Port's exit from plan welcomed?

Locals consider what the Palm Beach agency's departure means to jobs

By Jose Jesus Zaragoza
INI Florida

Following last month's announcement of the Port of Palm Beach's decision to opt out of its own ambitious inland port project -- a plan which promised the creation of thousands of jobs locally -- the citizens of the Glades, according to J.P. Sasser, were dancing in the streets.

Far removed from the idea that the Glades cities would see the Palm Beach agency's departure as the de facto death knell, yet another setback in an area sees unemployment levels as high as 40 percent, the mayor of Pahokee sees it in altogether different terms.

"It's not so much the Port backing out, but the Port getting out of the way," the mayor said. "They were more of a hindrance than a help."

Despite what the announcement signaled, that the push to site a sprawling inland port near South Bay to receive cargo and traffic from South Florida's ports would become more of an uncertainty, local leaders are instead focusing on what needs to be done now.

Instead, Mayor Sasser has pledged his commitment to Florida Crystals' desire to move forward with its own plan. Florida Crystals owned the land which the Port ranked first out of a number of proposed sites, including two in Hendry County, but having been caught up in contentious arguments that the site was environmentally sensitive, Florida Crystals proposed a second site last month.

That is when the Port of Palm Beach, in the possible situation to face legal contention if it went with an alternate site, backed out.

It is not the first time Mr. Sasser has seen the silver lining.

"I was encouraged, almost as excited as when the state of Florida announced it would be buying U.S. Sugar," he said, explaining the land expansion opportunities that project would present if it ever is realized.

Forty minutes west, the conclusion is nearly the same on the Port's vote: Kevin McCarthy, a Hendry County commissioner who has been among the most vocal in seeking state support of a plan -- any plan -- to reassure Clewiston's future in light of the state's initiative to purchase U.S. Sugar, sees the Port of Palm Beach's exit as a good thing.

A very good thing.

He won't say whether there is any newfound momentum in the county's push to market Airglades Airport as the single best site for a successful inland port project, whether this latest development is seeing a flurry of activity in Hendry County. If anything, the news was more of a relief than a Godsend.

"My immediate reaction was that they were the wrong agency from the beginning to be the lead on the inland port," said Mr. McCarthy, simultaneously praising the Port for having had the original vision. "Unfortunately, the Port didn't have the resources. As they said, they needed it the most, they were going to use it the least."

Of course, Mr. McCarthy would like the state to come in and consider the Hendry site as the location for a comprehensive inland

There is no shortage of activities for local kids to participate in during the summer. Here, children with the successful First Tee Golf Program enjoy a morning round of golf on Tuesday.

Glades kids enjoying Summer fun

Enjoyment can be found closer than one may think

By Ashley Causey
Special to The Sun

Last bell has rung, lockers are bare, and the sights of school buses are long gone. This can only mean one thing: school is out for the summer.

But sometimes without a strict schedule to follow, kids can fall into the lifestyle of a couch potato, with video games, television shows and high calorie snacks.

There is more than just the life of a couch potato; summer fun in the Glades can be found right outside your door.

In the still-recovering economy, family vacations might not be a top priority for many families, but the local library is one spot where adventures abound.

From forensic challenges to magic shows, the Belle Glade branch has many opportunities for teens and children to take a vacation of their own.

They also feature summertime arts and crafts every Monday and Tuesday starting at 3 p.m.

Other ways to send summertime boredom packing are summer camps.

She shared, "Collaborate is a summer camp hosted at the First Baptist church during June 20-25.

"This is not a camp where we go on field trips to Sea World but instead we will be working around the Glades area. Our volunteer activities include painting houses, and churches. We are also are teaming up with the Haitian Church to help with their vacation bible school."

Miss Key explains why Collaborate is her number one camp during the summer.

"This is by far my favorite camp

Amy McKown joins staff at Independent Newspapers

The staff at the Clewiston News, Glades County Democrat and The Sun are pleased to welcome Amy McKown. Ms. McKown will be serving as Sales Consultant for The Clewiston News, The Glades County Democrat and The Sun.

In her new role, Ms. McKown will be working closely with staff to brainstorm and come up with the best advertising campaigns for our clients.

Ms. McKown has been associated with The Clewiston News for a number of months now, having submitted and published several articles, but it was her experience and drive that caught the company's attention.

Ms. McKown is no stranger to the media world.

She traces her career in radio and newspaper back to one fateful day as a teenager, when after missing school due to an illness she thought she would call in to a radio show contest. Her winning entry in the contest? A poem about the "New Kids on the Block."

"That dates me a little bit," she joked.

When she stopped by to pick up her prize, the radio station offered her a job.

During her career, Ms. McKown has performed a number of jobs: part-time DJ, reporter, news manager, sales manager, photographer, etc.

She hopes to draw on all these skills with her new position.

"I would like to help the paper become more of the window of our community for those that come in and visit, and for those who don't know everything about their own community," she said.

She is no stranger to Clewiston, either.

Since moving to town last year with her husband, Ms. McKown has not allowed herself to sit back and take in the scenery. Along with volunteering with the Sugar Festival committee, Ms. McKown has served as a CRA (Community Redevelopment Agency) board member, helped in the Ladies' Golf Association's Susan G. Komen tournament and the Hendry County Tourism Development Council, as well as worked with the local chamber of commerce on projects.

She is enjoying her new life in Clewiston.

"I love it," she said. "The people are extremely friendly. It is essentially a clone of the hometown I grew up in, just a few degrees different on the humidity."

Amy is married to Steve McKown, and has four children, Steven, 13, Nicki, 13, Sara, 10, and Walter, 2.

If you are interested in advertising, Ms. McKown can be reached at amckown@newszap.com.

'It is not too late to ensure our community counts'

The 2010 Census is in full swing and even if you haven't mailed in your census form, there's still time to ensure that our community counts.

Households that haven't yet participated in the 2010 Census will receive a visit from a census enumerator. These census workers are from our community and will ask you the same questions that are on the 2010 Census questionnaire.

The visit should take no more than 10 minutes and your participation will benefit our community for a decade.

Don't worry about the confidentiality of your information; it is protected by law and no one, not even the president, has access to it.

It's important to be counted on the census, because census numbers at least partially determine the amount of funding our community gets for everything from healthcare services to school programs, roads and bridges to federal disaster relief programs. It also determines our representation in Congress.

Rural counties, like ours, have been historically underrepresented in the census. In 2000, Florida's 32 rural counties had an average response rate of only 52 percent. That means nearly half of the state's rural county residents weren't counted.

We can do better. Open your door to the clearly-identified census taker.

A few minutes is all it takes to make sure our community counts. For more information about the 2010 Census, visit sunshinecensus2010.com or 2010census.gov.

Remembering that June is dedicated to 'Men's Health'

By Pat Dobbins

Did you know that, on average, men are less healthy and have a shorter life expectancy than women? Part of the reason for this health gap is that men don't take care of themselves as well as women do. Men are less likely to have health insurance, more likely to work in dangerous occupations, and often put off going to the doctor even when they really should go. As a result, men die at a younger age (and in greater numbers) of heart disease, stroke, cancer, diabetes, and many other diseases. Back in 1920, women outlived men by an average of only one year. Today, women outlive men by an average of five years. More than half of the "premature deaths" among men are preventable.

It's interesting that when a warning light flashes on the car dashboard, most men usually take the car to the shop. But when warning lights flash on their body, most men don't (or won't) notice. Here are a few flashing lights that men should look out for:

Men's Health Month and National Men's Health Week were established to help increase public awareness about the importance of early detection of preventable diseases among men and boys. Due to a lack of awareness, poor health education, and culturally induced behavior patterns in their work and personal lives, men's health and well-being are deteriorating steadily. Men's Health Month and National Men's Health Week is a special campaign to help educate men and their families about the importance of positive health attitudes and preventive health care practices.

Men's Health Month is observed during the month of June. National Men's Health Week is recognized annually as the week leading up to Father's Day. This year it is celebrated June 14-20, 2010.

Electronic health record system coming to HRMC

By Glenda Wilson

As part of the healthcare incentives established through the 2009 American Recovery and Reinvest Act (ARRA), Hendry Regional Medical Center is moving forward with the implementation of a complete Electronic Health Record (EHR) system.

The EHR will allow a patient's medical history to be shared within specific segments of the hospital through a digital format. Data such as the patient's medication and allergies, immunization status, lab test results, radiology images and billing information will be shared electronically to provide a complete record of the patient's healthcare encounters.

Additionally, this electronic system would enhance the hospital's billing cycle, since charges would be more accurate and timely.

Leon Hoover, who recently joined the hospital as the Director of Information Services, will coordinate the facilitation of the system. Originally from Jackson Tennessee, Leon Hoover and his wife, Paula, have five children. Before coming to Clewiston, Leon had previously served for 5 years as the Director of Information Technology at the West Tennessee Division of Methodist Healthcare, overseeing eight rural and urban hospitals. With this history, he is well prepared for the responsibilities, activities and challenges of Hendry Regional's Information Technology advancements. Already, Leon is fully engaged in preparing for the upcoming expansion to ensure the hospital complies with the new measures established by the federal government's healthcare stimulus package.

Leon Hoover.

Earlier this year the Hospital Board of Authority approved an Information Technology Strategic Plan. As a part of the plan, an IT Steering Committee, composed of department managers and senior administration officials, is in place. This committee is currently evaluating existing applications and assessing HRMC's future IT needs.

"There are many advantages to having an Electronic Healthcare Record system," says Leon.

"It can improve the quality of care, reduce costs and increase evidence-based care. (Evidence-based care is an up and coming method of collating data about diseases and treatments to allow the evidence of the outcome to reveal which treatments produce the best results.) The IT Steering Committee is committed to finding the right solutions to carry HRMC into the future of healthcare. Ultimately, in a world where each patient's individual circumstances dictate the approach to healing, an Electronic Health Record will enable our staff and providers to respond more quickly and accurately."

Leon concludes, "Hendry Regional Medical Center has entered a new era, and we are grateful for the support of the Board of Authority and the communities we serve."

By Reverend Sam Thomas, Ph. D.
Saint Martin's Church, Clewiston

As I was sitting in a restaurant in Europe, I noticed something that I had seen before. Most of the tables were filled by couples; that was like back home. Most of the couples were paying more attention to each other than their meals; that was like back home. I also observed that the female partner did most of the talking and the male partner did most of the listening; that seemed to be world-wide. Each brings different gifts to a relationship; each has their part to contribute. What is it that men bring to a household or a family? They are doers and listeners; their place in the Godly scheme of things has been to forage and provide from time immemorial. They take their place along with mothers; making their unique gifts to the household. The Lord, who teaches us how to pray and gives us the excellent model, begins by praying "Our father ... (Matthew 6:9)."

God will listen, act, sustain and nurture, provide ... these are things that Fathers do. Many of the roles that mothers share with fathers are double portions that the children need if they are to be healthy and happy; but each parent places his or her distinct mark and style on doing and giving. Fathers will listen and act, they will sustain and nurture, they will provide for their household singly or together with their beloved.

Joseph will be less well-known than Mary; but He will provide for her, make accommodations, see that she and the children have what they will need in their world, act to be his part of an earthly home for the Lord who will grow there. Fathers may be shy about showing a "tender side" and don't want "gentleness" confused for "weakness."

They may be more comfortable in translating love into action, providing or building a home physically; they are more exposed to life where achievement and accomplishment count, but they are capable of being vulnerable and sensitive too. I see the need for two parents; equally contributing, each with special gifts to make the household all that it is intended to be. Many times in society, we see extended families or single-parent homes, or surrogate parental figures filling roles that were formerly filled by two figures that had their own place and contribution. Whatever the circumstance; "father" is still a key figure, an important part of the family constellation. We see the warm and wonderful stories of family reunions after years of separation, children seeking and finding lost parents who live a half-world away, quests for the "real" parent in spite of excellent care by foster couples; the way God has structured things is too powerful to be ignored or replaced. This weekend we celebrate Father's Day and all that it means. May the day be an inspiration to fathers to be all that God has called them to be, and a chance for all to say "We appreciate who you are and what you do."

In Honor of Fathers

By Pastor John Hicks
First United Methodist Church

Few things in my life have ever touched me as much as the words my dad shared with me in the first letter I ever received from him. In many ways, it helped bring the "Prodigal" back home. In celebration of Father's Day, let me share it with you. In celebration of Father's Day, why not write one yourself?

Dear John: Your mother and I have been asked by Mike Oliver to write you a letter in support of your planned "Walk to Emmaus" in January. It is supposed to be an opportunity for us to express our appreciation of you and what our relationship means and has meant over the years.

When you were little, I had the same close relationship with you that I had with the other boys, and I realize now that when you were in Jr. High, I let you down by not being as involved with you in your activities as I was with the other boys. I also did not understand your sensitivity to other people at that time, and when you came home with a peace symbol, I never gave you an opportunity to state a position. I had my mind made up, and did not care to be confused by the facts. I was critical of your friends, and thus alienated you and never really re-established a close bond with you. I regret that now, and if I had the opportunity to re-run that part of the race, I would move up to scouts when you did, to try to gain back the son that I had "lost" with a few hasty words.

You are in the correct field. From the time you were in Sr. High, I began to see the potential, and it really came out while you were in college. I felt that ministry was where you belonged, but I was not the one to whom you came for advice in those days. I will admit that I was quite pleased when you finally made the decision to enter the ministry, and I am very proud of you and your accomplishment in dedicating yourself to a life of service to others. You will never know the sense of pride we felt at your ordination. Your mother stood and walked alone for the first time after the accident, and held her head high the whole way down the isle. That event inspired her to do what very few believed could be done. Your accomplishments in school, in scouts, and now as a person have been sources of pride to us which you will recognize when you have children of your own. The greatest gift any parent can receive is to have a child do well, and the highest feelings of ecstasy are realized in the accomplishments of your off-spring. When you do well, we glory.

Keep up your good works, son, and hold the hand of Him whom you have vowed to follow. Your earthly parents love you very much, and are very proud of you. Your Heavenly Father must be even more so. Love, Dad.

DÍA DE RECOJIDA Y LIMPIEZA EN CLEWISTON
28 DE JUNIO 2010
¡QUEREMOS SUS TRASTOS VIEJOS!

Ud. Puede poner todos sus trastos viejos al lado de la calle desde las 7 de la mañana del viernes 25 de junio hasta el lunes 28 de junio a las 7 de la mañana y la ciudad de Clewiston lo recogerá todo gratis. Queremos que Ud. bote todas las cosas que no le valgan: bicicletas, neumáticos, juguetes, electrodomésticos (lavadoras, secadoras, calentadoras de agua, cocinas) y cualquier artículo de la casa o del jardín que le estorbe.

¡Si podemos cargarlo nos lo llevaremos!

Le rogamos que no eche Ud. nada que tenga químicos tóxicos, baterías, escombros de construcción o automóviles viejos. También, no se olvide de poner la basura normal en el cubo verde el día de la semana que le suele tocar para que se recoja. Por favor separe las hojas y/o ramas de árboles y otros desechos del jardín del montón de trastos viejos que ponga al lado de la calle.

Después del 28 de junio la ordenanza municipal de Clewiston que prohibe apilar los trastos viejos y feos fuera de la casa se pondrá en vigor de nuevo. Por eso, ile rogamos a Ud. que aproveche esta oportunidad única del recojido de trastos gratis!

I love the part of painting other people houses and seeing the big smile on their faces because God was gracious enough to have brought a group of kids to paint their houses. It is just amazing; it really makes you realize how you need to be grateful for what you have."

Other places that are hosting summer camps are Pioneer Park Middle School, New Hope Charities, Clewiston Christian School, Community United Methodist Church and Pahokee Youth Enrichment Academy.

Although libraries and summer camps are just a small part of the spectrum, summer fun can be whatever you make it.

Gabby Gold gave some suggestions for those who may be homebound for the summer.

"Hang out with friends. Create something new, whether it is a new game or dance just start thinking outside the box."

Miss Key shared the best piece of advice to have optimal summer fun in the Glades.

"Summer is always awesome! Go out, have fun, make new friends, and get involved into whatever keeps you interested."

port project. He criticizes Florida Crystals' desire to move forward on its own.

"What Okeelanta is talking about is an industrial park, a distribution facility, not a true inland port," he said. "It's not what the Port of Palm Beach envisioned."

So the two leaders agree on the Port's exit. Where the two differ is where they pin their hope.

Mayor Sasser explains it simply: The state has had its chance to do something, to replace the jobs that are at stake with the U.S. Sugar buyout plan, and it hasn't done enough. Let's give the private industry a chance to do something, to identify a goal and to pursue it like any other business venture, he argues. Maybe then the jobs will be created.

Mr. McCarthy thinks differently. There is too much at stake to remove the role of the state as the lead entity in an inland port project. If private industry isn't careful, the result may be much smaller distribution centers working independently from one another in different locations; success on any project isn't guaranteed, but an independent project is further steeped in uncertainty, he said. A truly successful port project will be good for Hendry, Glades and Palm Beach counties and the state's role will not be to seek out best local interests but best regional interests, he seems to say.

Neither is completely against each other's ideas. While his commitment is to a location closer to Belle Glade and South Bay, Mr. Sasser maintains that even a successful port in Hendry would be a welcome sight.

"I'm not ruling that out. It may be a viable option," he said of a site in Hendry.

So what is the next step?

South Bay Commissioner Linda Johnson, who represents the area which had the most to gain from the project, was hopeful that Florida Crystals would take up its mission to reignite economic development, even if that meant an entirely new project, which may not necessarily be an "inland port."

Whether this meant a distribution facility rather than a comprehensive, regional concept was not certain at the time of this writing. Florida Crystals did not immediately return a call for comment on this story, but was expected to outline its plans at a meeting in Belle Glade.

As far as Hendry County is concerned, it is simply a waiting game. With elections approaching quickly, and the possibility of a significant alteration of the major players at the state level, no one is going to move forward with major plans now, Mr. McCarthy said. Having dealt with near silence from the state in the wake of the U.S. Sugar announcement, which affects the city of Clewiston more than any other town, Mr. McCarthy hopes that new state officers will be more forthcoming with help.

"We need a process and a commitment from the state," he said. "Hopefully, the new governor will take an interest."

Mr. Sasser is less hopeful. He is critical of agencies like the Office of Tourism, Trade and Economic Development -- agencies which he said should have played the lead in the role to shore up possible losses to the city of Clewiston and the Glades, and to help each find a new way going forward, but have not.

"OTED, you can't get them to buy you a Coca Cola," he said.
