Lake deputy shoots man who was acting suicidal

MILLARD K. IVES | Staff Writer
millardives@dailycommercial.com

A Lake County Sheriff's deputy shot a man they said was acting suicidal Wednesday afternoon just south of Clermont.

A helicopter that landed at the end of Aria Court, several feet from where the shooting took place, took the man to an unknown hospital and his condition was unknown Wednesday night. Sgt. James Vachon, sheriff's spokesman, said the deputy, whom he did not identify, has been placed on administrative leave pending the outcome of an internal investigation.

The Florida Department of Law Enforcement, which routinely investigates any shooting by a police officer, has taken over the investigation.

Education Commissioner stops by Clermont school to discuss standards

Florida Education Commissioner Pam Stewart said Wednesday that proposed changes to Common Core, national benchmark education standards, will not affect the rollout of the standards and new statewide assessment by the 2014-15 school year.

"There are not major, recommended changes," she said while attending a literacy event at Lost Lake Elementary School in Clermont. "Most of them are calculus, which is not assessed."

Further, Stewart said the few changes, such as teaching cursive writing, will not affect teachers because they have already been instructing students in this area.

"I don't think the changes being proposed are going to upset teachers' worlds very much," she said.

However, some members of the Florida Senate Education Committee remained skeptical of reaching the deadline for implementing Common Core by next school year.

"I find it hard to believe

FDLE: Nothing to prosecute after Groveland probe

ROXANNE BROWN | Staff Writer
roxanne.brown@dailycommercial.com

After five months of investigating alleged misdeeds by Groveland officials, the Florida Department of Law Enforcement has found nothing to prosecute and State Attorney's Office will be closing the book on the matter, officials say.

"All of these allegations were unfounded by FDLE in their investigation and I concur with their determination," Assistant State Attorney Mark Simpson wrote in the memo he sent to Ric Ridgway, Florida's Chief Assistant State Attorney.

The FDLE concluded that although some of the misdeeds were "deemed to be substantial allegations of misconduct, therefore, appropriate for reporting," they were not enough to stand alone.

"Based on the witness statements, facts and circumstances surrounding the aforementioned complaints, probable cause does not exist to support criminal charges," the FDLE determined.

Specifically, the FDLE investigation was linked to:

- A public integrity complaint from Groveland Police Lieutenant Jesse Baker against former Mayor James Gearhart and other city officials, alleging four instances of alleged Sunshine Law violations.
- A complaint of bid tampering after Gearhart was said to have circumvented the city's bidding process for a job proposal.
- A complaint that public records were deleted after an alleged incident where Groveland Information Technology Director Andy Sapp said Gearhart wanted his personal computer checked for incriminating evidence.

Gearhart resigned in November, saying he was tired of the "theatrics and the brutal attacks by fellow associates and council members against myself and my family."

"The only thing I want to say is that I'm glad it's over with,"

Authorities identify 'Jane Doe' found murdered in Sumter County

MILLARD IVES | Staff Writer
millard.ives@daily commercial

Authorities say they charged a 62-year-old Tavares man in the death of "Jane Doe," whose body was found decomposing in Sumter County last year, in part, because he was receiving her pension checks since the slaying.

"Jane Doe" was identified as Mary Jane Weaver, a 57-year-old Kentucky resident and platonic friend of the man accused of shooting her — Ralph Harold Penrod.

Before learning her name, authorities had little to go on except the tattoo "Jane" on her left shoulder.

Penrod made his first appearance on murder charges at the Lake County jail on Wednesday and was occurred near the end of a cul-de-sac in Lake Crescent Pines East, a community full of nice stucco houses. Witnesses said the wounded man was lying in the street until he was taken to the hospital.

"We don't ever get anything like that around here," said Rose McGriff, a 12-year resident who lives beside the home where the shooting happened.

Vachon said deputies responded to the 10700 block of Aria Court about 3:30 p.m. Wednesday to attend to a man who was possibly suicidal, when the shooting occurred. He directed questions to FDLE officials, who weren't able to provide any more details late Wednesday.

Several neighbors questioned by the Daily Commercial said they weren't home at the time of the shooting. One woman, who didn't want to be identified, said they saw the man bleeding and running with a knife in front of law enforcement. Another woman said she heard what she thought were fireworks until law enforcement arrived.

HOROSCOPES

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Thursday, Jan. 23, 2014: This year you go from being idealistic to being intensely practical. Others might feel a bit insecure around you, as they don't know who will be in your shoes from one day to the next. Be sensitive to others' needs. If you are single, you are likely to meet someone while out and about. Your relationship might have too public a profile for comfort. If you are attached, the two of you enjoy a common commitment that often occupies your time. Make sure that you also schedule time away together to relax. SCORPIO is demanding, and often that quality pushes you away.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A meeting might take place in the morning. By the afternoon, you will seek out individuals rather than groups. Use your intuition when dealing with a feisty partner. How you see a situation could change because of a conversation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Complete a good amount of work by midday. An associate, partner or loved one could demand a lot of attention in the afternoon. You know what you want, but the other party might not be as sure. A discussion could be difficult, as a result.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Tap into your imagination in the morning, when an idea is more likely to serve you. Late afternoon presents a different outlook and a far more demanding schedule. A boss might be eyeing your performance. Do not disappoint him or her.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your temper could rise to the surface in the morning, yet by the afternoon, you might forget what had upset you. Your imagination fills in the gaps and easily can find a solution. Tap into your instincts regarding a child or loved one. You will know what to do.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Return calls, make time for a meeting and handle as much as you can in the morning. By the afternoon, you will want to become less available. You might have a situation on your mind that you need to sort out. Give yourself some extra time to reflect.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be aware of what someone else expects, because you don't want to disappoint this person. In some form, you could send mixed signals. To keep that from happening, be clear with yourself before you act on a personal matter.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Get a head start on your day, if possible. If an important matter must be handled, do it the morning. By the afternoon, your concerns might change. A discussion about finances seems inevitable. Be aware of a certain insecurity that seems to control you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You could feel off in the morning and wonder why you are proceeding the way you are. Stop. Think things through, and take your time. You could feel a lot differently about the same situation a little later. A family member tends to drag you down.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Dealings with others are highlighted. You need a better sense of direction and an idea of what you want. If you are straightforward, others are likely to respond in kind. Use the afternoon for doing some quiet work, and perhaps make a call or two.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Several associates will seek you out for advice. Right now, you need to take a strong stance. Don't allow anyone to distract you. Understanding will evolve later in the day. A meeting could allow you to share recent events and news.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You could be making an important decision before you know it. Your take-charge attitude will pay off quickly. Don't hesitate to stay on top of a key situation, as no one else cares about your interests as much as you do.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) A direct conversation establishes a connection, but not necessarily an agreement. You could be in for a fast change if you are not careful. How you deal with a friend or loved one might change, given a different perspective. Detach.

Opening lead — queen of spades.

Some contracts stand or fall on one decision, and in such cases declarer is best advised to delay that decision until the last possible moment. South failed to do that in today's deal, and as a result went down in an ice-cold grand slam.

West led the queen of spades, and it was immediately apparent to declarer that the outcome would hinge on how he fared in hearts. Having learned that when holding nine cards of a suit missing the queen, it was slightly better to play for the drop of the queen rather than to finesse, South won the spade lead and all too hastily cashed the A-K of hearts. When the queen did not appear, he had to go down one, losing a spade trick at the end.

Declarer was very remiss when he plunged headlong into tackling the hearts at the outset. With 12 sure tricks in sight — two spades, two hearts, four diamonds and four clubs — there was no need to make the crucial decision in hearts so early.

After winning the spade lead with the king, he should have played a heart to the ace and then cashed four clubs and the A-K-Q of diamonds to produce this position:

The lead of the diamond jack at this point would have finished West. Whatever he discarded, South would score the rest of the tricks. How to play the heart suit would not have entered the picture at all.

that the districts are anywhere close to being ready," Education Committee Chairman John Legg, R-Lutz, said at a Jan. 8 meeting.

And, Sen. Dwight Bullard D-Miami, questioned why the new assessment needed to be put in place for the 2014-15 school year.

"What happens if we were to put the brakes and let's say, let's get it right and give it the right amount of time," he said. "We can use this test as sort of a baseline test in order to gauge whether or not it is the right tool in the tool box to use without impacting all those areas it could impact."

The Common Core State Standards "were researched, written and developed by professional educators and education experts from across the United States and agreed upon in 2010 through a state-led initiative by the National Governor's Association and Council of Chief State School Officers," according to the Florida Department of Education.

Specifically, the CCSS "provide clear educational standards, while allowing local districts and schools the flexibility needed to deliver quality instruction in the classroom," according to the FDOE.

CCSS "is a shift in the way teachers teach, putting more of the learning in the teachers' hands," Stewart said Wednesday.

Stewart volunteered her time to read to third-grade students for Read Across Lost Lake, an annual program that is part of Celebrate Literacy Week, Florida. Volunteers, including community leaders, read to students in numerous classrooms in the school.

Rep. Daniel Webster, R-Winter Garden, Lake County Commissioner Sean Parks, Superintendent Susan Moxley, Lake County School Board Member Rosanne Brandeburg and South Lake Chamber of Commerce President Ray San Fratello participated in the event.

"We believe this program shows students the importance of reading," said Susan Emrick, literacy coach.

Rhonda Hunt, principal of the school, said students at the school continue to improve in reading.

"We received our Lake Benchmark Assessment for the second quarter and we have improved 10-15 percent for our mid-year reading," she said.

Moxley lauded the school's achievements.

"This school performs well because teachers are so dedicated to making sure learning is rigorous and applicable," she said.

Indeed, 2013 Florida Comprehensive Assessment Test scores show that 75 percent of third, fourth and fifth grade students scored three or above in reading at the elementary school, according to the FDOE. The FCAT's are scored on a 1-5 scale, with five being the highest score.

"It is the second highest score in the district," said Chris Patton, spokesman for the district.

In 2013, 59 percent of third-graders scored three or above on the FCAT in the district, according to Patton. The state average is 57 percent.

Moxley said Wednesday's program highlighted how fundamental reading is to "everything we do in life."

Parks said he has participated in the program for the last three years.

"Reading is the absolute most essential skill to grasp for learning," he said.

Webster agreed.

"It is the gateway to knowledge, gateway to learning and gateway to success," he said.

The National Coalition For Literacy reported that "one in six adults in the U.S. have low literacy skills and nearly one third have weak numeracy skills."

transferred to the Sumter County jail.

"We're just glad this part is over, now we will wait for the trial and more closure," Weaver's brother, Bob Sturtz, said following a press conference at the sheriff's office.

Weaver remains in the Sumter County jail on no bond.

Sheriff's officials and family members said Weaver and Penrod have known each other since high school. They moved in together in Kentucky as "platonic friends" sometime after Weaver's husband died.

Last year, the couple was in the middle of moving to Tavares, where Penrod had family members, when Weaver went missing.

Sturtz said he believes Penrod had just gotten off the interstate in Wildwood when he decided to leave her body in a wooded area behind Wendy's on State Road 44. That's where a man later looking for his lost wallet discovered the body on April 22 of last year.

Capt. Kevin Hofecker, a sheriff's spokesman, said investigators believe the body had been there for about three weeks before it was discovered.

It was Dr. Erin Kimmerle, a renowned professor of anthropology at the University of South Florida, and also present at the press conference, who helped detectives solve the case by putting together a composite sketch from the remains whose similarity to Weaver looked unbelievable.

The sketch came into the hands of Kentucky State Police, who noticed it resembled Weaver, reported missing by her family in June of last year.

Sheriff's officials arrested Weaver at a mobile park home in Tavares on Tuesday.

Other than citing "high tech" investigative techniques and "old fashioned police work," detectives did not provide any details of how they linked Weaver to the murder.

However, Hofecker said investigators believe Penrod killed Weaver over her dead husband's pension checks that she was receiving and Penrod continued to receive until his murder arrest.

Zimmerman painting targets prosecutor

Associated Press

ORLANDO — George Zimmerman is releasing a new piece of artwork, this one portraying the special prosecutor who charged him with second-degree murder.

Robert Zimmerman Jr. posted his brother's new painting Wednesday on Twitter. He said details about its sale would follow Thursday.

The painting — titled "Angie" — uses shades of red and orange to depict northeast Florida state attorney Angela Corey holding her thumb and fingers together. Text on the piece reads, "I have this much respect for the American judicial system."

Zimmerman sold another painting on eBay last month, with a winning bid of $100,099.99.

Zimmerman was acquitted in July in the 2012 shooting death of 17-year-old Trayvon Martin.

Umatilla opts to examine, fix water valves

AUSTIN FULLER | Staff Writer
austin.fuller@dailycommercial.com

Umatilla's City Council voted Tuesday night to have Utility Service Company of Atlanta fix water line cutoff valves to prevent problems seen last October when a water main broke and the entire city was left without water for several hours.

According to a previous memo from City Manager Glenn Irby, the cost for this will be around $20,000. He said he expects the work to begin in three to four weeks and be completed by the end of March.

"The company out of Georgia has indicated that they believe that 80 plus percent of the valves will work, once they use the equipment they've got, which works on hydraulics," Irby said Wednesday. "That leaves you with 20, less than 20 percent of them are not going to be fine."

The city has about 360 such valves.

Irby previously said replacing the existing valves could cost $1,040,687.

"If you've got 80 plus percent are exercisable, then you won't spend that money (for new ones)," Irby

Wife of theater shooting victim mourns husband

TAMARA LUSH

TAMPA — The wife of a man who was shot and killed during an argument over texting at a movie theater said Wednesday that her "whole world just got shattered in a million pieces."

Nicole Oulson cried during a news conference at her attorney's office in Tampa. She spoke briefly, thanking the community for its support. She added that her focus now is on the couple's 22-month-old daughter.

"It's so hard and unbearable," she said.

Oulson and her husband, Chad Oulson, were in a movie theater Jan. 13 when he was shot during an argument with another man. Curtis Reeves, a 71-year-old retired police officer, is charged with the second-degree murder and is being held without bail. A hearing to determine whether he should be released on bail will be held in Pasco County on Feb. 5.

Reeves was subdued by Sumter County off-duty sheriff's Cpl. Deputy Alan Hamilton, who took the weapon from the gunman and held him until other law enforcement officers could reach the theater.

"It was a courageous act." said Lt. Bobby Caruthers, a sheriff's office spokesman, said earlier.

Friends of the couple say Chad Oulson was texting their daughter's baby sitter when the fight erupted during movie previews.

Nicole Oulson said Wednesday that she and her husband rarely had a day off to spend together.

"I was just so excited and looking forward to spending the day with the love of my life," she said.

Oulson was also shot in the hand and said she is still trying to recover. During the news conference, her left hand and arm were covered in a cast.

Her attorney, TJ Grimaldi, said that Oulson has an "unfortunately clear recollection of what

Fruitland Park OKs settlement

STEVE FUSSELL
Correspondent

The Fruitland Park City Commission on Tuesday approved a settlement of a class action lawsuit to overturn the city's controversial utility services fees, a voluntary $8-per-month charge on city utility bills commissioners enacted in 2009 to help bolster police and fire department budgets.

The settlement was announced following a closed-door meeting between the City Commission and the city's attorneys. Such private meetings are permitted under Florida's Sunshine laws when elected officials need to discuss pending litigation with attorneys.

Lake County Judge Michael Takac will have to approve any settlement before it becomes official. A hearing is tentatively scheduled for March 5.

If approved, the city will establish a $530,000 settlement fund and a mechanism to refund utility services fees paid by city residents since 2009.

the main topic. Hormone replacement therapy, nutrition and stress management will be discussed as well.

Kim Kilne, coordinator of marketing and communications for Florida Hospital Waterman, said the breakfast will be the first of four heart-health programs offered in February, including a health expo where attendees can receive free health screenings. The free events are part of the hospital's Go Red campaign for Heart Month, all designed to raise education and awareness about heart disease.

While heart disease is one of the leading causes of death in Lake County for both men and women, Dr. Richard Pearce, director of the Florida Hospital Waterman Heart Center, said many of the factors contributing to heart disease can be prevented by making lifestyle improvements.

The hospital has room for 120 attendees at the breakfast event; organizers hope to attract young working women.

"We know through studies that women are really the gatekeepers to the health care of their families, so the more that you can give them the education and the resources that they need, they can spread throughout their family and to their spouse and children," Kilne said.

"It's all about awareness and providing educational tools to the community that they might not be able to get elsewhere," Kilne said, noting the hospital has made changes to its cardiac services.

"We want to promote the new technology and the different renovations that we have done to provide superior heart services to the county and the expertise of the physicians that are available here," she said. "We want people to know that they can come to us for complete heart care."

The Tavares hospital also plans to host an open house at the end of February to show its renovated cardiac catheterization lab.

how much of the settlement fund to award in legal fees and administrative costs, then determine an amount to award two-time commission candidate Michael Howard and his wife, whom Judge Takac appointed as class representatives last year.

Former Commissioner Jim Richardson, who initially filed the suit, was disqualified as a class representative. An earlier settlement offer proposed by attorneys for the plaintiffs called for a $15,000 payment to the class representatives. Judge Takac may set a different amount on March 5.

After those amounts are allocated, any money remaining in the settlement fund will be returned to utility customers who have paid the fees in the past. Only city residents will qualify for refunds. Utility fees were not charged to utility customers outside the city limits.

Eligible utility customers must apply to the city for their refunds. Refunds will be made on an individual pro-rated basis. Customers who paid the most will receive the biggest refund checks.

The city will set up a method for applying for refunds after the court approves the settlement.

Any monies that remain in the fund after utility customers are paid will be returned to the general fund.

Commissioners enacted the utility services fees five years ago to offset budgetary shortfalls brought on by the recession, the housing market collapse and reduced property values. From the start, the city has collected approximately $560,000 from the fees, or about $100,000 annually.

The police department's annual budget is about $1.1 million.

Richardson filed the lawsuit in federal court in February, 2013 leveling two sets of allegations — that the utility services fees were illegal and that commissioners and city staffers unfairly opposed his reelection campaign in November, 2012.

Last year the federal judge split that complaint into two separate actions and sent the utility service fee issue to Lake County court for disposition.

The city settled its federal court suit last year for $150,000.

Lake deputy is charged with sexual battery

Staff Report

A Lake County sheriff's deputy was arrested Wednesday after a woman complained that the officer sexually assaulted her in a car on New Year's day.

The woman told investigators that she and her boyfriend had been out the night before celebrating New Year's Eve at a bar in Orlando. At some point, she passed out from drinking too much. She said she awoke later in the passenger seat of a car to find Donnelly standing beside the vehicle.

According to a press release from the Sheriff's Office, the deputy placed the woman's boyfriend in the back of his patrol car. When the woman asked Donnelly not to take her boyfriend to jail, the deputy reportedly began groping her and making inappropriate comments. She told detectives she was scared and felt she had no choice but to cooperate, and said Donnelly was adamant that she not tell anyone because he was going to let her boyfriend go.

Donnelly then called for relatives to come and pick up both the victim and her boyfriend.

The woman reportedly told the relative what happened..

Sheriff's officials say a sexual assault examination performed on the victim supported her claim. Investigators also reviewed the dash camera video from the patrol car and found that the camera was turned off during the encounter for approximately 22 minutes.

Donnelly's patrol car was processed for evidence and swabs were sent to the Florida Department of Law Enforcement's lab for analysis. The analysis showed that the victim's DNA was found on the steering wheel, the gear shifter knob and the flashlight in Donnelly's patrol car, officials said.

Donnelly was booked into jail and was charged with sexual battery. He was being held on a $10,000 bond.

With no Medicaid expansion, businesses could face fines

KELLI KENNEDY
Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE — The decision by state lawmakers not to expand Medicaid could cost Florida businesses as much as $253 million a year in tax penalties, according to a new report released Wednesday.

Companies with 50 or more employees face Internal Revenue Service penalties if workers get subsidized health insurance through the new exchange under the Affordable Care Act. But they don't face a tax penalty if workers get subsidized coverage through Medicaid.

A report by Jackson Hewitt Tax Service Inc. estimates 214,000 Floridians between the ages of 18 and 64 are uninsured, working full-time and earn between the poverty line and 138 percent of poverty. Of those, about 84,000 work full-time for large companies offering health coverage, but workers likely can't afford it and could seek coverage and get tax credits in the exchange.

That could cost Florida businesses between $169 million and $253 million a year, assuming a $2,000 to $3,000 penalty for each employee who gets a subsidy in the exchange, according to the report.

If Florida lawmakers agreed to expand Medicaid, employers would not face a tax penalty because the workers would qualify for Medicaid. Its expansion would cover low-income people making up to 138 percent of the federal poverty level, about $15,860 for an individual.

"As some states are still evaluating their participation, it is critical that any projections of the 'net' costs of Medicaid expansions also reflect the very real costs of the shared responsibility penalties to employers in any particular state," said Brian Haile, senior vice president, Jackson Hewitt Tax Service Inc.

Democrats and health advocates have been trying to build momentum on Medicaid expansion, but it may be a stalled issue even before the 2014 Legislative session begins in a few months. Sen. Rene Garcia, R-Hialeah, filed a Medicaid expansion bill Tuesday similar to a bill that passed the state Senate last year, but died in the House.

"As one of the nation's largest economies, it would be irresponsible to leave money that can benefit thousands of Floridians on the table," said Garcia.

said. "So, some of them we're anticipating will have to be changed."

The city does have some working valves "on the shelf -- one of each size, at least," Irby said, adding city workers could change some of the valves "in-house."

The exact cost for replacing the valves that cannot be fixed will not be available until the initial work by Utility Service Company is complete.

An aging, 10-inch water main broke last October along Kentucky Avenue and workers could not find working valves along the line to shut off the flow, resulting in the entire distribution system being shut down at the water plant.

Irby said the city is under a rate study for all utilities.

"The city is in a position to where it is going to have to do something with both (it's) water and waste water utility," Irby said. "The city cannot do anything until this rate study is complete, because it anticipates borrowing up to five million dollars to replace or fix the aging infrastructure."

Higher rates are needed for another reason, the city manager said."The utilities are not standing on their own as to revenues and expenses," Irby said.

happened that day" and that the couple's child is so young she knows only that "Daddy's gone."

Grimaldi said that he is exploring options for a civil lawsuit and that his firm's priority is to help Oulson through her grief and Reeves' criminal trial.

According to a sheriff's office report, Reeves became upset when Oulson was texting and spoke to Oulson during the previews. Officials said Reeves got up and informed management. When Reeves returned to his seat, "additional words were exchanged" and Oulson threw a bag of popcorn at Reeves, the report said.

Reeves told investigators that Oulson struck him in the face with an unknown object, and that's when he removed a gun from his pants pocket. The report said that he fired the gun, striking Oulson once in the chest, and that Reeves "was in fear of being attacked."

Hamilton and his wife were in Theater 10 at the Cobb Grove 16 Theatre in Wesley Chapel, sitting through previews and waiting for the movie "Lone Survivor" to start, when the shot rang out.

Reeves' attorneys said during an initial court appearance that he "had every right to defend himself" and that he should be released on bail due to his deep ties to the community and his years as a Tampa police officer.

Grimaldi said that during next week's bail hearing for Reeves, he will object to his release.

"Everyone with a cellphone is at risk," Grimaldi said.

Gearhart said Wednesday. "But now comes the hard part of forgiving all the people that made all these allegations over the past eight years."

Although he resigned in the midst of the FDLE investigation, Gearhart said this was for the sake of his wife and not because he had done anything wrong.

"I knew certain people just wanted me out, but when all this started interfering with my wife's health, I said, 'This job is not worth that, no way,'" Gearhart said. "She suffers from high blood pressure and, when her medication had to be doubled, I knew I had to resign and I don't regret it."

However, Gearhart said the citizens will regret not having a watchdog like him looking out for their interests.

"The citizens of Groveland do not want to support their council but, now, they are going to see an increase in taxes and a lot of other things, when all I was trying to do was to keep a decent budget, get people to do their jobs and get people to see that if you quit wasting money, you can have decent paying jobs while keeping a low tax rate for our citizens," he said.

"...But it's over with and I wish the best for the city and the people working for the city of Groveland that do a good job. There are a lot of hard workers on staff that really care about the city and I respect them."

FDLE investigating agent Daniel Wallace did say he had reason to believe Gearhart provided a false statement during questioning about an allegation filed by Groveland police Sgt. George "Scott" Penvose, claiming he was approached by Gearhart and then Vice-Mayor Tim Loucks in a Publix parking lot. The officer said he was asked at least one question about the Groveland police dispatch center during a time it was being considered for outsourcing by the council, which would be a violation of Florida's Government in the Sunshine law.

"During the course of this investigation, it was determined Mayor Gearhart provided a false statement not in an official proceeding," Simpson said. "Due to Mayor Gearhart's false statement, there is probable cause to believe Florida Statute 837.012(1) was violated."

However, the State Attorney's Office will not file charges, Simpson's memo said.

"The allegation, even if true, is insufficient to support a charge of perjury in a non-official proceeding," Simpson said.

City Attorney Anita Geraci-Carver said the controversy is now over.

"Based on my conversations with FDLE Agent (Daniel) Wallace and ASA (Assistant State Attorney Mark) Simpson, this matter is concluded," she said.

Obama speech: Sexual assault is an affront to humanity

NEDRA PICKLER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama shone a light Wednesday on a college sexual assault epidemic that is often shrouded in secrecy, with victims fearing stigma, police poorly trained to investigate and universities reluctant to disclose the violence.

A White House report highlights a stunning prevalence of rape on college campuses, with 1 in 5 female students assaulted while only 1 in 8 student victims report it.

"No one is more at risk of being raped or sexually assaulted than women at our nation's colleges and universities," said the report by the White House Council on Women and Girls.

Nearly 22 million American women and 1.6 million men have been raped in their lifetimes, according to the report. It chronicled the devastating effects, including depression, substance abuse and a wide range of physical ailments such as chronic pain and diabetes.

The report said campus sexual assaults are fueled by drinking and drug use that can incapacitate victims, often at student parties at the hands of someone they know.

Perpetrators often are serial offenders. One study cited by the report found that 7 percent of college men admitted to attempting rape, and 63 percent of those men admitted to multiple offenses, averaging six rapes each.

Obama, who has overseen a military that has grappled with its own crisis of sexual assaults, spoke out against the crime as "an affront on our basic decency and humanity." He then signed a memorandum creating a task force to respond to campus rapes.

Obama said he was speaking out as president and a father of two daughters, and that men must express outrage to stop the crime.

"We need to encourage young people, men and women, to realize that sexual assault is simply unacceptable," Obama said. "And they're going to have to summon the bravery to stand up and say so, especially when the social pressure to keep quiet or to go along can be very intense."

Obama gave the task force 90 days to come up with recommendations to prevent and respond to the crime, increase awareness of each school's track record and enhance coordination among agencies.

Telescope spies water plumes on dwarf planet

ALICIA CHANG
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES — The largest object in the asteroid belt just got more attractive: Scientists have confirmed signs of water on the dwarf planet Ceres, one of the few bodies in the solar system to hold that distinction.

Peering through the Herschel Space Observatory, a team led by the European Space Agency detected water plumes spewing from two regions on Ceres.

The observations, published in an issue of Nature, come as NASA's Dawn spacecraft is set to arrive at the Texas-sized planet next year.

It's long been suspected that Ceres is water-rich, but previous detections have been inconclusive. This is the first definitive evidence of water on Ceres and confirms that it has an icy surface, said lead author Michael Kuppers of the European Space Agency.

"It makes Ceres a more exciting target" for exploration, he said.

The latest finding puts Ceres in a special class of solar system objects with active plumes of water, a key ingredient for life. The company includes Jupiter's moon Europa — where an underground ocean is believed to exist — and the Saturn moon Enceladus, where jets have been seen venting from the surface.

Syria peace talks focus on Assad

LORI HINNANT and MATTHEW LEE
Associated Press

MONTREUX, Switzerland — Furiously divided from the start, representatives of Syrian President Bashar Assad and the rebellion against him threatened Wednesday to collapse a peace conference intended to lead them out of civil war.

Assad's future in the country devastated by three years of bloodshed was at the heart of the sparring, which took place against a pristine Alpine backdrop as Syrian forces and rebel fighters clashed across a wide area from Aleppo and Idlib in the north to Daraa in the south.

U.S. and U.N. officials said merely getting the two sides in the same room was something of a victory, but U.N. chief Ban Ki-moon's claim that the discussions were "harmonious and constructive" was at odds with the testy exchange when he tried to get the podium from Syrian Foreign Minister Walid Moallem.

"You live in New York. I live in Syria," Moallem angrily told Ban. "I have the right to give the Syrian version here in this forum. After three years of suffering, this is my right."

With little common ground, the two sides were to meet separately Thursday with a U.N. negotiator, Lakhdar Brahimi, who said he still did not know if they were ready to sit at the same table when talks begin in earnest Friday. But, Brahimi said, both sides had shown some willingness to bend on local cease-fires and delivery of humanitarian aid, and Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov said they were also working on possible terms for a prisoner exchange.

SALVATORE DI NOLFI / AP

A member of movement Oxford Committee for Famine Relief, "Oxfam," puts a white rose on symbolic gravestones, on the opening day of the Geneva II peace talks on Syria, in Montreux, Switzerland, on Wednesday.

The Western-backed opposition said Assad's departure was their starting point, echoing the position laid out by U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry.

"The resolution cannot be about one man's — or one family's — insistence on clinging to power," Kerry said.

The response from the government delegation was firm and blunt.

"There will be no transfer of power, and President Bashar Assad is staying," Syrian Information Minister Omran al-Zoubi told reporters.

The two sides seemed impossibly far apart in opening statements in the Swiss city of Montreux, famed for its stunning mountain views and mellow jazz festival. The waterfront road was barricaded by roadblocks and hundreds of security forces, with boats patrolling the shores of Lake Geneva day and night.

The small-town venue was chosen in haste when a watchmakers' convention left Geneva hotels booked. That made for some potentially awkward encounters — some of the opposition were staying in the same hotel as the Syrian government delegates, as were the Americans.

Complicating matters, Assad's delegates and the Western-backed opposition Syrian National Coalition both claimed to speak for the Syrian people. But the coalition has little sway with rebel brigades, who largely oppose talks with the government. And the government, Kerry said, has no legitimacy or loyalty among people devastated by war.

Authorities consider Sochi threats a hoax

ANGELA CHARLTON and PABLO GORONDI
Associated Press

BUDAPEST, Hungary — Threats to a string of European Olympic offices are reviving a question that has haunted preparations for the Winter Games next month: Is it safe to go to Sochi?

European Olympic authorities, whose countries have faced terrorist threats and attacks in the past, largely shrugged off the new menacing messages as a hoax, a marginal phenomenon that security experts say is common ahead of big events.

Some members of the U.S. Congress aren't so sure. They say Russia isn't doing enough to assure that athletes will be protected at the Feb. 7-23 games, happening not far from an Islamic insurgency that Russia's huge security apparatus has struggled for two decades to quell.

Russia may run greater risks in towns outside the tightly controlled Olympic zone. Suicide bombs last month a few hundred kilometers (miles) away have increased concerns, and an Islamic warlord has urged his followers to attack the Sochi Olympics, Russian President Vladimir Putin's pet project.

The threats reported Wednesday appeared to be more anodyne.

They were first revealed by Hungarian sports officials, who announced they had received an email in Russian and English threatening Hungarian athletes with terrorist attacks.

The International Olympic Committee insisted it takes credible threats seriously, but "in this case it seems like the email sent to the Hungarian Olympic Committee contains no threat and appears to be a random message from a member of the public."

International Olympic Committee President Thomas Bach said he remains confident in Russia's Olympic organizers.

Ukraine: 2 killed in clashes with police

MARIA DANILOVA and YURAS KARMANAU
Associated Press

KIEV, Ukraine — Two people were shot to death early Wednesday in anti-government protests in Ukraine, the first fatalities in the increasingly heated clashes with police in the streets of the Ukrainian capital, raising concerns that the movement is spiraling into a more dangerous phase of violence.

Medics at the site said a third man died after he fell from a high point near a sports arena at the site of clashes, but Natalia Vishnevska, spokeswoman for the city health department, said that man survived the fall and was being treated in the hospital.

The protesters' deaths fueled fears that daily protests aimed at bringing down the government over its decision to shun the European Union for closer ties to Moscow and over human rights violations could turn even more violent.

Prosecutors said the two men were shot with live ammunition, and have opened a criminal investigation to determine who was responsible.

SERGEI GRITS / AP

Prime Minister Mykola Azarov said the police did not have live ammunition and charged that opposition leaders should be held responsible for the deaths.

One of the victims has been identified by opposition leaders and doctors treating protesters as Sergei Nigoyan, a 20-year-old ethnic Armenian who came from the eastern city of Dnipropetrovsk in early December to join the protests on Kiev's Independence Square, known as the Maidan. A video shows Nigoyan reciting poetry by the famed Ukrainian poet Taras Shevchenko, standing in the protest camp and clenching his fist in a sign of victory, as a Ukrainian yellow-and-blue flag flaps in the wind.

Respected Ukrainian journalist Kristina Berdinskikh, who has been profiling protesters for several weeks, interviewed Nigoyan in early January.

"I saw on TV what is happening on the Maidan, I didn't sleep at night, I was following the news," Nagoyan told Berdinshkikh, according to a transcript she posted online. "Then I decided to come. This is also my future."

The mass protests erupted after Yanukovych spurned a pact with the European Union in favor of close ties with Russia, which offered him a $15 billion bailout. They swelled to hundreds of thousands after a small peaceful rally was violently broken up by police. Seeing the government ignore their demands and opposition leaders unable to present a coherent plan or even select a single leader, radical protesters have clashed with riot police in Kiev since Sunday.

Cripps steps down at Sumter chamber

Staff Report

Sumter County Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Andy Cripps is headed to Smithfield, Va., to run a chamber there.

He will start Jan. 28 as president and CEO of the Isle of Wight-Smithfield-Windsor Chamber of Commerce, the Tidewater News in Franklin, Va., is reporting.

Cripps has been executive director of the Sumter chamber since February 2011. Before that, he was co-owner of his own entertainment company in Ormond Beach and New Jersey for nearly four years, executive director for the Ormond Beach Chamber of Commerce for a year, and executive director for the Wildwood, N.J., chamber for seven years.

During his tenure in Sumter, "He led the chamber to a record membership level, and helped it rebound from the loss of all government funding by developing new events and publications," the Daily Press of Newport News is reporting.

MERRITT

Samantha Merritt took over as interim executive director for the Sumter County Chamber of Commerce on Dec. 12. She said it will be decided after a year if it will be a permanent placement.

Cripps left the chamber on Dec. 11.

Merritt was previously the chamber's membership representative.

After nearly 30 years at the helm of the Isle of Wight-Smithfield-Windsor chamber, President and CEO Constance Rhodes previously announced plans to retire on Jan. 15. She was named Chamber Executive of the Year in 2009 by the Virginia Association of Chamber of Commerce Executives.

Cripps has a master's of arts degree in public relations from Rowan University in Glassboro, N.J.

European businesses rushing to find Iranian bonanza

A line of Peugeot 206s are on the production line at the Iranian state-run Iran Khodro automobile manufacturing plant near Tehran, Iran.

BRUSSELS — France is sending business executives by the planeload to Iran. German and Dutch entrepreneurs are taking courses on how to close a deal in Tehran, and car makers are drawing up plans for investment.

Europe's business community is abuzz with preparations to rush back into Iran, an economic powerhouse in the Middle East, as some sanctions are suspended. And the interest is welcome — Iran is desperate to revive its economy after years of international isolation.

Under a deal with world powers, Tehran has agreed to curb its nuclear program in exchange for some sanctions relief and the unfreezing of about $4.2 billion in overseas assets. Iran and world powers now have six months to conclude a permanent deal.

As always, in business, it's about getting in first.

Iranian President Hassan Rouhani and his Foreign Minister Javad Zarif will meet with the world's business elite this week at the World Economic Forum in Switzerland's Davos ski resort, and are likely to discuss trade opportunities.

More hand-shaking will take place soon thereafter in Tehran, when France's business lobby group flies in executives representing about 100 firms for "exploratory" talks to take advantage of the sanctions' suspension, an official with the organization said.

Their competitors are doing the same, so firms from the oil and gas sector, carmakers and other manufacturing companies want to move quickly, added the official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity because the subject remains sensitive within governments.

"Everyone is in the same state of mind," she said.

For businesses, getting into Iran is a chance not to be missed. The country boasts a well-educated population of about 75 million and some of the world's largest oil and gas reserves, much of which is still unexplored due to decades of sanctions since the 1979 Islamic Revolution.

European countries have historically strong trade ties with Iran — more so than the U.S., which has had tougher sanctions in place for longer. European sanctions only began in limited form in 2007.

The recent, more punitive measures had caused Iran's currency to tumble while unemployment soared and ballooning inflation ate up the people's purchasing power. But this week, some sanctions were lifted on the export of petrochemical products, shipping, insurance and the trade of precious metals.

The possibilities for growth are obvious judging by how much trade has fallen.

Imports to the 28-nation EU, Iran's biggest trading partner, plunged from $22 billion in 2011 to $7.6 billion in 2012 and a mere $534 million in the first half of 2013.

S&P 500 ekes out another small gain

STEVE ROTHWELL

NEW YORK — The Standard & Poor's 500 index eked out its second small gain of the week Wednesday as investors pored over the latest earnings reports.

Norfolk Southern climbed after the railroad company said its fourth-quarter profit rose 24 percent, better than Wall Street analysts had forecast. TE Connectivity, an electronics company, was the biggest gainer in the S&P 500 after its earnings beat analysts' expectations and the company posted a strong earnings outlook for the second quarter.

But there were also some high-profile disappointments.

IBM fell after the computing company reported lower-than-expected revenue in the period. AMD slumped after the chipmakers' first-quarter revenue outlook rattled investors.

Companies are still increasing their earnings and are forecast to log record quarterly profits for the period, but much of the improvement in recent years has come from cutting costs. As the economy strengthens, investors are increasingly looking for evidence that companies can increase revenue.

"There's not a lot of cost left for companies to squeeze out," said Andy Zimmerman, chief investment strategist at DT Investment Partners, an investment advisor.

The S&P 500 index rose 1.06 point, or 0.1 percent, to 1,844.86. The index traded within a range of just six points on Wednesday. After a small gain on Tuesday, the index is six points, or 0.3 percent, higher for the week.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 41.10 points, or 0.3 percent, to 16,373.34. Most of the Dow's losses came from IBM's slump. The computer service company's stock fell $6.18, or 3.3 percent, to $182.25.

In other trading, the Nasdaq composite climbed 17.24 points, or 0.4 percent, to 4,243.

Among the day's winners, TE Connectivity jumped $3.70 or 6.6 percent, to $60 after its earnings report. Norfolk Southern climbed $4.23, or 4.8 percent, to $92.94 after the rail company said its fourth-quarter profit rose 24 percent.

Despite the lackluster start to the year, most investors see no cause to call an end to the stock market's rally just yet. The S&P 500 is down 0.2 percent in 2014 after a gain of almost 30 percent last year.

"You had a massive run last year," said Russ Koesterich, chief investment strategist at BlackRock. "And it's not unreasonable that the market digests those gains."

So far, the stock market has failed to get a lift from the company earnings reports that have come out.

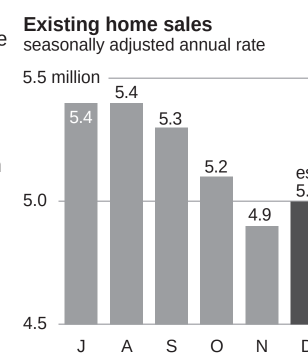
The Market In Review

Today

Eye on home sales

Economists anticipate the pace of U.S. home sales edged higher in December.

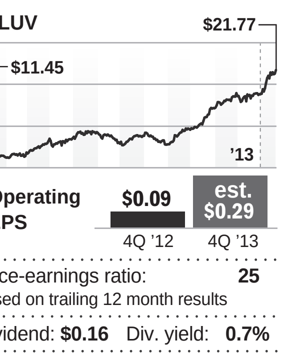
Sales of previously occupied homes fell from September through November, held back by rising home prices and higher mortgage rates. The National Association of Realtors reports its latest home sales data today.



Bookings update?

Southwest Airlines reports its fourth-quarter financial results today.

The air carrier is expected to report that its earnings and revenue improved from a year ago. Southwest has benefited from longer average trips and an increase in higher-priced fares. Investors will want to hear how bookings are shaping up for the spring, as strong demand tends to keep average fares steady or rising.



Brewing up growth

Starbucks has kept driving sales despite the slow-growth economy.

The coffee chain, due to report fiscal first-quarter earnings today, has used its loyalty program to get customers to visit more often and spend more on revamped sandwiches and other food. The strategy helped drive global sales growth for the July-September quarter at cafes open at least a year. Did the trend extend into the last three months of 2013?

Net neutrality must stay a core principle

The success of the Internet is largely due to the fact that, since its inception, users have been able to pick and choose from all the material on it, regardless of the carrier used to access it.

This model has led to one of the greatest technological revolutions of all time. It is now in jeopardy because of a U.S. appeals court ruling last week that threw out the Federal Communications Commission's 2010 rules requiring broadband providers to treat all Internet traffic equally — the concept known as net neutrality.

The ruling is reasonable under current law, but the FCC has the power to change its regulations and make net neutrality rules legal. It needs to act — and users need to rise up in large numbers to keep Congress on their side.

The problem is that current rules don't classify these providers as common carriers, the way telephone service providers are viewed. The Supreme Court has signaled that the FCC could reclassify broadband providers to apply common carrier regulations on them, including net neutrality. That is what needs to happen.

Internet service providers such as AT&T and Verizon want the right to profit from the use of their services by individual websites, much like the current pay TV system operates.

They would like sites to pay a premium for high-speed streaming while others have access only to slower service. This would limit the accessibility of small businesses and startups, which consequently limit consumers' choices.

An open Internet is a platform for innovation that is one of our most valuable technological resources. Consumers, not broadband providers acting as gatekeepers, should be able to decide which entrepreneurs succeed.

European nations and almost every other developed country in the world already regulate broadband providers as common carriers required to serve all customers equally. It seems so obviously right, but Congress, susceptible to lobbyists, may need persuading, if the FCC doesn't act. That's where Internet users come in.

They have raised their voices before. Two years ago SOPA, the Stop Online Piracy Act, sparked the largest online protest in history because the bill backed by the entertainment industry essentially would have instituted censorship. The protest forced Congress to reject it.

Everyone, from users to small businesses to valley behemoths, benefits from equal, open access to online material.

National security priority? Education

Martin Schram

TRIBUNE MEDIA SERVICES

They are burning the midnight kilowatts in the West Wing. And they'll probably be cutting and pasting until President Obama climbs into his limo next Tuesday night and drives 16 blocks to the gleaming-white, floodlit Capitol.

The president's policy and message massagers are frantically making sure all the president's must-keep themes are still in his 2014 State of the Union text. We can only hope they haven't overlooked — yet again! — one bold national security priority that could become the capstone of Barack Obama's presidential legacy.

Truth is, they've always understood the urgency. They even had the benefit of hearing an unscripted question that said it all, back in 2010, at a campaign town meeting at George Washington University.

"Mr. President, you have pointed out that U.S. students have fallen from the top 20 nations in math and science and test scores — and jobs and contracts are going overseas," said Francesca Yabraian, an Agriculture Department employee. "You've called education a national priority. But do you think it is time to label education funding a national security priority?"

Exactly! Today, education must be declared a national security priority.

Obama instantly got it and ran with it. "I think it's a national security priority," he said. "Look, there has never been a nation on earth that lost its economic edge and maintained its military edge. And the reason we have the most effective military on earth, in the history of the world, is first and foremost because we have unbelievable men and women in uniform who make sacrifices on our behalf every single day.

"But the second reason is that we've had the biggest economy in the world that can support this incredible armed forces that we have. And if we start falling behind economically, we will start falling behind from a national security perspective — there's no doubt about it. And the single most important determinant of how we do economically is going to be the skills of our work force. And you're exactly right.

"We used to be at the top of the heap when it came to math and science education; we are now 21st and 25th respectively in science and math. ... China is doubling, tripling, quadrupling the number of college graduates it is generating. ... And yet, here we are, losing that first-place position."

President Barack Obama

"We used to be at the top of the heap when it came to math and science education; we are now 21st and 25th, respectively, in science and math. ... Other countries are making huge investments. China is doubling, tripling, quadrupling the number of college graduates it is generating. ... And yet, here we are, losing that first-place position. That is unacceptable."

Obama and Education Secretary Arne Duncan have undertaken a number of programs aimed at reversing America's slide in education results. Still, government alone cannot fix what is wrong — but we can.

Four years ago, Obama told educators in a White House speech what South Korea's president had told him was his biggest education problem. "He told me his biggest challenge in education wasn't budget holes, it wasn't crumbling schools — it was that the parents were too demanding. He's had to import thousands of foreign teachers because parents insisted on English language training in elementary school. The mayor of Shanghai, China ... told me ... teaching is revered (there) and the pay scales are comparable to professions like doctors."

Duncan noted in a recent speech that while many U.S. teachers come from the bottom third of college graduates, South Korean teachers are selected from the top 5 percent of high school students; they get six months of training after being hired, are well paid and get bonuses.

A generation ago, Americans were No. 1 in the world in percentages of college graduates. Now America is 12th — South Korea is first. "Both South Korean and U.S. citizens believe that the caliber of teacher matters tremendously," Duncan said. "... The difference is: they act on their belief. We don't. We talk the talk, and they walk the walk."

We, the people, will never be able to form a more perfect union until we rethink our cultural and fiscal education priorities. In this looming national security crisis, our politicians are not our greatest problem — we are.

It might be unstately to end a State of the Union Address with a question, but Obama would do well to conclude Tuesday's speech by repeating what Duncan bluntly asked:

"I want to pose one simple question to you: Does a child in South Korea deserve a better education than your child? If your answer is no — that no child in America deserves any less than a world-class education — then your work is cut out for you."

Orlando point guard Jameer Nelson (14) drives past Atlanta forward DeMarre Carroll (5) during the first half of Wednesday's game in Orlando.

Magic erase big deficit but lose to Hawks

KYLE HIGHTOWER
Associated Press

ORLANDO — Paul Millsap had 24 points, Jeff Teague added 23 and the Atlanta Hawks hung on to beat the Orlando Magic 112-109 Wednesday night.

Atlanta opened a 19-point lead in the third quarter, but lost it the fourth before coming back to hit six free throws in the final 40 seconds for the win.

Seven players finished in double-figures for Atlanta, which has won two straight and has a day off before hosting San Antonio on Friday.

Victor Oladipo led Orlando with 24 points. Tobias Harris had 19 points and 12 rebounds, and Jameer Nelson finished with 17 points.

The Magic have lost 12 of their last 13, and fell to 1-14 this season without starting center Nik Vucevic, who continues to recover from a concussion.

The Hawks entered the game just 6-13 on the road, an issue that coach Mike Budenholzer said could be solved by showing more attention to detail and mental toughness.

They would need those attributes late against the Magic.

The Magic fell behind by as many as 11 in the first half, before trimming the Hawks' lead down to 60-59 in the opening minutes of the third quarter.

Atlanta responded by hitting nine of its first 16 shots in the quarter to ignite a 22-4 run that opened up a 19-point lead at 82-63.

Local teams set for crucial games

Lake County will be a hot spot for sports fans over the next couple of days.

At least five games — three girls regional soccer matches and two key boys basketball games — likely will keep fans engrossed and occupied as the week comes to an end.

In girls soccer, Leesburg will take a 20-1-1 record into Thursday's Class 3A-Region 2 quarterfinal clash with Daytona Beach Seabreeze at H.O. Dabney Stadium in Leesburg. The Yellow Jackets won the Class 3A-5 title last week with a 2-0 win against Eustis, which forced the Panthers to hit the road for the regional quarterfinal match against Palm Coast Matanzas.

Umatilla is the area's third girls soccer team to advance to regionals, surprising many with a second-place finish in the Class 2A-District 6 tournament, falling to Ocala Trinity Catholic in the district title match. The Bulldogs will play at Alachua Santa Fe.

Leesburg has been dominant all season, outscoring its opposition 118-10. Chelsea Mudd has paced the offense with 40 goals, followed by Morgan Shafar with 27 scores. Jasmine Kasch also has reach double figures in scoring with 13 goals.

Mudd also tops the Yellow Jackets with 21 assists. Kasch has 16 and Shafar chipped with 12.

Defensively, goalkeeper Sarah McKinney has stopped 117 shots on goal.

Daytona Beach Seabreeze, runners up in the Class 3A-District 6 tournament, sports a 12-3-6 mark heading into today's game.

Eustis' matchup with Matanzas will pit the Panthers against a red-hot team. Matanzas enters today's match with a 21-1-2 record and the Pirates have not lost since they dropped a 1-0 decision against Flagler Palm Coast on Nov. 15. The only other blemishes on the Pirates' slate is a scoreless tie against Seabreeze on Dec. 16 and a 4-4 deadlock on Jan. 4 against Palm Coast.

Likewise, Umatilla will have its hands full with Santa Fe, which finished the season with a 21-1 mark. Santa Fe's only loss this season was a 4-2

Roger Federer celebrates after defeating Andy Murray during their quarterfinal match on Wednesday at the Australian Open in Melbourne, Australia.

Federer sends off Murray, next up Nadal in semifinals

JOHN PYE
Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — For a full two sets and nine games, Roger Federer was the picture of poise, picking up half-volleys with vintage panache and placing winners past Andy Murray.

Then, in the bounce of a ball — or two bounces of the ball, depending on opinion — the 17-time major winner was transformed back into the vulnerable, 2013-edition Federer.

After breaking Murray to get a chance to serve for the match on Wednesday and a spot in the Australian Open semifinals for an 11th consecutive year, Federer dropped serve.

He recovered and jumped to a 5-2 lead in the tiebreaker, but then Murray rallied and won six of the last seven points to prolong the quarterfinal.

After wasting a handful of break-point chances in Murray's next service game, which lasted almost 19 minutes, Federer finally wore down the Wimbledon champion 6-3, 6-4, 6-7 (6), 6-3 to set up a semifinal showdown with top-ranked Rafael Nadal.

Denver quarterback Peyton Manning calls an audible during a game against Oakland. The sound of Manning barking "Omaha! Omaha!" is picked up by a tiny microphone in an offensive lineman's pads so it can be broadcast to the world.

How we get to hear 'Omaha' — Sound key for today's NFL games

RACHEL COHEN
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The sound of Peyton Manning barking "Omaha! Omaha!" is picked up by a tiny microphone in an offensive lineman's pads so it can be broadcast to the world.

In an age of enormous high-definition televisions and games streamed to tablets and smartphones, audio seems almost quaint. Yet TV executives have made it a major focus in recent years, for the exact reason so many people are fascinated by the Broncos quarterback's audibles.

"It makes you feel like you're right there," said John Entz, Fox Sports' executive vice president for production. "That's what fans crave these days."

NFL Films pioneered the use of in-game audio, and the league had long clipped a microphone to the umpire's cap to capture the snap count. Before the 2010 season, though, the ump's position on most plays shifted from the middle of the defense to well behind the offense for safety reasons.

After much experimentation during exhibition games, NFL officials decided to put a microphone in the back of the pads of two players for each team: either the first- and second-string centers or both starting guards.

NFL Films engineers at the game turn on one mic when the offense breaks the huddle, then shut it off after the ball is snapped.

The audio is transmitted to the TV truck, where the networks mix it with crowd noise.

Technology has gradually improved over the years to make the calls sharper — and not only in microphones. Just as the spread of HD sets left fans entranced by the crisp pictures, more and more viewers enjoy state-of-the-art surround sound in their living rooms.

Meanwhile, TV executives have embraced the value of audio in hooking the audience, seeking more and better ways to use it. Video used to be the "fair-haired child," said CBS Sports executive vice president Ken Aagaard.

Not anymore.

"It's gotten to the point now that the audio experience on an NFL game, and even a college football game, is just as important as the video," said Aagaard, who oversees operations, engineering and production services.

Sitting in the truck Sunday in Denver as CBS broadcast the AFC championship game, Aagaard kept getting text messages and emails that "this audio is as good as they've ever heard." Still, Aagaard, who has heard plenty of "Omahas" from Manning over the years, isn't quite sure why the word became a social media sensation only the last couple of weeks.

Manning has been a snap count virtuoso dating to his Indianapolis days, his calls unusually loud, clear and long. Aagaard credited producer Lance Barrow and announcers Jim Nantz and Phil Simms for the silence in the booth during Manning's calls Sunday, letting the "Omahas" speak for themselves. Asked last week what the word meant, Manning gave a playful answer, not really revealing whether it referred to a pass, a run or a snap count.

Entz said Fox would "have some fun" with Manning's audibles in pregame features on Super Bowl Sunday, then talk about it during the game as is relevant. The opposing quarterback, Seattle's Russell Wilson, is also vociferous, said Fox's audio mixer, Fred Aldous. But Wilson's calls are shorter and less complex, possibly because he's much less experienced than Manning.

The QB's voice isn't the only reason the snap count comes across fuzzy or crisp. Stadium and weather conditions and crowd noise can interfere. On a cool night in an outdoor stadium, the sound travels better, said Howard Katz, the NFL's senior vice president of broadcasting and media operations.

Aldous' favorite venue is Green Bay's Lambeau Field, and not just because the air is usually chilly. All those bulky coats worn by shivering fans absorb sound, which makes his job easier. He wants each type of audio to be distinct, so he can then weave them together to create the perfect mix. In a dome, noises bounce off the hard surfaces and get muddled together.

In other words, Aldous is hoping for a cold Super Bowl when Fox televises the game in the elements in New Jersey.

As desirable as intelligible snaps counts are, Aldous tries to ensure they don't drown out everything else. The right amount of crowd noise is also crucial.

"We really don't want to take a viewer out of the stadium and put them right next to Peyton Manning — we want to make sure they stay in the stadium and keep the flavor in there," he said.

Each mixer for CBS has a different style, Aagaard said, though he's pushing for more uniformity. He can close his eyes while watching a broadcast and pick out who is working that game.

NFL Films also records plenty of additional audio during games, through microphones on other players and on the sidelines, which is repackaged for various shows that air later. The networks are always hoping for more sound, especially during games. Teams are always worried about giving away secrets.

know, the match was great until that point," Federer said.

Murray made his resurgence after disputing a point in the ninth game of the third set, when he thought the ball had bounced twice before Federer hit it. Replays shown in Rod Laver Arena were inconclusive. Federer thought was good, and left the call to the umpire.

"I'm proud of the way I fought," said Murray, who had back surgery in September. "I've come a long way in four months."

Nadal lost the first set and faced set points in the third, getting a reprieve when first-time quarterfinalist Grigor Dimitrov pushed a forehand just wide in a tiebreaker. Despite a painful blister on the palm of his left hand that hampered his serve, Nadal advanced 3-6, 7-6 (3), 7-6 (7), 6-2 against the 22-year-old Bulgarian.

"You lose a little bit the coordination. Yeah, that's a big deal," Nadal said of his grip. "I served slower. I served bad (but) I was able to win a match against a very difficult opponent, so that has much more value than when everything is great.

"And because of these victories, sometimes happens that next day you are able to play much better — and these victories are more important than the days that you are playing great."

And that's how the greatest of modern day champions reconcile it. On a day when two-time defending Australian Open champion Victoria Azarenka lost 6-1, 5-7, 6-0 to No. 5 Agnieszka Radwanska and following other stars out of the tournament, Nadal and Federer won back-to-back matches on center court to set up their 33rd showdown.

Stan Wawrinka ended Novak Djokovic's bid for a fourth straight Australian Open title with an upset win in the quarterfinals and will face 2010 Wimbledon finalist Tomas Berdych in the semifinals on Thursday. Neither has won a Grand Slam title, but one is guaranteed to get a chance in Australia.

That match will be preceded by the women's semifinals. Li Na, the 2011 French Open champion and a two-time Australian Open finalist, is the only major winner left the draw. She'll take on 19-year-old Canadian Eugenie Bouchard. Radwanska will face No. 20 Dominika Cibulkova, who convincingly beat No. 11 Simona Halep.

Nadal and Federer aren't back in action until Friday. It gives Nadal time for his blisters to heal, and Federer time to recover from his tight win over Murray, who came into the Australian Open after spending most of the last three months recovering from a minor back operation.

Nadal, who missed the 2013 Australian Open because of injury and had to watch as Murray beat Federer in the semifinals, came back strong last year. After missing seven months because of injury and illness, he won 10 titles — including majors at the French and U.S. Opens — and returned to the No. 1 ranking.

Meanwhile, Federer had his worst year in 11, failing to make any of the Grand Slam finals and dropping to No. 6 in the rankings as he struggled with injuries and came to terms with a new, bigger racket.

After recruiting six-time major winner Stefan Edberg as a coach, and adjusting to the new racket, he's finally feeling capable of winning a major again.

He believes the win over Murray demonstrated that.

"I definitely think that's what I used to do so well, the transition game from defense to offense," Federer said. "I definitely sensed that today. I am back."

defeat on Dec. 20 against Gainesville.

All regional quarterfinal contests begin at 7 p.m.

In boys basketball, Leesburg plays at Eustis at 7 p.m. today in a continuation of a long-standing rivalry.

The Yellow Jackets go into the game on an emotional high after beating Ocala Vanguard 76-75 in overtime on Tuesday. Leesburg trailed by 21 points late in the third quarter before Troy Willis sparked the comeback.

Willis finished with 31 points and 11 rebounds in the victory. Jabari Dunham added 22 for the Yellow Jackets, which improved 12-10 after a sluggish start to the season.

Eustis also is playing well and looking to find its stride as the district tournament nears. The Panthers beat Mount Dora 64-54 on Tuesday to improve to 14-6 overall and 7-0 in Class 5A-District 13..

The win ensured that Eustis would have the top seed in the district tournament.

Kiron Wiliams scored 29 points in the win, followed by Jaylon Graham with 15 points and Coy Patterson with 13.

DeMoss Weaver had 14 for Mount Dora.

Eustis won an earlier game between the two teams, topping the Yellow Jackets 71-51 on Dec. 5 in Leesburg. The Panthers have won six straight games since falling 65-62 to Lake Minneola on Jan. 6.

Lake Minneola, the top-ranked team in Class 6A, will have one of its toughest tests of the season at 7 p.m Friday when the Hawks welcome Class 2A powerhouse Orlando Christian Prep.

The Hawks will enter the game with a 20-1 record, while OCP has won four state titles in the past six seasons. Lake Minneola is in its third year of existence.

Coached by Seminole County legend Reggie Kohn, the Warriors bring a 21-0 record into Lake County. Four seniors on the OCP roster have already committed to NCAA Division-I schools.

Unified Sports Car Series hits track at Daytona

JENNA FRYER
Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH — The rules are set, the classes — as cluttered as they may be — decided and the future of North American road racing is finally here.

Some 15 months after the merger of the Grand-AM and American Le Mans Series, the consolidated product will at last hit the track Saturday for the prestigious Rolex 24 at Daytona. The inaugural event for the TUDOR United SportsCar Championship will mark the first time sports cars in North America have been unified since 1997.

There are 67 cars across four classes scheduled to take the green flag for the twice-around-the-clock endurance race. While everyone is eager to see the unified series in action, even the most seasoned teams and drivers aren't sure what to expect.

"This sport is ready to put on a great show for a huge audience and we are very excited for what is next with the United SportsCar Championship," said Michael Shank, team owner of the 2012 winning team. "There are so many unknowns with the new rules and all the new classes, it is little bit like the first time for us."

COURTESY PHOTO

Drivers compete in the 2011 24 Hours of Daytona at the Daytona International Speedway in Daytona Beach. This year's race is set to begin Saturday.

Shank will be back with his 2012 winning lineup of Justin Wilson, racing for the first time since he was injured in the IndyCar season finale in October, AJ Allmendinger, John Pew and Oswaldo Negri Jr. in the Prototype (P) class. The class is comprised of the former Daytona Prototype class from Grand-AM, as well as the P2 class and the DeltaWing from ALMS.

The overall race winner will likely come from the P class, which also includes two entries from defending race winner Chip Ganassi Racing.

Ganassi has new faces for both of his lineups: He's paired Indy Lights champion and Rolex newcomer Sage Karam with Scott Pruett, Memo Rojas and Jamie McMurray. Pruett last year tied Hurley Haywood's mark of five overall Rolex victories and is looking for the record this year.

"There's something magical about Daytona, and I love coming to race in the Rolex 24," Pruett said. "Especially with the coming together of both series, it will be the best of the best."

The second Ganassi entry has an entirely new look as holdover Scott Dixon has three new teammates. Among them are Marino Franchitti, who slides into the spot once held by older brother, Dario, who was forced to retire from racing in November because of injuries suffered in an IndyCar crash at Houston. Also in the lineup is Indianapolis 500 winner Tony Kanaan, who got Franchitti's IndyCar seat with Ganassi, and Kyle Larson, who replaced Juan Pablo Montoya in Ganassi's NASCAR's side of the organization.

But Ganassi made an offseason switch to Ford and, like the Shank team, is using the new Ford EcoBoost turbo DP engines. Although powerful, reliability could be a question.

It makes the potential favorite Wayne Taylor's Velocity Worldwide Corvette entry, also from the P class. Taylor came out of a four-year retirement to join the lineup for a chance to drive with sons Ricky and Jordan, as well as longtime teammate Max Angelelli. The team finished second at the Rolex to Ganassi last season without Wayne Taylor, but Angelelli and Jordan Taylor won five races — including the final three of the season — to win the 2013 Grand-AM driver championship.

"When I stopped driving full-time back in 2006, I was done with driving and have been ever since," Wayne Taylor said. "Having said that, I knew that an opportunity to drive with my boys might never come again, so I really had to think hard about it. I'm a little nervous. In my career, I always was the guy who was the fastest. Now, I'm the slowest, so it's weird. My job is to stay out of trouble and stay on the lead lap."

The Taylors join the Andrettis, Leitzingers and Nonnamakers as a father sharing the same car with two sons in the Rolex 24.

The other three classes are the GT Le Mans (GTLM), Prototype Challenge (PC) and GT Daytona (GTD). The GTLM class and PC classes carry over in their entirety from ALMS. The GTD class combines the former Grand-AM Series GT, the ALMS GTC class and cars slightly modified from European GT3 competition.

Almost half of the 67-car field is the GT class, which features the Aston Martins, Audis, Ferraris and Porsches. The class includes defending race winner Alex Job Racing, which will be in a Porsche after winning in an Audi last year, Dempsey Racing, which features actor Patrick Dempsey and was fourth at the 24 Hours of Le Mans to just miss a podium finish.

Dempsey announced earlier this month he'll compete in the full United SportsCar season.

"I think I'm getting much more competitive, much more consistent lap times, a better understanding of traffic and a better understanding of how to talk to the engineers and express what I'm getting from the car," Dempsey said. "I'm improving the more seat time I get, with the more experience I get. So when I show up at the track, I know that I have a shot at winning if everything goes right."

Yanks, Masahiro Tanaka agree to $155M, 7-year deal

RONALD BLUM
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The New York Yankees and prized Japanese pitcher Masahiro Tanaka agreed Wednesday to a $155 million, seven-year contract.

In addition to the deal with the 25-year-old right-hander, the Yankees must pay a $20 million fee to his Japanese team, the Rakuten Golden Eagles.

After missing the playoffs for just the second time in 19 years, the Yankees went on a free-agent spending spree this offseason, also adding catcher Brian McCann and outfielders Jacoby Ellsbury and Carlos Beltran. The four big deals totaled $438 million.

"We're going to do what we've got to do to win," Yankees co-chairman Hank Steinbrenner told The Associated Press in a telephone interview. "Anybody that questioned our commitment to winning is going to have to question themselves."

Big league teams had until Friday to reach an agreement with Tanaka, who was 24-0 with a 1.27 ERA last year as the Golden Eagles won the Japan Series title.

His agreement calls for $22 million in each of the first six seasons and $23 million in 2020, and it allows the pitcher to terminate the deal after the 2017 season and become a free agent. He also gets a full no-trade provision.

JEFF CHIU / AP

Masahiro Tanaka pitches to San Francisco during a 2009 exhibition game in Scottsdale, Ariz. The New York Yankees and Tanaka agreed on Wednesday to a $155 million, seven-year contract.

Tanaka receives a $35,000 moving allowance, an annual $100,000 housing allowance to be used in New York or near the team's spring training facility in Tampa, and an interpreter of the pitcher's choice at an $85,000 yearly salary. In addition to his own flight to the U.S., Tanaka annually will be provided four first-class round trip tickets between New York and Japan.

Tanaka's deal is the highest for an international free agent and the fifth-largest for a pitcher, trailing only the seven-years deals of the Los Angeles Dodgers' Clayton Kershaw ($215 million), Detroit's Justin Verlander ($180 million), Seattle's Felix Hernandez ($175 million) and CC Sabathia ($161 million under his original agreement with New York).

Tanaka replaces the retired Andy Pettitte in the rotation, joining Sabathia, Hiroki Kuroda and Ivan Nova. David Phelps, Adam Warren, Michael Pineda and Vidal Nuno are in the mix for the No. 5 slot.

"We had to make sure we had enough pitching to go together with our new lineup," Steinbrenner said.

Tanaka was 99-35 with a 2.30 ERA in seven seasons with the Golden Eagles, striking out 1,238 in 1315 innings. Yankees officials met with him Jan. 8 in Beverly Hills, Calif. The group included team President Randy Levine, manager Joe Girardi, general manager Brian Cashman, assistant GMs Jean Afterman and Billy Eppler, pitching coach Larry Rothschild, special assistant Trey Hillman and translator George Rose.

"He didn't do a lot of talking or anything, but you can tell he's on top of what he wants and what he wants to do," Rothschild said Wednesday at the team's minor league complex. "He's got an assortment of quality pitches. He's fastball, slider, split. Throws a cutter, too. It shows arm strength, but he's showed tenacity on the mound. When he got in tougher situations, you could see he dialed it up.'

New York had great success in the Japanese market when it signed outfielder Hideki Matsui, a star from 2003-09 who was the World Series MVP in his final season in pinstripes. But the Yankees had failures with Hideki Irabu and Kei Igawa, pitchers who never lived up to their potential.

Combined with deals to re-sign Kuroda and Brendan Ryan, and to add Kelly Johnson, Brian Roberts and Matt Thornton, the Yankees' offseason spending on free agents totals $471 million.

Tanaka's deal pushes the Yankees' payroll for purposes of the luxury tax over $203 million for 20 players with agreements. Barring trades, there is little chance New York will get under the $189 million tax threshold.

Yankees managing general partner Hal Steinbrenner had been saying for two years that getting below the tax threshold in 2014 was a goal but wouldn't get in the way of fielding a contending team. Along with losing tens of millions of dollars in revenue sharing annually, the Yankees have paid $252.7 million in luxury tax over the last 11 years.

Tanaka was the first player available under the new agreement between Major League Baseball and Nippon Professional Baseball, which caps posting fees at $20 million and allows multiple big league teams to negotiate. Under the previous system, in place from December 1998 through last offseason, there was no limit on the bid for negotiating rights and only the team with the top bid could try to sign the player.

Under that system, Boston obtained pitcher Daisuke Matsuzaka from the Seibu Lions before the 2007 season for $51,111,111.11 and agreed to a $52 million, six-year contract. Texas got pitcher Yu Darvish from the Hokkaido Nippon Ham Fighters before the 2012 season for $51,703,411 and gave him a $56 million, six-year deal.

Rochette remembers Vancouver tragedy

BARRY WILNER
Associated Press

Amid the tragedy, Joannie Rochette discovered an inner strength she didn't know existed.

The Canadian figure skater's mother died of a heart attack just before the Vancouver Games — Rochette's home Olympics. Grief-stricken yet resolute in knowing Therese Rochette's wish would have been for her to compete "and complete my dream," Rochette skated.

And won bronze.

On the eve of the Sochi Games, which Rochette will attend as an analyst for Canadian TV and working with Team Visa, she looks back at 2010 with pride, not sadness, in her voice.

"That was the chance of a lifetime," she said. "Any athlete wants to make it to the Olympics, but to make it in your own country ... to make it and then not be able to skate in my own country was not what my mom would have wanted for me.

"I knew I was strong. I did not know I was that strong, to have one of my parents die a few days before; you can never be prepared for that. I saw skaters who would come back a week later and I would wonder how they are able to keep functioning. When it happens to you, you get that strength, and I don't know where it comes from. We are built that way as athletes, I guess."

AMY SANCETTA / AP

Joannie Rochette reacts after receiving her bronze medal at the women's figure skating competition at the 2010 Olympics in Vancouver, British Columbia. Rochette's mother died just before the Games in Vancouver began.

Perhaps. But her courage in the midst of such grief was inspirational — to other Olympians, to fans. To everyone, really.

Rochette took the ice for practice just hours after her mother's death. Four days later, she mesmerized the crowd and many of her peers with a stunning free skate that earned her bronze. A few days later, Canadian teammates chose her to carry the flag at the closing ceremony.

"In Vancouver, I learned no matter how prepared you are for a competition — you plan well in advance for the Olympics, of course, on and off ice — you need to be flexible with that plan and can never know what can happen," she said. "Winners are those who can go with it."

With the support of her "strong team" — her father and boyfriend, her coach and sports psychologist — she made it.

"I knew I might be alone on the ice, but without them I would not ever be able to skate," Rochette said. "That was the moment I was training for my whole life. The Olympics come once every four years. I was 24 and at my peak, and it was do it then or do it never.

"There was no option during the games to go back home for me."

The four-year cycle has run its course again, and Rochette actually had some thoughts about a comeback for these Olympics. Had she been a speed skater or skier, she might have attempted it because they have no other outlets to show off their skills or express themselves within their sport.

But Rochette stars in a steady stream of skating shows. She'll headline "Stars on Ice" when it tours this spring and summer. That brings her fulfillment.

She also spends time visiting Third World countries with World Vision and with Right to Play. Rochette has been to Peru, Honduras and Rwanda since the 2010 Olympics.

"You get to see the work that those organizations are doing in those countries, so far from us," she said. "When we see there are these organizations, we don't know where that money goes and what happens to it. I got to see that. I got to see these young people — they want to change the way they live and make themselves leaders in their own community.

"It might be as simple as to start maybe a chicken farm. But it is what they try for."

In Rwanda, she recognized the need to change the mentality of the parents, who had been taught to bring their kids to the fields to work and not to school. That saddened her, but she also took heart when playing with the children and seeing their enthusiasm and their desire to succeed.

"Maybe," Rochette said, "to change the life of one person would be the reward."

Alcott caps comeback by making British team

ANDREW DAMPF
Associated Press

CORTINA D'AMPEZZO, Italy — Nobody bothered to call Chemmy Alcott and let her officially know that she was named to Britain's Olympic team for the Sochi Games.

And that's just fine for the London-based skier who is returning from her third major leg injury.

"I just saw in the press this morning that I was going. No one contacted me yet," Alcott told The Associated Press after World Cup downhill training Wednesday. "That's probably a good thing. Because I've got a lot to focus on. That was just my second downhill run since July."

Alcott broke her right leg for the third time in August during preseason training and only started competing again this month.

After four surgeries, Alcott now has a 15-inch nail holding the bones together inside her leg.

"It goes all the way from my ankle to my knee, and I have a few screws in there," she said. "But I'll do anything for this sport. I'll do whatever it takes."

Alcott was planning to make her World Cup return last weekend in Cortina but heavy snow wiped out those races. So the British ski team had to select her based on past performance and two Europa Cup races this month that she did not fare well in.

"I had so much support from everyone to make the team," she said. "It was tough not racing last weekend, because that was my chance to show it. But I've done it."

Since the British ski team doesn't have a downhill squad, Alcott has had to pay her own way this season. Together with British racer and future husband Douglas Crawford, she raised 34,000 pounds ($56,000) through auctions and personal sponsors.

FILE PHOTO

Chemmy Alcott races during a recent competition. After four surgeries on her right leg, Alcott has a 15-inch nail holding the bones together.

"There's a nice satisfaction in taking so much self-responsibility into doing your fundraising," Alcott said. "We had great support. ... Things are starting to come together."

Just last week, she got a new helmet sponsor, the British charity "Dream it, Believe it, Achieve it" — not a bad tagline for a skier who has persevered through so much.

"She's worked so hard, I'm really a big proponent of giving athletes after injury a chance," said U.S. skier Julia Mancuso, one of Alcott's best friends on the circuit.

Mancuso led downhill training. Alcott was 49th.

"It really helps having (Alcott) around," Mancuso said. "She's so positive. I think everyone on the World Cup has a story about her, no matter what team, so I think everyone is really happy she's back."

Sochi will be the fourth Olympics for the 31-year-old Alcott.

Her best Olympic result was 11th in the downhill at the 2006 Turin Games, the best performance at the games by a British female skier since 1968.

Turin was also the last time Alcott had her entire family on hand. Her mother died just after the games.

Wednesday was also bittersweet for Alcott because Crawford was not named to Britain's team.

"My heart is torn today, because I made it and he didn't," she said.

The only other British Alpine skier who will go to Sochi is 27-year-old David Ryding, who won the second-tier Europa Cup slalom title last season.

"He's a great guy and he has massive work ethic and I'm really looking forward to being his teammate," Alcott said.

Since she's essentially a one-woman team, Alcott has been training with the Norwegian women. And she has returned the favor by also coaching the Norwegians as a sort of "player-coach," as she puts it.

"I've found it really satisfying, and the girls have skied unbelievably," Alcott said.

But her post-skiing career more likely lies in TV commentating, as evidenced by her recent work for Eurosport.

White unafraid to show all sides in documentary

EDDIE PELLS
Associated Press

ASPEN, Colo. — The attention-grabbing moment in a new Shaun White documentary is not easy viewing.

Practicing a trick nobody has ever attempted in a halfpipe, White's board gets caught up on the lip. His head and neck whiplash violently against the top of the pipe. Helmet and goggles go flying and White lands with a thud on the bottom, 22 feet below.

It's this slow-motion replay of a painful setback, White's ensuing frustration as he fails to master the triple cork and his eventual discovery of new motivation that turns "Shaun White: Russia Calling" — airing Saturday night on NBC — into something more than a run-of-the-mill athlete biography.

The inside look at White's road to Sochi, where he'll try for a third straight gold medal on the halfpipe, offers behind-the-scenes access and an unflinching look at his unsuccessful attempt at a three-flip trick that won't show up at this year's Olympics.

Not your typical airbrushed, superstar story.

"A lot of the footage you're seeing is me trying to break down a barrier in my own head and my mindset to get this done," White says in an interview with The Associated Press. "It doesn't work that easily sometimes. This is the real story of what's going on and what happens to athletes."

As so often happens with White, things turn out pretty well.

After shelving the triple cork (though probably not forever) and getting back to health, he finds new motivation while watching the Winter X Games Europe. There, a rival, Iouri Podladtchikov — the "iPod" — tries the double-cork 1440: Four full twists packed inside of two flips, or, a half-revolution more than White did when he broke barriers four years ago with his Double McTwist 1260.

That becomes the new bar for White and, instead of being bummed that someone else got there first, he's reenergized by a new challenge.

The show offers looks at White's training regimen — one part involves submerging himself into cold lakes to make the swelling go down — along with some of the charity work he does and the time he spends with his band, Bad Things, which debuted its first album Tuesday.

Review: Rebooted patriot games in 'Jack Ryan'

JAKE COYLE
AP Film Writer

Having clung to the Russians as go-to villains long after the Cold War thawed, the movies find themselves current again with their favorite arch-enemy.

Cooling Russo-American relations have yielded an opening for the return of Tom Clancy's CIA analyst, just in time for the Sochi Olympics. In the Jack Ryan reboot, "Jack Ryan: Shadow Recruit," Chris Pine takes over as the spy who was played by Alec Baldwin ("The Hunt for Red October"), Harrison Ford ("Patriot Games," ''Clear and Present Danger") and Ben Affleck ("The Sum of All Fears").

It's a decent legacy of a dark-haired, intellectual action hero. Ryan is a navigator of murky, reasonably realistic, international espionage worlds. He has neither James Bond's preternatural suavity nor Jason Bourne's visceral butt-kicking skills, but instead anxiously finds his way with patriotic cunning.

"Shadow Recruit," which was scripted without a Clancy book by Adam Cozad and David Koepp, tells a new backstory for Ryan. Inspired by Sept. 11, he joins the Marines and is heroically injured in Afghanistan. During his recovery, he meets his eventual fiancee (a doctor named Cathy played by Keira Knightley) and is lured to the CIA by a mysterious recruiter (Kevin Costner, unconvincingly trying to exude a Donald Sutherland-like gravitas).

He's covertly embedded at a Wall Street bank where he uncovers a Russian plot to buy up U.S. Treasury bonds,

Super Bowl, New York style, promises A-list sizzle

LEANNE ITALIE
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Super Bowl practically comes with a guarantee of A-list star wattage: No matter where it's held, celebrities flock to the big game and the blowout extravaganzas connected to it.

But its location this year at MetLife Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J. — just outside of New York City — has raised the bar for over-the-top parties and events that one would only expect from the self-professed capital of the world.

"New York is hot and has always been hot, so the pressure is on. Energy will be pumping, wherever you may be," said Shape magazine Editor-in-Chief Tara Kraft, who is helping plan a $2,500-a-ticket event at New York's swanky Cipriani's, co-sponsored by Men's Fitness. It will feature Mary J. Blige, Marc Anthony and John Legend.

So far, it seems like the city has delivered on that promise. Jay Z will perform at DirecTV's Super Bowl Eve party; Drake is due to perform at another; the Foo Fighters are performing across from Bud Light's floating party on a cruise ship; the Kings of Leon and the Black Keys are set to rock out at two different events; GQ is planning an exclusive, invite-only party that's still under wraps but likely to attract plenty of boldface names; and Super Bowl staple parties sponsored by the likes of Playboy and Maxim are expected to be even more wild given this year's location.

"I think the expectations are a lot higher for New York," said Jon Gieselman of DirecTV, which invented the Celebrity Beach Bowl. "What's so unique about it is you're competing with other Super Bowl events but you're really competing, also, with all of the other incredible things that New York has to offer. There's so much to do in New York."

Gieselman and his team began planning two years ago, rather than the usual one, due to tight competition for

Musical 'Smokey Joe's Cafe' opens Friday night

THERESA CAMPBELL | Staff Writer
theresacampbell@dailycommercial.com

Musical "Smokey Joe's Café," a Broadway song-and-dance tribute to the 1950s and '60s, is making its Lake County premiere Friday night at Sonnetag Theatre at the IceHouse in Mount Dora.

Director Darlin Barry believes the musical revue will resonate with many theatergoers and remind them of their teenage years.

"The show is energetic, fast-moving and has great singing and dancing," she said. "It's filled with fun, happy music that reminds us of a simpler time."

The musical revue runs through Feb. 16.

"Smokey Joe's" has never been done in this area, said the director, who believes it may be a first in the Orlando area.

"The whole story doesn't have a plot to it, it's simply a tribute to two successful songwriters (Jerry Leiber and Mike Stoller) and it travels through their whole career of writing catchy rock 'n roll songs for The Coasters, The Drifters, Dion and the Belmonts, Elvis Presley and a lot of other artists," she said. "Their songs have sizzled across the radio airwaves and lit up the charts for decades."

Some of the 40 songs in the show include, "On Broadway," "Stand By Me," "Kansas City,"

Hudson has emotional connection to Braff movie

ALICIA RANCILIO
Associated Press

PARK CITY, Utah — Kate Hudson is not only a co-star of Zach Braff in his second movie, "Wish I Was Here," she's also a good friend. So she feels a special connection to the film, which Braff financed through an appeal on the donation site Kickstarter.

"I'll never forget. We were sitting down having a couple drinks and he goes, 'You know what? I'm tired of people telling me I can or can't do things. I'm just gonna start doing what I want,'" recalled Hudson at the premiere of the movie. "And I was like, 'You know, you do that.' It sort of became your mantra."

She also says the film's script, co-written by Braff and his brother Adam, struck a chord. It made her emotional to explain it on the red carpet.

"I loved it and actually it hit me on a very personal level because the themes of this film are about family, and you know, finding yourself and where you belong, and letting go of certain dreams and realizing that your life is right in front of you and taking that in instead of being one step ahead of it," she said. Tears welled up in her eyes as she added: "Just something about it just really resonated with me and made me quite emotional."

"Wish I Was Here" is Braff's second directorial effort. His first, "Garden State," which he wrote, directed and co-starred with Natalie Portman, was a critical success. It's been 10 years since Braff returned to the director's chair and he made it happen by funding the movie using the crowd-sourcing site Kickstarter.

"The Kickstarter thing was born out of... like, 'God, this system is exhausting and there's so many pitfalls it's ridiculous. There has to be another way,'" explained Braff of the red tape and politics that can hinder filmmaking in Hollywood.

Braff's good friend Donald Faison, Mandy Patinkin, Joey King, Josh Gadd and Ashley Greene are also in the movie and were at the Saturday premiere.

One Direction singer Harry Styles also showed up to support Braff, who has become a good friend.

Patinkin flew from Alaska to make it to the premiere. He couldn't stay for the screening though because he flew to Los Angeles for Saturday night's SAG Awards to represent his series "Homeland."

"It's a busy day. It's a busy day. I flew in from Alaska last night," he said. "Four flights to get here. Visiting my son and now here for this joyous occasion and then the minute the film starts I have to race in the car, go to the airport, fly to L.A., run into a bathroom, put my tuxedo on, run to the red carpet for the SAG Awards and be at the table before it goes on the air."

Sundance Film Fest opens with 'Whiplash' premiere

SANDY COHEN
Associated Press

PARK CITY, Utah — Miles Teller — who can be seen on screen later this month with Zac Efron in "That Awkward Moment" — took four-hour drum lessons three times a week to play the lead in "Whiplash," shown opening night at the Sundance Film Festival.

Teller plays a jazz drummer determined to succeed, whether because of or in spite of an unforgiving instructor, played by J.K. Simmons at his most intimidating (and muscular). Attending the country's most prestigious music academy, Teller's character, Andrew, aspires to be one of the greats, playing until his hands bleed. Simmons is Fletcher, a teacher prone to belittling his students in an effort to unearth their determination and will to improve.

Writer-director Damien Chazelle said he told Simmons: "Just scare us."

The 28-year-old Chazelle, whose short film of the same title and subject won an award at Sundance last year, is also a drummer who drew from personal experiences for the story.

The original film "basically helped us get in the conversation with, like, financiers and people who might want to take a risk about a movie about a drummer," Chazelle said.

"Without the short, I don't know if we would be here."

Teller described the film as "a pretty intense, dramatic almost, like, thriller environment for conservatory jazz music."

suitably large venues and navigation of complicated permitting procedures. Though there's a chance for blistering cold weather or even snow on Feb. 2, DirecTV is more than prepared for inclement weather: Its eighth annual beach bowl will be inside an 88,000-square-foot structure that he boasted can withstand hurricane-force wind. It will be filled with more than 1 million pounds of sand and is set to feature stars including Shay Mitchell of "Pretty Little Liars," model Chrissy Teigen and food TV star Guy Fieri, as well as retired football greats like Joe Montana. Rockers Paramore will perform.

Like the Beach Bowl, some of the biggest events will have some access for the non-boldfaced. Time Warner Cable will stage four nights of VIP parties and concerts from a pop-up; a small number of customers can win free tickets via Twitter to see P. Diddy and Drake on Super Bowl Eve and Kings of Leon that Thursday night. Janelle Monae, Fall Out Boy, TLC, J. Cole, the Goo Goo Dolls and Gavin DeGraw are among those booked by VH1 for a concert slate dubbed the "Super Bowl Blitz," six nights of entertainment in all boroughs, plus New Jersey.

The Foo Fighters and Zac Brown Band will perform as part of Bud Light Hotel festivities near the cruise ship docked on the Hudson, along with Imagine Dragons, Run DMC and Fall Out Boy. That Friday, Nelly was booked there, on the pier next to the Intrepid for an after-party hosted by Playboy. In Brooklyn, more than 3,000 people are expected to stroll, eat and socialize their way through Taste of the NFL, a chef-heavy party that will raise money for hunger relief. Invited guests include chefs Bobby Flay, Tom Colicchio and Mario Batali, along with NFL greats Kellen Winslow Sr. and Anthony Munoz.

"I think it's really special the Super Bowl is going to be there," Fall Out Boy's Pete Wentz said. "New York is already sort of pre-ready for this kind of event."

Some of the hottest parties will be unattainable to most. GQ is throwing a bash for 300 guests at the Boom Boom Room atop The Standard hotel in the meatpacking district. Superhot Grammy nominee Kendrick Lamar was tapped for two events, hosting Maxim's bash and performing at ESPN the Party, where he'll also be joined by Robin Thicke and Jermaine Dupri. And Howard Stern is having his birthday bash beforehand at an all-star event hosted by Jimmy Kimmel.

Gieselman said some previous Super Bowls didn't attract the same level of celebrity to ancillary events that New York is due to bring.

"One reality of some of those other markets is you just don't have quite as many people coming in. There were no direct flights from Los Angeles to Indianapolis, for instance. That really depressed, in my mind, the number of sort of A-level celebrities," he said.

Model-turned-actress Brooklyn Decker, co-host of the two-day Leather & Laces pre-Super Bowl bash at Liberty Theater in Times Square, said the Indianapolis Super Bowl two years ago was one of her favorites.

"You got a hand-knit scarf when you landed and there definitely was a homey touch," she said.

Grammy predictions: Macklemore? Kendrick? Lorde?

CHRIS TALBOTT and MESFIN FEKADU
AP Music Writers

Kendrick Lamar vs. Macklemore & Ryan Lewis.

Lorde vs. Katy Perry.

"Get Lucky" vs. "Blurred Lines" a.k.a. Pharrell vs. Pharrell.

There are so many tough choices this year at the Grammy Awards, where Jay Z is the top nominee with nine, but may not the favorite to take the most trophies when the show airs live Sunday on CBS at 8 p.m. from The Staples Center in Los Angeles. Lamar, Macklemore and Lewis, Justin Timberlake and Pharrell Williams are next with seven, but none is guaranteed a trophy in what must have been a tough year for voters — and has been for us as The Associated Press tries to sort out the mess.

Here are a few tips for this year's office pool:

ALBUM OF THE YEAR

"The Blessed Unrest," Sara Bareilles; "Random Access Memories," Daft Punk; "good kid, m.A.A.d city," Kendrick Lamar; "The Heist," Macklemore & Ryan Lewis; "Red," Taylor Swift.

FEKADU: Justin Timberlake's "The 20/20 Experience" doesn't even have a 20 percent chance to win this — though it should. And why isn't Bruno Mars' "Unorthodox Jukebox" on the list? I can't deal. Putting my personal feelings aside, this is how it will work: While Taylor Swift had earth-shattering numbers, Sara Bareilles created a top-notch, memorable album, and Macklemore & Ryan Lewis owned 2013, they won't win here. That leaves Daft Punk and Kendrick Lamar — who is like a second coming to hip-hop. If "Random Access Memories" was a little stronger, it would win, but I think the Recording Academy — after failing to properly award amazing rap records in the top categories — will get it right with a win for Lamar. "Poetic Justice," indeed!

TALBOTT: Don't be daft, punk! Looking back over the history of the Grammys, the usual winner in this category is that year's "event" album. Those records got attention beyond the quality of the music for some reason or another. With all due deference to Taylor Swift's popularity, the album that felt like an event in this group is Daft Punk's "Random Access Memories."

RECORD OF THE YEAR

"Get Lucky," Daft Punk featuring Pharrell Williams and Nile Rodgers; "Radioactive," Imagine Dragons; "Royals," Lorde; "Locked Out of Heaven," Bruno Mars; "Blurred Lines," Robin Thicke featuring T.I. and Pharrell.

TALBOTT: Oh, Lorde, this one's easy. "Get Lucky" and "Blurred Lines" had their runs, but Lorde finished the year in the strongest position as Grammy voters were filling out their final ballots. Those other two songs were sexy — or depending on your point of view, sketchy — come-ons, and felt like distant memories of one-night stands as the year closed. Lorde, on the other hand, offered something of an anthem for the dispossessed, an antidote to the swagification of pop music. Listeners took note, and I think Grammy voters did, too.

FEKADU: You have a strong argument, Talbott, but I also think Lorde may be too new to win this — shoot, she was too new for a best new artist nomination. That's the same deal for Imagine Dragons. Mars' hit, while epic, might seem too old, which leaves us with two Pharrell-laced bangers. "Get Lucky" wins this because it features a legend, a super-respected musical duo and it wasn't sued by Marvin Gaye's children. Can't wait to see their suits.

SONG OF THE YEAR (SONGWRITERS)

"Just Give Me a Reason," Pink, Nate Ruess and Jeff Bhasker; "Locked Out of Heaven," Bruno Mars, Philip Lawrence and Ari Levine; "Roar," Katy Perry, Lukasz Gottwald, Max Martin, Bonnie McKee and Henry Walter; "Royals," Lorde and Joel Little; "Same Love," Macklemore, Ryan Lewis and Mary Lambert.

FEKADU: I think the real competition is between "Just Give Me a Reason" and "Same Love." Pink's duet with Nate Ruess, who won this award for "We Are Young" with fun. last year, is a rousing number and a win like this for Pink is deserving after she's impressed us year after year. "Same Love," though, was a social anthem and more than a year after it was released, it still provides the chills when Macklemore begins his verse. Who am I kidding? "Same Love" wins this.

TALBOTT: History tells us sometimes the hits win. Sometimes the winner has become an anthem in some way. And sometimes it's a right-field entry you may not have expected. I think this is where The Recording Academy shows its love for progressive, open-hearted messages and rewards Macklemore & Ryan Lewis for a song that was a lot of all three.

NEW ARTIST

James Blake; Kendrick Lamar; Macklemore & Ryan Lewis; Kacey Musgraves; Ed Sheeran.

TALBOTT: This category is and always has been baffling. This is a strong group, but how could Lorde not be nominated? Historically best new artist has been impossible to predict, and this year's nominees are all over the board. While I personally feel Kendrick Lamar has the best long-term prospects among these entries, I think voters are focused on Macklemore and Lewis and their dazzling year and will give the nod to the Seattle rap duo.

FEKADU: If Ed Sheeran released a sophomore album this year as gratifying as his 2011 debut, this would be his trophy. But you're right about Macklemore and Lewis winning this.

REVIEW

which he suspects will be sold off in a coordinated act of terrorism and currency devaluation. Surely, if Ronald Reagan (whose endorsement of Clancy's first novel, "The Hunt for Red October," propelled his fame) was still around, he'd swoon over a spy thriller based on the harrowing threat of inflation.

Ryan's investigation leads him to the Russian oligarch Viktor Cherevin, played by Kenneth Branagh, who also directed the film. Certainly, it takes a bite out of the nationalistic politics when the movie's villain is played by a knighted British actor known for his Shakespeare work.

Branagh endows his film with (mostly) old-fashioned competency — something often lacking in today's action films — but little to distinguish it from superior thrillers that have come before. The best thing here is the sleekness of modern Moscow, where much of the action takes place. The film is filled with a nighttime mix of neon and taillights set against the Kremlin and other monuments — a handsome enough rendering to send a viewer back to the recent Bond, "Skyfall," for those elegant Shanghai scenes.

But "Shadow Recruit" is also disappointingly formulaic, relying on the familiar set piece-driven story of an implausible heist and a time-bomb finale. Knightley is too strong a force for this girlfriend role. And when the global scheme is figured out in a minute with a bank of computer-searching analysts, one foresees the obsolescence of the action film: sprawling plots undone with a few keystrokes.

"Jack Ryan: Shadow Recruit" is perhaps most significantly a test for Pine as a movie star. Early in the film, when Ryan is forced to defend his life in a hotel room battle, he ably depicts the shock and horror of a man encountering such a circumstance for the first time.

But Pine also fails to make his Jack Ryan more than an afterthought to Baldwin's know-it-all or Ford's reluctant hero. As Costner's character says, he too much resembles "a Boy Scout on a field trip."

One unlikely cameo should be noted: New York's famed repertory art-house theater, the Film Forum, appears early in the movie when Ryan swaps information at a screening of "Sorry, Wrong Number." At least in "Shadow Recruit," the interior has finally been upgraded to plush stadium seating.

"Jack Ryan: Shadow Recruit," a Paramount Pictures release, is rated PG-13 by the Motion Picture Association of America for "sequences of violence and intense action, and brief language." Running time: 105 minutes. Two stars out of four.

Husband enlists Hemingway in campaign to have an affair

Dear Abby

JEANNE PHILLIPS

DEAR ABBY: I am 36. My husband is 60. We have been together for 10 years. During the first four years we got along great, but he now says he wants to have affairs.

He texts women and tries to hide it from me. I found out he was texting his first ex-wife. It made me uncomfortable, so I asked him to stop. He didn't. When I realized he hadn't, I told him I would leave if it happens again. This kind of behavior has been going on for more than half our marriage.

I am at the point where I don't want to cuddle or be affectionate with him at all. He commented the other day that he should be allowed to have an affair because I mentioned that I find Hemingway interesting. (He was known for affairs.)

I'm at a loss. I care for my husband and don't want to hurt him. But I'm also scared that I can't afford to be on my own. A little advice? — UNSURE IN WASHINGTON

DEAR UNSURE: Hemingway was also known for his drinking and big-game hunting. Is your husband considering doing those things, too?

If ever I heard of a couple who could benefit from marriage counseling, it's you two. As it stands, your marriage is broken. Counseling may help. If it doesn't and you don't have a job, find one and figure out a way to cut your expenses so you CAN afford to be on your own, because it looks like you will be.

DEAR ABBY: I am an esthetician who works as a waxing specialist. A customer of mine came in a short while ago and admitted to driving to my salon while drunk. She mentioned she had almost crashed her car getting here, and I could smell the liquor on her breath.

She is one of my regular customers, but I am very against drunk driving. How would I professionally handle this? I wanted to report it, but I didn't know what car she was driving or where she was headed. How should this be handled in the future? — CONFLICTED IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR CONFLICTED: Because you know the woman well, you might say, "You nearly crashed your car getting here. I care about you too much to let you drive home like this. I'm calling you a taxi. Pick up your car tomorrow."

When she's sober again and comes in for her next appointment, tell her how worried you were about her. There are two ways to lose a customer. One is by offending her. The other is by letting her kill herself behind the wheel because she's so drunk she can't see straight. So let your conscience guide you.

DEAR ABBY: I have a condition that causes constant migraines. A new neighbor heard about my illness and is determined to become my second mother. She continually tries to visit, call and text even though my husband and I have asked her not to.

I dislike hurting people. How can I get her to stop her stalker-ish behavior without making this old lady my enemy? — MY OTHER HEADACHE'S A NEIGHBOR

DEAR OTHER HEADACHE: Stop asking and TELL this well-meaning woman that she's making your condition worse by continuing to call, text and visit. And while you're at it, tell her that when you're ready for company, you will contact her — but only when you're feeling well enough to chat. If she persists after that, don't answer her calls and refuse her visits.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — “Gravity” soared with a record-setting seven Critics’ Choice Awards, but “12 Years a Slave” was named best picture.

The Broadcast Film Critics Association presented its annual awards Thursday in Santa Monica, Calif., honoring many movies that earned Oscar nominations just hours earlier.

Awards for “Gravity” included best actress for Sandra Bullock, best director for Alfonso Cuaron and best sci-fi movie. “American Hustle” won four prizes, including best comedy, best acting ensemble and best actress in a comedy for Amy Adams.

“12 Years a Slave” collected two other awards besides best picture: best supporting actress for Lupita Nyong’o and best adapted screenplay.

WINNERS:

- Picture: “12 Years a Slave”
- Actor: Matthew McConaughey, “Dallas Buyers Club”
- Actress: Cate Blanchett, “Blue Jasmine”
- Supporting actor: Jared Leto, “Dallas Buyers Club”
- Supporting actress: Lupita Nyong’o, “12 Years a Slave”
