Orange Avenue work will rejuvenate midtown corridor

By Susan L. Wright
swright@hometownnewsol.com

It's being called the midtown corridor, the stretch of Orange Avenue from Nova Road east across downtown Beach Street up to the Orange Avenue War Memorial Bridge.

It was once one of the key streets in Daytona Beach, when the downtown area and the neighborhoods just across U.S. 1 were considered the core mainland part of the city. (The tourist area of the peninsula was another kind of city center — bounded by Seabreeze Boulevard and Silver Beach Avenue.

Now the city has expanded to areas once considered way out in the country. During the expansion, most of Orange Avenue has experienced neglect and decline. In recent years, merchants and other concerned residents have worked to update and upgrade a strip of riverfront Beach Street designated as the historic "downtown." But at Beach Street's southernmost point, Orange Avenue, which forms the historic intersections with Jackie Robinson Ballpark on the northeast corner and a classic fire station at the southeast corner, has been left to grow shabby.

For a while, like a suddenly conscientious homeowner, city officials have been working on a plan to repair and upgrade the aging street and bring it up to the standards of the downtown area.

It's a plan that's taken many years of meetings, grant applications and financial negotiations, sending the project out for bids and getting the city commission's approval step after step. The city commission and city manager have made it a priority for 10

Workshop focuses on proposed historic district for Cassadaga

By Erika Webb
ewebb@hometownnewsol.com

Cassadaga residents will not be required to renovate or repair homes and public buildings if they become part of a county-designated preservation effort.

A handful of the Spiritualist camp's property owners and other interested citizens attended a Volusia County workshop June 24 at Lake Helen City Hall to learn more about the proposed Cassadaga historic district.

The county's historic preservation officer, Julie Scofield, presented the district concept, explained the benefits and review process as well as the proposed district boundaries, and asked for feedback.

Ms. Scofield works with the nine-member Historic Preservation Board appointed by the Volusia County Council. The board issues certificates of designation for eligible historic resources (structures, archaeological sites and historic districts) and certificates of appropriateness for demolition, alteration, relocation and new construction.

Woman tours country of beauty and contrast

By Susan L. Wright
swright@hometownnewsol.com

When Sharan Mahannah traveled to Bhutan recently, she didn't find Shangri-La (though the tiny country has been compared to that mythical utopia), but she did find a complex, fascinating land of magical beauty and intense contrasts.

A land of mountains and a valley, where the emphasis is on peace and serenity — it's known as the "land of the thunder dragon."

The Ormond Beach retiree loves to travel — she's been to Kenya, Russia, the Easter Islands, among a long list of exotic destinations. She seized the opportunity for a trip to the remote Himalayan kingdom when it appeared.

Ms. Mahannah has a very close, long-time friend who works with a luxury travel group based in Los Angeles and he offered her the chance to go with him on a junket.

They stayed in three luxury hotels and she said, "They were all remote. They're rustic, they have a very Zen feel."

She knew she wasn't quite fit enough to make the hike up the mountain to the legendary Tiger's Nest monastery, perched precariously on the steep face of the cliffs, shrouded in mists. It's probably the most legendary of the sights there.

But she was fascinated by visits to less formidable Buddhist convents and monasteries.

Most of the population of 700,000 is Buddhist — she points out there are many versions of Buddhism and, while they're very peaceful and nonviolent, they're not totally strict about all the tenets of their faith. Their guide wouldn't even kill an insect and would gently remove a bug crawling on his arm rather than swat it.

However, while they are theoretically vegetarians, most of the population isn't very strict about it. "They eat meat, but it has to be killed in India and brought in," she says wryly.

The national dish is a combination of hot chilies and melted cheese served with rice, and it's served everywhere. "They're very proud of it," she said.

More health management options are moving into neighborhoods, offering walk-in convenience and extended hours.

In 2011, MinuteClinic, the medical clinic of CVS Pharmacy opened its first site in Volusia County on Enterprise Road in Orange City. By mid- to late-September, the CVS store at North Woodland Boulevard and Plymouth Avenue in DeLand will open, according to Brent Burkhardt, a company spokesman.

In addition to diagnosing and treating illnesses, injuries and skin conditions, MinuteClinics also provide a variety of wellness services, including: vaccinations, physicals, screenings and monitoring for chronic conditions.

The company is in "rapid years, even while the members of the commission have changed.

The process of gathering the funding needed for the project has taken five years.

At the end of June, city officials, funding partners and contractors gathered for the official ribbon-cutting ceremony. Starting this month, work has actually started — finally, the first road machinery is out, workers are starting to break up the old sections of asphalt and concrete and the Orange Avenue project has begun.

It seems like a good time to look at an overview of the project, how much it's costing, where is the money coming from, how much upheaval will the construction cause, and how long will it take, and what it will look like when finished.

The project will cover the 1.3 miles of Orange Avenue from Nova Road to Beach Street (it will not include the short stretch from Nova to Tarragona Way.)

Completion of the project is expected to take two years, with some leeway for weather, other delays.

The total cost for the project, as planned, is $17.6 million.

The funding comes from a variety of sources, including: Volusia County, Florida Department of Transportation and the Florida Department of Environmental Protection.

That includes $6 million in grants from the county and the state. The City of Daytona Beach provided most of the remaining funding. Other funding comes from a low-interest loan from the DEP.

City officials have promised residents and business owners along Orange Avenue to minimize any disruption and to ensure access to businesses throughout the construction period.

The contractor for the project will be local, ThadCon, which has been operating in the Daytona Beach area for 57 years. It has been the contractor for previous road projects, including the upgrade of downtown Beach Street.

The street will be redone both on and below the surface.

Other improvements will include:

•new, modern traffic signal systems;

•replacing the street lights to improve lighting all along the Orange Avenue corridor;

•new water, sewer and drainage systems, which should also resolve long-standing flooding problems;

•new, improved lighting for the entire street;

•new, modern traffic signals, both stoplights and pedestrian warning systems;

•wider sidewalks from four feet to six feet wide;

•buried power lines.

Work is starting at two locations, at the western end, near Nova Road, and along the railroad crossing.

Taking away beach adds to crowding

LAND LINES

For as far as the eye could see there was cars, trucks, people and umbrellas packed onto the sand. The picture was meant to be one of those feel good, chamber of commerce types that shows big crowds enjoying the beach and providing good business income for the locals.

The photo just made me sad. You see it was taken a couple hundred yards inside a no-drive zone. As you looked toward the very crowded section of beach, the strip of sand in the foreground was vacant. Barren of any life until you reached the drivable portion of the sand and then the people were packed together. How sad the county government had taken away an area of the beach that could have alleviated that crowding. The private beach not being used was only there for the tourists who could afford the expensive rooms of the big hotel on the dunes.

They say a picture is worth a thousand words and in that case it sure held up. On what was obviously one of our busiest beach days, there was a large portion of sand with no one on it. Great plan!

These days, it is the fashion to quickly hand off possession of our public beach to private enterprise in order to tempt big dollar investments. Each time they close a part of the drivable beach, the Volusia County Council talks about making another safe zone. They never talk about the tax revenue they actually seek. But wait, in the above-mentioned photo the over crowded beach could have been thinned out by leaving the adjoining sand available to all users. The shrinking beach is squeezing cars and people into closer proximity all the time. Wouldn't less crowding be safer? Actually I can't remember a single politician talking about putting too many people on one part of the beach. Ah, the forest for the trees my friends. The forests for the trees.

Several years ago a large parcel of land was bought by the county near my home in Ormond-by-the-Sea. The parcel west of State Road A1A was nicely paved and landscaped at the cost of well more than a million bucks and advertised as beach parking. The lot holds around 150 cars and is located across the street from the new Al Weeks Park atop the dunes where the old Ormond Pier once stood. I believed this to be a bad idea from the get go and at the peak time of the Fourth of July weekend at that time, I drove down for a look.

At that time every square inch of space along the top of the dunes was parked, but the brand new beach parking lot held six cars. That was definitely the peak for I haven't seen that many cars there since. I called my friend Carl Persis who was on the County Council at the time and gave him my report. Carl is a genuinely good guy and someone I trust and respect, but his answer was "well Dan, we have to take what we can get," or words to that effect.

The mantra of "more off beach parking will end beach driving" is an out-right fraud. Unless the county is willing to spend the many millions required to buy property east of A1A, it is a waste of money.

As usual, it is the new-comers to the area and big business who lead the charge against cars on the beach. Those who have no sense of local history or community could care less, but let the politicians beware. We are still a strong lobby.

You know in the entire world there are only three cities that are automatically linked to the automobile. Detroit, Indianapolis and Daytona Beach and maybe not in that order. Will the County Council ever embrace the natural phenomenon that makes ours The World's Most Famous Beach? Probably not, but then maybe the next council will.

Dan Smith is on the board of directors for the Ormond Beach Historical Society and The Motor Racing Heritage Association and is the author of two books, "The World's Greatest Beach" and "I Swear the Snook Drowned." Email questions and comments to fishw-dan@att.net or call (386) 441-7793.

Republican candidates receive endorsement votes in special meeting

In a special meeting July 1 by the Republican Executive Committee of Volusia County, Republican candidates running in five non-partisan races for the upcoming elections were voted endorsements, according to Chairman Tony Ledbetter.

Those receiving the endorsements were Deb Denys, Volusia County Council District 3; Rich Gailey, Volusia County Council District 5; Dr. John Hill, Volusia County School Board District 1; George Trovato, Volusia County School Board District 3 and Pat Johnson in the Deland mayoral race. The two-thirds vote threshold was not reached by either candidate in the District 1 County Council race.

However, Mr. Trovato declined the endorsement, requesting a special meeting so his opponent Stan Schmidt could attend. Mr. Schmidt had a scheduling conflict he could not resolve. The meeting will on July 12.

Honoring our Veterans

High Flight was composed by Pilot Officer John Gillespie Magee, Jr., an American serving with the Royal Canadian Air Force. He was born in Shanghai, China in 1922 to an American father and a British mother, who both worked as Anglican missionaries. John came to the U.S. in 1939 and earned a scholarship to Yale, but in September 1940 he enlisted in the RCAF and was graduated as a pilot. He was sent to England for combat duty in July 1941.

In August or September 1941, Pilot Officer Magee composed High Flight and sent a copy to his parents. Several months later, on December 11, 1941 his Spitfire collided with another plane over England and Magee, only 19 years of age, crashed to his death. High Flight has been a favorite poem among both aviators and astronauts. It is the official poem of the Royal Canadian Air Force, and has to be recited from memory by fourth class cadets at the United States Air Force Academy, where it can be seen on display in the Cadet Field House.

Information courtesy of the United States Air Force

I encourage you to take a moment and read it aloud:

High Flight

"Oh, I have slipped the surly bonds of Earth,
And danced the skies on laughter-silvered wings;
Sunward I've climbed and joined the tumbling mirth of sun-split clouds - and done a hundred things
You have not dreamed of - wheeled and soared and swung high in the sunlit silence. Hovering there,
I've chased the shouting wind along, and flung
My eager craft through footless halls of air...

"Up, up the long delirious burning blue
I've topped the wind-swept heights with easy grace,
Where never lark, or even eagle, flew;
and, while with silent, lifting mind I've trod
the high untrespassed sanctity of space,
-Put out my hand and touched the face of God."

Don't post on cars

Why is the lottery money spent on schools instead of sponsoring a racing car?

Non-citizen service

As part of my July Fourth tradition, I was watching the new American citizens being sworn in on TV. I was amazing, confused and questioning, when I saw at least three participants wearing American military uniforms. Is that possible that we have non-American citizens in our military? How it that right? I will do some research to find out.

Animal shelter in Edgewater

It is not far less expensive at the animal shelter in Edgewater to put your animal down than a vet's office.

I requested a price. It was $200 and did not include cremation.

To have someone come into the house was not that much more and it included cremation.

Stop bike tour

I hope New Smyrna Beach will not repeat the Bike and Bar tour. I had friends in town, we all went down to Flagler Avenue to do some shopping and enjoy the Reggae and Island Music Festival, which was scheduled at the same time.

We couldn't enjoy any of it. I spent half my time telling my friends it's not usually like this. We didn't spend any money. We couldn't walk on the sidewalks. The place was overrun. We couldn't get near the music venues.

There were drunken bikers everywhere. It was like another beach town that New Smyrna Beach prides itself on not being like. It was a big disappointment. It had to be bad for business because there had to be a lot of people like us who couldn't enjoy the Flagler Merchant experience like us.

In response to: "Remembering W"

I don't appreciated the rant Remembering W in your July 4th Hometown News.

I suggest the person who wrote it get their facts straight. It is not Mr. (George W.) Bush's problems. It is Mr. (Barack) Obama's problem. He has been in office five years. Let's get it right.

In response to: "Remembering W"

Your article was right on. How quickly they forget. Yet I hardly ever go on Facebook that I don't see an untrue statement about President Barack Obama. All I can think is "are these sore losers or what?"

In response to: ' Still peeved at The Pavilion'

I totally agree. The first time I went after they opened and found out I was paying 1 percent additional, I have not returned since.

The Palmetto Club continued its 59-year tradition of awarding deserving area high school seniors a $1,000 scholarship. In response to: 'Bike and bar tour stupid idea'

I am sorry you cannot enjoy the fun of this one-day event.

Obviously you are one of those who get upset over everything you don't like or doesn't include you. This event happens every year and is well advertised. People look forward to it and no one has gotten hurt, well other than your feelings. Those that know of it and those that partake in it have a great time. Photos are posted everywhere and personally you should be happy they are on bikes and not cars.

It is just a little island fun; maybe you should plan your power rides on any of the other 364 days of the year. You should probably also avoid the Burning Man Festival.

Disabled parking and driving privileges are out of control and too-often abused

Except in the case of disabled veterans (who have clearly sacrificed for us all and truly earned their entitlement to park and drive in a privileged manner in our country), I agree wholeheartedly with the recent "rant" submitted with regard to the growing (and deplorable) abuse of disabled parking and driving privileges.

Obtaining one of those hanging blue disabled placards for one's vehicle has, evidently become ridiculously easy as the number of vehicles displaying them has literally exploded in recent years. A simple observation leads one to believe that among the more common bases for eligibility for a blue handicapped placard must be morbid obesity (a "handicap" that is frequently self-inflicted) or simply reaching senior citizen status.

Further observation of many of those departing from placard-carrying vehicles reveals no obvious, significant ambulatory impairments at all, calling into further question the justification for the viral-like growth in the numbers of those who receive this unearned 'entitlement' to special parking and driving privileges.

And seeing the familiar wheelchair symbol on the license plates of motorcycles and scooters calls into even greater question why someone driving one of these vehicles should be granted special parking and driving privileges not given to others.

If you are a New Smyrna/Volusia County resident who frequents our wonderful beach, you will observe many people driving onto the beach without having to pay the nominal toll/user fee like the rest of us taxpayers do only because they have one of those blue placards hanging from their rearview mirror. And then, if you care to watch a little longer, you'll see some of those same free-riders (driving and parking on the same beach that you, Volusia County taxpayer, had to pay to enter) depart their vehicles and do such things as set up their temporary tent homes (no small chore) or take unassisted walks up and down the beach.

Finally, the ongoing abuse of handicapped placards — by spouses without the disabled partner present, by adult/care-giver children riding about in elderly parents' cars when the elderly parents are not in the vehicle and by young people attempting to use their disabled parent's placards for special parking privileges and for such things as free beach access — is something that does (as that earlier rant noted) call for stronger, ongoing enforcement with appropriate consequences (which is, reportedly, a $250 fine and revocation of the blue placard). Granting the special entitlements of privileged parking and driving activities to anyone who can convince a willing medical provider to sign off on the necessary paperwork has, clearly, gotten out of hand.

Unwanted trailer rentals

Someone has bought a bunch of trailers in Commonwealth Estates and is now renting them. Renting them to whomever, including criminals. This leads to a lower quality of life for those who are already residing there.

Animal Clinic good for the community

I see you have a thing in here about the Animal Clinic of Edgewater about charging too much for euthanizing pets. She has been my vet for more than 10 years. She had put down two of my animals. That vet is the most compassionate vet. They are a business. They have to charge.

Kim Castro is an excellent vet and saved two of our dogs and was very fair on the pricing. I take this a little personally because they have done so much for our family, and they do a lot for our community.

In my opinion, I think the person who said this has an axe to grind. I have actually left a vet who charged more.

Hometown News happy

I want to give a rave to the Hometown News. It is a great paper. I love Dan Smith's columns and look forward to his columns each week and I love the gift certificates for restaurants in Volusia County.

Beach property given to hotels

If this is not stopped, then all those who voted for this should be voted out of office. The beach belongs to the city or the county, not a hotel. County Council vote no. County citizens speak out against beach takeover like California coastline. A no vote is an excellent thing for citizens of Volusia County.

Fly flag properly

In reference to the rant in Hometown News, tell me where the flag should be. I could not agree with it more. On a recent trip from Dallas to Galveston, Texas, the flag was flown incorrectly on many businesses and on many government buildings. I commend him for putting this in the paper.

I hadn't seen that too much in Florida, but there is one here and there and it always seems it is on a government buildings.

Dogs allowed in library?

I was in the public library and a family was in there with their dog, which was sitting on the table. I asked the guard why the dog was in the library. He said he was not allowed to ask, if the dog is a service dog. What law is this? I would like the law and the wording published.

Use your signal

Drivers need to use their turn signals and use them properly. If you do not use them, I have no clue of what you are going to do. Let your fellow drivers know what you are going to do, long before you are going to execute the move.

Re: 'Legend of auto racing dies'

Walter Keller is the man (deceased early 2014) mainly responsible for starting the Living Legends of Auto Racing museum. Ray Fox, president of the club, was against it in the beginning. After the museum was established, with a lot of hard work by Glenn Malone and John Peoples and a few others, Mr. Fox faithfully manned the museum one day a week and sometimes more right up to the end. Gary Smith came in a few years ago and became museum manager with a big assist from Mr. Peoples, the long time original manager.

Sincerely, from one who was there is the beginning.

Summer lethargy means a day at the beach

VOLUSIA BUSINESS
CECIL G. BRUMLEY

It was the usual slow week leading up the 4th of July holiday, when most folks are thinking about cooling off at the beach rather than getting that next deal done.

But the good news is that the deals that are getting done are starting to improve pricewise in Volusia County. One eye-popping deal was for a small spot of land between Atlantic and Ocean avenues, just north of Main Street in Daytona Beach. Planned for two thrill rides, it sold for $1.2 million. It was a .35-acre property Yehuda Morali and Nissim Ben Shoaff bought in 1990 for $575,000. By the way, the rides are a 240-foot slingshot and a 165-foot tall Vomatron.

In another deal, Fornari Enterprises sold the Beachside Motel, 3309 S. Atlantic Avenue, Daytona Beach Shores, to Thomas Vass for $2.1 million. Fornari bought the property in 2012 for about $1.58 million.

There are still some steals out there. Anderson Kwik Kerb bought an office-warehouse at Springview Industrial Park in DeBary out of foreclosure for $1 million. A Sanford-area entity bought the same property for $2.75 million in 2008.

But generally people are starting to realize some profits out of their real estate investments. With prices for commercial and residential properties rising, that means more money will be circulating in the local economy and more opportunities are out there for someone willing to take the risk.

International Speedway Corp. reported a nice jump in revenue for the second quarter to $190.3 million from $178.4 million in its fiscal second quarter last year, mostly due to higher television revenue. With the huge capital outlay to upgrade Daytona International Speedway, don't expect higher profits, though. Net income was $21.5 million, down slightly from $22.4 million. Lesa France Kennedy is continuing that vision thing her father and grandfather had that built a racing empire. Looking down the road, she's already found how to maximize profits from the Kansas Speedway and now she's going to turn DIS into one of the most glorious sports venues in the world — one that people won't mind spending a lot of extra bucks to enjoy. Add in the One Daytona project and by 2016 you should see ISC do extremely well.

A few smaller items: Walmart is planning to build a liquor store next to the Neighborhood Market on Nova Road in Holly Hill. Site work is about to start for the Wawa in Orange City and demolition should begin soon on the McDonald's at Nova and Dunlawton Avenue in Port Orange where a bigger place is planned. A tire store has been proposed for Osteen, which is going to wind up getting a lot more businesses in the years to come. Finally, another restaurant will get it a go at 145 N. Ridgewood Ave., this time a Mexican restaurant named Mexigo.

Managing Editor Cecil G. Brumley has been tracking business and the economy in Volusia County for more than 17 years. Contact him at cbrumley@hometownnewsol.com or follow him on Twitter @cecilbrumley.

Family business helps protect you from storms

By Susan L. Wright
swright@hometownnewsol.com

Hurricane Andrew, the record breaking storm that devastated South Florida, changed many lives, including the lives of the Eddy family.

In the wake of the hurricane, like many others, James Eddy, a contractor at the time, went down to help with the rebuilding. Mr. Eddy spent almost two years making frequent visits down to the area to install storm shutters.

"I went down as a contractor to help repair and rebuild. When I first went down, people who wanted to rebuild their homes were being told it would be six to eight months before the (local contractors) could replace the shutters. So I ended up going back to install shutters in the Miami area."

The shutters of that time "failed" in the storm and as a result, the regulations were tightened and have been upgraded as time went on.

As a result of his experiences there, he decided to open his own storm shutter business in the Daytona Beach area.

Eddy Storm Protection is now one of the top providers of storm and solar control shutters in the region, providing custom made designs and products with the latest in storm protection and solar technology.

Asked to describe the company, the first thing Mr. Eddy says is it's "a family-run operation." Both his sons are very much part of the company. The next thing he points out is the three non-family employees on staff, including the sales manager, have all been with him for 17 years — they worked with him before he started the company and came to work with for him right from the start.

He does have a new office manager he just hired, but the loyalty of his staff is an indication of the kind of company Eddy Storm Protection is and customers tend to sense they can trust the Eddy products.

Randy Barber/staff photographer
Owner James Eddy stands with Stormy the Terrier in the production area of his store, Eddy Storm Protection in Daytona Beach on Monday, July 7.

Customers get only the best. "We manufacture all our products. Everything is custom made. We mainly specialize in storm shutters but we do a lot of solar protection products too," he explained.

Of course, the storm shutter business is seasonal and their busy season is really getting in gear at this time of year.

Mr. Eddy said at this time of year he likes to urge customers who have already installed any of the company's storm shutters, particularly the type that can be removed and then replaced when a storm is predicted to go through, try "a dry run."

It's important to make sure in advance that everything will work in the event of a real hurricane or tropical storm, he emphasizes.

As well as manufacturing and selling their own custom-made, up-to-date shutters, they will also service any make of shutter for customers who didn't buy from the Eddys.

Their solar shutters are adjustable for various times of day and levels of outside light.

In the winter, when storm concerns aren't quite as pressing as they are from June to November, customers tend to be more interested in the solar shutters, he said, so they never really have a slack time.

They like to deal personally with each customer and the offices are stylish and welcoming — so customers will feel at home and free to discuss any individual needs or requests.

And, along with the rest of the family, Mr. Eddy's Yorkshire terrier, aptly named Stormy, is on staff as the official greeter and alarm — letting the staff know whenever a customer enters the shop.

Eddy Storm Protection is at 1000 N. Nova Road, Daytona Beach. Call (386) 248-1631 or visit eddystormprotection.com.

Florida Chamber names distinguished advocates

The Florida Chamber of Commerce has named House Speaker Will Weatherford as their 2014 Most Valuable Legislator and honored the following area legislators with 2014 Distinguished Advocates awards:

•Sen. Dorothy Hukill, R-Port Orange: Championed tax cut legislation, including the communications services tax and sales tax on commercial leases.

•Rep. Dave Hood, R-Daytona Beach: Advocated for lawsuit abuse reform for the second year and was a leader for local chambers on public records bill.

The Florida Chamber presents the special awards to legislators who fought for pro-jobs initiatives during the 2014 session.

Grades for all 160 members of the Florida Legislature can be viewed at FloridaChamber.com.

Real Estate Liquidators announces training partnership

Real Estate Liquidators Group has partnered with several new brokerages in an effort to train their agents to better deal with distressed homeowners who have fallen upon difficult times.

According to Douglas Heise, owner and acquisitions manager, the training will be geared toward equipping these agents on how to properly help home owners who have negative equity in their homes. Agents need to understand that once they have entered the world of negative equity all of the rules have changed. The agent's fiduciary duties now go beyond the scope of what they were taught in real estate school. The agent's fiduciary duty is to the homeowner and often that means providing solutions that are outside the box.

NASCAR Digital Media makes personnel moves

NASCAR announced June 26 several personnel moves in its Digital Media office.

Colin Smith, managing director, NASCAR Digital Media, assumes responsibility of managing day-to-day operations for the sanctioning body's digital platform. Mr. Smith, who joined NASCAR in 2012 after a 17-year career at Raycom Sports, will be responsible for the entire digital platform, which includes NASCAR.com as well as the tablet and mobile experience.

Mr. Smith will report to Steve Phelps, NASCAR executive vice president and chief marketing officer.

John Martin, managing director, digital and business operations and an eight-year veteran of NASCAR, will also take on additional responsibilities as NASCAR continues to innovate across the entire digital platform. Mr. Martin will report to Mr. Smith.

"Since re-launching the platform in 2013, Colin and John have been major contributors to the growth and development of NASCAR.com as well as the platform's robust portfolio of digital products and offerings," Mr. Phelps said.

Also, NASCAR announced the promotions of three other key executives.

Brian Herbst, a nine-year veteran of NASCAR and one of the digital media office's first employees, has been promoted to senior director, content rights and partnerships. Mike Sales has been promoted to director of design, reporting to Tim Clark, senior director, optimization and programming.

Donald Baal has been promoted to senior manager, database marketing and will expand his role to include digital marketing initiatives.

The Tiger's Nest is a centuries-old monastery built on the side of a rocky cliff, 3,000 feet above sea level. With no real roads, it takes a steep climb to get to it. It is considered one of the holiest sites and one of the world's most breathtaking temples.

Contrast

"The whole country was very isolated until recently. Their big deal is serenity," Ms. Mahannah said. "Until the '90s there was a ban on TV and the Internet, but now all the kids have Facebook and smart phones."

"They're trying to preserve their culture. Men are required to wear the traditional dress, the "gho." It's kind of a kimono, with big long white cuffs, a pleat in the back. They wear it with black knee socks and black shoes. It's very attractive. They passed a law saying that all government workers have to wear it, and anyone on government property has to wear it," she said.

Black knee socks may sound unattractive, but Ms. Mahannah insists the Bhutanese men are very "sexy" in their traditional garb.

The women also often wear their traditional dress, which she said covers most of their body.

Until recently, the tiny country, sandwiched between Tibet and India, was ruled by an absolute monarch, but a few years ago the king stepped down and his son rules with his wife, a beautiful young commoner.

On her weeklong trip, Ms. Mahannah got to join in activities that aren't on the usual tourist's itinerary. She got to teach English briefly to some of the monks at one of the monasteries. "Some of them were so young — many were orphans who were brought up in the monastery. When they reach 18 (years old), they can choose whether to stay and become a monk or leave. Many stay."

Of course, they don't have much option — how are they going to make a living?

She remembers they brought bags of rice and vegetables to one and she cut up the cabbage and onions for dinner. "But I didn't mess with the chilies," she said.

The national drink is butter tea, which, she explained, is made with quite a bit of salt, which sounds unappetizing but she insists was very good.

She laughed thinking of the cultural contrasts — she loved the prayer flags that were everywhere, many in a traditional rainbow of colors, each symbolic of some quality, others white.

On the other hand, she said, "They really do have painted phalluses all over their homes. We went into one farmhouse, there was a huge (model of a phallus) hanging over a door."

A dog-lover, she said she saw dogs everywhere, "and they're all sound asleep."

She started taking food from the hotel and going out to feed the stray dogs.

Overall, the country is enchanting and beautiful, Ms. Mahannah said. While it's usually thought of in terms of the mountains that form the borders, it's set in a semi-tropical valley of rice paddies and lush vegetation. She described gorgeous heaps of flowers everywhere in the valley — jacaranda, poinciana, roses and snapdragons.

She was entranced by the birds, since the country also is a bird refuge, it's home to several types of endangered species, including the white-bellied crane. There are only at most 200 of these rare birds left and she was thrilled to see one.

Bhutan is the country that opted a few years ago to really pursue the goal of happiness.

Every year, instead of measuring the nation's progress in terms of its GDP, they come up with a figure they use to measure the Gross National Happiness.

The government also is protective of its environment — they have very progressive regulations to protect their special environment. It's reported to be the first country in the world that has legislated requirements for its people to protect the environment, including a rule that at least 60 percent of the country must be occupied by forest.

To protect its cultural environment, it has regulations designed to reduce the numbers of tourists and outsiders in the country, according to Ms. Mahannah, who said there is a fee for any visitor of $250 a day, just to be there.

Which makes it not quite as hard to discover as that fictional Shangri-La, but still a very rare and special place.

Workshop

"You won't become a historic district tonight," Ms. Scofield promised. "We can't sneak up on you and give you one, either."

The designation process begins with a county staff review of properties, including a building survey, determination of contributing and non-contributing structures, and proposed district boundaries.

Contributing buildings typically are 50 years or older and retain many of the original characteristics.

In Cassadaga, Ms. Scofield said, the staff is mainly concerned with buildings constructed between 1895 and 1940, have not been "severely altered" and continue to have "integrity."

She distributed a list of 56 contributing and six non-contributing Cassadaga properties, obtained from the property appraiser.

Additions, non-original siding and other modifications tend to detract from contributing factors, she said.

Obtaining input about the proposed boundaries: Cassadaga Road to the north, Marion Street to the east, Old Enterprise Road to the west and Lake Street to the south was Ms. Scofield's main objective at the workshop.

No one present expressed disagreement over the suggested perimeters.

Certified letters will be sent to affected property owners and they will have the opportunity to comment prior to or at a public hearing which will be advertised ahead of time, she explained.

At the hearing, the board will approve, deny or approve with conditions the designation.

If less than 51 percent of building owners object — at the hearing or in writing — the board's decision is upheld.

If a district is established, property owners would be required to submit plans to significantly modify contributing buildings.

Paint, minor repairs and yard improvements, including fences, would not necessitate board approval, Ms. Scofield said. Proposed changes to front exteriors of the homes will be those most scrutinized.

"If you don't pick an appropriate (paint) color, your neighbors will let you know," Ms. Scofield joked.

Replacing "like with like" is OK.

Any interior project is not subject to the review process.

"There are no preservation police," Ms. Scofield said. "I'm never going to come and knock on your door and say you need to fix up your house."

Homeowner requests to make changes are responded to on a "case by case" basis, she said, and the board will help with recommendations for non-cost prohibitive guideline adherence.

"We take into account people's economic … their financial abilities," she said.

Lillian Carroll and her husband, Ray Carroll, own a "contributing" home at 426 Seneca St., built in 1905.

Ms. Carroll was relieved to hear changing the paint color would not pose a problem. After seeing what a neighbor did, she is determined to retain creative license.

"She painted her house purple and green," Mrs. Carroll said. "I thought she was crazy, but I love it!"

One attendee asked if the designation would open doors to grant funding.

"Sad to say, there are almost no incentives for private property," Ms. Scofield said, adding public buildings owned by non-profit organizations, such as the Colby Memorial Temple and the Andrew Jackson Davis Building , may qualify for grants.

Richard Russell owns two homes on Stevens Street. One was built in 1906 and the other in 1928.

He and some of the others expressed concerns about sprawling Deltona and the possibility of their quiet enclave being consumed through annexation.

They asked if the historic designation would help them avoid that circumstance and others, such as large, potentially noisy public venues from being built just outside district borders.

Creation of a historic district is not a guard against annexation or development nearby, Ms. Scofield explained.

But it could strengthen the community's voice.

"What makes a difference is that you can go en masse," she said. "Let our planners, our County Council know this is important to you. I think that would be respected."

Ms. Scofield gently cautioned against over-ornamentation. A phrase she's coined — "phony Colony" — refers to the practice of taking a structure that belongs to one era and amending it to suggest it's from another.

For some reason, people like to create faux colonial structures, she said.

Accentuating with era-appropriate trim, windows, doors and other features is the idea, she said, advising against adding "bric-a-brac."

The Cassadaga Spiritualist Camp Meeting Association was established in 1894 after George Colby migrated south from New York to find the perfect spot to create a camp community where people could live and worship together.

"In the camp there was very little ornamentation," Ms. Scofield said. "I'm thinking that's part of the charm. It's very simple."

The HBP is expected to vote on the district at its July 22 meeting, she said.

expansion mode," Mr. Burkhardt said.

"Plans call for MinuteClinic to add 150 new clinics this year and be at 1,500 clinics total by 2017," he explained.

CVS has about 850 clinics in 28 states and the District of Columbia. In Florida, clinics are mostly in metro areas.

So far, Mr. Burkhardt said, there are no MinuteClinics on the east side of Volusia County. "At this time, there are no plans to expand into the Daytona Beach market in 2014, but future years are certainly a possibility," he said.

Decisions about where to establish MinuteClinics are based on many variables, Mr. Burkhardt explained, starting with where CVS stores are located and whether or not stores can be retrofitted for a clinic.

The market, in general, and customer visitation patterns also are taken into consideration.

The clinics are open 7 days a week and weekday evenings. No appointments are necessary. Patients walk in, sign in and are seen in order of arrival.

"Around 80 percent of patients do have health care insurance," Mr. Burkhardt said, but for those paying cash the clinics' prices are less than emergency rooms, most walk-ins and physicians offices."

MinuteClinic staff keeps lists of area medical providers who are taking new patients for those who do not have regular doctors.

"Around 50 percent of the patients seen at the clinics do not have primary care providers," Mr. Burkhardt explained. "MinuteClinic encourages them to have a medical home and primary care provider."

"With their permission, a full report on their visit can be sent to a primary care provider, usually within 24 hours," he said.

The first QuickMedx centers (the predecessor to MinuteClinic) opened in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area in May 2000, according to CVS.com, offering treatment for seven common medical conditions: strep throat, mononucleosis, flu, pregnancy testing, as well as bladder, ear and sinus infections.

"Services were cash pay only and a more affordable alternative to ERs and urgent care centers," the website states.

In 2002 QuickMedx became MinuteClinic.

Convenience caught on and the concept grew prompting questions and fueling concerns over quality of care.

A team of researchers analyzed claims data from a large Minnesota health plan that provided coverage for its enrollees at retail clinics for more than 5 years.

The 2009 study, published in the Annals of Internal Medicine, compared the cost, and delivery and quality of care for three conditions commonly treated in retail clinics — middle ear infection, pharyngitis, and urinary tract infection — with that received in physician offices, urgent care centers, and emergency departments.

Overall costs of care at retail clinics were lower — 30 to 40 percent — than at physician offices and urgent care centers; and 80 percent lower than emergency departments, according to the article.

It explained the differences were primarily attributable to lower reimbursements for evaluation and management visits and lower rates of laboratory testing in retail clinics.

The researchers also determined wait times were minimal.

MinuteClinic Florida State Manager and Nurse Practitioner Kathleen Daley said the Orange City site has been well received by the community.

Bruce D. Henderson/staff photographer

Nurse practitioner Meredith Ashley listens to the chest of CVS employee Megan Yon of DeBary on Thursday, July 3, as she demonstrates a basic exam at the CVS Minute Clinic, which offers a range of basic medical services at the CVS at 2400 Enterprise Road in Orange City.

"We've seen thousands of patients there; it's doing very well, actually," Ms. Daley said in a phone interview.

Demographically, she said, patients represent a broad spectrum.

"Sometimes we see a higher portion of the Medicare population," she said. "During flu season they come in for flu and pneumonia shots."

Many senior citizens appreciate the walk-in facility because they are dependent upon friends, neighbors and relatives to drive them and scheduled appointments may not coincide with transportation availability.

The highest percentage of Orange City MinuteClinic's patient population is families, she said.

"They have kids in school and we see a lot of moms, from those in their 20s to those in their 40s," Ms. Daley explained.

Recently, there has been a surge in the middle-age population using MinuteClinics' wellness programs, such as smoking cessation and weight management, she said.

Human Services to host public meeting

Volusia County's Human Services office will host a public meeting to provide information about services, identify gaps in service, and elect a representative of the low-income community and an alternate to serve on the Human Services Advisory Board.

The meeting will be at:

More than a dozen instrumental musicians from the Daytona Beach area, the Villages and north Florida will join the 50-piece Orlando Concert Band when it makes its first appearance at 3 p.m. Saturday, July 12, at the Ormond Beach Performing Arts Center, 399 N. U.S. 1. Admission is free.

Popular guest conductor and clinician Julian Bond will lead the group through a day of workshops and rehearsals followed by the 3 p.m. free concert.

"The Orlando Concert Band has visited the Volusia County area for the past three years to play graduations for Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University," said Rick de Treville, the band's president and trumpet section coordinator. "We've used some highly-talented local players and wanted to partner with them in a feature band performance. Julian Bond has soloed with the Orlando Concert Band and is one of the brightest stars of composing, arranging and performing in the country."

Mr. Bond is English-born and studied at the Guildhall School of

Concert a tribute to Elvis and Roy

For Hometown News
newsdy@hometownnewsol.com

"The Lost Concert," a tribute to Elvis Presley and Roy Orbison, starring Peter Alden as Elvis and Brian McCollough as Roy Orbison, will be performed at 2 p.m. Sunday, July 13, at the Ormond Beach Performing Arts Center, 399 N. U.S. 1.

Elvis Presley and Roy Orbison were friends in life and planned to perform together in concert. Although the opportunity for the two iconic singers to perform together in concert never came, the stage is now set for two great tribute artists to perform their hits together in "The Lost Concert."

Peter Alden is both a classically trained opera singer and stage actor who spent many years perfecting his tribute to Elvis. Mr. Alden and his good friend Brian McCollough, who performs as Roy Orbison, created an original show that featured both Elvis and Roy Orbison on stage together. "The Lost Concert" had a very successful run of six months in Nashville. Both Mr. Alden and Mr. McCollough performed for many years with "Legends in Concert."

Hosting the show is Ken Brady of The Casinos. Mr. Brady will perform The Casinos hit "Then You Can Tell Me Goodbye" and others. Special guests on the bill are The Dukes, a popular duo known for keeping the oldies alive. Also appearing as a special guest is Elvis tribute performer Cote Deonath, a young rising star who is popular on social media..

Tickets for the show are on sale now for $25 VIP reserved seating in the center section, and $20 general reserved seating. Tickets are available in person at the box office. Box office hours are noon to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday. Tickets may also be purchased by calling (386) 676-3375, or at ormondbeach.org. Visa and MasterCard are accepted.

Week of 7-11-2014

ARIES - Mar 21/Apr 20

Now is a great time to research a potential career change, Aries. You're feeling motivated and ready to try something new, so now might be the time to take that leap.

TAURUS - Apr 21/May 21

Technology plays a big role in your life this week, Taurus. Your office may be upgrading new equipment, or you have decided to rewire your home.

GEMINI - May 22/Jun 21

Gemini, take a deep breath and go with the flow when you find yourself unusually busy this week. A change of plans may find you spending more time at the office.

CANCER - Jun 22/Jul 22

You're in for a nice financial surprise this week, Cancer. Whether it's a raise at work or some other financial windfall, money is coming your way shortly.

LEO - Jul 23/Aug 23

Leo, expect some unexpected visitors this week. Straighten up around the house and make the most of this unplanned time with a few old friends.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

Friends or colleagues at work may introduce you to something that captures your interest, Virgo. You are ready for something new in your life, and this will tickle your fancy.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

Travel is in your immediate future, Libra. Enjoy this escape from the daily grind and invite a few friends or family members along to make the trip that much more memorable.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

Good news is on the horizon, Scorpio. It may be a pending promotion at the office or a chance to go out with friends, but either way it will put a smile on your face.

Art Notes

Art night slated

The Ormond Memorial Art Museum will host a free art night from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Friday, July 11, at 78 E. Granada Blvd., Ormond Beach.

Participants will create a personal coat of arms. Work together with the youngster in your life to create a personalized crest including things they like.

Instructor Linda King will lead the project.

For more information, call (386) 676-3347 or visit ormondartmuseum.org.

Book signing planned

Author Betty Lane-Fagerlund will host a book signing from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturday, July 12, at Sweet Marlays' Coffee, 214 S. Beach St., Daytona Beach.

Ms. Lane-Fagerlund, an Ormond Beach resident, will be available to sign copies of her book, "Keeping in Touch."

Spoken word's top performers at Cinematique

The Creative Happiness Institute and Cinematique will present spoken-word poetry at 2 p.m. Sunday, July 13, at 242 S. Beach St., Daytona Beach.

There will be a screening of the PBS special, "Poetry in Motion," which will help explain the importance of performance poetry. There will be an open mike for all styles of poetry as well.

The afternoon will feature three renowned spoken-word poets. Vatic, who grew up in Volusia County, now lives in Providence, R.I., where he was a member of the Providence 2014 National Poetry Slam team. He also is lead vocalist in "Darkcitizen," the hip-hop group that has opened for Afroman, Dam Funk and Diplo.

Scott Velazco teaches music production technology at Daytona State College. An Ormond Beach resident, he came from the Nashville music industry.

Andre Sparrow began performing spoken word in 2005 and in 2006 won the MTV "Hear Me Project" Short Story Contest. Since then he's been featured in states along the east coast and taught poetry for the Citi Performing Arts Center in Boston, Mass. He is a student at Bethune-Cookman University.

Admission is $5. For more information, call 252-3118 or email Dr. Axelrod at Axelrod@creativehappiness.org.

Petty Motorsports wins Coke Zero 400

For Hometown News
newsdy@hometownnewsol.com

A rain-shortened Coke Zero 400 at Daytona International Speedway went to a familiar number for NASCAR fans.

The green flag waved in the morning. Mid-afternoon, Richard Petty Motorsports' famed No. 43 was back in victory lane thanks to Aric Almirola's rain-shortened win in the 56th Annual Coke Zero 400 Powered By Coca-Cola.

Thirty years ago — July 4, 1984 to be exact – Mr. Petty won the race, the last of his 200 career NASCAR Sprint Cup Series victories.

"Thirty years ago, that's history; today is the future," Mr. Petty said.

For Mr. Almirola, it was his first Sprint Cup victory, coming at what he considers his "home" track. He is a Tampa native and attended Daytona Beach races regularly as a youth, dreaming of driving on the famed track. The win almost assures him of a berth in NASCAR's season-ending "playoffs," the Chase for the NASCAR Sprint Cup.

"Obviously, this is really special," Mr. Almirola said. "I grew up just two hours away. I sat in these grandstands watching the DAYTONA 500, watching the 400. And all the history behind the 43 car, I'm really appreciative of that."

Rain was a recurring theme this weekend. On Saturday night it caused the race to be postponed until Sunday at 11 a.m., which actually used to be the Coke Zero 400's starting time until 1998, when the speedway installed lights around the 2.5-mile tri-oval. (This year marked only the second postponement in the race's 56-year history. The other postponement occurred in '98; what would've been the inaugural race under the lights was postponed until October, because of wildfires that plagued the area.)

Brian Vickers (No. 55 Aaron's/FSU National Championship Toyota) finished second, while Kurt Busch (No. 41 Haas Automation Chevrolet) rounded out the top three.

Fourteen cars were finished long before the race was, because of two multi-car incidents.

Kasey Kahne won a shootout in the Subway Firecracker 250 Powered By Coca-Cola.

Mr. Kahne, driving the JR Motorsports No. 5 Hellman's Chevrolet owned by Dale Earnhardt Jr., nipped teammate Regan Smith's No. 7 Goody's Chevrolet by 0.021 seconds at the finish of the NASCAR Nationwide Series event. That was the third-closest NNS finish at Daytona and the eighth-closest in series history. Mr. Smith's consolation: he took over the series points lead.

The day after his first Sprint Cup Series win, the Coke Zero 400, Aric Almirola, visits the Daytona Rising project to check out what's going on with the $400 million rebuilding of the DIS grandstands.

A trip to gorgeous Sebastian Inlet

FISHING WITH DAN

DAN SMITH

Just back from a quick two-day trip to Sebastian Inlet.

If you haven't been there, what are you waiting for? One of the premier fishing stops in the state, it is a place that has called me since 1968. That year I made my first trip as an adult to the state and drove most of the way to south Florida on the Atlantic coast highway, A1A. As I topped the bridge that day I saw surf fishermen lined elbow to elbow and all were catching. Back then I didn't know much about blue fish, but I could tell they were having fun. I vowed to return when I had more time to fish.

In the '70s my fishing buddies and I would go to Sebastian and tent camp on a spoil island. At various times we caught sharks, mackerel and blues. Once I found the beach crowded with fishermen just as I had 10 years earlier, but this time the fish were pompano. The waves were filled with the tasty critters. I ran to my truck and retrieved my surf-fishing outfit and had a bucketful in an hour. The fat pomp were hitting most anything, but I caught them on a small silver spoon.

Of course, Sebastian Inlet is most famous for snook. Sometime in the 1990s Jack Thomas and I found the beach full of surf casters and this time they were pulling giant snook from the waves. This is a fisherman's paradise for sure.

On this trip I had my favorite girls along. Wife Lana, daughter Shayla and granddaughter Delayna accompanied the old man in the motorhome. Now I have to tell you the girls were more interested in playing in the pretty water than fishing, but naturally I was able to do a bit of casting. I caught a couple undersized reds and the granddaughter found a pair of living nine-legged starfish. I think she won that one. Later I caught more undersized reds, but daughter Shayla was able to swim with a five-foot wide manta ray. I definitely lost that one.

The girls were swimming in four feet of crystal clear backwater while I waded off in a dark lagoon. Soon they began to shout to me. It seems a group of four manatees had decided to join them. Heck, I can't compete with that, I thought, so I stowed my rod to join the fun. The big sea cows were definitely seeking company and kept coming within a couple feet of us. We were all pretty excited for it was a nice encounter in clear water.

I did notice my granddaughter, Delayna, was not as happy as the rest of us. When her mom asked her why, she reminded us we were not supposed to molest the manatees. It took an 11-year-old to tell us that maybe this was not a good idea. Actually, we never touched the animals on purpose and if anything it was closer to them molesting us.

As we stood there, they would slide their rough hides along our legs. Delayna is an expert outdoorswoman in the making and was not happy until the four manatees left for deeper water. Good girl, Delayna.

In the whole on this trip I didn't fish much, but just as I was leaving I saw a sickening sight. Boats were gathering in the middle of the inlet. At first only three or four, but before I could turn around there were 10. All were catching huge tarpon. That was a sickening sight because I was not able to join them. My boat was on the trailer and the camper was packed. We were pulling out.

I still had to stop and watch the action for a while. All I can tell you is WOW! I know how it works at that inlet. By the time I would have unloaded my boat and made it into the inlet, the fun probably would have been over. Dang it!

This summer get yourself down to Sebastian Inlet (18 miles south of Melbourne.) You don't need to be a fisherman to have fun there. Just ask my girls.

Dan Smith has fished the waters of Volusia County for more than 40 years. Email questions and comments to fishwdan@att.net. His book, "I Swear the Snook Drowned," is available for $10.95 at (386) 441-7793.
