Young 'invincibles' not jumping to sign up

LIVI STANFORD | Staff Writer

After recently losing her job, Amanda Cuevas said she is not even considering signing up for health insurance under President Obama's Affordable Care Act.

"I couldn't afford it," the 31-year-old mother said, explaining that her priorities are providing for her children, who are covered under Medicaid. "I am trying to get by."

Cuevas is not alone. Several people, ages 18-34, known as "the young invincibles," interviewed this week, said signing up for the plan was not a priority while others said they were still thinking about it.

Indeed, the young demographic has become disenchanted with the president's signature health care law.

D'Andrea Poole, 19, holds her daughter Brooke. While she does not need to get coverage because she is insured through Medicaid, Poole said it is important that young adults sign up. But, she said, the process should simpler.

According to a fall 2013 Harvard Institute of Politics survey of 2,089 18- to 29-year-olds, conducted from Oct. 30 to Nov. 11, "a solid majority, 56 percent," disapprove of the Affordable Care Act.

"Less than three-in-ten uninsured Millennials say they will definitely or probably enroll in insurance through an exchange if and when they are eligible," the survey stated.

Senator to sue over snooping

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republican Sen. Rand Paul says he is filing a class-action lawsuit against the Obama administration over the data-collection policies of the National Security Agency. And on his website, he's urging Americans to join the lawsuit, in his words, "to stop Barack Obama's NSA from snooping on the American people."

In an interview airing Friday night on Fox News, the Kentucky Republican tells host Sean Hannity that he believes everyone in the U.S. with a cellphone would be eligible to join the class-action suit.

Paul says that people who want to join the suit are telling the government that it can't have access to emails and phone records without permission or without a specific warrant.

Paul says the lead lawyer in the suit is Virginia's former attorney general, Ken Cuccinelli.

'Polar vortex' to blast frigid air over US

CARSON WALKER
Associated Press

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. — The weather warnings are dire: Life threatening wind chills. Historic cold outbreak. Bitter cold temperatures.

Winter is normally cold, but starting Sunday tundra-like temperatures are poised to deliver a rare and potentially dangerous sledgehammer blow to much of the Midwest, driving temperatures so far below zero that records will shatter.

One reason? A "polar vortex," as one meteorologist calls it, which will send cold air piled up at the North Pole down to the U.S., funneling it as far south as the Gulf Coast.

The temperature predictions are startling: 25 below zero in Fargo, N.D., minus 31 in International Falls, Minn., and 15 below in Indianapolis and Chicago. At those temperatures, exposed skin can get frostbitten in minutes and hypothermia can quickly set in because wind chills could hit 50, 60 or even 70 below zero.

Temperature records will likely be broken during the short, yet forceful deep freeze that will begin in many places on Sunday and extend into early next week. That's thanks to a perfect combination of the jet stream, cold surface temperatures and the polar vortex — a counterclockwise-rotating pool of cold, dense

After fire, support streams in for Vic's Embers

MILLARD K. IVES | Staff Writer

With about 40 employees of Vic's Embers Supper Club left in limbo from a holiday fire, support has been pouring in from Leesburg businesses and residents.

To help the employees, Brooker's Bait & Tackle has scheduled a fish fry from 4 to 8 p.m. on Jan. 17 at the Leesburg Boat Club.

Camp Horizon has allowed Vic's Embers to use its kitchen so Vic's can continue to provide its regular food service to LifeStream Behavioral Center facilities in Lake and Sumter counties.

Outback Steakhouse and Wolfy's Restaurant, as well as Mission Inn Resort & Club in Howey-in-the-Hills, have offered to temporarily take on some Vic's Embers employees until they can get back to work at the fire-damaged restaurant

2013 ROAD KING

HOROSCOPES

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Jan. 4, 2014:

This year you have an unusual capacity to visualize your goals. You also might develop your sixth sense to the extent that you know who is calling even without looking at the caller ID. You seem to be more in tune with your environment than in the past. If you are single, you will know when you meet the right person. Have the courage to remain unattached until that point. If you are attached, your intuition allows you to read your sweetie in a new way. PISCES encourages you to break past conventional thinking.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You could have the intention of accomplishing certain errands only to toss that idea to the wayside. You might resist the urge to take the day off, but even at work you still might be found daydreaming. Head out early, if you can.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) See beyond the obvious. In a discussion, others will share what they really would like to do. Listen well. Encourage a friend to take a risk and go for what he or she wants. This person will appreciate your feedback.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Take time to share your plans and get feedback from an important friend or loved one. Schedule some time with a special person in order to get to know him and her better. Both of you will be happier for the experience.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Understand what is going on with someone you don't see regularly. You might decide to take the time to go visit this person. Don't forget the importance of maintaining eye contact. You will understand much more when you are together.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Reach out to a dear friend or loved one. This person seems to have a twinkle in his or her eye and a general sense of what to do. You naturally lead, but can you naturally follow? That ability could be the path to enjoying a friendship even more.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Keep your cellphone handy. It will seem as if nearly everyone you know is calling you, and perhaps even some people you don't know. Screen your calls and cut the texting. Happiness could surround a special person in your life.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Know that you do need to keep working to get through a lot of errands and paperwork. You might want to take off; however, it seems as though you can't afford to do this just yet. Keep at it, and you will find some free time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) When you feel spontaneous, you reveal more of the mischievous child within yourself. A loved one delights in your company when you are this expressive. Whatever the two of you plan to do, it will be enjoyable and fun for both of you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You'll finally land at home, and you might decide to enjoy a very quiet day. Consider going for a walk or getting some exercise. Schedule the day for you and your well-being. Others will benefit when they interact with the new, revitalized you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You might want to reach out to someone you care about, as this person makes a difference to you. Make plans to catch a movie together. You have been entertaining everyone else, and now it is time for you to have some fun.

AQUARIUS (Jan.20 -Feb. 18) Allow yourself to make that purchase you really wanted for Christmas but did not get. Make sure your budget can sustain the cost, though. In fact, you might discover something else that seems more appealing. Consider what bells and whistles you need.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) If you feel as if you are top dog today, you are right-on. Ask for what you want, and do what you want. Some of you will enjoy reading or watching a movie at home, while others will opt to socialize with friends.

Opening lead — king of diamonds.

When fate neglects to give declarer enough assets to work with, he can sometimes try to enlist the aid of the opponents to achieve his goal. This usually requires a smooth performance by declarer, and a good example is provided in today's deal.

West led a diamond against six hearts, and South saw at once that the slam would fail unless he could avoid losing two club tricks. Since there were very few holdings the defenders could have that would yield only one club loser (K-Q doubleton or the singleton king or queen with West, for example), South decided to add to his chances by giving the defenders an opportunity to go wrong.

Accordingly, at trick two he led a club to the ace, on which both opponents followed low. He then cashed the ace of spades, A-K of trumps and K-Q of spades, discarding two diamonds from dummy. After ruffing his last spade in dummy, the stage was set.

With fingers crossed, declarer now led a club. East won with the king but had to return a diamond, whereupon South discarded the jack of clubs as he ruffed in dummy to bring in the slam.

The key play occurred at trick two when declarer led a club to the ace. East could have defeated the slam by dropping the king under the ace, but he was hardly in a position to find this defense so early in the play.

Had declarer instead telegraphed his intentions by first stripping his own hand and dummy of spades and diamonds before cashing the ace of clubs, it would have been much easier for East to dispose of his king under the ace. West would then have been able to score two club tricks to set the slam.

To have the greatest chance of success, declarer's club play had to be made before East realized that the king was a hot potato.

YOUNG

Director John Della Volpe said in a statement that the results were indicative of young Americans' low approval of the president and Congress.

"Young Americans hold the president, Congress and the federal government in less esteem almost by the day, and the levels of engagement they are having in politics are also on the decline," he said.

On his way to the Lake-Sumter State College campus, Jessie Santos said signing up for health insurance was not at the top of his list.

"It is not important to me," he said. "I have a lot more busy things to do. It is just on the back burner."

Asked if he worries about getting sick, Santos shook his head, adding that he only gets sick once a year: a non-event for him.

According to healthcare.gov, those who do not sign up for coverage by March 31, 2014, will have to pay $95 per person a year or 1 percent of their gross income. That fee will be increased every year, the website states, amounting to $325 per person beginning in 2015 (or 2 percent of income), followed by $695 per individual in 2016 (or 2.5 percent of income).

Cuevas said she is concerned about the penalty, but said buying health insurance is not practical now.

While Mary Reed, 32, has health insurance, her husband does not.

"He hasn't bought it yet," she said, also citing financial difficulties.

The law, which went into effect Jan. 1, angered Reed.

"I don't feel people should be forced to do it," she said. "There are urgent care clinics for those (without insurance)."

"What happened to our free rights?" she asked.

As she exited the bus at LSSC, D'Andrea Poole held her 1-year-old daughter, Brooke, closely.

The 19-year-old LSSC sophomore said while she is covered by Medicaid, she said it is important young people sign up for coverage.

But signing up should be easier, she said.

"They need to make the process as simple as possible, especially if they want the younger adults to get involved," she said."They need to make it more accessible."

Poole said friends in her age group are nonchalant about signing up.

"Most of them don't go to the doctor," she said. "Even if they do, I am sure it is pretty expensive."

Cuevas cringes when thinking of the costs of going to a doctor without health insurance.

"When you get sick, if you have to go to the doctor, it costs a fortune," she said. "You are lucky to pay the bill."

The Affordable Care Act has already insured 3.1 million young adults who are allowed to stay on their parents' plans until age 26, according to the White House.

The law also "prohibits insurance companies from denying individuals under 19 years coverage based on pre-existing conditions," according to specifics on the law.

According to the Associated Press, There are numerous national campaigns from supporters and detractors of the health care law to sway "young invincibles."

If there are not enough young people signing up for health insurance, it could cause insurance rates to increase dramatically, the AP stated.

Currently, there are "18 million uninsured 19-36 year olds," according to the U.S. Census Bureau.

This group accounted for "40 percent of the uninsured population under the age of 65," the Census reported.

Ryan Hampton, 22, said he did not think twice about signing up for coverage with his family.

"You need health care," the Tavares resident said.

WEATHER

air, said Ryan Maue, of Tallahassee, a meteorologist for Weather Bell.

"All the ingredients are there for a near-record or historic cold outbreak," he said. "If you're under 40 (years old), you've not seen this stuff before."

Snow already on the ground and fresh powder expected in some places ahead of the cold air will reduce the sun's heating effect, so nighttime lows will plummet thanks to strong northwest winds that will deliver the Arctic blast, Maue said. And there's no warming effect from the Gulf to counteract the cold air, he said.

The cold blast will sweep through parts of New England, where residents will have just dug out from a snowstorm and the frigid temperatures that followed. Parts of the central Midwest could also see up to a foot of snow just as the cold sweeps in pulling temperatures to 10 below zero in the St. Louis area.

"The support has been overwhelming," said Victor Donahey III, who operates the restaurant with his father, Vic Donahey Jr.

Vic's Embers Supper Club, a landmark restaurant just outside Leesburg, was heavily damaged by a late-night fire on Dec. 26. Fire officials said that when they reached the U.S. Highway 441 restaurant, fire and smoke were shooting through the roof. The restaurant had just closed for the night and no one was in the building at the time.

The building sustained heavy fire, smoke and water damage. The fire did most of its damage in the kitchen area and attic, and burned a gaping hole in the roof that has been covered with a giant blue tarp. Workers this week restored electrical power to shed light in the building, which lit up a kitchen that is saturated in soot and debris.

"The whole kitchen is torched," said Pam Donahey, Vic Jr.s' wife.

Victor Donahey III, co-operator of Vic's Embers Supper Club in Leesburg, stands in the kitchen area of the restaurant, which was heavily damaged by a late night fire on Dec. 26. He hopes re-open the restaurant by July or August.

The State Fire Marshal is investigating.

Pam Donahey said they are talking with the insurance company to determine if the restaurant is salvageable. If so, Donahey III said he would like to reopen the restaurant in July or August.

In the meantime, support from local restaurants and residents has been encouraging.

"We are lost without our favorite restaurant. Any help you need, let us know," said Phyllis Simmons in a recent Facebook posting.

The restaurant recently celebrated its 25th anniversary, and that's been a lot of time to make friends in the business, Donahey III said. Even Lakeside Inn in Mount Dora and Eaton's Beach Sandbar & Grill in Weirsdale are offering to temporarily help out employees with jobs.

"They are going through a hard time right now and we want to offer our full support," said Bill Brooker from Brooker Bait & Tackle, and a longtime friend of Vic Jr.

Odds grow for yet another record year of Florida Lottery sales

JIM TURNER
The News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — Florida Lottery officials are boasting about record increases in sales as the Legislature debates if and how gambling should expand in the state.

The 25-year-old Florida Lottery announced Thursday that the pace of sales in scratch-off and terminal games like Powerball is running ahead of last fiscal year's record-setting $5 billion sales mark.

With sales at $2.6 billion from July through December, the agency projects sales will top $5.1 billion for the current fiscal year ending June 30, 2014. The estimated sales would rake in $1.43 billion for education, according to the Florida Lottery.

"The Lottery's sole mission is to sell tickets to generate additional funding for education. We are extremely proud that this unprecedented sales record will assist in furthering that goal," Lottery Secretary Cynthia O'Connell said in a release.

The sales numbers were released as lawmakers weigh the direction of gaming in Florida and consider opening the doors to Las Vegas-style casinos.

The voter-approved Lottery has steadily grown from $1.8 billion in sales in its first full year in 1989.

Road work expected to slow motorists

Staff report

Repairs to the Whitehair Bridge on State Road 44 over the St. Johns River, a major artery used by many Lake County residents to reach DeLand and the rest of Volusia County, will slow traffic for the next 160 days, the Florida Department of Transportation has announced.

Two lanes of traffic will be reduced to one, said Irina Lallemand, the FDOT's public involvement coordinator.

"Motorists should be on the lookout for new traffic patterns and automated signals allowing for single-lane travel over the bridge," she said.

The signals will run 24 hours a day.

The work — estimated to cost nearly $1.1 million — will begin Monday and be completed by early summer. Quinn Construction Inc. has the contract to do the job.

The FDOT also announced that motorists using U.S. Highway 441 in Lake and Orange counties should be aware of construction work planned over the next few months, running from just south of SR 44 near Mount Dora south to Willow Street in Orange County.

The $651,000 contract will see the creation of paved shoulders, installation of audible pavement markings, bus pad construction and drainage work. The contractor is Empower Construction.

The work is expected to take 110 days and be completed this spring.

Motorists should expect lane closures while the U.S. 441 work is going on, Lallemand said. Signs and message boards will be posted to warn travelers of reduced speed limits and lane closures.

Executions under Gov. Scott keep up fast pace

BRENDAN FARRINGTON
Associated Press

Scott is sending people to the death chamber at a pace seen only at one other time since the death penalty was reinstated in 1976 when eight people were executed in 1984 under Democratic Gov. Bob Graham.

TALLAHASSEE — Republican Gov. Rick Scott began 2014 the same way he spent much of 2013: signing a death warrant.

Scott's first order of business in the new year was to set a date for the execution of Juan Carlos Chavez, convicted of abducting, raping and murdering 9-year-old Jimmy Ryce in 1995.

Scott is sending people to the death chamber at a pace seen only at one other time since the death penalty was reinstated in 1976 when eight people were executed in 1984 .

Scott, who oversaw seven executions in 2013, would have matched Graham's record if the Supreme Court hadn't halted an execution scheduled for Dec. 3 to examine a new mix of drugs used in lethal injections.

In singling out Chavez, Scott continued his trend of designating the worst offenders as the first to have their death sentences carried out.

"I know signing a death warrant is one of the toughest jobs that the governor has to have, but it's an essential job and I am very grateful he did it in this case," Don Ryce, Jimmy's 70-year-old father, said on Friday.

For death penalty victims' families, some of whom wait three decades for a sentence to be carried out, Scott's stepped-up pace is a good thing.

"I believe in the principle that justice delayed is justice denied, and 30 years after the event is an intolerable period of time for the family of the victim to have to wait," he said.

went into a bedroom in the house and returned with a hunting rifle with a scope attached on the top. The rifle turned out to be a .30/.30 caliber Marlin, investigators said.

Frisch said he and Love continued arguing while Love had the rifle pointed downward, and Love fired. The bullet struck Frisch in the inside of the left knee, deputies said.

Frisch was taken to Florida Hospital Fish Memorial with non-life threatening injury, investigators said.

Frisch refused to press charges and, after an investigation, deputies determined the shooting was not intentional, reports show.

Frisch said Love is his visiting cousin from Ocklawaha and they have never lived together in the same home as a family.

MURDER

in St. Marys, Ohio.

A joint news release from St. Marys Police Chief Mark Ernst and Auglaize County Prosecuting Attorney Edwin Pierce stated they would decline further comment on the case.

Hoover was arrested Dec. 13 by the Seminole County Sheriff's office on a charge of being a fugitive from justice and returned to Ohio after waiving extradition, The Daily Commercial discovered.

Hoover appeared in court without legal counsel and has until Jan. 9 to hire an attorney or request a public defender. He is being held on $2 million bond, the Dayton Daily News is reporting.

Online court records show that Hoover was arrested on a charge of burglary, a second-degree felony, in April 1982 in Ohio, the Lima News is reporting. The online record showed the case was closed but did not state if Hoover was convicted.

Hoover has no records with the Lake County Clerk of Courts except for a minor traffic violation in 2010 that was dismissed with a judicial warning. He also has no record with the Florida Department of Corrections.

No details were available about the Reineke murder.

Anyone with any information should call St. Marys police at 419-394-2325.

LOTTERY

$1 to $25, are now available at more than 13,000 locations throughout the state.

From July through December last year, scratch-off games accounted for $1.57 billion in sales, up nearly 14 percent from the same period the previous year. The more expensive tickets, which offer the potential for large payouts and instant results, are top sellers, according to Lottery spokeswoman Meagan Dougherty.

The $25 per-ticket Millionaire scratch-off game, introduced in September 2012, has 25 top prizes between $1 million and $5 million.

Games such as Powerball and Florida Lotto — called lucky number drawings or terminal games — have accounted for just over $994,000 in sales from July through December, up 1.5 percent from the same period last year.

Powerball play dropped this year because a $587.5 million "monster jackpot" in November 2012 swelled the prior year's totals, Dougherty said.

Rescued Antarctic passengers resume trip home

ROD MCGUIRK
Associated Press

CANBERRA, Australia — An Australian icebreaker carrying 52 passengers who were retrieved from an icebound ship in the Antarctic resumed its journey home on Saturday after it was halted for a second potential rescue operation.

The icebreaker Aurora Australis had been slowly cracking through thick ice toward open water after a Chinese ship's helicopter on Thursday plucked the passengers from their stranded Russian research ship and carried them to an ice floe near the Aurora.

But on Friday afternoon, the crew of a Chinese icebreaker that had provided the helicopter said they were worried about their own ship's ability to move through the ice.

The Australian Maritime Safety Authority's Rescue Coordination Centre, which oversaw the rescue, told the Aurora on Friday afternoon to stay in the area in case help was needed.

But AMSA said the Aurora had been allowed on Saturday to continue its journey despite the Chinese ship Snow Dragon, or Xue Long in Chinese, remaining stuck in ice.

"The master of Xue Long has confirmed to AMSA that the ship is safe, it is not in distress and does not require assistance at this time," AMSA said in a statement.

The Aurora had been put on standby as a precaution while the Snow Dragon attempted to manoeuver through the pack ice during optimal tidal conditions early Saturday, AMSA said.

Idaho to take over operation of troubled privately-run prison

REBECCA BOONE
Associated Press

BOISE, Idaho — Idaho will take over the operation of its largest prison from one of the nation's biggest corrections contractors, abruptly ending an experiment with privatization at a facility that has been plagued by understaffing, multiple lawsuits and allegations of contract fraud.

The state is expected to begin running the 2,080-bed Idaho Correctional Center, located just outside Boise, over the next several months, as its $29 million-a-year contract with the Corrections Corporation of America expires on June 30. Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter made the announcement Friday, saying he is advising the state Board of Correction to shift focus from finding a new contractor to assuming control of the facility.

"In recognition of what's happened, what's happening, it's necessary. It's the right thing to do," said Otter.

CCA said that while there were "challenges" at the prison, it has and will continue to respond to the state's concerns. It said, "despite reported issues, there are overwhelmingly more positive things that have occurred at the facility during our partnership."

The move to end the contract comes months after an Associated Press report raised questions about how the Nashville, Tenn.,-based company was staffing the prison, and is part of a larger debate over whether prison privatization works.

OTTO KITSINGER / AP

> "A private prison corporation operates just like an old-fashioned HMO, where the less they spend the more they make. Typically they negotiate for a per diem per inmate. ... There's lots of ways to game the system, through contract violations and even just legal contracts to house easier inmates."
> Michael Hallett,
> University of North Florida professor of criminal justice

The private prison contractors over the past several decades have been brought in to run prisons, federal lockups and county-level jails. The number of inmates housed in state and federal facilities grew from 85,500 in 2000 to more than 128,000 in 2012, according to the U.S. Department of Justice.

Elsewhere, there's been pushback, with Oklahoma's corrections director resigning last year in a dispute over the growing use of prison privatization. Kentucky transferred about 400 female inmates out of a private prison in the state's Appalachian region last year after a scandal involving guards sexually assaulting inmates, and Hawaii transferred female inmates out of the same prison over similar allegations.

Last year, prison officials in Texas decided not to renew contracts with CCA for operating a state jail and a pre-parole transfer center amid declining inmate populations. And Hernando County, took over operations at their CCA-run jail in 2010 in the wake of a lawsuit from inmates who said they were sexually abused at the facility.

University of North Florida criminal justice professor Michael Hallett, who has written journal articles and a book on prison privatization, said the problems in Idaho reflect problems seen in private prisons elsewhere.

"A private prison corporation operates just like an old-fashioned HMO, where the less they spend the more they make," Hallett said. "Typically they negotiate for a per diem per inmate. ... There's lots of ways to game the system, through contract violations and even just legal contracts to house easier inmates."

Al-Qaida sweep in Iraq cities revives battleground

QASSIM ABDUL-ZAHRA
Associated Press

BAGHDAD — Two Iraqi cities that were strongholds of Sunni insurgents during the U.S. war in the country are battlegrounds once more after al-Qaida militants largely took them over, fending off government forces that have been besieging them for days.

The overrunning of the cities this week by al-Qaida's Iraqi branch in the Sunni heartland of western Anbar provinces is a blow to the Shiite-led government of Prime Minister Nouri al-Malik. His government has been struggling to contain discontent among the Sunni minority over Shiite political domination that has flared into increased violence for the past year.

On Friday, al-Qaida gunmen sought to win over the population in Fallujah, one of the cities they swept into on Wednesday. A militant commander appeared among worshippers holding Friday prayers in the main city street, proclaiming that his fighters were there to defend Sunnis from the government, one resident said.

"We are your brothers from the Islamic State in Iraq and Levant," militants circulating through the city in a stolen police car proclaimed through a loudspeaker, using the name of the al-Qaida branch. "We are here to protect you from the government. We call on you to cooperate with us."

Democrats breaking GOP's long lock on Florida's Cuban vote

MICHAEL J. MISHAK
Associated Press

MIAMI — For more than two decades, running for Congress in this sun-soaked capital of Cuban exiles has required two things: a Republican registration card and a hard line toward the Castro regime.

So when Joe Garcia became the first Cuban-American Democrat from the state to win election to the House in 2012, it signaled a crack in a critical GOP constituency.

In a break with the exile community, Garcia campaigned in support of loosening restrictions on Cuban-Americans who want to visit relatives on the island or send them money. Since taking office, he has pushed for U.S. trials of a Cuba-developed diabetes treatment and for easing travel rules for Cuban diplomats who visit the U.S.

Rep. Joe Garcia, D-Fla. speaks during a news conference on Capitol Hill in Washington.

And while Florida Republicans, including Sen. Marco Rubio, fumed when President Barack Obama shook hands with Cuban President Raul Castro last month, Garcia dismissed it as a simple courtesy.

"Sometimes a handshake is just a handshake," he said.

Not long ago, any gesture of comity toward Cuba's communist government would have been greeted in Florida with a closed fist — or a car bomb. But three generations on from the revolution, Garcia represents a new breed of Cuban-American, more interested in pragmatism than regime change and isolation.

That generational shift is at the heart of a realignment that could help change U.S. policy toward Cuba and reshape the political landscape in the country's largest swing-voting state.

The implications are particularly troubling for the GOP.

"It's very difficult for Republicans to win this state if they don't win a majority of the Hispanic vote," said Dario Moreno, at Florida International University.

under her old insurance plan so she didn't have the surgery. Under her new silver plan, she has a $1,600 deductible and pays a monthly $150 premium. The government also kicks in $226 each month.

She's one of more than 18,000 Floridians who signed up for health insurance. The Jan. 1 start date brings the most personal test yet for President Barack Obama's health care overhaul as patients begin to seek care, shifting the burden for implementing the law to insurance companies.

A surge in late applications trying to meet the Dec. 23 deadline, which was extended twice, has overloaded government agencies, creating stacks of yet-to-be-processed paperwork from people unsure about whether they have insurance. Health insurance companies complained they were receiving thousands of faulty applications from the government. That means early this year insured patients could go for a medication refill — or turn up in the emergency room — only to be told there is no record of their coverage.

Most of the patients in the exchanges are still waiting for ID cards, but hospitals can still treat those patients because their offices can verify benefits with insurers directly.

Lack of knowledge about Libya killed Stevens

Bravely working on the front lines of upheaval after the assassination of Libyan dictator Moammar Gadhafi, U.S. diplomats and security officers lost their lives to fatal assumptions.

An extensive report Sunday in The New York Times, led by reporter David D. Kirkpatrick, laid out the circumstances surrounding the four deaths in 2012, including Ambassador J. Christopher Stevens.

Republicans in Congress, including Rep. Doc Hastings, R-Wash., held hearings last May to blame the Obama administration for a cover-up of an attack by al-Qaida, and manifest failures by the administration to protect U.S. personnel in Benghazi.

The New York Times determined al-Qaida had nothing to do with the attack — one of many misunderstandings and misconceptions raised by the GOP in the run-up to the 2012 presidential election.

Instead, The Times found an explosive combination of tensions between layers of local militia groups in Benghazi, where the revolt against Gadhafi began.

The U.S. was operating on assumptions in unfamiliar territory about who was a friend or foe of any U.S. presence. They proved fatal when supposed allies were asked for local intelligence or, eventually, help.

An already dangerous and combustible atmosphere was ignited by a crude American-made video spread on YouTube that denigrated Islam in the eyes of the faithful.

A Muslim cleric in Benghazi had denounced the video and America to his followers days before the attack. A combination of local religious, political and economic tensions focused wrath at the U.S. compound in the midst of Benghazi.

Volatile local conditions between fragmented militias, not al-Qaida or any external group, were behind the attack. Local looters, not international terrorists, were present at the blaze, which killed the ambassador by smoke inhalation.

Hastings and his colleagues got no further than being mocked on "Saturday Night Live."

The fatal flaw was a lack of local knowledge about the local players in a dangerous setting, amid the lethal consequences of religious tensions easily exploited.

These are lessons the U.S. has not learned in several venues and war zones.

EDITORIALS

Editorials are the consensus opinion of the editorial board, not any individual. They are written by the editorial staff but are not signed. Local editorials are published Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

COLUMNS

Columns are the opinion of the writer whose byline and picture appears with them. They do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the newspaper, and are chosen to represent a diversity of views.

If you would like to submit a guest column on a local, state or national issue, email your submission to letters@dailycommercial.com, or mail it to Voices, P.O. Box 490007, Leesburg, FL 34749-0007.

Guest columns should be limited to 550 words in length. The writer also must submit a recent photo to be published with the column, as well as a brief biographical sketch.

HAVE YOUR SAY

The Daily Commercial invites you to write letters to the editor. Letters should be no longer than 350 words. They must be original, signed with the full name of the writer, and include the writer's address and telephone number for verification. We reserve the right to edit for length. Letters also will be edited for grammar, clarity, taste and libel. We accept no more than two letters per month from the same writer. No open letters, form letters or copies of letters to third parties will be published. We do not publish unsigned letters. Submissions are not returned. We retain the right to archive and republish any material submitted for publication.

OTHERVOICES

For the new year, let's all unplug

Mitch Albom

Detroit Free Press

Why do you think Apple spends what it takes to make a 90-second ad and run it everywhere? Its existence depends on people thinking virtual life is real life — and that they're not missing anything by becoming an iZombie.

Misunderstood. It's a word we use to make ourselves feel better. It's a virtual anthem to teenagers. And it is the latest marketing maneuver by Apple, which seeks to own Christmas in a way not even the Grinch imagined.

By now you have no doubt seen Apple's latest TV commercial (which actually is titled "Misunderstood.") It has been running all holiday season. At 90 seconds, it's hard to miss.

It depicts a family coming together for Christmas and one sweet-faced loner of a teenager (think the older brother from "Little Miss Sunshine") who is always on his iPhone.

When the family unloads the car, he's on the screen. When the family decorates the tree, he's on the screen. Sledding, skating, making snowmen — he's on the screen. Nobody gets too mad at him. Occasionally, family members tease him (a grandfather-type playfully tosses a towel in his face), but for the most part, the kid keeps returning to his device, and by halfway through the spot, parents are thinking, "Hey, I know this kid. He's our middle one, right?"

But then comes the kicker. With the family gathered in one room, the teenager turns off the TV, presses something on his phone, and the big screen alights with a video he has been making of family moments, behind the sparse and haunting singing of "Have Yourself a Merry Little Christmas."

The images are deliberately moving — children, family, snow angels, all seemingly shot by a professional cinematographer (which of course, the teen prodigy will one day be) — and by the end, the whole family is crying and hugging the "misunderstood" teen, whose face is sweet enough to forgive a felony, let alone missing precious holiday moments while working on something clearly more important — an iMovie of those moments.

It's brilliant — except for one thing. The movie ISN'T more important. It isn't OK that you exit real life.

But Apple is banking you will.

By manipulating the images and making the movie version of the family Christmas seem even more emotional than the real thing, it is playing on the heartstrings of a country whose citizens want more and more to be the stars of their own films. Facebook. Instagram. YouTube. Reality TV. They all play into this.

And an iPhone is portal to them all.

So Apple, perhaps sensing that holiday humanity might mean some pushback, cleverly launches a preemptive campaign, suggesting the teen you scold tomorrow may be creating something loving today.

Except, of course, that he's not.

The real-life teen is more likely texting a friend about how boring the family is, or checking the latest YouTube video of a rock band dressed as foxes, or playing "Angry Birds," or watching a season's worth of TV shows, or any one of a thousand distractions that keep real life at bay.

But that doesn't sell iPhones.

And when you realize that Apple's purpose is to sell stuff — not save Christmas — you have, much to Apple's dismay, figured it out.

So perhaps as the new year approaches, this ad could serve a purpose: Let's resolve NOT to do Apple's bidding. Instead, try the opposite. Vow to spend LESS time on a screen.

Less cell phone. Less iPad. Less iPod. Less Droid. Less Xbox. Less BlackBerry. Less Galaxy. Less Mac.

And, oh, yeah — yank that device from the over-immersed child. It's OK. If he wants to be Spielberg, he can go to film school.

And if you think I am overreacting to a TV ad, consider this: The average American apparently now spends more than 5 hours a day on a digital device, and 4 hours with the TV on. If you work or study eight hours a day, sleep eight hours a night, and commute at all, what time is left actually living life?

Overreacting? Why do you think Apple spends what it takes to make a 90-second ad and run it everywhere? Its existence depends on people thinking virtual life is real life — and that they're not missing anything by becoming an iZombie.

But we are missing something. Collectively, we already have missed lifetimes. An iPhone can't smile, hug, cry or share a memory. An iPhone can't bake, taste or pop champagne. An iPhone can't tell you the family stories — no matter how clever an editing program you have.

So this New Year's, try unplugging and just experiencing. Because, remember, if we agree with Apple that it's more important to record life than to live it, pretty soon all our holiday videos will look the same: a bunch of family members filming each other.

Jackets fall at Hickory Point

The dreams of an unbeaten season have come to an end.

Leesburg High School's boys soccer team lost two matches in second-round play on Friday at the 18th annual Hickory Point Invitational, the first two defeats for the Yellow Jackets this season.

In their opening match on Friday at the Hickory Point Soccer Complex, the Yellow Jackets fell to Harmony 2-1 and dropped a 3-1 decision to Tallahassee Chiles later in the day.

Against Harmony, Leesburg jumped out to an early lead with a goal by Lane Gonzalez off an assist from Uzi Hernandez. Harmony scored to tie at halftime.

In the second half, Harmony scored the winner and limited Leesburg to only one shot on goal.

Austin McDaniel made seven saves in goal for Leesburg, which fell to 12-2-1 following Friday's play.

In the nightcap, Clayton McDaniel scored the Yellow Jackets lone goal on a penalty kick with about five minutes.

The boys tournament championship will be decided at 10 a.m. today, with the girls title match set for noon.

BOYS BASKETBALL

Zac Ward scored 21 points and Zach Brock added a double-double Friday to lead Mount Dora Bible to a 74-42 win against Winter Park International Community.

Ward added eight rebounds for the Bulldogs, while Brock scored 15 points and dished out 10 assists in the win.

Lamar Smith added 16 points for Mount Dora Bible (11-4) and Daniel Johnson dropped in 10 points and grabbed six rebounds.

Thomas, Mussina await final word on Hall of Fame

CHICAGO — They faced off 96 times in a span of 17 years. Frank Thomas at the plate and Mike Mussina on the mound, one of baseball's most feared sluggers taking on one of the sport's smartest players.

There were warm summer days and brisk spring nights. Big games and small ones, everywhere from the Bronx to Chicago's South Side to Oakland on the West Coast.

It's a string that runs through the careers of two decorated players, who find out Wednesday if they are headed for one more honor, a spot in baseball's Hall of Fame.

"The quality of pitcher that Mike is, whoever it was on the other team, they always were aware of where Frank was," said White Sox manager Robin Ventura, who played with Thomas and Mussina. "It was good that we got to enjoy kind of those battles with those pitchers, because Frank was very good at it."

Thomas was one of the toughest outs in the majors during his heyday, hitting 524 homers and driving in 1,704 runs during a sparkling 19-year career spent mostly with the White Sox. Aptly nicknamed The NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. — With apologies to Florida State, the question must be asked: Can anyone out there play defense?

The Seminoles come into the BCS title game ranked first in the country in points allowed.

Auburn and the rest of them? Pretty much every one-liner about busy scoreboard operators and video-game line scores applies.

"Back in the day, games were decided 10-3 and that was great stuff and hopefully we can get back to that."

Terrance Plummer
UCF linebacker

Including Tuesday night's Chik-fil-A bowl, there have been nine games this season involving teams from BCS automatic-qualifier conferences that produced 100 or more points, according to STATS. Included among those: Auburn's 59-42 win over Missouri in the Southeastern Conference title game.

As for anything resembling the "Game of the Century" — the 1946 classic between No. 1 Army and No. 2 Notre Dame that ended in a 0-0 deadlock:

"That's an impossibility. That won't happen," Oklahoma defensive coordinator Mike Stoops said. "It's trickling down now to where all the Southeastern Conference teams have parts or variations of spread offenses. They're very difficult to defend because of the space on the field, and then the quarterbacks running with the ball makes it even more challenging."

The over-under for Monday night's title game, despite Florida State's nation-leading 11.1 points-per-game allowed, is 67½.

The average over-under for this season's bowl games: 58. Through the first 30 games of bowl season, winners averaged 34.6 points.

"Back in the day, games were decided 10-3 and that was great stuff and hopefully we can get back to that," said Central Florida linebacker Terrance Plummer, a few days before the Knights topped Baylor 52-42 in the Fiesta Bowl. It was the third bowl game this season to produce more than 90 points.

But Plummer's vision probably won't materialize anytime soon, at least not with the way the numbers are trending.

Thanks to the influx of spread offenses that don't huddle, along with a rapid-fire substitution patterns and more athletic quarterbacks, defenses have been taking an increasingly steady drubbing over the past decade or so.

Teams in automatic-qualifier conferences averaged 30.8 points per game this season, according to STATS, continuing an upward trend from that dates to 2006, when the big schools averaged 25.4 points per game.

And by "big schools," that includes some of the most hallowed programs in football.

Remember tough-nosed Big Ten football? This year, the conference's marquee matchup produced this score: Ohio State 42, Michigan 41. So much for three yards and a cloud of dust. Another Michigan final from this season: Wolverines 63, Indiana Hoosiers 47 — in football, not hoops.

The Auburn-Alabama game, another bastion of old-time, grind-it-out football, was a 34-28 blockbuster this season, capped by arguably the most memorable play in the sport's history — Chris Davis' 109-yard return of a missed field goal with no time left in regulation.

That was once-in-a-lifetime.

Some of these other 2013 final scores are simply routine:

■ Duke 58, Pittsburgh 55

■ Arizona State 62, USC 41

■ SMU 55, Rutgers 52

The list goes on. It cuts across virtually all the big conferences, led by the Pac-12, where teams averaged 33.5 points a game this season — 6.5 more than they did only five years ago. That's an increase of 24 percent.

Over the 30 bowl games played through Thursday night's Sugar Bowl (Final: Oklahoma 45, Alabama 31), Louisville was one of only four teams to hold its opponent to single digits.

Auburn will come into the title game ranked a mediocre 38th in points allowed (24 per game) and a downright bad 88th in yards allowed (423.5).

"We have got terrible-looking overall statistics and some of them are not misleading," Auburn defensive coordinator Ellis Johnson said. "But we make critical stops at critical times and we're good on third and fourth down percentage and good in the red zone and good in the fourth quarter."

Big Hurt, the 6-foot-5 Thomas also had a .301 batting average, .419 on-base percentage and a .555 slugging percentage for his career, numbers that stack up favorably when compared to some of the biggest names in Cooperstown.

"I think I've done enough to be a first-ballot Hall of Famer," he said a year ago at the White Sox fan convention.

Mussina, a native of Williamsport, Pa., was one of baseball's most consistent pitchers during his 18-year career with the Orioles and Yankees, recording at least 18 victories in six seasons and winning at least 11 games in each of his last 17 years in the majors. A seven-time Gold Glove winner, he finished with a 270-153 record and a 3.68 ERA while pitching in the challenging AL East.

"Looking back at the whole thing for 18 years, when it was my turn to pitch, I went out and pitched, most of the time," said Mussina, who has an economics degree from Stanford. "I never had surgery. I never had major stints on the disabled list.

"I'm proud of being able to do that."

The thread that unites the hulking slugger and pitcher's pitcher is 82 official at-bats from Aug. 4, 1991 to April 2, 2008. It's the highest total for Thomas against a single pitcher, and he had a .366 career average and nine homers versus the durable right-hander. But Mussina won his share of the battles, too.

So while Thomas stays quiet ahead of the announcement of the writers' Hall ballot — he declined an interview request made through the team — a look at five days over the years provides a glimpse into what made the Columbus, Ga., native and Mussina strong candidates for baseball's highest honor.

AUGUST 4, 1991

Ask Hal Baird about Thomas, and the retired Auburn baseball coach can recite story after story about one of his favorite former players.

Thomas got a late start to his baseball career at the school because he also played tight end on the football team. Baird wasn't exactly sure what to expect when he finally joined the team, but Thomas quickly answered any questions he had.

"He came out the first day. It was a little bit cold and we were standing behind the cage getting ready to take some batting practice," Baird said. "I watched his swing about three times and I told my assistant coach who worked with the hitters, I said 'Leave this kid alone. He needs no help whatsoever. Let's just make sure he gets to the ballpark on time.'"

Mussina learned all about Thomas' potent swing when the pitcher made his major league debut for Baltimore. Thomas' one-out drive to left on a 2-1 pitch in the sixth was the only run allowed by Mussina over 7 2-3 innings in a 1-0 loss to the White Sox.

MAY 15, 1992

Mussina is on his way to establishing himself as one of baseball's best pitchers when he runs into Thomas again. Thomas reaches on a leadoff single in the second, but he grounds out to third twice before Mussina leaves after throwing 8 2-3 innings of four-hit ball in Baltimore's 2-0 win.

Mussina improved to 5-0, and went on to an 18-5 record with a 2.54 ERA. It was business as usual for Thomas, who finished the year with a .323 batting average, 24 homers and 115 RBIs.

"Did I hope that that was going to lead to more victories? Yes, but did it mean that I knew what I was doing automatically? No, I had a lot to learn," Mussina said, remembering that breakout 1992 season. "I kept learning until the day I stopped playing."

MAY 27, 1994

It seemed as if no one could stop Thomas at this point, who won consecutive AL MVP awards in 1993 and 1994. On this date, he hits Mussina's first pitch of the eighth inning over the wall in right-center for his 18th homer, helping Chicago to a 3-0 victory.

Thomas and the White Sox were on top of the AL Central and Mussina had the Orioles in second in the East when a players' strike wiped out the rest of the season.

"I think we had the best team in baseball, no doubt about it," Thomas said when he announced his retirement in 2010. "Some people consider Montreal the best team, but I think the Chicago White Sox were the best team."

JUNE 10, 2006

Thomas gets Mussina one last time, connecting on a full-count pitch in the first inning of Oakland's 5-2 victory over New York. It was his 16th homer on his way to 39 in a renaissance for Thomas with the Athletics, and the last time he takes Mussina deep.

Mussina goes on to win 15 games as the Yankees grab the AL East title for the ninth straight season. Thomas helps the A's win the West, but both teams lose to Detroit in the playoffs.

APRIL 2, 2008

The final duel came with one out in the sixth inning of Mussina's first start of his final season. He hit Thomas to put two runners on for Toronto.

While Thomas waited two years to announce his retirement, Mussina knew all along that 2008 was his final season. He pitched six shutout innings in his final game in Boston to run his record to 20-9, making him the oldest first-time 20-game winner ever.

"It was my time to stop and I stopped and I have no regrets," said Mussina, who was 39 when he was walked away. "I never look back. I never thought about playing again."

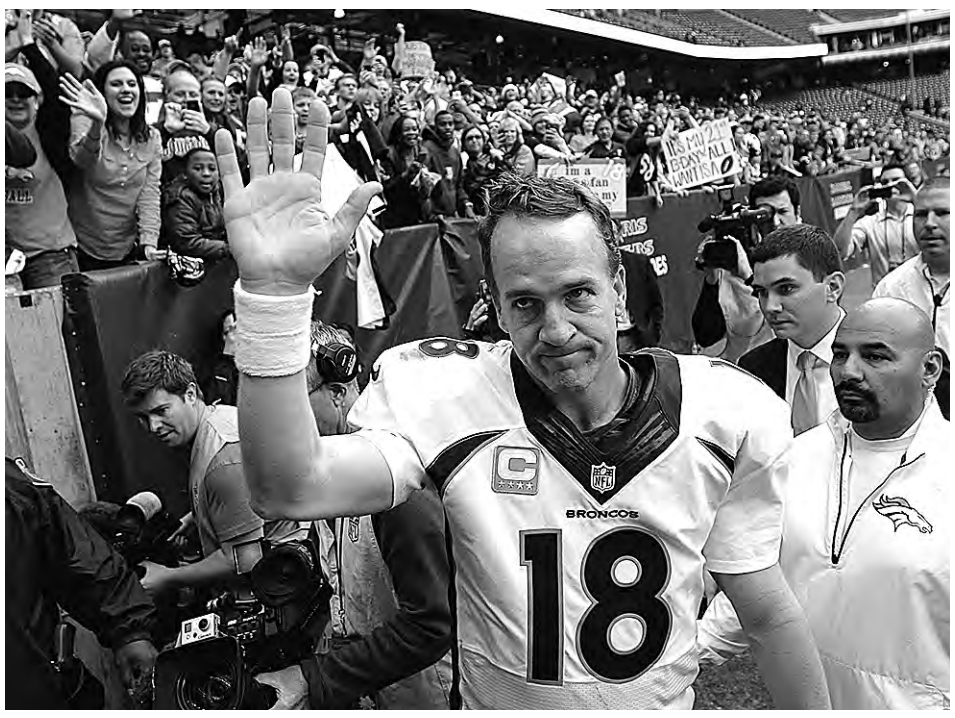
Manning is only unanimous All-Pro choice

BARRY WILNER
Associated Press



DAVID J. PHILLIP / AP

Denver's Peyton Manning waves to fans on Dec. 22 following a game against Houston. Manning was the only unanimous choice for the 2013 Associated Press NFL All-Pro team Friday. It was his seventh time as a first-teamer, tying Hall of Famer Otto Graham for the most by a quarterback.

NEW YORK — Peyton Manning has responded to a lost season the way he reacted to all of his great seasons.

By having more great seasons.

Manning was the only unanimous choice for the 2013 Associated Press

NFL All-Pro team Friday. It was his seventh time as a first-teamer, tying Hall of Famer Otto Graham for the most by a quarterback.

The Denver star set NFL records this season with 55 touchdown passes and 5,477 yards through the air.

He was chosen on all 50 ballots from media members who regularly cover the NFL. Manning also was an All-Pro for Indianapolis in 2003, '04, '05, '08 and '09 and last season made it as a Bronco. He's been on the All-Pro team in both seasons since missing 2011 after several neck surgeries.

"I think it's well documented that this is the second chapter of my career, and didn't know what to expect off that injury and new team, new players and new physical state after an injury," said Manning, a four-time league MVP who never missed a pro start before 2011. "So I had no idea what to expect, and I've put a lot of time and a lot of hard work in to it. But I've received a lot of help along the way from coaches and trainers and strength coaches and teammates. So I'm very grateful."

Manning still has a ways to go to set the record for most All-Pro appearances at any position. Among the players ahead of him is Hall of Fame receiver Jerry Rice with 10.

New Orleans tight end Jimmy Graham and Indianapolis outside linebacker Robert Mathis each drew 49 votes. Philadelphia running back LeSean McCoy and Seattle cornerback Richard Sherman had 48.

Minnesota kick returner Cordarrelle Patterson was the only rookie on the squad.

Eighteen NFC players and nine from the AFC made the team. Carolina and Philadelphia each had three: linebacker Luke Kuechly, center Ryan Kalil and fullback Mike Tolbert for the Panthers; NFL rushing leader McCoy, guard Evan Mathis and tackle Jason Peters for the coach Chip Kelly's Eagles.

"Just when Chip came here, we knew we were going to run the ball," McCoy said. "The linemen, they've all been healthy this whole year. They've been blocking so well for me and without those guys, it's not possible."

Only two members of the top teams in each conference made the All-Pro team. Joining Manning from the Broncos (13-3) was guard Louis Vasquez. Joining Sherman from the Seahawks (13-3) was safety Earl Thomas.

"It is very special, especially in a special season," Sherman said. "If you're having a special season and your team has four wins or five wins, I'm sure it doesn't feel as good. But when your team is winning, your defense is No. 1 in every category and you're just contributing, you're not even trying to do anything special individually, you're just contributing to the entire group. It really feels special. And with the chance to do what we have a chance to do this year, it would be fantastic."

Unlike Sherman, many of the players chosen did not enjoy huge team success this season: 12 of the 27 failed to make the playoffs.

Rounding out the offense were receivers Calvin Johnson of Detroit and Josh Gordon of Cleveland; running back Jamaal Charles of Kansas City; and tackle Joe Thomas of Cleveland.

Other All-Pros on defense were ends J.J. Watt of Houston and Robert Quinn of St. Louis; tackles Gerald McCoy of Tampa Bay and Ndamukong Suh of Detroit; outside linebacker Lavonte David of Tampa Bay; inside linebacker NaVorro Bowman of San Francisco; cornerback Patrick Peterson of Arizona; and safety Eric Berry of Kansas City.

The special teamers were Patterson, kicker Justin Tucker of Baltimore and punter Johnny Hekker of St. Louis.

One of 15 first-time All-Pros, Kuechly was last season's Defensive Rookie of the Year.

"It's an individual award, but it's a representation of the team," he said. "You got to always remember that you have four guys in front of you. You got the other linebackers, the coaches and the DBs behind you that make everything possible."

Overall, 16 clubs were represented on the All-Pro team: Denver, Kansas City, Cleveland, Baltimore, Houston and Indianapolis in the AFC; Philadelphia, Carolina, Seattle, Detroit, St. Louis, Tampa Bay, New Orleans, Arizona, Minnesota and San Francisco in the NFC.

Colts try to tamp down pressure for Chiefs game

MICHAEL MAROT
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Colts coach Chuck Pagano has kept it loose all week.

He's been cracking jokes, encouraging laughter and trying to put football in perspective. He does not want today's playoff game to change the routine, so he is imploring the Colts to make this business as usual — even with the Chiefs coming to town for a wild-card game.

Pagano has seen what happens when teams play tight. So have Colts fans, more times than they care to count.

It's not easy making a playoff week seem normal.

There are all sorts of potential distractions — ticket requests, travel plans, holiday celebration, even unforeseen medical emergencies. Last year, just before their wild-card game at Baltimore, Colts offensive coordinator Bruce Arians was hospitalized. Indy managed only three field goals in a 24-9 loss as a bunch of Colts made their postseason debuts; Arians turned out to be OK and wound up getting hired by the Cardinals.

But the Colts' youngsters learned some key lessons that have helped this time around.

Coach Andy Reid and new general manager John Dorsey followed the same plan Pagano and Ryan Grigson used to rebuild the Colts — new coach, new GM, new quarterback, new roster. Kansas City, like the Colts, went from 2-14 to 11-5 and back to the playoffs with nearly two dozen first- or second-year guys.

Former Colts coach Tony Dungy usually told players something else — most playoff games are lost rather than won and the teams that fare best stick to the plan. Translation: Trying to do too much will only get you and your teammates in trouble.

Many of Dungy's pupils, including NFL sacks champs Robert Mathis, still abide by that philosophy. Mathis has spent the last two Januarys telling teammates all they really have to do is match their opponents' intensity, pay attention to the details, do their jobs and trust teammates to do theirs — the same approach Indy has used all season. But when it comes from the mouth of someone who has played in Super Bowls and won one, the words carry more clout.

Exhibit 1 came in the last playoff meeting between these teams.

Back in January 2007, Indy's heavily maligned run defense faced one of the most feared rushers in football, Larry Johnson. Instead of being run over, Mathis & Co. limited Johnson to 32 yards on 13 carries, won 23-8 and a month later won the Super Bowl in rainy Miami.

Saints' Payton seeks homecoming win

ROB MAADDI
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Sean Payton has plenty in common with the some of the fans who'll be rooting hard to see his team lose.

Payton is coming home when the New Orleans Saints (11-5) visit the Philadelphia Eagles (10-6) in an NFC wild-card playoff game Saturday night. The Saints coach spent his formative years in the Philadelphia suburb of Newtown Square in the early 1970s, and attended the Flyers' Stanley Cup championship parade as an 11-year-old in 1975.

"There are a lot of friends and family back there," he said. "The first pro football game was at the Vet. The first baseball game was at the Vet. The first college game was Army-Navy. The Flyers winning back to back Stanley Cups, all of those things were a part of my childhood and so the sports fans are amazing there, very passionate and a real die-hard fan base. That presents challenges when you play, especially in the playoffs."

Payton got his first coaching job in the NFL on Ray Rhodes' staff in Philadelphia in 1997-98, and then joined the Giants in 1999. He moved on to work under Bill Parcells in Dallas before going to the Saints and leading them to a Super Bowl title.

Payton has one fan on the opposing sideline.

"Sean does a great job of getting his playmakers in matchups that are favorable to him, and he does it week in and week out," Eagles coach Chip Kelly said. "There's a consistency to it, and I think they missed him a year ago, and now that he's back, they seem like they picked up where they left off. I think how well him and Drew (Brees) work together is a pretty special thing to watch.

The Saints were 8-0 in the comfort of the Superdome and 3-5 away from home this season. They've never won a playoff game on the road, going 0-5, 0-3 under Payton. However, they won the 2010 Super Bowl outdoors, beating Peyton Manning and the Colts in Miami. Temperatures are expected to be in the low 20s at Lincoln Financial Field.

The Eagles have lost six home playoff games since 1981.

"Obviously we don't have a chance to practice in it," Brees said. "We've all played in that kind of weather before, not on a consistent basis, but you just kind of make the preparations. You try to prepare for it as best as you can, but once you're there, it's football. It's about execution. It's about knowing your assignments and executing it. Whatever the conditions are, you manage that, whether it's wind, rain, snow or whatever."

MATT ROURKE / AP

Philadelphia's LeSean McCoy, center, runs a drill during practice at the team's training facility on Wednesday in Philadelphia. The Eagles host the New Orleans Saints today in a wild-card playoff game.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Oklahoma beats Alabama 45-31 in Sugar Bowl

BRETT MARTEL
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — In the final year of the BCS, Oklahoma coach Bob Stoops won the one major bowl that had eluded him, and proved a point about parity in the process.

After taking the past month to cultivate a young quarterback who was still coming into his own, Stoops brought a confident and motivated Sooners squad to the Sugar Bowl, where they stunned 16-point favorite Alabama 45-31 on Thursday night.

Freshman Trevor Knight completed a Sugar Bowl-record 32 passes for 348 yards and four touchdowns for 11th-ranked Oklahoma, outshining Heisman Trophy runner-up AJ McCarron, who saw his otherwise charmed college career come to a sour end with No. 3 Alabama.

The convincing victory also gave Stoops an I-told-you-so moment, backing up his comment last offseason that the gap between the Southeastern Conference and other top leagues like the Big 12 is not as great as some "propaganda" makes it out to be.

"I have the utmost respect for Alabama, and I think this shows that obviously we can play with anybody," Stoops said. "So, enough of that. And I just watched them go through their entire conference and play pretty well. I'm not pointing any fingers. But I think sometimes the comparisons aren't necessarily very true."

Oklahoma quarterback Trevor Knight (9) passes against Alabama during Thursday's Sugar Bowl in New Orleans. Knight passed for 348 yards and four touchdowns in Oklahoma's 45-31 victory.

Stoops became the first coach to win all four BCS bowl games, having already won the Orange, Rose and Fiesta bowls.

Before the game Stoops had provided an element of mystery by declining to say whether he would start Knight or junior Blake Bell, or how much he'd play either one.

Alabama led 7-0 — having scored on the opening drive — before Stoops made his decision know by sending Knight out with the offense for Oklahoma's first series. Knight had played behind Bell much of the season. His completion percentage entering the game was 52.2. He had completed 47 passes all season — before a breakout performance in which two of his TDs went for more than 40 yards.

"It's huge for our program, to get a win like this after no one gave us a chance all year," Knight said. "We've got to ride this into next year. We can't settle with this. ... We want the big one."

Oklahoma (11-2) needed him to play that well in the 80th Sugar Bowl, the first in which quarterbacks for both teams threw for more than 300 yards.

His Big 12 team vanquished an Alabama (11-2) squad that had been ranked No. 1 much of the past three seasons, winning the previous two national titles before its shot at a third straight was derailed by Auburn on the last play of the Iron Bowl in late November.

Coach Nick Saban didn't find his team, favored by 16 points, was too deflated from its loss to Auburn to play up to its standard.

"I actually thought that the players responded in practice pretty well for this game," Saban said. "We put over 500 yards of offense up. Somebody had to do something right. I don't think that we played as well on defense as we're capable of or should have."

McCarron passed for 387 yards and two TDs, but his two interceptions set up Oklahoma TDs. He was also sacked seven times, fumbling on the last one, and Geneo Grissom returned his second recovery of the game 8 yards for a score, sealing Alabama's first two-game skid since its Sugar Bowl loss to Utah in January 2009.

"Put it all on me. I had two turnovers, (Oklahoma) ended up scoring 14 points, and we lost by 14," said McCarron, who won 36 of his first 38 games before losing his last two. "I wish it wouldn't have happened, but I'll definitely take the loss and definitely take the blame, because a lot of it is probably my fault."

Freshman Derrick Henry's 43-yard run in the third quarter pulled Alabama to 31-24. But Alabama was unable to add another score before Knight found his groove again.

He lofted a perfect pass to Lacoltan Bester for a 34-yard gain to the Alabama 9. Shortly after, Knight rolled left all the way to the sideline before rifling a touchdown strike to Sterling Shepard, making it a two-touchdown game again with 10:44 left.

Henry pulled Alabama within a score once more when he turned his first career reception into a tackle-shedding 61-yard TD with 6:22 to go, but Oklahoma didn't fold.

Early on, Alabama looked sharp, leading 7-0 when T.J. Yeldon scored from the 1.

Soon after, Landon Collins intercepted Knight's tipped pass, but Oklahoma got it right back on Gabe Lynn's interception on the next play. One play later, Knight found Bester for a 45-yard score.

Jalen Saunders first TD reception from 8 yards out gave Oklahoma a 14-10 lead, but McCarron's 67-yard TD to DeAndrew White gave the Tide the lead right back.

With the game tied at 17, Alabama appeared on the verge of another go-ahead score when Yeldon fumbled on the 8. Instead, Oklahoma took the lead for good when Knight hit Saunders in stride down the right sideline for a 43-yard score.

Baylor coach Briles says 'no desire' for other job

STEPHEN HAWKINS
Associated Press

Baylor coach Art Briles said Friday he has no desire to pursue another job and plans to lead the defending Big 12 champion Bears into their new stadium next fall.

With his name linked to the opening at Texas, and speculation increasing after the Bears' most successful season ever, Briles sent a tweet on his account that read "Contrary to reports and rumors I am a Baylor Bear — 2013 Big 12 Champs." The school later released a statement from the coach.

"As I've said many times, I am both humbled and honored to be the head coach at Baylor University, and believe we have something special going here," Briles said. "I look forward to leading the Bears onto the field next fall at McLane Stadium and defending our Big 12 championship that our players and coaches worked so hard to win this season. "

The sixth-ranked Bears finished 11-2 after losing 52-42 to No. 15 UCF on Wednesday night in the Fiesta Bowl, their only Bowl Championship Series appearance. They finished the regular season with a 30-10 win over Texas to clinch their first Big 12 title, Baylor's first outright conference title since the 1980 Southwest Conference.

Baylor head coach Art Briles (left) greets Central Florida coach George O'Leary at midfield after Wednesday's Fiesta Bowl NCAA in Glendale, Ariz. Briles announced Friday that he has no plans to leave Baylor.

"There is tremendous excitement for our program's future, and I look forward to many more great seasons at Baylor," Briles said. "There is tremendous commitment from our university leadership, athletic administration, coaches and student-athletes — it truly is a great time to be a Baylor Bear."

Baylor next season moves into a new $260 million stadium on the Waco campus.

Briles in November agreed to a new 10-year contract through 2023, though the 58-year-old coach had already been signed for multiple seasons past this year. He is 44-32 at Baylor, and this season was the unanimous pick as AP All-Big 12 coach of the year.

The private school doesn't reveal financial terms, but the new deal was reportedly worth more than $4 million a season.

When Briles arrived at Baylor six years ago, the Bears had just finished their 12th consecutive losing season under four coaches since the inception of the Big 12.

Baylor is 29-10 over the past three seasons, a stretch that began in 2011 with Robert Griffin III winning the Heisman Trophy before being the No. 2 overall pick by the NFL's Washington Redskins. The Bears have been to four consecutive bowls for the first time in school history.

Briles went to Baylor from Houston, where he was 34-28 in five seasons (2003-07). The Cougars were 0-11 two seasons before he arrived, but Briles led them the 2006 Conference USA championship and four bowl games.

Florida CB Roberson declares for NFL draft

Associated Press

GAINESVILLE — Florida cornerback Marcus Roberson is leaving school early and entering the NFL draft.

Roberson, a 6-foot, 195-pound junior from Fort Lauderdale, announced his intentions Friday. He joins defensive tackle Dominique Easley and cornerback Loucheiz Purifoy as Florida players who left school early this season to pursue NFL careers.

Gators coach Will Muschamp says it was a pleasure watching Roberson "mature and develop both on and off the field."

Roberson played in seven games, with four starts, as a junior. He had 11 tackles and three passes defensed. In three seasons, he had 56 tackles, 17 pass breakups and three interceptions.

Roberson says he can "truly appreciate everything that is in place here for players to be successful and have an opportunity to play at the next level."

RICK REED / SPECIAL TO THE DAILY COMMERCIAL

This Sunday, Journey Christian Church of Apopka will officially launch its first multi-site venue at the Mount Dora High School auditorium.

Mount Dora becomes site of Journey Christian Church

RICK REED
Special to the Daily Commercial

The Journey continues.

A fast growing Apopka church is reaching out to the Mount Dora area in a big way. This Sunday, Journey Christian Church of Apopka will officially launch its first multi-site venue at the Mount Dora High School auditorium.

Leadership's intention is to have one church meeting in multiple locations in order to reach more and more people with the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Multi-site church campuses began appearing more than a decade ago.

"It's a major shift that started happening almost 15 years ago," said Joel Craig, who is the pastor of Journey's Mount Dora campus.

And it's a movement that is catching on.

"There are more multi-site churches than mega churches, about 5,000," Craig added. "It seems to be trending upwards."

Statistics released during an October 2005 U.S. multi-site church conference, regarding growth in the number of churches in the United States operating as multi-sites, showed there were 10 multi-site churches in 1990. By 1998, that number had expanded to about 100. And in late 2005, there were more than 1,500 multi-site churches in the United States.

In mid-2008, there were an estimated 2,000 multi-site churches across the US.

By August 2012, it had grown to more than 5,000 multi-site churches in North America, according to Leadership Network, a Christian-based website.

While the numbers show something positive may be happening with multi-site churches, it's really not about numbers, but people, according to Craig.

"When we started looking do this strategy and put it in place, we looked at areas our people were driving from," he said.

They isolated three areas that had about 250 church members driving each Sunday to Apopka from Lake County.

"One of the big issues to us is you can make the drive Sunday morning, but then can you do Wednesday night or for Bible study?" Craig said. "How many times a week can you make that trip?"

The goal is more than just attending "church."

"The whole vision of it is to be able to partner with people already coming, to be more missional in their community," Craig said. "So they invite people and share Jesus in their community.

"Our goal is for people to experience a life change through Jesus Christ. We make no bones about this. It is all about Him not about us."

As with many multi-site churches, the sermon will be a video delivered to the Mount Dora campus that was taped during the Saturday evening service in Apopka.

How will people used to live preaching react?

"That's always a kind of big question when you are talking about a video venue," said Craig. "Our people have responded well through. Research shows it would be a minimal thing because today we are so video oriented."

He added that at the original campus, people watch the large video screen about 80 percent of the time during a live sermon.

The rest of the service, including childcare to the fifth grade, will be conducted at the Mount Dora site.

"The music is all going to be live," said Craig. "Everything will be live except for the sermon. "We have full bands and tech teams for Mount Dora. It will be a full deal for sure."

Preaching at Journey is handled by a preaching team, which Craig is a part of.

"I preach six to eight times a year," he said.

When it's his turn, Craig will deliver the sermon in Apopka. But he likes the idea of not being responsible for a weekly sermon.

It frees him up to do other important things, like being a pastor.

"That's the hope, that's what I'm planning on," Craig said. "My gift, I'm pastoral in nature. I love taking care of people. This gives me an opportunity to both lead and follow. I lead out here but am still under umbrella of leadership."

Journey's leadership began planning about becoming a multi-site church about eight years ago. They ramped things up when they hired Craig October 2012 to lead the charge.

Paul's perspective on the importance of prayer

RICK REED
REFLECTIONS

As we finish putting on our spiritual armor we save the most important item until last.

After telling the Ephesian Christians to take up the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, Paul finishes by writing, "…praying at all times in the Spirit, with all prayer and supplication. To that end keep alert with all perseverance, making supplication for all the saints, and also for me, that words may be given to me in opening my mouth boldly to proclaim the mystery of the gospel, for which I am an ambassador in chains, that I may declare it boldly, as I ought to speak."

Prayer shouldn't be an afterthought for us. Prayer is the primary source of strength in our fight against the evil one.

Just how important is prayer? Look at Paul's use of the word "all" in this verse.

Pray at all times.

With all prayer.

With all perseverance.

For all the saints.

A saint isn't someone more spiritual than you or me, a saint is another Christian. We are to pray for the saints as other Christians should be praying for us.

How we pray is also important. Paul began by telling us to pray in the Spirit, which is a form of worship according to John 4:23-24.

Maybe, more importantly, the Spirit intercedes to God on behalf of the person praying.

Paul wrote in Romans 8:26-27: "Likewise the Spirit helps us in our weakness. For we do not know what to pray for as we ought, but the Spirit himself intercedes for us with groanings too deep for words. And he who searches hearts knows what is the mind of the Spirit, because the Spirit intercedes for the saints according to the will of God.

Praying isn't easy, at least not for me. I get distracted. My mind wonders.

Oswald Chambers wrote, "You must learn to wrestle against the things that hinder your communication with God, and wrestle in prayer for other people; but to wrestle with God in prayer is unscriptural."

Chambers mentioned Jacob, who, in Genesis 32:24-25, wrestled with a "divine being" and was crippled for the rest of his life.

As important as praying in the Spirit is, it's equally important that we pray according to God's will. We're told in the Lord's Prayer to ask God for our physical needs, along with our spiritual needs. But we also pray for His will to be done.

Chambers wrote, "Always make a distinction between God's perfect will and His permissive will, which He uses to accomplish His divine purpose for our lives. God's perfect will is unchangeable. It is with His permissive will, or the various things that He allows into our lives, that we must wrestle before Him.

"It is our reaction to these things allowed by His permissive will that enables us to come to the point of seeing His perfect will for us. 'We know that all things work together for good to those who love God . . .' (Romans 8:28) — to those who remain true to God's perfect will — His calling in Christ Jesus. God's permissive will is the testing He uses to reveal His true sons and daughters."

But Chambers cautions against lazily giving up, adding,"We should not be spineless and automatically say, 'Yes, it is the Lord's will.' We don't have to fight or wrestle with God, but we must wrestle before God with things. Instead, put up a glorious fight and you will find yourself empowered with His strength."

Have a hope-filled and prayer-filled New Year.

CHURCH

First they looked at the various areas members were driving from and then office space and possible worship sites.

Finding the Mount Dora High School Auditorium fit well into their plans.

In the meantime they began assembling a launch team, talking with many people making the drive from Lake County.

They've also hired two part-time staff members who live in Mount Dora.

"One of things we did during the month of November was hold what we called soft opening at the campus in Apopka," Craig said. "We used the student center as a second venue to see what our worship service would look like."

Prayer has been a big part of the planning.

In December, members met at the campus office at the corner of Donnelly and Limit streets every Monday night to pray.

The Mount Dora office address is 2060 N. Donnelly St. and the worship service will take place at the Mount Dora High School Auditorium, at 700 N. Highland St.

Now, it comes down to Sunday.

"We're obviously excited and thrilled," said Craig. "We don't know what God has in store for us. But we want to get people growing in small groups and get people serving in community.

Craig has already done some of that by teaching in one of the high school classes. He also will help with the boys' basketball team.

Craig moved to the area with his wife and three adopted children from Illinois, where he'd been a middle school minister for 14 years.

"We love Florida," he said.

Gathering Places for Spiritual Worship

Prayer That Lasts a Lifetime

Prayer can be something we desire to do often…talking with God just like we pick up the phone to call a friend. In fact, God is our best friend. We can hash things out with Him through prayer. We can ask for courage and strength to bear the unbearable. We can ask for the insight to be thankful for what we have. We can thank Him for our many blessings. We can acknowledge the gift of His grace in our lives. God is ready to teach us if we will listen for His answer. With worship and prayer we can gain the wisdom and courage we need for a lifetime…and sometimes a miracle or two!

Experts: Room for younger, older workers in job market

MATT SEDENSKY
Associated Press

CHICAGO — It's an assertion that has been accepted as fact by droves of the unemployed: Older people remaining on the job later in life are stealing jobs from young people.

One problem, many economists say: It isn't supported by a wisp of fact.

"We all cannot believe that we have been fighting this theory for more than 150 years," said April Yanyuan Wu, a research economist at the Center for Retirement Research at Boston College, who co-authored a paper last year on the subject.

The commonly accepted vision of a surge of workers looks like this: A young post-doctoral student dreams of a full-time teaching job at their university, but there are no openings. An 80-something professor who has remained on the job long past what's considered "normal" retirement is blamed,

The problem with that vision is that there are probably full-time teaching positions available elsewhere, or the person blocking the young grad student from the job is only 40 years old, economists say. Further, the veteran professor's decision to stay employed and productive may stir other job growth. He may bring research grants to his university allowing for other hiring, may take on assistants, and may be able to dine out and shop and fuel the economy more than if he weren't on the job.

None of that would have happened had he retired.

The theory Wu and other economists are fighting is known as "lump of labor," and it has maintained traction in the U.S., particularly in a climate of high unemployment. The theory dates to 1851 and says if a group enters the labor market — or in this case, remains in it beyond their normal retirement date — others will be unable to gain employment or will have their hours cut.

"There's no evidence to support that increased employment by older people is going to hurt younger people in any way."

Alicia Munnell
Director of the Center for Retirement Research

It's a line of thinking that has been used in the U.S. immigration debate and in Europe to validate early retirement programs, and it relies on a simple premise: That there are a fixed number of jobs available. In fact, most economists dispute this. When women entered the workforce, there weren't fewer jobs for men. The economy simply expanded.

The same is true with older workers, they argue.

"There's no evidence to support that increased employment by older people is going to hurt younger people in any way," said Alicia Munnell, director of the Center for Retirement Research and the co-author with Wu of "Are Aging Baby Boomers Squeezing Young Workers Out of Jobs?"

"It's not going to reduce their wages, it's not going to reduce their hours, it's not going to do anything bad to them," Munnell said.

Still, many remain unconvinced.

James Galbraith, a professor of government at the University of Texas at Austin, has advocated for a temporary lowering of the age to qualify for Social Security and Medicare to allow older workers who don't want to remain on the job a way to exit and to spur openings for younger workers.

He doesn't buy the comparison of older workers to women entering the workforce and says others' arguments on older workers expanding the economy don't make sense when there are so many unemployed people. If there was a surplus of jobs, he said, there would be no problem with people working longer. But there isn't.

"I can't imagine how you could refute that. The older worker retires, the employer looks around and hires another worker," he said. "It's like refuting elementary arithmetic."

The perception has persisted, from prominent stories in The New York Times, Newsweek and other media outlets, to a pointed question to Rep. Nancy Pelosi last year by the NBC reporter Luke Russert, who asked whether her refusal to step out of the House leadership (and the similar decisions of other older lawmakers) was denying younger politicians a chance. A chorus of lawmakers around Pelosi muttered and shouted "discrimination," until the Democratic leader chimed in herself.

Munnell and Wu analyzed Current Population Survey data to test for any changes in employment among those under 55 when those 55 and older worked in greater numbers. They found no evidence younger workers were losing work and in fact found the opposite: Greater employment, reduced unemployment and yielded higher wages.

Munnell said, outside of economists, the findings can be hard for people to understand when they think only of their own workplace.

"They just could not get in their heads this dynamism that is involved," she said. "You can't extrapolate from the experience of a single company to the economy as a whole."

Jonathan Gruber, an economist at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology who edited a book on the subject for the National Bureau of Economic Research, said it's a frustrating reality of his profession: That those things he knows as facts are disputed by the populace.

"If you polled the average American they probably would think the opposite," he said. "There's a lot of things economists say that people don't get and this is just one of them."

S&P 500 starts 2014 with a 2-day decline

STEVE ROTHWELL
AP Markets Writer

NEW YORK — After last year's big party in the stock market, 2014 is starting off with a nagging hangover.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index edged a fraction of a point lower on Friday, beginning a year with a two-day losing streak for the first time since 2005.

While few analysts expect 2014 to produce gains comparable to last year's advance of nearly 30 percent, many see a moderate increase as the economy continues to improve and investors move funds out of bonds and into stocks, which are generating much bigger returns for investors.

"The market is trying to find some direction here," said Scott Wren, a senior equity strategist at Wells Fargo Advisors. "We're in for a few days of trying to figure out whether we inch a little higher or see some down days."

The S&P 500 index fell 0.61 points, or 0.03 percent, to 1,831.37 and was 0.5 percent lower for the week.

The Dow Jones industrial average gained 28.64 points, or 0.2 percent, to 16,469.99. The Nasdaq composite fell 11.16 points, or 0.3 percent, to 4,131.91.

General Motors was among the stocks that posted the biggest losses in the S&P 500. The automaker fell $1.38, or 3.4 percent, to $39.57 after reporting a U.S. sale slump of more than 6 percent in December.

Energy companies have also started the year with declines as the price of oil falls.

Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke on Friday predicted growth in 2014 and said that factors that have kept the economy from accelerating appear to be abating.

"The combination of financial healing, greater balance in the housing market, less fiscal restraint, and, of course, continued monetary accommodation bodes well for U.S. economic growth in coming quarters," Bernanke said in comments to the annual meeting of the American Economic Association in Philadelphia.

The Market In Review

Today

Shrinking deficit

A rise in petroleum exports is helping to narrow the U.S. trade gap.

The trade deficit fell in October to $40.6 billion, with the nation's energy boom helping to lift overall exports to an all-time high of $192.7 billion. Economists expect the Commerce Department will report Tuesday that the trade gap shrank again in November. A smaller trade deficit can boost economic growth.

Eye on consumers

The Federal Reserve issues a report Wednesday on how much credit U.S. consumers took on in November.

Consumers boosted their borrowing in October by $18.2 billion to a seasonally adjusted $3.08 trillion. The increase was driven by growth in auto and student loans, as well as the biggest rise in credit card debt in five months.

Jobless rate report

Employers have added an average of 200,000 jobs a month in the past four months, a big improvement from the summer.

Those gains have helped cut the national unemployment rate in November to 7 percent, a five-year low. Economists anticipate that data out on Friday will show the nation's jobless rate held steady in December.

BMW keeps the light on for sport wagons

LARRY PRINTZ
The Virginian-Pilot

BMW / MCT

The 2014 BMW 3-Series sports wagon is only an inch shorter than BMW's X3 crossover, and a good deal shorter.

Like landline phones, fax machines and VCRs, the station wagon is an endangered species that's disappearing from the automotive landscape thanks to the popularity, and superior functionality, of the crossover sport utility vehicle.

Compare today's test drive, the 2014 BMW 328i xDrive Sports Wagon, to its sibling, the BMW X3 crossover.

The latter can carry 27.6 cubic feet of stuff when the rear seats are in use; fold them and you have as much as 63.3 cubic feet of schlepping space. Now, compare that to the 2014 328i xDrive Sports Wagon, which holds just 13 cubic feet with the second row occupied, and just 53 cubic feet with those seats folded. You might think the X3 is significantly larger. It is, but only by 1 inch in length. And its higher roof line gives the X3 an advantage when it comes to transporting bulky items.

Next, consider that the same engine powers both vehicles: a 240-horsepower turbocharged four-cylinder. And while the X3 has an optional 300-horsepower, 3.0-liter six-cylinder engine, the 328i's optional engine is a 181-horsepower turbocharged diesel engine. The final nail in the coffin? The 328i's starting price is $1,650 higher than the X3's.

So it seems that math could easily lead this wagon to extinction when its practicality is considered. And yet there are those who prefer wagons, just as there are those who prefer corded phones.

For them, a wagon is more fun to drive than a taller crossover, while also being a bit different. It looks better when pulling into the golf club parking lot.

That said, given a wagon's lot in life as a family hauler, you have to wonder why BMW chose to issue the new Sports Wagon without the more powerful six-cylinder engine. Certainly, the 328i's 240 horses are more than up to the task of moving this compact wagon with some vigor; BMW says it will reach 60 mph in six seconds. But that may not be enough to satisfy those BMW customers accustomed to more power. These buyers also may object to the lack of a manual transmission; this wagon comes solely with an eight-speed automatic and all-wheel drive. A rear-wheel-drive model is not offered.

So it seems that performance — at least the kind that BMW enthusiasts crave — is not a top priority. Instead, this car is about lively, around-town motoring; transporting people from point to point with a modicum of driving fun. This it delivers without question. The four-cylinder engine is certainly fast enough for clogged arteries throughout Virginia's Hampton Roads region. And this wagon has the accurate steering and cornering poise expected of a BMW. Still, it seems less engaging to drive than other 3 Series models, despite its perfect ride and quiet cabin.

Thankfully, it's fairly fuel efficient. The EPA rates this wagon at 22 mpg city, 33 mph highway. Choosing the diesel would increase these numbers to 31 mpg city, 43 highway at a $1,500 premium. A week-long test drive in Hampton Roads returned 28 mpg. Like other BMWs, this one requires premium fuel.

As for this wagon's utility, the rear seat is split in a configuration that makes for cargo carrying flexibility. The rear deck comes with four tie-down hooks, a 12-volt power point and a retractable cargo cover that stores underneath the load floor when not in use. Given the lack of a spare tire — the car uses run-flat tires — it's nice that BMW has given over the space for more storage.

A key fob opens the wagon's power tailgate, which can also be opened by an interior button. Choosing the optional Comfort Access feature allows you to open the tailgate by waving your foot under the rear bumper, an option first offered on Fords.

If you want to put one in your driveway, go easy on the options. The test car started at $41,450. But equipping it to the level expected of a luxury car meant choosing the Sport Line Package, Cold Weather Package, Lighting Package, navigation system and concierge service. Even the leather interior and paint were options. Bottom line: $51,225, which is a bit spendy for a compact wagon.

But for those who treasure something different, the unique 328i xDrive Sports Wagon will satisfy your soul in a way no crossover ever can.

Old-school Dodge Challenger still a likable rumble-king

TERRY BOX
The Dallas Morning News

DODGE / MCT

The 2013 Dodge Challenger is designed to evoke the original 1970s model.

Even in these dour, downsized times, the burly, old-school Dodge Challenger proudly lugs a trunk that's bigger than some subcompacts.

Just like cars 40 years ago, it could easily swallow a couple of gangly teenagers bent on sneaking into a drive-in movie with a squeaking cooler full of Pearl beer stuffed between them.

Of course, first we'd have to find a drive-in somewhere on the inky outskirts of cold, digital Dallas — and good luck on that quest.

The Challenger, the oldest new car in the auto industry, just kind of provokes rebellious behavior.

With two wheels in the 20th century and two in the 21st, the Challenger races down retro road, Bruce Springsteen blasting provocatively from open windows.

Still, the Challenger is the lowest-selling coupe in the pony-car segment and the one most in need of serious updating — kind of like me.

The Challenger sprung brashly from muscle-car crazy Detroit in 1970, available with a beastly 426 Hemi V-8 that got about 4 miles per gallon — downhill with a tailwind.

The car, still valued highly by collectors, lasted until 1974.

Thirty-four long years later, Dodge reintroduced the Challenger to compete with the hot-selling Chevy Camaro and Ford Mustang, again putting the car on a big rear-wheel-drive platform with optional Hemi power.

That was in 2008, and the Challenger hasn't changed much since then.

The metallic gray 2013 R/T I had recently certainly looked like a survivor.

Built on the same sedan platform that supports the Chrysler 300 and Dodge Charger, the 2-ton coupe still wears the clothes it had in 1970 — stretched a bit.

Dual round headlights flanked a broad, blacked-out grille. A power dome on the expansive hood sported fake vents on its edges.

The tall body and relatively short top appeared to have been lifted more or less intact from the '70s, along with a prominent character line below the door handle.

Although the single band of tail lamps across the rear reeked of retro, the Challenger rode tall and proud on relatively modern black five-spoke wheels shod with 245/45-20-inch tires.

It also got freshened with flat-black stripes outlined in red on the hood, top and teenager-gulping trunk.

As a good American, though, it is way overweight — at least 500 pounds heavier than a Mustang GT and about 200 more than a Camaro.

That means its relatively refined 5.7-liter Hemi V-8 and six-speed manual have to work to push the big coupe to 60 in 5.1 seconds, according to Car and Driver.

But it sure was a pleasure to see them sweat.

The Hemi, which shares no pieces with the old elephant-motor 426, produces 375 sweet, sophisticated horsepower and spun the rear wheels on mine — frequently — through an optional 3.92-ratio rear axle.

As a result, the big Challenger leapt away from stops with vigor but rarely got more than 15 miles per gallon in town and 23 on the highway.

But it felt more fleet than brutally fast. While smooth and reasonably refined for a pushrod V-8, the deep-breathing Hemi struggled a bit above 4,000 rpm with the car's bulk and rarely just pinned me in the seat.

I never got tired of giving it another chance.

Moreover, the long stick on the six-speed manual was topped with a highly mature pistol grip. Who could ask for more?

Although occasionally notchy, the transmission worked in slick conjunction with a nice, tight clutch.

Equipped with independent rear suspension, which the old car certainly didn't have, the Challenger's ride was vastly more flexible than the loosey-goosey original.

And even if you pushed hard into a corner, it would lean a bit and then mostly settle in. While hardly a sports car, the Challenger tolerated curves.

Also, its former overly boosted steering, which felt ridiculously light, has been tightened up and given some weight.

It still lacked road feel but was markedly more modern than a few years ago.

Similarly, Chrysler has tried with mixed success over the last couple of years to improve the Challenger's austere black-plastic interior.

Like all good muscle cars, the value in the Challenger's $36,175 window sticker price can't be found inside. It's under the hood, bolted to the platform and rolling in the wheel-wells.

Long may it run, I say.

The St. Johns River Water Management District (District) gives notice of receipt of the following permit application(s):

ERP Permit Applications
GC Development of Lake County, PO Box 1273, Mount Dora, FL 32757, application # IND-069-26474-22. The project is located in Lake County, Section: 21, Township: 19 South, Range: 26 East, and includes 1.19 acres. The Environmental Resource Permit application is for construction of a surface water management system to serve a commercial development known as Mayo Medical Plaza. The file(s) containing the permit application(s) are available for inspection Monday through Friday, except for District holidays, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the District's Headquarters, 4049 Reid St., Palatka, FL 32177-2529. You may also view files at one of the District's Service Centers, but you should call Service Center staff in advance to make sure that the files are at a specific Service Center. Service Center contact information is available online at floridaswater.com/contactus/offices.html.
Additionally, most permit application file documents can be viewed online at floridaswater.com/permitting/index.html. To obtain information on how to find and view permit application file documents, go to the HELP tab in E-Permitting and click on Support and FAQs and then follow the directions provided under "How to find a Technical Staff Report (TSR) or other application file documents." The decision on permit applications will be made at the District's Service Center where the application is processed. A substantial objection to a permit application must be made in writing and filed with (received by) the Bureau Chief, Bureau of Regulatory Support, P.O. Box 1429, Palatka, FL 32178-1429, or by e-mail at applicationsupport@sjrwmd.com, within 14 days of notification of the application. Please include either the Permit Application number or the Project Name in the objection. Notification of the application is either the fifth day after the date on which the written notice is deposited in the U.S. mail (for those persons who receive actual notice by U.S. mail), the day the notice is emailed (for those persons who receive actual notice by email), or the date the notice is published in the newspaper (if actual notice is not provided by U.S. mail or email). A "substantial objection" means a written statement directed to the District that identifies the objector, concerns hydrologic or environmental impacts of the proposed activity, and relates to applicable rule criteria. If the District receives a timely substantial objection from you, then you will receive written notice of the District's intended decision on the permit application. You are advised to notify the District within 14 days of notification of the application(s) if you have questions, objections, comments, or information regarding the activity proposed in the permit application. If you make a written request to the District for additional information regarding a specific permit application, you will be provided an opportunity to obtain the available information. Please note that filing a written objection does not entitle you to a Chapter 120, Florida Statutes, administrative hearing.
Notice of intended (proposed) District Decision will be provided to persons who have requested individual notice. A request for individual notice of intended (proposed) District Decision on the application must be received by the District's Bureau Chief, Bureau of Regulatory Support prior to the date the notice of intended (proposed) District Decision is generated.

Modern play spaces can be cool, contemporary and kid-friendly

KIM COOK
Associated Press

Outfitting a play space for children might consist of nothing more than setting up a few old furniture pieces, plastic storage bins and the extra TV.

But some parents want the play space to reflect their design aesthetic. Does the rest of the home read more Eero Saarinen than Superman? More Verner Panton than Pokemon? Is the vibe less Nickelodeon, more George Nelson? If so, you'll want to try balancing kid-friendly with cool.

Some options:

MOD MAD

Lots of decor from the '60s and '70s works well in a play space: mod lamps, modular furniture, pop art, and fun, space-age prints for wallpaper and textiles. Hues popular back then — orange, yellow, teal, green, white — add energy to furniture, cushions and rugs.

Lots of decor from the '60s and '70s works well in a play space: mod lamps, modular furniture, pop art, and fun, space-age prints for wallpaper and textiles.

New York-based designer Amanda Nisbet used a Roy Lichtenstein print and a chrome-trimmed bubble chair in one of her children's space projects. Victoria Sanchez, a designer in Washington, D.C., used colorful Missoni fabrics to liven up a teen lounge.

Check out Modshop1.com and Designpublic.com for pieces — many of them kid-size — that fit the style.

Hip, retro-style robot, typography and animal patterns designed by New Yorker Nancy Wolff are at AllModern.com.

And chocolate, tangerine or red knitted poufs and flat weave rugs with zingy geometric graphics are part of the signature line at Fab.com.

For a low-key look that still fits the aesthetic, think smooth-edged Danish modern wood furniture. Armless upholstered club chairs look smart and are perfect for lounging; find new ones at Overstock.com and vintage ones on Etsy.com. Or take a cue from Australian designer Anna Williams and use

How to make a Bougainvillea plant bloom

JUANITA POPENOE
LAKE COUNTY EXTENSION

Q Why won't my Bougainvillea bloom?

A Bougainvillea is a great plant for winter blooms in Florida and a classic in the landscape. It takes drought and can tolerate the salt of seashore plantings. A woody vine with heart-shaped leaves and thorny branches, the showy papery bracts are actually modified leaves with the tiny true flowers in the middle of the colorful part. It flowers best in full sun, with regular watering in a well drained, slightly acidic soil.

Yellowing of the leaves can be a problem if the soil pH is too high. They are only hardy through USDA hardiness zone 9B, so they are not perfect for all of Central Florida without some cold protection. If the plant gets too cold, it will drop its leaves.

The thorny branches always stop me because you will need to prune this vine to keep it under control and stimulate new growth. Blooms occur only on the new growth and during the short days of winter, depending on temperature. It can be pruned to a "standard" or single trunk shrub, or trained to grow over fences and trellises. Some dwarf types can even be grown in hanging baskets.

The best time to prune bougainvillea is

Groomer Michelle Boch gives Molly, a 15-year-old Bichon Frise, a chalking treatment at PetSmart in Culver City, Calif.

Groomers dazzle up dogs with bling

SUE MANNING
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Sugarplum went into the salon as a reddish-blonde dachshund mix and came out with pink and green ears, a rainbow tail and a bow in her fur.

"It's like having a little unicorn creature," said Sasha Sinnott, an attorney from Pasadena who was nearly giddy about her dog's makeover.

For some dog owners, simple bathing and combing is not enough. So they pay groomers to turn fur into an artist's canvas, where vibrant sweeps of chalk and paint transform pooches into fantasy fur balls that draw both compliments and strange looks. For an extra 10 or 15 minutes at the groomer, the everyday dog can get an outlandish redesign with a temporary paint tattoo, Mohawk, feather extension or glued-on jewels.

Then there are the "extreme groomers," who turn their own pets into elaborate creations like zombies, flowers or even whole jungle scenes, transformations that can take months as hair grows, paint is applied, fur is braided or extended, and shapes are sculpted.

But there are limits to the makeover mania, which is blossoming in an unregulated industry that can leave pets open to risks. Experts say products should be toxic-free

Historic house in Iowa listed as endangered

Associated Press

DAVENPORT, Iowa — A historic house in Davenport has been deemed one of Iowa's most endangered properties, and city officials hope it can be fixed up in the future.

The Lambrite-Iles Peterson House, built in 1857, was recently placed on a list of endangered properties compiled by Preservation Iowa, the Quad-City Times reported. Ryan Rusnak, a community planner for the city, said he applied for the designation nearly a year ago on behalf of the Davenport Historic Preservation Commission.

"The state recognizes that it's an important structure, and that it's threatened," he said.

Rusnak added that the designation will be a tool to raise awareness about the house's importance. It's currently boarded up to stabilize it and no utilities are connected to it. It was deemed uninhabitable by the city in 2010.

The City Council declared the house a local landmark in July 2012. It was designed by John C. Cochrane, the architect behind the Illinois and Iowa state capitol buildings.

The Italian villa-style home has had many owners over the years but it's been privately owned by Gordon Muller since 1981. The newspaper reported that Muller could not be reached for comment.

Muller is credited with helping to restore the house years ago and turning it back into a single-family home instead of apartment units.

in late winter or early spring after it flowers, or at the start of the rainy season. Be prepared with thornproof gloves like you would use for roses because the thorns can be one to two inches long. Drought stress can stimulate blooming even during long days, but excess drying will cause leaf drop and dormancy. Plants may lose many leaves after flowering, but this usually comes before a new flush of growth.

Without direct sun, bougainvillea will not bloom, so first check how much light the plant is getting. The next most common problem is over-watering. Bougainvillea is native to arid climates and does not want as much water as some plants in the garden. Pruning too often can also remove the buds and reduce flowering. Finally, too much fertilizer will cause the plant to just grow leaves instead of blooms. Bougainvillea responds better to neglect than most plants.

Q What are hardy hibiscus? I want to grow hibiscus, but I don't want to have to coddle the plant through the winter.

A Tropical hibiscus, Hibiscus rosa-sinensis like you see commonly in Hawaii and South Florida, are cold sensitive and will take a lot of care to grow well in Central Florida. However, there are 220 of species of hibiscus that range from cold hardy to tropical, including cocoa, cotton and okra.

Northerners may be familiar with Rose of Sharon, Hibiscus syriacus, also known as shrub Althea. Rose of Sharon does not have the range of flower colors and the flowers are not so exotic looking, but it is a good woody shrub for summer flowering and grows far into the north. Breeders are working on more flower colors.

There are also hardy hibiscus that are herbaceous — the top dies back in winter, but grows back in the spring. There are several of these, including some natives: H. grandiflorus, H. coccineus, and H. moscheutos. These natives are types of rosemallows, and have large, showy flowers. Hybrids of these have enormous flowers, ten to twelve inches across. They thrive in rich (high organic matter), wet soils and full sun.

Older plants will have larger root systems and produce larger plants and more flowers. Plant performance is often tied to rainfall and irrigation can only partially substitute for rain. These are great plants for the rain garden. For more information on hardy hibiscus go to http://edis.ifas.ufl.edu/ep245.

Finally, a word should be said about Roselle, H. sabdariffa, Jamaican Sorrel or Florida cranberry. This hibiscus is grown for the calyx, the fleshy part around the flower, which is used in drinks and jams. The calyx can be picked and steeped in boiling water to make a tangy tea, or boiled with spices and then sweetened and mixed with rum.

Roselle will also die back in the winter, but it comes back every year from the roots as well as from seed. The flower itself is not very noticeable, but the dark red calyx is very showy. The plant looks similar to okra, grows 5-8 feet tall, and requires little care after establishment.

Visit the Discovery Gardens and our plant clinic with your plant problems and questions from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., weekdays, at the ag center, 1951 Woodlea Road, Tavares.

and there should be no pain involved — absolutely no piercings or real tattoos. If dogs enjoy being groomed, they shouldn't mind the extra primping, experts added, though one veterinarian said, "It's just something I would not do."

But many pet owners and industry professionals say it's a fun activity that helps person and pooch bond.

"For me, it is about a closer connection with my pets. People are now showering their pets with the amenities and affections that they would like themselves," said Lauren L. Darr, founder of the International Association of Pet Fashion Professionals.

And grooming products are getting more mainstream every day, added Darr, author of the Pet Fashion 2014 Almanac.

But a big worry for the average pet owner is a grooming industry unfettered by regulations, said Amy Bullet Brown, founder and president of the National Association of Professional Creative Groomers LLC and the owner of an Alabama dog spa.

"If a groomer wants to bathe your dog in battery acid, he can, and it's going to die, but it's not against the law," she said.

Some groomers use bleach and oxidizing dyes on pets, Brown said. Neither should be used on animal skin, which is much more susceptible to toxic chemicals than human skin, she said.

Creative grooming can be fun, but it is cosmetic only. If there is any danger, like sharp instruments, it should not be done, Brown said.

AP PHOTO

To help keep pets safe, ask a friend or a veterinarian to recommend a good groomer.

Brown is one of the "extreme groomers." The fad has become a sport of sorts — more than a dozen U.S. competitions are held every year.

Some of Brown's most photographed dog work includes a zombie, sculpted over a year to look like exposed bones and rotting flesh, and a tribute to the Alabama football team that took more than four months to make.

"It cheers the family up to see the pet dressed up, and you get a lot for your money."
Eve Adamson

For the regular pet owner, birthdays are the most popular occasion for chalk-based makeovers, said Megan Mouser, groomer and PetSmart salon project manager in Phoenix. Sports team colors are also in demand, she said.

At PetSmart, it costs $6 to chalk a dog's ears and $2 for a single streak of color on the coat. After applying a sealer, resembling hair spray, the design can last one to six days.

Two veterinarians had disparate takes on the phenomenon.

Grooming a dog is almost always for the benefit of a person, so if there is no pain and it's fun for all, then "party up," said Dr. Bonnie Beaver, a professor at Texas A&M University's College of Veterinary Medicine and director of the American College of Veterinary Behaviorists.

Her colleague, Dr. Mark Stickney, a clinical associate professor at Texas A&M, said he's never tried anything beyond a Halloween costume on his dogs. Additional grooming "just really is not my kind of thing. It's just something I would not do."

But Eve Adamson of Iowa City, Iowa, says the trend can be beneficial. She is co-author of Animal Planet's "Complete Guide to Dog Grooming" and grooming columnist for the American Kennel Club's Family Dog magazine.

"It cheers the family up to see the pet dressed up, and you get a lot for your money," she said.

The doggie decor likely makes some people think, "That poor pooch, he must be so embarrassed."

But "that's human psyche, not canine psyche," Brown said. "Dogs are not embarrassed by their appearance. They don't care what color they are. If they crave attention, they will love it."

Climate of change ahead for gardening

DEAN FOSDICK
Associated Press

While many gardeners scan the newly arrived seed catalogs to plan their next growing season, the industry's visionaries are pouring talent and resources into products and ideas they hope will be sown in years to come.

Evolutionary biology is just one aspect of flora development; plant resiliency, landscape design and education also are part of the creative mix.

So what are the prospects for gardening in the year 2020 and beyond? Some responses from the long-term thinkers:

ORGANICS

Coach Mark Smallwood, executive director, Rodale Institute, Kutztown, Pa.:

"Organic gardening won't be simply a niche market. It's a $31 billion industry now and growing in double digits every year.

"There will be more food and fewer lawns. Urban food production will be up because a lot of open space is becoming available. With all the empty homes, you can create parks; you can create food production. Detroit is rebounding using not only open land but creating vertical hydroponic food production in abandoned industrial buildings."

AP PHOTO

These ears of sweet-tasting, bi-color corn were grown from seed in containers inside a hobby greenhouse near Langley, Wash. The Burpee's "On Deck" corn matured in a little more than two months.

HOUSEPLANTS

Jose Smith, chief executive officer, Costa Farms, Miami:

"We're trying hard to bring more color to houseplants. Green is not a color. We're also trying to create plants so they're more of a lifestyle — a living home decor."

TREES

Greg Ina, vice president, The Davey Institute, Kent, Ohio:

"We're working to quantify the benefits of trees. People are beginning to go beyond the anecdotal understanding that trees are good — beyond beautification to natural functions like pollution and wellness.

"Another big scientific topic is resiliency. Improving early detection. Dealing with the invasion of exotic pests. Building resistance to climate change. That impacts what we plant and where we plant trees."

FLOWERS

Anthony Tesselaar, president and co-founder, Anthony Tesselaar Plants, Silvan, Australia:

"The gardening industry has been looking at plant size and multi-use aspects with increasing urbanization, and also such factors as increased disease resistance to reduce the needs for pesticides and other chemicals in a closed urban environment.

"Dwarf and clump plants are being developed for smaller-space gardening. There is also work on establishing more fastigiated (slender) trees and shrubs."

VEGETABLES/HERBS

George Ball, chairman and chief executive officer, W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Warminster, Pa.:

"All roads lead to the garden. Almost everybody is into gardening and vegetable gardening is the focus. Flowers are almost on the sidelines.

"Gardening feeds spinoff hobbies like cooking. People who grow things tend to become amateur cooks. If you cook at home, look at how much money you save.

"Gardening also impacts health. If you go to any clinic and talk to any dietician, the effects of vegetables are obvious. Choosing a diet high in vegetables makes you a lot healthier."

"Parents of newborns are increasingly shying away from processed foods and are forcing companies such as Burpee to research high-yielding, relatively bland-tasting — still retaining all nutritious elements — soft-fruited elements.

"More than just an accent, herbs will soon occupy a more prominent role in American home-cooked cuisine, with far more flavorful leaves that will change recipes and food for the table. We see this happening at top-tier restaurants in major cities.

"Spurred by less space and the need to protect gardens from exploding populations of deer, every major home gardening company is working on developing a portfolio of vegetables for cultivation on patios and limited areas. Plants will be smaller but their yields higher."

PLAY

mid-century credenzas for toy storage — check out ThriveFurniture.com and OneKingsLane.com for options at various prices.

Accent with "Mad Men"-era posters or toy ads, and add floor pillows covered in patterns drawn from the era. Soothing hues like umber, avocado, mustard and sky blue keep the energy relaxed.

INDUSTRIAL CHIC

Rooms with an industrial feel — warehouse-grade tables and storage, furniture and decorative elements with a rugged look — appeal to many kids, who sense they can let loose in these spaces. And the style's on trend, so it's easy to do.

Neutral color palettes mixing whites, grays and browns work for either gender. Look for ceiling lights caged in metal (no worries about errant pillows or Nerf balls), riveted furniture, and repurposed machine-shop elements such as gear pieces, tools and signage. A galvanized-iron, locker-style dresser makes great storage.

Powder-coated in crisp red or white, Ikea's PS metal cabinet adds a pop of color. A magnetized blackboard fits the edgy vibe and lets inspiration fly. Make your own inexpensively with instructions at TheTurquoiseHome.com.

Rugged-looking play tables offer surfaces for messy art and often offer great storage for toys and games. Lumber, flooring and stone yards will often give old pallets away: Lots of ideas for making your own play or coffee table can be found at Home-dzone.co.za.

EXPLORATION LOCATION

Animals, trees, and sky or earth elements can inspire children to be creative in play spaces, and many contemporary pieces appeal to both kids and adults. At Stardust.com, find the Zuo Modern Phante chair, a version of Eames' iconic, polypropylene, elephant-shaped chair.

A realistic, cast-resin bear's head is fun, eclectic wall art.

Ocean Sole's animal sculptures made out of scavenged flip flops would be inspiration for indoor adventures — rhinos, giraffes and lions come in sizes up to about 5 feet long.

Clouds and intergalactic silver orbs are two of the striking mural wallpapers at DesignYourWall.com. Ikea's Vandring Spar low-pile rug features an Impressionist version of a nature walk, complete with grass and sandy footprints. And a soft gray and white wool rug silhouettes romping deer and a leafy forest at LandofNod.com.

Other ideas:

■ Create inexpensive, customized storage in a playroom by painting or staining ready-made kitchen cabinets. Metal tool carts can be side tables, as well as portable art supply zones or storage stations for small toy parts.

■ Multipurpose pieces serve the whole family's needs. Land of Nod's round coffee table with drawers is user-friendly for TV watching, table games and crafts, with no sharp corners to worry about. Also from the retailer, a farmhouse-style work table with storage on the ends provides space for teens and laptops, grown-up tasks and art projects. Ikea's Kivik sectional can be reconfigured a lot of different ways; it's hardy, comfy and versatile for a family room.

■ Display books face forward on wall-mounted shelves with a lip, so covers can be easily seen. Or scrounge flea markets for old wooden carpenter's tool boxes, which are sturdy and shallow. Use games as art by displaying the boxes on floating shelves; old game boards hung on a wall add color and visual punch.

■ Shoot photos of kids' favorite toys — close-ups, Instagrams and black-and-white look cool — and then mount them in identical frames. Ikea has inexpensive options, and Michaels' craft stores stock three-packs of LP frames.

When the kids set up their own places in a few years, this will be hip art with happy memories.

"THE KITTY TREAT HUSTLE."

Man is turned off by gal pal's resemblance to mom

DEAR ABBY: I met a guy I think is perfect for me on a dating website. We have gone on several dates and they have been great. He respects my morals and even has some of his own, which isn't easy to find.

The problem: He says I am exactly what he has been looking for except for one thing. I look like his mother. He says he really likes me and would like to keep dating to see if he can get past this issue. I like him very much. Is there something I can do, short of plastic surgery? — DEAD RINGER IN ARIZONA

DEAR DEAD RINGER: Before changing anything, you need to explore more closely what he's saying. Ask to meet his mother, then judge for yourself how strong the resemblance is. It's possible the similarity is less physical and more about your personality or mannerisms.

You should not alter your image to please anyone but yourself. Keep in mind that many men DO marry women who resemble their mothers in some way — whether it's conscious or not — and the marriages are often successful.

DEAR ABBY: My parents divorced many years ago, and ever since, I have lived with my mother and visit Dad on his days off from work. Mom cheated on Dad, and the man she cheated with lives with us.

I don't have a good relationship with her boyfriend. We don't have much in common, and when he drinks, he gets angry for no reason and takes it out on me or Mom, and it puts the whole household in an awkward position, sometimes lasting for days. When he's sober, he can be fun to be around.

I have talked with my mom about this. She promises she'll talk to him and things are going to change, but they never do. She doesn't want to break up with him because she can't afford to pay the mortgage on her own. I have thought about moving in with my dad, but I don't want to upset her. What do I do? — WANTS TO MOVE IN WITH DAD

DEAR WANTS: Your mother hasn't asserted herself with her boyfriend because she's financially dependent on him. She's afraid if she insists he do something about his drinking, he will leave her.

The affair and the boyfriend were her choice, not yours. If you want to move in with your father to avoid being around a verbally abusive drunk — and your father is willing — that's what you should do. You should not have to tolerate abuse in order not to "upset" your mother. It's OK to take care of yourself.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 32-year-old woman. My boyfriend of 11 years passed away almost three years ago. I loved him very much and miss him every day. Some well-meaning friends and family members have suggested a dating site.

Abby, when does someone know if it's time to move on? I haven't been on a date in 13 years. I'm scared of putting myself out there again and getting hurt. Any advice would be great. — SCARED IN OREGON

DEAR SCARED: If the only reason you haven't reached out before is fear of rejection, then it's time to move on. Ask your friends and family to help you write a profile, and then consider what happens next as an "adventure."

While there are no guarantees you'll immediately find a relationship like the one you had, you might find someone who is compatible. And if you don't, you could still make some friends. Nothing ventured, nothing gained.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

A passion for the printed word inspires a library reno

CANDICE OLSON
McClatchy-Tribune

Alice and Bob's five-story townhouse is filled with books, books and more books. Their library was jammed with rickety old shelves, stuffed with publications on just about every subject under the sun. It's Bob who is the book lover in this family — but as his collection outgrew the room, even he reached a point where he agreed that something needed to be done.

Both Bob and Alice use the library as a place to relax, curl up in front of the fire, or watch a bit of TV. Since Bob thinks of his books — each and every one of them — as his friends, he can't get rid of even one outdated old paperback. This fact speaks volumes about the task at hand: design a warm, inviting library with room for all of Bob's books — and even a few more that will surely be added in the future.

The focal point of this book lover's retreat was the fireplace. But, with its outdated mantel and the inconvenience of schlepping real logs upstairs to the library, an update was definitely in order. We selected an elegant cast stone fireplace surround, with clean-burning ethanol log set. The difference was dramatic: the new mantel and classic surround elevates the fireplace to the prominence it deserves.

To accommodate all of Bob's "friends," I designed three walls of custom floor-to-ceiling shelving around the room. The only wall that does not have shelving is the window wall, so we definitely maximized every possible inch of storage space. The shelving flanks the fireplace, and is unbroken except for the place we reserved for a wall-mounted flat screen TV.

BRANDON BARRE / MCT

The focal point of this book lover's retreat is the fireplace, which features a new mantel and classic surround. The room also now has three walls of custom floor-to-ceiling shelving, maximizing every possible inch of storage space for books.

On the wall opposite the fireplace, we installed a mural depicting a map of the world in muted browns and creams. Bob and Alice have travelled extensively, and the library features many of their souvenirs, so the mural is a nice touch to remind them of their happy travels. In front of the mural is an ivory sectional sofa placed on top of a linear-patterned area rug. Over by the windows sit Alice's two existing tub chairs, recovered in a sparkly black velvet fabric with nailhead trim — just the touch of glam the designer ordered for this book lover's paradise. Add an inviting ottoman and a small side table and presto — you have a ready-made reading nook.

I went with a modern ivory and dark espresso color scheme for this room, which is played out in the richness of the dark shelving, the ivory sectional sofa and fireplace mantel, the drapery fabrics, cushions and area rug. We disposed of the old carpeting and brought in new, dark hardwood flooring that sets off the ivory walls, couch and area rug beautifully.

Oh, and I really need to mention one more thing. What is the No. 1 must-have when it comes to reading? Good lighting, of course. We really bumped up the lighting quotient in this library, with overhead recessed fixtures, sconces and a table lamp. Two wall-mounted lights behind the couch are even on flexible arms, so they can be perfectly positioned as over-the-shoulder reading lamps.

Bob loves the fact that his books have become the big story in this space. They wrap the room in comfort and warmth, with the extra-inviting touch of the elegant new fireplace and updated furnishings. It's a room that caters to the owners' tastes, while making a stunning impact with the contrast between light and dark hues.

All of this change makes for an exciting new chapter in the life of Bob's library. It's always nice when a story has a happy ending.
