powerful components in the birth of Saba's airstrip. It was the spirit and determination of one man, Mr. de Haynen, which fired the Sabians to the lofty ambition of struggling to demonstrate to the world that even Saba could be equipped with an airstrip. There after the financial aid, intellect, leadership and understanding of dedicated men have nurtured and developed the idea which was born in Mr. de Haynen's soul to be reflected and magnified by the yearning of the people of Saba for a better and more comfortable Saba.

On the 4th. of September 1960 hurricane Donna seriously damaged the first plane which landed on Saba. I heard Mr. de Haynen offer it's propeller to Saba. I do hope soon his offer will be accepted and this propeller will hang as a symbol in the terminal at Flat Point. Mr. de Haynen, a Frenchman, brought the conviction that the Sabians had not hoped in vain. Let this propeller therefore also symbolize that unity among men warrants peace and progress. And as we gaze upon our little relic of Saba's first aircraft - if we are lucky to obtain it - let us realize that the progress of our island may be propelled and aided from without but is mostly greatly dependant upon the energy and labour originating from within, from the Sabians themselves.

It is no easy task to maintain and stimulate a healthy and balanced economy on behalf of a group of people. Saba's island government has as first duty to endeavour to effect that from the improvements received, such as our airstrip and connecting road, in order that a lasting benefit will steadily manifest itself amongst the people. Abraham Lincoln said it so concise: "the greatest amount of good for the greatest amount of people." To those who endeavour in honesty and justice to serve the interest of Saba I cannot withhold my approval. The Sabians at home are called upon to serve this purpose. As one whose origin is amongst the Sabians I will continue always to wish Saba and the achievements of Saba unblemished success. No matter where I am I sincerely hope that every Sabian in the course of time receive to some degree in this life the fulfilment of their aspirations and dreams of happiness that are shared by all humanity who contributed their part to making the airstrip of Saba a reality I purposefully select but Mr. de Haynen and the population of Saba as the two most
