The Table Fork.

That the table fork should be virtually unknown and at any rate unused in the orient is the more strange when it is borne in mind that it originally came from Constantinople. Long before the fork made its appearance in France it was in use at Venice, where it had been introduced in 1095, on the occasion of the wedding of Don Pietro Oricola Argilo, son of the doge of Venice, to a princess of the imperial house of Byzance. People at Venice were astonished at the marriage feast to see the bride make use of a small gold fork for conveying the food from her plate to her mouth, instead of spoon and fingers. The bridegroom was so delighted with the idea that he at once had a whole stock of gold forks made for his own use and for that of his relatives, and before many months were past there was not a patrician in Venice who did not employ a fork at his meals. The use of the fork spread very slowly through Italy and over the remainder of Europe. It was not until some 200 years afterward that it was introduced into France by Duke John of Brittany.—London Chronicle.

Two Influences.

Young Man—That was an excellent paper your daughter read on the "Influence of Science as Applied to Practical Government." Wearied Father—Yes; Julia is the pride of her class, and now that she has mastered the "Influence of Science as Applied to Practical Government" I hope that she will be able to find out something concerning the "influence of the broom as applied to the kitchen floor."

The Barber in India.

The barber is a very important person in India, where every man is obliged to shave and forbidden by his religion to do the work himself. The barber has an official appointment in the Hindoo village, with an endowment of land to support its dignity and a vested right to the shaving of its inhabitants, which can be prohibited by legal injunction in case of infringement.—Times of India.

Why does the Times-Union garble editorials from other papers and make them say what they do not say, applying the distorted meaning to its own ends?

It does this for the same reason that it misquotes individuals and misstates facts, whenever the interests which control it can be served by this prostitution of journalism.

It must do this—

Because—

The Times-Union is owned by the Atlantic Coast Line, the Florida East Coast and the Seaboard Air Line Railway Companies.

The Times-Union is NOT a newspaper—it IS a chattel.

And the Chattel of a Republican who contributed $2,000 to elect a Republican Governor of New York.

LITTLE 'ARRY "TAKES THE COUNT."

Those who attended the performance of the Mikado Tuesday night heard him say it, and those who did not attend know that he did say it.

Never mind, I will repeat it here for its good doctrine.

The "object all sublime" of the ruler of Japan as interpreted by the librettist was "to make the punishment fit the crime."

All rulers who have attempted to do this have made those shining marks across the pages of history which men call glory.

This is so because every man has at heart that sense of even-handed justice that prompts him to be pleased when the biter is bit. Nobody is sorry for the Investigating Committee.

They were hell-bent on investigating.

Which was all right.

That's what they are paid for.

They were dead set on keeping the people in the dark about their investigations.

Which was all wrong.

That was the very thing they were not paid for.

Now, they are to be investigated.

That's why everybody gives them the merry ha! ha!

And what will little 'Arry say?

He won't like it.

Neither does the small boy enjoy the taste of soap when his mother washes out his mouth for using a bad word.

But he can't help it.

And haughty Harry finds himself suddenly sat down on.

Which is rough on 'Arry, but the rest of us will try to worry along with it as best we may.

Who among us has not heard the rumblings of the thunder?

Who has not seen the tell-tale zig-zag of the lightning, who has not felt the atmospheric pressure of the high barometer, or smelt the sulphurous vapor of the rising storm, or tasted the distilled rain drop as it fell on the lips?

And hearing, seeing, smelling, tasting and feeling these signs of bad weather, who has not sought the friendly shelter of the nearest roof?

All, I say, all have done this.

Saving only one.

A small one, it's true, but still one—

Little 'Arry.

The House thundered, the House hung its warning lightning against the dark clouds of its sore displeasure, the House dictatiously "whereas" and solemnly "resolve—

But—

'Arry heeded not, nor did he vouchsafe aught.

And now to whelm him comes the deluge of pent-up wrath, which finds expression in that committee of five appointed by the House to investigate the investigations of the investigating committee.

If I wanted to be mean, I would say—I told you so—

But this pleasure is denied me, owing to the laceration my poor heart received when—

Little 'Arry was told to behave.

PROTECT THE GOPHER.

Chairman Neel of the Senate Committee on State Affairs handed in the following report on the bill of Mr. Beard to protect the gopher, yesterday:

"After due consideration we find that the gopher is not only among the oldest inhabitants of the State, but also one of the oldest in the world; sacred history informing us that Noah's ark was built of gopher wood.

"When our State was first settled, hundreds of years ago, gophers were not only considered as one of the finest dishes of food, but they were also used as a medium of change in Pensacola and St. Augustine. We furthermore find, although considering his great age and usefulness, this is the first movement that has ever been made looking to his protection, and we unanimously recommend that the bill do pass."
