New housing, old debate on growth issues

News-Leader

A dormant plan to build a new subdivision in Nassauville is coming to life with the Planning and Zoning Board's approval last week for 110 new single-family houses along Woodbridge Parkway.

The 27.11-acre development east of Old Nassauville Road/CR 107 is owned by Synovus Bank, and the planned unit development (PUD) will be known as Woodbrier.

Officials said the property is likely to be sold to a real estate developer.

No start date on construction has been announced.

Some neighbors are not happy with the development plan, saying construction will destroy trees and wildlife, clog local roadways with more cars and trucks and crowd local schools.

"There are bluebirds, herons and egrets and all those lovely things that live in nature," said a woman named Carol who stepped to the podium to speak to the board.

"We understand progress but I'd like to ask your consideration to keep more trees between us."

Carol and a half dozen other people came to the meeting. Some, like Irene Morrow, brought their children.

"I ride my bike with my kids and we enjoy the trees and the animals," said Morrow. "There's a lot of wildlife in the area. Where is it going to go?"

Morrow said her family has lived on Ventures Court in the Villages of Woodbridge subdivision for six years. She has long understood that more development would arrive, but worries that officials are not properly planning for new growth.

"We're producing more homes and more families and I don't see where the kids are going to fit in these schools," said Morrow.

She said when her family moved in the community the area was zoned for Yulee schools. She said it later changed to schools in Fernandina Beach due to local overcrowding.

She also wanted to know what kind of project Woodbrier would be.

"Is it riff-raff? Low income?" asked Morrow. "What's happening?"

Her neighbor Kim Furman shared similar concerns about destroying natural surroundings.

"It's a shame to bulldoze everything just to build houses," said Furman, who came to the meeting with her husband,

Mental Health First Aid offered

Starting Point Behavioral Healthcare has launched the first Mental Health First Aid program in Nassau County. The nonprofit behavioral health agency in Yulee has begun training local residents to improve mental health literacy by helping them identify, understand and respond to signs of mental illness.

The National Council certified two staff members at Starting Point Behavioral Health to provide the Mental Health First Aid program through an instructor certification course. Carrie Anderson Mays and Katrina Robinson Wheeler conducted the first training in March for Starting Point's Board of Directors. They are scheduling additional training for first responders, law enforcement officers, educators, health care workers and other members of the public who are interested in the training.

"We are very excited to bring Mental Health First Aid to our community," said Laureen Pagel, Ph.D, CEO of Starting Point. "This important educational effort goes a lot further than emergency intervention; it really helps people understand the shroud of fear and misjudgment facing individuals and families who experience mental illnesses and addiction. It will help overcome the associated stigma and move more and more people toward recovery."

Pagel noted that, like First Aid or CPR training, the Mental Health First Aid program teaches individuals skills they can use to assist someone in a crisis and know how to direct them to professional intervention or care.

Mental Health First Aid is an eight-hour training certification course that teaches participants a five-step action plan to assess a situation, select and implement interventions and secure appropriate care for the individual. The certification program introduces participants to risk factors and warning signs of mental health problems, builds understanding of their impact and overviews common treatments. Thorough evaluations in randomized controlled trials and a quantitative study have proved the CPR-like program effective in improving trainees' knowledge of mental disorders, reducing stigma and increasing the amount of help provided to others.

"We welcome Starting Point's involvement and enthusiasm in the Mental Health First Aid community," says Linda Rosenberg, MSW, president and CEO of the National Council for Behavioral Health, the organization that brought Mental Health First Aid to the United States in 2008. "We know they will have a great impact on the mental health communities throughout Nassau County and the First Coast, and will be key players in improving mental health literacy nationwide."

In its pilot year, the program was introduced in nearly 20 states and more than 40 communities nationwide. Starting Point, and all the sites across the nation that replicate this program, maintains strict fidelity to the original, proven program.

Mental Health First Aid originated in 2001 in Australia under the direction of founders Betty Kitchener and Tony Jorm.

To date, it has been replicated in 20 other countries worldwide.

For more information or to participate in Mental Health First Aid training in Nassau County, visit www.spbh.org or call Starting Point at 225-8280.

GROWTH

Jerry.

"The traffic is going to be a nightmare. The road to our neighborhood is narrow and it's already a log jam with school buses."

Donald Murphy, who said he lives on Sonoma Drive, said he was concerned about the zoning change to high density residential.

"Is there any future plan to limit the number of units?" said Murphy.

Murphy asked this question because the project called for an increase in density requirements.

The board approved high-level density, a change from low-level density, for an 8-acre parcel north of Woodbridge Parkway. This mean houses my be closer together and closer to the roads.

Under the increase, developers could have built townhouses or multi-unit apartments that would have brought more people to the neighborhood. But they've decided to build single-family homes.

"You're far better off having single-family houses behind you," said board member Bruce Jasinsky, who is also a local real estate broker. "No one wants development when you've had trees."

After the board rezoned the 8-acred parcel, it agreed to combine that parcel with a larger section of the development on the south side of the roadway to create the Woodbrier community (PUD).

Local residents were also told that the development first received approval in 2006. But a sluggish economy halted development. So, showing up at the meeting was not going to reverse course.

Still, the group appeared to appreciate the opportunity to hear the development plans firsthand.

"Thank you for that," said Murphy.

Local attorney Mike Mullin and local engineer Nike Gillette, who are frequently hired by developers to shuttle projects through the county approval process for new development, were on the job for Synovus.

The two fielded questions regarding drainage (existing sites will be expanded); water supply (JEA will supply); and wildlife studies (one was done and it concluded that no animals in the PUD are endangered).

"This plan is complicated and hard to understand," said Mullin, who is also the former Nassau County attorney.

Board member Scott Murray asked about tree protection in the development, and was told by Growth Management Director Peter King that there wasn't any.

"This development isn't on the island. There's tree protection there, but not in the rest of the county," said King.

Board member Sharyl Wood, who also works for the Nassau County School District, said the local schools could accommodate the estimated 50 additional students officials expect to enroll in local schools once the development is complete.

The Woodbrier plan also calls for approximately three acres of parks throughout the community, and the public will have access.

Growth management officials have also suggested a site plan that calls for positioning homes closer to the roadway in an effort to expand the size of backyards.

Setback requirements are 10 feet, while setbacks in the neighboring Woodbridge subdivision are 15 feet.

"This represents a spirit to design a community rather than make spaces for more homes," said King.

Boomers can't party like it's 1999

University of Florida

GAINESVILLE – You may have only had one glass of wine with dinner, but if you're 55 or older, that single serving may hit you hard enough to make you a dangerous driver.

So, baby boomers, what you suspected is true: you can't party like you used to.

Sara Jo Nixon, a professor in the departments of psychiatry and psychology at the University of Florida and doctoral candidate Alfredo Sklar tested how drinking legally non-intoxicating levels of alcohol affect the driving skills of two age groups: 36 people ages 25 to 35 and 36 people ages 55 to 70. They found that although neither age group imbibed enough alcohol to put them over the legal driving limit, a blood alcohol level of 0.08, just one drink can affect the driving abilities of older drivers.

Based on the study findings published in the journal Psychopharmacology in February, the researchers say it could be time to reassess legal blood alcohol levels for all drivers.

"These simulations have been used a lot in looking at older adults, and they have been used at looking how alcohol affects the driving of younger adults, but no one's ever looked at the combination of aging drivers and alcohol," Sklar said.

The study is the latest in a body of work by Nixon and her team that looks at how even moderate doses of alcohol affect aging adults.

At the beginning of the study, both groups completed a driving task completely sober. The task took the drivers down a simulated winding 3-mile stretch of country road. The drivers stared straight ahead at a large computer monitor. Two computer monitors flanked the first, mimicking the side windows of a car and what the drivers would see in their peripheral vision. A stereo system played driving sounds. A console included a steering wheel and brake and gas pedals. Occasionally, the drivers would encounter an oncoming car, but they did not encounter other distractions.

"There wasn't even a cow," said Nixon, who also is co-vice chair and chief of the division of addiction research in the department of psychiatry in the UF College of Medicine and UF's Evelyn F. and William L. McKnight Brain Institute.

Researchers assessed the drivers' ability to stay in the center of their lane and maintain a constant speed. They also looked at how rapidly they adjusted their steering wheel.

On a later day, the groups were further separated into groups. The first imbibed a placebo – a diet lemon-lime soda misted with a negligible amount of alcohol to mimic the experience of drinking alcohol. A second group's drink was strong enough to produce a 0.04 percent breath alcohol level, and a third group's drink gave them a breath alcohol level of 0.065 percent – still below the federal legal level for drinking of 0.08.

Participants then completed the same driving task they performed when they were sober. Researchers timed the task so participants' alcohol levels were declining to mimic a situation in which individuals have a drink with dinner and then drive home.

In younger adults, the researchers found alcohol consumption did not affect their measured driving skills at all – a finding that Nixon called a "bit surprising." She warned that the absence of effects in this laboratory setting does not mean that young adult drivers' driving wouldn't be affected in normal circumstances, driving in a typical, real-world setting. She noted that the laboratory setting was simplified compared with real-world driving and that the current data don't address potential problems in more complex settings.

But for the older drivers, the small, legal levels of intoxication did affect their driving.

The researchers are evaluating additional study results. Participants also drove a course through a small-town setting as well as a city setting, complete with pedestrians, motorists who violated traffic signs and other challenges. Sklar and others in the laboratory will examine brain electrophysiological data collected through scalp electrodes embedded in caps that the subjects were wearing during the drive to study how the brain responds during the driving test when dosed with alcohol.

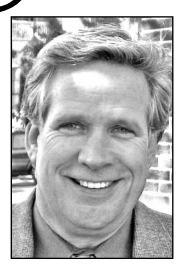
Betting on the (dollar) Bills



STEVE'S MARKET PLACE

Steve Nicklas

A $25,000 investment by Ralph Wilson into the Buffalo Bills in 1959 has grown into a lot of dollar bills today.

As in $870 million. That was the value (according to Forbes) of the NFL franchise at the death of the longtime Bills' owner several weeks ago. While that represents big bucks for the Bills, the moribund Buffalo team is one of the lowest valued franchises in the league.

And before you run out and try to buy an NFL team (any bidders for the Jaguars?), let's look closer at the $869,975,000 of appreciation that Wilson and now his heirs have realized. While it is substantial – averaging a 20 percent return over the 55 years – it is not what it appears.

That's because there are invisible forces at work such as inflation, compounding interest and the law of large numbers. We'll look at each on individually.

While $25,000 seems like a pittance today, it was a lot of money in 1959. To equate it to other prices at that time, a typical Ford car cost $3,000, a gallon of gas was 25 cents and a postage stamp tallied four cents.

The growth in prices of these essentials is known as inflation. This steady rise in prices is here to stay.

While annual inflation has historically been around 3 percent in the U.S., it eats away at returns you receive on an investment. This is particularly true right now with the low interest rates available on some investment or bank products (and let's not forget the impact of taxes).

To combat inflation, however, compounding interest is your ally. With compounding interest, you earn interest on the interest – as well as on the principal.

Ralph Wilson was one of the pioneering owners who took a leap of faith that the league would become what it is today.

This effect quietly contributes to the growth of an investment. And this is especially true as the investment accumulates and becomes larger in value.

The law of large numbers goes like this: a 10 percent return on $10,000 is $1,000; a 10 percent return on $1 million is $100,000. Same percentage of return; much different result. So as Wilson's ownership stake in the Bills soared in value, he benefited from compounding interest and from large numbers, easily outpacing inflation.

And granted, Wilson took a chance with his foray into the American Football League, or AFL. He was one of the pioneering owners in that league who took a leap of faith that the league would become what it is today after a subsequent merger with the longtime football NFL.

It's easy as an armchair quarterback to say that anyone would invest $25,000 into an opportunity that could provide such impressive returns. And place you on a pedestal as an owner of an NFL franchise.

However, there were no guarantees. And the paltry outlay of money verifies a lack of stature of the fledgling AFL at that time. Indeed, a franchise in frozen Buffalo would demand even less of a purchase price than a team in a warmer or major market.

The Bills have some distinction, at least to football fans in North Florida. The Bills rank 30th in terms of value among the 32 teams in the NFL. In last place are the Oakland Raiders. But coming in at the 31st lowest valuation: the Jacksonville Jaguars.

The Jags are worth $840 million, while the team with the highest value is the Dallas Cowboys at $2.3 billion. Now that's a lot of bills, as in dollars – not Buffalo.

County launches video tour promo

MARY MAGUIRE
News-Leader

County officials are planning to launch a series of videos this summer through the county website about the benefits of living, working and visiting Nassau County.

Six one-minute vignettes to be known as a video tour book will focus on a range of local assets, from beaches and businesses to schools and youth athletics. There also will be information on local history, quality of life and charitable organizations.

The goal is to connect website visitors with a visual county experience in an effort to convince them to relocate to the community or schedule a beach vacation.

"This is an exciting opportunity," said Assistant County Manager Shanea Jones.

In a phone interview last week, Jones said the videos are expected to be posted online this summer through the county commission's website at www.nassaucountyfl.com.

Jones is coordinating site visits now and outlining a script with county Project Specialist Sabrina Robertson.

"We've got some ideas, from a visit to Fort Clinch to a tour inside a local school," said Jones. "We're definitely going to show the beach, some business activity and we're planning to schedule time at 4-H programs."

Jones said the spotlight should focus on areas that are funded by local taxpayers, such as schools and economic development.

"We think that's important," said Jones. "We're going to be busy."

A three-day video shoot around the community is scheduled for April 30 to May 2.

This is the same weekend as Shrimp Festival, the largest special event held in the county each year. And Jones said the timing is not a coincidence.

"We specifically scheduled for Shrimp Fest because of the crowds that will be in town and at the beach," said Jones. "We'll have plenty of people having a good time and that's what we want to show."

The videos will be produced at no cost to the county.

How?

A marketing company based in Rochester, N.Y., is handling production in exchange for advertising sales and collecting revenue.

The company is selling advertisements to local companies that will be placed around the video.

"The ads fund production," said Jones. "Nassau County does not have any part in advertising."

Jones said the county board signed off on the agreement at the Jan. 15 meeting.

"We have no part in ad sales," said Jones. "And we are not displaying ads on the county website."

Jones said the video will link to the CGI Communications website where they will play on the company's server.

Jones said the county was first offered this promotional idea in 2011 through its membership in the Florida Association of Counties.

Of course, a video only does any good if people watch it. And according to the county's Director of Information Technology Guy Riner, the county's website has a significant amount of traffic.

In 2013, the total number of visitors to the site was 245,218.

The average number of monthly visitors was 20,435, while the number of unique visitors averaged 9,927.

Both Nassau County Economic Development Director Steve Rieck and Tourist Development Council Director Gil Langley say that video can be an effective marketing tool.

"It's another arrow in our quiver," said Rieck in an email last week.

Langley points out, also in an email last week, that video is rapidly taking over web communications.

"Having a video presence is good for anyone with a web presence," said Langley.

'Putin the Great'

Mitt Romney recently pointed out that Putin is our adversary rather than our enemy. The difference is important.

COACH'S CORNER

Howard Pines

About a year ago I wrote a column, "The Sky is Green," in which I discussed a strategy used by some union leaders in negotiating with companies. The leader I knew best who used this strategy was Charley La Motta, a Teamsters head in the brewing industry. Charlie drove many of the older company labor negotiators crazy by acting totally illogicaly in his drive to win arguments and changes in working conditions which created jobs for his members. In return, these company negotiators treated Charlie with disdain.

I was a young negotiator back then and my boss had a different view of the situation. He encouraged me to build a relationship (not a friendship) with Charlie. Charlie responded in kind and enjoyed schooling me. He pointed out that most management types prided themselves on being logical thinkers and became frustrated when he acted out of control and was illogical. Rather than respond to their carefully thought out presentations with facts of his own, Charlie would get into what he called his "The Sky is Green, The Sky is Green" approach. After a while the management just gave up trying to reason with him and in some cases, to avoid work stoppages, offered him more than he actually wanted.

It appears some Western leaders look at Putin in the same vein. They state that his arguments are unreasonable and illogical. Leaders including President Obama try reasoning with him and his people but it's obvious they are making no headway, as he defends all of his actions utilizing a "Sky is Green" approach. Our frustrated leaders have resorted to threats/sanctions and kicking Russia out of the G-8 which may or may not make sense. Certainly Putin, who is more logical than he appears, quite shrewd and quite duplicitous, thought about the consequences of his actions before he moved forward.

So is there a solution? Obviously not for Crimea, but in the long run Crimea is small potatoes. As companies discovered, with power hungry union officials there are few short-term solutions. The Charlie La Mottas of the world are focused on winning battles to impress their members and while they want companies to stay in business they are most interested in their power, popularity and the growth of their membership. Growing members means more dues and in some cases this is more important than increasing wages. Trying to punish or belittle him only made him more resentful and spiteful.

Mitt Romney recently pointed out while Putin is not our friend, he is our adversary rather than our enemy. The difference is important. Adversaries have opposing interests while enemies want to destroy us. My sense is Romney is right. Therefore, regardless of how we feel, it is important to retain a relationship and to do that, you have to treat him with respect. My experience with people like Putin is you also have to be very predictable. They have to know where the boundary lines are and when "no" is "no." If you aren't clear they tend to make mistakes in judgment that can lead to catastrophe. What we have to remember is that Putin may win the small skirmishes but what really counts is the final score.

You beat adversaries by making them irrelevant. One way is to eliminate them and the second is to get them out of your life. With the Teamsters and other unions, the way to eliminate them was to decertify them through an NLRB election. However, this can be very expensive. In Clinton, Iowa, after five strikes in 10 years, we locked the union out. We ultimately won the decertification vote but the standoff and violence probably cost the company close to $100 million. I came to believe it was usually more prudent to take your time and move your plant to a place where the particular union leader couldn't follow. Our best example was a San Francisco Planters Peanut plant that we moved to Ft. Smith, Ark. We ended up with a non-union facility and got rid of a troublesome union leadership we could never work with regardless of how hard we tried.

So how does this apply to Mr. Putin? Mr. Putin's hero is Peter the Great and his vision is obviously to recreate the Russian empire of the '60s. He does not appear to be a madman like Hitler or Saddam Hussein, as when our interests concur we can work with him. He is more like a Teamsters leader, and punishing, demeaning and cutting off relations with him will probably just make him more spiteful. The better solution is to deal with him, but do so as our adversary.

Russia's main product is energy. Our government and the Europeans have to do everything they can so that Russian energy is no longer important or necessary. That means we have to stay focused and pull together with Europe and, as with the Teamsters, make Putin and his energy irrelevant. If we are successful, this is a message Mr. Putin and, in the long run, the Russian people will understand.

POLITICS IN BRIEF

Liberty Dwellers

"This weekend a cabal of right-wing cronies will be meeting secretly on Amelia Island to plot with left-wing influence peddlers to silence conservative Tea Party candidates and ensure that status quo corruption continues," according to a press released issued by Liberty Dwellers.

The Republican Mainstreet Partnership PAC event is April 11-13. It is reportedly attracting about two dozen Republican lawmakers, including high-ranking congressmen.

Liberty Dwellers has called a press conference for 6 p.m. Thursday at the entrance to The Ritz Carlton, Amelia Island, and will meet at the Peters Point beach access at 10 a.m. Saturday for a street protest.

The group encourages participation. For information call Michele at 556-6982 or e-mail libertydwellers@yahoo.com.

Fair Tax

Florida Fair Tax plans to hold a special rally to raise awareness about the Fair Tax from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, May 17 at the Peck Center, Fernandina Beach

The goal is to educate people within the local community about the benefits of the Florida Fair Tax.

The Florida Fair Tax is a non-partisan effort to replace federal income and payroll taxes with a national retail sales tax. Organizers say this approach simplifies the process because it eliminates the IRS and the complex tax code.

The Florida Fair Tax is a 501(c)(3) organization located in Ponte Vedra. According to the group's flyer, membership fees start at $5 annually.

State driver license fees will be reduced Sept. 1

Nassau County Tax Collector John M. Drew has urged local residents not to purchase a two-year driver's license tag renewal until after fees drop on Sept. 1.

The Florida Legislature approved a reduction in vehicle registration renewal fees.

"I want to applaud Gov. Rick Scott, Senate President Don Gaetz and Speaker of the House Will Weatherford for honoring the Legislature's commitment to the citizens of Florida. The governor has signed legislation that will save Florida motorists $395 million in vehicle renewal fees, based on an average savings of $25 per registration," Drew said.

"I am strongly urging people not to purchase a two year renewal until the fee is reduced on Sept. 1st, 2014," he said in a press release.

Registration fees in 2009 were raised out of the necessity to balance the state budget, a Constitutional requirement. Drew said, "I have seldom seen government reduce a tax once it is established, but that has just happened. This fee reduction appropriately leaves more money in the wallets of the hard working citizens to help pay their monthly expenses. I firmly believe that the local savings will work their way back into Nassau County's economy."

For questions on the renewal process, visit one of the four county office locations, call 491-7400 or go online to www.nassautaxes.com.

'Gold rush' on Cumberland?

Those who know, value and appreciate the wondrous natural heritage of Cumberland Island National Seashore are indebted to Phil Scanlan and his associates for once again reminding us how easily this national treasure could be degraded and spoiled and why we must be ever vigilant for schemes to turn this special place into a selfish business opportunity or playground for special interests. Per Scanlan: "We want equal access and we want it bike friendly."

Most readers are likely unaware that the proposed link to Cumberland is being pushed as part of a grander trail system on the Atlantic coast with far different objectives and purpose. The East Coast Greenway is a commendable project and is being promoted as: "linking many of the major cities of the Eastern Seaboard between Canada and Key West." I fully support the project, however, links to and through remote undeveloped places like Cumberland Island are a significant deviation from the project and its objectives. I fully suspect that some Greenway sponsors and proponents do not support this local diversion onto a national seashore that prioritizes the preservation of our natural heritage via low-impact recreation.

Like religious zealots, some cycling enthusiasts wish to impose their values and objectives on everyone and everyplace, homogenizing our environment into a network of paved and woodland trails and amenities that do not foster any appreciation for our natural heritage or reflect any respect for those with different recreational objectives and values and possessive of a deeper appreciation for what has been preserved for us by preceding generations and thoughtful land managers. They (may) possess some benevolent motives, but it is also evident they have no regard for Cumberland's carefully crafted management measures to preserve the island's natural integrity while accommodating volumes and types of visitation that do not degrade one's experience.

Ferry and bike trail boosters boast of the terrific business and tourism benefits of their plan and one can easily envision how the inevitable expansion of such operations to meet market demand will serve the same commercial idol. Many of our most popular national parks are now overburdened with visitors and their impacts and are engaged in efforts to reduce capacities and pressures on park resources. Fortunately, the National Park Service and supporters of Cumberland's treasured heritage conceived and implemented management measures to prevent such adverse impacts there. The proposed ferry service and bike trail diversion are in direct conflict with those measures.

Like religious zealots, cycling enthusiasts wish to impose their values and objectives on every place, homogenizing our environment into a network of paved and woodland trails and amenities that do not foster any appreciation for our natural heritage.

Perhaps indicative of this latest scheme's potentially adverse impacts to Cumberland and its resources, we see no mention of the ferry proponents consulting or reaching out to any of the organizations long dedicated to conserving and protecting the seashore for all Americans and future generations. I suspect we will soon learn how receptive the hosts of organizations invested in the protection and conservation of Georgia's coast are to this latest development.

Ferry boosters will likely discover that a majority of Georgia citizens possess an entirely different respect and appreciation for their coastal environment in comparison to their associates and supporters on this side of the river. Some will attribute this disparity to selfish business interests affiliated with exclusive access to Cumberland Island, but this perspective is unfounded since the overwhelming majority of our neighbors have no such associations and their interest and objectives are more deeply rooted in the preservation versus exploitation of our natural heritage.

As a native resident of Amelia and visitor to Cumberland since childhood, I am dismayed by the "gold rush" mentality of some involved in this effort. I am left to wonder why they do not understand or accept the well-reasoned management philosophy of the National Park Service and why they cannot restrain their commercial aspirations for the greater benefit of Cumberland and future generations seeking an unspoiled opportunity to experience the "wild island" all visitors currently enjoy.

Throughout their shared geologic and cultural histories, it was Amelia that became the sacrificial lamb for industry, commerce, development, resorts and unrestrained tourism. Despite this saga, Amelia continues to suffer endless abuses and exploitation and it becomes harder with each passing year to find peace and tranquility in this island's vanishing natural environment. Any and all efforts to infect Cumberland with the same fatal disease must be resisted and opposed at every level. The only ferry needed is a metaphorical one to carry us beyond the latest threat to a vibrant and unadulterated Cumberland Island. Long may she endure – unfettered by men and their endless schemes.

The Wilderness Act:

"For this purpose there is hereby established a National Wilderness Preservation System to be composed of federally owned areas designated by Congress as "wilderness areas," and these shall be administered for the use and enjoyment of the American people in such manner as will leave them unimpaired for future use as wilderness, and so as to provide for the protection of these areas, the preservation of their wilderness character, and for the gathering and dissemination of information regarding their use and enjoyment as wilderness..."

Definition of Wilderness:

"A wilderness, in contrast with those areas where man and his own works dominate the landscape, is hereby recognized as an area where the Earth and its community of life are untrammeled by man, where man himself is a visitor who does not remain. An area of wilderness is further defined to mean in this Act an area of undeveloped Federal land retaining its primeval character and influence, without permanent improvements or human habitation, which is protected and managed so as to preserve its natural conditions and which (1) generally appears to have been affected primarily by the forces of nature, with the imprint of man's work substantially unnoticeable; (2) has outstanding opportunities for solitude or a primitive and unconfined type of recreation...."

Given the above, the St. Marys EarthKeepers, Inc. strongly protest any efforts to increase the permissible number of visitors to Cumberland Island National Seashore.

Background: Local cycling enthusiasts (and others) in Fernandina Beach are attempting to persuade the National Park Service to divide the contract for ferry service between the existing provider in St. Marys, Ga., and one that would leave from the city marina in Fernandina. ("We want equal access and we want it bike friendly," said Phil Scanlan of the Friends of the Amelia Island Trail, Inc.)

A new ferry service would result in an increase in the number of visitors to Cumberland Island – currently set at 300 per day. It is being proposed that an additional two ferries per day (departing from Fernandina) carry 150 passengers per trip, effectively doubling the allowable number of daily visitors to the Island. Greater numbers of visitors will directly intensify the human impact on the island's already delicate ecosystems, and would contradict the very purpose for which Cumberland Island was preserved as a national seashore.

Furthermore, the concept of making the island, a national wilderness that forbids wheeled vehicles, more "bike friendly" flies in the face of the very essence and intent of the Wilderness Act. The National Park Services does not have the available resources to monitor the activities of increased visitors in order to ensure that the island's ecosystems are protected at all times. Cyclists who are able to forge new trails and broach the fragile nesting, breeding and foraging habitats of the island's species will, without doubt, disrupt the flora and fauna of Cumberland Island.

In closing, we urge local, state and national legislators to deny the above proposal, thereby safeguarding Cumberland Island National Seashore – a precious and irreplaceable wilderness – for present and future generations.

Alex Kearns, Chair
St. Marys EarthKeepers, Inc.

The National Park Service recently announced that they will accept bids for a new ferry service to Cumberland Island. Now officials and local entrepreneurs are pushing to increase the number of daily visitors to the island. This service would undoubtedly stimulate the economy in either St. Marys, Ga., Fernandina Beach or both. Yet there are more than just business interests to be considered.

When Cumberland Island was made a National Seashore, Congress directed the National Park Service that "no development of the project or plan for the convenience of visitors shall be undertaken which would be incompatible with the preservation of the unique flora and fauna" (section 5b). Increasing the number of visitors will also directly increase the human impact on the island's already fragile ecosystems and would contradict the very purpose for which Cumberland Island was preserved as a national seashore.

Furthermore, the Wilderness Act indicates that an area is set aside for wilderness when it "has outstanding opportunities for solitude" (section 2c). Visitors cherish these increasingly rare opportunities to enjoy solitude in undisturbed wilderness. Instead of looking to Cumberland Island and seeing dollar signs, we should appreciate what makes the island so unique: its diverse ecosystems and the opportunities it provides to commune with nature in a land untouched by the impacts of tourism and development.

City explains voluntary annexations

The city issued this statement last week. It is published in full:

At the April 1 City Commission meeting, the commission approved at first reading voluntary annexations for the Gateway at Amelia commercial center, the Hess gas station, Somerset apartments, the Scott and Sons commercial center and the FPU substation along South Eighth Street/A1A/SR 200. Together, the 13 properties total approximately 24 acres.

Annexations require that properties be contiguous to city limits. Because of the recent annexation of property off of Bailey Road, these properties are now contiguous (adjacent to the city boundary). Property owners for these parcels proposed for annexation signed voluntary annexation agreements at the time they requested connection to the city's utilities system. These agreements state that the property owners agreed to annex into the city when they became contiguous. The property owners have received benefit of the city's utility system since they chose to connect. The city had to run utility lines to the Gateway commercial center in particular because at the time, there were not city lines in that vicinity. Developers always pay connection costs for any development project, whether in or out of the city limits, at the time of connection. This is so taxpayers and ratepayers do not pay the costs.

When properties are annexed into the city, they are required by state law to switch to the city's future land use and zoning designations. The commercial properties proposed for annexation will have a future land use and zoning of General Commercial, which allows the same opportunities as their current Nassau County land use and zoning. The same is true of the Somerset property, which will have a high-density residential land use and zoning. The City intends to work with property owners to ensure that any prior entitlements they may have received in the county will be honored in the city as well.

The voluntary annexation agreements were recorded through the Nassau County Clerk of Courts at the time of their approval. In processing the voluntary annexations, the city has complied with all voluntary annexation requirements found in Florida Statutes Chapter 171 and notice requirements found in the city's Land Development Code. The associated future land use and zoning cases will return to the commission in June after review by the Florida Department of Economic Opportunity. When future land use changes are over 10 acres, the state must review the proposal. Second reading for the annexations will be heard at the April 15 City Commission meeting.

Shrimpfest committee responds

It's just a few short weeks until the 51st Annual Isle of Eight Flags Shrimp Festival. Beginning with the Pirate Parade on Thursday, May 1, and continuing through the weekend of May 2, 3, 4, tens of thousands of visitors will once again roam our streets, pirates will invade, fine artists and craftsmen will display their works, shrimp boats will line our marina docks and local nonprofit organizations will offer an abundance of culinary delights featuring a variety of seafood including delicious wild caught shrimp.

Over the past week much has been made in the local press (Voice of the People, April 4) and social media about the withdrawal of the "Shrimp Producers Association" as a food vendor at this year's Shrimp Festival. Let us start by saying that, while the Shrimp Producers Association is a wonderful organization, the actions and opinions of their chosen representatives to the Shrimp Festival do not reflect the views of all shrimpers, local or otherwise.

The voluntary withdrawal of this organization is not about local shrimp or local shrimpers, or even about the Shrimp Producers Association itself. It is about two individuals who, while acting as representatives of that organization, became angry and stormed out of a meeting, loudly and enthusiastically announcing their withdrawal and vowing to do everything in their power to destroy the Shrimp Festival. This action was taken solely because they could not dictate the exact placement of their food booth, immediately and without any discussion whatsoever, with total disregard for the opinions, rights and feelings of the other equally deserving local nonprofit organizations at the meeting.

The media coverage and subsequent social media bashing of the Shrimp Festival and the over 40 local residents who, as unpaid volunteers, organize and execute this award-winning, nationally acclaimed event, is the direct result of their efforts to make good on their promise to destroy the festival. Their claims that the Shrimp Festival Committee has not supported their organization, or has in some way treated them unfairly, are totally unfounded.

On the contrary, the committee has time and time again overlooked their antagonistic attitude toward the committee and their fellow nonprofit participants, and repeatedly forgiven their flagrant disregard for the rules and regulations set forth for all festival food vendors; rules that are necessary to ensure a safe and productive festival for everyone. At the time that they walked out and withdrew from the festival they were, in fact, the only vendor that had not submitted the paperwork required to participate in the festival. This paperwork, which was due the week prior to this meeting, is critical as it includes their nonprofit statement, accountability form and health permit.

The claims that their actions are somehow linked to a protest against the use of foreign or farm-raised shrimp are equally unfounded. The committee requires all vendors selling shrimp to declare, and conspicuously post at their booth, the origin of the shrimp being served. All but two of the nearly 20 food booths selling shrimp this year have stated that they will be using local or U.S. wild caught shrimp. As a matter of clarification, the exclusive use of truly local Northeast Florida shrimp at the festival is not possible due to the timing of the local shrimping season.

There is no denying that these two individuals are extremely passionate about the shrimping industry, and that is to be admired. Unfortunately, in this case, passion gave way to aggressively negative behavior and the withdrawal of a very fine organization from the festival.

We invite everyone to join us in historic downtown Fernandina Beach for a weekend filled with family fun featuring pirates, art, antiques, music, a Kids Fun Zone, and lots and lots of shrimp at YOUR local Isle of Eight Flags Shrimp Festival, as always, the first weekend in May!

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Music and Craft Beer Festival

While it's great that people in the community catch a bunch of fish and play a lot of golf, it's also wonderful when an event like last week's festival provides the area with entertainment and activities the likes of what the community has ever had.

The sad part is that not one word or picture was ever mentioned in this newspaper. Coverage of something of this magnitude should be made a priority. It gives the good people of our city and the surrounding area a pleasant change to what they are normally exposed to. All of the proceeds from the festival went to the 8 Flags Playscapes project to build a handicap accessible playground. How wonderful it would have been if the local newspaper gave some consideration not only to the festival but to the project it was held for.

Poverty

During my 67 years on Earth I have looked in various arenas where social activity occurs. I have seen nation turn against nation, neighbor against neighbor and wife against husband. I have cried tears for the victims of those driven by problematic attitudes. Not surprisingly, I have seen empty cupboards, discarded belongings and other evidence of poverty. Let me ask: Do you think it's right for a rich man to acquire 10 houses while a poor man has only a cardboard box?

Please do not blame the victims. Our economic system allows greedy profiteers to charge 30, 40 even 50 times the minimum wage for an equal amount of labor instead of a more reasonable 3 or 4 or 5. Undoubtedly, this tenfold wealth-producing formula insures that poverty will be perpetuated in America. And not just here or the Philippines. It is happening all around the Earth in various arenas where social activity occurs.

POLICE REPORT

This was written by Angela Daughtry of the News-Leader from oral and written reports by the Nassau County Sheriff's Office, the City of Fernandina Beach Police Department and other agencies. Arrest indicates suspicion of a crime, not guilt.

Anyone with information about criminal activity can contact the Fernandina Beach Police Department at 277-7342 or the Nassau County Sheriff's Office anonymously by calling 225-0147 in Yulee or Fernandina Beach, or 879-2136 in Callahan, Hilliard or Bryceville. The "We Tip" program – 1-800-78CRIME – also allows callers to leave anonymous tips.

Stun gun used

A Georgia man was arrested in Fernandina Beach March 30 for felony criminal mischief after police subdued him with a stun gun for disorderly intoxication, according to a police report.

During an investigation of a "loud disturbance" at a local motel around 2:30 a.m., city police found a man on the second floor walking with a Mason jar in one hand and a beer in the other, according to a report.

Because the man appeared young, an officer asked him how old he was, the report stated. The man responded that he was 15 and began to walk away. The officer reportedly yelled several times for the man to stop but instead he ran, dropping the Mason jar on the ground.

The officer caught up with the man, identified as Kyle Austin Hopkins, 29, of Kingsland, Ga., but Hopkins reportedly attempted to run away. At that point the officer deployed his stun gun and Hopkins fell to the ground. Hopkins was handcuffed and placed under arrest, during which time police found the probes of the stun gun had completely missed him.

Hopkins reportedly had slurred speech and appeared to be intoxicated. Police also recovered the Mason jar, which was found to contain moonshine, according to the report.

Hopkins was transferred to the police station and evaluated by fire-rescue personnel, the report states, but his behavior toward them was "uncooperative and belligerent."

After being cleared by fire-rescue, Hopkins was placed in a holding cell, where he reportedly broke a fire sprinkler, causing the police booking area to flood. Damage was estimated at more than $1,000.

Hopkins "constantly bragged about the damage he had caused," according to the report, and continued with his belligerent behavior. The fire department was called to deal with the water damage.

Hopkins was consequently transported to Nassau County Jail and charged with disorderly intoxication, possession of moonshine, resisting arrest without violence and criminal mischief, a felony. Photos were taken of the water damage to the booking area.

Fraudulent checks

A local woman told police March 28 that an unknown person had cashed several checks on her Bank of America account totaling $12,450, according to a police report.

The woman told police she discovered the fraudulent checks while checking her account information March 27.

Copies of the fraudulent checks were provided to police. The woman noted the checks did not look like her actual checks and that they showed her past address in Waycross, Ga., according to the report. One check was dated Feb. 12 and the other was dated March 10.

According to the police report, there was no indication as to where the checks were cashed, but one check proved to be a mobile deposit. The woman contacted Bank of America and initiated a fraud report, and the loss of funds was replaced, according to the report.

Road trip to Sanford

PAT FOSTER-TURLEY/FOR THE NEWS-LEADER

Dawn view of Lake Monroe in downtown Sanford.

WILD WAYS

Pat Foster-Turley

You just never know what new sights and experiences a road trip will stir up, even a short one, if you keep your eyes open and your options flexible. I learned this fact again recently when my gal friend Susan and I traveled to Sanford for an overnight stay just to see a part of Florida we were both unfamiliar with.

I picked Sanford as our night's destination based solely on the fact that Bill Belleville moved there after his country home 20 miles north of Orlando was lost to development and he choose to live in the middle of a small town instead of watching his backyard turn to concrete. Bill is a nature writer and author of great Florida books like River of Lakes: A Journey on Florida's St. Johns River and Losing It All to Sprawl which describes the sad development that chased him from the countryside. Both books are highly recommended for those interested in Florida's natural history. If Bill liked Sanford it had to be a good place to visit, my instincts told me. And my instincts were right!

In the evening the town was bustling with locals and some visitors, but not in alarming amounts like we have in Fernandina some days. An easy stroll from our marina hotel got us right into the middle of town with plenty of restaurants and night spots recommended by our smart phone apps "TripAdvisor," "Yelp" and "UrbanSpoon" to choose from. But it didn't take us long to find the action – Hollerbach's Willow Tree Café. If you like German food, oompah bands with accordions and xylophones and singalong drinking with beer mugs upraised, this place is for you!

But we didn't go to Sanford for the nightlife – it was the natural areas surrounding it that drew us there. For one thing, it was still manatee season in nearby Blue Springs, where these placid mammals lounge in the constant temperature waters to avoid the winter cold further north. We were lucky on our visit to Blue Springs – it was not overfull to capacity with tourists and we were able to get good close-up views of the manatees and the water was clear enough to watch the alligator gars and other smaller fish sharing the water with them.

Blue Springs we knew about in advance but the real surprise of our road trip was just 10 miles away – Lyonia Preserve, a 360-acre piece of rare Florida scrubland protected from development by Volusia County and supported by a modern education center and nature museum, an amphitheater and large library nearby. All in all, we learned, at least 350 square miles of natural land has been preserved by this county – something that Nassau County, sadly, is far from matching.

The most talked about feature of Lyonia Preserve is the population of Florida scrub jays, a threatened species only found in Florida, and restricted to the last remaining scrub habitat in the state. Lyonia Preserve has a good population of Florida scrub jays and their protection has emboldened these inquisitive birds to approach people without fear.

Well, we didn't see any scrub jays on our short hike through the nature trails, but we found something even better – we found Stephen Kintner, the conservation chair for West Volusia Audubon Society who was leading a nature tour.

With Stephen's help we admired the Florida harvester ants with their circular nests on the pathway, well marked by the tiny twigs and other debris they remove from their nest and circle the area with. We saw a number of species of endemic plants – plants only found in this scrub habitat in Florida that thrive in this nutrient-poor, silica sand soil. Among these, the Florida rosemary bushes stood out as beautiful individual specimens with new green growth spurting at the tips of the vertical stalks. Another plant called Garberia attracted us with its ornate spiraled leaf formations. Four different species of blueberry plants were also in flower in the area, adding bright splashes of reddish yellow to the scene and paths of grey reindeer moss (a type of lichen) meandered through the shrubs.

The Florida scrub habitat with its pure white nutrient-poor sandy soil is sometimes called Florida's desert. This area is about as different from the lushly foliated areas of nearby Blue Springs as two parcels of land can be. But like all things in nature, these places are connected. Water flowing into sinkholes in Lyonia percolates through the limestone karst substrate beneath the dry sand and ends up flowing out into the manatee habitat on Blue Springs.

If you still have time for a road trip before the weather heats up you can't go wrong by visiting the areas around Sanford. Besides all this nature, there's also the nearby town of Cassadaga, which is inhabited by spiritualists, mediums and new-age diviners of all kinds. Yes, there's something for everyone around Sanford. If it's good enough for Bill Belleville and good enough for Susan and me, it's surely good enough for you!

John Jones once again demonstrated his black drum fishing skills by taking second-place honors with an 80-pound black drum. Jasmine Tulloh fished with Capt. Benny Hendrix, taking third place with a 79.14-pound black drum.

"We had an excellent tournament this year," said Teresa Whitman of Leaders & Sinkers bait and tackle shop. "We had several more entries this year and, more importantly, the weather and fishing were just outstanding. I can't remember a drum tournament where there were so many black drum caught."

"This past Friday evening I fished with Capt. Benny Hendrix aboard his charter fishing boat 'Heavy Hitter' and we boated some 13 black drum weighing between 25-75 pounds," Greg Waters said. "Our fishing party fished just a few hundred yards off the breaking surf at Main Beach. Also included in our fishing party were Tony Peeples, Destiny Smith and Jasmine Tulloh."

Night fishing during the spring black drum season often produces the best fishing action. The moon and tidal conditions are critical as well.

"I prefer the incoming tide when fishing after dark," Hendrix said. "Also the full or noon moon periods produce the best black drum fishing action when there is more current. When anchoring up just off the beach at the east end of Atlantic Avenue, also called the Main Beach fishing hole, the incoming tide allows our fishing boat to anchor properly, where barbed crab baits are fished off from the stern into a deep slough and not under the boat."

The winners of the recent black drum fishing tournament will be honored during the Nassau Sport Fishing Association social meeting. The monthly event will be held April 23 beginning at 7 p.m. at Ten Acres. For details, visit www.nsfafish.com.

Many black drum fishermen feel as though some of the best drum fishing action is yet to come.

"I would have liked for the drum fishing tournament to run right through the month of April," Peeples said. "There should be a major black drum migration around the up coming full moon, which takes place April 15. Also the tides will be ideal with a flood tide arriving after the sunsets at 10:03 p.m. April 15."

Even though the NSFA black drum competition has ended, area fishermen will be trying to beat David Cartwright's current Florida IGFA black drum all-tackle record, which weighed 96 pounds. Cartwright also caught his record-breaking black drum while night fishing just off Main Beach during an incoming tide.

Fernandina Beach's Ryan Rodeffer and team "Game Day" won the 2014 Northeast Florida Wahoo Shootout with an amazing three-fish weight of 238 pounds. Their largest wahoo weighed 87.48 pounds. Team "Game Day" won a new Yellowfin 21-foot bay boat powered by a 250 hp Yamaha outboard and Ameratrail boat trailer valued at $63,000.

Capt. Jimmy Johnson will hold a backwater fishing clinic sponsored by the Nassau Sport Fishing Association April 12 beginning at 1 p.m. The event will take place at the Dee Dee Bartel state park and boat ramp located at the north end of 14th Street.

Main topics will include summer tarpon fishing at Amelia Island and targeting popular backwater species, including redfish, sea trout, flounder and more. Johnson will demonstrate how to rig up and fish for all of these saltwater gamefish species.

Johnson has been a professional fishing guide on Amelia Island since 1980 and operates Amelia Island Bait & Tackle with his wife Sally Johnson. For information, visit www.nsfa.com or call Dave Smith at 557-6374.

This Week: The Masters Tournament

Augusta National Golf Club
Augusta, Georgia

Defending: Adam Scott
Winning Score: 9-under par
Winning Share: $1,440,000

The Masters is the first major tournament of the season on the PGA Tour and is one of the most revered titles in the world of golf. The tournament began in 1934 as the Augusta National Invitational Tournament with Horton Smith winning the inaugural event by one stroke over Craig Wood. Jack Nicklaus holds the record for the most Masters victories, winning six times (1963, 1965, 1966, 1972, 1975, 1986). Last year, Adam Scott beat 2009 champion Angel Cabrera on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff, becoming the first Australian to win a Green Jacket.

Last Week: Matt Jones Chips-In For First PGA Win

On the first playoff hole, Matt Jones chipped-in from the front of the green to win the Shell Houston Open and earned a last minute berth to this week's Masters Tournament. Jones started Sunday six shots back of leader Matt Kuchar and had to make a 46-foot putt on the final hole in regulation just to force extra holes. "Going to Augusta is amazing," Jones said. "The win means everything to me right now because that's what we play for is to win. To have Augusta as a reward for that win is amazing."

Golf Trivia

Which golfer shot the highest round ever at the Masters Tournament?

a) Doug Ford
b) Horton Smith
c) Fred McLeod
d) Arnold Palmer

Answer: a) Doug Ford (1957 Masters champion) was 77 in 2000 and shot a 94 in the first round. He teed off in 2001, but walked off after one hole. In 2002, Augusta National sent him a letter asking him to stop playing.

Golfing News

Tiger Woods will miss the Masters this week for the first time in his professional career after undergoing surgery last week for a pinched nerve in his back. In a statement on his website, Woods said he hopes to return to competition "sometime this summer," but there is no guarantee he will be in top competitive form for any of the year's three remaining majors. Woods has played in the Masters every year since 1995, when he was the reigning U.S. Amateur champion. In 19 starts at Augusta National, Woods missed the cut just once (1996, when again, he was the reigning U.S. Amateur champion) and has finished in the top 10 on 13 occasions, including seven finishes in the top 3 and four victories.

Lessons from the Golf Pro

While we rarely see it happen from a professional golfer, the shank is an all too familiar shot in the arsenal of the amateur golfer. The main cause for the shank is that the clubface remains open through impact. When we strike the ball, the hosel of the club is what hits the ball. Consequently, the ball shoots off at virtually a 90 degree angle to the trajectory that we are expecting when we line up to hit it. One of the easiest fixes to the problem is to position the ball in the hosel of the club and attempt to hit the ball with the toe of the club. What this accomplishes is that it makes you bring the club back to the ball from the inside. The other bit of advice is to make sure that your left forearm rotates completely through impact. This makes sure the club rotates all the way through after contact.

Six months left to live

FROM THE PORCH

Dickie Anderson

Six months to live. That is what the doctors told Amelia Islander Walt Moser. His liver and kidneys were failing. A visit to Mayo Clinic resulted in his being added to the transplant list for both liver and kidneys. Walt and his wife assumed it would be a long wait, but as luck would have it Walt's name came up within days, not weeks or months.

He is now "feeling better than ever" and on the Management Team for the Katie Caples Foundation. Riding back from Mayo Clinic and discussing what they were facing, the couple were both surprised at how little they knew about organ transplants and organ donation.

A lightning strike, as I often observe, can happen at any time. It can be an accident, unexpected bad news or a life threatening diagnosis. Lightning strikes change our lives and the way we look at and value each and every day.

In 1988 another couple, Dave and Susan Caples, experienced their own lightning strike – the tragic death of their 17-year-old daughter in an automobile accident. The Caples, who recently sold their award-winning bed and breakfast inn, the Elizabeth Pointe Lodge, were told that Katie would not survive. They too knew little about organ transplants. A representative from OPO (Organ Procurement Organization) talked to them about the possibility of donating Katie's organs. The Caples were comforted by the sensitive and thoughtful woman who reminded them that Katie had made the choice for them. As she got her first driver's license, she chose to be an organ donor.

Everyone who faces tragedy finds their own way to grieve and go on. The Caples found their way and their way has been a commitment to helping others understand and consider the importance of organ donation. The couple created the Katie Caples Foundation. The Foundation allowed the community, friends and family to support a scholarship fund in her honor.

The Foundation wanted to do more. "We needed a fundraising event to create awareness and raise money to create broader organ donor awareness programs. I just knew it should be a bike ride," Caples shares and then smiles. "I have never been a bicycle rider. I am a sailor, but I knew the bike ride was the right event, so we did it."

Walt Moser has found a way as well. He serves on the management team and shares his very personal story on behalf of the Katie Caples Foundation.

Jennifer Cook, events director shared, "We are so appreciative of the community and its support for so many years. As the Ride is in its 10th year (and the Foundation in its 15th) the board and management team has seen such an outpouring of support from the community and that commitment inspires us."

There are lots of ways to get involved. You do not have to ride 100 miles! You can bike the distance you are comfortable with, walk or volunteer. Maybe the most important thing you can do is to make sure your driver's license indicates your intent to donate your organs and that your family supports your decision.

Katie Ride

On April 4 Jennifer Cook, events director from the Katie Caples Foundation, visited the Rotary Club of Amelia Island Sunrise to give the an update and preview of the Katie Ride being held Saturday.

The Katie Ride was established in 2005 to raise awareness about organ donation registration and to raise funds for the Katie Caples Foundation educational programs. Jennifer shared staggering information about the status of organ donations in the U.S. For example, 121,000 patients are on the national organ donation registry awaiting an organ. Eighteen people across the country die each day awaiting an organ. The Katie Caples Foundation focuses on reaching students in 20 counties as they get their driver licenses, whereby they can indicate their desire to donate their organs. They are seeing great results. In Florida, 47 percent of licensed drivers are organ donors. In the 20 counties covered by the Foundation, 64 percent of licensed drivers are designated organ donors. The Katie Ride continues to grow in its reach.

Register at www.katierideforlife.org/register/. Fees range from $10 to $45.

Ashley Powell, Raymond Snyder and Ernest Roberts, above left, are three happy county residents who will be able to install rain barrels at their homes. Master Gardener volunteer Paul Gosnell has conducted three rain barrel class for Nassau County Extension, educating and providing food-grade barrels for conversion to rain barrels. Homeowners who have flower and vegetable gardens benefit from having a rain barrel by reducing their water bills and growing healthier plants, since rain water does not have chlorine in it. For more information see the Extension's Landscape Matters page at http://nassau.ifas.ufl.edu/horticulture/landmatters/landmatters.html and scroll down to the Rain Barrels link. Call the Extension office at 879-1019 to go on the waiting list for the next class. Susan Koufakis, right, above right, is joined by her mom June Buck, who came to support her at the Landscape Matters class. Susan, whose rain barrel will be connected to a down spout, is looking forward to collecting and using rain water for her flower garden. At mom's encouragement, she's planning a vegetable garden as well.
