Mr. Editor Sir, Politics is a battle for supremacy, the ducologue and the golden rule are omitted from a political campaign, it has but one object, and that is success - To control the antagonists, and expell the party in power, is the object, consequently a vote is a sacred thing, even if the voter reaches the bureau on a stretcher. You will recall somewhere between Jefferson and Adams, administration election has been won by a margin of two votes. Consequently, your kind and sympathetic attitude towards the old folks - probably made you, your own obstacle in the path of power, and caused you all to miss the fatted calf.

So in future, Brother, let your sympathy go out for the old folks after they cast their vote, not before.

Illidge - Politician
