In Umatilla, fears of another water line burst

Staff Report

Umatilla is looking at a number of options — ranging from $20,000 to $8 million — to address problems with its aging utility system that caused a water main break last October that left the entire city without water for several hours.

This includes a temporary fix of repairing or replacing about 360 water pipe cutoff valves, to installing all new water pipes across the city.

The utility system is between 40 and 60 years old, and “low quality pipe, by today’s standards, is thought to have been the culprit with the line that failed on Oct. 30th,” City Manager Glenn Irby said in a memo that will be discussed by city council members at their meeting tonight.

The problem with the system was highlighted when that 10-inch water main ruptured three months ago along Kentucky Avenue.

Crews immediately attempted to isolate the break by exercising valves designed to turn off the flow of water to this immediate area,” Irby said. “Unfortunately, this attempt failed and, ultimately, the city’s entire system had to be turned off at the main plant.”

As the agenda for the 2014 Florida Legislative Session begins to take shape, the protection of water resources, including springs and lakes, is a major issue taking center stage, according to state senators and representatives.

There already are discussions about filing legislation to protect the springs, such as Alexander Springs near Altoona, and several state senators have united to make the issue a priority this year, according to legislators.

State Sen. Alan Hays, R-Umatilla, said protection of water resources is “perhaps one of the most complex if not the most complex issue facing the Legislature in the next four to five years.”

Lawmakers: We must protect springs and lakes

HALIFAX MEDIA SERVICES

Swimmer Cody Robertson comes up for air while looking for items under the water at Alexander Springs.

Hays said it is critical that nutrients currently found in the springs and lakes be removed before they get into the water bodies.

“We are trying to find ways to remove the nutrients from the stormwater runoff before it gets into the aquifer,” he said.

Hays said the health of some of the lakes and rivers is another concern.

“One of the things we have to consider is the current state of degradation of the Indian River Lagoon has not occurred overnight and it is not going to be restored overnight,” he said. “These systems take a significant amount of time to regain their ecological balance. We are going to be called upon to fund part of the restoration of that lagoon. I think it is our obligation to make sure we don’t spend money for the exercise of spending.”

Finding alternative water supplies to groundwater is another issue affecting the community, particularly in South Lake.

Some sanctions removed as Iran takes action

ALI AKBAR DAREINI and JOHN-THOR DAHLBURG

Associated Press

TEHRAN, Iran — Iran unplugged banks of centrifuges involved in its most sensitive uranium enrichment work on Monday, prompting the United States and European Union to partially lift economic sanctions as a landmark deal aimed at easing concerns over Iran’s nuclear program went into effect.

The mutual actions — curbing atomic work in exchange for some sanctions relief — start a six-month clock for Tehran and the world powers to negotiate a final accord that the Obama administration and its European allies say will be intended to ensure Iran cannot build a nuclear weapon.

In the meantime, the interim deal puts limits on Iran’s program — though it continues low levels of uranium enrichment. Tehran denies its nuclear program is intended to produce a bomb.

The payoff to Iran is an injection of billions of dollars into its crippled economy over the next six months from the suspension of some sanctions — though other sanctions remain in place.

In part a reflection of a thaw between Washington and Tehran, the moves coincidentally occurred on the 33rd anniversary of the end of the Iran hostage crisis. The holding of 52 Americans for 444 days by radical Iranian students that ended Jan. 20, 1981 was followed by more than three decades of U.S.-Iranian enmity that only began to ease last year with signs that Iran was ready to meet U.S. demands and scale back its nuclear activities.

British Foreign Secretary William Hague called the deal “an important milestone” — but not the ultimate goal.

HOROSCOPES

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, Jan. 21, 2014:

This year opportunities stem from your ability to know what you want from a situation. Sharing some of your wilder schemes will be better received than you might think. Others find your imagination fun and invigorating. If you are single, you could meet someone very gentle and kind. You might want to pinch yourself, as this person will seem to be unbelievable. If you are attached, the two of you thrive off the unexpected. LIBRA admires your imagination, and entices your romantic side.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

You will feel great, and a partner might appear to be in the same mood — at least until a hot issue is broached. Then, you could find out otherwise. Your ability to draw out others emerges. You know the right move to make.

TAURUS (April 20-May 18)

Your efforts make a difference, yet an associate could have a negative attitude. Fortunately, this person does not rule the world. A friend might share his or her thoughts. Listen carefully, as he or she will be coming from an intuitive level.

GEMINI (May 21-June 19)

You will find a situation provocative. You might feel as if a boss is making assumptions that may not be grounded. Know that you don't have to respond to this person's projections. Be willing to blaze a new trail, and you'll feel better about your choices.

CANCER (June 21-July 18)

Opt to be with a close friend or associate. Get to the bottom of a problem that might be bothering you. You will know whether the information you are given is correct. How you feel could change dramatically.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

You'll want to have a friendly chat with a difficult roommate, close friend or loved one. You could find that this person tends to disengage when you start to talk. As a result, you might wonder whether this discussion should be postponed.

"It's important that other sanctions are maintained and the pressure is maintained for a comprehensive and final settlement on the Iranian nuclear issue," Hague said.

The Europeans are aiming to start negotiations on a final deal in February, though no date or venue has been agreed on yet. Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif said Saturday that Tehran is ready to enter talks as soon as the interim deal goes into force.

In the first step of the interim accord, Iranian state TV said authorities disconnected cascades of centrifuges producing 20-percent enriched uranium at the Natanz facility in central Iran. The broadcast said international inspectors were on hand to witness the stoppage before leaving to monitor suspension of enrichment at Fordo, another site in central Iran.

Iran also started Monday to convert part of its stockpile of 20-percent enriched uranium to oxide, which can be used to produce nuclear fuel get the firefighters quickly out of the hotel, located off State Road 50.

"Because we have been dealing with the issue for five years, I remain skeptical about it," he said. "We have got to get those firefighters in a better facility. I remain skeptical, but I appreciate the effort to move forward with something that may be beneficial to the residents."

There have been vandalism and thefts of property at the hotel, and fire officials said they lack the resources to secure equipment there. One first responder's personal vehicle's tires and rims were stolen, leaving the car on cinder blocks.

The Lake County Sheriff's Office has received 42 calls about the hotel since 2011, according to a call list obtained from the department.

Kyle Rogg, president and chief executive officer of Value Place Hotels, said previously in a statement that hotel security and safety are top priorities there.

As part of the partnership, the city will purchase some property and the county will erect a modular building on the site, according to Clermont City Manager Darren Gray.

"As our city continues to expand and grow, we knew we would need a fire station going east," Gray said. "We knew three to five years out, we were in need of a fire station."

Gray said operational costs would be shared between the city and county.

"This is a benefit not only to the city of Clermont and Lake County, but to the residents of Lake County," he said. "It saves money and we don't have to build two stations within a mile of each other."

Currently, Gray said city officials are exploring the area of County Road 455 and SR 50 to purchase a site. Once land is acquired, Gray said a modular building could be up in six to eight months.

But Parks still expressed some doubts.

"That's assuming bureaucracy doesn't get in the way, as it has over the last four to five years over this issue," he said.

Commissioner Welton Cadwell said at the Jan. 14 commission meeting that he echoed Park's concerns about moving the firefighters out as soon as possible.

"If this thing is going to drag out, I would rather you come back with some type of plan to go ahead and do something at the substation, understanding we might move," he said.

County Fire Chief John Jolliff said the partnership is "the best thing to do."

"We want to stay east," he said. "It makes a lot of sense and we have the sheriff's substation as a backup."

Lt. Brian Gamble, vice president of the Professional Firefighters of Lake County, said the partnership is a step in the right direction.

"Anytime we can work with the city, it is good for both the county and city," he said.

UMATILLA

To make matters worse, the ruptured pipe was in a low-lying area and "water from multiple directions drained back into the trench dug to necessitate repairs," Irby said. This delayed the repair work for several hours and resulted in a boil-water notice for three days once the water was turned back on.

Utility Service Company of Atlanta, which has a contract with the city to maintain its water plant, has said it can repair or replace all the existing cutoff valves for about $20,000, which Irby says is a "must" because it's inevitable that another water line is going to break at some point.

Umatilla could buy new valves from a North Carolina company and city crews could install them at a total cost of about $1.01 million, or pay a Silver Springs company $1.04 million to do the work, Irby said.

Any major work on the system will require a water rate hike, which the city can use to obtain financing, the city manager noted.

The council meets at 7 p.m. at City Hall, 1 S. Central Ave.

If the city decides to replace all water pipes with new valves, it will cost about $8 million, staff believes, with that price cut in half if city crews do the work with the help of some temporary workers. However, Irby said this do-it-yourself option would be a "relatively slow process compared with contracting with a company to do the work."

In fact, Irby estimates a four-man crew, working a 40-hour week, laying 1,000 feet of linear pipe per week, will take 13 years to retrofit the system.

"This may seem like a lengthy time period," Irby said, "but if the city grows in population during this time, the expense would be spread over more taxpayers than there currently are."

Residents honor the legacy of Dr. Martin Luther King

Scores of people gathered in Eustis and Clermont on Monday for celebrations to honor Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and his legacy.

"Family" was the focus at Carver Park in Eustis, said Pastor Harold J. Kelly of the Temple of Power in Eustis, who chaired the event.

"Along with all the fun stuff...we want to make the focus back, put the focus back on the family, because that was Dr. King's dream, that all men be created equal, black as well as white," he said.

Clermont's celebration — sponsored by the city of Clermont in conjunction with Christian Men in Action, the Lake County Black Caucus and the South Lake Democratic Club — was held at Waterfront Park.

"Today we will honor him (King) through words and music, but perhaps the greatest way to honor Dr. MLK when we leave this ceremony is through our actions," City Manager Darren Gray. "He (King) once said, 'What are we doing to serve others?' Think of what a difference it would make if we all made that our mission."

Monday's celebration in Eustis took place after two days of events, including a community breakfast on Saturday and an Ecumenical service on Sunday. Kelly said he was pleased with the turnout over the weekend and thanked all who took part in Monday's event.

One of these volunteers was John Quashie, 26, who said the MLK celebration "motivates everyone else to get up and do something special...for the kids to know who he is, what it's about and why we celebrate."

The Eustis Middle School jazz ensemble performed in the park on Monday at noon.

The band's director, Gerry Ricke, said the band wanted to support the community and the event.

"I really think that as musicians we need...to be very diverse in our thinking...and, of course, every time we get out and play, we gain experience and that makes us better as musicians," Ricke said.

In Clermont, resident Dwayne Allen said he wished the turnout was greater.

"It's very significant to know what Martin Luther King has done for us, not just as a black man or as a black race of people, but for every person of every race, for bringing the generations together and for freedom," he said. "Gathering together

LEESBURG Scholarship set up in civic leader's name

LIVI STANFORD | Staff Writer
livi.stanford@dailycommercial.com

Family and friends of Greg Padgett said the longtime Lake County man worked hard to carve a successful future..

"He worked and paid his way through college," said Ashley Hunt, a friend of the late civic leader and certified public accountant, who died in a tractor accident in Lady Lake on Jan. 4. "He went from being a guy that grew up in Okahumpka, to a guy who grew to have the whole respect of the entire community."

County, state and city leaders and members of the community recently expressed shock and sadness after learning of Padgett's sudden death.

They described him as a selfless leader who was dedicated to bettering the community.

Now, his daughters, Cori MacDonald and Carsen Boliek, have established The Greg Padgett Scholarship Foundation "to continue the legacy of their father's love and support of the greater Leesburg area community and to provide scholarship opportunities for local students interested in pursuing a career in accounting," according to the Leesburg Partnership.

A native of Leesburg, Padgett began working in public accounting in 1985. He was a partner in the public accounting firm, Padgett, Wetz & Young PA; He also served as past president of the Leadership Lake County Alumni Association, vice chairman of the board of directors of United Southern Bank, chairman of the Audit Committee of the bank, past president and member of the board of directors of the Leesburg Partnership and board member of Kids Central.

Hunt, a lawyer, will help facilitate the foundation.

He remembers coming to Lake County and Padgett taking him under his wing.

Montverde Academy collects art supplies for sick kids

Staff Report

Montverde Academy students recently collected funds to buy supplies for an Art Cart program at Arnold Palmer Children's Hospital in Orlando.

The academy's middle school Student Government Association (SGA) partnered with Jayci Brauman, a fourth-grade student at nearby Cypress Ridge Elementary School, who has been collecting art supplies for the hospital for the past three years.

"The main goal and intention of SGA's charitable involvement with aiding the hospital was to offer a form of art therapy to help ease the fears and anxiety young Central Florida patients might feel before facing major surgery," George Karos, the academy's communication officer, said in a press release.

Brauman's mother, Kim, is a guidance counselor at the academy and she helped oversee the SGA's efforts with Jordan Foley, the school's middle school writing teacher.

to remember that is important, and the more people we can get down here every year the better, because the message we received today is passionate. He (Martin Luther King) may be gone, but his legacy is still present every single day."

New Jacob Chapel's Rev. Tone Lundy, the program's emcee, asked people to listen carefully to King's words before playing a live recording of the entire "I Have a Dream" speech King delivered before 250,000 people in Washington, D.C. in 1969.

The morning's keynote/inspirational speaker was Charles Broadway, Clermont's own chief of police.

"Dr. King was not a separatist; he believed that people from all nations could work together for advancements and improvements for all people," Broadway said. "At one time in history, when the world was torn apart by war, Dr. King had the greatest following, both blacks and whites, of any person in the civil rights movement."

Today is so relevant to me because I stand before you today as the first black police chief in Clermont and in all of south Lake County, due to the long-lived legacy of Dr. King."

2 nabbed in Target credit fraud case

CHRISTOPHER SHERMAN
Associated Press

McALLEN, Texas — Account information stolen during the Target security breach is now being divided up and sold off regionally, a South Texas police chief said Monday following the arrest of two Mexican citizens who authorities say arrived at the border with 96 fraudulent credit cards.

McAllen Police Chief Victor Rodriguez said Mary Carmen Garcia, 27, and Daniel Guardiola Dominguez, 28, both of Monterrey, Mexico, used cards containing the account information of South Texas residents. Rodriguez said they were used to buy tens of thousands of dollars' worth of merchandise at national retailers in the area including Best Buy, Wal-Mart and Toys R Us.

"They're obviously selling the data sets by region," Rodriguez said.

Garcia and Guardiola were both being held Monday on state fraud charges. It was not immediately known whether they had retained lawyers.

Rodriguez said he did not know whether they were the first arrests related to the Target breach. Target did not immediately return phone and email messages left Monday, which was Martin Luther King Jr. Day, a federal holiday. The Minneapolis-based company said last week that it has stopped more than a dozen operations that sought to scam breach victims by way of email, phone calls and text messages.

McAllen police began working with the U.S. Secret Service after a number of area retailers were hit with fraudulent purchases on Jan. 12. The Secret Service confirmed that the fraudulent accounts traced back to the original Target data breach from late last year, Rodriguez said.

Investigators fanned out to McAllen-area merchants and reviewed "miles of video" looking for the fraudsters, he said. From that, they were able to identify two people and a car with Mexican license plates.

A message left for the Secret Service on Monday was not immediately returned.

With the help of U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, investigators confirmed the identities of their suspects from immigration records of when they had entered Texas in the same vehicle. Police prepared arrest warrants last week and waited for them to return.

county officials recently sounded the alarm that the community must find an alternative to diminishing groundwater supplies in the next five years to avoid a direct impact to lake levels and the quality of life in south Lake.

"There is a demand of 300 million gallons of water by 2035 and we only have 50 million gallons that can be met by our traditional source," said Alan Oyler, consultant for St. Johns River Water Management District, who is assisting the South Lake Regional Water Initiative. "All of the utilities are going to have to find 250 million gallons of water. For us to meet project demands, we are going to have to import water from someplace else."

At the first annual South Lake Water Summit in November 2013, a panel of experts from the Lake County Water Authority and the St. Johns River Water Management District weighed in on the problem of dwindling reserves in the Floridian aquifer.

While the lack of rainfall is a major factor affecting low lake levels, groundwater withdrawals and human impacts, such as surface water diversions and irrigation, are also contributors, the panelists said.

The South Lake Regional Water Initiative — consisting of the South Lake Chamber of Commerce, the county and the municipalities of Clermont, Groveland, Minneola, Mascotte and Montverde — is trying to address "regional solutions in the critical areas of reclaimed water distribution, minimum flows and levels of the region's lakes and rivers, and alternative water supplies and conservation."

They are working parallel to the Central Florida Water Initiative to find a cost effective and alternative water source.

"For us to take millions of gallons of water out of the aquifer that is potable water, and use that to water plants or agricultural projects, is not always the most wise use of drinking water," Hays pointed out. "If we can find ways to purify the wastewater and stormwater runoff, and use that recycled water for those purposes that are acceptable, it is going to be a much better utilization of our resources."

While desalination of water is an alternative water source option, Hays said it is his last resort.

"It is too expensive," he said. "I think the biggest concern is finding the proper balance of utilizing water and making sure it fits our budget."

Sen. Charlie Dean, R-Inverness, chair of the Environmental Preservation and Conservation Committee, said "it is essential we have not only water quality but water quantity. The water quantity is directly related to storage or better management systems. It is important to divert surface water back into the natural environment."

Rep. Steve Crisafulli, R-Merritt Island, agreed.

"I think these two issues truly go hand in hand," he said. "Reclamation is one strategy that may work, but we have to look at all options and make sure we are using sound science when making decisions affecting our waterways."

Hays, Crisafulli and Dean were in agreement that protection of water resources is one of the top priorities this year.

"It goes without saying that water is the most critical and precious resource we have," Crisafulli said. "It's what we depend on to live, it sustains our rich agricultural history, and it is what makes Florida such an attractive tourist destination."

Dean echoed similar sentiments.

"Our most precious natural resource is water," he said. "That drives everything from tourism, economic development and agriculture. Anything you can imagine is at risk."

In developing a statewide approach to protecting Florida's ecosystems, Crisafulli said the plan is achieved by "working with stakeholders from across the state, identifying issues and finding solutions to address them."

"In 2013, for example, the Legislature took historic action with regards to Everglades restoration," he said. "There's been great attention drawn to the Indian River Lagoon and Lake Okeechobee in Central and South Florida, and then there are our springs and the Apalachicola River, among many other important water bodies."

Also in 2013, the Florida Legislature "earmarked $10 million from general revenue for protection and restoration of springs," according to Clean Water Action's 2013 State Legislative Report.

The long-term commitment begins, Crisafulli said, with using existing "revenues to fund projects that will clean up our waterways or address critical water quantity issues."

"In the short term, we need to identify trouble areas and work to fund projects that will address those issues," he added. "As we do that, we can't focus on only one area — whether it's the springs or other specific bodies of water — but rather, we need to take actions across the state."

Asked if major legislation would pass this year on the issue, Dean adamantly said the issue will be addressed.

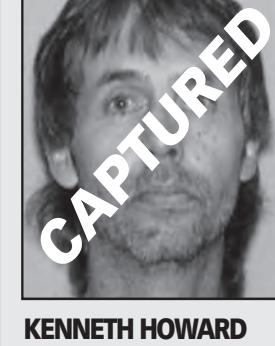

"We contacted every water management district," he said. "We don't need anymore studies. We need to start making things happen regardless of how small or insignificant."

GOP's image still muddled

THOMAS BEAUMONT
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Republican Party's image has changed little in the year since GOP Chairman Reince Priebus published his prescription for broadening the party's appeal despite its investment in outreach to the racial minorities, women and gay voters who backed Democrats decisively in 2012.

"The issue that remains an open book for the Republicans is: What is the character of the party?" said Ari Fleischer, a top aide to President George W. Bush, who helped author the report of the "Growth and Opportunity Project. "Are we a more inclusive and welcoming party yet?"

As the Republican National Committee opens its winter meetings here Wednesday,

the party is counting on the political geography and expected lower turnout of the 2014 midterm elections to give them control of the Senate. If that happens, Fleischer said, it would be a "false narcotic" for the larger problems facing a party that has lost the national popular vote in five of the last six presidential elections. Those will take years to fix.

In the past year, Priebus has launched new efforts to reach out to racial and ethnic minorities, hired about 170 state-level staff — with more planned — and invested in technology to better track potential voters, a tactic Republicans pioneered and Democrats have perfected over the past eight years. He also renewed efforts to win over Hispanics nationally with voter outreach staffers.

But these structural changes can end the GOP's White House losing streak only if its messengers fulfill the report's larger goal: "Change course, modernize the party and learn once again how to appeal to more people."

Since losing the 2012 presidential election, Republicans have continued to slip in public approval. According to a recent Gallup poll, 32 percent have a favorable opinion of the GOP now compared with 43 percent immediately after President Barack Obama's re-election. Democrats were viewed favorably by 42 percent, also down from a year ago.

The committee has deployed 17 full-time operatives to New York, Florida, California, New Jersey, New Mexico, Pennsylvania, Texas, Georgia and Colorado with the primary mission of bringing more Hispanics into the GOP fold. More are planned in states including Nevada, North Carolina, Arizona, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio and Illinois.

Fatalities reported in Omaha plant explosion

JOSH FUNK
Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb.—Omaha's fire chief said Monday that people have died in an explosion and partial building collapse at an animal feed processing plant, but he would not give a specific number of deaths.

Interim Omaha Fire Chief Bernie Kanger said crews have stopped rescue efforts and will start a slower recovery effort to retrieve victims. The International Nutrition plant is unstable, so rescuers must work deliberately to ensure their safety, he said.

Thirty-eight people were inside when the explosion occurred Monday morning. Ten were taken to hospitals and four are in critical condition. It's unclear how many people got out without being hurt.

The cause of the blast has not yet been determined, but Kanger said there were no hazardous chemicals at the plant.

Plant worker Nate Lewis, 21, said he was on the first floor when he heard the blast. The building went dark, so he used light from his cellphone to make his way across the production floor to safety outside.

"I was a production line worker, although I don't know if I want to be that anymore," said Lewis, who's worked at International Nutrition for about four months.

There appears to be structural damage to the top of the building, which sits in an industrial area visible from Interstate 80, which bisects Nebraska's largest city. There are no residences nearby and no other buildings were evacuated after the explosion.

Jamar White said he heard a loud crack and then looked up to see the back wall of the building collapsing.

"I ran at least 150 feet," White said. "I ran far enough to make sure nothing else would keep falling."

UN rescinds invitation to Iran to attend talks

RYAN LUCAS and ZEINA KARAM

Associated Press

GENEVA — A last-minute U.N. invitation for Iran to join this week's Syria peace talks threw the long-awaited Geneva conference into doubt Monday, forcing U.N. chief Ban Ki-moon to rescind his offer under intense U.S. pressure after the opposition threatened to boycott.

With the invitation withdrawn, the main Western-backed opposition group said it would attend the talks aimed at ending Syria's ruinous three-year civil war. The opposition said the conference should seek to establish a transitional government with full executive powers "in which killers and criminals do not participate."

The surprise invitation, extended Sunday by the U.N. secretary-general, set off a flurry of diplomatic activity to salvage the talks. The U.S. said the offer should be rescinded, and the opposition threatened to skip the event entirely.

The conference is set to begin Wednesday in the Swiss luxury resort city of Montreux, with high-ranking delegations from the United States, Russia and close to 40 other countries attending. Face-to-face negotiations between the Syrian government and its opponents — the first of the uprising — are to start Friday in Geneva.

The uproar over Iran's invitation put the entire event at risk of being scuttled.

The Syrian National Coalition, which had voted late Saturday to attend after months of rancorous debate, issued an ultimatum, saying that Iran must commit publicly within hours to withdraw its "troops and militias" from Syria and abide by a 2012 roadmap to establish a transitional government. Otherwise, the group said, the U.N. should withdraw its invitation for Tehran to take part.

The confusion surrounding the Iranian invitation underscored the tenuous nature of the diplomatic effort to end the bloody conflict, which has morphed from peaceful protests into a vicious civil war with outside powers backing rebels who are fighting not only the government but rival insurgents as well.

It is not clear what exactly motivated Ban to issue the invitation, but it came hours after he said he had received assurances from Tehran that it accepted the premise of the talks.

Syria has been ruled by President Bashar Assad's family since 1970, and Iran is Assad's strongest regional ally, supplying his government with advisers, money and materiel since the uprising began in 2011. The Islamic Republic's allies, most notably the Lebanese Shiite militant group Hezbollah, have also gone to Syria to help bolster Assad's forces.

The last-minute invitation appeared to take the U.S. and its European allies by surprise. An Iranian statement said Iran had accepted the offer without "any pre-conditions."

Russians study Islamic video threatening Olympics

VLADIMIR ISACHENKOV
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Russia's counter-terrorism agency says it's studying a video posted by an Islamic militant group that asserted responsibility for suicide bombings that killed 34 people last month and is threatening to strike the Winter Olympics in Sochi.

Security experts say the Russians are right in taking the threat seriously.

The video was posted online Sunday by a militant group in Dagestan, a predominantly Muslim republic in Russia's volatile North Caucasus. The Olympic host city of Sochi lies only 500 kilometers (300 miles) west of Dagestan.

Two Russian-speaking men featured in the video are identified as members of Ansar al-Sunna, the name of a Jihadist group operating in Iraq. It was unclear whether the men in the video had received funding or training from that group or only adopted its name.

There was no confirmation the two men were the suicide bombers who struck the southern Russian city of Volgograd last month as the video claims. Scores of people were also injured by the bombings of a train station and

Russia's National Anti-Terrorism Committee said Monday it was studying the video and would have no immediate comment. The video couldn't be viewed in Russia, where Internet providers cut access to it under a law that bans the "dissemination of extremist materials."

In Washington, a Pentagon spokesman Monday said the U.S. has offered support to the Russian government as it conducts security preparations for the Winter Olympics. Rear Adm. John Kirby said the U.S. will offer air and naval support, including two Navy ships in the Black Sea, to be available if requested "for all manner of contingencies," in consultation with the Russian government.

The video was released by the Vilayat Dagestan, one of the units that make up the so-called Caucasus Emirate, an umbrella group for the rebels seeking to establish an independent Islamic state in the North Caucasus.

Doku Umarov, a Chechen warlord who leads the Emirate, had ordered a halt to attacks on civilian targets in 2012. But he rescinded that order in July, urging his followers to strike the Sochi Olympics, which he denounced as "satanic dances on the bones of our ancestors." The games run from Feb. 7-23.

The Kremlin-backed leader of Chechnya claimed last week that Umarov was dead, but the claim couldn't be verified. The Vilayat Dagestan statement said the Volgograd attacks were carried out in part because of Umarov's order, but it didn't specifically say he had ordered them.

Dagestan has been come the center of an Islamic insurgency that has engulfed Russia's North Caucasus after two separatist wars in Chechnya. Militants seeking to create an independent state governed by Islamic Shariah law in the Caucasus launch daily attacks on police and other authorities there. One of the two ethnic Chechen brothers accused of staging the Boston Marathon bombings spent six months in Dagestan in 2012.

Andrei Soldatov, an independent Moscow-based security analyst, said the video threat need to be taken seriously.

"They have capabilities to strike beyond the North Caucasus, which they demonstrated in Volgograd," he said. "It's extremely difficult to stop a 'lone wolf' suicide bombing attack."

In S. Sudan, rebel-held town of Bor destroyed

ILYA GRIDNEFF
Associated Press

BOR, South Sudan — Bor is a ghost town. Every shop is looted and empty. Bodies lie on the ground, and English-language graffiti curses the ethnic group of the South Sudanese president.

Near the airport, the road is littered with trash. Shipping containers are pried open and their contents ransacked.

Once held by the rebels attempting to overthrow South Sudan's government, the city was taken back by the military over the weekend with the help of Ugandan troops.

More cities are falling back under government control after a conflict that began Dec. 15 saw rebels gain control of several key cities.

The government said Monday it has also regained control of Malakal, the capital of the oil-producing Upper Nile state, though the U.N. said its base there took fire, wounding nearly three dozen people and damaging the hospital.

Thousands have been killed and an estimated half million people have fled the fighting, which pits the government of President Salva Kiir, an ethnic Dinka, against former Vice President Riek Machar, an ethnic Nuer.

Negotiators for Kiir and Machar said over the weekend that a cease-fire was close at hand. But a Twitter feed believed to be controlled by Machar said Monday there won't be a cease-fire until Ugandan troops supporting the government leave and political detainees are released.

Comet-chasing probe wakes up, signals Earth

FRANK JORDANS
Associated Press

BERLIN — Waking up after almost three years of hibernation, a comet-chasing spacecraft sent its first signal back to Earth on Monday, prompting cheers from scientists who hope to use it to land the first space lander onto a comet.

The European Space Agency received the all-clear message from its Rosetta spacecraft at 7:18 p.m. — a message that had to travel some 500 million miles.

In keeping with the agency's effort to turn the tense wait for a signal into a social media event, the probe triggered a series of "Hello World!" tweets in different languages.

Dormant systems on the unmanned spacecraft were switched back on in preparation for the final stage of its decade-long mission to rendezvous with the comet named 67P/Churyumov-Gerasimenko. Systems had been powered down in

Technicians celebrate after receiving the Rosetta wake up signal in the control room of European Space Agency in Darmstadt, Germany.

2011 to conserve energy, leaving scientists in the dark about the probe's fate until now.

Because of the time it took Rosetta to wake up, and the long distance between the spacecraft and Earth, the earliest possible hour for a signal to arrive was 6:30 p.m.

"I think it's been the longest hour of my life," said Andrea Accomazzo, the spacecraft's operations manager at ESA's mission control room in Darmstadt, Germany. "Now we have it back."

Scientists will now take control of Rosetta again, a procedure slowed by the 45 minutes it takes a signal to travel to or from the spacecraft, he said.

The wake-up call is one of the final milestones for Rosetta before it makes its rendezvous with comet 67P in the summer. The probe will then fly a series of complicated maneuvers to observe the comet — a lump of rock and ice about four kilometers (2.5 miles) in diameter — before dropping a lander called Philae onto its icy surface in November.

The lander will dig up samples and analyze them with its instruments.

'84 Betamax ruling set a big precedent

Friday night at 9, millions of Americans sat in front of their televisions and watched the tropical police drama "Hawaii Five-0" on their local CBS station. And over the next week, roughly 3 million more will watch the show on their own schedule. That's an unremarkable statistic today, considering that half of American homes have a digital video recorder. But until Jan. 17, 1984, it was an open question whether consumer electronics companies would even be allowed to sell such devices.

On that day, a divided Supreme Court overruled the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals and declared that Sony could continue to sell its Betamax videocassette recorder despite the objections of two large Hollywood studios, Universal and Disney. It's an anniversary worth celebrating because it helped clear the way for a multitude of new technologies that have increased the demand for creative works.

Justice John Paul Stevens' majority opinion in Sony Corp. of America v. Universal laid down at least two important principles for future innovators. First, even if people copied an entire show, it wasn't an infringement if they were doing so to watch the program later. And second, if a product had a substantial legitimate use (such as time-shifting shows that are broadcast free over the air), it could be sold even if some buyers put it to illegitimate use (such as making copies of shows to rent or sell). But just as important, Stevens declined to expand copyright law to restrict new capabilities Congress hadn't contemplated when it wrote the copyright statute.

Betamax eventually lost the format war to VHS recorders, but its courtroom triumph helped all such devices proliferate. Recorders soon became the foundation for the home video business, which turned into Hollywood's largest cash cow. The ruling opened the door for TiVo and other digital gadgetry in the home, then helped defend an assortment of Web-based services with both infringing and non-infringing uses, such as YouTube and other user-generated content sites and Dropbox and other online storage services.

As new technologies emerge, however, so do legal questions that Stevens' opinion doesn't answer. Last week, the Supreme Court agreed to hear a case brought by the major broadcast networks against Aero, a company that erects an array of tiny TV antennas on its property that subscribers use to tune in broadcasts on their computers, tablets and smartphones. For now, it's enough to note that it could prove as important to cloud-based services as the Betamax case was to new devices in the home.

The Daily Commercial

The newspaper of choice for Lake and Sumter counties since 1875

EDITORIALS

Editorials are the consensus opinion of the editorial board, not any individual. They are written by the editorial staff but are not signed. Local editorials are published Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

COLUMNS

Columns are the opinion of the writer whose byline and picture appears with them. They do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the newspaper, and are chosen to represent a diversity of views.

If you would like to submit a guest column on a local, state or national issue, email your submission to letters@dailycommercial.com, or mail it to Voices, P.O. Box 490007, Leesburg, FL 34749-0007.

Guest columns should be limited to 550 words in length. The writer also must submit a recent photo to be published with the column, as well as a brief biographical sketch.

HAVE YOUR SAY

The Daily Commercial invites you to write letters to the editor. Letters should be no longer than 350 words. They must be original, signed with the full name of the writer, and include the writer's address and telephone number for verification. We reserve the right to edit for length. Letters also will be edited for grammar, clarity, taste and libel. We accept no more than two letters per month from the same writer. No open letters, form letters or copies of letters to third parties will be published. We do not publish unsigned letters. Submissions are not returned. We retain the right to archive and republish any material submitted for publication.

You can submit your letters by:

Individually, the concrete steps President Obama announced Friday toward reforming the National Security Agency's surveillance programs were modest. Taken together, though, they signal the end of an era of unfettered escalation in U.S. intelligence-gathering.

Since its establishment in 1952, the NSA's history has been one of almost nonstop expansion. But for most of that time, the agency still faced limits on what kind of information it could gather and in the legal strictures that governed its programs.

That changed after the terrorist attacks of 2001, which prompted then-President George W. Bush to demand an all-out effort to collect every scrap of information available.

His order came at a time when the Internet, email, instant messaging and low-cost voice communications were pouring an unprecedented amount of private information into a global electronic network, available for sophisticated eavesdroppers to tap.

Bush brushed aside legal constraints and ordered the NSA to collect domestic telephone and email communications without court warrants. Later, Congress and the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court legalized much of that program retroactively, including the NSA's collection of domestic telephone call records, known as metadata. The principle driving intelligence-gathering had become collect first, ask questions later.

Obama's proposals are step back from that rule.

The president didn't cancel any existing surveillance programs; indeed, he reaffirmed the government's argument that telephone metadata should still be collected _ though with new safeguards.

To many civil liberties advocates, his cautious moves were disappointing. But while Obama's practical steps were small, the conceptual steps were large. Instead of accepting the doctrine that a global war against terrorists justifies almost any expansion of information-gathering, he said the entire U.S. intelligence enterprise should be subject to more public scrutiny and more stringent cost-benefit tests.

"The power of new technologies means that there are fewer and fewer technical constraints on what we can do," Obama said. "That places a special obligation on us to ask tough questions about what we should do."

The immediate practical effects of asking those questions will be few. The telephone metadata will still be there — and still, for the time being, held in one big database at the NSA. But analysts who want to check U.S. telephone records of anyone suspicious will now need permission in each case from the federal surveillance court.

A second Obama innovation — the idea that the NSA should treat foreigners the same way it treats Americans when it comes to privacy — is a revolutionary idea within the intelligence community, which is used to drawing a clear line between us and them. But it won't shield foreigners from being subjects of U.S. surveillance, unless they are on the short list of a few dozen allied leaders whose phones won't be tapped.

The larger impact, over the long term, may come from a less obvious part of Obama's reforms: his directives that intelligence agencies, including the NSA, face more stringent oversight, and that the FISA court make public its decisions affecting privacy rights.

Finally, Obama's new positions may help change the debate in Congress over the NSA's powers.

The president said that although the government should collect telephone metadata, in the long run, it shouldn't be the one to hold it. That almost certainly means a vigorous debate in Congress as surveillance programs come up for reauthorization during the next two years.

Some advocates for NSA reform in Congress, including Sen. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., praised Obama's speech for reinvigorating that debate, even though it fell short of their wish list in other respects.

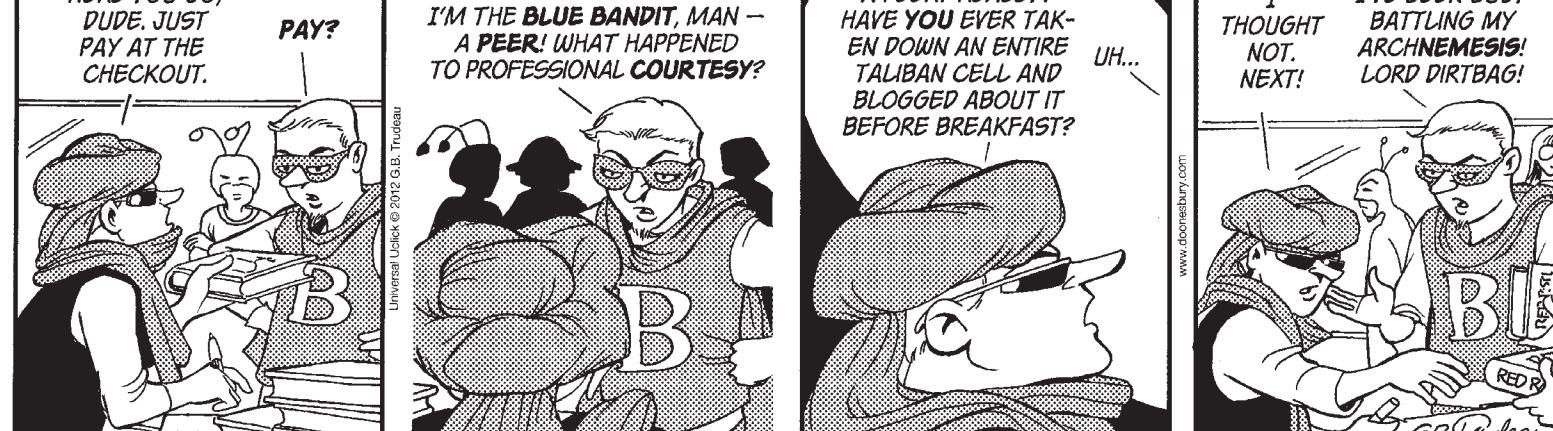

A year ago, before NSA renegade Edward Snowden revealed dozens of once-secret programs, these issues were almost entirely unknown, even to members of Congress. Even a month ago, momentum toward NSA reform appeared to have stalled. But with Obama's speech Friday, it seems certain the issues will have a full airing, and the president has made clear where he stands.

The era in which a president could order the NSA to expand surveillance programs with little oversight from Congress and no scrutiny from the public is over. That's a big change, and a good one.

Millsap has 26, Hawks hold off Heat 121-114

CHARLES ODUM

ATLANTA — Paul Millsap scored 26 points and the Atlanta Hawks overcame LeBron James' 30 points to beat the Miami Heat 121-114 on Monday night.

DeMarre Carroll added 19 points and Pero Antic had 17 for the Hawks, who snapped a nine-game losing streak in their series with the Heat.

Chris Bosh had 21 points for Miami, which was without Dwyane Wade for the second straight game.

James sank back-to-back 3-pointers midway through the final period to give Miami its first lead of the Keith Peters, MD, of the Department of Radiology at the University of Florida's College of Medicine, and Ghatu Subhash, professor of mechanical and aerospace engineering seek to patent a different kind of football helmet that uses inflatable/deflatable padding.

GAINESVILLE — In a ground floor lab of the New Engineering Building at the University of Florida, radiologist Keith Peters and mechanical engineer Ghatu Subhash are building the football helmet of the future.

They've spent several months dropping weights onto different types of foam padding material to test their impact absorption rates in the Center for Dynamic Response of Advanced Materials and tinkering with a system of fluid-filled reservoirs they say will absorb more blunt force than traditional materials.

Still in the early stages of development, they aren't ready to test it on humans yet. But they are optimistic that their design will work — and eventually replace the kind of padding used in today's football helmets and other protective headgear.

The inspiration came from watching the illegal street-racing flick "2 Fast 2 Furious," Peters said. In one scene, a car crashes into a barrier of water-filled canisters.

NEW YORK — Workers hung in harnesses, putting the finishing touches on a sponsor's billboard high above Broadway. A few blocks north, in Times Square, a three-story stage festooned with Fox Sports logos towered over the crossroads of the world.

Below, the pedestrian plazas stayed relatively calm and un-crowded — for now — beneath blinking ads, most of which referenced the Super Bowl as New York spent a mellow MLK Monday preparing to host the biggest event in sports.

The Feb. 2 championship game, between Seattle and Denver, is still almost two weeks away, and while there will be all sorts of events surrounding the game throughout the

and the officials wore "Dream Big" logos on their warm-up shirts.

King's daughter, Bernice King, delivered a brief message before the game.

The Hawks led 71-70 at halftime, setting a season high for points in a half and points allowed by a Miami opponent in a half. The Heat matched their season high for points in a half. It was only the second time in Miami's franchise history both teams had at least 70 points in a half.

Antic had 12 points in the half but was called for two fouls in the first two minutes of the second half. Antic went to the bench with five fouls.

Elton Brand replaced Antic and had six points in the third period, helping the Hawks take a 97-92 lead into the final period.

Korver hit a 3-pointer to open the second period, extending to 109 his NBA record of consecutive games with a 3.

James was slow to return to his feet after he was hit in the back of his head by Korver as Korver was attempting to block James' shot with 3:18 remaining in the first half. Korver was called for a flagrant foul, but the call was overturned following a review.

ball players are struck in the head or neck at least once a game, Peters said.

Last year, the NFL agreed to pay out $765 million to settle a concussion lawsuit by 4,500 former players.

The time has come to revolutionize helmets, they said. While helmets have evolved to protect heads from a deadly knee or elbow penetration to the skull, Peters said, there has been no advance in concussion protection since the early 20th century.

And they believe their improvements can be made inexpensively, for any type of helmet — bicycle, football, police and fire protection.

"The whole point is to make it less expensive, to put it into small strips that could go into a helmet," Subhash said.

Subhash has done over the last 15 years in improving protective gear for soldiers, firefighters and others in high-risk situations.

Their tests have shown that their fluid-filled pads absorb five times the impact of traditional padding. They estimate one to two years before such a product is functional and ready to be produced to retrofit helmets.

The padding decreases the direct impact from a blow to the head. But it doesn't deal with the torquing, or rotational, impact from glancing blows. Once Subhash and Peters perfect their padding system, they will set their sights on designing the outer shell.

Preventing rotational impact would "require a redesign of the helmet itself," Subhash said.

Subhash has been drawing schematics but has not gotten to developing a prototype helmet yet. Testing has been delayed and an infusion of investor dollars is needed to get them to the next level, Subhash said.

But they are hoping the NFL and other sports organizations will take an interest in their research. Peters and Subhash estimate their designs could reduce head injuries by 40 percent or more.

That is a lot to consider, given that 340,000 sports-related traumatic brain injuries occur each year, some of them permanent, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. And professional football players are struck in the head or neck at least once a game, Peters said.

Jordan, Redick lead Clippers past Pistons

NOAH TRISTER
AP Sports Writer

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — DeAndre Jordan had 16 points and 21 rebounds, and the Los Angeles Clippers breezed to a 112-103 victory over the Detroit Pistons on Monday.

Jordan made his first seven shots — almost all on dunks. Blake Griffin added 25 points and Jamal Crawford scored 26 for the Clippers, who are now 6-2 since losing star point guard Chris Paul to a shoulder injury.

J.J. Redick added 20 points for Los Angeles, including two four-point plays when the Pistons fouled him beyond the arc.

Rodney Stuckey scored 29 points for Detroit and Josh Smith added 24, but the Pistons got almost nothing from their starting backcourt. Brandon Jennings went scoreless and Kentavious Caldwell-Pope scored only six points.

Jordan threw down a memorable dunk on Detroit's Brandon Knight last March. Knight is no longer on the Pistons, but Jordan put on another highlight show Monday, dunking four times in the first quarter alone. The Clippers led 64-53 at halftime after shooting 66 percent from the field.

Jordan has six double-doubles in the last seven games, and his most impressive dunk of the day was probably a one-handed alley-oop from Redick in the third quarter. Jordan's eyes were around rim level on that one, which gave Los Angeles an 82-67 lead.

Redick bounced back after a 4-for-17 showing against Indiana on Saturday. His first four-point play put the Clippers up 38-33 in the second quarter. His second came in the third, after the Pistons had cut the lead to six and looked ready for a potential run.

Detroit Pistons forward Kyle Singler (25) drives on Los Angeles Clippers guard J.J. Redick (4) on Monday during the second half in Auburn Hills, Mich.

The last player with two four-point plays in one game was Crawford, who did it for Golden State against Denver on March 28, 2009, according to STATS.

Once the Clippers pulled away, about the only fun moment for most of the crowd came when a fan seated courtside was drenched by a drink after the ball went sailing out of bounds right at him.

Detroit trailed by as many as 20 points in the fourth. The Pistons cut the deficit to nine late in the game, but Jordan punctuated a terrific day with yet another alley-oop dunk.

MAVERICKS 102, CAVS 97

CLEVELAND — Monta Ellis scored 22 points, Shawn Marion added 18 and the Dallas Mavericks held off a late Cleveland rally to beat the Cavaliers 102-97 on Monday.

Cleveland roared back from a 24-point deficit in the first half and trailed by three with 2.8 seconds remaining, but the Cavaliers were called for a five-second violation when Jarrett Jack failed to get the ball inbounds. Ellis put the game away with two free throws with 1.1 seconds left.

Kyrie Irving led Cleveland with 26 points. Luol Deng, acquired from Chicago on Jan. 7, scored 20 points in his first home game with the Cavaliers while Anderson Varejao had 18 points with 21 rebounds.

Dirk Nowitzki scored 17 points and DeJuan Blair added 13 for the Mavericks, who had six players in double figures.

WIZARDS 107, 76ERS 99

WASHINGTON — Bradley Beal scored 22 points with nine rebounds and eight assists, Marcin Gortat had 19 points and 11 rebounds and the Washington Wizards reached .500 for the fourth time this season with a 107-99 win over the Philadelphia 76ers on Monday.

Each of the previous three times Washington has made it to breakeven, it has lost the next game. On Wednesday against Boston, the Wizards try to get over .500 for the first time since they were 2-1 on Oct. 31, 2009.

Beal missed 12 of 14 shots in Saturday's loss to Detroit but snapped back to score 13 in the second quarter and help give Washington a 61-51 lead at halftime.

Michael Carter-Williams led Philadelphia, which has lost seven of eight, with 31. Thaddeus Young had 18. Spencer Hawes had 11 points and tied his season high with 14 rebounds.

BOBCATS 100, RAPTORS 95

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Al Jefferson had 22 points and 19 rebounds Monday, and the Bobcats held on to win 100-95 and beat the Toronto Raptors for the seventh straight time in Charlotte.

Jefferson became the first Bobcats player to have a double-double in the first quarter with 10 points and 10 rebounds, sending Charlotte to a 26-11 lead. The Bobcats stretched the lead to 30 in the third quarter but needed to withstand a furious rally by the Raptors.

With point guard Kemba Walker out with a sprained ankle, Ramon Sessions and Jannero Pargo combined for 40 points on 10 of 17 shooting. Sessions had 23 points and was 10 of 11 from the foul line, including two free throws with 1.6 seconds left.

NETS 103, KNICKS 80

NEW YORK — Joe Johnson scored 25 points and the Brooklyn Nets sent the Knicks to a fourth straight loss with a 103-80 victory Monday, evening this season's New York rivalry at a game apiece.

Making a triumphant return from London, the Nets improved to 7-1 in 2014 and avenged last month's blowout loss with a romp of their own.

Andray Blatche had 19 points and 12 rebounds, and Alan Anderson scored 15 points for the Nets.

Carmelo Anthony had 26 points and 12 rebounds for the Knicks.

PELICANS 95, GRIZZLIES 92

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Anthony Davis scored 21 of his 27 points in the second half and grabbed 10 rebounds as the New Orleans Pelicans snapped their eight-game losing streak with a 95-92 victory over the Memphis Grizzlies on Monday.

Tyreke Evans added 15 points, 11 of them in the fourth quarter. He also had seven assists.

Brian Roberts scored 13 points and Eric Gordon finished with 12 for the short-handed Pelicans, who won for only the second time in January. Alexis Ajinca scored 10 points for New Orleans.

Zach Randolph led the Grizzlies with 23 points and a season-high 20 rebounds.

Instant replay: How it will work

Associated Press

Come Sunday, NFL fans might see coaches Bill Belichick or Jim Harbaugh hollering at the referee and throwing a red flag on the field to challenge a call.

And this week at the Australian Open, players will contest rulings and then watch the results be revealed on the scoreboard.

Major League Baseball made sweeping changes this week to expand its instant replay system, but the review process won't appear nearly so dramatic.

THE CHALLENGE OF THE CHALLENGE:

Two outs, none on, scoreless game in the bottom of the second. Batter hits a chopper in the hole, seems to beat the throw but is called out. Should his manager ask for a review? If he's wrong, he won't have any options later when his center fielder makes a diving catch with the bases loaded and the umps say the ball bounced. Or does the manager go on a fishing expedition, talking to the ump to gauge if he has a case — and giving someone in the clubhouse more time to examine replays.

BYE-BYE BEEFS:

Face it, the spectacle of a manager charging from the dugout, flapping his arms and shouting nose-to-nose at an umpire is part of baseball lore. Will replay make wild rhubarbs a thing of the past? Well, rulings that get reviewed can't be argued.

HEAR AND THERE:

To contest a call, a manager simply tells the crew chief in "timely" fashion he wants a review.

C'MON UMP, THAT PITCH WAS LOW!

MLB has been adamant that no matter what, replay would never be used to call balls and strikes. Never. Too hard to tell on tape whether an 88 mph slider clipped the corner, many say. But with technology improving by the instant, is it impossible to imagine someday? Stay tuned.

Federer demolishes Tsonga in straight sets, readies for quarters

JOHN PYE
AP Sports Writer

MELBOURNE, Australia — When the draw for the Australian Open was made, it wasn't Roger Federer who was being widely touted as the prime contender to claim an 18th major title.

All that hype surrounded Serena Williams, but she was knocked out in the fourth round.

Federer is still three match wins away from that milestone, but after his 6-3, 7-5, 6-4 demolition of No. 10-seeded Jo-Wilfried Tsonga on Monday night, it's clear he's up for the challenge.

On a day when No. 3 Maria Sharapova was upset by No. 20 Dominika Cibulkova, following top-ranked Williams out of the tournament and opening up the women's draw for defending champion Victoria Azarenka, the leading male contenders on the heavily stacked top half advanced to the quarterfinals.

Progressing along with Federer were top-ranked Rafael Nadal, Roger Federer of Switzerland celebrates after defeating Jo-Wilfried Tsonga of France on Monday after their fourth-round match at the Australian Open tennis championship in Melbourne.

as well not enter the draw. You might as well stay at home and watch other guys battle it out.

"That's what I like. I like playing the best ... and you need to take it to them."

Federer certainly did that against Tsonga, barely dropping a point on serve in the first set and putting the 2008 Australian Open finalist under pressure right away with an early break. The 32-year-old Swiss star was so relentless that Tsonga, aggravated at not being able to threaten Federer at all, screamed and smacked a ball into the crowd after losing an exchange of close volleys.

From Tsonga's side, it looked like he was facing the Federer of old — before the crisis of confidence, the new racket, and before his record streak of reaching the quarterfinals at 36 consecutive majors came to a halt with a shocking second-round defeat at Wimbledon.

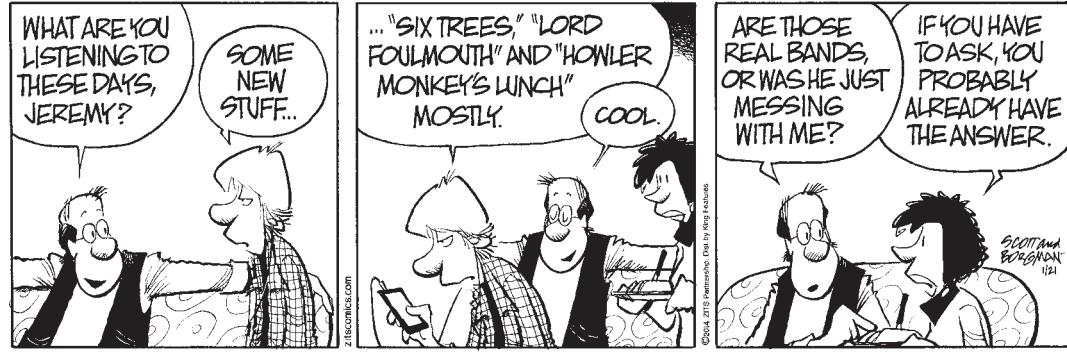

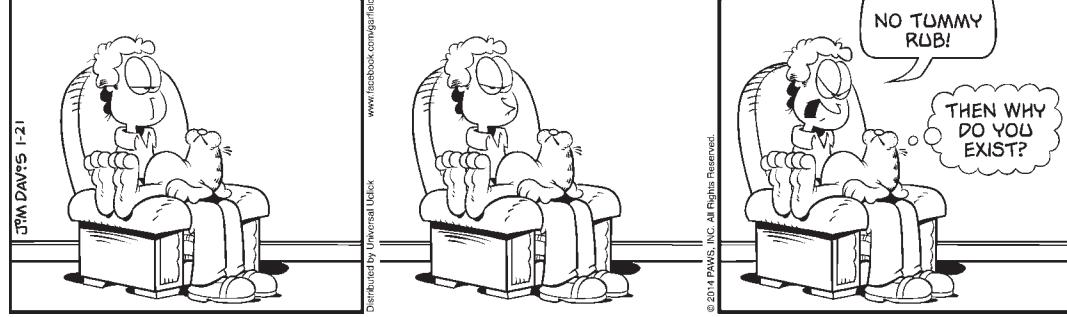

"No, I was not surprised because, you know, when you play Roger, you expect him at this level," Tsonga said.

Vets deserve thanks even when it seems unwelcome

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from "Twice Bitten in Washington" (Nov. 4), who had thanked veterans for their service to our country and received several negative responses. I'm a retired vet, dying from Agent Orange poisoning. I served two tours in Vietnam, and when I returned from Nam, I was called a baby killer, spat upon and refused taxi service because I was in uniform.

America has had a change in attitude since the Vietnam War. Today, many folks appreciate what the military is doing. I have been thanked several times while wearing my Vietnam Veterans hat and it makes me feel great, to the point my eyes water.

Tell "Twice Bitten" to continue thanking the military vets. It means a lot, especially to vets like me. Sure beats being called a baby killer. — VIETNAM VET

DEAR VIETNAM VET: I received many letters like yours from Vietnam vets who were also not thanked for their service when they returned home. Like you, they very much appreciate hearing a "delayed" thanks for their service. I would like to thank you and all the readers who responded to that column with such emotional and sometimes gut-wrenching stories. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I would like to offer "Twice" an explanation for the reaction she received. I served two tours in Iraq and lost some good friends. When vets return home from war, home is a scary place. The life we lived and breathed is no longer. After spending so much time fearing the unknown and protecting ourselves physically and emotionally, we can't stop.

Many of us came home feeling guilty that we lived while others died — ashamed that we might not have done enough, that we should have been the one who was laid to rest, that maybe if we had looked harder, fought harder, we wouldn't have lost a soldier.

When I returned home, I reacted the way "Twice" described. I was resentful that someone would take the time to honor me, but not the friends I lost. It was a long time before I realized that by honoring me with their sincere thanks, they were honoring every soldier we have ever lost. Now when I am thanked, I shake hands, I hug, and I thank them for their respect.

To "Twice": Never stop! Do not be afraid. We are not hateful or angry. We are scared and sad. Your expression of thanks means more than any parade, any medal or any award could ever mean. — BRANDON IN INDIANA

DEAR ABBY: As a soon-to-be-retired career Army officer, I am one of those who feel awkward when people thank us for doing our jobs. The Army was a career I chose, knowing the hardships and what would be asked of me. The military is filled with all kinds of people, and even though I may not always be in the mood for a stranger to approach me when I'm out and about, deep down inside it is refreshing to know that what I do is appreciated. — PHIL IN WASHINGTON STATE

DEAR ABBY: One day while walking in a cemetery, we saw an elderly gentleman leaning on the arm of his caregiver, and we realized he was looking at a veterans memorial. My wife approached and asked if he was a veteran. He looked at her and said "Yes," and she said, "Thank you very much for your service and your bravery." He immediately teared up and croaked out a "Thank you." His caregiver rolled her eyes.

My wife got into her face and said, "You have a hero on your arm, so show him some respect!" The veteran cried harder, grabbed my wife's hand and said, "No one has ever said that to me, ESPECIALLY my caregiver." — KIM IN THE MID-WEST
