

places, places he has for so long loved.

Over these years you have got to know him, and you understand him, you learned his worth. And having come to know him you will treasure many memories of him. I shall treasure the last few minutes I spent with him on Wednesday evening. I came directly to him from the airport. As I entered his room he stretched out his hand eagerly to me and smiled a great welcome, saying over and over again 'I am so glad you have come... I am so delighted you were able to come'. And then went on to tell me how lovely is Liberta new church, although not quite completed. I shall treasure also the moment when his maid came in to remove his supper tray and he turned to me and said: 'she has looked after me well, she has been marvellous to me'.

A great gentleman has passed from our midst. He was that and so much more. And there is so much more that we could say about him this afternoon, so much he would not have us say because he would be so embarrassed, but so much which would be true, let what we have said suffice. Let us each go with our memories of a great servant of his Lord and his Church, a true friend, a loyal colleague, one who loved these islands and the people who live in them, one who gave to us his whole ministry, and at the end laid down his life for his brethren.

'The daily pressure' 'The anxiety for' 'The care of' the churches. Who will care as he cared? We mourn his loss, but not as those who have no hope. There may be all the terror and tragedy of Calvary, but thanks be to God there is the triumph of Easter. There may be the grim and awful surroundings of Golgotha, but remember that the tomb was in a garden - a garden where flowers bloomed. And when the Christ walked that garden on the first day of the week, he walked among the flowers. Our friend loved flowers. For him too there is the garden of the Resurrection. That was his hope. That is our hope.

Thanks be to God.
