UNIVERSITY of FLORIDA

Journal of Undergraduate Research

The Journal of Undergraduate Research publishes the outstanding scholarship of undergraduates at the University of Florida and showcases the work of students in the University Scholars Program.

Current Issue: Volume 15, Issue 1 — Fall 2013

Feature: Elizabeth McNeill

"Visuals were how history made sense to me. From that moment on, I was single-mindedly determined to study history through this specific gendered-cultural-visual lens." >> Full Story

Fall Focus on the Humanities and Fine Arts

Representations of Beauty and Sexuality in Hong Kong Advertisements: An Analysis of Social Constructs in Transnational Media
Margaret Cusack and Dr. Trysh Travis, College of Liberal Arts and Sciences

Eucatastrophic: Tales of Redemption in The Lord of the Rings
William Dylan Fay, College of Liberal Arts and Sciences

Directive Disorder: Pursuing Architectural Attention
Lauren N. Friedrich and Stephen Bender, College of Design, Construction, and Planning

"Who Do You Say I Am?": Second Temple Messianism and the Historical Jesus
Jordan Kassabaum, College of Liberal Arts and Sciences

Operable Tectonics as an Architectural Language
Robert Lyons and Lisa Huang, College of Design, Construction, and Planning

Visual Propaganda and the Aryan Family: The Difficulties of De-Emancipating Women of the Third Reich
Elizabeth McNeill, Dr. Geoffrey Giles, and Dr. Eric Kligerman, College of Liberal Arts and Sciences

Color Pedagogy: Aligning Discipline-Specific Perceptions and Content Knowledge of Color in the Built Environment
Genesis M. Okken and Dr. Margaret Portillo, College of Design, Construction, and Planning

Dance Activism: Choreographic Embodiment for Human Rights
Kate Pope, College of Fine Arts

Across the Waters: Kongo Presence in Contemporary Art of the Americas
Jennifer Potter, College of Fine Arts

The Journal of Undergraduate Research is supported by the Center for Undergraduate Research and the University Writing Program.