PECANS, ORNAMENTALS, SMALL FRUITS FEATURE FARMERS' WEEK PROGRAM

Gainesville, Fla.—One section of the program for Farmers' Week, which will be held at the University of Florida, August 8-13, will be devoted to discussions of pecans, small fruits and ornamentals. One day of this program, probably Thursday, August 11, will be devoted to pecans. Subjects for discussion will include propagation, cultivation, top-working, fertilizing, varieties, cover crops, insects and diseases. It has been found that there is a demand for discussions on culitvation and the more primary problems of pecan growing, and so those things will be given more attention this year.

One day will be devoted to grapes and grape culture, and prominent grape growers will take part in the discussions. Among the subjects to be taken up will be propagation, pruning and training, harvesting and marketing, varieties, diseases and insects, and others

Bulbs and hardy ornamentals will be emphasized again this year, along with the home flower and ornamental garden. One day's program will be devoted to ornamentals, including bulbs, roses, Asparagus plumosus, etc.

Strawberries, blackberries, dewberries, blueberries, figs, Japanese persimmons, pears, etc., will be other fruits to receive attention on the program.

The pecans, small fruits and ornamentals program will be only one section. Other sections during the week will be livestock and farm crops, citrus and sub-tropical fruits, truck crops, poultry, and home economics.

THE PROCESSION OF CAMPERS

On our leading automobile routes a long procession of automobile campers is seen headed in all directions. Tents are slung to the side of the car and simple cooking apparatus is carried. They may find their cot beds hard and the bacon and eggs may not be expertly cooked, but they are seeing the country.

Many people who once rarely got beyond the confines of the adjoining towns, are now traveling long distances and observing the works of man and of nature. They breathe a lot of dust, they often return home more tired than they left. And yet they are jolted out of their ordinary ruts, and they take up life again with fresh zest.

the Jedge's Josh

Brutally Frank

Percival—Will you please marry me?

Helen—Oh Pere, this is so sudden. Why?

Percival—Well, I'll let you in on a secret. I want to take you home. My mother hasn't had a laugh in years.

And Ditto

He—Do you think men are made of dust?

She (emphatically)—No. If they were, I imagine you'd dry up once in a while.

Regular Raffle

Parent—Yes, my boy, the lad who marries my girl gets a prize.

Thomas—Goodness, that's an inducement.

Try This Boys

Himme—What shape is a kiss?

Herre—Give me one and we'll call it square.

Literal Len

"I'm striking a happy medium," said the detective as he hit the fake spiritualist over the head.

Heatless Blaze

First Gal—That guy is so wealthy he has money to burn.

Second Gal—Well, I must say I never suffered from heat while I was out with him.

Personally Prescribed

The druggist was becoming disgusted. He had been explaining and pricing dozens of articles to the shopper who really didn't want to buy anything at all.

Finally she picked up a bottle.

"Is this Pest Exterminator guaranteed?" she asked. "How is it applied?"

"You take a teaspoonful every hour, ma'am."

They Are Like That

When Dumbdora heard that Betty swore she'd never been kissed, she said, if she had never been kissed, she'd swear, too!

This Way Out

"It's as plain as the nose on your face," said the tactless idiot as he tried to explain something to his sweetie.

Throwing Is Good

A forty-ton truck loaded with five thousand imported eggs recently over-turned. Probably the truck was just throwing off the foreign yolk.

"I advise women to use long cigar ette holders," declared Farmer Sinklewoffle, "for that will tend to keep them away from tobacco."

O Boy—A Fast One

"I love to go riding in Tommy's Rolls Royce."

"Yes, I understand it's necessary!"

INTEREST RATES DECLINING

Predictions are frequently heard among bankers and investment men, that interest rates are going to decline during coming years. It is noted that up to 1920, there was a large increase in these rates. People could get more interest on sound investments. Corporations commonly paid larger dividends.

But now it is claimed the tendency will be for interest rates to fall. Stocks and bonds cost more money than they did, even if they pay no more interest. This makes the net interest on the money invested lower.

This change is accounted for on the theory that people have been saving great amounts of capital, and that capital is so abundant with which to do the business of the country, that those who own it have to be content with lower interest. Where the supply is greater than the demand for anything, the price falls, and interest being the price for the use of capital, that tends to fall.

There may be a difference of opinion whether or not that tendency will continue, but anyway the fall in interest rates is regretted by many people who have savings to invest. But it encourages business, by making it possible to obtain capital for industrial enterprises at low rates. Thus such a change works for the benefit of the country by keeping labor well employed.

But when the savings of the people bear less interest, they can not be depended upon so much for income. That makes it necessary for people to save more money in order to get any considerable income from it.

Also it makes it necessary for people to depend more on their own exertions, and the money they earn by their own work, and less on the money they draw from interest and dividends.

How It's Done

Beach beauties this year have turned to flannel swimming suits—

EMBLEM OF 4-H CLUBS STANDS FOR THE HEAD, HEART, HANDS, HEALTH

A national 4-H Club pledge was formally adopted on Tuesday morning, June 21, at the assembly of the delegates to the National Club Encampment at Washington. This pledge has already been in use in many states. It is: "I pledge my HEAD to clearer thinking, my HEART to greater loyalty, my HANDS to larger service, and my HEALTH to better living, for my club, my community, and my country." The speaker of the day, the Hon. J. B. Aswell, Congressman from Louisiana, touched on the points of the pledge in his address, saying: "If you neglect your head you are a human loss; your heart, you consistute a danger to society; your hands and you are a jeely-bean; your health, you become a charge on your family and society."

Mr. Aswell pointed out to the boys and girls present, who represented 38 out of the 48 states, that this city in theirs, that the people employed by the Government are "their hired servants" and that they are part owners in every public building in Washington. He described the daily activities of a congressman, and the course of a bill through Congress, urging the club members to familiarize themselves with the machinery of Government. In speaking of schools, he said, "The school is not merely a preparation for life. It is life."

SWIMMING TIME

Boy life reaches its height of ecstacy at about the time when the kid crowd streak it for the "ole swimming hole," or wherever they go into the water in that locality. The city or town without swimming facilities is away behind the times. But turning the kids loose in deep water without supervision is risky business, and they need watching and instruction.

The girls also, who used to look with envy from afar on the swimming places, now demand equal accommodations there, and in many cases they beat the boys on the water sports. The human race is not merely conquering the air with its bird-like aviation, but it has acquired mastery over the waters with its fish like swimming.

FACING DANGER

The spirit which all our great aviators have shown in facing the dangers of the trans-oceanic flights is something that compels the very highest admiration. In our ordinary life, many of us become very fearful of ordinary slight dangers. Our thoughts are too much occupied with these depressing suggestions, which take the buoyancy and hope which we need for full achievement.

Our aviators show what results are gained by discarding fear. While those who are performing these pioneer stunts may suffer from an exceptional number of mishaps, the ordinary person comes out better to discard fear to a considerable extent.

ALL WORKING TOGETHER

"Everyone for himself and the devil take the hindmost," used to be the motto. But now it is perceived that people have to unite and work in combinations to get desirable results. So we have associations of business and professional men, trade unions, etc., which protect the interest of these various elements.

The people who inhabit a city or town also need to combine to protect their interests as citizens. They need to unite in civic organizations for mutual benefit, and also to stand together to support their home town enterprises, buying goods at home, and thus keeping their resources intact in their home locality. Thus the wealth of th ecommunity is saved for its own benefit instead of being dissipated.
