second year was supposed to be better.

But Driskel (broken leg) and Jones (knee) went down early in the season, joining Debose (knee) and right tackle Chaz Green (labrum) on the sideline.

So Pease was stuck calling plays with a third-string quarterback down the stretch.

And it surely didn't help that Pease spent two years running the kind of offense Muschamp wanted — a run-heavy, try-to-wear-defenses-down style that leads to close games and leaves little margin for error.

The offensive line was the biggest problem the last two years, allowing 66 sacks during Davis' tenure.

"I think Will is a really good self-evaluator," athletic director Jeremy Foley said Saturday. "He can look in the mirror and isn't afraid to take responsibility for what's happened. ... We look at ourselves and how we get better. Not just sit here and say, 'Yeah, we've got a bunch of injuries, we'll be fine.' That better not be our attitude. It better be our attitude to reevaluate every single facet of what we're doing and get this thing fixed.

"Yeah, it stinks. It stinks for every Gator fan. This season has been no fun because we care."

Florida owes Pease about $1.2 million for the remaining two years on his contract. It's unclear what direction Muschamp will go with his third offensive coordinator in four years, but the better question is what will the offense look like after the change.

"We need to take a look at ourselves schematically with what we're doing," Muschamp said Saturday. "There have been some things that have happened that are very difficult to overcome, but schematically there's no question we need to take a look at ourselves. ... I'm willing to do what we need to do to score points and win games."

Peterson passes 10,000-yard mark

MINNEAPOLIS — Adrian Peterson has become the third-fastest player in NFL history to reach 10,000 yards rushing for his career.

Peterson passed the mark for Minnesota in the fourth quarter Sunday against Chicago in his 101st career game. Eric Dickerson got there in 91 games, and Jim Brown reached the milestone in 98 games.

Peterson entered the afternoon needing 154 yards to reach 10,000.

Peterson also passed the 1,000-yard mark for the sixth time in his seven seasons with the Vikings. He fell 30 yards short in 2011, when injuries limited him to 12 games.

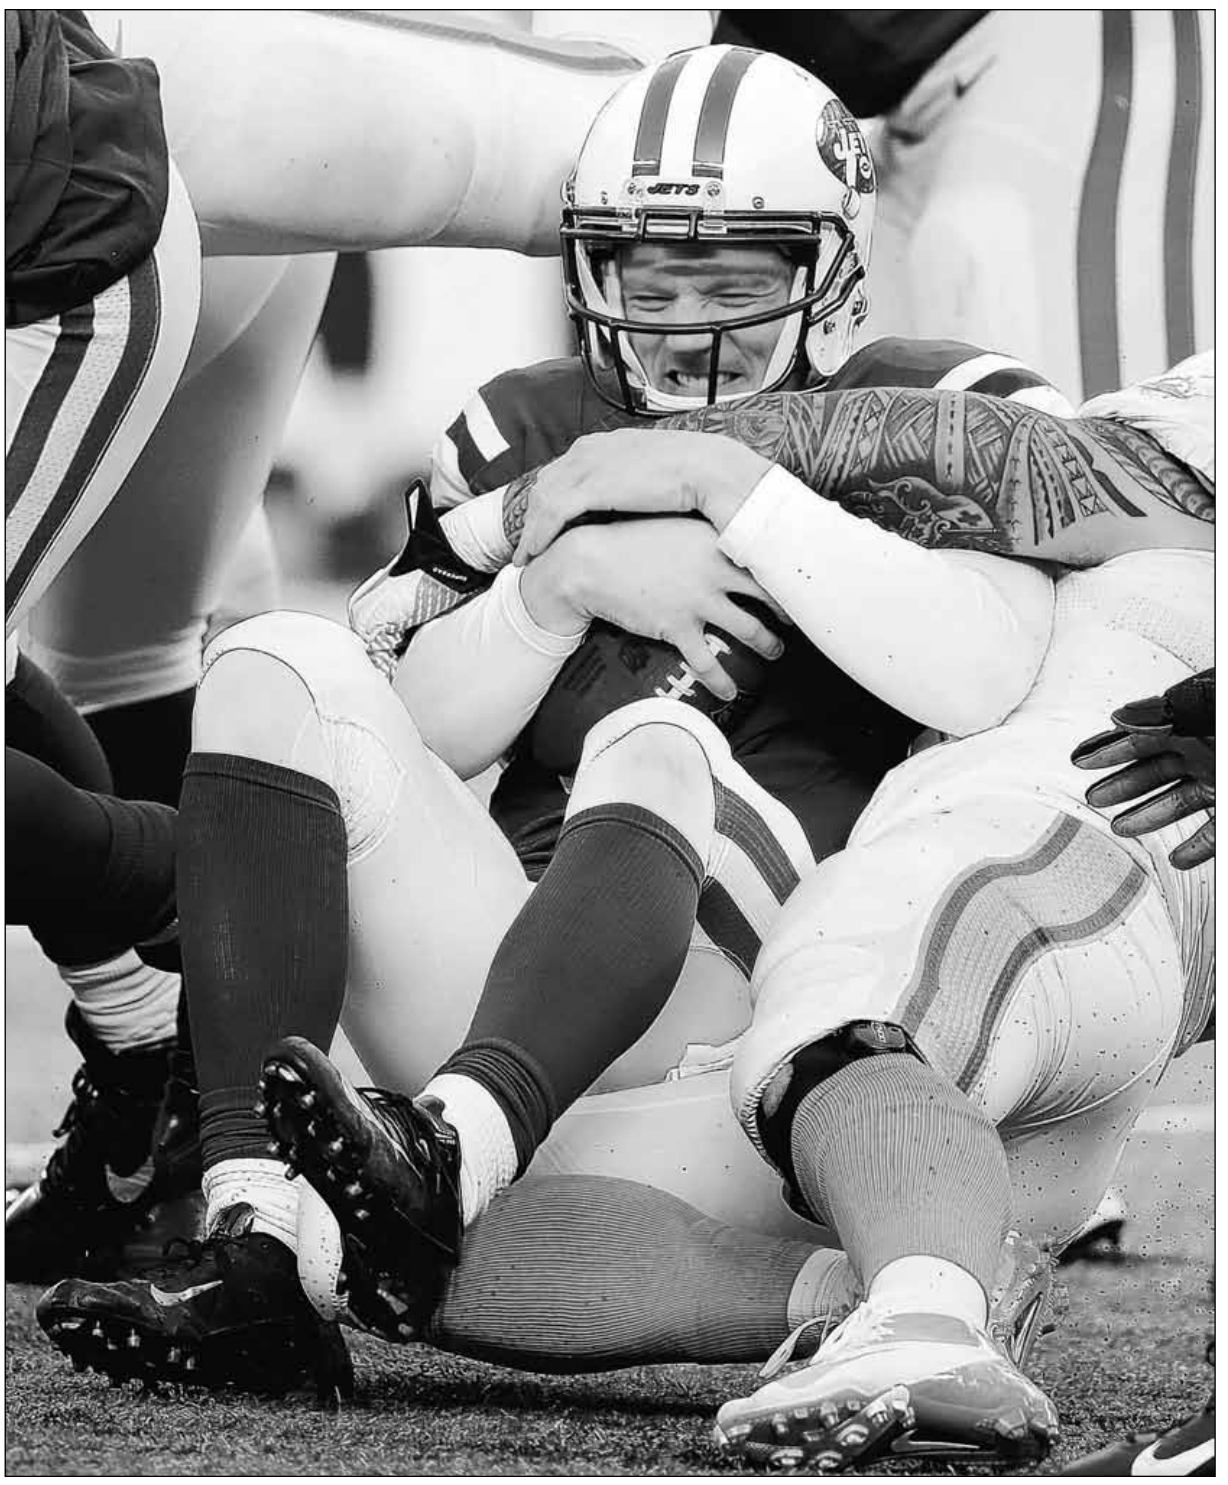
Dolphins sack Jets



Associated Press

New York Jets quarterback Matt Simms, center, is sacked Sunday by Miami outside linebacker Koa Misi during the second half in East Rutherford, N.J. The Dolphins defeated the Jets 23-3.

Miami keeps playoff hopes alive with dominating 23-3 win

Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Ryan Tannehill threw for 331 yards and two touchdowns, leading Miami to a 23-3 victory over the listless New York Jets on Sunday that kept the Dolphins' playoff hopes alive.

With the AFC East rivals approaching the game as a must-win, the Dolphins (6-6) played with more of a sense of urgency while sending the Jets (5-7) to their third straight loss.

New York also has a quarterback controversy on its hands as Geno Smith was benched in favor of Matt Simms after a dismal first half.

Brian Hartline and Mike Wallace had touchdown receptions for Miami, while Tannehill finished 28 for 43 with an interception.

Smith was 4 for 10 for 29 yards with an interception and an 8.3 quarterback rating before being replaced by Simms, who went 9 for 18 for 79 yards and an INT as New York's postseason hopes were severely damaged.

Patriots 34, Texans 31

HOUSTON — Tom Brady threw for 371 yards and two scores, and Stephen Gostkowski made two long field goals in the fourth quarter as New England Patriots rallied for a 34-31 win over Houston.

The Texans' franchise-record skid reached 10 games.

The Patriots (9-3) trailed by 10 at halftime and the lead changed five times in a wild second half. New England tied it with a 53-yard field goal and took a 34-31 lead with another one from 53 with about three minutes left.

The Texans (2-10) had a chance late, but the offense stalled. On fourth-and-13, Case Keenum threw an incompletion as he was being hit.

Ben Tate ran for 102 yards and three touchdowns for the Texans, who haven't won since Sept. 15.

Colts 22, Titans 14

INDIANAPOLIS — Adam Vinatieri tied a career high with five field goals and Donald Brown scored on a 4-yard touchdown run with 1:56 left, giving the Colts a 22-14 victory over Tennessee.

Indianapolis (8-4) now has a three-game lead in the AFC South and the tiebreaker after sweeping the season series. The Colts can wrap up their eighth division crown in 11 seasons with one win, one Titans loss or if either team ties.

Indy's offense struggled again, failing to get in the end zone until Brown's late plunge sealed it. Until then, the Colts relied on Vinatieri's reliable right foot.

He made four field goals in the first half and gave Indy the lead for good with a 49-yarder with 2:33 left in the third quarter. That erased the 14-12 lead Tennessee (5-7) took with a 1-yard touchdown pass from Ryan Fitzpatrick to Chris Johnson early in the half.

Eagles 24, Cardinals 21

PHILADELPHIA — Nick Foles threw three touchdown passes and the Philadelphia Eagles held on for a 24-21 victory over the Arizona Cardinals.

Zach Ertz had two TD catches, LeSean McCoy ran for 79 yards and the Eagles (7-5) won their fourth straight game to remain tied with Dallas for first place in the NFC East.

Carson Palmer threw for 302 yards and three TD passes, but also had two interceptions and lost a fumble as the Cardinals (7-5) had their four-game winning streak snapped.

Foles picked up where he left off in November, when he was the NFC's Player of the Month and tied an NFL record with seven TDs in a game. Foles finished 21 of 34 for 237 yards against a defense that came in ranked eighth in the league.

Foles set a team record for most passes without an interception (233), breaking Michael Vick's mark of 224 set in 2010.

He also moved within one TD pass of tying Peyton Manning's record of 20 TD passes and zero interceptions to start a season.

Jaguars 32, Browns 28

CLEVELAND — Cecil Shorts caught a 20-yard touchdown pass from Chad Henne with 40 seconds left, rallying the Jacksonville Jaguars to a 32-28 win over the Cleveland Browns.

On 3rd-and-9, Henne lofted a perfect pass to the left corner for Shorts, who had beaten cornerback Joe Haden to get open. Shorts got both feet down in the end zone before tumbling out of bounds. It was a dream moment for Shorts, who grew up in Cleveland.

Henne drove the Jaguars (3-9) 80 yards in nine plays for the winning TD.

The Browns (4-8) had taken a 28-25 lead on Brandon Weeden's 95-yard TD pass to Josh Gordon with 3:55 remaining.

Gordon returned from a head injury and finished 10 catches for a team record 261 yards. According to STATS, Gordon is the first player in NFL history to have consecutive 200-yard games. He had 237 in a loss last week against Pittsburgh.

Broncos win shootout at Kansas City 35-28

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Peyton Manning threw for 403 yards and five touchdowns, four of them to Eric Decker, and the Denver Broncos held off a furious rally to beat the Kansas City Chiefs 35-28 Sunday and seize control of the AFC West.

Decker had eight catches for a career-high 174 yards for the Broncos (10-2), who moved a game clear of the Chiefs (9-3) in the division. With four games left, Denver also holds the tiebreaker by virtue of two wins over Kansas City in the last three weeks.

Jamaal Charles had 93 yards rushing for the Chiefs, and capped a 17-play drive with a 1-yard touchdown run with 6:32 left in the game to close within a touchdown.

After forcing a punt with 3:32 remaining, Kansas City used three long pass plays to move deep into Broncos territory. But Alex Smith's pass to Dwayne Bowe in the end zone on fourth-and-4 with 1:45 left fell incomplete, allowing the Broncos to run out the clock.

Vikings 23, Bears 20, OT

MINNEAPOLIS — Blair Walsh's 34-yard field goal with 1:43 left in overtime gave the Minnesota Vikings a 23-20 victory over the Chicago Bears after both teams missed kicks in the extra period.

Adrian Peterson rushed 35 times for 211 yards for the Vikings (3-8-1), who tied Green Bay the previous week. Peterson had two 11-yard runs on the final drive to get well within range for Walsh, who missed a 57-yard try earlier in overtime.

Walsh had to kick that one because Rhett Ellison was called for a 15-yard face-mask penalty to wipe out a 39-yard make by Walsh that would've ended the game.

The Bears (6-6) then reached the 29-yard line, but coach Marc Trestman called for a field goal on second-and-7. Robbie Gould's 47-yarder went wide right.

49ers 23, Rams 13

SAN FRANCISCO — Anquan Boldin caught nine passes from Colin Kaepernick, Michael Crabtree made his long-awaited season debut six months after Achilles tendon surgery, and the San Francisco 49ers beat the St. Louis Rams 23-13.

Kaepernick threw for 275 yards and Frank Gore ran for a 3-yard touchdown as the reigning NFC champion Niners (8-4) boosted their position in the playoff picture. Crabtree had a 60-yard catch, while Vernon Davis hurdled into the end zone on a 17-yard reception.

With Hall of Famer Jerry Rice in the house, Boldin made six of his receptions in the first half on the way to his second-most productive game of the year behind his 13-catch performance in the opener against Green Bay.

Phil Dawson kicked three field goals, and San Francisco's swarming defense rattled Kellen Clemens and the Rams (5-7) all day.

Bengals 17, Chargers 10

SAN DIEGO — Andy Dalton threw a go-ahead, 21-yard touchdown pass to wide-open A.J. Green late in the third quarter and the AFC North-leading Cincinnati Bengals beat the San Diego Chargers 17-10.

The Bengals (8-4), coming off their bye, kept a two-game lead over Baltimore.

San Diego (5-7) lost the momentum it gained with a thrilling comeback win at Kansas City a week earlier and saw its playoff hopes dwindle after its fourth loss in five games.

With the score tied at 7, The Bengals got the ball after Dre Kirkpatrick ripped the ball away from tight end Antonio Gates after a reception at the Cincinnati 25, the Chargers' third turnover.

Ten plays later, Green split the defense for an easy touchdown, with safety Eric Weddle and cornerback Marcus Gilchrist only able to watch.

Falcons 34, Bills 31, OT

TORONTO — Matt Bryant hit a 36-yard field goal 3 minutes into overtime to lift the Atlanta Falcons to a 34-31 win over the Bills in Buffalo's annual "home" game in Toronto.

Falcons safety William Moore set up the decisive score in a back-and-fourth game by forcing a fumble on Buffalo's second play from scrimmage. He punched the ball out of the arms of Bills tight end Scott Chandler.

Cornerback Robert McClain also forced a fumble on the Bills' final possession of regulation, when he knocked the ball out of the hands of receiver Stevie Johnson at the Falcons 30 with 20 seconds remaining.

Steven Jackson scored twice, including the tying 1-yard plunge with 1:28 left for the Falcons (3-9), who snapped a five-game skid and won for the first time in six road games this season.

Fred Jackson scored twice for Buffalo (4-8).

Explanation Key

The BCS Average is calculated by averaging the percent totals of the Harris Interactive, USA Today Coaches and Computer polls. Team percentages are derived by dividing a team's actual voting points by a maximum 2625 possible points in the Harris Interactive Poll and 1550 possible points in the USA Today Coaches Poll.
Six computer rankings are used to determine the overall computer component. The highest and lowest ranking for each team is dropped, and the remaining four are added and divided to produce a Computer Rankings Percentage. The six computer ranking providers are Anderson & Hester, Richard Billingsley, Colley Matrix, Kenneth Massey, Jeff Sagarin, and Peter Wolfe. Each computer ranking accounts for schedule strength in its formula.

Matthew Arnold, an English poet who died in 1888, said, "Journalism is literature in a hurry."

Inexperienced players often find it difficult to sacrifice a trick when it can be won. This deal, as you have no doubt surmised, is an example. South is in four hearts. West leads the spade ace: five, seven, four. West continues with the spade king: jack, two, 10. West perseveres with the spade queen. How should South proceed?

West had an excellent hand for a weak two-bid in this age of the flimsy pre-empt. North overcalled three clubs. Then South might have bid a forcing three hearts, but he decided that four hearts rated to be the best contract.

West noticed East's high-low in spades and was not distracted by South's falsecard with his 10. West led a third spade, hoping East could overruff the dummy.

And at the table, that was exactly what happened. Declarer ruffed the third spade with dummy's heart eight. But East overruffed with the 10 and shifted to the diamond king. Suddenly, South saw that he was stranded on the board. Whether he returned a diamond or played three rounds of clubs, discarding his last diamond, declarer had to lose another trick and go down one.

South, of course, complained he was unlucky that East had the heart 10. But given the 6-2 spade break, East was more likely to hold that trump.Instead, South should have discarded from the dummy at trick three. He could have won whatever West led next, drawn trumps (the heart eight still being in the dummy), and run the clubs.

Consider the possibilities carefully.

ANNIE'S MAILBOX

Dear Annie: In 1988, I had a wife and three beautiful children. Then my wife decided to be "liberated." She wanted to spread her wings and be independent. She engaged me in a particularly acrimonious divorce and lived on child and spousal support until she discovered that being independent was not working for her. She remarried and moved my children hundreds of miles away, effectively excising them from my life, even though she admits I was a great father. Needless to say, I harbor considerable animosity toward her.

I've since remarried a wonderful woman. My children are grown and starting their own families. I recognize that I must endure the unpleasantness of having to see my ex at my children's weddings, etc., but I never expected that my brother and sister would invite my ex to their own children's weddings and other family functions.

I feel that because my ex divorced me, she is no longer a part of my family and should not be invited to attend family gatherings. I have made this point very clear to my siblings, along with the fact that seeing my ex causes me significant pain. Further, my new wife feels she's being upstaged by my ex at these events. Yet, my siblings insist on including this woman.

Is it unrealistic for me to believe that when my ex divorced me, she also divorced my family? Am I expecting too much to ask that my siblings not embrace the woman who devastated my life? — Divorced in Oregon

Dear Oregon: Sorry to say, but what your siblings do is not something you can dictate. Their children may still consider this woman to be their aunt, and their relationship to her does not include the bitterness and rancor you are hanging onto.

Please let it go. Allowing your ex to rattle you after all these years gives her power over you. You don't have to enjoy her company, but you can work on making her presence insignificant.

Dear Annie: Two years ago, my father and his wife became irritated with me and cut me out of their lives. When I became pregnant several months later, they got back in touch because they wanted to be a part of the baby's life.

My husband recently returned to college, and so we moved back into my mother's house in order to save money. This angered my father and his wife, who said I am a bad mother and need to grow up. They shut me out again.

My parents have been divorced for a long time. I was never close to my father or his new family. Dad is not a particularly nice guy, but I feel I should keep in contact. Now I'm wondering whether it's worth trying to mend this relationship, or should I just admit it's toxic and cut my losses? — Had Enough in Michigan

Dear Michigan: This doesn't have to be either-or. You don't have to turn yourself into a pretzel to stay in his good graces, but you also don't need to cut him out entirely. Send him photos of the baby. Invite him to the birthday parties. But otherwise, limit contact and learn to ignore his criticisms.

Dear Annie: I read the letter from "Too Late To Try Again," whose relative cut her off without explanation. The same thing happened to me.

I attended a family reunion in Michigan four years ago. A cousin's wife was the organizer, and I thought she did a great job. The next year, I didn't receive an invitation. I contacted the wife, who blocked me on Facebook. I then contacted my cousin, who said, "The invitation was probably lost." But when it happened the next two years, I knew it was intentional.

I haven't a clue what I did, but I'm glad I read that column. It saved me years of frustration. — Thankful in Kansas
