Baldwin Library Digital Collections

Mission

The goal of the collections is to acquire and collect books, original artwork/proofs, and manuscript collections that support teaching and researching on a variety of topics related to material printed primarily for children.

Scope

The collections are multidisciplinary and serve all colleges at the University of Florida. The collections support scholarship on diverse topics, including education and upbringing, family and gender roles, civic values, racial, religious, and moral attitudes, literary style and format, and the arts of illustration and book design.

Currently, the collections include over 100,000 items published in Great Britain and the United States. The Baldwin is the second largest collection based on collection holdings and digital holdings/presence.

Searching in AFDC

Google Search

If you are accessing the collections on the campus, you can search using Google.

From the Home Page

The basic search on the Home Page allows you to search citation information across all items and collections in the Baldwin. You can also access sub-collections at the bottom of the page and search directly within each collection.

Advanced Search

If your basic search returns too many results, the advanced search feature allows you to restrict your search terms by categories such as title, publisher, subject, keyword, country and more.

Full Text Search

If you would like to search through the full text for a specific word or phrase, simply click on the text search tab. If you would like to include the newspapers in your search, click search, click the check box below the search bar and then type in the search term. You will receive results that include the term either in the citation or the full text. If the term is found in the full text, all pages with that term appear in the “matching pages” box at the top left of the screen.

All Items

Use the All Items tab to access all the materials in the collections.
