In the Digital Library of the Caribbean (dLOC) you'll discover one of the world's largest collections of photographs, maps, books, periodicals and manuscripts about the Caribbean, contributed by libraries and institutions worldwide.

The collection empowers an international community of students, scholars and policy-makers, as well as the Caribbean diaspora and others curious about the islands, to bring the Caribbean to their computer screens. Now approaching one million hits per month, dLOC is making a significant impact thanks to the support of its global partners.

Florida International University (FIU) and the University of Florida (UF) provide administrative and technical support, enabling partner institutions to build their capacity to digitize and provide access to their materials.

Members like you make it possible for us to add new content from the Caribbean and make it freely available online. Thank you for helping us expand!

dLOC has provided more than 25 on-site trainings to over 400 people. Please support the program so it can continue to make an impact in the region.

"I often meet people who tell me they wish that a site that features resources on the Caribbean and Haiti existed on the web. When I tell them about dLOC, they are always excited. Getting the word out about dLOC is imperative."

- Chantalle F. Verna, Ph.D.
Assistant Professor of History & International Relations
Florida International University

"Through dLOC, scholars and students across the globe have access to the sources historians of previous generations used to write our standard histories. With this knowledge, they have a new ability to assess the accepted historical record, to affirm it and potentially to transform it."

- Leah Rosenberg, Ph.D.
Associate Professor of English
University of Florida

"When I am on a quest for a rare book or a lost document in traditional libraries, I am always so happy to find in this digital library the resource which I am looking for elsewhere. I recommend it to many colleagues and it is my wish that this exceptional electronic collection could expand its services every day."

- Watson Denis, Ph.D.
Professor of History & International Relations
