

"ties that bind us" as a people of God engaged in a common cause.

Secondly, we must intensify our drive by putting our shoulders to the wheel if we are to meet successfully the challenges of our year's program as set forth by our Planning Committee.

Thirdly, a greater spirit of cooperation and responsible sharing must be developed in our Committee - the stewardship of the faithful has been weakened and discouraged by the laxity of the inconsistent bystander. We must remember that the water is constantly on the rise and if we are not constantly raising our level of work we shall soon disappear.

Finally, my friends and fellow workers, in the Year of our Lord, 1964, let us put forth sincere efforts to forget all the unpleasant and negative experiences and in love and understanding, move out in Christian unity as we "press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

proved the lovers had captured the public fancy, aroused enthusiastic receptions on a triumphal tour of Amsterdam, and brought their two families together in highly genial circumstances.

Queen Juliana, Prince Consort Bernhard, Beatrix, Margriet and the 16-year-old younger daughter, Christine, all joined in yesterday in a demonstrative show for the lovers. They went to Schip Hol Airport to receive don Carlos's parents, Prince Xavier and Donna Magdalena and his sisters. Carlos and Irene in a two-seater sports car with the top down led the motorcade into Amsterdam along streets jammed with end of the afternoon crowds.

The two families then toured Amsterdam's canals by boat. Along the adjacent streets and clustered on the scores of bridges, the Dutch cheered lustily. It was a fairy tale to them and they liked it immensely. Flags hung from public buildings and street peddlers sold small flags and pins by the thousands.
