Senate passes $1.1 trillion spending bill

ANDREW TAYLOR
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congress sent President Barack Obama a $1.1 trillion government-wide spending bill Thursday, easing the harshest effects of last year's automatic budget cuts after tea party critics chastened by October's partial shutdown mounted only a faint protest.

The Senate voted 72-26 for the measure, which cleared the House a little more than 24 hours earlier on a similarly lopsided vote. Obama's signature on the bill was expected in time to prevent any interruption in government funding Saturday at midnight.

Read more about some of the key points of the deal on Page A2

The huge bill funds every agency of government, pairing increases for NASA and Army Corps of Engineers construction projects with cuts to the Internal Revenue Service and foreign aid. It pays for implementation of Obama's health care law; a fight over implementing "Obamacare" sparked tea party Republicans to partially shut the government down for 16 days last October.

Also included is funding for tighter regulations on financial markets, but at levels lower than the president wanted.

The compromise-laden legislation reflects the realities of

The 27-year-old foundation's headquarters at 23315 County Road 44A also is home to the Rafiki Exchange, a retail outlet (open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays) filled with unique handcrafts of jewelry, baskets, handbags and wall hangings. Land purchased two years ago for a new police station on Hooks Street in Clermont will be put up for sale, city council members agreed this week, but not because construction plans have been shelved.

Instead, the new police station will be built on the Celebration of Praise property the city bought last month along U.S. Highway 27 for $6.3 million, allowing the city to recoup the price of the four-acre parcel on Hooks.

"I believe this will save (the city) about $1,500,000," Mayor Pro-Tem Ray Goodgame said in an email.

City Manager Darren Gray outlined to council members a preliminary work-up from Architects Design Group, the architect in charge of the police department project. He explained how about 10,000-12,000 square feet inside the 65,000 square-foot church building — at 3799 S. Highway 27 — can be used for the new police station with certain modifications. Another 18,000 -20,000 square-feet of space needed for the police station will have to be added to the outside of the church building before police can move in.

"It's a better location, more central to the city's population, and it will save the taxpayers' money."

Darren Gray
City Manager

Using part of the existing church building for the new police station will save money and construction time, city officials said.

"It's a better location, more central to the city's population, and it will save the taxpayers' money," Gray said of putting the station on U.S. 27 instead of Hooks. He could not say what the exact savings will be until the Hooks property is actually sold.

Planned for the Hooks location was a 26,000 square-foot building with a build-out cost of about $6,500,000.

The city's current police station on West Montrose Street, built in the 1990s for about two dozen police officers and staffers, is about 7,000 square. Nearly three times the number of officers and staffers work there now.

City officials hope the architects will return with formal design plans for the new police station on U.S. 27 in about 90-120 days.

At nearly 69,000 square feet, the church building can hold up to 1,200

Key points in latest spending deal

Associated Press

The Senate has approved a mammoth bill providing $1.1 trillion for federal agencies this year.

Highlights of the measure:

OVERALL: For basic agency operations — excluding the costs of war and natural disasters — the $1.1 trillion includes about $30 billion less than Congress originally provided for last year. But it is also about $20 billion more than was provided after automatic spending cuts called the sequester took effect for 2013.

WAR AND DISASTERS: Provides $92 billion for U.S. military operations overseas this year — mostly in Afghanistan — and nearly $7 billion for disasters. That's about $1 billion less than last year for war and $44 billion less for disasters.

DEFENSE: Provides $487 billion, excluding war costs. Includes money for 1 percent pay raise requested by Obama. Cuts operation and maintenance to $160 billion, $14 billion below last year's enacted level.

MILITARY RETIREES: Exempts wounded military personnel who retire early, and their surviving spouses, from cuts in the annual inflation increases to their benefits.

HEALTH CARE LAW: Funded at lower levels than the administration wanted, including retaining last year's $3.7 billion for the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, which oversees the program.

GUANTANAMO: Prohibits transferring detainees from the American naval prison in Cuba to the United States.

EDUCATION: Denies Obama requests for new preschool programs and new grants to make colleges more affordable. Provides additional $500 million to hire 6,000 more special education workers. Level spending for Pell Grants for lower-income college students.

HOROSCOPES

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, Jan. 17, 2014:

This year many people surround you and demonstrate interest in your work, studies or whatever your focus might be. All this attention could be quite flattering. If you are single, you will meet someone easily. Excitement will surround the developing relationship. Enjoy the moment; worry less about the future. If you are attached, be careful when dealing with joint finances. You easily could become demanding or not see eye to eye with your partner. Find some middle ground, or consider getting separate checking accounts. LEO is lovable and fun.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You will wake up feeling tired, which could be the result of an active dream life. You might decide to clear up an issue involving a higher-up. Sometimes this person's demands are too much to handle, especially when you have other matters to tend to.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Stay secure in that you know what to do and when to act. You have been observing a new friend or associate closely, and you will know when the timing is right to initiate a conversation. Check out a new purchase carefully.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Speak your mind. Your ability to move past a restriction will emerge. You have strong feelings about an associate or someone who plays a role in your daily life. Listen to a suggestion about how to relate better to this person.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be aware of your spending, but proceed accordingly if you feel that you are lucky. Buy a lottery ticket on your way home. Others might decide to make an important call that they have been putting off.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You might have drifted into weekend mode already, and you could have difficulty settling into your day job. Clear your desk, and get as much done as possible. A discussion could become too animated, even for you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You might consider taking the day off and starting the weekend early. Others might notice how drained you are before you do. Listen to the feedback you get more often. Honor a child's request, even if it feels silly to you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Your fiery energy could point to a solution that you might not have considered. Be aware of what you want from a situation. Your requests and demands might seem clear to you, but others will be getting mixed messages. Be clear.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You might not be aware of how much admiration others have for you; people observe your behavior a lot more than you realize. You could be subject to more judgment as a result. Still, you enjoy taking a leadership role.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You might be taken aback by someone's far-out ideas. Once you get past how different they are, you will be able to evaluate whether you want to be a part of this undertaking. This endeavor could be a wild escapade.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You could be taken aback by a partner's revelation. You also might wonder what would be appropriate, past your knee-jerk reaction. Your intensity marks your interactions and draws others toward you. Why not just jump in?

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You have an original way of expressing yourself. Others respond strongly to you. You might not be revealing your true feelings to a very important person in your life. Whatever your reason is, think again.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Be realistic about what you need to get done. If you are ahead of schedule, you might decide to move up your evening plans by an hour or so. Count on the fact that you will feel better if you clear your desk before you start planning your weekend social life.

Test Your Play

1. You are declarer with the West hand at Four Hearts, and North leads the three of diamonds. South wins with the ace and returns the deuce of diamonds to your king. Assuming that the trumps are divided 2-2, how would you play the hand?

WEST	EAST
♠ 9 5 4	♠ K 3
♥ A Q 10 7	♥ K J 9 5 2
♦ K Q	♦ 9 6 4
♣ A 6 5 3	♣ K J 8

2. You are declarer with the West hand at Three Notrump. North leads the six of spades, and you win South's jack with the queen. How would you play the hand?

WEST	EAST
♠ A Q 10	♠ 8 4 2
♥ A 10 3	♥ K J 6
♦ A 10 5	♦ Q J 8
♣ Q 9 8 2	♣ K J 10 5

1. To assure 10 tricks, draw two rounds of trump, ruff dummy's nine of diamonds and lead a low club. If North follows low, finesse the eight! Even if South wins the eight with the nine or ten, he must hand you the contract, whatever he returns.

Thus, a club return into dummy's K-J would allow you to eventually discard a spade from dummy on your ace of clubs; a spade return would establish dummy's king; and a diamond return would allow you to ruff in your hand and discard a spade from dummy.

If North happens to produce the nine or ten when you lead a low club toward the K-J-8, you simply cover with the jack to create the same impregnable position.

2. The contract is certain if you play correctly. All you have to do to ensure a favorable outcome is to cross to the king of hearts, lead the queen of diamonds and finesse. If the queen loses to the king, North cannot return a spade or a heart without handing you a trick, after which you can guarantee 10 tricks by driving out the ace of clubs. If he returns a diamond or a club instead, you simply establish clubs to assure nine tricks.

If the diamond finesse wins at trick three, you abandon the suit and shift your attention to clubs, forcing out the ace. Again you are sure of at least nine tricks.

If you were to lead a club at trick two, which is tempting, you could wind up with your arm in a sling. South might win with the ace and return a spade, and the contract would then be up for grabs.

Tomorrow: Card-reading plus.

divided power in Washington and a desire by both Democrats and Republicans for an election-year respite after three years of budget wars that had Congress and the White House lurching from crisis to crisis. Both parties looked upon the measure as a way to ease automatic spending cuts that both the Pentagon and domestic agencies had to begin absorbing last year.

All 53 Democrats, two independents and 17 Republicans voted for the bill. The 26 votes against it were all cast by Republicans.

Shortly before the final vote, Sen. Ted Cruz, R-Texas, delivered a slashing attack on Senate Democrats, accusing them of ignoring the problems caused by the health care law. "It is abundantly clear that millions of Americans are being harmed right now by this failed law," Cruz said.

Unlike last fall, when he spoke for 21 straight hours and helped force the government shutdown over defunding "Obamacare," this time he clocked in at 17 minutes and simply asked the Senate to unanimously approve an amendment to strip out Obamacare funding. Democrats easily repelled the maneuver.

The 1582-page bill was really 12 bills wrapped into one in negotiations headed by Rep. Harold Rogers, R-Ky., and Sen. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., respective chairmen of the House and Senate Appropriations committees, and their subcommittee lieutenants. They spent weeks hashing out line-by-line details of a broad two-year budget accord passed in December, the first since 2009.

The bill, which cleared the House on a vote of 359-67, increases spending by about $26 billion over fiscal 2013, with most of the increase going to domestic programs. Almost $9 billion in unrequested money for overseas military and diplomatic operations helps ease shortfalls in the Pentagon and foreign aid budgets.

The nuts-and-bolts culture of the appropriators is evident throughout the bill. Lower costs to replace screening equipment, for example, allowed for a cut to the Transportation Security Administration. Lawmakers blocked the Agriculture Department from closing six research facilities. And the Environmental Protection Agency is barred from issuing rules on methane emissions from large livestock operations.

Another provision exempts disabled veterans and surviving military spouses from a pension cut enacted last month. House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, signaled in a brief hallway conversation with The Associated Press that he would oppose a broader drive to repeal the entire pension provision, which saves $6 billion over the coming decade by reducing the annual cost-of-living adjustment for working age military retirees by 1 percentage point.

The National Institutes of Health's proposed budget of $29.9 billion falls short of the $31 billion budget it won when Democrats controlled Congress. Democrats did win a $100 million increase, to $600 million, for so-called TIGER grants for high-priority transportation infrastructure projects, a program that started with a 2009 economic stimulus bill.

Civilian federal workers would get their first pay hike in four years, a 1 percent cost-of-living increase. Democrats celebrated winning an addition $1 billion over last year for the Head Start early childhood education program and excluding from the bill a host of conservative policy "riders" advanced by the GOP.

Rogers won two provisions backed by the coal industry. One would block the EPA and Corps of Engineers from working on new rules on "fill material" related to the mountain top removal mining. Another would keep the door open for Export-Import Bank financing of coal power plants overseas.

Sen. Mike Lee, R-Utah, a tea party favorite, didn't mention the measure's funding of Obamacare in a floor speech earlier in the week; instead he complained at length that the measure dropped funding of a federal program that sends payments to Western states in which much of the land is owned by the federal government and therefore can't be taxed by local governments.

Rabies alert issued for Leesburg area

Staff Report

A rabies alert has been issued for the Leesburg area east of Canal Street after a rabid raccoon tested positive for the disease.

"All residents and visitors in Lake County should be aware that rabies is present in the wild animal population and domestic animals are at risk if not vaccinated," Ross Dickinson, interim administrator of the Florida Department of Health in Lake County said in a press release.

"The public is asked to maintain a heightened awareness that rabies is active in Lake County."

Alerts are designed to increase awareness to the public, but they should not give a false sense of security to areas that have not been named as under an alert, Dickinson said.

Sumter County commissioners had their first meeting this week in the Historic Courthouse, where it has taken more than two years to complete $8 million in renovations.

The 100-year-old building now features modern conveniences such as air conditioning, an updated audio system, assisted listening devices and fire suppression. But the original courtroom still looks the same, with giant oak tables and a portrait of former Sumter County Judge J.C.B. "This takes us back to our historic roots," said Commissioner Don Hahnfeldt, sitting around the table with his fellow commissioners

Bushnell man sentenced in witness tampering case

Staff report

A 25-year-old Bushnell man was sentenced this week to time served for witness tampering in an investigation into the attempted sexual exploitation of a child.

The United States Attorney's Office for the District of South Dakota stated Seth Stone had served 45 days in jail. In addition to time served, he was sentenced to three years of supervised release and a $100 special assessment to the Federal Crime Victims Fund.

Stone was indicted by a federal grand jury on May 15, 2013. He pled guilty on Nov. 18, 2013.

According to U.S. Attorney Brendan Johnson, the conviction stems from an incident between June 1, 2012 and July 15, 2012, wherein Stone instructed a minor to destroy all electronic records of conversations that had occurred between the two of them, knowing an investigation was being conducted into the attempted enticement of a minor using the Internet and attempted sexual exploitation of a child.

This witness tampering case was investigated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Assistant U.S. Attorney Troy R. Morley prosecuted the case.

Lake-Sumter State College's annual fundraiser has exceeded its $235,000 goal by generating $261,000, it was announced Thursday.

The funds will go directly to support student initiatives, including scholarships, programs, funding for books, technology and other essential student needs," said Erin O'Steen Lewin, the college's development manager.

"As we move forward through these challenging economic times, more and more people will take advantage of the educational opportunities that Lake-Sumter State College provides, including the newly established baccalaureate degrees," she said in a press release. The Lake-Sumter State College Foundation Inc. raised the money in its Changing Lives and Building Futures campaign, which ran from September through December.

The grand total was announced during the LSSC foundation's annual board meeting on Wednesday.

CRASH

investigation, police Capt. Rick Thomas said today.

According to Howey-in-the-Hills police, Kunde was driving south on State Road 19 about 2:30 p.m. Saturday when she started to drift across the yellow line near Savage Circle in front of four motorcycles riding in tandem. The first two riders were able to avoid the car, while the third bike was clipped. The car ran head-on into the fourth bike, which carried the Gilbos.

Both were thrown from their 2014 Ultra Glide Harley-Davidson. Thomas said both were wearing helmets and other protective gear, but the impact was too great.

According to an acquaintance, the couple was returning home from a weekly scheduled motorcycle lunch ride when they were hit.

Kunde was taken to Leesburg Regional Medical Center complaining of chest pains.

According to a crash report, Kunde told police she had been feeling sick all day and that she passed out and wasn't aware she had been in an accident until someone told her she had caused the crash.

It is not clear why Kunde would have passed out, but the preliminary crash report lists the cause as "asleep" or "fatigue." As with most traffic fatalities, it is not clear how long the crash investigation will take.

The crash occurred about a mile from Mission Inn on County Road 48. As a result, law enforcement shut down the stretch of SR 19 between Howey-in-the-Hills and Tavares, including the Howey bridge, and rerouted traffic for more than three hours to allow investigators to sift through the scene and workers to clean up clothing, personal items, a helmet and other debris left scattered across the highway.

Nuclear deal clears way for suspended sanctions

JOHN-THOR DAHLBURG
Associated Press

BRUSSELS — Sometime between breakfast and lunchtime Monday, a message will arrive in Belgium's capital that should set in motion an international diplomatic machine, affect billions of dollars blocked in banks and have repercussions from U.S. college campuses to oil tankers on the seas.

In Tehran, inspectors from the International Atomic Energy Agency are expected to certify that day whether Iran is respecting its engagement to rein in its nuclear program, which the Obama administration and U.S. allies fear is directed at producing a bomb.

If the inspectors are satisfied the Iranians are keeping their word, European Union governments, with the White House's blessing, are poised to deliver with surprising swiftness on their end of the deal: a six-month suspension of some of the sanctions that are hobbling Iran's economy.

Foreign ministers of Britain, Germany, France and the rest of the EU member countries will be in Brussels on Monday for one of their periodic meetings.

EU officials said Thursday the plan is that within 30 minutes of receiving an email, phone call or other form of communication from IAEA inspectors or their bosses in Vienna, the foreign ministers will unanimously approve the necessary changes in European Union legislation, and transmit their decision to the trade bloc's offices in the neighboring country of Luxembourg.

Within an hour or hour and half, the new regulations should be posted in the EU's official journal, published in Luxembourg, and take effect, a European Union official said.

All this should happen between 10 a.m. and noon Monday — "unless something goes wrong," the official said on condition of anonymity because he wasn't authorized to speak publicly about the matter.

Under the deal with Iran, brokered by EU foreign policy chief Catherine Ashton, Tehran will be able to progressively take possession of $3.6 billion it has been paid for oil sold to China, India, Japan, Turkey, Taiwan and South Korea. Those funds are blocked in those countries' banks because of U.S. sanctions.

Once the sixth-month suspension takes effect, Iranian officials could jet to Japan or India and carry "bags of cash" back home, the EU official said. But if the money is cycled through European banks, he said, Iranian authorities have been told that if they use accounts in the Central Bank of Iran or other Iranian financial institutions that are suspected of helping underwrite terrorism or the Iranian nuclear program, the transfers will be blocked.

The sanctions suspension also raises tenfold the ceilings for money transfers to and from Iran, and temporarily lifts a ban on transactions in gold and other precious metals.

An additional $600 million in Iranian oil sales proceeds will be freed up to help pay the educational costs of young Iranians, many of whom are enrolled in American colleges and universities.

Campfire embers spark wildfire in hills near LA

RINGO H.W. CHIU / AP

A firefighting helicopter passes over the hills behind homes as a wildfire burns just north of the San Gabriel Valley community of Glendora, Calif., on Thursday.

GLENDORA, Calif. — Campfire embers fanned by gusty winds blew up Thursday into a fast-moving wildfire that forced nearly 2,000 people from their homes in the dangerously dry foothills of the San Gabriel Mountains and threatened densely populated suburbs of Los Angeles.

The blaze draped smoke across the LA basin all the way to the coast and rained ash on Glendora.

"We're underneath a giant cloud of smoke," said Jonathan Lambert, general manager of Classic Coffee. "It's throwing quite the eerie shadow."

Three men in their 20s were arrested on suspicion of recklessly starting the blaze by tossing paper into a campfire in the Angeles National Forest, just north of Glendora. The forest was under "very high" fire danger restrictions, which bar campfires anywhere except in fire rings in designated campgrounds.

There are no designated campgrounds where the fire began, U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman L'Tanga Watson said.

By late afternoon, the flames had charred at least 2½ square miles of dry brush in a wilderness area and destroyed two homes.

At least 10 renters were left homeless when the fire destroyed two guest units on the historic grounds of a retreat that once was the summer estate of the Singer sewing machine family. Statues of Jesus and Mary stood unharmed near the blackened ruins.

"It's really a miracle that our chapel, our main house is safe," owner Jeania Parayno said.

The mountains rise thousands of feet above dense subdivisions crammed up against the scenic foothills. Large, expensive homes stand atop brush-choked canyons that offer sweeping views of the suburbs east of Los Angeles.

Whipped by Santa Ana winds, the fire quickly spread into neighborhoods where residents were awakened before dawn and ordered to leave.

Jennifer Riedel in Azusa was getting her children, ages 5 and 7, ready to evacuate.

"They're a little nervous, but I'm keeping calm for them," she said.

The last catastrophic fire in the San Gabriel Mountains broke out in 2009.

Banks robbed, cars taken: S Sudan's looting spree

ILYA GRIDNEFF and JASON STRAZIUSO
Associated Press

JUBA, South Sudan — The U.N.'s top aid official in South Sudan watched helplessly as armed men in uniform stole a car from an aid group. Thugs took $50,000 of goods from Mercy Corps. Tons of food have been stolen, and $500,000 taken from a bank.

With renewed warfare reverberating throughout the world's newest country, wholesale looting of vehicles, equipment and supplies belonging to aid groups is crippling humanitarians' abilities to help. There is much work to do: Even before the fighting broke |out last month, the people of South Sudan, one of the world's poorest countries, were suffering from dismal health care and little education.

Now it's much worse and they need even more help: Thousands of people have been killed and hundreds of thousands displaced by a month of fighting in South Sudan between factions of the military as well as ethnic militias.

Armed men on Thursday looted the Doctors Without Borders office in the city of Malakal, said Louisa Markering, the group's emergency coordinator. Computers and phones were taken.

"It's getting more and more difficult," said Markering, who noted that this was the second mass theft against the group since the conflict broke out. "If they steal our assets it's going to be more difficult to do our work. ... It makes our life difficult, if not impossible, if our security cannot be guaranteed."

The thefts have been particularly widespread in Bentiu, the capital of the oil-rich Unity State, which was in rebel hands for much of the last month before government troops retook the city.

Toby Lanzer, the U.N.'s top humanitarian official in the country, watched men in uniform steal a car from an unnamed international aid group last week.

COURT

during the meeting Tuesday.

Because of safety concerns, renovation required the Historic Courtroom to lose its outside balcony, which once allowed courthouse officials to yell out verdicts and other news to the public.

Off U.S. Highway 301 in downtown Bushnell, the Historic Courthouse was completed in 1913, after fire destroyed the county's courthouse in Sumterville. The courthouse expanded over the years and eventually became part of a judicial complex, where commissioners also used to meet.

With the expansion came at least two more courtrooms where most of the cases were heard, and the Historic Courtroom was used mostly for other judicial matters.

But the Historic Courthouse section didn't age well.

Cracks in doors allowed the sun to stream through. Parts of the gargoyle-topped antique columns were chipped off, and some water pipes were corroded.

Then came the renovation project. The interior renovation for the courthouse included walls, doors, mechanical, electrical, fire protection, technology and improved accessibility to the three-story building. The work was mostly completed in November.

In December, commissioners voted to move their Bushnell meetings back to the Historic Courthouse courtroom. During Tuesday's meeting, some county officials (not commissioners) sat in the jury box, which is designated for employees.

County Administrator Bradley Arnold said the biggest accommodation for the commission meeting was the new audio system. He added that having meetings in the courtroom will give more residents a chance to view it.

"It will allow people to see our rich history," he said.

County commissioners have met in a number of places over the years, including Leesburg when it was part of Sumter County. They eventually started alternating between The Villages and the former county seat in an old Winn-Dixie building on Main Street in Bushnell.

Commissioners' regular meetings will now be held the second Tuesday of every month at the Historic Courthouse and the fourth Tuesday at Colony Cottage Regional Recreation Center in The Villages.

The commissioners' workshop the second Tuesday of the month will take place in The Villages Sumter County Service Center in Wildwood.

RABIES

Street east to the Lake Griffin-Lake Harris 441 Connector where Sleepy Hollow Road connects to the highway. The north boundary of the area in Lake Griffin and the south boundary is Lake Harris.

Rabies is a disease of the nervous system and is fatal to warm-blooded animals and humans, and the only treatment for human exposure to rabies is rabies-specific immune globulin and rabies immunization, the press release said. Appropriate treatment, if started soon after the exposure, will protect an exposed person from the disease.

The following advice was issued:

- Keep rabies vaccinations up to date for all pets.
- Vaccinations must be conducted by a licensed veterinarian.
- Keep your pets under direct supervision so they do not come in contact with wild animals. If your pet is bitten by a wild animal, seek veterinary assistance for the animal immediately and contact Lake County Animal Services at 352-343-9668.
- Call your local animal control agency to remove any stray animals from your neighborhood.
- Do not handle, feed or unintentionally attract wild animals with open garbage cans or litter.
- Never adopt wild animals or bring them into your home.
- Teach children never to handle unfamiliar animals, wild or domestic, even if they appear friendly.
- Prevent bats from entering living quarters or occupied spaces in homes, churches, schools and other similar areas where they might come in contact with people and pets.

People who have been bitten or scratched by wild or domestic animals should seek medical attention and report the injury to the Florida Department of Health in Lake County at 352-253-6130.

For further information on rabies, go to the Florida Department of Health website: www.floridahealth.gov/diseases-and-conditions/rabies/index.html, or contact the Florida Department of Health in Lake County at 352-253-6130 or Lake County Animal Services at 352-343-9668.

RAFIKI

"Rafiki" means "friend" in Swahili, and the Rafiki Foundation notes its purpose is to befriend orphans and widows in their distress in Ghana, Liberia, Nigeria, Tanzania, Zambia, Malawi, Uganda, Kenya, Rwanda and Ethiopa. The foundation provides materials and training in education and Bible study.

Rosemary Jensen, 84, of Umatilla, is the founder of Rafiki, and her love and desire to help Africans goes back to when she was 17, when she was first inspired by a pastor to go into the missionary field. After college, marriage and with her first child in tow, Jansen and her medical doctor husband, Robert, left the U.S. in 1957 to serve in Tanzania, where he practiced medicine and Rosemary taught school, crafts and the Bible.

"I didn't have a vision for this; God had it in his mind," she said earlier this week, reflecting on her seven decades of mission work, which also involved supporting her husband as he founded the Kilimanjaro Christian Centre, a 450-bed hospital on the slopes of Mt. Kilimanjaro.

Jansen believes the early years were stepping stones leading to the Rafiki Foundation, where she's currently involved in developing a computer-based program to train teachers.

"I would like to see the programs that we have begun to really go forward, expand, and see many, many people educated. I'm right now most concerned about the training of teachers," she said. "I see that there is a much bigger picture when we work through our partner churches in Africa and their schools so that their whole education system can change. … We have about 188,000 children now who are studying the Bible every day, but I would like to see 10 million in my lifetime."

She aspires to see that 10 million reached in the next five years.

"I am thrilled with what God has done, what God is doing and what God still intends to do," Jensen said. "From day one, God slowly revealed what he wanted done one little bit at a time, and so we take it one step at a time. … He has kept Africa in my heart and I can't think of anything that I would rather do, anything that I would enjoy more, anything that would be more wonderful for me to do than this. I wouldn't change anything over the years."

BRETT LEBLANC / DAILY COMMERCIAL

A shipment of school materials fills a warehouse at the Rafiki Foundation in Eustis Tuesday. It is less expensive for the Rafiki Foundation to print the materials in Eustis and then ship them in 13 ton allotments than it is for them to print the materials in Africa.

WHITNEY WILLARD / STAFF GRAPHIC

Jansen retired last year, yet she's at the Rafiki home office three days a week, and she communicates every morning via email with Karen Elliott, the CEO.

"We are on the edge, perhaps of fulfilling the vision of impacting millions of children with daily Bible classes, improved education," Elliott said. "It's what can transform education in Africa, and the key thing missing is the teacher training, but Rosemary is the designer (of a new program) to train teachers with a computer-based, self-pace program in these 10 countries … This is the thing that we are focusing most of our attention and energy, and that is the way we can reached the 10 million, and we don't have to build another Rafiki village."

Jensen said Rafiki needs people who are artists or art teachers, musicians or music teachers, or teachers in general who would like to serve as missionaries for one or two years, or possibly longer. Rafiki also works with local church groups that want to do two-week mission trips in Africa. The group sent out 202 people in 2013 and hopes to have 300 this year.

Elliott said people can support Rafiki on a local scale by sponsoring an orphan, by helping fund a school curriculum, by helping to cover the cost of printing school course materials (which are printed at the foundation's home office), or by buying the goods and products made by widows in the Rafiki Exchange. Elliott said it has been rewarding to see African widows receive money to be able to put food on the table for their children and build on to their homes.

"A group of widows in Rwanda came together and from the extra money that they made (through the Rafiki Exchange), they pooled their money to build a couple of rooms that they now rent out to seminary students for a steady income," Elliott said. "So you can see how enterprising they are and how their money multiplies. It's just a joy to see what God does."

Jensen said she trusts God will continue to use Rafiki to help change the face of Africa, to help more people know God and improve their economic conditions. She believes Rafiki is what she was born to do.

"I don't know what's going to happen long after I die, but I can look back and be thankful for being a part of the beginning of it all and being given the privilege of doing it," Jensen said.

Back to the drawing board on 'net neutrality' rules

The Federal Communications Commission has struggled for a decade to find a way to preserve what may be the Internet's most important quality: that there are no gatekeepers between users and the websites they frequent. Three successive FCC chairmen have tried writing guidelines or rules to stop broadband providers such as Time Warner Cable and Verizon from playing favorites among websites or giving their own services an unfair advantage, only to run into problems when the commission tried to enforce them. On Monday, a federal appeals panel for the District of Columbia Circuit rejected the commission's latest set of "net neutrality" rules, saying they violated federal law.

The FCC's rules had three main provisions for wired broadband providers: They could not block access to any legal content or service, they could not favor one site's traffic over another and they had to make clear what they were doing to reduce congestion in their pipes. Wireless broadband providers could not block legal sites either, and could not discriminate unreasonably against competing voice or video services.

Writing for a three-judge panel, Judge David Tatel accepted the FCC's argument that the steady stream of new content and services drives the demand for Internet connections, so protecting the openness of the Net would spur the investment in broadband that Congress hoped to encourage. The problem, Tatel wrote, is that the commission's rules put broadband providers into a tighter box than federal law allows.

Opponents of the net neutrality rules say the FCC is trying to fix a problem that doesn't exist. But top broadband executives have repeatedly said that they want to charge tolls on the sites responsible for the most traffic, and AT&T recently announced a plan that invites sites to pay the data bill for AT&T's customers.

The FCC could answer the court's statutory objections by reversing a pair of rulings it made in the last decade that classified broadband as an information service, not a telecommunication service subject to far more extensive regulation. But such a step could be regulatory overkill, subjecting 21st century services to rules that date back 80 years. New FCC Chairman Tom Wheeler noted Monday that the court upheld the commission's authority to impose some rules on broadband providers, and he pledged to keep trying to preserve "a free and open platform for innovation and expression." Broadband providers should join in that effort, or risk devaluing their most valuable product.

America has much to learn about government-run healthcare

Cal Thomas

TRIBUNE MEDIA SERVICES

While the Obama administration offers life support to its Affordable Care Act, in the UK a growing number of people are asking whether it's time to pull the plug on the National Health Service (NHS), which is in critical condition.

For many years the UK media have carried stories that not only bode ill for the future of government-run health care, but also continue to serve as a "code blue" warning to the U.S. as to what might be in our future if we decide to go down that road.

Writing in the Daily Telegraph under the headline, "It's time to make difficult decisions about the NHS," columnist Judith Woods says, "The NHS, dying on its feet for decades, is in a critical state. The promised injection of cash may stabilize it temporarily, but the chances of a full recovery are nil."

She is not alone.

A headline in the Guardian, declares the NHS "on the brink of extinction."

While in America there are concerns about an insufficient number of younger people signing up for Obamacare, in the UK among the latest causes for concern is a plan that the Guardian writes "...would only see new drugs licensed for NHS if judged to be a benefit to wider society."

Does this sound like a close relative of eugenics? Let us not talk of "death panels," or should we? In the UK, the National Institute for Health and Care Excellence decides whether new medicines should be approved. Might it someday also come down to some official deciding who gets treatment and who doesn't? Changing the name of the decision-making entity doesn't alter the intent, or the outcome.

Already, according to the Daily Mail, citing a report by the European Commission (EC), "Britain has fewer doctors per person than nearly all other European countries." There are just 2.71 doctors for every 1,000 people. The EC reports the UK ranked "24th out of 27 countries in the EU, behind some of the poorest countries, including Bulgaria, Estonia and Latvia." General practitioners are paid 1,500 pounds (about $2,500) a shift to cover nights and weekends in overburdened ERs. Can one see this crisis looming on America's horizon as the current supply of doctors proves inadequate to treat a flood of new Obamacare patients?

"A growing and aging population, public health problems like obesity and constant advances in treatment and technology are all contributing to push NHS costs well above general inflation."

Dr. Mark Porter
Chairman of the council at the British Medical Association

What's more, stories about incompetence and corruption within the NHS, once the exception, are now common. "Blood donors turned away by clinics' incompetence," says a headline in the Daily Mail.

The NHS was supposed to reduce the number of people who seek treatment in emergency rooms. Instead, the BBC reports, some patients visit them as many as four times a week. Citing data from 183 sites obtained under the Freedom of Information Act, BBC News writes, "... nearly 12,000 people made more than 10 visits to the same unit in 2012-13. A small number of those — just over 150 — attended more than 50 times." The same has proven true for Obamacare. Obama said that coverage would result in fewer ER visits, when in fact studies already show that the newly covered are visiting ERs more frequently.

An editorial in the Daily Telegraph says, "The NHS is cursed by a devotion to dogma." People have come to expect "free" care, and the cost of "free" is breaking the system. The editorial recommends everyone visiting a GP should be required to pay 10 pounds ($16) to "discourage those with minor ailments" from making a trip to the ER.

Dr. Mark Porter, chairman of the council at the British Medical Association, has said that if the NHS were a country, it would barely have a credit rating. He warns: "A growing and aging population, public health problems like obesity and constant advances in treatment and technology are all contributing to push NHS costs well above general inflation."

If the NHS can't be sustained in the UK, why would anyone believe an American experience will be different? The ACA, of course, is not nationalized health care (people pay insurance premiums, after all), but some think it could evolve into that.

If it's a question of dogma vs. experience, experience should prevail. The UK experience with nationalized health care can teach America something.

San Clemente (Calif.) senior midfielder Fernando Perez dribbles the ball down field while being chased by Winter Garden West Orange junior Felipe Silva (29) during Thursday's game of the Montverde Academy Invitational Soccer Tournament. A late goal lifted San Clemente to a 3-2 victory.

Opening night at the Montverde Academy Invitation Soccer Tournament had everything for area fans.

Thursday's quartet of games featured high-scoring affairs, defensive struggles, a victory in the final minutes and the tournament's defending champions began defense of their title.

The tournament's second game of the day, which pitted San Clemente (Calif.) against Winter Garden West Orange was arguably the most exciting contest of the tournament. It wasn't decided until Dylan Struthers banked in a score in the final two minutes of the match to give the Tritons a 3-2 victory.

Winter Garden West Orange held a 1-0 lead heading into the second half before the Tritons found their soccer legs.

Bryce Kaminsky scored a pair of goals — a header in the 61st minute and a redirected shot in the 65th minute — to give San Clemente a lead. The Tritons dominated play for much of the second half, keeping the ball in their offensive end of the field.

The Warriors (12-1-2) forged a tie late and both teams appeared content with a 2-2 decision until Struthers came free with the ball.

After the senior buried the game winner in the net, San Clemente withstood multiple scoring runs by the Warriors to secure the victory.

San Clemente (15-0-1) advances to Championship Bracket play today with a 6 p.m. match against Coppell (Texas) which beat Auburndale 5-0 in Thursday's first game of the day.

Winter Garden West Orange will play Auburndale at 2 p.m. today in a Consolation Bracket contest.

Delray Beach American Heritage will play at 8 p.m. today after beating Phoenix Brophy 3-2 on penalty kicks.

Montverde Academy's game against North Broward was not completed in time for this edition. American Heritage will face the winner of Montverde Academy's game.

Play begins today at 2 p.m. with four games on the schedule.

NASCAR should follow lead of WWE

NASCAR is continuing to morph into something more akin to professional wrestling than a bonafide sport.

With its credibility still in question following the fiasco at Richmond last season, when Michael Waltrip Racing tried to fix the finish of a race to benefit one of its drivers, stock car racing's ruling body announced recently that it is looking to change its point system.

Frank Jolley
THE SPORTS COLUMN

Any changes would be made prior to the Daytona 500 on Feb. 23 and would mark the fourth change to the Sprint Cup Chase for the Championship points system since 2004. It is expected that a new method for distributing points would place a higher emphasis on winning rather than finishing.

I guess with sagging television ratings and acres of empty seats at race tracks, NASCAR has decided to sacrifice reality in an effort to attract new fans and boost viewership.

Why doesn't NASCAR come out and admit they're in the sports entertainment business?

It's become wrestling on wheels.

Sharapova wins after another Aussie scorcher

JOHN PYE
Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — Maria Sharapova was already soaking in ice by the time the extreme weather warning arrived.

It seemed bafflingly late to the four-time major winner, who felt fried after playing for 3½ hours in searing heat to reach the third round of the Australian Open. She didn't know it when she was out on Rod Laver Arena tangling with Karin Knapp on Thursday, but tournament organizers had finally conceded it was unsafe to keep players on court on the third consecutive day of what is shaping as a once-in-a-century heat wave.

Matches were suspended for four hours as temperatures topped 43 Celsius (109 Fahrenheit) before subsiding, but that didn't apply to

Let's get nasty: 49ers vs. Seahawks

BARRY WILNER

RENTON, Wash. — Packers-Bears. Steelers-Browns. Cowboys vs. anybody in the NFC East.

Those are long-standing NFL rivalries.

Add to them 49ers-Seahawks, with a history of nastiness emanating from the college ranks for their coaches, and a hefty animosity built up in annual doubleheaders in their division. Now they meet for a spot in the Super Bowl.

Are those hard feelings for real?

"I think so, but it'll always be that way when you have two good teams in the same division," 49ers receiver Anquan Boldin said. "You play each other a couple times a year and if you're good enough, possibly three times a year. It was the same way when I was in Baltimore playing against Pittsburgh. You respect each other as foes, but there is really a dislike."

It's a healthy thing, really, because it makes for even more uncompromising action — on the field and on the sideline.

One of these teams will emerge Sunday from ear-splitting CenturyLink Field headed for New Jersey to play for the sport's biggest prize. The other will carry into the offseason even more loathing for this opponent.

"There is no love lost; there is no love found," said Seahawks cornerback Richard Sherman, who will find himself lined up often against Boldin in the NFC championship game. "It's going to be intense. It's going to be physical. I don't know if there are going to be handshakes after this one."

That almost goes without saying with the coaches. When 49ers coach Jim Harbaugh was at Stanford — where, incidentally, Sherman played after being recruited by current Seahawks coach Pete Carroll when he was at Southern California — he ran up the score in a 2009 win at Los Angeles that prompted Carroll to

The organization lost its standing as a major sport when fans watched and listened on Sept. 7 just how teams and drivers manipulate races. In a race that would finalize the field for the final, 10-race Chase for the Sprint Cup championship, viewers knew before it happened that Clint Bowyer was going to spin out so that Martin Truex, Jr. — Bowyer's teammate — could get into the Chase.

The incident initially got Truex into the field for the championship run and eliminated Jeff Gordon. However, in the days that followed, NASCAR learned of the ruse and tried to save face by booting Truex out of the Chase and putting in Gordon, which is what likely would've happened anyway if Bowyer had not suffered his "accident."

Many NASCAR insiders smirked about the incident and suggested the only thing wrong with what happened is how the incident played out in public when drivers and crews spoke openly about it on the in-car radios.

It was another of the similarities between NASCAR and professional wrestling. In the ring, a wrestler often whispers in an opponent's ear to let him know what move is coming up.

Referees and officials around the ring wear earpieces to make sure the script is being followed and promoters are "behind the curtain," ensuring that everything comes off as it should for the benefit of the show.

And professional wrestling is thriving.

When officials at the World Wrestling Entertainment announced that professional wrestling was, indeed, entertainment, it landed a new batch of fans. That was about 20 years ago.

Over the years, professional wrestling has become one of cable television's biggest draws, ratings wise. World Wrestling Entertainment — the premier organization in the business — also runs monthly pay-per-view events that generate millions of dollars in revenue.

Fans of professional wrestling know what it is and still watch.

With the incident in Richmond documented, there is virtually no difference between NASCAR and the WWE. The only thing left is for NASCAR to admit it is more entertainment than sport.

Many fans have always looked at it as a show.

They go to the track to see the crashes — NASCAR's equivalent of a professional wrestler flying off the top rope.

If NASCAR would fess up, fans could suspend reality as they headed into the track and enjoy the show. It would open up all kinds of possibilities for on-track drama.

For instance, drivers could have "foreign objects" on their cars, like spikes protruding from their wheels to puncture an opponent's tires.

Or little hoses mounted on their rear bumpers to spray oil on the track in front of unsuspecting drivers.

How about a car with giant propeller mounted on the roof to lift it over the field and avoid a potential mishap at critical points in the race?

Even the roster of drivers could change and become more animated and — dare I say — fun. Rather than cheering for Dale Earnhardt Jr., who can't seem to buy a win anymore, we wear the colors of Dick Dastardly and his sidekick, Mutley the dog. Instead of wasting our time with Danica Patrick, we can follow the exploits of Penelope Pitstop.

Certainly, it would be more entertaining that watching 43 clones turn left for three hours.

All NASCAR has to do is admit the obvious — that it's no more on the level than professional wrestling.

An afternoon at the track would instantly become more enjoyable.

There could be tag-team races and a 20 car battle royales.

NASCAR could have a group of "face" drivers (good guys) and "heels" (bad guys).

They could bring in some drivers from "parts unknown and weight unknown."

The possibilities are endless.

And it would be a ratings bonanza.

Fans would flock to their televisions or to the track for an enjoyable afternoon or evening.

They wouldn't ask if it were real.

They would already know.

And they wouldn't care.

The racetrack would be a fun place to be for the first time in ages.

Have I gone too far?

Perhaps.

But, right now, NASCAR is fading into the horizon and needs something to snap the organization out of its funk.

A transformation into a variation of the hottest sport entertainment conglomerate around might be enough to save NASCAR from itself.

ask him at game's end: "What's your deal."

Harbaugh's deal has always revolved around being a hard-edged player and coach. His teams embody that attitude, and it certainly has worked in San Francisco. The 49ers are 41-13-1 in his three seasons in charge, are in their third straight conference title game, and back down from no one.

That can make for some uncomfortable moments, whether it's Harbaugh's overzealous handshakes and back slaps after wins or his team playing up to (and sometimes beyond) the whistle.

Carroll claims the acrimony between them is overblown.

"For whatever reasons, you guys have had a field day with this," Carroll told reporters Thursday. "We have not been friends over the year, we just know each other through the games. We have a very confined relationship.

"I have great respect for Jim. That's it — you guys have had a blast with it."

Carroll's Seahawks aren't exactly wallflowers, either. Defensively, at least, these are the NFL's two most physical and intimidating units.

That, in turn, can lead to ill will.

"I don't hate anybody," All-Pro cornerback Sherman said. "So I don't think (there's) hate. But passion, definitely. There will be some passion, some dislike — some strong dislike. But there will be some intensity. It's playoff football.

"So even if we weren't two teams that are familiar with each other ... there's going to be a lot of intensity, a lot of chippiness, and a hard-fought game."

Where might this antipathy show most?

Try whenever Seahawks running back Marshawn Lynch — his nickname, "Beast Mode," says it all about his style of play — meets up with All-Pro NaVorro Bowman and his fellow linebackers, the best group in the NFL.

Or when Boldin, among the best clutch receivers in football, uses his physicality against Sherman, safety Earl Thomas, a fellow All-Pro, and the rest of the game's top secondary.

All of the matchups for Sunday are familiar to both sides, of course. And when division foes meet for the conference title — each team won at home this season — the results hardly are predictable.

Since the 1970 merger, there have been 15 third meetings in conference championships, 10 in the AFC, including the Seahawks losing to Oakland when Seattle was an AFC franchise in 1983. The 49ers beat the Rams in such a meeting in 1989. In 10 of those games, the host won.

What can be forecast for Sunday: hard feelings all around, even if 49ers linebacker Patrick Willis tones it down slightly.

Sharapova and Knapp because they were already into the third set and the Extreme Heat Policy only kicks in at the end of sets in progress.

Sharapova thinks it absurd that a vague formula for measuring ambient temperature, wind and humidity leaves the tournament referee as the sole arbiter of extreme heat — without input from the players.

"We have never received any emails or, you know, warnings about the weather or what to do," she told a news conference an hour or so after her 6-3, 4-6, 10-8 win over Knapp.

Then she recalled: "Actually, I did receive one, I think, while I was in the ice bath a few minutes ago — I was like, 'That's a little too late.'"

Not long after tournament director Craig Tiley appeared outdoors in a TV interview, dressed in jacket and tie, to explain how the decisions are reached, Sharapova said organizers should be telling the tour trainers, medical staff, officials and players so that everyone is in the loop.

The only matches that continued in the afternoon were on the two main show courts under closed roofs, which in hindsight was a good thing when the lightning and rain arrived later in the evening to again delay matches on outside courts. It is Melbourne, after all.

MLB approves expanded instant replay

BOB BAUM
Associated Press

PARADISE VALLEY, Ariz. — Major League Baseball will greatly expand instant replay to review close calls starting this season.

MLB announced Thursday that owners, players and umpires have approved the new system.

Each manager will be allowed to challenge at least one call per game. If he's right, he gets another challenge. After the seventh inning, a crew chief can request a review on his own if the manager has used his challenges.

The so-called "neighborhood play" at second base on double plays cannot be challenged. Many had safety concerns for middle infielders being wiped out by hard-charging runners if the phantom force was subject to review.

"I tell you the fans will love it," baseball Commisioner Bud Selig said after owners met and voted their unanimous approval. "It's another in a long list of changes that will make this sport better than it already is."

All reviews will be done by current MLB umpires at a replay center in MLB.com's New York office. To create a large enough staff, MLB agreed to hire six new big league umpires and call up two minor league umps for the entire season. A seventh major league umpire will be added to replace the late Wally Bell.

Joe Torre, MLB's executive vice president of baseball operations, said work continues on a proposed rule that would ban home-plate collisions between runners and the catcher. The rule has not been written and talks on its content are ongoing between MLB representatives and the players union, he said.

Baseball was the last major pro sport in North America to institute replay when it began late in the 2008 season. Even then, it was only used for close calls on home runs.

The NFL, NBA, NHL, some NCAA sports and major tennis tournaments all use a form of replay, and even FIFA and the English Premier League have adopted goal-line technology for soccer.

Philadelphia's Pedro Feliz, left, and Jimmy Rollins watch in the background, as umpires discuss a call at first base during the fifth inning in Game 1 of the 2009 World Series against the New York Yankees in New York. Major League Baseball announced Thursday that it will expand instant replay to review close calls starting this season.

"I think it's great," San Francisco Giants manager Bruce Bochy said. "It's about getting it right, and with our technology today we can do that in a way I don't think we will interrupt the flow of the game."

To make baseball reviews uniform, cameras will transit 12 angles from each ballpark. MLB Chief Operating Officer Rob Manfred said it was uncertain whether the replay system will be in place in Australia for the season-opening series between the Arizona Diamondbacks and Los Angeles Dodgers.

"For some, the discussions regarding expanded replay appeared to move too slowly, too deliberately," said Brian Lam, the lawyer for the World Umpires Association. "But there were technical and operational challenges that needed to be addressed, and that took time. ith so many competing interests and opinions, it is unlikely that all will be completely pleased at the end of the day, but that's often the nature of things."

Selig said the replay expansion ranks "very, very high" when compared with other moves made during his time on the job.

The new rule allows ballparks to show fans the same replays on stadium video screens. But only plays under review can be shown on the screen in slow motion.

Price, Rays agree to $14 million, 1-year contract

FRED GOODALL
Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG — Now that Tampa Bay's David Price is slated to earn the biggest single-season salary in Rays history, the three-time All-Star hopes he remains part of the budget-minded franchise's plans for 2014.

The team announced Thursday that the 2012 AL Cy Young Award winner agreed to a $14 million, one-year deal. However, the agreement doesn't eliminate the possibility of a trade.

"I still have the mindset moving forward that I want to be with the Rays," said Price, who at the end of last season seemed resigned to the fact that he'd probably be dealt during the offseason.

The 28-year-old has been the subject of trade speculation after going 10-8 with a 3.33 ERA last year while earning $10,112,500. He is eligible for free agency after the 2015 season, and the Rays likely won't be in a position to pay the type of money Price could earn on the open market.

If he's traded, Price believes it wouldn't be before Japanese pitcher Masahiro Tanaka decides where to sign. Teams have until Jan. 24 to reach an agreement with Tanaka, a 25-year-old right-hander who was 24-0 with a 1.27 ERA last year for the Japan Series champion Rakuten Golden Eagles.

Price believes the Rays, who've made the playoffs four of the past six seasons, could have one of the best teams again in 2014.

"I want to be part of it. I think we're going to have a really good season," Price said.

Magic losing streak at 9 after triple OT loss to Bulls

KYLE HIGHTOWER
Associated Press

ORLANDO — It's no secret that the Chicago Bulls gave up a lot of talent when they decided to trade away Luol Deng last week.

What the Bulls have shown since he left, though, is that there is still plenty of fight left in the players that remain on the roster.

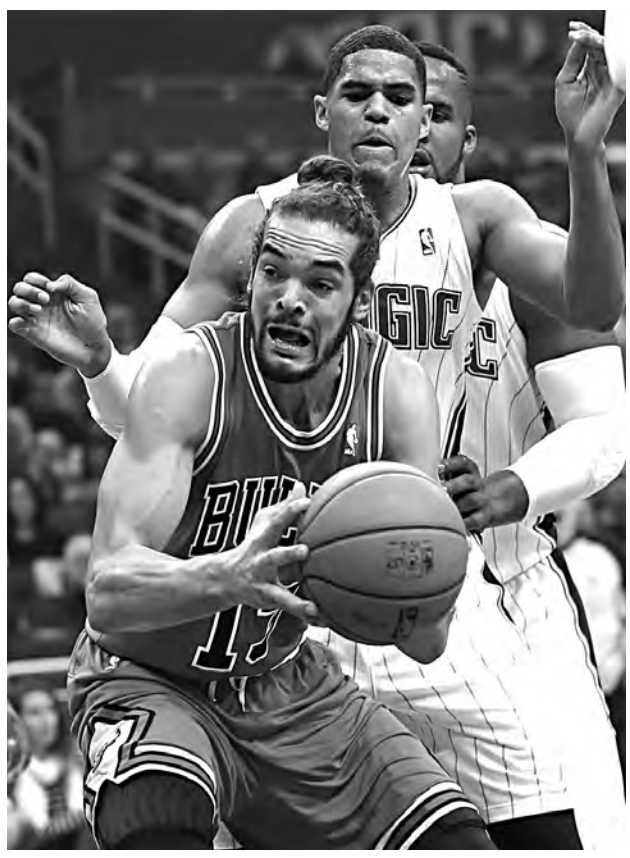
Joakim Noah had a season-high 26 points and 19 rebounds, Carlos Boozer scored 23, and the Bulls held on to beat the Orlando Magic 128-125 in triple-overtime on Wednesday night.

"The only thing it defines is us going on a plane right now a lot happier," Noah said. "There's nothing better than winning a basketball game. It feels good. We know we didn't play great basketball tonight but we found a way.

"We came back from the dead, a lot of people stepped up."

The Magic had a chance to win the game with less than 10 seconds to play, but Glen Davis' jumper was partially blocked and rebounded by the Bulls with just 1.5 seconds remaining.

The game featured 20 lead changes and 14 ties and lasted just over 3 hours. Nine players logged over 40 minutes. That included Chicago's Jimmy Butter, who played a franchise-record 60 minutes and finished with 21 points.



JOHN RAOUX / AP

Chicago's Joakim Noah, front, looks to go up for a shot off a rebound in front of Orlando's Tobias Harris during the first half of Wednesday's game in Orlando.

The Bulls have now won the last seven matchups with the Magic played in Orlando and improved to 4-1 since dealing Deng.

Chicago coach Tom Thibodeau said Noah was a key throughout.

"There's not many players like him," Thibodeau said. His all-around defense, every aspect, the rebounding effort, to seeing things early (and) how they're developing... It's just great effort."

Orlando came into the game in desperate need of a win coming off a 0-5 road trip. The Magic played one of their best games of the season but it wasn't enough as they extended their season-high losing streak to nine games.

Victor Oladipo had a career-high 35 points and Jameer Nelson added 31 points and 10 assists for Orlando. Tobias Harris added 22 points and 16 rebounds.

"I was more mad than exhausted," said Oladipo, who played a team-high 57 minutes. "I'm more mad than exhausted right now. But it's a short turnaround, so you have to have a short-term memory."

What made Orlando's effort even more surprising is that it played without starters Arron Afflalo and Nik Vucevic. Afflalo missed his third straight game with a strained right foot, and Vucevic was out for the fifth straight with a concussion.

During their recent road trip, the Magic were tripped up by those injuries.

Despite losing by an average of 20 points during the trip, coach Jacque Vaughn continually lauded his team's improvement throughout. He did again after Wednesday's loss.

"You feel for the guys, you want them to get a victory underneath them. But we got better tonight," Vaughn said.

In a game that didn't see either team take more than an four-point lead in any of the overtime periods, the Magic went ahead 125-122 in the third OT on a 3-pointer by Harris.

But Chicago kept chipping away, and eventually took the lead for good, 126-125, on a jumper by Tony Snell.

The Bulls had a 119-116 lead in the second overtime on a tip-in by Noah.

After several empty possessions on both ends, Davis tied it on a straightway 3 with just 4.2 seconds left.

Noah got free on a drive on the other end, but was fouled.

The Bulls then failed to get up a shot.

The Magic controlled the early pace of first overtime and took a 111-108 lead on a free-throw by Harris with 1:22 remaining.

But the Bulls committed their 17th turnover of the night on a bad pass by Noah with less than a minute to play, prompting a Magic timeout.

Nelson briefly got free, but came up empty on a 13-foot jumper, giving it back to Chicago.

Coming out of a timeout Mike Dunleavy got free on the wing and sank a 3-pointer to tie it with 13.4 seconds left.

Nelson dribbled the clock down, but couldn't get a shot off before time expired.

The Magic hovered above 55 percent shooting as they built as much as a 15-point lead in the third quarter.

Butler said the win was indicative of a style that hasn't gone away for the Bulls.

"We're grimy and we play as a team," he said. "There is no guy that doesn't give all the effort on every single play. Whenever you play like that, good things happen. The basketball gods will reward you."

Orlando hosts Charlotte at 7 p.m. today, looking to snap its nine game losing streak.

Airfares up 12% since '09

SCOTT MAYEROWITZ
AP Airlines Writer

NEW YORK — The price of flying continues to climb, with the average domestic roundtrip ticket, including tax, reaching $363.42 last year, up more than $7 from the prior year.

The 2 percent increase outpaced inflation, which stood at 1.5 percent for the year, and represents the fourth consecutive year fliers have faced price hikes.

Airfares have risen nearly 12 percent since the recessionary low in 2009, when adjusted for inflation, according to an Associated Press analysis of fare data from the Airlines Reporting Corp., which processes ticket transactions for airlines and more than 9,400 travel agencies, including websites such as Expedia and Orbitz.

The price of flying has gone up as airlines have cut unprofitable routes, packed more passengers into planes and have merged with one another, providing travelers with fewer options.

AP FILE PHOTO

A plane takes off over a departure board at Hartsfield-Jackson Airport in Atlanta.

Today, 84 percent of seats are filled with paying passengers, up from 82 percent in 2009.

"Anyone traveling today will know that those flights are full," says Chuck Thackston, managing director of data and analytics for the Airlines Reporting Corp. "Just through supply and demand, those fares will go up."

And none of this factors in the bevy of extra fees travelers now face for checking bags, getting extra legroom or even purchasing a blanket, meal or pair of headphones. The typical traveler pays an additional $50 roundtrip to check a single suitcase. Those fees, introduced in 2008 to offset losses from rising fuel prices, now bring in $3.4 billion a year for U.S. airlines and have helped them return consistent annual profits for the last four years.

Airlines pay just over $3 a gallon for jet fuel, up from $1.89 in 2009. Another $2.7 billion a year is collected in reservation-change fees, with airlines charging up to $200 to revise an itinerary.

"I love to travel, but they're making it more difficult," says Brian Kalish, a frequent flier from Arlington, Va. "Maybe I've been spoiled that it used to be so cheap to fly. It just feels like they are charging more and giving less."

Airlines are able to push fare and fee hikes because there is less competition.

"You get some pricing power as a result," says airline consultant Robert Mann.

US weekly jobless benefit claims drop

JOSH BOAK
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — The number of Americans seeking unemployment benefits fell 2,000 last week to a seasonally adjusted 326,000, a sign that layoffs are weighing less on the job market and economic growth.

The Labor Department said Thursday that the less volatile four-week average dropped 13,500 to 335,000.

More than 4.7 million Americans collected benefits at the end of last year. The figure has declined almost 1.2 million over the past 12 months. But that number is poised drop by another 1.35 million in upcoming weeks. That's because a special federal program expired last month and is starting to affect recipients.

Applications appear to have stabilized near pre-recession levels, a positive sign for hiring going forward.

The job market had picked up toward the end of last year before losing some momentum in December. A mere 74,000 jobs were created last month, after the economy added an average of 213,500 new jobs in the previous four months.

Many economists blamed the slowdown in hiring on bad weather and statistical quirks, and projected stronger gains in the new year.

The unemployment rate fell last month to 6.7 percent from 7 percent in November. Much that decrease came from 347,000 unemployed workers leaving the workforce. The government counts people as unemployed only if they are looking for work.

US stocks close mostly lower

Traders gather at a post on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange.

NEW YORK — A batch of negative company news gave investors something to fret over Thursday.

A day after eking out its first record high of 2014, the stock lost ground Thursday as electronics retailer Best Buy, Goldman Sachs and Citigroup, and railroad CSX had disappointing earnings news.

Consumer discretionary companies and banks fell the most.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index slipped 2.49 points, or 0.1 percent, to 1,845.89 — retreating from the all-time high it hit the day before.

Best Buy fell the most in the S&P 500 index after the company reported a decline in sales during the crucial holiday season. Its shares plunged $10.74, or 29 percent, to $26.83.

Investors had high hopes that Best Buy, which has faced intense competition from companies like Amazon.com, would put itself back on track. The stock soared 236 percent last year. However, the company said Thursday that the aggressive price-matching policy it offered during the holidays backfired and sales fell 0.8 percent compared to a year ago.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 64.93 points, or 0.4 percent, to 16,417.01. The Nasdaq composite had a modest gain of 3.8 points, or 0.1 percent, to 4,218.69.

Goldman Sachs was the biggest drag on the Dow, falling $3.58, or 2 percent, to $175.17.

The bank reported a drop in fourth-quarter profit due to problems in its mortgages and bond trading division.

Today

Trading boon?

Morgan Stanley has benefited in recent months from a surge in stock sales and trading revenue.

Wall Street will be watching today to see if the investment bank's fourth-quarter earnings show similarly strong gains in concert with the stock market reaching new highs as 2013 drew to a close. The lender has been adapting to a post-financial crisis world, trimming back parts of its investment bank while increasing its focus on individual clients.

Spotlight on construction

The government reports today its latest tally of home construction.

U.S. builders broke ground on homes in November at the fastest pace in more than five years. Economists have forecast that the new data will show developers began construction on houses and apartments last month at a slightly slower pace. Housing experts are likely to focus on what the latest data say about permits for future building of single-family homes.

Strong finish?

Throughout 2013, General Electric suggested earnings growth would be strongest late in the year.

Investors expect to see that strength when GE reports its fourth quarter earnings today. GE is in the midst of a transformation to simpler, narrower industrial company that makes and services complex industrial equipment. Investors will be listening for hints as to how GE plans to keep up its earnings growth as its transformation continues.

A YOUNG BOY RECEIVES A GIFT FROM SANTA CLAUS.

The joys of continuing education — don't ever give up

NINA GILFERT

FROM THE PORCH STEPS

When I graduated from high school, continuing on to college wasn't even a consideration. It was necessary for me to find a job and fend for myself. Perhaps if I had more ambition at the time I could have found a way, but I didn't even think it was in the cards. I began working for the federal government on June 9, 1944 when I was still 17.

In those days, a girl with a high school diploma had few skills she could turn into employment. Apollo High School, my alma mater, offered courses in home economics, bookkeeping, mechanics, wood working, stenographic skills and music, as well as beginning physics, science and chemistry.

My stenographic classes got me the job. My salary at the time was miniscule, so I tried getting more education in night school. I started out as a clerk 2 and progressed to a steno 4.

After World War II, the government closed down the agency I worked for and moved me to the Commerce Department, where I learned a new occupation. A new type of printing, called offset printing, had just been perfected; the Commerce Department had adopted it and decided I was a good candidate for the work. I liked it better than anything I had done so far.

We operated a typesetting machine called a varityper, which was quite cumbersome, but they soon brought out more efficient models. The work was interesting and educational. We typed all the farm produce reports and the aeronautical accident reports. We also did reports for the president's desk. When I moved to California, I took with me a recommendation to a local lumber service company that was using one of the few varitypers. I got a position that helped my husband and I support ourselves while he got his aeronautical engineering degree.

We left California with two children and added three more to the mix while living in Columbus, Ohio. I discovered I hated housework and found it necessary to expand my horizons. I tried art courses at the YMCA, where they had child care, but I was lousy at it. It was a good diversion. I finally spent some of my husband's hard-earned money on a writing course that I truly loved. I was inclined to do what I did as a child in school. I overdid most of my assignments by writing a complete story when I was asked to describe a picture. (In school I made stories out of my spelling words.)

After we moved to Florida in the '70s, I joined some local organizations that helped enlarge my experiences. While I was working for the newspaper I joined the Business and Professional Women's Organization and took a course in individual development. I learned self-confidence and self-assertion, which helped when I joined Leesburg Toastmasters. Organizations like this enlarge your focus and improve your self-confidence.

I finally succumbed to the lure of higher education after my second husband died and the children left home. I discovered I could take courses at Lake Sumter Community College on their senior plan without charge. I was ecstatic. I took a course in English grammar, a course in writing, drama and two psychology courses. My only regret is that I didn't go on and take more courses.

Now that I am a senior citizen I find it difficult to attend classes, but I do a lot of reading and research. I have also discovered the Internet, where you can learn just about anything that interests you. I find that my reading takes me into many different worlds. I read John Grisham to learn about our criminal justice system. I read Vivian Evans' "Parenting for Education" and "The Mount Dorans." I have read many books on different religions like "Silent no More" by Paul Findley, about Islam, "You, Me and Everyone Else" by Bill Geringswald and "The Bible Unearthed." I am now reading a book by Carl Sagan about science called "The Demon-Haunted World."

While I am on the subject, self-education doesn't keep you from making mistakes. Last week I spelled John Annas' name wrong and I would like to apologize to his family. I had a piece of correspondence on my desk that spelled it with an 'o' (Annos). I assumed it was correct. It wasn't.

I also had to laugh at one of my editors who corrected me when I wrote: "which every little girl ended up with in her knees" — speaking of the black cinders that used to pave our streets. The editor changed "i" to "on" when we really did get them imbedded in our knees. He was too young to know about that.

Readers share author's love affair with Florida

SUBMITTED PHOTO

RICK REED
REMINISCE

Several readers reached out during my ongoing series about Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings' adventure along the St. Johns River with her good friend and travel mate Dess Prescott.

A couple even took the time to express thoughts about Rawlings, Cross Creek and a personal encounter with the Pulitzer Prize-winning writer.

Rawlings had needed to get away from her beloved Cross Creek because of personal problems and wrote about their journey along the St. Johns River in chapter 22 of her book "Cross Creek." The chapter was titled "Hyacinth Drift."

Like Dorothy at the end of her journey in Oz, Rawlings realized there was no place like home.

She ended her chapter with, "But when the dry ground was under us, the world no longer fluid, I found a forgotten loveliness in all the things that have nothing to do with men. Beauty is pervasive, and fills, like perfume, more than the object that contains it. Because I had known intimately a river, the earth pulsed under me. The Creek was home. Oleanders were sweet past bearing, and my own shabby fields, weed-tangled, were newly dear. I knew, for a moment, that the only nightmare is the masochistic human mind."

Clare Conner wrote an essay about her love affair with Florida a few years ago while she had the time between jobs. In it she talked about the way Rawlings and her homestead had touched her.

"Like most love affairs, this one has changed over the years," began Conner. "Growing up as a child in Florida, I took for granted the paradise in which I had been born. I grew up in the '70s when childhood was still free and safe. In the summer my brothers, sister and I would spend the hot days roaming the woods hunting for gopher turtles and snakes and any other adventures we could find. No one worried about us. We would only come home for lunch and dinner. The summer curfew was to be home when the street lights came on. We did not worry about the heat or bugs or strangers. The only real pestilence was the sand spurs (we never wore shoes). We got dirty and loved it. If we got hot, we would play in neighbors' sprinklers and drink from their hoses. No one minded. It was truly a wonderful childhood."

Were you blessed with a childhood like that? Mine was at the Jersey Shore and summers truly were enchanted, yet simple, times too easy to take for granted.

The love affair for Conner waned when she reached her teen years.

"I started to get annoyed at the heat," she wrote. "I couldn't wait for the short winters and cool days. As a family we made many trips to the North Carolina mountains. I hated to leave them and once home longed for the mountains and the cooler climate. Coming home to Florida seemed flat and boring. At this stage in the affair I had fallen out of love."

Clare went to college in the mountains and thought how wonderful it would be to live there for all the obvious reasons. But winter grew too long and she missed anything green, the sunshine and wearing shorts and flip-flops in December.

She just got tired of always being cold. Fortunately she received a reprieve during winter break. As she drove home she didn't realize she was falling back in love.

It was a different world to raise children so she and her husband had outdoor activities to show their kids what they grew up with: boating, fishing and day trips. One was to Cross Creek, a small town near Gainesville that Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings called home.

"It was there I purchased one of her books, 'Cross Creek.' It is a book that tells of her trials and triumphs at the creek. She tells wonderful tales of the folk living there. But I was most impacted by her love of Florida. Here was a 'Yankee' woman (of her own description) living on the most meager means, tested by all the rough elements the Florida wilderness could throw at her, but she had fallen in love with Florida.

"Her love was contagious and I found myself loving this land as much as she. It was then I realized what a wonderful place in which I had been born. She wrote, 'For this is an enchanted land' and I have to agree.

"The Good Lord knew what he was doing all along by making this the place of my birth," Clare continued. "I encourage anyone who lives here and loves this fair state like I do to read her books. 'Cross Creek' is a good place to start. 'When the Whippoorwill' is also a favorite book, which I highly recommend. I invite you to visit her home in Cross Creek. Who knows, you may fall in love as well."

Firemen Honored in Fruitland Park

Fire Chief David Borst and Chief Thomas Gamble, alongside fire officers of the Fruitland Park Fire Department, recognized Taylor Luttfring as the Fruitland Park Firefighter of the Year for 2013 at the annual appreciation banquet held on Dec. 6. "Luttfring is very deserving of this award as he plays a very important part in our department. He always goes above and beyond what a great firefighter should be," said Chief Borst.

Other awards included recognition for Firefighter Rookie of the Year presented to Steven Ogden. "Ogden joined our department earlier this year and has made great movement forward and has shown us that he will be an excellent addition to the fire profession," said Borst. Lt. Michael Laming was awarded the Chief's Award for his dedication to the department.

Man's reticence about sex puts relationship in jeopardy

Dear Abby

JEANNE PHILLIPS

DEAR ABBY: I have been seeing a guy, "Karl," for eight months now, and we have never had sex. After two or three months, I brought up the subject. He said he was stressed because he had just lost his job. He also said there is never any privacy at his place because he has roommates/tenants. I offered to go to my place, but he said that with my son there, it's the same issue.

Karl says he's very attracted to me, but doesn't want our "time" together to be ruined by his current money problems. I told him I understood and I have waited. I also explained that it makes me feel insecure and unwanted.

He now has a job, but we still haven't had sex. He has, in the interim, told me he loves me and wants to marry me. I constantly worry that there's someone else and wonder what's wrong with me. I love Karl, too, but I don't know what to do. Please help. — LOVE, BUT NO SEX IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR LOVE, BUT: Is there any intimacy AT ALL in your relationship with Karl? Is he affectionate? Is there any physical response when he holds and kisses you? If the answer is no, your boyfriend may have a physical or emotional problem, be asexual or gay.

Before agreeing to marry him, I recommend you schedule some time alone together by spending a few romantic weekends at a hotel or motel. It may give you a better idea of what your future would be like if you two decide the tie the knot.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 30-year-old gay man who works in an office with 20 women. In the five years I have worked here, many of my co-workers have either gotten married or had children.

Our office has a tradition of throwing showers for the lucky ladies, and I am always asked to contribute money toward food for the party or an extravagant gift.

While I'm happy to donate to a charity or help a friend in need, I wonder if a wedding or a baby shower would be given for ME? Am I selfish for feeling hesitant to donate money or gifts when it's likely the favor will never be returned? — MINORITY MALE IN TEXAS

DEAR MINORITY: I don't think you are selfish for feeling the way you do. In fact, it's understandable. However, in the case of a wedding or baby shower, people give gifts as a way of offering congratulations and good wishes. And I would hope that, even if same-sex marriage isn't recognized by the state of Texas, that your co-workers would do something to honor you if you had a spiritual ceremony, which some religious denominations offer.

DEAR ABBY: I am turning 60 and naturally looking a little "worn." My man friend keeps telling me I need a facelift and to lose 10 pounds, so I'm starting to save my money. Something tells me he wants a "hot chick" and thinks he'll have one once I get these procedures done. It's expensive. What do you think? — LOOSE-FACED LOUISIANAN

DEAR LOUISIANAN: It's not only expensive; as with any other major surgery, there is some risk involved. If you had said you wanted cosmetic surgery because YOU thought you needed it, I would say to go ahead. However, if it's only because your man friend is pushing you, then he should save HIS money and offer to foot the bill.

P.S. He must be an optimist because there is no guarantee that with 10 pounds off and a new face you wouldn't start looking for a younger man. Some women do.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

Understanding concrete use, cracking and maintenance

There are three things in life that are certain — death, taxes and cracks in concrete.

Homes and businesses constructed with masonry blocks, stucco finishes and poured concrete walls and foundations are prevalent throughout Central Florida, as property owners believe concrete construction offers better protection against hurricanes and termites. Concrete is one of the most durable and versatile building materials on the market, but it does have its drawbacks, such as cracking, moisture intrusion and difficulties associated with remodeling.

Larry Mott, the owner of Mott Building Services in Okahumpka, is an expert on concrete construction. He has over 30 years of experience in the industry, from multimillion dollar commercial projects to patio slabs for backyard barbecues.

According to Mott, the root cause of most cracks in foundations and block walls is poor soil compaction coupled with lower grade concrete and poor installation. One common type of cement cracking in masonry walls is "stair-step" cracking. Unless the cracking is a result of a sinkhole or the blocks are actually leaning out of the wall, the remedy is typically a good, elastic caulk and paint.

It is critical to have the soil compacted once the foundation has been set before the concrete is poured. A soil compaction test is typically required by most building departments to verify proper compaction. After the concrete slab has been poured, it should be cured (properly dried) and expansion joints cut into the concrete slab about every 100 square feet. Heat and cold will expand and contract the concrete and, without saw-cut expansion joints in the slab, spider cracking will occur. Controlled expansion joints, especially those in the corners, will eliminate a good portion of the cracking.

For residential foundations, Mott recommends 3000 PSI fiber cement with no fly ash for the whitest, strongest finish with less cracking. The fibers in the cement bond the slab and eliminate the need for traditional wire mesh in the foundation. However, Mott believes that skimping on metal foundation rebar in the foundation's footer areas can be a huge mistake.

Don Magruder
AROUND THE HOUSE

Don Magruder is the CEO of Ro-Mac Lumber and Supply Inc., and he is also the host of the "Around the House" radio show heard every Monday at noon at My790AM WLBE in Leesburg.

The most common difficulties with concrete associated with remodeling are repairing cracks and surface damage. Remedial work should only be undertaken by qualified professionals. Faulty concrete repair can worsen structural problems and lead to further damage or safety hazards.

What many people fail to realize is that concrete is porous and very susceptible to moisture intrusion in the home, which can lead to mold and water damage issues. It is very important that masonry surfaces be painted with a high quality elastomeric paint or sealer. These paints are designed to be flexible and actually move with the masonry construction to seal hairline cracks. Any hairline cracks that form in a wall should be promptly repainted to prevent more serious problems.

The most common difficulties with concrete associated with remodeling are repairing cracks and surface damage. Remedial work should only be undertaken by qualified professionals. Faulty concrete repair can worsen structural problems and lead to further damage or safety hazards.

One popular use of concrete for covering both old and new surfaces is applied masonry coatings. In Florida, the two primary applied masonry coatings are the traditional stucco and the cementitious concrete coatings. According to Mott, traditional stucco finishes have a 3/4-inch to 7/8-inch coating of masonry cement, typically applied to a wire mesh that has been fastened to the concrete blocks. A good stucco job is more resistant to cracking and, if the blocks are waterproofed before the mesh and stucco are applied, the walls are typically more resistant to water intrusion.

Cementitious concrete coating is a thinner 3/8-inch to 1/2-inch skimming of masonry cement directly on top of the blocks. Since the masonry cement is applied directly to the block wall or poured wall, using a good elastomeric paint or sealer is vital to prevent moisture intrusion. The biggest advantage to cementitious concrete coating is that it cost less than traditional stucco while maintaining a similar look.

New technologies in cement coloring and application techniques have allowed Mott's team to create special looks with stucco applications, including brick, stone or cobblestone.

Property owners who want these brick and stone looks instead of traditional skip trowel or splatter finishes can now have these finishes for much less than actual brick and stone. The new technology has also made it possible for Mott and his team to match old bricks and stones when repairing damage or putting on additions.

Concrete foundations, block walls and stucco finishes are basic components of Central Florida construction, but property owners must be aware that, like anything else, these products must be installed properly and maintained annually.

Top trends in real estate for 2014

BY JEFF COLLINS
The Orange County Register

Gabe Cole bought and sold 15 homes last year as part of his sideline as a house flipper.

This year, however, the Newport Beach, Calif., real estate broker anticipates his side business will slow down because foreclosures and short sales are drying up.

While 2013 was the year of get-in, get-out quick house flips, he expects to do more in-depth remodeling work on higher-priced properties in 2014. "Since there are fewer short sales and fewer foreclosures out there," Cole said, "there's less business to go around."

Many economists agree. They predict 2014 will see more investors retrenching and more buyers putting roofs over their own heads. That's not the only big change ahead. Home prices are expected to stabilize this year, while homebuilding will be more frenetic.

"The housing market has staged a spectacular recovery over the past year," Cal State Fullerton economists Anil Puri and Mira Farka wrote in their 2014 economic forecast. "More recent data, however, point to a softening of these trends."

Here are the top real estate trends we're likely to see in 2014.

MORE INVENTORY: You can expect to see more people putting their homes up for sale this year, as rising prices bring new equity to underwater homeowners.

Other property owners also may take the opportunity to get their lives off hold and take advantage of higher home prices.

Another factor: New home construction is expected to increase further this year, further boosting options for home shoppers.

NEW HOME SALES TO RISE: Nationwide, forecasters expect the number of housing starts to range from 1.19 million to 1.25 million, up from 975,500 in 2013.

Builders are compensating for years of sub-par construction levels, said Robert Denk, an economist with the National Association of Home Builders. "There's a huge construction deficit," he said.

An increase in homebuilding means that new home sales should go up, too.

When construction levels fell, "buyers were forced into resale homes," said Irvine, Calif., housing consultant Mark Boud. Many buyers prefer newer homes, which have the latest designs and are more energy-efficient.

MORTGAGE RATES TO RISE: Interest rates for 30-year, fixed mortgages likely will rise this year, averaging somewhere in the 4.9 percent to 5.3 percent range, forecasters say.

That's still low historically, but well above rates for the past 2 years.

The average rate for a 30-year fixed mortgage had been solidly below 4 percent since late 2011. Last summer, it spiked to 4.5 percent.

The Federal Reserve's decision last month to start reducing purchases of Treasury and mortgage-backed bonds likely will push up mortgage rates. But not wildly.

"Rates are not going to soar because we're still in a pretty weak economic recovery," Denk said. "When the dust settles, (rates) are still a bargain."

Happy New Year

As the 2013 year ends we see that there were 5665 residential real estate sales in Lake County. 1894 of those were Short Sale or REO/Bank Owned properties. The average price of all closed sales was $151,119 or 95.5% of the list price. In that price range properties were on the market an average of 84 days. 2786 of the closed properties in 2013 were paid for with all cash.

In 2012 there were 4951 residential real estate sales, of those sales 2173 were Short Sales or REO/Bank Owned properties. The average closed sales price in 2012 was $135,082 or 94.1% of the list price. In 2012 properties in that price range were on the market an average of 100 days. 2510 of the properties that closed in 2012 were paid for with all cash.

These numbers show an increase in the market in 2013 in the number of closed sales, the average sales price, and the closed sales price to list price ratio. We have also seen a decrease in the number of average days on the market and Short Sale or ROE/Bank Owned closed properties. Although these were decreases they affect the market in a positive manner.
