CHIVALRY WITH POKER

A Story of a Sure Enough Hero of the Lost Cause

"Poker is a mean game," said the traveling man, according to the Chicago Inter-Ocean. "It doesn't give one's finer feelings any show. You can't be charitable, because if you try to lose you either win like thunder or the other sees what you are doing and gets sore. The game doesn't lend itself to delicacy."

"Ah'm sorry to hear you say that," said the colonel, "because Ah can't agree with you."

"You'll have to give us something in support of your opinion, Colonel."

"Ah should be delighted—an' Ah can vouch for the accuracy of what Ah'm about to tell, because Ah was there.

"It was two yeahs aftah the wah, gentlemen, that Ah happened to be visitin' an old friend of mine, whom Ah will call the Majah. Two othah gentlemen, the General and the Captain Ah will call them, were also there.

"We had known one anothah befo' the wah, an' been in the same regiment durin' the late unpleasantness, an' were dinin' together fo' the first time fo' many yeahs. Of course we were glad to see each othah, but we were feelin' powerful bad just the same.

"The Majah was plumb ruined. He only had the house he lived in, an' that mortgaged. It was especially hard in his case, because he showed us a great chest half full of Confederate bills.

"The Captain was livin' on what he made off raisin' race-horses, an' Ah was as poor as the rest.

"The General was the most uncomfortable of the crowd, because he alone was prosperous. Coal had been found on his estate, an' he was wuth about a hundred thousand dollars.

"Well, we kept gettin' saddah an' saddah ovah the change in the world until the mint juleps came in. Then we perked up, an' some one suggested a pokah game.

"It was the evenest game Ah ever saw, gentlemen, until a hand where the Major and the General both stood pat, raisin' one anothah till all the chips were in the pot.

"The Majah looked at his hand, regretful like, an' said he hated to stop, but he had no money.

"'Ah beg of you,' said the General, 'not to let a small matter like that interfeah with your pokah.'

"Gentlemen, Ah could see what the Majah was thinking—he was sayin' to himself: 'Ah have $12,000 life insurance that will go to mah daughter, an' Ah have a hand that cahn't be beat,' an' then he said:

"'Ah raise you $12,000, General.'

"'Ah call you with a low straight flush, Majah,' replied the General.

"The Majah tossed fo' kings an' an ace into the discard an' we all sat silent.

"Then the General spoke:

"'The wah is ovah, gentlemen,' he said, 'an' we are heah together aftah a long time. There ain't any mo' Confederate states, except in our hearts. There ain't much pleasure left fo' any of us, but Ah would like to consider this evening as bein' one back in the old times an' undah the old conditions. Majah, will you go to that chest and bring me $12,000 in ouah money?'

"The Majah nevah said a word, just went an' brought twelve one thousand dollar Confederate bills to the General.

"Then somehow we found ourselves standin' an' drinkin' a silent toast, not to Confederacy, but to something the end of the wah had not taken from the South."

And then the Colonel stopped short and looked solemn.

It was the traveling man that broke the silence.

"Colonel," he said, "I wish you would have a drink with me."

"Ah should be delighted, sah," said the Colonel, emerging suddenly from the brown study into which he had fallen.

THE MORAL SALOON

The churches generally following suit, there were presently high saloons and low saloons; saloons which were avowedly Arminian; saloons which in the heat of controversy were accused of being Socinian, or even Pelagian.

The higher criticism was distinctly felt. There were places where the atmosphere was extremely latitudinarian. And yet, on the other hand, supralapsarian bars were by no means lacking.

Nor were the various superstitions without their effect. In a number of saloons absent treating was practiced, and esoteric orientalism found its adherents.

The Bartenders' Union was rent with dissension, some contending for the eastward position with vestments, and some for primitive simplicity.

In the face of these bickerings the popular attitude became the attitude of indifference. In no long time people were asking one another if it mattered, after all, what saloon they went to, and finally, if it mattered though they went to none.—Life.

CURES CHILLS AND FEVER

G. W. Wrirt, Nacodoches, Texas, says: "His daughter had chills and fever for three years. He could not find anything that would help her until he used Herbine. His wife will not keep house without it, and cannot say too much for it." 50c. Sold by the Anti-Monopoly Drugstore.

A HAPPY MOTHER

WEATHERFORD, TEXAS.
May 14, 1903.

Before my baby was born I was in great misery. I was just able to be about but just as soon as I began to take Wine of Cardui, which had been recommended to me, I felt much better. In fact I feel that if it had not been for this medicine I would not have been strong enough to live through childbirth. But that was made comparatively easy by taking your medicine for four months before baby came. Wine of Cardui restored my health as it was two months afterward. I cannot speak too highly of Wine of Cardui and am glad to endorse it.

Mrs. C. E. Wood
TREASURER, YOUNG MATRON'S CLUB.

Wine of Cardui is a powerful tonic which acts on the generative organs of women, regulating menstruation and giving tone and strength to the organs which inflammation and weakness have affected. It cures nine out of every twenty cases of bearing-down pains or ovarian trouble. Wine of Cardui cures barrenness and aids the mother in conserving her strength for the ordeal of childbirth. After that event the Wine prevents dangerous flooding and helps mothers to quick recovery. Wine of Cardui is the one medicine a mother should use before and after childbirth. All druggists sell $1.00 bottles Wine of Cardui.
