FLORIDA EDITORS AT MIAMI

A Useful and Interesting Meeting of the Members of the State Press Association

The members of the Florida Press Association have had their outing. They met last week at the magic city of Miami in greater numbers than has been the case for many years.

The meeting was a regular editorial love feast and striders of the tripod whose harsh and uncalled for aspersions on the association a year ago came near giving them the g—— b—— were welcomed with demonstrations of joy.

Nearly eighty responded to their names.

It is a day's ride from Jacksonville to Miami. The distance is 366 miles. We left at noon and reached the comforting and salutary surroundings of the Royal Palm, one of Mr. Flagler's creations of an up to now tourist hostelry, after midnight.

The weather was dry and the ride a fearfully dusty one, but after a vexatious search for baggage in the morning and a change of linen, discomforts vanished and the bright and sunny side of life shone with a touch of warmth and glamor that disarmed all craticism and made editors feel that the occasion was created for their delectation reveled in it.

The only diversion of the trip down was the greeting of old friends and the making of new ones, as half of those present were new members, but a delay at Ormond to permit a northbound train to pass us, was to witness an animated game of golf, the club house standing close to the depot and the players out in force.

At West Palm Beach, sixty miles from Miami, a committee of three, of which Editor Tatum, of the Miami Metropolis, was the leader, met us and badged and ticketed us for the hotel.

Here Guy Metcalf, editor of the West Palm Beach Sun, and the most rabid anti-monopoly and anti-Flagler man in the state, distributed a box of fruit and cigars to the visiting editors.

As the train crossed the bridge over Lake Worth and ran through the lovely grounds of the Royal Poinciana and The Breakers, two of the finest hotels in the country, illuminated as they were by variegated electric lights, the magic effect of which delighted and enthused the editors with a scene of enchanting beauty, not to be duplicated anywhere.

President White, of the Association, called the meeting to order at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, when Mayor J. E. Lummus, on behalf of Miami, gave us a cordial welcome and recited some of the incidents of the growth of the town in the five years of its existence, from a squatter's shack to a city of magnificent streets, brick blocks, handsome mercantile establishments filled with goods, a duplicate of the most favored towns in the state, homes neat, attractive and inviting, with evergreen lawns that were a pleasure to look at, occupied by families who, in culture, social standing and hospitable disposition to entertain their visitors, left an impression on all of the most agreeable and pleasing kind.

Mayor Lummus, a former resident of Bronson, Levy county, and a brother of Mr. Sim Lummus, of Ocala, is a type of the young blood that in progressive ideas and executive ability, has made Miami, in the short years of its history, the Magic City in word and deed.

Hon. F. B. Reilly spoke for the city board of trade, while Editor E. T. Byington, of the Miami News, spoke for the press of Miami, to which Editor Jno. M. Caldwell, of the Lake City Index, Geo. W. Wilson, of the Times-Union and Citizen, and Columbus B. Smith, of the Jasper News, made suitable responses for the State Association.

The words of welcome spoken, the association went into executive session and the first business was the naming of the staff for the Press Bulletin. Mr. Geo. W. Wilson was named editor-in-chief, but his modesty forbade him to accept. As he had offered the prizes for the successful papers, he wished in no way to be connected with the novel enterprise, and so Editor Harris, of the Ocala Banner, was chosen.

The afternoon was devoted to discussing the new libel law for the state, which Editor Geo. W. Wilson, of the T.-U and C., prepared and which was uninanimously endorsed as the proper and correct thing to pass by our incoming legislature. The present libel law is a libel on the age and civilization of which we are so proud and of which we boast so much.

The evening session was devoted to hearing addresses. The hall was crowded and the representative people of Miami cheered the speakers with their kindly presence.

Prof. Tom McBeath, of Jacksonville, read the annual poem; John M. Caldwell, of Lake City, discoursed on Newspapers, Past and Present, while F. E. Harris, Ocala, gave some advice to the young editors; Frank Walpole, of Palmetto, was brimful of humor on Free Advertising, and Miss Nellie Beck, of Miami, spoke entertainingly on "The Society Column."

The audience enjoyed a rich treat and their appreciation came in the form of applause.

Thursday morning the various reports of the association were read, showing the organization in a flourishing condition, if the treasury had run dry.

The election of officers followed, though considerable wire-pulling preceded. It was soon learned that Editor B. B. Tatum, of the Miami Metropolis, one of the bright and shining lights of the state journalistic profession, was the favorite and he was unanimously elected president. Major E. W. Peabody, of Sanford, and traveling representative of the Times-Union and Citizen, was unanimously elected vice president; T. J. Appleyard reelected secretary for the tenth time and Philip Isaacs treasurer.

Delegates to the National Editorial Association, which meets in Buffalo, were named as follows: J. W. White, Geo. W. Wilson, B. B. Tatum, H.H.McCreary, Tom McBeath, James Humphries, Jno. M. Caldwell.

Fred Pfieffer, Florida commissioner to the Pan-American Exposition, Buffalo, N. Y., was then introduced and made a strong talk for that display, inviting the Florida editors to visit the same.

Much discussion followed as to the date. Some time in September was sense of the association.

The afternoon was devoted by the ladies to attending a reception given in honor of their presence at the lovely home of Mrs. B. B. Tatum, the charming wife of Editor Tatum, in which the ladies of Miami heartily joined. It was voted the most pleasant social function of the Magic City and all present greatly enjoyed it.

Meanwhile the gentlemen were sent to visit the truck and tomato farms of Buena Vista, Lemon City, Little River and Hunbuggas.

Thursday evening, at the Royal Poinciana, a reception was tendered Governor and Mrs. Jennings. It was a most brilliant affair. The immense parlor was thronged.

Geo. A. Worley, Esq., a shining light of the Miami bar, made the address of welcome and it was the most poetic and imaginary piece of oratory that ever was heard in the stateara rarar ever was heard in Dade or any other county in the state. It was more brilliant, dazzling and sparkling with gems of imagery than ever throbbed in the mind of the poet.

Governor Jennings made a suitable response.

Tomato Farms

As the people of Miami were desirous that the editors should see the trucking interests of that section, and particularly their tomato farms, for which that portion of the state has become famous, both for the adaptability of the soil, yield and profits made on their cultivation, carriages were provided us and we were taken out the public road, and a good one, too, to see what was in sight at Buena Vista, Lemon City and New River. At Lemon City we had the good fortune to meet Mr. Sot Peters, a former resident of Lake and Sumter counties, but since the big freeze, with his boys, the most successful grower of tomatoes in al that country round.

We found Mr. Peters at home and he kindly consented to go with us,
