Those items included a scanner, printer, modem, latex glove, hydrogen peroxide, acetone, bowl and strainer, bleach bottle, measuring cup, ink jet paper and ink cartridges.

This month, the Charlotte County Sheriff's Office wrapped up a monthslong investigation into organized counterfeiting, ending in six arrests. The investigation began in October after a Punta Gorda Police officer arrested two people during a traffic stop.

Spencer Parr, 40, of Port Charlotte, and Andrea Maher, 37, of North Fort Myers, were found with methamphetamine in addition to counterfeit bills. Daniel Shirley, 25, was also arrested and found in possession of counterfeit bills later that month.

Local dogs found dead in animal traps

By LIZ HARDAWAY

They were meant to catch something much larger, and much more dangerous.

Two dogs in the Cleveland area of Punta Gorda were found dead in a privately owned snare, Charlotte County Animal Control announced Friday.

The snare was meant to catch coyotes, according to Brian Jones, Animal Control's division manager.

"The dogs, who were separately owned, were found deceased days apart and were the apparent victims of a snare trap set in that area," Animal Control posted on Facebook.

The first deceased dog was reported Monday, July 2. The second dog, which was a large, older black lab-type male with gray on his muzzle, was reported deceased on Wednesday, July 11. He was found in the area of Cleveland Court, Cleveland Drive and Grovewood Circle in Punta Gorda, Animal Control wrote.

Both dogs were killed by the same trap at the same location.

The department is investigating the situation and cannot reveal any details at this time, Jones said.

"We can confirm that we have identified the owner of one dog and are still searching for the other," Jones said Monday.

Animal Control is urging all dog owners in the Cleveland area to "take extra precautions in making sure their dogs

Trump questions US intel, not Putin, on Russia 2016 meddling

By JONATHAN LEMIRE, JILL COLVIN and VLADIMIR ISACHENKOV
ASSOCIATED PRESS

HELSINKI — Standing next to Russia's Vladimir Putin, President Donald Trump openly questioned his own intelligence agencies' conclusions that Moscow was to blame for meddling in the 2016 U.S. election to Trump's benefit and seemed to accept Putin's insistence that Russia's hands were clean.

Trump's comments, at a joint news conference Monday after summit talks with Putin, drew heavy criticism back in the U.S., including from prominent Republicans. Sen. John McCain was most outspoken, declaring that Trump made a "conscious choice to defend a tyrant" and achieved "one of the most disgraceful performances by an American president in memory." Sen. Bob Corker of Tennessee said Trump made the U.S. "look like a pushover."

In Helsinki, Putin said he did indeed want Trump to win in 2016 — because of his policies — but took no action to make it happen.

"I have great confidence in my intelligence people, but I will tell you that President Putin was extremely strong and powerful in his denial today," said Trump, repeatedly denouncing the special counsel investigation into Russian interference efforts, which intelligence officials warn are ongoing.

"I don't see any reason why Russia would interfere in the 2016 election," Trump said.

It was an extraordinary press conference closing out the Trump-Putin summit, in which the American president delivered what amounted to a warm embrace to the man who for years has been isolated by the U.S. and Western allies for Russia's activities in Ukraine, Syria and beyond.

Trump said he and Putin "spent a great deal of time" discussing allegations of Russian election meddling as they met for several hours Monday. But Trump declined the opportunity to denounce Putin for the interference efforts, which U.S. intelligence agencies insist did occur, including the hacking of Democratic emails, the subject of last week's indictment of 12 Russians.

Trump: Putin made 'incredible offer' in Russian hacking case

Trump said, as he has countless times, that there was "no collusion" between his campaign and the Russians. "We ran a brilliant campaign and that's why I'm president," he said.

Putin also suggested Monday that Moscow and Washington could jointly conduct criminal investigations into a dozen Russian intelligence officials accused of hacking during the 2016 U.S. election campaign — an idea Trump hailed as an "incredible offer."

Asked if Russia could extradite the 12 Russian military intelligence officers, Putin challenged the U.S. to take advantage of a 1999 agreement envisaging mutual legal assistance.

He said the agreement would allow U.S. officials to request that Russian authorities interrogate the 12, adding that U.S. officials could request to be present in such interrogations.

Putin noted that Russia would expect the U.S. to return the favor and cooperate in the Russian probe against William Browder, a British investor charged of financial crimes in Russia. Browder was a driving force behind a U.S. law targeting Russian officials over human rights abuses.

The summit began just hours after Trump blamed the United States — and not Russian election meddling or its annexation of Crimea — for a low-point in U.S.-Russia relations.

"Our relationship with Russia has NEVER been worse," Trump tweeted Monday morning, blaming "many years of U.S. foolishness and stupidity and now, the Rigged Witch Hunt!"

The Russian foreign ministry responded by liking Trump's tweet and then replying: "We agree."

Asked about the tweet and whether he held Russia responsible for anything, Trump said he held "both countries responsible" thinks the United States has

Woman, 75, dies from June crash injuries

By ANNE EASKER
STAFF WRITER

A 75-year-old Englewood woman succumbed to injuries after being struck by a car on June 22, the Florida Highway Patrol reported Monday.

Louise Hoffman was walking east across Ceres Street in Englewood from her mailbox toward her driveway at 2:56 p.m., when she was hit by a 17-year-old driver traveling north.

Shawn Malinowski, of North Port, stated he did not see Hoffman due to a pickup truck and trailer parked on the west side of Ceres Street to the south of Hoffman, according to a news release from Florida Highway Patrol.

He said he swerved left in his 2002 Dodge Neon in an attempt to avoid Hoffman but hit her with the front right side of his vehicle.

After being struck, Hoffman was transported to Sarasota Memorial Hospital with life-threatening injuries. She died Sunday, according to the FHP.

The investigation remains open, according to authorities.

Red tide still lingering in the Gulf

By STEVE REILLY
Staff Writer

ENGLEWOOD — Manasota Key can't seem to shake red tide.

"I'm not sure how it's going to be today," Mark Timchula said early Monday morning in a video posted on his Beach Guy Facebook page.

He did not detect scents of the toxic algae in the air, nor was the water lapping along the shoreline discolored a reddish brown from the algae.

"You'll have to judge for yourself," said Timchula, who is known as the Beach Guy for his rentals of beach umbrellas and chairs on Englewood Beach. Few people were out on the beach Monday morning.

"I am not sure whether I am going to stay out long myself," he said.

While the waters seem cleaner along the shoreline, Timchula sent up a drone with a camera that showed darker water lying 20 feet or more offshore. He also expected winds to shift, blowing from the west onshore. Later in the day, onshore breezes could blow the algae closer to shore.

The weekend saw Manasota Key plagued with red tide, resulting in a new batch of dead fish washing ashore.

"We're getting more new dead fish, notice the aerial stuff was kind of bad over the weekend, not as bad this morning — but it's very calm," Zoe Bass reported in an email to the Sun on Monday. Bass, along with Wilma Katz, is a primary state permit holder overseeing Coastal Wildlife Club sea turtle patrols on Manasota Key.

"It's definitely a new fish kill," she said. "There's quite a few big fish," she said.

Bass offered a caution to those who want to walk the beach not to go barefooted. The spines of decaying puffers, catfish and other fish are mixed in with the sand and could cause injuries if stepped on by barefooted beachgoers.

Persistent tide

According to the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission, the red tide algae — Karenia brevis — occurs naturally in the Gulf of Mexico, first emerging in nutrient-poor water 11 to 46 miles offshore. Winds and currents can carry the algae blooms closer to shore.

"The current bloom, first observed in October 2017, has shifted up and down the Southwest Florida coast over the past nine to 10 months, periodically expanding and contracting in size," said Vince Lovko, Mote Marine Laboratory scientist and manager of Mote's Phytoplankton Ecology program.

Southern Sarasota, Charlotte and Lee counties have seen consistent elevated levels of red tide compared to northern Sarasota County to Pinellas County, Collier and Monroe counties to the south.

"Generally, red tides can occur any time of the year and can be very short-lived (weeks) or can last several months to more than a year, sometimes even subsiding completely before reappearing again weeks or months later," Lovko said.

"Various factors (relate) to conditions that influence growth and survival of (red tide), including temperature, sunlight, availability of nutrients, and the direction and velocity of wind and water currents."

Florida Gulf Coast University marine science professor Michael Parsons heads up the university's Coastal Watershed Institute. His research includes investigating how groundwater discharges can disrupt sea floor bottoms, leading to the production of toxic algae, particularly in the Caribbean.

Red tide, Parsons explained, is very sensitive to fresh water and can survive in a minimum of two parts seawater to one part fresh water.

Bottom line: fresh water kills the Karenia brevis algae.

While not directly feeding red tide, nutrients from stormwater and other fresh water flushes could feed the toxic algae with "legacy nutrients," what remains after freshwater algae and bacteria dies off in saltier waters.

"It's a hypothesis and still needs to be tested," Parsons said, suggesting some unidentified nutrient source could be feeding red tide off Manasota Key and other nearby shorelines.

Punta Gorda meeting to further master plan process

By DANIEL SUTPHIN
Staff Writer

The Punta Gorda City Council had a special meeting Wednesday to potentially move forward with the development of the Citywide Master Plan.

The master plan is a revamp of the Citizens Master Plan developed in 2005 after Hurricane Charley wiped out much of Punta Gorda the previous year.

After the hurricane, residents came together to form the master plan to help guide the city's redesign process. That group eventually became Team Punta Gorda.

"Once the master plan was completed and gifted to the city," the organization's CEO Nancy Johnson wrote in a July editorial in The Sun, "Team (Punta Gorda) began the process of seeing that the plan was implemented. A major emphasis was to build a close working relationship with city and Charlotte County governments to provide volunteer citizen assistance in rebuilding our community."

City staff has drafted a scope of the new plan for review and consideration by the City Council. If approved, staff will let the request for qualifications go through. The RFQ is necessary so the city can hire a firm to consult with the community and help design the new master plan to influence growth in the city.

An RFQ typically refers to the pre-qualification stage of the procurement process of a company for support. Those who respond to the RFQ and meet the qualification criteria by the city will be included in the subsequent request for proposals solicitation process.

The next step is a request for proposal, or RFP. This could then solicit a proposal, which is usually made through a bidding process by an agency or company. That company will then submit business proposals to the agency.

"The goal of the special meeting is to further refine and come to a consensus on the scope of the city's master plan," said Mayor Rachel Keesling.

Keesling said all five City Council members need to be comfortable with the goals of the master plan and growth in the city so they can move forward with the evaluation and selection of a firm.

"City staff has taken great care in getting to this point," Keesling said. "So I feel comfortable with the document but look forward to hearing input from council and the public on this major project."

The meeting is at 9 a.m. Wednesday at the City Council Chambers at 326 W. Marion Ave. Comments from residents will be included.

"The economic component of the plan that was expanded is critical to analyzing the city as we come out of the economic downturn (2008 recession) and look to a healthier local economy," Keesling said.

During the 2005 master plan process, a town and architectural design consulting firm was brought in to work with the city and its residents.

The goal of Wednesday's meeting and the RFQ is to pursue a firm to do the same with the Citywide Master Plan. This plan will be a guide for the city to update its land development regulations, which is expected to enable more businesses to come to Punta Gorda.

Slogan becomes 'Me First' as Trump meets Putin

By MATTHEW LEE and ZEKE MILLER
Associated Press

AP PHOTO

WASHINGTON — Donald Trump's "America First" slogan morphed Monday into "Me First" as the president unloaded on his own intelligence community and Justice Department to portray himself as the victim of a conspiracy to deny him legitimacy. Trump also blamed American "foolishness and stupidity" for the poor state of U.S.-Russia relations, returning to themes he has repeated at political rallies around the United States.

This time, though, he was on foreign soil, standing next to Vladimir Putin, the very man whose government is accused of interfering in the 2016 election to favor Trump. As such, his extraordinary performance fueled criticism of his presidency from both the right and left. And it will likely embolden Putin, who faced no pushback from Trump over the election allegations or a long list of other Kremlin actions, ranging from Syria to Ukraine.

Sure enough, critics and even some usually reliable defenders were quick to pounce.

Sen. John McCain, R-Arizona, called it "one of the most disgraceful performances by an American president in memory."

House Speaker Paul Ryan, R-Wisconsin, a cautious Trump supporter, said, "The president must appreciate that Russia is not our ally." And Rep. Trey Gowdy, R-South Carolina, who has been critical of the Russia probe, said that "Russia is not our friend" and expressed hope that Trump's national security aides could convince him that "it is possible to conclude Russia interfered with our election in 2016 without delegitimizing his electoral success."

But after his two-hour, one-on-one meeting with Putin in Helsinki, Trump cast doubt on U.S. intelligence findings that Russia interfered in the election, and he dismissed special counsel Robert Mueller's probe into the meddling, suggesting there is no reason to doubt Putin's denials of malfeasance.

"I have great confidence in my intelligence people, but I will tell you that President Putin was extremely strong and powerful in his denial today," he said.

Current and former Trump White House and campaign officials describe the president as obsessed by any suggestion that his elevation to the White House came as anything other than the product of his own hard work. They say the former reality star and relentless tabloid self-promoter believes that any suggestion of Russian interference undermines his victory — and his brand.

It's for that reason that since the 2016 campaign Trump has forcefully rejected any suggestion of Russian support for his candidacy. After his electoral victory, which caught even Trump by surprise, the president reluctantly acknowledged Russian meddling in the election — the unanimous consensus of the intelligence community — while in the same breath suggesting other countries could be responsible.

Months later, Trump said he fired FBI Director James Comey because of the lingering investigation into Russian meddling and possible collusion with elements of Trump's campaign. And Trump continues to reject Mueller's probe as a "witch hunt," despite the indictments of Russian hackers and intelligence officials.

On Monday, Trump also resurrected several debunked conspiracy theories about his opponent Hillary Clinton and the Democratic Party, called out an FBI agent involved in the meddling probe by name and complained about media coverage.

All the while, Trump praised his electoral success and again denied any collusion with Russia, something Putin was happy to agree with, though the Russian leader did admit to a preference for Trump, who campaigned for better ties with Moscow.

"We ran a brilliant campaign, and that's why I'm president," Trump said at one point.

"That was a clean campaign, I beat Hillary Clinton easily," he said at another. "It's a shame that there could even be a little bit of a cloud over it."

Trump couched the summit as a triumph of diplomacy, saying he was demonstrating statesmanship by agreeing to the meeting with Putin and savaging those who have expressed concern over its timing and what might have been on the table.

Yet, despite vague vows of better ties to come and new cooperation in Syria and on nuclear nonproliferation, neither Trump nor Putin was able to offer details of progress or specific improvements in relations as they spoke to reporters at a news conference in Helsinki after their long-awaited summit.

The only tangible sign of progress was Putin's gift of a World Cup soccer ball to Trump. The only points of disagreement came when Putin gently chided Trump for withdrawing from the Iran nuclear deal and when the Russian leader, not Trump himself, explained the U.S. position on Russia's annexation of Crimea.

"He continued to maintain that it was illegal to annex it," Putin said of Trump's stance.

Putin, for his part, played the role of statesman, serving as a kind of emcee and parrying questions from the press by professing incredulity at the allegations of meddling, before making an astonishing offer of a "deal" with the president. His proposal to trade access to Russians accused of hacking in return for Russian investigators engaging in investigations of Kremlin critics was "an incredible offer," according to Trump.

Trump's openness to the symbolic offer appeared to cede the high ground to Putin. To Russia hawks, even consideration of the proposal pointed to the success of Putin's efforts to shake the foundations of American democracy.

After all, that was the ultimate goal of Russia's election meddling, U.S. officials have assessed.

Putin appeared to poke at the sensitive subject when he responded to a question about meddling by asking, "Do you believe United States is a democracy?"

TRUMP

been "fooling" and that "we're all to blame."

"The probe is a disaster for our country. There was no collusion at all."

Putin, speaking through an interpreter, once again denied what he described as "so-called interference of Russia." He called it "nonsense" and insisted the Russian state had never interfered and would never interfere in the American electoral process.

The pair had opened their long-awaited summit Monday with a wink and slouch, respectively, then talked one on one behind closed doors for two-plus hours before the American leader declared their meeting was off to a "very, very good start for everybody."

"We have not been getting along well for the last number of years," Trump said after arriving at the Presidential Palace in Finland's capital, where the leaders are meeting. "But I think we will end up having an extraordinary relationship. ... I really think the world wants to see us get along."

Putin, for his part, said he and Trump have maintained regular contact through phone calls and meetings at international events but "the time has come to have a thorough discussion on various international problems and sensitive issues." He added: "There are quite a few of them for us to pay attention to."

The summit, which is being closely watched around the world, was not the first time Trump and Putin have held talks. They met on the sidelines of world leader meetings in Germany and Vietnam last year. But Monday's session was condemned in advance by members of Congress from both parties after the U.S. indictment last week of 12 Russian military intelligence officers accused of hacking Democrats in the 2016 election to help Trump's presidential campaign.

Addressing reporters before the one-on-one meeting, Putin struck a casual pose during Trump's remarks, slouching in his chair with his legs wide and eyes low. He nodded along to some of Trump's remarks before they were translated, showcasing his fluency in English. Trump leaned forward in his chair, his hands tented in front of him and frequently glanced over at the Russian president. At one point, he shot Putin a wink. After Trump concluded his remarks, American reporters shouted several questions about whether he would bring up election meddling during his discussions with Putin.

With that, the leaders gave a quick handshake and their private meeting in the opulent Gothic Hall was underway — the two of them, each with a translator.

are safely confined and/or under the care and control of a responsible person at all times," they said in their Facebook post.

Jones said the type of snare trap used was a noose-type cable which "ensnared the dogs as they were attempting to enter a property," preventing them from moving.

To his knowledge, snare traps do not automatically kill an animal.

Though Charlotte County does have a trapping program, they do not issue snare traps, but only "humane steel cage traps," Jones said.

Residents are not required to follow Animal Control's rules for personally owned traps.

Comments under the post take one of two viewpoints: Was this a product of negligent ownership, or animal cruelty?

Sharon Goodwyne commented that Animal Control should investigate the owners of the two dogs, citing Charlotte County's Animal Control ordinance that prohibits domesticated animals from roaming without a leash.

"Coyotes are a serious problem with no solution to eradicate them," user Joan Keeney commented.

"Snares are a proven method of taking out coyotes. ... Why were these dogs roaming around in the first place?," Keeney continued. "The blame is solely on the dog owner, not the person who set a trap on their own property to protect their livestock from predators."

"Snare traps are cruel and should be considered animal cruelty," commented Marnie Snyder Burger. "Why do they even allow these types of traps?"

were obtained for four residential units.

In total, more than $7,000 in counterfeit $20s, $10s, and $5s were seized by law enforcement during the initial traffic stop and subsequent search warrants.

The counterfeit bills, according to an arrest affidavit, are created through a chemical bath process with a mix of bleach, hydrogen peroxide and acetone. The chemicals lift the ink from a small denomination note by submerging the note into the chemical bath contained within a bowl using a gloved hand.

The ink is removed from the paper by gently rubbing it off with a dry wipe. The washed note produces an ivy-colored blank note, on which to print a larger denomination using a scanned parent note, blank and color ink, and a color printer. The reprinted note is then ready for introduction into the financial system.

Those arrested include:

• Spencer Parr, 40, 3400 block of Yukon Drive, Port Charlotte. Charges: forging bank bills, checks, drafts, or promissory notes, possessing 10 or more counterfeit notes, and making or possessing instruments for forging bills.

• Andrea Maher, 37, of North Fort Myers. Charges: forging bank bills, checks, drafts or promissory notes, possessing 10 or more counterfeit notes, making or possessing instruments for forging bills.

Fight against smoking medical marijuana may impact election

This editorial appeared in the (Fort Lauderdale) Sun Sentinel.

Two years after Florida voters overwhelmingly approved the use of medical marijuana, Gov. Rick Scott continues to try to stop patients with chronic diseases from smoking a drug their doctors say could help them.

It's not just the governor who stood in the way of the 2016 constitutional amendment that legalized cannabis for certain patients, an amendment approved by 72 percent of Florida voters.

Last year the Florida Legislature passed a law banning smokable cannabis, a method proponents say is easier, less expensive and brings quicker relief than edibles, vaporizers, oils and sprays.

For understandable reasons last month, a circuit court judge struck down the smoking ban. The constitutional amendment references smoking, after all. It says smoking medical marijuana in public places doesn't have to be accommodated. It's clear the amendment anticipates that cannabis would be smoked — just not in public places.

Leon County Circuit Judge Karen Gievers ruled the ban violates patients' constitutional rights. In her 22-page ruling, she said Floridians "have the right to use the form of medical marijuana for treatment of their debilitating medical conditions as recommended by their certified physicians, including the use of smokable marijuana in private places."

But here comes the governor, announcing he would appeal the ruling. The state Department of Health argues it "goes against what the Legislature outlined when they wrote and approved Florida's law."

Don't you hate how government can endlessly fight something it doesn't like, while spending someone else's money — yours?

Give it up, governor.

Trust that voters knew what they were doing when they passed the constitutional amendment pushed by Orlando trial attorney John Morgan, who promised this lawsuit if you signed the ban into law.

Consider people like Cathy Jordan of Manatee County, who has ALS — amyotrophic lateral sclerosis. She told the Associated Press that smoking marijuana dries her excess saliva, increases her appetite and works as a muscle relaxer.

"So many people won't smoke due to the stigma and it being against the law. This is legitimate medicine," said Jordan, one of the plaintiffs. "This ruling is not just for me, but for many other people."

Smoking marijuana is a more affordable option than vaping, said Ben Pollara, who was the campaign manager for the medical marijuana amendment.

"It is the (method) most people are most comfortable with. It's also the most effective delivery system," he said. "There's also the basic notion of voter intent. They were thinking about the green leafy stuff you smoke."

The governor's lawyers argue that smoking marijuana isn't an appropriate way to administer medicine. But do they have medical degrees? Shouldn't doctors decide the best administration method?

Lawmakers also argue that allowing cannabis to be smoked will open the door to recreational use.

But the ban on smokable cannabis could now have that effect.

On Tuesday, Morgan announced he would lead a referendum to ask voters in 2020 to legalize recreational marijuana in Florida.

In an email to the Orlando Sentinel, Morgan said he believed such a constitutional amendment "would pass overwhelmingly. And I believe in light of President Trump's position, America is ready and willing."

Earlier this month, Trump said he was inclined to support a bipartisan congressional effort to end the federal ban on marijuana, allowing states to determine the best approach.

Putting a marijuana amendment on the Florida ballot in a presidential election year will surely draw voters who might not otherwise turn out. Given Florida's role in presidential politics, such an amendment could well affect who will be our next president.

Perhaps it's too late for the governor to avert such an amendment. But before causing any more political damage or spending any more taxpayer money, he should end his appeal, do what voters intended and accept that medical marijuana, in all its forms, is here to stay.

Force politicians to fix toxic water

Editor:

It always seems to take a major mess to get politicians in our government to pay attention to the tax-paying citizens' needs and the demand for action. We residents of Florida are disgusted with that lack of action in regards to the continuing horror of the algae and red tide literally consuming our waterways and beaches.

This has been going on for years yet nothing substantial has been done. I have lived in Florida for more than half a century, no degree in biology just a longtime fisherman and beach user who is losing the enjoyment of living with our waterways. With the situation getting worse, no one in our government seems capable of fixing this serious problem and they will let it fall on the taxpayer to bail them out.

Do not vote for any politicians unless they sign a promise to address this problem. This goes to locals and state people running for office not to just talk and not to get rich unless you want to sleep with your own feces. What a concept, to do the right thing.

Families really not priority of the Left

Editor:

The separation of children from adults when entering our country illegally has the Left up in arms that such an inhumane activity can be performed. These children need their parents, and I agree.

Some of these children did not enter the U.S. with their parents but with adults their parents handed the children to so that maybe they would be taken care of here. Here is where I am confused. President Trump has nominated Brett Kavanaugh for the Supreme Court. Mr. Kavanaugh has been described as a candidate that even many of the law departments of major universities that are Left-leaning have admitted is an outstanding candidate.

Mr. Kavanaugh, if appointed, gives the Left concern that Rowe v. Wade which permits abortion may be overturned. Where I am confused is that the Left supports separating a woman from her child before the child is born by way of abortion while detesting the temporary separation of children from their mother when entering the country illegally.

It's OK to kill an unborn child but not OK to temporarily separate children from their families. The separation of families appears to be about politics without the concern to holding families together.

Illegal immigration costing US taxpayers

Editor:

Millions of American workers as teachers, newspaper editors, retail, restaurant, construction, farmers, assemblers, etc., veterans and older retired persons are struggling day after day to survive with a meager income of around $40,000 or less, but still pay their taxes, medical insurance, Medicare and social security.

Illegal immigrants are sneaking into our country, ignoring totally the U.S. immigration laws, are causing a hefty cost on the American taxpayer. As informed by other news providers, the cost of these millions of people (backlog of 700,000 to be processed) are amazing.

Illegally entering children have a cost of $32,000/year plus free medical and legal services provided by taxpayer.

Illegally entering adults have a cost of $50,000/year plus free medical and legal services provided by taxpayer.

I wonder why the Sun newspaper is not researching and disclosing the huge costs that each of these illegal entering persons, looking for the American dream of a better life in the land of free milk and honey, cost to the American working class.

We have to protect ACA, pre-existing condition fix

Louisa McQueeney
FloridaPolitics.com

The Trump administration's refusal to defend the pre-existing condition exclusion and the Affordable Care Act provision that insurance companies cannot charge more based on a person's health status, makes you realize once what is at stake.

In February, 20 state attorneys general, including Florida, filed suit in the U.S. District Court of Northern Texas, claiming that when President Trump signed the "Tax Cuts and Job Act" into law, the individual mandate was repealed, making the entire ACA invalid.

In a letter to House Speaker Paul Ryan, Attorney General Jeff Sessions states that with the repeal of the penalty, the protections of guaranteed issue (pre-existing condition exclusion) and community rating (the sicker you are the more you have to pay) are no longer valid either and the justice department will not defend these important ACA protections in the lawsuit.

GOP efforts to repeal the ACA have failed for a good reason since the public understands the protections the law provides and doesn't want to go back to a system where an insurance company can deny coverage based on age, health status or put limits on the amount they have to pay out, leaving you to pay the rest.

While both sides of the aisle are talking about various forms of repeal with their own versions of replacement, no Floridian, of any political affiliation, should support the outright repeal of the ACA. It's just too important to too many people. Instead, we should be using the protections afforded under the ACA as a building block to increase access and coverage for Floridians.

Protections like free annual well-care visits, including screenings like mammograms or flu shots, the ability to keep your child on until the age of 26, tax credits if you make less than 400 percent of the federal poverty level, no annual or lifetime limits, and the closing of the doughnut hole for Americans on Medicare.

The piecemeal repeal of the ACA by the Trump administration, and other attempts to repeal the ACA, continue to undermine the protections of the health law and increase the cost of health insurance. This effort will push older, middle-class Floridians, who do not qualify for tax credits under the law, into a more precarious, expensive health care system, where medical bankruptcy is rearing its ugly head again.

Rather than destabilizing the health insurance markets, we should all work together to strengthen and maintain consumer protections and reduce the cost of health care to Floridians.

Joe Henderson

I'll admit something right up front.

I had to suppress a gasp Tuesday afternoon when the Tampa Bay Rays unveiled the sticker price for the baseball stadium they propose in Ybor City and hope to play in by 2023.

$892 million!

That's about $200 million more than I expected, but I guess it's roughly in line with what stadiums cost these days. The question is, how badly does the city of Tampa and Hillsborough County want this?

We're about to find out.

If built, it will be a dandy ball yard all right. Fixed translucent roof, which will give a nice natural light to the place. With 28,216 fixed seats — expandable to 30,842 if people don't mind standing at some of the bars and other hangouts — it will be the smallest ballpark in the major leagues.

That's not a bad thing.

And yes, I believe Ybor City is the perfect, central location to attract fans from the entire Tampa Bay market. The Rays say 1.6 million people live within a 30-minute drive of the proposed location. They also went to great lengths during the rollout at the Italian Club in Ybor to stress that the ballpark could be used year-round in a variety of ways by the community — for free, in some cases.

But …

$892 million!

That's a lotta playground.

Don't ask for details about how much the Rays are willing to pay versus how much the bill they expect/hope/pray the public will foot. Those numbers aren't even close to being available, and it will be a torturous process to craft something that works.

It will take a combination of tourist tax money, maybe a special taxing district where the newly generated revenues go to pay for the stadium, and … oh, who knows. Tampa business groups are working hard to make this happen, so that might be another revenue stream.

It won't be enough to cover the cost.

The question then becomes how much are the Rays willing to pay?

As Tampa Mayor Bob Buckhorn said after watching the presentation, "You're not going to see the city of Tampa write a check. I'm willing to walk away if it doesn't make sense."

Rays Owner Stu Sternberg regrettably suggested last spring the team might pay $150 million toward the project. Let's just forget about that and chalk it up to something he shouldn't have said out loud. If he wants this thing built — and I really believe he does — it's going to take, well … a LOT more.

Because …

Sternberg did say that "we expect to be here for generations to come" and I believe that is what he wants.

To make that happen, yes, the Rays need a new stadium because Tropicana Field's usefulness has long passed. Bad stadium in a bad location — too far away from too many people to make economic sense. Everyone talks about the problems the Florida Marlins are having drawing fans to their relatively new stadium, and that's because they built it too far away from the center of their market.

"We believe baseball cannot only survive here but thrive," Sternberg said.

The timetable is tight.

The Rays and Hillsborough have to first work out a financing plan, then get it approved. You can almost book it that it won't go to a public referendum like Raymond James Stadium did.

And the ferocity of opposition by some to even using one cent of public money — whether tourists pay it or not — should not be under-estimated.

So, yes, it looks like a fabulous ballpark. It would secure baseball's future here, and I'm in the group that thinks that is important. The Rays are an asset to the community. Fans would realize what they've been missing from all those seasons at the Trop.

Until we hear details on how to pay for this though, I can't get that figure out of my mind.

$892 million!

Yikes.

Will the Blue Wave start in Jersey?

E.J. Dionne

BORDENTOWN, N.J. — "Do you feel like there is a steady hand at the wheel? Do you feel like you're in good hands right now?"

Andy Kim, a Democrat challenging Republican Rep. Tom MacArthur for a congressional seat in south-central New Jersey, sees these questions as pivotal to November's election. They are singularly appropriate after a week of dangerous chaos ignited by President Trump's European trip and new indictments in the Russia probe.

In an interview at a diner here before picking up his 2-year-old son Austin at a daycare center nearby, Kim predicts that by November, voters will view electing a Democratic-controlled House as essential to providing "a check against this administration" and restoring some "stability" to Washington.

With three highly competitive House races, New Jersey is key to this effort. Democrats have fielded candidates with long histories of public service who were encouraged to join the electoral fray by the sense of emergency Trump's presidency has created.

Kim was assigned by the State Department in 2011 to work with the U.S. military in Afghanistan. Having experienced firsthand the role our NATO allies have in supporting the war effort, he says he was especially horrified by Trump's attacks on the alliance.

Mikie Sherrill, who served nearly a decade in the Navy as a helicopter pilot, is the Democrats' nominee to the north in the 11th District. "We're used to getting missions accomplished working with people across many different backgrounds," she says in a telephone interview, adding calmly but — in light of current circumstances — pointedly: "We've all taken an oath to the Constitution."

And nearby in the 7th District, Tom Malinowski, who served in the State Department during the Obama administration working on issues related to democracy and human rights, is taking on Republican Rep. Leonard Lance. Malinowski is eloquent during an interview in describing "the all-American middle-ground issues that the Trump Republicans" have ceded to Democrats in moderate districts.

"We're now the party of fiscal responsibility in America, we didn't just add $2 trillion to the national debt for that tax cut that Warren Buffett didn't want," he tells me. "We're the party of law enforcement in America, we don't vilify the Federal Bureau of Investigation every single day. We're the party of family values, we don't … take kids from their parents at the border. We're the party of patriotism in America that wants to defend this country against our foreign adversaries."

It is a sign of the power of the activism Trump has unleashed that the popular incumbent in Sherrill's district, Republican Rep. Rodney Frelinghuysen, decided to retire after months of demonstrations at his district office. The protesters underscored how vexing this year's climate would be even for popular incumbents.

Contesting an open seat against Republican state legislator Jay Webber, Sherrill appears to have the best chance of the three, although Malinowski has held a very narrow lead over Lance in some polls while Kim is closely behind MacArthur whose staunch conservatism, Kim argues, puts the incumbent well to the right of his district.

For his part, Lance notes that he is on the "center right," distinguishing himself from his party's right-wing radicals. In an interview, Lance lists a series of votes he cast against Republican bills, including the GOP tax cut. It is deeply unpopular in New Jersey, a high tax state, because of its near-elimination of the state and local tax deduction. He has also been assailing Malinowski as a "carpetbagger" (the Democrat grew up just outside the district, in Princeton).

Malinowski says the electorate understands that the carpetbagger charge is a distraction. He cites the many times Lance fell in with conservatives, and makes the broader case that change in Washington will be impossible if Republicans maintain control of the House. "If we want different results," he says. "we're not going to get them by re-electing him."

Yet if Trump looms over the election, all three New Jersey Democrats are campaigning primarily on bread-and-butter issues — health care, state and local taxes (that GOP tax bill), economic insecurity felt even by the relatively affluent, and infrastructure. The last of these has particular power in these commuter-heavy districts, given the failure of Republican budgets to finance the Gateway tunnel between New Jersey and New York City.

In Malinowski's view, the public is already so aware of the election's stakes that Democrats don't need to mention Trump very much. "You just need to affirmatively champion core American values," he says.

Day by day, the president is making this strategy ever more plausible.

Vegan lifestyle to be discussed Thursday

By LAUREN SPIRK
Sun Correspondent

NORTH PORT — Middle school educator Samantha Gentrup will be taking her teaching skills to the Shannon Staub Public Library to demonstrate the what, why, how, and benefits of living a vegan lifestyle.

The event starts at 6 p.m. Thursday night at the library, 4675 Career Lane, North Port.

"It started with needing gallbladder surgery when I was 22, which began my journey to question food and what I was eating," Gentrup said.

She started doing her own research and reading a lot of books, which led Gentrup to become more selective with what she was eating.

There was one incident that stuck with Gentrup and remains a key factor in her decision to being a vegan.

She was driving up to Illinois one winter and noticed a flatbed truck carrying cages that were strapped down with what she recalls: "white things flying off of it."

As she came closer, she noticed that the cages were full of chickens.

"They were shoved into the cages like you would shove wads of socks into an overfull drawer, some upside down, some on their sides at the bottom," Gentrup said.

At first, Gentrup assumed the chickens were dead from the way they were being transported, but then she looked a little closer and noticed all their eyes blinking at her.

"It crushed me and it's been almost 15 years and I can still see those chickens like it was yesterday."

At that point, Gentrup had given up eating birds.

She learned more about the commercial fishing industry and how nets also scoop up other sea life, which are referred to as "bycatch."

Gentrup then stopped eating fish and was a vegetarian.

"I was still drinking milk and eating eggs because at that point I thought eggs and milk were humane," she said.

In July 2008, Gentrup went to a conference where someone pointed out to her how calves are taken away immediately after birth so the mother's milk can be used.

If the calf is a male, he's sent off to auction and becomes veal.

If the calf is a female, she is raised to be a dairy cow, continuously getting impregnated, just like her mother.

Gentrup also learned, that since these cows are constantly lactating, it depletes their bones of calcium, making them weak.

The weaker the cows are, the less milk they produce.

Once they are no longer useful, they get sent to the "kill box."

"I'll spare you the horrific details of how they get these animals to the kill box since they cannot walk," Gentrup said.

She also found out that the egg industry stores hens in warehouses, locked up in cages.

Each hen only has a space equivalent to the size of a piece of paper between them, while they stand on the bottoms of metal cages for 24 hours a day. They are debeaked as chicks to prevent them from pecking each other.

When farmers hatch eggs for more hens and come across a male chick, they kill it, she said.

"I've considered myself an animal lover my whole life, so to have just learned the truth about what I had been supporting most of my life was heartbreaking as well as infuriating," Gentrup said.

She has been sharing her information, tips and recipes for years, but this will be her first time teaching this class.

There will be food, handouts and activities for participants to engage in.

For more information, and to RSVP, contact North Port Friends of Wildlife at 513-967-8575, or at northport-fowl@gmail.com.

"I've been a vegan for 10 years, since July 2008," Gentrup said. I will be vegan for the rest of my life."

Local Civil Air Patrol welcomes new Deputy Commander for Cadets

By DONNA JABLONSKI
Civil Air Patrol

The Civil Air Patrol's Charlotte County Composite Squadron is pleased to announce a new Deputy Commander for Cadets.

First Lt. Ronald Bower has an impressive set of credentials having been a member of the Civil Air Patrol since 1961 and a 16-year veteran of the U.S. Air Force.

Bower has belonged to several Civil Air Patrol squadrons in different states and held various positions in the Civil Air Patrol organization. He has been a professional photographer for more than 50 years and is currently working on certification as a CAP aerial Photographer, while also being certified as a Mission Scanner.

Bower has been married 51 years to his wife, Mary, has three children, nine grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

First Lt. Bower's mission is to continue the high-quality standard of the cadet program at the Charlotte County Composite Squadron by challenging our youth in all areas of discipline, leadership and an inspiring vision of the future.

"I have always been interested in helping youths to improve their lives and this gives me an excellent venue to do that," said Bower.

CAP is the Congressional Gold Medal winning Auxiliary of the U.S. Air Force, celebrating its 77th year of serving America. Tax-deductible donations may be sent to Charlotte Squadron, 28000 A-21 Airport Road, Punta Gorda, FL 33982-2452.

Vehicle scams target private sellers

READER ADVOCATE

David MORRIS
Columnist

When David Martens listed his 2011 Hyundai Tucson for sale on Craigslist and Facebook Marketplace, he hoped there might be a few interested buyers.

He had no idea.

Martens said he immediately was contacted by an interested buyer who asked for a vehicle history report, recommending a specific website. Although unfamiliar with the site, he paid $18 for the report with a credit card, receiving it within minutes.

Noting it didn't provide much information, the Punta Gorda resident nonetheless sent the requested report to the interested buyer, who suddenly became uninterested.

More calls followed. All were interested in the Hyundai but wanted a vehicle history report from a specific website.

Martens quickly got wise.

"I think these 'fake' buyers are 'shills' and getting a commission on each VIN report, trolling the internet to get money," Martens wrote.

He's right. Scam-detector.com says it's receiving similar stories.

It notes the potential buyer's request for a vehicle history report appears reasonable and the recommended vehicle history website may be legitimate. But the "buyer" is only interested in an affiliate commission and has absolutely no interest in purchasing the vehicle.

How can you tell? Scam-detector suggests telling the prospective buyer you already have a vehicle history report and see what happens.

The Better Business Bureau cautions to be wary if a potential buyer asks you to purchase something from a specific website as a condition for a sale. While an interested buyer may want a VIN report prior to purchasing your vehicle, the BBB suggests selecting the site yourself.

Those sites include Carfax.com, AutoCheck, by Experian (www.autocheck.com) and approved vendors with access to the National Motor Vehicle Title Information System (NMVTIS) (www.vehiclehistory.gov).

You may not be familiar with NMVTIS. A division of the Department of Justice, it's intended to prevent fraud and theft by requiring all insurance carriers, auto recyclers, junk yards, and salvage yards to report concise information on a vehicle's title. It includes historical odometer readings, whether the vehicle's been "branded" a total loss by an insurance company and rebuilt, or "salvaged" after suffering flood damage. NMVTIS does not provide accident/repair history or vehicle service/maintenance data.

However, the BBB cautions some vehicle history report sites are outright scams and simply a way to steal money from unsuspecting customers.

And more.

"If the site captures personal information, such as an address, driver's license number, and/or credit card information, buying these reports opens up victims to the risk of ID theft," warns the BBB. "In other cases, the website link itself may be the scam, downloading malware to the victim's computer."

Also, be aware of a much larger scam with crooks again targeting legitimate vehicle sellers using Facebook's Marketplace service.

"They often claim to be in the military, saying they're about to be posted and urgently need to buy the vehicle," explains Scambusters.org. "They say they'll pay via an online service and ask for the car to be shipped to a port transit area. The seller then receives a fake email purporting to come from the payment service, usually PayPal. Often, the seller fails to check their account before arranging the shipment. The vehicle then will be shipped abroad and all traces of it will disappear."

Additionally, the BBB warns of scammers offering more than an advertised price for a vehicle, requesting the overage be used to pay for shipping. In this classic scam, the fake check or money order later bounces and the victim is out the vehicle and shipping costs.

Finally, prior to listing your vehicle, use the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration's free VIN search tool at www.safercar.gov to see if there's an open safety recall in the last 15 years which hasn't been repaired. It'll show up on most vehicle history reports.

Q: When did you open your business?

A: "I opened in 1992."

Q: What has changed since you opened?

A: "We changed our location and added more stations. And we only do hair."

Q: How many employees do you have?

A:"There are eight of us. We have been together from 14 years to 28 years. We are a tight core group and a good consistent salon."

Q: What is your most popular item or service?

A: "I would say our color highlights. Everybody wants what they don't have."

Q: What's the hardest part about your business?

A: "The psychology of the business — the too much information factor."

Q: What sets you apart from other businesses?:

A: "We are a family salon, all generations are included. We are established, we have a good year-round following. We are a wonderful place."

Q: What advice do you have for someone just starting a business?

A: "Be persistent. Make sure your heart is in it and be current."

Q: What's the future hold for your business?

A: "We are happy with where we are and what we are."

Pet groomers celebrate 15 years in Port Charlotte

By RORY LANE
Staff Writer

Many of us treat our pets like part of the family, which means we want only the best for them. Fortunately for local pet owners, Accent Pet Styling has been offering premium professional grooming services in Murdock for 15 years.

Owners Isabel and Renee Campos pride themselves on their grooming experience and expertise, which they say sets them apart from most local competitors.

"Overall I have been in the grooming business about 37 years," said owner Isabel Campos, who founded both a grooming business and school in New Mexico, before moving to the area.

"The fact that I have actually founded a school and trained hundreds of people says a lot; our experience is the most valuable thing we offer," she said.

SCORE small business talk: Refresh the most important part

ED DAVIS
THE SCORE

We've been looking at some of the pieces of the business we can update or refresh while sales are slower during the summer. Today let's look at the most important part of the business and how a reboot of that piece can be so important to a business. The piece I'm taking about is you, the owner, operator and manager of the business. Without you, the business could possibly operate but not as smoothly or efficiently. I've written before about planning time off. While sales are slower and before our busy season begins, it is the ideal time to take some time off.

As an entrepreneur you have been operating and managing your business 24 hours a day, seven days a week for the past year. If you're not working in your business, manufacturing, selling, shipping, etc., you're working on your business, doing the billing, the ordering, handling accounts payable and setting up the marketing plan of the business. Other times you are thinking about better ways to do all of the above. It's time to take a break, refresh, recharge and come back even stronger than before.

So, how can you create time to recharge your batteries and not feel the pangs of guilt? Here are a few ideas. Plan your time off in advance. This allows you to inform key clients or customers you will not be available. You can even close the store to get away. Notify everyone in advance and post a sign saying you're on vacation and when you will return. A number of small businesses do this every year. Their customers understand and are happy to see them when they reopen.

If necessary, delegate or postpone some responsibilities or tasks. If you are a one-person

Suncoast Gold & Silver shines for collectors

Lang Capasso

You may have heard the song "Three Coins in The Fountain" by Frank Sinatra back in the 1950s.

Well, when I visited Suncoast Gold & Silver, I was thinking about much more then just three coins. They have a vast collection and knowledge in their store. As a matter of fact, they have the ability to garner just about any American, foreign and even paper money that would satisfy any collector.

It started years ago when Paul Lucarini developed an interest in coins and collecting at a very early age. The passion grew and he became quite a collector, eventually bringing his son David into the fold. Moving down here, they naturally brought the passion with them.

It wasn't long before David met his wife Lindsay, from Sarasota, who quickly learned the trade, and the three of them opened their store at 11 W. Green St. It's in a building built in the 1950s that they thought embraced the old spirit of their skills — especially with its wood ceilings.

The eight-year-old business grew as they developed associations with local banks, stock brokers and financial advisers who would advise their clients on how to handle household goods and coins.

There are times when the family goes out to homes and buys a complete estate — everything — for one lump sum. If there are items worth keeping, they kept those and gave the rest to local charities to sell themselves.

Lindsay told me that many of the children, especially today's milennials, just don't want to be bothered and are glad to clear the house of all the old furniture and items.

Because of the amount of jewelry and watches they collected, David developed a keen interest in watches and became quite a collector himself getting into the horology side and really learning. With his new-found study, he has become quite a collector and appraiser along with the ability to fix and repair just about any style and size of watch.

Lindsay, on the other hand, has developed a keen interest in Native American jewelry where she too has taken a beginning interest in something and taken it to the next level. She can advise customers on the best course to take if they are interested in selling or buying. She has also learned about the markings on items from different countries in Asia, learning when they were made and from what country they originated. She once advised a customer not to sell a vase, but take it to a museum as it was quite valuable. Sterling flatwear is also one of her acquired skills, and she is always looking for customers who might have some tucked away.

Their main business is still coins. They have some American coins from the 1700s and many of the rarest of coins available to sell. If foreign coins interest you, or you'd like to buy or sell, there are many from ancient Greece, Rome and just about any other country you can think of.

I would suggest calling 941-474-3400 and making an appointment as they are really busy with many customers a day coming by for advice and guidance.

Nonprofits can apply for Charlotte Community Foundation grants

Punta Gorda Chamber

John Wright

Being the head of this great chamber is truly only part of the work that we undertake here at Chamber HQ — although clearly, it is our main focus. I also serve on many boards around the area and it is truly a pleasure to serve and represent other local nonprofits.

Right now, the Charlotte Community Foundation is accepting requests for grants through July 27 and as the Grants' Committee Chair this year. I invite all nonprofits to submit a request using the online registration forms on www.charlottecf.org.

All applications will be reviewed by an impartial team and funds will be allocated and distributed in October 2018. If your nonprofit has a specific need, don't miss this opportunity to get your project potentially funded to get you started or to expand a particular project that is of importance to your cause. The staff at the Charlotte Community Foundation is also on hand to assist you with any questions regarding the application process at 941-637-0077.

I am also undertaking the role of Sponsorship Chair for the annual C.A.R.E. Ball in January 2019. Next year's festivity will take place at the Event Center Punta Gorda on Jan. 26 and will be branded "The Harlequin's Dance."

If you were a previous sponsor of this event, which is the sole annual board fundraiser for C.A.R.E., you'll be receiving a "Thank You" note from me asking you to pony up again in 2019 to aid in the education, outreach, free violence prevention, shelter and counseling services that C.A.R.E. — the Center for Abuse and Rape Emergencies — offers to local victims. Last year, according to statistics from the Florida Department of Law Enforcement, the Charlotte County center took in 1,245 Hotline calls regarding domestic violence and 210 calls regarding sexual assault. It managed more than 300 hours in civil legal court advocacy and assisted more than 1,300 victims of violent crime.

The need is obvious, and your generosity goes a long way to address that. If you can help in any way, please contact me on jrwright@puntagorda-chamber.com, and help us to unite to help those in our community who have an urgent and desperate need. We absolutely cannot provide these services without your help. As always, everything raised here stays here in Charlotte County.

Jazz and more jazz

Mindi Abair is coming back to Punta Gorda on Nov. 16-18. I had a great long conversation with her this past week. Her pride in making sure the Punta Gorda Festival is a huge success is very apparent. She has never before put her own branding on a festival, which speaks volumes for her confidence in this community's support of both her and the arts in general.

Our partnership on this project has brought nationwide, if not worldwide, focus to the city with guests scooping up tickets from far and wide. She is so very excited that she'll be coming to the city in August to help us with promotion and planning, to meet the key sponsors and to thank the community for presenting a great opportunity to continue our city's strength in the production of quality musical events year round.

Starting with a very unique dinner at La Fiorentina restaurant Nov. 16, to the mainstage show outside on the lawn of the Event Center on Nov. 17, she will appear with artists that she personally has selected. They are Keb' Mo', Ivan Neville's band Dumpstaphunk, and the Greg Billings Band. The weekend wraps up with a great brunch at the Tiki at Fourpoints, all with great live entertainment from the Shawn Brown Trio.

This will be yet another weekend for Punta Gorda to shine. Details of all tickets options are viewable at www.puntagordachamber.com in the shop chamber section or by calling 941-639-3720 during office hours. Don't miss out on this great musical extravaganza. More importantly, make sure your business gets involved in order to greet a large number of out-of-town guests who will all be sleeping, eating and buying in our home town!

While you are on the site, check out our Oct. 19-21 Harboritaville party honoring the life and music of Jim Morris as well as the 2019 Wine and Jazz Festival in February 2019, now that the line up is complete with Gerald Albright and the Sax Pack.

Latin music, food

Another new event is in the works. We are working with our partners at Cilantros Latin Restaurant to produce a Latin Music and Food Festival on Sept. 15 in Laishley Park. Anyone wanting to partner with us as a sponsor or vendor is now invite to contact us on 941-639-3720 or email chamber@puntagorda-chamber.com. We are looking forward to another fun day, another great event and another opportunity to showcase our great city to visitors.

Get the newsletter

Whether you are local or just visiting, we have a weekly e-newsletter that can be delivered to your inbox every Friday full of events, programs and information to assist you. It's called the Friday Facts — no fake news here. To sign up, simply click the icon at www.puntagordachamber.com, call us at 941-639-3720 or email your details to chamber@puntagorda-chamber.com. operation, 70 percent of the 28 million small business in the U.S. are, postpone tasks that can wait until you return.

Home-based businesses, 53 percent of the 28 million, are even more difficult. The flexible work schedule will allow you to take time off, but you may find it tough to separate yourself from the work when your office is just footsteps away.

However you do it, disconnect when you do get away. After you've notified the necessary folks, put a notice on your website, email and voicemail, unplug. If you are a serious worrier, pick one hour each day to check messages.

Maybe you just start small and work your way up. Take short breaks during the day. Get up, go outside, walk around the block or pull some weeds. Using some of the ideas above, begin taking half-days off. Then try a full day off. From there you can continue to increase your relax and recharge time.

It takes real effort to disconnect your mind from work, but if you want to avoid burnout and maximize your potential, it's a step you'll have to take. Taking time away from the business has been proven to reduce stress, refresh creativity and increase productivity and efficiency. When you step back and recharge the brain and the body, you will get more done quicker.

Congratulations to Leadership North Port graduates

The North Port Area Chamber of Commerce would like to congratulate the following individuals that graduated from the 2017-2018 Leadership North Port Program on Saturday at Heron Creek Golf & Country Club.

The nine-month program began in October 2017 and finished in June 2018. These individuals met once a month and learned various aspects of North Port and our surrounding communities that included: SIMSOC (a simulated society experience), human services; community growth and transportation; government, arts and culture; environment and tourism; education; manufacturing and commerce; media and justice along with health care.

The class adopted the North Port YMCA as its class project and generated revenue, community support and labor to provide a facelift to the facility and supplies to the youth that are served by the YMCA. The following individuals are the graduates of the 2017-2018 Leadership North Port program:

Net @ Noon Luncheon

This month's Net @ Noon Luncheon will be held from 11:30 a.m.-1 p.m. Thursday, July 19, at the Olde World Restaurant, located at 14415 Tamiami Trail, in North Port.

The cost is $15 per person if paid in advance or $20 per person if paid at the door and includes lunch, drinks and great chamber networking is provided.

This event is open to all chamber members. non-chamber businesses are encouraged to attend to experience the power of chamber networking and to see if a chamber membership can help your business.

It is requested that registration and payment be completed by today so that proper arrangements can be made with the restaurant.

Summer 'BILL'board campaign

The chamber's summer "BILL"board campaign is a smashing success for the North Port Area Chamber of Commerce and each of the chamber partners that are participating in this promotion.

Each day, I am wearing different business attire that has been provided by various chamber business partners that request to have their businesses promoted through this campaign.

This program is free to all chamber businesses and dates are still available. There are still dates available for businesses and organizations to sign up and participate in this promotional opportunity.

I would like to thank the following businesses that are participating in the campaign this week. They include: North Port Sun, Re3 Stem Cell and Healing Institute, Cruiser's Travel & Tours, Gene Matthews Boys & Girls Club and Beef 'O' Brady's.

New chamber members

Undecided on Altria and General Electric

Dear Mr. Berko: My stockbroker is recommending that I buy 400 shares of Altria ($23,200), the big tobacco company, because it pays nearly 5 percent. I told him that I'm not sure I would be comfortable owning stock in a company that sells cigarettes, which kill Americans. My ex-brother-in law smoked Marlboro cigarettes for 25 years and lost a lung in 1988. Unless you have a compelling reason, we won't buy Altria. Our son, who has been with General Electric for over 20 years, thinks we should buy our original shares back because he's convinced that GE's stock will double in price by late 2019. We sold 1,632 shares at $30 in December 2016. What do you think about GE? — JR, Akron, Ohio

Malcolm Berko

Dear JR: I think Altria Group (MO-$58), even though it sells cancer sticks to Americans, has a good record of revenue, earnings and dividend growth and is attractive at this price. Some of the most prestigious brokerages have "buy" recommendations on MO, with a price target of $85 in the coming three years. And my neighbor thinks many of MO's wines, especially those from Chateau Ste. Michelle, compare favorably with wines that are $150 a bottle. But I understand how it feels to almost lose a family member. So stick to your guns and don't buy Altria. But would you consider Philip Morris International (PM-$77)? PM only sells cancer sticks to consumers outside the U.S.

Most folks don't know that PM was spun off from Altria in March 2008. Some say the purpose of the spinoff was to separate domestic cigarette sales from international cigarette sales. But that's a bunch of horse pucky. Lawyers and lawyers everywhere! The tobacco lawyers recommended a spinoff to protect the bigger company (PM, with $77 billion in revenues and headquartered in Switzerland) from suits against the smaller company (MO, with $26 billion in revenues and headquartered in Virginia). America has 298 lawyers per million citizens, which is the highest ratio in the world. The world's second-highest ratio is in the U.K., which has 98 lawyers per million. France has 31 lawyers per million, and Japan has seven lawyers per million. So, this sewer of American lawyers needs Americans to sue somebody or something.

Even if you're uncomfortable owning a tobacco stock, I'd certainly recommend PM to income and growth investors who read this column and to those who don't. My TSE (tobacco stock expert) believes that PM's revenues will grow to $88.5 billion by 2021, that earnings will increase to $7.30 a share and that dividends will increase to $5.35 a share. If all those things were to happen, the many millions of shares owned by Vanguard, BlackRock, State Street, T. Rowe Price, Mass Financial and others could trade between $110 and $130 a share. And there's running speculation that may be more reality than rumor that these two cancer stick companies will merge and renew their marriage vows. There would be about a 23-point premium to MO shares.

Until December 2016, General Electric was

Accent Pet Styling opened for business August 3, 2003, and was the first grooming operation in the area operating with "an open doggy day care setting."

"They are not in cages locked up, the dogs are around us while we are doing the process," said Renee. "This way they are comfortable and by the time we work with them they are more calmed down."

Isabel and Renee also emphasize the importance of educating customers on how to better care for their animals. They often provide tips for at-home grooming and occasionally alert customers if they notice a problem that may require a trip to the veterinarian.

According to the owners, many satisfied customers have continued to bring in their pets over many years.

"We have great clients. People who go back 15 years, maybe with different pets," said Isabel, "but loyal people and we have been very lucky."

Accent Pet Styling hopes to increase awareness about the grooming services they have offered for 15 years.

Prospective customers can stop by the store at 1225 Tamiami Trail, on August 4 for a chance to make a free grooming appointment.

NEWS BRIEFS

Englewood Cleanup

Sarasota County has set an Englewood Community Cleanup for 8 a.m. to noon July 21. Everyone is invited to bring discarded household items, yard waste, tree trimmings, junk and other garbage or refuse, and tires.

Dumpsters will be available at the main site on the vacant lot at South McCall Road and 201 W. Dearborn St., and at North Broadway and Englewood Heights Road (behind the Englewood Elks), and Old Englewood Road at Buchan Airport.

Sarasota County hazardous waste personnel will be available at the main site at South McCall and West Dearborn to accept hazardous materials, electronics, tires, appliances, and computers from residential customers.

AMVETS dinner

The Sons of AMVETS Post 312 hosts a dinner of stuffed pork chops, mashed potatoes, vegetable and dessert from 5-7 p.m. July 21 at the post. The donation cost is $10 with funds raised going to the building fund. The Reflections will perform songs from the '50s-'60s and beyond from 6:30-9:30 p.m.

Lung cancer support group

The North Port Lung Cancer Support Group meets from 2-3 p.m. the third Wednesday of every month at Sarasota Memorial ER in North Port along Toledo Blade Boulevard. The group is for people with lung cancer along with their caregivers. No RSVP nor charge is required. For more information, call or email Marc Cohen at 941-240-8989 or marcscohen@aol.com.

Board workshop

The Charlotte County Commissioners will hold a Board Workshop at 9 a.m. on Wednesday, July 18, in Room #119 of the Charlotte County Administration Center, 18500 Murdock Circle, Port Charlotte. Topics include Master Space Plan update, and commissioners, administrator, and county attorney comments. The public is invited to attend but there will be no public input. For more information, call 941-743-1300.

Community development meeting planned

The Charlotte County Community Development Department has scheduled a roundtable meeting to discuss proposed revisions to surface water and wetlands-related policies and land development regulations. The meeting is scheduled for 1 p.m., Friday, July 20, in the main conference room of the Building Construction Services Building, 18400 Murdock Circle, Port Charlotte. The public is invited to attend the meeting and provide input about the current wetlands-related policies and land development regulations.

AMVETS Karaoke

Englewood's new AMVETS Post 777 sponsors a popular Karaoke Night with pizza at 6 p.m. each Monday. The only exception is the second Monday, which is the group's monthly meeting. All veterans and guests are invited. The Post is at 3386 N. Access Road, Englewood. Post 777 is one-year old with 100 members. For membership information, call Andy Hackleman at 941-830-5082, or email him at a.hackleman@yahoo.com.

Join us at the chamber's candidate forum

Charlotte County Chamber

Julie Mathis

Please join the Charlotte County Chamber of Commerce tomorrow for the Candidate Forum during the Third Wednesday Coffee from 7:15 to 8:30 a.m. at the Charlotte Harbor Event & Conference Center, 75 Taylor St, Punta Gorda.

Come and meet the candidates running for office local and some state offices. We have 22 candidates who have RSVP'd, and each candidate will have a table to display campaign literature and you'll have the opportunity to ask questions of the people who might represent you.

The forum is free and open to the public. A voter registration representative from the Supervisor of Elections office will be there, too. For all information elections, please visit www.charlottevotes.com.

Card exchange

Our July 26 Business Card Exchange is from 5 to 7 p.m. at the Heritage Oaks ALF, 7374 San Casa, Englewood. Members of the Englewood Florida Chamber have been invited to attend, so bring plenty of business cards and a small gift to promote your business to potential new customers and referral sources.

Leadership applications

Applications for the Leadership Charlotte class of 2019 are due next week, July 26, at 4 p.m. in the Port Charlotte office. Please don't be that person who comes in at 4:15 p.m. and is scribbling answers to the nine questions at the counter. (Yes, that did happen, and no, the person didn't get in the class.)

The application process is very competitive, so take time this week and do it up right. Leadership Charlotte, our signature program, will be 30 years old this year, and alumni are already planning the celebration party. Mark the second Thursday of each month "out of office" and enjoy this exceptional experience!

Welcome new teachers

Join us for breakfast with new teachers on Aug. 2 from 7:30 to 8:30 a.m. at the Event Center. You need to make a reservation so that we can pair you with a teacher and you can tell him or her all about our great community and your business. Members who sponsor a teacher can also put a little something in a goodie bag that we'll give to the teachers.

Shoes for kids

The Chamber's Port Charlotte office is a collection site for the Shoes for Kids Project (new shoes for Charlotte County students) and for the Friendship Center's Christmas in July (personal care items for seniors).

Why not bring a new pair of shoes to the Coffee tomorrow?

Julie Mathis is executive director of the Charlotte County Chamber of Commerce. Email her at jmathis@charlottecountychamber.org.

It's a new sign for the Englewood Chamber

Englewood Chamber Chat

Ed Hill

The next time your travels take you past 601 Indiana Ave. (otherwise known as S.R. 776), you will become more knowledgeable about an upcoming chamber or community event.

That is because there is now a new electronic digital message board located in front of the Englewood Chamber building. After Rothco Signs & Designs Inc. put the finishing touches on their work, the sign was fired-up on Friday, July 13. The message board will be used to communicate chamber news to the community.

The new sign is a major investment for the chamber, and there are a number of people and organizations to thank for making this possible. First of all, the chamber membership. Without the continued financial support of the current members, as well as the addition of new member, the new sign could not happen.

Secondly, to all of the people and businesses associated with the chamber's signature fundraising event, the Manasota Mystique. It is because of the community's support of this event that the chamber's mortgage has been satisfied and other building-related projects can be completed.

The list is too long to personalize by name, but also to the many board members and chamber volunteers: thank you.

Stay tuned … there's more to come !

Bizz at Noy's

Please join us for our July Bizz@Noon Networking lunch on Thursday, July 19. The lunch venue is a new chamber member, Noy's Bistro & Lounge, 31 Chailett Road, Rotonda West. Reservations may be made at www.EnglewoodChamber.com.

Leadership experience

Matt Smith of State Farm Insurance has this to say about his recent Leadership Englewood experience:

"Leadership Englewood exceeded all of my expectations. I met so many great people from our community, and I learned more about our great town of Englewood than I did in the 43 years growing up here. Truly a great experience!"

Information regarding the Leadership Englewood Class of 2019 is at www.LeadershipEnglewood.com. There is a place on the website for you to let us know you are interested in receiving more information. Applications are also available there.

Englewood Beach 9

A portion of the proceeds from the Englewood Beach 9 Putt Putt will be donated to the E.Y.E. on Nature - Youth Explorers Club. Team registrations are being taken at www.EnglewoodBeach9.com

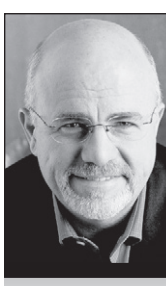
Trouble finding life insurance after cancer diagnosis



Dave Ramsey

Dear Dave,

I started looking at life insurance policies after my wife and I had our daughter. During the screening process, I found out I had testicular cancer. I went through treatments, and the doctors have officially declared me to be in remission. Still, I can't find a life insurance company that will work with me. I have a small policy through my employer, that is equal to double my salary. Do you have any suggestions for finding additional coverage?

— Nate

Dear Nate,

It's great news that you're in remission. I'm really happy for you, buddy. I know your wife is thrilled, too.

I would advise conducting a search of every "guaranteed issue" company and policy out there. The term, guaranteed issue, means they don't do a medical check. The problem is these policies generally run 10 to 20 times more per thousand than those where you qualify medically. So, you're not going to get a lot during this time.

Check at work, and see if you can buy more and add it to the coverage they already provide. Some employers provide a double-up option if you're willing to pay for the additional coverage. If you can, and the price is reasonable, do it. If you have a mortgage, call the mortgage company and get mortgage life insurance. It's gimmick insurance — and something I don't normally recommend — but many times you can get it without medical clearance.

Once you get past that three- to five-year window where many insurance companies will work with you again, try to find a good, level term life insurance policy with coverage that's 10 to 12 times your income, and drop all this other stuff. In the meantime, pick up anything else you can find – even if it's those little $10,000 policies banks sometimes attach to your checking account for $20. Pile up those little odds and ends, until you get as much coverage as you can within reason.

God bless you and your family, Nate.

trading at $32. It used to be one of the most widely held stocks in American portfolios. But the fit hit the shan, and Americans began to liquidate their GE shares (now trading at $14.50), driving the shares down to $13 in early April.

GE, an American icon of industrial power, was formed in 1892 through a merger of Thomas "Tommy" Edison's Edison General Electric and the Thomson-Houston Co. It has 11 business divisions — GE Aviation, GE Healthcare, GE Power, GE Renewable Energy, GE Digital, GE Additive, Baker Hughes, GE Capital, GE Transportation, Current and GE Lighting — each of which suffered from various stages of dry rot, an unintended consequence of lazy management. However, there are whispers that Warren Buffett may take a $15 billion stake in the company, and James Tisch, a GE director and CEO of Lowe's, paid $18 each for 3 million shares in November. Though buying back GE might be like biting into a urinal cake, be mindful that Buffett and Tisch are keen professionals and make very few mistakes. So your son may have given you good advice.

Stay safe while on area waterways

By LAUREN SPIRK
Sun Correspondent

NORTH PORT — The United States Coast Guard Auxiliary will be administering Safe Boating courses for this month and next.

The USCG Auxiliary has been around for nearly 80 years.

On June 23, 1939, Congress first established the USCG Auxiliary as the United States Coast Guard Reserves.

Two years later, on Feb. 19, 1941, they redesignated the title to the United States Coast Guard Auxiliary.

"The Coast Guard exists to support all USCG missions, except roles that require direct law enforcement or military engagement," said Philip Caroleo, Flotilla staff officer for communication services in an email.

As of this year, there has been a record of approximately 24,000 members of the USCG Aux.

The Safe Boating courses that they will be running are National State Boating Law Administrators, and state of Florida approved.

They cover all aspects of boating, from an introduction to almost every type of boat and their uses, to which hunting gear a person should carry with them when fishing from a boat.

Courses will also cover boating laws, boat safety equipment, how to be safe when boating, navigation, hazards that may occur while boating and how to handle them, trailering a boat, storing and protecting a boat, water-skiing, and river boating.

There are two separate classes available to take, a one-day class, and a class that's held over four nights.

All will be held at the Coast Guard Auxiliary North Port Flotilla, Flotilla 92, located at 7030 Chancellor Blvd., North Port.

This month's class will take place starting at 6:30 p.m. tonight.

The cost is $45 per person, or $65 per couple.

For more information or to register, call 941-625-3667.

Next month's class will take place from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Aug. 18. The cost is the same.

For more information or to register, contact Caroleo at 516-909-0784.

Other course dates and information is posted on Coast Guard Auxiliary Flotilla 9-2's Facebook page, and cgaux.org.

"Our main goal is providing a course that will assist in keeping the boating public and waterways safe for all to enjoy," Caroleo said.

FLORIDA REPORT

Media seek school shooting suspect's statement

By CURT ANDERSON
AP Legal Affairs Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE — Media organizations asked a judge Monday to order public release of much of Florida school shooting suspect Nikolas Cruz's statement to investigators after the Valentine's Day massacre that killed 17 people.

Attorneys for The Associated Press and other media outlets asked Broward Circuit Judge Elizabeth Scherer to allow disclosure of the statement under public records law. Attorneys for the 19-year-old Cruz wanted the entire statement suppressed, contending it would improperly influence jurors in his trial. The judge did not immediately rule.

Media lawyer Dana McElroy said the only portions that should be suppressed are any comments that appear to be a substantive confession, but not the entire statement. She said Florida's broad public records law requires that much of it be disclosed even in high-profile cases such as this.

"The coverage of this case will and should continue. It's important to the public and to everyone who's watching this case that all of the facts be reported," McElroy said. "There's a great public concern about how this case is handled."

Cruz faces the death penalty if convicted of the attack at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School that also wounded 17 others. His attorneys say he would plead guilty in exchange for a life prison sentence, but prosecutors have rejected that offer.

Throughout the hearing, Cruz sat with his forehead resting face-down on the defense table. His 18-year-old brother, Zachary Cruz, attended the hearing but declined to speak with reporters.

Cruz attorney David Frankel urged Scherer to consider the impact of the wall-to-wall media coverage of the shooting before allowing the statement's release. Frankel said "98 percent" of the statement contains some element of a confession and would make it impossible for Cruz to get a fair trial.

"The right of access is not absolute, but the right to a fair trial is," Frankel said. "This court's obligation is to go to whatever lengths are necessary to see he gets a fair trial."

One of the prosecutors, Assistant State Attorney Steven Klinger, said the statement has been thoroughly redacted and is ready for public release. Under Florida law, most evidence in a criminal case becomes public once prosecutors turn it over to the defense.

Cruz's lawyers also want to prevent public release of a 70-page report prepared by Broward County school officials about his educational record. Cruz had many documented behavioral problems and was eventually expelled from Stoneman Douglas, authorities have said. The report summarizes some 2,500 pages of Cruz's educational record.

"Those records are exempt from disclosure," said another Cruz lawyer, Melisa McNeill. "It's our position that the entire thing should not be released."

That argument is pending before a different judge who last week ruled she would inspect the 70-page educational report and then decide whether it will be made public.

The next status hearing in Cruz's criminal case is set for Aug. 15.

DOT takes aim at contractor amid SunPass problems

By JIM TURNER
News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — Florida is halting payments to a company upgrading the SunPass toll-collection system until all the changes in the $287 million project are deemed "fully operational."

The Florida Department of Transportation announced Monday it is withholding payments to Maryland-based Conduent State & Local Solutions as work continues on the SunPass Centralized Customer Service System, which was expected to be completed June 11.

"The contract with our vendor includes a number of robust provisions related to performance and failure to meet obligations," the department said in a statement that did not indicate how much money the state still owes Conduent or the number of payments remaining.

Department spokesman Ed Seifert said Conduent has not submitted invoices for reimbursement since June 11. The contract to incorporate all back-office operations into a single operation was awarded in November 2015.

Conduent's 1,575-page contract outlines that $5,000 a day in "liquid damages" may be imposed for each day from the "go-live" date that work fails to be considered completed.

Transportation Secretary Mike Dew called the delays "completely unacceptable."

"The department anticipates and expects that Conduent will continue to improve the operations of the SunPass call center, the website interface, the functionality of the mobile application interface and the availability and reliability of SunPass Plus, so that SunPass customers are provided the premium level of service they are entitled to expect," Dew wrote in a letter Monday to Conduent President David Amoriell.

Amoriell advised the state last week that the company had already made "substantial improvements in recent weeks and will continue to strive for your complete satisfaction."

The issues remaining from the upgrade include the effectiveness of the SunPass website and mobile application; issues related to multiple charges being applied through the payment processing system; and problems with the expanded SunPass Plus application at airports, which was slow or unavailable in responding to airport gate systems when customers entered or exited parking facilities.

As part of the conversion, SunPass Plus parking has been expanded from Orlando International Airport to include Miami International Airport, Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood International Airport, Palm Beach International Airport and Tampa International Airport.

Amoriell said double charges against customers are being reversed, with letters prepared to notify customers.

"We will commit that customers will not be overcharged," Amoriell wrote.

As for the website, Amoriell wrote that an independent third-party vendor has been hired to identify ways to further improve the system.

Despite the assertions to complete the work, no completion date has been set.

Federal judge weighs campus early voting sites

By DARA KAM
News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — Florida elections officials were wrong to block on-campus early voting sites in Gainesville and Tallahassee, lawyers for the League of Women Voters of Florida told a federal judge Monday.

But attorneys representing the state argued there was no indication that college students — or anyone else — would have voting rights abridged due to an advisory opinion under scrutiny in the federal lawsuit filed this year by the League of Women Voters and other plaintiffs.

U.S. District Judge Mark Walker gave no indication how he would rule after hearing nearly three hours of arguments Monday in the case, which involves the state's position about early voting locations at the University of Florida and Florida State University.

The controversy is centered on whether the constitutional rights of students were violated by an interpretation of a state law by Secretary of State Ken Detzner's office.

Detzner's office in 2014 found that a student union on the University of Florida campus did not meet statutory guidelines for early voting sites, which are limited to government offices, such as county courthouses, and voting offices, along with government-owned community centers and convention centers. The law also allows county elections officials to choose one "wild card" locale.

The lawsuit alleged the state was placing "an unjustifiable burden on the voting rights of hundreds of thousands of eligible Florida voters" and that Detzner's policy "disproportionately" impacted the state's younger voters.

But lawyers for the state argued that the advisory opinion, authored by Department of State Division Director Maria Matthews, has not done any harm.

"There has been no claim whatsoever that one person has been denied the right to vote," Mohammad Jazil, a private lawyer representing the Department of State, told the judge during arguments Monday.

But lawyers for the plaintiffs argued that the early voting site at the J. Wayne Reitz Union on the University of Florida campus meets the threshold of a government-owned facility eligible to be an early voting site and that the site was necessary for students and workers who could not vote elsewhere because they were tethered to parking spots snagged after they arrived on campus in the morning.

About 68 percent of Gainesville voters work at or attend the university, and the nearest early-voting site is about a mile away, lawyers for the plaintiffs said.

Walker queried both sides on the issue during Monday's arguments, asking lawyers for the state why allowing the early voting site on campus would not give more access to students and others.

Lawyers for the state said elections officials could choose a "wild card" location, permissible under state law, if they wanted to use sites such as Reitz Union.

But Elisabeth Frost, who represents the plaintiffs, said that, in Alachua County, the "wild card" spot had already been allocated to a church more than 20 miles north, to accommodate minority voters in the rural area.

She argued that the advisory opinion would keep young voters from being able to cast ballots.

"There's a shadow cast that is keeping supervisors from putting early voting sites where young voters are," Frost said. "At a certain point you have to call a banana a banana."

The judge pressed the state to explain what its position would be in the future, should he agree that the secretary of state's advisory opinion didn't amount to irreparable harm, as the plaintiffs are seeking.

And he questioned whether requiring students to walk a mile to cast their ballots was equitable.

"Florida's young population is going to have trouble getting to early vote," the judge noted. "At some point, common sense has to come into play."

Walker angrily demanded an answer from the state's lawyers, asking if the state would allow supervisors of elections to allow early voting on campus sites such as the Reitz Union.

"It's a bit of a difficult question for us to answer," Florida Department of State General Counsel David Fugett said. "I can't imagine why we would say no to that, but there's lots of things I can't imagine."

Ion Sancho, who served as Leon County elections supervisor for nearly three decades, told reporters that universities like Florida State and UF have "large, dense populations of basically captive citizens."

"Quite frankly, if you are charged with making voting accessible, what you do want to do with early voting locations is put them in dense residential areas where people lack transportation," he said. "I believe it's simply part of the partisan politics of our culture. Quite frankly, Republicans don't want young people to vote today."

Report: Florida's economy tops $1 trillion

ST. PETERSBURG (AP) — Florida's economy has topped $1 trillion, meaning that if Florida was its own nation, it would have the 17th-largest economy in the world.

The Tampa Bay Times reports that's bigger than Switzerland, Saudi Arabia, Argentina and the Netherlands.

The Florida Chamber Foundation in a release said the state is adding about $2.74 billion to the state's gross domestic product each day.

The chamber has launched the "Florida 2030" initiative to address problem areas in the economy, such as the achievement gap in schools and the poverty rate.

Despite hitting the $1 trillion mark, there's still room to grow. Wage growth has long been pointed to by economists as an area Florida's economy — and the national economy — need to address to continue growing.

'Come on, grandpa,' deputy says while following tortoise

DUNNELLON (AP) — The tortoise walking down the middle of a Florida road was racking up numerous traffic infractions.

"Come on, grandpa" Marion County Sheriff's Deputy Bryan Bowman says on his video of the tortoise takedown Sunday. He explains that the tortoise is "literally going 1 mile per hour" in a 30 mph zone.

The list of infractions continues. The tortoise is "easily a hundred," Bowman says, adding that he shouldn't even "be out there on the roadways."

Bowman says when he tried to talk to the tortoise, it "snapped" at him. "The nerve," Bowman says.

Bowman followed along for 20 minutes until the tortoise went into the woods.

"Everyone wants to drive slow with a cop car behind them," he says. "You can't get nowhere on time."

Man behind bars for failing to unlock cellphones for police

TAMPA (AP) — A Florida man is behind bars for failing to unlock his phones following a traffic stop.

Fox 13 News reports that William Montanez was pulled over in June for improper yielding in Tampa.

He wouldn't allow cops to search his car, so a drug-sniffing dog was brought in. A small amount of marijuana was allegedly found, and cops asked to search his cellphones.

Again, Montanez said no, so detectives got a warrant. His attorney calls it a "fishing expedition."

Judge Gregory Holder ruled Thursday cops could go through the cellphones, but Montanez said the two phones are new and he couldn't remember the passwords to unlock them.

The judge found him in civil contempt and threw him in jail.

2 officers injured in melee at teen detention center

DAYTONA BEACH (AP) — Two detention officers were injured after a fight broke out between teens at a facility in Florida.

Volusia County Sheriff's spokeswoman Laura Williams says deputies responded to a "riot situation" at the Volusia Regional Juvenile Detention Center on Sunday afternoon. She says the two staff members suffered cuts and abrasions during the 30-minute melee.

The Daytona Beach News-Journal reports the teens were not injured.

Williams said the group of juveniles took the keys for a common area from a staff member, pulled televisions off the walls and refused commands to return to their cells. The newspaper reports dispatchers told deputies the teens were using trays from the cafeteria as weapons.

Williams say all nine boys — between the ages of 13 to 18 — were charged with felonies.

Dog bites girl while her family was pet-sitting

JACKSONVILLE (AP) — Authorities say a 6-year-old Florida girl was severely bitten by a dog her family was watching while its owners were on vacation.

The Jacksonville Sheriff's Office said on Twitter that the child was unresponsive when first responders arrived at the home on Sunday morning. WJXT-TV reports the dog bit the girl on the neck. Several dogs were in the house at the time of the attack. Other children and a parent were also in the home.

Sheriff's officials say the dog appears to be a pit bull mixed breed.

The dog was removed from the home and authorities are continuing to investigate.

Indian shines on all-star stage

By BARBARA BOXLEITNER
SUN CORRESPONDENT

Pitcher Joe Iorio made his first independent league all-star appearance Wednesday.

The River City Rascals right-handed reliever entered in the 5th inning for the Rookie squad during the Frontier League classic. The Venice High School graduate retired the first batter on a swinging strikeout before inducing two groundouts.

Iorio was the only one among 18 pitchers used to throw a strike every pitch. He threw nine pitches. The Rookie squad lost 8-3.

More baseball

University of Florida infielder Shane Shifflett is with Kenosha in the Northwoods League. The rising sophomore out of Venice High had to wait until the Gators' postseason ended to join the team. Through five games in July, he batted .333. During a win over Kalamazoo, he homered and singled twice in five at-bats, driving home three runs.

Kenosha teammate Scott Dubrule hit .269 through 25 games. Also from the Indians, the Jacksonville University shortstop had one home run and 16 RBI, which tied for second on the team.

Wave of condemnation hits Trump after summit with Putin

By LISA MASCARO and MATTHEW DALY
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — "Bizarre." "Shameful." "Disgraceful."

That's the swift and sweeping condemnation directed at President Donald Trump on Monday after he sided with Russian President Vladimir Putin during a stunning appearance in Helsinki — and that's just from the Republicans.

Lawmakers in both major parties and former intelligence officials appeared shocked, dismayed and uneasy with Trump's suggestion that he believes Putin's denial of interfering in the 2016 elections. It was a remarkable break with U.S. intelligence officials and the Justice Department. And just as alarming for some, Trump also put the two countries on the same footing when casting blame for their strained relations.

> "I never would have thought that the US President would become one of the ones getting played by old KGB hands."
> — Rep. Will Hurd, R-Texas

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., called it "one of the most disgraceful performances by an American president in memory."

Sen. Ben Sasse, R-Neb., called it "bizarre." Sen. Jeff Flake, R-Ariz., called it "shameful." And Sen. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C., tweeted that it was a "bad day for the US."

"This was a very good day for President Putin," said Sen. Bob Corker, R-Tenn., the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee. He said Trump's refusal to condemn Russian interference in the 2016 election makes the U.S. "look like a pushover."

Rep. Will Hurd, R-Texas, said he's seen Russian intelligence manipulate many people in his earlier career as a CIA officer. But, he tweeted, "I never would have thought that the US President would become one of the ones getting played by old KGB hands."

House Speaker Paul Ryan weighed in to say there's "no question" that Russia interfered in the 2016 presidential election and "no moral equivalence" between the U.S. and Russia.

"The president must appreciate that Russia is not our ally," Ryan, R-Wis., said

US intel chief stands by assessment of Russian meddling

By SUSANNAH GEORGE
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The top U.S. intelligence official on Monday stood by what he called "clear" assessments of Russian meddling in the 2016 election after President Donald Trump cast doubt on that conclusion following a summit with Russian leader Vladimir Putin.

The statement from Dan Coats, the Director of National Intelligence, did not directly reference Trump's comments at a news conference alongside Putin in Helsinki. But it came just two-and-a-half hours after Trump said that while he had "great confidence" in U.S. intelligence, Putin's denial of election meddling was "extremely strong and powerful."

Coats said that the role of the intelligence community is "to provide the best information and fact-based assessments possible for the president and policymakers."

"We have been clear in our assessments of Russian meddling in the 2016 election and their ongoing, pervasive efforts to undermine our democracy, and we will continue to provide unvarnished and objective intelligence in support of our national security," he said.

Trump has long been at odds with his own intelligence community, largely clashing over a report released by U.S. intelligence officials concluding that Putin ordered "an influence campaign" in 2016 aimed at helping the Trump campaign and harming his Democratic opponent, Hillary Clinton.

Just days before the Helsinki summit, the Justice Department indicted 12 Russian intelligence officers accused of hacking into Democrat email accounts and releasing stolen information

Judge temporarily halts deportation of reunified families

By ELLIOT SPAGAT and COLLEEN LONG
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — A federal judge on Monday ordered a temporary halt to deportations of immigrant families reunited after being separated at the border, as the Trump administration races to meet a July 26 deadline for putting more than 2,500 children back in their parents' arms.

U.S. District Judge Dana Sabraw imposed a delay of at least a week after a request from the American Civil Liberties Union, which cited "persistent and increasing rumors ... that mass deportations may be carried out imminently and immediately upon reunification."

Justice Department attorney Scott Stewart opposed the delay but did not address the rumors in court.

The ACLU requested that parents have at least one week to decide whether to pursue asylum in the U.S. after they are reunited with their children. The judge held off on deciding that issue until the government outlines its objections in writing by next Monday.

ACLU attorney Lee Gelernt told reporters that he was "extremely pleased" by the halt and that parents need time to think over with their children and advisers whether to seek asylum.

"It's hard to imagine a more profound or momentous decision," he said.

The hearing in San Diego occurred as the government accelerated reunifications at eight unidentified U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement locations. The families are scattered around the country, the adults at immigration detention centers, the children at shelters overseen by the government.

Annunciation House, a shelter in El Paso, said the government has begun transporting children in a "tremendous amount of airline flights" to El Paso and elsewhere. Director Ruben Garcia said he is preparing to take in as many as 100 reunified families a day.

Obama to make rare high-profile speech on Mandela's legacy

By ANDREW MELDRUM
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG — In a speech marking the 100th birthday of anti-apartheid leader Nelson Mandela, former U.S. President Barack Obama will urge youth around the world to work for human rights and fair societies, highlighting the late South African leader's example of persevering in the struggle for democracy and equal rights for all.

The speech on Tuesday, one of Obama's most high-profile since leaving office, is meant to draw attention to values that today are under threat and to rally people in Africa and elsewhere to push for tolerance and justice. Obama is not expected to make any mention of his successor, President Donald Trump, said Ben Rhodes, Obama's longtime aide and adviser.

"At the current moment we're in, values that we thought were well-established — the importance of human rights, respect for diversity — in many parts of the world those values are under threat," Rhodes told The Associated Press. "Mandela's life is an inspiring example of how we can overcome obstacles to promote inclusive democracy and an equitable society with tolerance of others."

In delivering the annual Nelson Mandela Lecture before thousands of South Africans, Obama is expected to highlight how the Nobel Peace Prize winner, who was imprisoned for 27 years, kept up his campaign against what appeared to be insurmountable odds to end apartheid, South Africa's harsh system of white minority rule.

In this Dec. 10, 2013, photo, former U.S. President Barack Obama speaks to crowds attending the memorial service for former South African President Nelson Mandela, background, in Soweto, Johannesburg.

Mandela, who was released from prison in 1990 and became South Africa's first black president four years later, died in 2013, leaving a powerful legacy of reconciliation and diversity along with a resistance to inequality, economic and otherwise.

"In the U.S. and around the world, many see recent developments that run counter to Mandela's legacy," Rhodes said. "This will be a globally minded speech, highlighting global trends and focusing on how, in his life, Mandela embodied perseverance. It will be aimed at young people in Africa and also around the world to show that we have been through darker times before and we can overcome these challenges to keep Mandela's vision alive."

Obama, who is in Kenya before coming to South Africa, has shied away from public comment on Trump, whose administration has reversed or attacked notable achievements of his predecessor. The U.S. under Trump has withdrawn from the 2015 Paris climate agreement and the Iran nuclear deal while trying to undercut the Affordable Care Act or "Obamacare."

Instead of commenting on politics, Obama's speech will draw on broader themes and his admiration for Mandela, whom America's first black president saw as a mentor.

Pakistan rights group issues warning ahead of polls

By KATHY GANNON and MUNIR AHMED
Associated Press

ISLAMABAD — Pakistan's independent Human Rights Commission warned Monday of "blatant, aggressive and unabashed" attempts to manipulate the results of elections set for later this month, with prominent activist I.A. Rehman calling it "the dirtiest election" in the country's troubled relationship with democratic rule.

The Human Rights Commission of Pakistan (HRCP) in its statement raised several warning flags including allegations that members of disgraced prime minister Nawaz Sharif's Pakistan Muslim League party were "being pressured to switch political loyalties," while some of Sharif's candidates were being asked to step down.

In jail since his return to Pakistan last week, Sharif is serving a 10-year sentence on corruption charges. On Monday he appealed the conviction as did his daughter, Maryam, and his son-in-law, who received seven and one-year sentences respectively also on charges of corruption over the family's purchase of luxury apartments in London. If the judge grants the appeal, Sharif could be released on bail.

Violence has escalated in the run-up to the balloting, with horrific attacks over the weekend killing 153 people, including a provincial assembly candidate during an election rally in southwestern Baluchistan province.

In election-related violence, gunmen on Sunday night opened fire at the election headquarters of the secular Awami National Party in the town of Chaman in Baluchistan, wounding former senator Daud Achakzai who was campaigning for Zumurak Khan, a contender for a seat in the provincial legislature.

So far more than 170 people have died in election-related attacks.

The Human Rights Commission in its statement questioned a decision by the Election Commission of Pakistan to deploy 350,000 security personnel outside as well as inside polling stations on election day.

Rehman expressed concern that the deployment of security personnel to the polling stations could intimidate voters. Instead Human Right Commission member and co-founder Hina Jilani said security personnel should be deployed to protect campaigns ahead of elections when the dangers are self-evident.

Syrian government, rebels clash over recon base near Israel

BEIRUT (AP) — Syrian rebels and government forces clashed over a reconnaissance point near the frontier with Israel, a monitoring group said Monday, as the government pressed forward with military operations in the country's southwest.

Government forces bombed villages and rebel positions around Tell al-Haara, said the Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, which monitors the war through a network of on-the-ground activists.

Syrian state media said government forces seized the hill, but the Observatory said an al-Qaida linked faction fighting alongside rebels ambushed troops there, forcing them to retreat. Twelve of the government forces were killed, said the Observatory.

Tell al-Haara overlooks the Golan Heights, which Israel seized from Syria in a 1967 war, and was the site of a Syrian reconnaissance base until opposition forces seized it in 2014 in the ongoing civil war.

Iran: If Trump wants to talk, he'll have to call

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran said Monday that if President Donald Trump wants to negotiate after pulling the United States out of the international deal meant to prevent Tehran from developing nuclear weapons, he'll have to initiate the call.

The remarks by Foreign Ministry spokesman Bahram Ghasemi came after Trump last week said that with the U.S. increasing sanctions on Iran, "at a certain point they're going to call me and say 'let's make a deal,' and we'll make a deal."

Ghasemi said, however, "maybe someday he will call Tehran and ask for negotiations — this is more likely."

If Trump calls, it's not clear whether anyone will answer, with Iran's top leadership rejecting talks with the U.S.

Egypt draft bill to immune senior military officers

CAIRO (AP) — Egypt's parliament has passed a draft bill that could immune senior military officers from future prosecution related to violence following the 2013 overthrow of an elected but divisive Islamist president.

The draft bill, which gained legislators' approval on Monday, gives President Abdel-Fattah el-Sissi the right to name officers who are eligible for rewards that include ministerial benefits and immunity from investigation for any offences committed from July 3, 2013 to June 8, 2014 — namely from the day of former President Mohammed Morsi's overthrow to el-Sissi's first day as president.

The draft bill still needs el-Sissi's approval to become law.

US arrests, accuses woman of acting as Russian agent

By CHAD DAY
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal prosecutors in Washington revealed Monday that they have arrested a 29-year-old woman and accused her of acting as a covert agent inside the U.S. on behalf of a senior Kremlin official.

The announcement of the arrest of Maria Butina came just hours after President Donald Trump met with Russian President Vladimir Putin and just days after special counsel Robert Mueller charged 12 Russian intelligence officials with directing a sprawling hacking effort aimed at swaying the 2016 election.

Butina, a Russian national who has been living the U.S., was charged with conspiracy to act as an unregistered agent of the Russian government and accused of working to infiltrate American political organizations, including the National Rifle Association. The charge was brought the U.S. Attorney for the District of Columbia and do not appear to stem from Mueller's investigation.

According to court papers, Butina met with U.S. politicians and candidates, attended events sponsored by special interest groups — including two National Prayer Breakfast events — and organized Russian-American "friendship and dialogue" dinners in Washington with the goal of "reporting back to Moscow" what she had learned.

Court papers do not name the Kremlin official. The person is described as a member of the Russian legislature who later became a top official in the country's central bank. Prosecutors also note that the official has since been sanctioned by the U.S.

Butina is a Russian gun rights advocate who founded a pro-gun organization in that country, the Right to Bear Arms, in 2011 and who has been involved in coordinating in recent years between American gun rights activists and their Russian counterparts, U.S. media accounts have reported.

Butina hosted several leading NRA executives and pro-gun conservatives at her group's annual meeting in 2015, according to the reports in The New York Times, Time and the Daily Beast. Among those who attended were former NRA President David Keene, conservative political operative Paul Erickson and former Milwaukee County Sheriff David Clarke, later a strong Trump supporter.

Stocks fall as crude oil prices drop 4 percent

By MARLEY JAY
AP Markets Writer

NEW YORK — Major U.S. indexes closed mostly lower Monday as investors bought banks but sold most other types of stocks, including health care and technology companies. Energy stocks sank along with oil prices.

Oil prices fell more than 4 percent after U.S. officials suggested the U.S. will take a softer stance on countries that import oil from Iran after sanctions on Iran's energy sector go back into effect in November. Banks rose along with interest rates as well as a solid second-quarter report from Bank of America. A strong forecast gave Deutsche Bank its biggest gain in more than a year.

Amazon jumped in midday trading as investors expected strong sales during the company's annual Prime Day promotion, one of its largest sales days of the year, but the stock gave up much of that gain following problems with the company's website. Most other groups of stocks lost ground, and about two-thirds of the companies on the New York Stock Exchange finished lower.

Stocks finished at five-month highs Friday as investors remained optimistic about the U.S. economy even as they worried about the trade war between the U.S. and China.

The S&P 500 index lost 2.88 points, or 0.1 percent, to 2,798.43. The Dow Jones Industrial Average rose 44.95 points, or 0.2 percent, to 25,064.36 as Goldman Sachs, JPMorgan Chase, and Boeing climbed. The Nasdaq composite fell 20.26 points, or 0.3 percent, to 7,805.72.

Lava flies through roof of Hawaii tour boat, injuring 23

HONOLULU (AP) — An explosion sent lava flying through the roof of a tour boat off Hawaii's Big Island, injuring at least 23 people Monday, officials said.

A 20-year-old woman suffered major leg trauma, and other passengers had burns and scrapes, the state Department of Land and Natural Resources said.

The people were aboard a tour boat that takes visitors to see lava plunging into the ocean from a volcano that has been erupting for two months. Several companies operate such tours.

Officials have warned of the danger of getting close to lava entering the ocean, saying the interaction can create clouds of acid and fine glass.

The U.S. Coast Guard in May instituted a safety zone where lava flows the ocean off the Big Island. It prohibits vessels from getting closer than 984 feet from ocean-entry points.

The agency allows experienced boat operators to apply for a special license to get up to 164 feet from where lava sizzles into the sea.

The molten rock is coming from the Kilauea volcano, which has been erupting from a rural residential area since early May and has destroyed more than 700 homes. But until now, the only serious injury was to a man who was hit by flying lava that broke his leg.

FCC head has 'serious concerns' with Sinclair-Tribune deal

NEW YORK (AP) — The chairman of the Federal Communications Commission is raising "serious concerns" about Sinclair's $3.9 billion deal for Tribune's television stations.

Sinclair wants to buy Tribune Media and its 42 TV stations, including KTLA in Los Angeles and WPIX in New York. To address potential antitrust concerns, Sinclair has said it would sell stations to several buyers.

FCC Chairman Ajit Pai says Sinclair might still be able to operate the stations "in practice, even if not in name." One potential buyer is the Cunningham Group, which has ties to Sinclair's founding family.

Pai is ordering a hearing on Sinclair's proposed acquisition of Tribune. Even ordering a hearing could stop a potential deal. The last deal an FCC hearing blocked was a 2002 merger of satellite TV companies DirecTV and Echostar.

Showtime and Sacha Baron Cohen push back against Sarah Palin

NEW YORK (AP) — Showtime and Sacha Baron Cohen are pushing back against allegations the comedian duped guests on his new show by posing as a disabled veteran.

The network says in a statement Monday that Baron Cohen "did not present himself as a disabled veteran" or wear any military apparel when he met with Sen. Bernie Sanders and former Republican vice presidential candidate Sarah Palin.

Palin last week on Facebook complained that Baron Cohen "heavily disguised himself" as a disabled U.S. veteran in a wheelchair when she was "duped" into an interview. She challenged Baron Cohen and Showtime to donate proceeds from the show to a veterans' charity.

Brugada syndrome is common in people of Asian descent

Dr. Roach

DEAR DR. ROACH: Please discuss Brugada syndrome. Three members of my family died from it before we finally got a diagnosis. Where does it come from? — V.K.

ANSWER: Brugada syndrome is an inherited, genetic condition. It seems to be caused by an abnormality in the genes that code for sodium channel proteins in the heart. Brugada syndrome patients have an abnormal electrocardiogram and are at increased risk for serious abnormal rhythms of the heart, which can lead to sudden cardiac death. It is rare in the United States, being more common in people of Asian descent, and is much more common in men than in women.

People with first-degree family members (parent, child or sibling) affected by Brugada syndrome should undergo screening, which includes a history, examination and electrocardiogram. There is genetic testing available; however, the usefulness of this screening is not clear, as there are several types of mutations and not everyone with the mutation is at risk for developing the rhythm problems. Since Brugada pattern EKGs may not show up until later in life, EKG screening for close relatives is recommended every year or two until age 50 or so, according to some experts.

People with Brugada pattern on EKG and a history of abnormal heart rhythm are treated with an AICD (automated implantable cardioverter-defibrillator), which can sense and treat an abnormal rhythm immediately, and has been proven to save lives. People who have Brugada pattern but have never had symptoms generally are not treated. They should be carefully monitored and should promptly report symptoms that may otherwise be thought of no significance, including a simple faint, as this may prompt treatment in someone with Brugada pattern.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I had bronchiectasis for many years before being diagnosed. Two doctors have different opinions on the best way to treat it so that it won't get any worse. What is your opinion on treatment? How bad can it get? — V.K.

ANSWER: Bronchiectasis is a chronic lung disease similar to chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD).

Bronchiectasis is diagnosed by findings on X-ray and CT scanning in people with symptoms (cough and sputum production). Many underlying conditions can lead to bronchiectasis.

Risk factors for developing bronchiectasis include rheumatologic diseases, such as rheumatoid arthritis; immune system diseases, especially deficiencies in antibodies; a history of having childhood infections, such as pneumonia or measles; and anatomical abnormalities. It also can be seen in people with cystic fibrosis.

Exacerbations of bronchiectasis are treated with antibiotics, and these are generally continued for 14 days, which is longer than needed for most people.

Treatment to prevent worsening of bronchiectasis depends on how severe it is and whether there is an underlying cause that can be treated.

If there is not a treatable underlying cause, severe bronchiectasis may be treated with oral or inhaled antibiotics. This therapy is reserved for people who have three or more exacerbations per year, and should be prescribed only by an expert in this disease.

Pulmonary physical therapy and pulmonary rehabilitation are useful and probably underutilized for bronchiectasis.

Family makes no exception for reader's special diet

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I am a diagnosed narcoleptic. Medication helps with the symptoms, but not entirely. I looked into options and found a fantastic diet.

My dad's side of the family is Italian, and a huge part of the culture is food. During celebrations, it's considered offensive to refuse food, and my family has always looked down on diets.

Abby, I'm exhausted at family gatherings. I have tried explaining to them that I don't want them to alter their dinner arrangements to accommodate me, but I should be allowed to forgo eating foods that will make me feel like a zombie. How do I re-open this discussion without offending anyone? — Panicked Over Pasta

DEAR P. OVER P.: Explain that you know they would not feed certain foods to a diabetic, and you need the same dispensation. Ask them to kindly not put you in the embarrassing position of having to refuse their delicious food, and if they feel it will cause a problem, they should excuse you from the event.

DEAR ABBY: Six months ago, my friend "Lindy's" husband committed suicide. I have been there for her and understand it takes time, but I'm reaching my limit.

I make plans with her for dinners at our home and at restaurants and have planned outings, because I know it's difficult to be in the house alone. However, she constantly manipulates, yells at me when she doesn't get her way, and uses the loss of her husband as a rationale for why I and others must do what she wants regardless of what's happening in our lives.

How long must I tolerate her grieving process before enough is enough? — Confused In New York

DEAR CONFUSED: If she isn't receiving grief counseling, urge her to find some before she destroys her support system. When Lindy becomes manipulative, you are within your rights to call her on it.

Rummaging through hints

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: When your church is going to have a RUMMAGE SALE, some of the people in the church work all week to unpack all the donated merchandise, set up tables and price everything.

What are some people thinking when they bring a car full of donated items the day before the sale? — A Reader, Youngstown, Ohio

You're absolutely right! Here are some hints for putting together a successful rummage, garage or yard sale:

Organize like pieces together. Set up a vignette that tells a story: A chair with a blanket, a book, a big iced tea glass and a table looks cozy, and people will be inspired to buy the setup.

Have plenty of change on hand. Price things expecting that people will haggle.

]Pricing paperbacks "five/$1" will move them out; bulk pricing for other small items will work well, too! — Heloise

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19). The word "spoiled" describes what happens when the airflow of humanity is blocked by a cushion. You're willing to recognize the ways in which you've been cushioned by life and are better off for that recognition.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Sleep. It's such a simple fix that many overlook. But it's better than any synthetic fix or natural remedy. Rest can resolve physical ailment, emotional stress or mental fatigue. Try it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). The songbird isn't singing out solutions, witticisms or entertaining stories. The songbird is just expressing whatever comes naturally and the resulting song lands lovely on every open ear. You'll be such a bird today.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Being weary and overworked has an ill effect on anything you take on, so you owe it to everyone around you to have some fun, relax, ask for help when you need it and generally take good care of yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). When you see the full array of choices you have, the one you actually make becomes more meaningful to you than if you had just taken the default option without thinking about it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). If you don't feel like celebrating yourself, or even being yourself, that's fine. It's natural for people in flux. Each day is a new opportunity. Each hour, each moment — you can always become a better version of yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Like clouds that pass in front of the sun, the shade people give one another can pass in a moment if you let it. We're all human. No one says the perfect thing all of the time. Try not to take or give offense.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Open up and share your feelings. Otherwise they won't know what you're going through. Also, they won't know to reach out to you for help when they are going through the same thing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Don't say "maybe" and keep people wondering. Say "no" and say it fast so people can process the information and move on. This is definitely the cleanest and best way for all.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). While the cynic grumbles about the pointlessness of trying to please people, the optimist accepts that relationships are frustration. Celebrate whatever good comes of them as the miracle that it is.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Playing it cool won't work today. Anyway, it takes more confidence to show some emotion. Revealing your feelings, or at least a glimpse of them, lets people know who you are and what you care about.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Don't jump ship just because it's sitting a bit low in the water. Show a little faith in your vessel. Get a cup and start bailing. The same goes for your idea, project or relationship.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 17). Following a shining inspiration, you'll see different parts of the world this year. Humanitarian instincts will have you doing what you can to help others get the same rights and freedoms you enjoy. This leads to important alliances. Your life will become infused with love and tenderness. You'll be awarded in November. Libra and Sagittarius adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 40, 5, 33 and 14.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST

Opening lead: Eight of ♠ North could count that his partnership held at least 33 combined points, so he made the obvious bid. With two balanced hands, however, 33 points is sometimes not enough. This deal required careful play despite a combined 35 points.

South won the opening spade lead with dummy's ace. He could count 11 tricks and he would have to develop an extra trick from one of the red suits. He led a low diamond to his queen at trick two, losing to West's king. A diamond continuation would reveal the diamond position, so West exited safely with a spade to dummy's king, instead.

South now cashed all of his black-suit winners before touching hearts. He led a club to his king, cashed his two high spades, and then two more clubs. He learned that West had started with four spades and only two clubs. This made West a big favorite to hold length in hearts, but things changed when declarer took the thoughtful precaution of cashing his ace of diamonds before starting hearts. Bingo! When East showed out, the puzzle was complete. South cashed dummy's ace and queen of hearts, and then, knowing that West held no more hearts, led a heart to his 10 and claimed his slam. Well done!

We wonder how many readers would have gone down by not cashing the ace of diamonds? We mean the readers of other columns, of course. All of our readers would have gotten it right. Right?

Russian hackers used US infrastructure against itself

By TAMI ABDOLLAH
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Exactly seven months before the 2016 presidential election, Russian government hackers made it onto a Democratic committee's network.

One of their carefully crafted fraudulent emails had hit pay dirt, enticing an employee to click a link and enter her password.

That breach of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee was the first significant step in gaining access to the Democratic National Committee network.

To steal politically-sensitive information, prosecutors say, the hackers exploited some of the United States' own computer infrastructure against it, using servers they leased in Arizona and Illinois. The details were included in an indictment released Friday by special counsel Robert Mueller, who accused the GRU, Russia's military intelligence agency, of taking part in a wide-ranging conspiracy to interfere in the 2016 presidential election. The companies operating the servers were not identified in the court papers.

The Russians are accused of exploiting their access to inexpensive, powerful servers worldwide — conveniently available for rental — that can be used to commit crimes with impunity. Reaching across oceans and into networks without borders can obfuscate their origins.

The indictment painstakingly reconstructs the hackers' movements using web servers and a complex bitcoin financing operation.

Two Russian hacking units were charged with tasks, including the creation and management of a hacking tool called "X-agent" that was implanted onto computers. The software allowed them to monitor activity on computers by individuals, steal passwords and maintain access to hacked networks. It captured each keystroke on infected computers and took screenshots of activity displayed on computer screens, including an employee viewing the DCCC's online banking information.

From April to June 2016, the hackers installed updated versions of their software on at least 10 Democratic computers. The software transmitted information from the infected computers to a GRU-leased server in Arizona, the indictment said. The hackers also created an overseas computer to act as a "middle server" to obscure the connection between the DCCC and the hackers' Arizona-based server.

Once hackers gained access to the DCCC network, it searched one computer for terms that included "hillary," "cruz," and "trump" and copied select folders, including "Benghazi Investigations."

In emails, the hackers embedded a link that purported to be a spreadsheet of Clinton's favorability ratings, but instead it directed the computers to send its data to a GRU-created website.

Meanwhile, around the same time, the hackers broke into 33 DNC computers and installed their software on their network. Captured keystrokes and screenshots from the DCCC and DNC computers, including an employee viewing the DCCC's banking information, were sent back to the Arizona server.

The Russian hackers used other software they developed called X-Tunnel to move stolen documents through encrypted channels to another computer the GRU leased in Illinois.

Despite the use of U.S.-based servers, such vendors typically aren't legally liable for criminal activities unless it can be proved in federal court that the operator was party to the criminal activity.

Trump: Putin made 'incredible offer' in hacking case

By ERIC TUCKER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump said Monday that Russian President Vladimir Putin privately made an "incredible offer" to help American investigators in their prosecution of 12 Russian intelligence officers accused of hacking crimes during the 2016 presidential election season.

"He offered to have the people working on the case come and work with their investigators with respect to the 12 people," Trump told reporters during a news conference in Helsinki following his joint summit with Putin. "I think that's an incredible offer, OK?"

The special counsel investigating potential coordination between the Trump campaign and the Kremlin charged a dozen Russian military intelligence officers on Friday with hacking the Democratic National Committee and the Hillary Clinton campaign and then releasing the stolen communications online as part of a sweeping conspiracy to meddle in the election.

Trump did not elaborate on Putin's "incredible offer," though Putin himself suggested that special counsel Robert Mueller could ask Russian law enforcement agencies to interrogate the suspects. He said U.S. officials could request to be present at such questioning in line with a 1999 agreement on mutual legal assistance in criminal cases.

He noted that Russia would expect the U.S. to return the favor and cooperate in the Russian probe against Bill Browder, a British investor charged with financial crimes in Russia. Browder was a driving force behind a U.S. law targeting Russian officials over human rights abuses.

It seemed unlikely that American authorities would take seriously any such offer from Putin, and some U.S. lawmakers openly ridiculed the suggestion.

The United States does not have an extradition treaty with Russia, making it highly doubtful the Kremlin would ever voluntarily send over the defendants to be prosecuted in an American court. And the detailed allegations in the indictment make clear that the FBI and Mueller's team believe they were able to pinpoint the hackers by name and establish how the cyberattacks unfolded.

SUMMIT

in a statement. Russia, he said, "remains hostile to our most basic values and ideals."

Much of the Republican rebuke came from lawmakers who have been willing to openly criticize the president, a group that remains a minority in the GOP.

Many top Republicans remained on the sidelines after the Justice Department on Friday indicted 12 Russian intelligence officials for election-related hacking.

But several Republicans who don't typically buck the president raised concerns, shocked by Monday's performance.

Trump ally Newt Gingrich called it "the most serious mistake" of Trump's presidency — and one that "must be corrected — immediately."

Democrats pleaded with their GOP colleagues who have majority control of Congress to rein in the president and become a stronger legislative check on the executive branch.

Sen. Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y., the minority leader, says never in the history of the country has an American president supported an adversary the way Trump sided with Putin. He challenged Republicans to move beyond words and confront the president directly by increasing sanctions on Russia and requesting testimony about the summit from Trump administration officials, among other things.

"We need our Republican colleagues to stand up for the good of this country," he said.

Republicans have been hesitant to fully confront a president who remains popular among GOP voters back home. But Trump's hold on the GOP is being put to the test by his willingness to align with Putin, a leader whom Republicans routinely describe as an enemy of the United States.

Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., repeated his earlier assessment that the Russians are "not our friends." He said he has "complete confidence in our intelligence community and the findings."

The second-ranking Republican, Sen. John Cornyn of Texas, said Trump has a "delicate task" in dealing with Putin, but added that he supports the intelligence community's assessment of election meddling.

Monday's firestorm erupted when Trump, standing side by side with Putin in Helsinki, refused to say he believed that Russia interfered in the 2016 election, or to publicly condemn it. Instead, he directed his ire at Democrats and U.S. officials, calling special counsel Robert Mueller's probe of Russia a "disaster."

Asked if there was anything he thinks Russia should take responsibility for, Trump said, "We're all to blame."

Off Capitol Hill, former intelligence chiefs who served under President Barack Obama were scathing in their criticism. John Brennan, who served as CIA director, called Trump's comments "treasonous."

James Clapper, who was director of national intelligence under Obama, described Trump's comments as "very, very disturbing."

"On the world stage in front of the entire globe the president of the United States essentially capitulated and seems intimidated by Vladimir Putin," Clapper told CNN.

At least one Republican, Sen. Rand Paul of Kentucky, scoffed at both parties "beating their chests" on Russia and "dumbing down" the debate, saying it's important for the U.S. to have diplomatic channels open with its adversaries if the country hopes to change behavior.

"They're making a big mistake," Paul said. He dismissed the president's critics as those who hate the president. "It's Trump derangement syndrome."

Another key Republican echoed the president's criticism of the special counsel probe.

Rep. Darrell Issa of California said he takes the charges filed by Mueller's team seriously but questions the timing coming days before the Trump-Putin meeting. "I personally would neither rule in nor rule out the validity."

But another Republican, Sen. Marco Rubio of Florida, warned that while Trump may feel that he can achieve a better working relationship with Putin by being nice to him, that's unlikely to work.

"The flaw in that is that President Putin is not interested in a better relationship," Rubio said at a forum sponsored by the Atlantic. "He views politics as a battle between the strong and the weak. ... He doesn't believe in win-win scenarios. He believes in zero sum."

during the election.

Putin on Monday repeated the Russian denial of election interference, calling it "nonsense." Trump himself sounded sympathetic to the Russian position, saying: "I don't see any reason why Russia would interfere in the 2016 election."

Days before the summit, Coats had spoken publicly of his concerns about cyber threats to U.S. national security and singled out Russia as the most aggressive foreign actor in that arena.

"The Department of Homeland Security and the FBI, in coordination with international partners, have detected Russian government actors targeting government and businesses in the energy, nuclear, water, aviation and critical manufacturing sectors," Coats said at the Hudson Institute think tank in Washington on Friday.

He went on to warn that Russia remains capable of launching an interference campaign on 2018 midterm elections similar to what occurred in 2016 "we are just one click on a keyboard away from a similar situation repeating itself," he said.

When asked about Coat's assessment in an interview with CBS news Saturday, President Trump said "I don't know if I agree with that."

Late last month, Sabraw ordered the government to reunite the thousands of children and parents who were forcibly separated at the border by the Trump administration this spring. He set a deadline of July 10 for children under 5 and gave the government until July 26 to reunite 2,551 youngsters ages 5 to 17.

On Monday, the judge commended the government for a revised plan submitted over the weekend to reunify the older children. The plan calls for DNA testing and other screening measures if red flags are raised during background checks.

Jonathan White of the Office of Refugee Resettlement, who is overseeing the government's effort, assured the judge that some reunifications of older children already occurred, and "it is our intent to reunify children promptly." He went into detail on how the process was working.

The judge praised White's testimony, saying, "What is in place is a great start to making a large number of reunifications happen very, very quickly."

"I have every confidence that you are the right person to do this," he told White.

German city seeks to evict big catfish

BERLIN (AP) — A German city is looking for a way to get rid of a giant catfish that is believed to have developed a taste for ducklings after eating all of its fellow fish in the municipal pond.

The roughly 4.9-foot fish has been making waves in Offenbach, near Frankfurt. News agency dpa reported that the city government said Monday that it has found a professional angler to catch the fish, first seen about a year ago, but a formal contract has yet to be signed.

The city plans to have its unwelcome guest caught alive and taken to a private pond somewhere, but officials will first have to be satisfied that it can't escape into flowing water and that its new home is suitable for a catfish.

NFL: Bucs

Jackson tracking down Jerry Rice record

By GREG AUMAN
Tampa Bay Times

We're close enough to the 2018 NFL season that we can start talking about records that could be broken in the normal course of the Bucs' season ahead.

DeSean Jackson has a chance to break one of Jerry Rice's career NFL records. No, not the 197 career touchdown catches, not the 1,549 career catches, not the 22,895 career receiving yards — to be clear, nobody in history is within 40 touchdowns or 220 catches or 6,000 yards of those marks. Pretty amazing.

The record in jeopardy? Most total touchdowns of at least 60 yards in a career. Jackson has 22; Rice has the record at 23, so with just two deep balls in 2018, Jackson has a cool (if obscure) place in the history books. Want to stump a friend? Ask who the next three on the list are. Maybe you get Devin Hester (21), but probably not Bobby Mitchell (20 from 1958-68) or Lance Alworth (19 from 1962-72).

Jackson didn't have any plays of 60-plus yards last season, just the second time in his nine NFL seasons that he went a full year without one, along with 2011.

Jackson's 60-yard touchdowns come from all over — 14 with the Eagles, eight with the Redskins; 17 on receptions, one on a rush and four on returns. He had six (!) in 2009. You can find video of most of the 22 here on the NFL's site.

Since 1994 (as far as pro-football-reference.com goes back for this), Jackson has the most 60-yard touchdown receptions with 17, more than Randy Moss (16), Terrell Owens (13) and Steve Smith (12). The only NFL player with 10-plus 60-yard TD runs in that span is Adrian Peterson, with 13.

Tune into the only All Star Game that matters

By MARTIN FENNELLY
Tampa Bay Times

Summer was for beach days and watermelons and shorty pajamas and fighting with my brother over who gets to sleep in front of the fan.

And summer was for the MLB All-Star Game.

They'll hold the Midsummer Classic on Tuesday night at Washington's Nationals Park, and I have to tune in, because that's what I do in July. That's July. It's the All-Star Game.

It doesn't matter that baseball has changed. Maybe it's the money. Maybe it's the past steroids atrocities. Who really looks at baseball the same anymore?

I'll watch anyway because, for one thing, baseball's All-Star Game is the only one that matters, and not just because nothing else is on. The NFL shouldn't even play the Pro Bowl. The NHL All-Star Game is silly, even with its revised format. They jump over cars blindfolded and dunk basketballs in and around the preposterous NBA All-Star Game.

Only baseball. The game resembles the game, at least, pitcher against batter, same matchups. Who doesn't want to watch Mike Trout? Who doesn't want to see Justin Verlander?

Most important: They wear their own uniforms.

Baseball's shifting culture set to play out in the All-Star Game

By BEN WALKER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — David Ortiz can now laugh, sort of, at the shifting culture of baseball. For Mike Trout, Nolan Arenado, Bryce Harper and most every other All-Star hitter, dealing with different defensive alignments is just part of the game.

Tune in Tuesday night and there's no telling where fans will see fielders at Nationals Park. Especially in what's become merely an exhibition — why not try a five-man outfield?

Count Joey Votto among the boppers who'd love to do away with infielders clustered on the grass.

"From someone who's really been dinged by the shift, I would welcome it," the Cincinnati first baseman said Monday. "Once they started shifting more without question, I adjusted my approach and you have to or else you get burned by it because .290 turns into .250 turns into .220 like nothing."

But the career .312 hitter can see why Major League Baseball might want to avoid delving into rules to define defensive positions.

"I like the idea of a dynamic ballplayer. It's really hard to shift against a really fast left-handed hitter for a multitude of reasons," he said. "Removing the shift may lend itself to the left-handed pull hitter that hits flyballs, groundballs and strikes out a ton. I'm not sure if Major League Baseball is excited about that."

To Ortiz, these overloaded infields are reshaping the sport. Not in a good way, either.

"It seems crazy, it seems like it's taking some fun part of the game away," the retired Red Sox slugger said Sunday before managing the Futures Game.

Fisher on his former QB: 'I love Jameis... unfortunately he made some bad decisions'

By MATT BAKER
Tampa Bay Times

ATLANTA — Jimbo Fisher defended every step of the way at Jameis Winston at Florida State, so it shouldn't be a surprise that he continues to back his former quarterback, even though both have moved on.

Fisher, now the coach at Texas A&M, said he doesn't know all the circumstances about Winston's three-game suspension from the Bucs for violating the NFL's personal conduct policy. But that doesn't change his feelings toward Winston, who won a national title and the Heisman Trophy under Fisher.

"I love Jameis," Fisher told the Dallas Morning News during SEC media days. "Hopefully he'll be able to move on, and obviously that is something that he will be able to move on from. And yes, I love him. I still think he's a tremendous young man. I really do.

No refuge from politics but France victory a fitting climax in Russia

By ROB HARRIS
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Kylian Mbappe high-fived a political protester who invaded the field during the World Cup final. French President Emmanuel Macron leapt out of his seat in a VVIP area that included a leader charged with genocide. And Vladimir Putin was drenched in a sudden downpour as the trophy was handed over to the victorious French team.

This year's World Cup was never going to be a refuge from politics when it was being staged in Putin's Russia, but the players did their best to keep the tournament for themselves.

A final with six goals — France beat Croatia 4-2 on Sunday — was a fitting climax to a month that produced some of the most enthralling matches in World Cup history.

NHL: Ray Emery

Police: Drowning of Emery not suspicious

Associated Press

HAMILTON, Ontario — The drowning of former NHL goalie Ray Emery does not appear suspicious, police said.

The 35-year-old player whose career spanned 11 seasons drowned in Hamilton Harbour on Sunday.

He jumped off a boat near the Leander Boat Club to go swimming, and friends called emergency services at about 6 a.m. when he didn't resurface, police said. Inspector Marty Schulenberg called it a "case of misadventure."

Emery's body was found at about 2:50 p.m. Sunday, about 20 yards from where he went into the water, Schulenberg added. He said first responders were not able to locate Emery right away so they called the dive unit. The search took longer than anticipated because of concerns for the dive team.

"It's a lengthy process and safety is paramount to our divers," he said. "We need to take the time do it safely and that's what the delay was."

A post-mortem was to be completed Monday.

"Mr. Emery was taking a swim this morning and the circumstances around that are a part of the investigation," Schulenberg said. "Those details remain to be uncovered by our investigators."

Emery played for Ottawa, Chicago and Philadelphia. He helped the Senators reach the Stanley Cup Final in 2007 and won it as a backup with the Blackhawks in 2013.

The Blackhawks lauded him as a "fierce competitor, a good teammate and a Stanley Cup champion." Flyers President Paul Holmgren cited his "talent, work ethic and determination," calling him an "outstanding teammate and an extremely gifted goaltender."

Emery battled avascular necrosis, the same serious hip ailment that ended two-sport star Bo Jackson's career. He and fellow Blackhawks goalie Corey Crawford combined to win the William Jennings Trophy for allowing the league's fewest goals during the lockout-shortened 2013 season and finished seventh in Vezina Trophy voting.

Emery played in 326 NHL regular-season and playoff games. He went 145-86-28 with a 2.70 goals-against average and 16 shutouts.

He faced issues off the ice, including an incident of road rage, assault of a trainer in Russia and behavior that led to his dismissal from Ottawa's training camp.

"Ray had many highs and lows in his personal life and his career," longtime agent J.P. Barry said. "He never let things that would derail most of us stop his forward momentum. He had a big heart and a fun loving personality. He was someone we all rooted for to succeed."

MiLB: Stone Crabs 15, Tarpons 4

Stone Crabs authoritative in rout

Staff reports

They scored often and early.

An 8-run 1st inning propelled the Charlotte Stone Crabs to a 15-4 victory over the Tampa Tarpons, Monday night at the Charlotte Sports Park.

The Stone Crabs would tack on another run in the 2nd inning, and the offensive juggernaut would explode for six additional runs in the bottom of the fourth.

Florida State League all-star Lucius Fox scored the contest's first run, as the result of a throwing error by Tarpons pitcher Nick Green, allowing another of Charlotte's FSL all-stars Robbie Tenerowicz to reach base safely. However, this was just the beginning to what would be a productive inning for the Stone Crabs.

Tristan Gray, the FSL's leader in doubles, two-base hit to left field, brought home Josh Lowe and Robbie Tenerowicz. The Stone Crabs kept up their relentless attack as designated hitter Joey Roach singled to left scoring Gray. Charlotte continued to take advantage of every opportunity, loading the bases, and would open up a 5-run cushion as first baseman Kevin Padlo would be hit with a pitch forcing home another run. Tampa's troubles continued as a wild pitch allowed the Stone Crabs to add another run to their growing total. Miles Mastrobuoni and Lucius Fox each delivered RBIs before the inning ended.

A ninth run was added in the 2nd inning, as third baseman Jermaine Palacios, who had two hits, grounded out to score Tenerowicz.

The Stone Crabs who were already enjoying a comfortable 9-0 lead, put the game out of reach in the 4th inning. Joey Roach's single to right delivered two more runs. Catcher Rene Pinto's ground-rule double to right field brought home Palacios. Mastrobuoni, another Stone Crabs all-star, doubled to left driving in two more runs and Lucius Fox's single to center plated the Stone Crabs 15th run.

Left fielder Robbie Tenerowicz and designated hitter Joey Roach had three hits each, Fox, Palacios and Pinto had two hits in the Stone Crabs 15-hit offensive barrage.

Roach and Mastrobuoni delivered three runs each and Fox and Palacios knocked in a pair helping to secure the victory.

Reece Karalus started, working four innings, allowing three hits, no runs and one walk, while striking out five. Spencer Jones was equally effective, hurling three innings, allowing no runs on one hit, issuing one walk and striking out two, earning the victory and raising his record to 4-2. Reliever J.D. Busfield cruised through the 8th inning, but ran into trouble in the 9th inning, surrendering four runs.

Tiger and Phil in prime time? Great idea in 1999

By TIM DAHLBERG
Associated Press

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland — As golf exhibitions go, this probably once seemed like a good idea.

Tiger Woods and Phil Mickelson in a prime-time television special playing 18 holes for — and let's pause for a moment here — a cool $10 million. Put it under the lights in Las Vegas with some cool celebrities following inside the ropes, and it becomes must-see TV.

Back in 1999 anyway.

A concept past its time is heading to prime time, at least according to hints dropped by both Woods and Mickelson. The two say they are deep into negotiations to play a winner-take-all match with $10 million on the line.

The best part for both players? Neither will have to reach into his own pocket to pay the other off.

"I would hope for a sponsor," Mickelson said last week at the Scottish Open.

That takes some of the drama away from the match, mostly because $10 million isn't life-changing money for either man. Woods has won $111,878,724 in official money in his career, while Mickelson is not far behind at $87,533,019, and both have made many times more in endorsements.

It's not even unheard of in golf, with the FedEx Cup winner pocketing $10 million at the end of every PGA Tour season.

Still, it's enough for more than a few more tanks of gas in the Gulfstream. And it's enough to get Woods to want to reprise the series of exhibitions he once did in his prime before the unusualness of the event wore off and the ratings went in the tank.

Woods may not be the player he once was, but at 42 he remains the biggest draw in golf. Mickelson gets some eyeballs, too, though at the age of 48, he's getting more attention lately for breaking rules on the golf course than winning tournaments.

AP PHOTO

Tiger Woods of the US in action during preview day two of The Open Championship Monday at Carnoustie Golf Links in Angus, Scotland.

The two were never real rivals, and never real friends. Woods was almost always the dominant No. 1, and had little use for chit chat with any player — much less Mickelson — in his prime.

But reality TV isn't always real. And the lure of this TV special — for die-hard golf fans, at least — would be Mickelson and Woods finally facing each other with microphones picking up every comment.

"We are friends so we are always trying to make each other uncomfortable and needle each other," Woods said Sunday after practicing a few holes at Carnoustie, the site of this week's British Open.

If Woods and Mickelson really want to make each other uncomfortable, of course, they would be playing for their own money like nearly every weekend golfer does. And if they really want to needle each other, it wouldn't be hard to come up with some zingers.

Imagine Woods about to try to reach a par 5 over water in two as Mickelson looks on.

"That shot looks tougher than trying to pass a DUI test with five different drugs in your system," Lefty might say.

Phil Mickelson tees off during day one of the Scottish Open at Gullane Golf Club, East Lothian, Scotland.

"What do you know," Woods might reply. "I may have had to go to rehab, but you could have gone to prison with that insider trading scheme with the biggest gambler in Las Vegas."

Or this, as Mickelson stands over a 20-foot downhiller to win the match on the 18th green:

"Don't hit it too hard, Phil. You know what happened when you did that at the U.S. Open and you ran and hit the ball again while it was still moving. Does the movie 'Happy Gilmore' come to mind?"

"Well at least he hit the ball," Mickelson might reply. "Not like the time the 9-iron went through the windshield of your SUV."

Yes, indeed, nothing like a little friendly banter to spice things up. If Woods and Mickelson really wanted to go at it, they could turn their exhibition into must-see TV.

But while this is about money and trying to stay relevant to a new generation of fans, it's also about image. Woods is working hard at rehabbing his, while Mickelson is surely more than eager to flash his smile and sign some autographs in a prime-time special.

Between them they've won only one tournament since the end of 2013, but they are arguably the only two players who can carry a prime-time match on their own.

The ratings won't be as spectacular as they were when Tigermania raged and Woods faced off against David Duval in the Showdown at Sherwood nearly 20 years ago, but in today's fractured media world they don't need to be.

Just more proof that it's not 1999 anymore.

Bull rider suffers fatal injuries at Wyoming rodeo

Associated Press

RAWLINS, Wyo. — A memorial service was scheduled for Sunday for a Colorado bull rider who suffered fatal injuries while competing in a Wyoming rodeo.

The father of Jason Blasdel of Fruita, Colorado, says his son was injured July 7 while competing at the Platte River Rodeo in Saratoga, Wyoming.

Paul Zamora, the coroner in Carbon County, Wyoming, tells the Rawlins Times that Blasdel suffered internal bleeding and died at the hospital on July 8. He was 30.

Joe Blasdel tells The Daily Sentinel in Grand Junction that his son loved the sport he had competed in since he was 8, but was planning on stepping away from it this year.

Jason Blasdel is survived by his wife Heather and two daughters, ages 6 and 2.

The memorial service is set for 5 p.m. at Victory Life Church in Fruita, Colorado.

Okay, so it isn't like it used to be. Player loyalty and loyalty to players is fleeting. Hank Aaron was a Brave and Willie Mays was a Giant. I realize now that it was an evil thing, the reserve clause, and that this is progress. But today's All-Stars change teams now like they change undershirts. I don' even know half these guys.

Growing up, there was nothing bigger than wanting to see your guys — on your team — introduced before the game, that half step off the foul line, maybe a smile and a tip of the cap. That was must-see. The All-Star Game was must-see.

When I was a kid, that meant waiting on Yankees to get in the game. It meant cheering at the TV as a tottering Mickey Mantle came out of the dugout. It sometimes meant waiting all night for quiet, unassuming Roy White to get in the game, then he didn't.

It meant hanging on every pitch, hoping the American League would beat the National League, as if it was the Cold War or something. It meant everything but a street celebration when Fred Lynn's grand slam helped the AL plaster the NL at Comiskey Park in 1983.

The All-Star Game meant Pete Rose barreling over Ray Fosse. It meant watching Reggie Jackson hit one off the roof at Tiger Stadium or Dave Parker cutting down baserunners in Seattle.

Rays fans might understand. In 2008, rookie third baseman Evan Longoria was a hero, singling home a run to tie what became a marathon. In 2009, Carl Crawford was voted game MVP, mostly for a dazzling catch that took away a home run.

Only baseball's All-Star Game has real history.

Why don't you count up all your Pro Bowl memories?

Go ahead. I'll wait.

Baseball has 1934, Carl Hubbell striking out five Hall of Famers in a row — Ruth, Gehrig, Foxx, Simmons, Cronin.

Baseball has Ted Williams and Stan Musial winning all-star games with home runs.

Baseball has 1992, John Kruk flailing at Randy Johnson, laughing as he did. Everyone else laughed, too.

Baseball has 1999, All-Stars gathered around that same Ted Williams at Fenway Park as Teddy Ballgame threw out the ceremonial first pitch.

Baseball has 2008, Josh Hamilton's spectacular exhibition in the home run derby. Baseball has last year, Giancarlo Stanton. A Marlin at the time, winning the derby in Miami

Baseball and its All-Star Game. There is no substitute. Rays star left-hander Blake Snell will be on the AL roster Tuesday night (Rays catcher Wilson Ramos, voted a starter, will miss the game because of an injury). Who knows if Snell will pitch, but he'll be out there for intros. A step forward, a tip of the cap. Rays fans should smile. That used to be a good midsummer for me. Still is, really. Nothing much has changed.

Except for the shorty pajamas.

CULTURE

"It seems like there are 20 guys playing defense against you," Big Papi said, playfully estimating shifts took "like 500 hits away from me."

There's been talk that baseball, concerned that less action in the field could translate to fewer fans in the stands, might consider a rule regarding shifts.

Perhaps it would mean only two infielders on each side of the diamond. Or possibly they'd all be required to stay on the dirt.

"Maybe something where you can only shift a couple guys each inning," Arenado offered.

Of course, Max Scherzer, Jacob deGrom, Luis Severino and other aces might see it a bit differently.

"I am extremely pro-shift, especially against lefties because I pound lefties in and then change-ups away," Dodgers right-hander Ross Stripling said. "I know there are pitchers that don't like it as much. When you think about the shift it's easier to remember the ones that hurt you than the 10 that helped you."

As for the debate about shifts damaging the game, "certainly I understand it," he said.

"We were just talking about this the other day and we looked up the research a little bit. It's led to way less singles, but more walks and more doubles," he said.

No manager employs more shifts than AL skipper A.J. Hinch of Houston, so look for second baseman Jose Altuve and shortstop Manny Machado to be moving around when Paul Goldschmidt, Matt Kemp and the other NL stars come to bat.

"The shift has transformed the game," Astros third baseman Alex Bregman said. "We did it a lot last year and won the World Series, so I guess it works."

Despite all the top talent at the plate, All-Star Games rarely turn into run-fests. They're often limited by the strong stable of pitchers each team brings, boosted by dominant relievers such as Craig Kimbrel, Josh Hader and Kenley Jansen ramped up to throw one inning apiece.

The AL won last year 2-1 at Miami on Robinson Cano's homer in the 10th inning. Not since 2007, in fact, have both teams scored more than three runs in a game.

That's the trend across baseball these days. Going into the break, there have been more strikeouts than hits in the majors. The overall batting average is .247 at the break, and it could dip to the lowest figure in nearly a half-century.

"I think offenses are down because of the shift. I see a lot of guys hit balls hard up the middle that are usually hits that are outs," Trout said.

The decrease on the scoreboard has increased calls for more radical changes — outlawing shifts, lowering the mound, forcing relievers to face more than one batter.

"This is a game of adjustments. Everybody is constantly making adjustments to you," Atlanta outfielder Nick Markakis said. "You're going to want to cry about it and not have the shift any more? I think it's silly."

BUCS

How embarrassingly close was Jackson to another 60-yard score? In 2011, he had a 61-yard touchdown catch that was reviewed and determined to be a 60-yard catch and fumble at the 1-yard line as he tossed the ball a split-second too early in celebration. The Eagles punched it in on the next play.

The Bucs last year also charted Jackson's all-time ranking in total touchdowns of 50-plus yards. He has 26, and one more will tie him with Owens for third at 27; only Moss (29) and Rice (36) have more than that.

So anyway, you have something obscure to root for in 2018. We'll have more traditional records (that don't involve Rice) that could fall as the season nears ...

FISHER

"Unfortunately, he made some bad decisions this past season, or whenever he did it. I don't know exactly when that was. But I still love him. If you're ever around him, you'll understand what I mean. There's not a better team player, a guy who works as much as (anyone). But he made a mistake, and obviously he'll pay the consequences for that, and we'll move on."

CUP

The lasting images will be of pure elation as the France players leapt into the crowd to collect flags, then crashed Didier Deschamps' post-match news conference, dancing on the table and spraying champagne and water on the coach.

"Sorry," Deschamps said. "They're young and they're happy."

No need to apologize. This young squad earned its right to go wild.

Particularly Mbappe, a 19-year-old forward whose career trajectory should move into a stratosphere occupied for so long by Cristiano Ronaldo and Lionel Messi. The old guard went home early; another failed challenge for World Cup titles by Portugal and Argentina. Mbappe flies home with a winners' medal.

It's not just about his composure on the ball, and eye for goal. Just look at the coolness early in the second half dealing with a member of the Pussy Riot activist group which protests against what they consider to be Putin's repressive regime: A double-high five. Nothing fazes the guy who became the first teenager to score in a World Cup final since Pele in 1958.

"I've always been ready, mentally, to do beautiful things," Mbappe said. "I'm free and, most of all, I enjoy it."

Not only Mbappe. Benjamin Pavard, a 22-year-old defender, will be hot property in the upcoming transfer window. Raphael Varane has also been at the heart of the defense that didn't concede a goal in four of seven games in Russia. The starring role by Paul Pogba, who scored the decisive third goal on Sunday, was a riposte to critics of his contribution at Manchester United.

"These kids, they play like it's a pick-up game," said 32-year-old France defender Adil Rami, who was on the bench for the entire tournament.

Arousal Creams May Replace Popular Sex Pills for Men

Daniel Watson
Medical News Today

NEW AROUSAL CREAM MAY REPLACE POPULAR SEX PILLS: This new patented clinically proven arousal cream is now available nationwide.

BOSTON – The medical community now has a safer and more effective alternative to sex pills, which they can immediately start offering to male patients. It will not require a prescription.

The alternative, called Sensum+®, is an amazing new sex cream that activates a sensation pathway on the penis known as TRPA1.

When applied as directed, it leads to incredible arousal and much more satisfying erections.

It also promotes powerful climaxes and ultimately results in significant improvements in performance.

"Men can expect outstanding sexual improvements with regular use. The penis will become hyper sensitive, making them easily aroused and excitable" explains Dr. Henry Esber, the Boston based physician who introduced Sensum+® to market.

"And that's because Sensum+® does what no other sex pill or drug has done before – it stimulates a special sensory pathway right below the skin, which leads to phenomenal sensation."

Overtime, constant exposure (especially if circumcised) leads to decreased penis sensitivity, which can cause problems with arousal and erection quality. There just isn't enough feeling to get excited."

"Diabetes, antidepressants and normal aging also leads to desensitization, a can make the situation even worse."

"This is what makes Sensum+® so effective and why the clinical studies and clinical use studies have been so positive."

MISDIAGNOSIS LEADS TO UNNEEDED PRESCRIPTIONS

After years of clinical research and testing, Dr. Esber and his team have discovered an incredible compound that triggers arousal while helping men achieve erections more easily.

This compound isn't a drug. It's the active ingredient in Sensum+®.

And according to users, it produces sensational results. Many men report remarkable improvements in sexual performance and overall satisfaction.

They are more sexually active than they've been in years with the average Sensum+® user over the age of 50.

Clinical studies show Sensum+®'s key ingredient activates the TRPA1 sensation pathway right below the skin of the penis.

According to research, many men adults and seniors who suffer sexually have lost sensation in their penis due to constant rubbing and exposure and health related issues such as diabetes, hernia surgery, use of some antidepressants, multiple sclerosis, and other type of illnesses.

This desensitization often makes sex extremely challenging. Without a 100% feeling in the penis, its next to impossible to get truly aroused.

Worse, modern day sex drugs have absolutely no effect on sensation and are laden with side effects. They simply stimulate an erection by enhancing blood flow.

It's why most men are rarely satisfied after taking them and why Sensum+® users are always stocking up on more and couldn't be happier.

"We knew the science behind Sensum+® was there, but we never expected results like we're seeing. It's far exceeded our expectations" said a spokesperson for the company.

A STAGGERING 80% IMPROVEMENT IN SENSITIVITY

Researchers have conducted several clinical studies on Sensum+® and the results from the most recent are undoubtedly the most impressive.

A data analysis of three clinical surveys of 370 men showed that an amazing 80% of Sensum+® users experienced dramatic improvements while using the cream and as a result were aroused easier and a phenomenal boost in performance.

Additionally, 77.4% of men also reported much more satisfying climaxes, making sex for both them and their partners nearly 300% more satisfying.

"I have full feeling and sensitivity back in my penis. Everything feels better. My erections are harder, I'm more easily aroused, I can finally climax again. This stuff honestly works like magic in the bedroom. I couldn't be happier at 66!" raves one Sensum+® user.

HOW SENSUM + ® WORKS

Sensum+® is a new sex cream for men that's to be applied twice a day for the first two weeks then just once every day after.

There are no harmful side effects for either the user or partner. It also does not require a prescription.

The active ingredient is an organic compound known as cinnamaldehyde with a patented combination of sexually rousing extracts.

Research shows that as men get older, they often lose sensitivity to the penis.

Although very subtle, this desensitization can significantly hinder sexual performance and lead to serious problems with becoming aroused and staying/getting hard.

The cinnamaldehyde in Sensum+® is one of the only known ingredients to activate a special sensation pathway on the penis called TRPA1. Once activated, it restores tremendous sensation to the penis, stimulating arousal and powerful erections.

This would explain why so many users are experiencing impressive results so quickly and why the makers of Sensum+® offer their low cots cream with an amazing guarantee.

GUARANTEE DISCOUNTED SUPPLY TAKES RISK OFF CONSUMERS

A large percentage of men report life changing results with Sensum+®. That's why it is now being sold with an above-industry standard guarantee.

"We can only make this guarantee because we are 100% certain this cream works," says Esber.

"We want to take risk off the consumers. So besides offering massive discounts, we're also offering this guarantee, so they don't have to risk a cent."

Here's how it works: Use the cream exactly as directed and in just one week, you must feel a significant improvement in sexual sensations. You must be more easily aroused with harder, longer lasting erections and be having the best sex you've had in years.

Otherwise, simply return the empty bottles. Then, the company will refund your money immediately.

HOW TO GET SENSUM + ®

This is the official release of Sensum+®. As such, the company is offering a special discounted supply to any reader who calls within the next 48 hours.

A special hotline number and discounted pricing has been created for all Florida residents. Discounts will be available starting today at 6:00AM and will automatically be applied to all callers.

Your Toll-Free Hotline number is 1-800-965-9927 and will only be open for the next 48 hours. Only a limited discounted supply of Sensum+® is currently available in your region.

Consumers who miss out on our current product inventory will have to wait until more becomes available and that could take weeks. The company advises not to wait. Call 1-800-965-9927 today.

World Cup win gives France new set of heroes, needed boost

By ELAINE GANLEY
Associated Press

PARIS — The welcome was grand, the emotion visceral as France's victorious World Cup team rolled down Paris' Champs-Elysees Avenue in an open-top bus Monday while tens of thousands of people cheered with unrestrained pride and jets streamed the national colors — blue, white, red — overhead.

The crowd that waited for hours to greet the soccer team, under a hot sun and amid celebratory smoke bombs that choked the air, got its moment hours after the team returned from Russia to hoist the gold trophy on French soil for the second time in 20 years.

The national team's 4-2 win over Croatia on Sunday gave France a new set of heroes, many of whom represent the changing face of a diverse, multicultural country with which not all French citizens have yet reckoned.

The red carpet welcome for the World Cup winners continued at the Elysee Palace, where President Emmanuel Macron threw an informal garden party that had 1,000 children and 300 athletes from local soccer clubs as guests.

Many of the invited clubs are based in the poor neighborhoods French that produced the players who made up France's youthful, diverse World Cup team, including 19-year-old breakout star Kylian Mbappe. Members of the club he grew up with in suburban Bondy attended the party.

"Merci!" Macron, the youngest person to become France's president, told the guests. "This team is beautiful because it was united."

Addressing the team, Macron offered advice.

"Don't change," he said, adding, "Never forget where you come from."

Team captain and goalie Hugo Lloris, brandishing the trophy from soccer's eminent tournament, and coach Didier Deschamps led the team onto the red carpet at the Elysee courtyard. With Republican Guards standing motionless in full dress uniforms, the squad quickly broke into party mode for the official photos.

The victory came at a time when many French were in need of good news, and the magic provided a sense that a grand coming together might at least paper over political, economic and social fissures for a while.

"Eternal Happiness" read Monday's headline in French sports daily L'Equipe, summing up the mood of many who hoped the euphoria would last.

Before the reception, the Champs-Elysees became the epicenter of national pride for the third day in a row, following the post-World Cup celebrations that brought hundreds of thousands to the fame avenue Sunday and a Bastille Day parade of French military might Saturday.

The team appeared elated, too, during its victory lap on the bus Monday. Players threw scarves into the crowd and recorded the action.

Several Paris Metro stations were temporarily adjusting their names to honor the team and its members, the transport authority tweeted. The Champs-Elysees Clemenceau has become the Deschamps-Elysees Clemenceau to honor coach Didier Deschamps.

The Etoile station is, for now, "On a 2 Etoiles" (We have 2 stars), to denote France's second World Cup victory. The Victor Hugo station is now Victor Hugo Lloris, after France's standout goalie and team captain.

"We are linked for life now with this Cup," defender Raphael Varane told BFM-TV on Monday before departing from Moscow, evoking the theme of unity that French partiers have consistently evoked.

Macron exulted on the field in Moscow and in the locker room, hugging players as they received their medals even as the skies poured rain. The president clearly hoped the World Cup glow would rub off on him, raising him up in the eyes of a nation where his economic reforms have drawn fierce protests and labor strikes.

He meets Tuesday with business representatives and an eye on mobilizing them in needy neighborhoods of France.

It was the players, though, who captured the French imagination.

Sports Minister Laura Flessel, who met the team at the airport, told Europe-1 radio that the World Cup victory allows France's youth — like those in the poor suburbs where many of the players grew up — "to dare to believe in their dreams."

The patriotic fervor sparked by the World Cup did not prevent the vandalism and violence that sometimes accompany public celebrations in France. Broken shop windows and signs of looting lined a section of the Champs-Elysees. Authorities detained 90 people for questioning in the Paris region and some 290 around France.

MLB: Home Run Derby

Hometown hero Harper wins thrilling HR Derby

Washington Nationals Bryce Harper (34) reacts to his winning hit during the Home Run Derby Monday in Washington.

WASHINGTON — Bryce Harper thrilled the home crowd and surely made his father proud, winning the All-Star Home Run Derby on Monday night with an exceptional display of power that carried him past Kyle Schwarber of the Chicago Cubs 19-18.

Harper hit the contest-winning blast in extra time, the reward for hitting two homers at least 440 feet during the 4 minutes of regulation. After he connected with the game winner, the Washington Nationals slugger threw his bat in the air and pointed both index fingers toward the sky as a shower of streamers rained upon the crowd of 43,698.

The six-time All-Star arranged to have his dad, Ron, pitch to him in the annual contest on the eve of the All-Star Game. Harper responded with a performance that drew the loudest cheers of the night at Nationals Park.

It's been a trying season for Harper, who's hitting only .214 for the disappointing Nationals. He won a contest that many sluggers avoid, fearful it might wear them out and throw them off.

Harper can only hope this helps him get back into the swing.

The 2015 NL MVP beat Freddie Freeman of the Atlanta Braves and Max Muncy of the Dodgers before trumping the fifth-seeded Schwarber, who put the pressure on with a solid outing before Harper stepped to the plate.

Wearing a headband that resembled the District of Columbia flag and displaying a right sleeve with stars and stripes, Harper trailed 18-9 with 1:20 left before rallying. He homered on nine of his last 10 swings before entering extra time.

Hours before the session, Harper spoke excitedly about having his dad pitch to him in the contest. The 25-year-old said his father "worked his tail off every single day to provide for me and my family" and "now being able to have him throw to me in a big league ballpark is the cherry on top."

Harper advanced to the final with an astonishing spree of long-ball hitting. He trailed Max Muncy of the Dodgers 12-4 with 2:20 left, then peeled off six homers in 47 seconds before calling a timeout.

Harper returned to hit three more home runs in 22 seconds, the last of them inside the right-field foul pole.

The semifinal matchup between Schwarber and Philadelphia's Rhys Hoskins was a thriller. After stunning top-seed Jesus Aguilar of Milwaukee in the opening round, the eighth-seeded Hoskins ripped 20 long balls to put the pressure on Schwarber.

Using a late surge, Schwarber pulled one ball after another over the right field wall to squeeze out a 21-20 victory — by far the highest-scoring matchup of the night.

Russia's Artyom Dzyuba, front, and Spain's Sergio Busquets challenge for the ball during the July 1 round of 16 match between Spain and Russia at the 2018 World Cup at the Luzhniki Stadium in Moscow, Russia.

MOSCOW — Savor the thrills, unpredictability, and constant drama of this World Cup. Even FIFA accepts the soccer showpiece might never be so engrossing again.

Russia might have staged the last 32-team World Cup. Or at least the last one not shoehorned in a crammed format at the end of the calendar year.

FIFA has yet to definitively rule out adding another 16 teams in time for the 2022 World Cup in Qatar, but the leap to 48 teams will be happening for certain for the triple-hosted North American tournament in 2026. Welcome to 16 groups, each featuring three teams of which two advance to a round of 32.

Soccer leaders were seduced by the extra cash an expansion tournament would offer, but at the expense of the spectacle itself. Russia vindicated the 2016 internal FIFA briefing document that determined 32-team finals tend to produce the "highest absolute quality" on the field.

Here is a look at the winners and losers of the tournament which ended with France lifting the World Cup on Sunday after beating Croatia 4-2 in the final:

Russia

The lowest-ranked team at the finals, the hosts set the tone for the tournament by thrashing Saudi Arabia 5-0 in the opener. It wasn't a fluke as Stanislav Cherchesov's side unexpectedly qualified from its group and even eliminated 2010 World Cup winner Spain in the round of 16. It was only a successful penalty shootout away from reaching the semifinals.

As a tournament organizer, Russia also exceeded expectations. No one doubted Vladimir Putin's ability to mobilize the resources of the state to ensure operations ran smoothly. But police often adopted a relaxed approach to fans gathering on street corners and drinking in the streets. The hooliganism and racism that has scarred Russian football was absent.

Logistically, it was a triumph, but it will take longer to discover whether the changes in Russia were just camouflage for the tournament.

Heavyweights floored

Even as they celebrate their second World Cup title, the French should have a sense of dread.

Germany became the third holder from the last three World Cups to be eliminated in the group stage. Germany's demise was a combination of complacency, failing to strike the right balance blending the young and older generation, and a simmering row over the Turkish heritage of Mesut Ozil and Ilkay Gundogan.

Ronaldo at Juventus: Age isn't important

Portuguese ace Ronaldo salutes his fans as he arrives to undergo medical checks Monday at the Juventus stadium in Turin, Italy.

TURIN, Italy — At the age of 33, many football players are past their peak. Cristiano Ronaldo vows to show he is not one of them.

Juventus signed Ronaldo from Real Madrid last week for 112 million euros ($131.5 million) — an Italian league record sum — and the world player of the year penned a four-year contract.

Some see it as an extravagant sum for a player who, although a five-time Ballon d'Or winner, is entering the latter stages of a glittering career.

At his first news conference as a Juventus player on Monday, Ronaldo insisted he was motivated by a new challenge and keen to step out of his comfort zone after nine years at Madrid.

"With all due respect, usually players of my age go to Qatar or China, so coming to such an outstanding club at this stage in my career makes me very happy," he said.

"I'm different from all the other players who think their career is over at my age. I want to show that I'm not like the others, I'm different. It's an emotional moment for me because I'm not 23, I'm 33.

"I'm not here on holiday," he added. "I want to mark the history of Juventus. I hope I can surprise everyone one last time and I'm very, very confident."

Ronaldo has always been credited with a phenomenal workrate, and he has promised to continue that at Juventus in order to prolong his longevity.

The Portugal forward moved from Manchester United to Real Madrid in 2009, and became the Spanish club's all-time leading scorer with 451 in 438 matches. He helped Madrid win four Champions Leagues — beating Juventus in the final in 2017 — and also won La Liga and the Copa del Rey twice each.

Ronaldo, who also led Portugal to the European Championship in 2016, also won the Champions League at Manchester United as well as three Premier Leagues and the FA Cup.

He expects his winning ways to continue at the Serie A champion.

"It will be tough, I know that," Ronaldo said. "The league is very tough but Juve is ready and I will be ready. The age is not important. I feel good, I feel motivated. I will try to do my best like always. I'm looking forward to starting the league well and to try to win every title."

TENNIS: Wimbledon

Djokovic, Kerber, Williams each made a comeback at Wimbledon

Serbia's Novak Djokovic celebrates winning the men's singles final against Kevin Anderson of South Africa Sunday at the Wimbledon Tennis Championships in London.

LONDON — From champions Novak Djokovic and Angelique Kerber, to runner-up Serena Williams, this edition of Wimbledon was all about comebacks of various sorts.

When Djokovic won his fourth title at the All England Club and first at a Grand Slam tournament in more than two years by beating Kevin Anderson 6-2, 6-2, 7-6 (3) on Sunday, it was the culmination of what he called a "journey" and a "process" as he returned from surgery to his right elbow.

Kerber collected her first Wimbledon championship with a 6-3, 6-3 victory over Williams on Saturday to mark a turnaround from a rough 2017 that saw her slip from No. 1 in the rankings and deal with two first-round exits at majors.

"I'm still sure," said Kerber's coach, Wim Fissette, "that we haven't seen the best Angie."

And while Williams didn't win what would have been her eighth Wimbledon singles trophy, her run to the final just 10½ months after a difficult childbirth and complications involving blood clots served as, in Kerber's words, "such an inspiration for everybody, for all of us, for every person watching you."

Williams' loss left her with 23 Grand Slam titles, the most in the half-century of professional tennis and only one short of Margaret Court's record.

She can take a crack at that mark at the U.S. Open, which begins on Aug. 27 in New York.

"I didn't know a couple of months ago where I was, where I would be, how I would do, how I would be able to come back. It was such a long way to see light at the end of the road, kind of," Williams said. "So I think these two weeks have really showed me that, 'OK, I can compete.' Obviously I can compete for the long run in a Grand Slam."

TIEBREAKER TIME?

Anderson's 26-24 victory in the fifth set against John Isner in a semifinal that lasted more than 6½ hours was the second-longest Grand Slam match ever and renewed a debate about the rules: Should Wimbledon adopt a fifth-set tiebreaker? Currently, the U.S. Open is the only major that decides matches that way. "It absolutely needs to change," said Anderson's coach, Brad Stine.

WTA DEPTH

There's no question the depth in the women's game is as great as ever and there is a lot more room for trophy-collecting at the majors. Kerber's victory ended a stretch in which seven players split the previous seven Grand Slam titles, including first-time champs Simona Halep, Caroline Wozniacki, Sloane Stephens and Jelena Ostapenko. For the first time since Wimbledon began seeding players in the 1920s, none of the top 10 seeds reached the quarterfinals. It was also the first time that happened at any Grand Slam tournament in the Open era.

THE BIG 3

Men's tennis is back to having its Big 3 of Roger Federer, Rafael Nadal and Djokovic. Federer and Nadal had combined to win six majors in a row until Djokovic got back in on the action. Each member of that trio has been counted out in recent years, but they just keep on winning. All can excel on hard courts, Djokovic's best surface. So the next couple of months should be entertaining.

OLD GUYS

Djokovic, 31, and Anderson, 32, made this Wimbledon final the first in the Open era with a pair of men older than 30. Add in Nadal, 32, and Isner, 33, and it was the first quartet of thirtysomething semifinalists at any major in the past 50 years. Which means they all deserve kudos, but also raises the question: Where are all the young guys? No up-and-comers reached the quarterfinals. One breakthrough did come from Stefanos Tsitsipas, a 19-year-old from Greece who made it to the fourth round.

CYCLING: Tour de France

Froome happy as Tour heads for mountains

Britain's Chris Froome, rides in the pack during the eight stage of the Tour de France Saturday in Amiens, France.

ANNECY, France — Chris Froome believes the mountains will reveal the true Tour de France contenders as he looks forward to the first of three grueling stages in the Alps.

"I'm feeling good and optimistic about the upcoming stages," the four-time champion said on Monday, the Tour's first rest day.

Froome, who is eighth overall after nine stages, is 1 minute, 42 seconds behind yellow-jersey holder Greg Van Avermaet before the first Alpine stage on Tuesday.

Van Avermaet is not expected to be a threat in the mountains, and Froome suggested the Belgian "will find it difficult to hang on tomorrow. It's a proper climbers stage."

After an opening week of relatively flat routes, the first significant ascents begin with four categorized climbs as well as the punishing Montee du plateau des Gileres, which features a six-kilometer climb at an incline of 11.2 percent.

"It's a tough stage. It will definitely start shaping the GC," Froome said of the general classification.

Sky teammate Geraint Thomas is second overall, 0:43 behind Van Avermaet, meaning the team has two viable options to claim the yellow jersey over the second week of the three-week Tour.

"It's great for us to have those options to play when it comes down to it, especially looking at some of our rivals who have got two or three options in their team," Froome said.

"The team around us is such a capable group of guys, and we're really going to be coming into our element now in the mountains."

Petitions to offer online gambling in Pennsylvania roll in

By MARC LEVY
Associated Press

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Applications to operate casino-style gambling online in Pennsylvania were rolling in ahead of Monday's deadline for the state's casino owners to get a license at a discounted rate of $10 million.

The deadline arrived as Pennsylvania is in the midst of an aggressive gambling expansion as the state scrounges for cash to shore up its treasury.

Under a law signed late last year by Gov. Tom Wolf, Pennsylvania became the fourth state to legalize online casino gambling, joining Nevada, New Jersey and Delaware.

The Pennsylvania Gaming Control Board said Monday it had thus far received three applications for online gambling.

Those applications came from the owners of Parx Casino in suburban Philadelphia, Mount Airy Casino Resort in northeastern Pennsylvania and Live! Hotel and Casino, which is under construction in south Philadelphia's stadium district.

After Monday's deadline, owners of Pennsylvania's 13 casino licenses have another 30 days to apply, but they will pay a premium of $12 million to operate all three forms of online casino games — slot machines, table games and poker — or $4 million for an individual form.

Ultimately, the Pennsylvania Gaming Control Board could open up the licenses to other out-of-state operators if the state's casino licensees don't apply for them.

Pennsylvania's casinos rake in more gross revenues than any other state's except Nevada's, American Gaming Association figures show, while Pennsylvania is the No. 1 state in tax revenue from the casino industry, netting $1.4 billion in the 2016-17 fiscal year.

Lawmakers and Wolf last year approved legislation authorizing an aggressive gambling expansion that would make Pennsylvania the first state to offer both casino gambling and lottery gambling online.

In recent weeks, Pennsylvania began offering its Lottery games online and began regulating and taxing online fantasy sports games. The state also is in the process of awarding five new mini-casino licenses and writing regulations so that sports betting can begin, potentially before the National Football League's fall season begins on Sept. 5.

Spieth returns claret jug, faces tough task of winning it back

By DOUG FERGUSON
Associated Press

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland — Jordan Spieth figured someone from the R&A would be waiting for him when he pulled into the parking lot at Carnoustie to take back the silver claret jug. Instead, he was part of a ceremony with enough pomp to drive home the point.

His reign as British Open champion was over.

"The traditions of the Open are very special," Spieth said, "even if you're on the wrong end of that one."

This "tradition" is only a few years old, though typical of the august manner of this major, nothing was left to chance. Spieth was to arrive in a car provided by one of the R&A's sponsors, and as it drove slowly down a dirt path behind the grandstands on the first hole, cameras moved into position. The door opened and a woman slowly emerged from the back seat. That's where Spieth would be sitting. This was just a rehearsal to make sure the cameras had the right angle.

Moments later, an R&A employee asked people sitting in the right portion of the grandstands to move to the other side so it would appear fuller.

"It's the coolest trophy that our sport has to offer," Spieth said. "So having to return that was certainly difficult. Kind of hit me a little bit there on the tee box."

It's far more enjoyable to pose with golf's oldest trophy — it first was awarded in 1873 — at the 18th hole on Sunday, not the first hole on Monday. That's the task that awaits Spieth, and it figures to be a monumental one.

Only four players in the last 50 years have repeated as British Open champions, the most recent being Padraig Harrington in 2008.

More than history, it's the nature of Carnoustie that figures to be the stiffest challenge — or at least on Monday, the most mysterious one. A dry summer has turned the links into a combination of brown (fairways), yellow (wispy rough) and green on the tee boxes and putting surfaces.

That translates into the fastest conditions at an Open since Tiger Woods won at Hoylake in 2006. That was the year Woods hit only one driver — yes, he missed the fairway — and relied mainly on long irons off the tee because the golf ball was running forever.

Because the rough isn't up, and because it's difficult to judge how far shots will roll out on the fairways, the answer might be to just smash driver over the trouble. Jon Rahm said he planned to hit driver every day on the 396-yard opening hole.

Tommy Fleetwood, who shot 63 at a much different Carnoustie last year during the Dunhill Links Championship, was most perplexed when he reached the 350-yard third hole. It usually is a mid-iron off the tee and a wedge to the green. Now it's more like a 6-iron off the tee. Or maybe a 7-iron. And even that's not safe, because the undulations in the fairway could send the ball rolling until a pot bunker gets in the way.

"You feel like on such a short hole, you should have a chance at birdie," he said. "When actually, you can hit a 6-iron or 7-iron and it ends up in a fairway bunker."

Spieth couldn't speak to that because he had yet to see Carnoustie except on television in 2007, and he doesn't remember much of that, anyway. He was in France over the weekend to see the Ryder Cup courses, and he went to St. Andrews on Sunday as part of the Junior Open.

Port Huron to Mackinac Island race sees slow times

Associated Press

MACKINAC ISLAND, Mich. — The annual Port Huron to Mackinac Island sailboat race on Lake Huron turned out to be a slow one.

The Bell's Beer Bayview Mackinac Race started Saturday under light winds and the weather didn't make for quick progress. Most years the first boats make it across the finish on Sunday, but this year the first two finishers didn't reach the line until Monday morning.

Results posted online show Doug DeVos' Windquest was the first across, followed about a half-hour later by David and Peter Askew's Wizard/Intuition. Both boats took the Cove Island course. There were no finishers yet as of early Monday on the Shore Course.

Race organizers described the race as extremely slow and say they anticipate most boats won't finish. Winners are determined using a handicapping system.
