Quality vendors key for successful farmers markets

AUSTIN FULLER | Staff Writer
austin.fuller@dailycommercial.com

The recent failure of a farmers market in downtown Eustis was an abnormality in an area where similar markets have been thriving — in some cases — for decades.

Cagan Crossings, Clermont, Leesburg, Lady Lake, Mount Dora (The Village Market and Renningers), the Lake County Fairgrounds (north of downtown Eustis), The Villages and Webster all have thriving farmers markets.

The Sumter County Farmers Market in Webster dates back to the late 1930s, while the relatively new Brownwood Farmers Market in The Villages routinely hosts more than 50 vendors.

So what went wrong in downtown Eustis, and what makes a successful farmers market?

Eustis officials pulled the plug on the market in Palmetto Plaza after only two months because "staff resources involved in running the market were outweighing the public benefit," said Lori Barnes, a senior planner with the city. Not enough people were showing up, which she attributed to bad weather on the days the market was open and not

Water managers modify Niagara Bottling permit

LIVI STANFORD | Staff Writer
livi.stanford@dailycommercial.com

Editor's note: An incorrect version of this story ran in Sunday's newspaper. This is the correct version.

Niagara Bottling's permit request to more than double the amount of water it draws from the Floridan aquifer has been modified by the St. Johns River Water Management District, which will rule on the matter Tuesday.

The changes include conditions in the permit that withdrawals should not cause or "contribute to a violation of the adopted minimum levels" to a couple of nearby lakes. If this occurs, the water management district can revoke the permit, in whole or in part, or reduce the permitted allocation.

"It gives us assurances to make sure there weren't any impacts to water resources," said Hank Largin, spokesman for the district.

Caffeine common in kids, young adults

LINDSEY TANNER
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Nearly 3 out of 4 U.S. children and young adults consume at least some caffeine, mostly from soda, tea and coffee. The rate didn't budge much over a decade, although soda use declined and energy drinks became an increasingly common source, a government analysis finds.

Though even most preschoolers consume some caffeine-containing products, their average was the amount found in half a can of soda, and overall caffeine intake declined in children up to age 11 during the decade.

The analysis is the first to examine recent national trends in caffeine intake among children and young adults and comes amid a U.S. Food and Drug Administration

Punishment light for US military sex crimes in Japan, study finds

Associated Press

Hundreds of records detailing sex-crime investigations involving U.S. military personnel stationed in Japan show most offenders were not incarcerated, suspects received light punishments after being accused of serious violations and victims increasingly were wary of cooperating with investigators.

According to the Department of Defense documents:

NAVY USE OF NONJUDICIAL PUNISHMENT ON RISE

Data from the Naval Criminal Investigative Service, which handles the Navy and Marine Corps, show that Navy commanders in Japan increasingly are resolving sexual assault cases through non-judicial punishment rather than courts-martial. From 2006 to 2009, they favored courts-martial, but from 2010 to 2012 they were three times more likely to choose nonjudicial punishment. In 2012, just one Navy sex-abuse case went to a court-martial, while 13 were handled through nonjudicial punishment.

MOST DON'T GET PRISON TIME

The NCIS documents show that out of 473 Marines and sailors accused of sex offenses, 179 were given some punishment, and 68 went to prison. Marines were accused more frequently than sailors, though they are stationed in Japan in similar numbers. But Marines were three times more likely to get prison sentences, which sailors received in only 15 cases over more than seven years. The Air Force data showed that out of 124 airmen accused over five years, 17 received prison time and 42 received some other punishment. In 21 Air Force cases, the sole punishment was a letter of reprimand.

HOROSCOPES

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, Feb. 10, 2014:

This year you toss yourself into your day-to-day life with the objective of becoming more efficient and fulfilled. You also will be open to learning more, which could lead to transforming your life or your health habits; however, you might not be thinking long term. If you are single, you could be witnessing substantial change in your daily life. The person who appeals to you today might not catch your eye in a few months. Be open and kind to potential suitors — get to know them better. If you are attached, the two of you will be more upbeat than you have been if you make an effort to make each other's life easier. Let a new hobby evolve. Surprises seem to mark your life together this year.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You will tap into your intuitive feelings in the morning. As a result, a far-out idea is likely to surface. You will want to work with it, yet you might realize that it could take you down a strange path. No matter what, you will land on your feet.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You need to understand what is happening behind the scenes with a friend. You will get a better sense of that when in a meeting with this person. Idealism is wonderful, but it needs to be anchored. You could be shocked by some of the ideas being shared.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your finances are more important than you might realize. You understand money and its power well, but you probably have never seen someone look at it the way an associate does. Money could be the driving force behind this person's decisions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You might feel as if you can't easily be stopped, no matter what you do. Consider your alternatives in a difficult situation. You are likely to succeed in whatever you do, as you seem to be carrying a lucky rabbit's foot in your back pocket.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You might sense that a low profile will work better for you in increasing your efficiency. A partner could feed you some interesting ideas. Tap into your creativity, and you'll come up with unique solutions. You will know when you hit the right one.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A positive attitude will point to success. You could find that several meetings will give you a lot of feedback. Defer to a partner, and let this person know that you have confidence in his or her abilities. A goal is more attainable than you realize.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You must step up to the plate to hit a home run. Others will follow your lead and succeed. You might be overly concerned about your responsibilities, as they seem to find their way to you. Know which duties to say yes or no to.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You need to reach out to someone at a distance. Your creativity will flourish if you follow your feelings. Know that you will land on your feet. An unexpected development in your daily life could force you to re-group.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Work with a partner or an associate directly. You might need to switch gears in order to deal with a problem that arises. Others will see you in a special light. Opportunities could arise from out of the blue. Be ready to jump on a good idea.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be more forthright with an opportunity involving someone you care a lot about. Communication is likely to excel. You seem to know who is on the phone before you even pick it up. Your sensitivity will be at its peak.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) "All work and no play" doesn't suit you. You'll need to maintain a positive attitude in order to make a dream a reality. You will need time to consider your various options. Make it OK to head down a new path.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Your creativity will appear to be endless, which could excite many people. You know what is going on behind the scenes. Confirm what you think is true, but try not to be overconfident.

Voyeurism case in prosecutors' hands

MILLARD K. IVES | Staff Writer
millardives@dailycommercial.com

Allegations that a man with a camera phone attached to his shoe took videos up the dress of a grocery shopper last weekend has been forwarded to prosecutors to determine if charges will be filed, according to Clermont police.

An incident report stated that the unidentified woman told police that on Feb. 2, she and a friend were in the snack aisle of Publix on Citrus Tower Boulevard in Clermont, when a man started to stand "uncomfortably close" to her.

She told the man, "I'm sorry, was I in your way?" The man did not look up or reply.

The woman with her said she noticed the man standing close to her friend and initially thought the two knew each other, but also thought the man was acting strange.

Then she looked down and noticed what appeared to be a smartphone attached to a shoe positioned between the dress-clad woman's legs.

When the suspect realized his actions had been noticed, he quickly headed out of the store and left in a blue Ford Focus, the report said, adding the women wrote down his license plate number and called police.

Police have not spoken with the suspect, who they did not identify, and it is not clear what evidence detectives have against him. Capt. Michael McMaster, police spokesman, said the store video shows the suspect standing beside the victim, but he wouldn't elaborate any further, citing the ongoing investigation.

He did say the suspect has a lawyer.

management district last September to renew and modify its consumptive use permit. Niagara wants to increase its average daily withdrawal from 484,000 gallons to 910,000 gallons.

In December, Niagara changed its application to request that the bulk of its water come from the lower Floridan aquifer by 2016.

Niagara contends that withdrawing water from the lower aquifer instead of the upper aquifer will have less impact on lake levels. The two aquifers are separated by a barrier called the middle-confining unit or, in places, the semi-confining unit where water can leak through.

In some places in Florida, the confining unit is less than 50 feet thick, whereas Niagara contends the area it's looking at has a confining unit of clay up to 75 feet thick.

Alan Oyler, consultant for the water management district, said water withdrawn from the lower aquifer can affect water in the upper aquifer.

"It is diffusing the impact," he said, emphasizing it will not have the same effect as water withdrawn from the upper aquifer.

It all depends on where the water is coming from in the lower aquifer, he said.

According to a permit fact sheet from the water management district:

■ From 2014 to 2015,

Niagara's withdrawals from the upper aquifer will not exceed 484,000 gallons per day.

■ From 2016 to 2023, that amount will be reduced to no more than 334,000 gallons per day.

■ By 2024, if Niagara hasn't shifted all its withdrawals to the lower aquifer, its permitted allocation of water drops to zero.

Since taking over an abandoned warehouse in the Christopher Ford Industrial Park in 2008, Niagara states it has made a multimillion-dollar capital investment in its facility that today employs 120 associates on a full-time basis and up to an additional 60 part-time associates on a seasonal basis. The company has a payroll exceeding $7 million a year and an annual property tax bill exceeding $872,000.

Joe Kilsheimer, spokesman for Niagara, previously told the Daily Commercial the company's request was perfectly legal and that even the 910,000 gallons of water it wants to pump daily is a drop in the bucket compared with other commercial users in the water management district.

But Roy Hunter, founder and past president of the Northeast Chamber of Commerce, wrote in a letter to county commissioners that the permit should be stopped.

"We need your input at this meeting to stop Niagara from expanding, as the consequences, we believe, will be harmful to our county, our way of life and to all of Central Florida's," he said.

medical school.

The authors analyzed national health surveys from 1999 through 2010, involving a total of 22,000 from age 2 to 22. The children or their parents answered questions about what they ate or drank the previous day, a common method researchers use to assess Americans' diets.

In 2010, 10 percent of daily caffeine came from energy drinks for 19- to 22-year-olds; 2 percent for 17- to 18-year-olds, and 3 percent for 12- to 16-year-olds.

investigation into the safety of caffeine-containing foods and drinks, especially for children and teens. In an online announcement about the investigation, the FDA notes that caffeine is found in a variety of foods, gum and even some jelly beans and marshmallows.

The probe is partly in response to reports about hospitalizations and even several deaths after consuming highly caffeinated drinks or energy shots. The drinks have not been proven to be a cause in those cases.

The new analysis, by researchers at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, shows that at least through 2010, energy drinks were an uncommon source of caffeine for most U.S. youth.

The American Academy of Pediatrics recommends against caffeine consumption for children and teens because of potentially harmful effects from the mild stimulant, including increases in heart rate and blood pressure, and worsening anxiety in those with anxiety disorders.

Dr. Stephen Daniels, chairman of the academy's nutrition committee, said caffeine has no nutritional value and there's no good data on what might be a safe amount for kids.

Evidence that even very young children may regularly consume caffeine products raises concerns about possible long-term health effects, so parents should try to limit their kids' intake, said Daniels, head of pediatrics at the University of Colorado's

LESSER CHARGES COMMON

In 46 Marine cases and 22 Navy cases, those initially accused of a violent sex crime ended up being punished for non-violent or nonsexual offenses. The most common such charges were assault, failure to obey orders, adultery, having sex in barracks and fraternization.

MOST VICTIMS IN MILITARY

Of more than 620 serious sex-crime allegations against military personnel, at least 323 of the alleged victims also were in the military. Civilians were the accusers in 94 cases, but in nearly 200 cases the alleged victim's status was unclear.

Among U.S. military sexual assault reports worldwide in the 2011-12 fiscal year, 2,949 of the 3,604 victims were service members, according to the department's annual report to Congress on sexual assault in the military.

VICTIMS GIVING UP

The NCIS data show a growing number of accusers dropping out of investigations, either by recanting the allegations or simply declining to cooperate further. In 2006, 13 accusers recanted or stopped cooperating, and 28 did so in 2012. The Air Force data showed a decline, and the Army data was incomplete.

Death row inmate allowed new hearing

MILLARD K. IVES | Staff Writer
millardives@dailycommercial.com

A new sentencing hearing will start today for a man who was taken off death row two years ago after the Florida Supreme Court vacated his sentence due to a lack of mitigating evidence.

Eric Lee Simmons, 39, will have his re-sentencing hearing in the Lake County Courthouse in Tavares for his first-degree murder conviction in 2003 of Deborah Tressler, a 48-year-old Sorrento woman.

Simmons was convicted and sentenced to death for Tressler's murder. Her body was found raped, beaten and stabbed in a wooded area in Sorrento in December 2001. Evidence of blood stains was found on the passenger's door, car floor and cushions of Simmons' vehicle, and the rear tires of Simmons' car were a possible match to the tire tracks found at the scene.

He also was sentenced to life in prison for the battery and rape of Tressler.

The path for a new hearing was paved in 2012 when the high court's majority ruled Simmons' lawyers failed to fully investigate and present mitigating evidence during the sentencing phase of his trial, including his low intelligence, a brain injury suffered as a child and substance abuse.

As an infant, Simmons

apparently was suffocated accidentally, which caused brain damage and probably played a role in his behavioral problems at school. According to court rerecords, he began using marijuana as a 9-year-old and was consuming up to 12 beers a day as a teenager.

The justices unanimously upheld Simmons' conviction, but ordered a new sentencing hearing by a 5-2 vote.

Don Ryce, the father of Jimmy Ryce, talks to a reporter during an interview in Miami.

Ryce's dad: Execution brings killer to justice

CURT ANDERSON
AP Legal Affairs Writer

MIAMI — In the 18 years since 9-year-old Jimmy Ryce's rape and murder, his father and his mother, before her death, tried to alleviate the pain of their family's tragedy by working for society's good. They pushed for new laws regarding confinement of sexual predators and worked to improve police procedures in missing child cases.

But with the killer's scheduled execution set for Wednesday, Don Ryce said the death of Juan Carlos Chavez will finally bring some measure of justice. Barring a successful last-minute appeal, Chavez is scheduled to die by lethal injection at Florida State Prison in Starke.

"People sometimes say that will bring you closure. There is no such thing as closure, hate that word. It doesn't resolve everything for you. My child will not suddenly come back if Chavez is executed," said Ryce, a 70-year-old retired labor lawyer. "But it's important to close that chapter out in my life and to feel like justice has finally been done for my son."

Ryce said in a recent interview that in the years since Chavez was arrested for Jimmy's slaying he felt "the universe is a little bit twisted" because he has also lost his wife, Claudine, and daughter Martha while Chavez remained alive.

Chavez abducted Jimmy at gunpoint after the boy got off a school bus on Sept. 11, 1995, in rural southwestern Miami-Dade County. Trial testimony showed Chavez, who worked on a local ranch, raped

the boy and then shot him when he tried to escape, dismembering his body and putting the parts in planters that were then covered in concrete.

Despite an intensive search by police and volunteers, regular appeals for help through the media and distribution of flyers about Jimmy, it wasn't until three months later that Chavez's landlady discovered the boy's book bag and the murder weapon — a revolver Chavez had stolen from her house — in the trailer where Chavez lived. Chavez later confessed to police and led them to Jimmy's remains.

Ryce said he and his wife became determined to turn their son's horrific slaying into something positive, in part because they felt they owed something to all the people who tried to help find him. They also refused to wallow in misery.

"You've got to do something or you do nothing. That was just not the way we wanted to live the rest of our lives," he said.

The Ryces created the Jimmy Ryce Center for Victims of Predatory Abduction, a non-profit organization based in Vero Beach that works to increase public awareness and education about sexual predators, provides counseling for parents of victims and helps train law enforcement agencies in ways to respond to missing children cases.

"One of the problems we saw was, the police didn't know how to handle this kind of a case," Ryce said. "You don't want to start from scratch. You lose kids that way. They practice together so they know how to respond."

The organization has also provided, free of charge, more than 400 bloodhounds to police departments around the country and abroad. Ryce said if police searching for Jimmy had bloodhounds they might have found him in time.

"The bloodhounds are the one thing that might have made a difference to Jimmy," Ryce said.

Another accomplishment was 1998 passage in Florida of the Jimmy Ryce Act, versions of which have also been adopted in other states. Under the law, sexual predators found to be still highly dangerous can be detained through civil commitment even after they have served their prison sentences. Such people must prove they have been rehabilitated before they can be released. Chavez had no criminal record, so the law would not have affected him.

The Ryces also helped persuade then-President Bill Clinton to sign an executive order allowing missing-child flyers to be posted in federal buildings, which they had been prevented from doing for their own son.

Chavez, 46, was convicted in 1998 by a jury in Orlando, where his trial was moved because of the intense media scrutiny in South Florida. He testified in his own defense, claiming his confession was improperly coerced by police and attempting to blame his landlord's son for the killing.

He was found guilty of murder, sexual battery and kidnapping.

Chavez's most recent round of appeals have focused on claims that Florida's lethal injection procedure is unconstitutional, that he didn't get due process during clemency hearings and that he should have an execution stay to pursue additional appeals in the federal courts. The Florida Supreme Court rejected all those arguments Jan. 31, but Chavez is still pursuing federal appeals.

Ryce said he blames Chavez not only for Jimmy's death, but also the 2009 death of his wife from a heart attack at age 66 and the suicide last year of his 35-year-old daughter. He still has another son, 37-year-old Ted Ryce, who lives in the Miami area.

"So many of my family members are dead, directly or indirectly because of Chavez, and he's still living. That does not feel right. It is not right," Ryce said.

community and meet the needs of hospital employees.

"Venetian Gardens is a huge asset to the community," Minner said recently to local Rotarians.

"We've asked for some proposals to help us through the process of when we master plan Venetian Gardens to be a target for development."

The park is currently home to a community building, public swimming pool, marina, baseball field at Pat Thomas Stadium and pedestrian bridges leading to the private islands that offer scenic views of Lake Harris and the park's canals.

During today's 5:30 p.m. public hearing at Leesburg City Hall, commissioners will consider approving LPG Urban and Regional Planners to conduct three four-hour visioning workshops and develop a conceptual master plan and summary report for $23,000. Funding for the project was included in the city's current budget.

Minner said the planners' workshop series will allow participants to identify existing elements of the park that they value and to brainstorm ideas for the future. Participants also will be encouraged to think seriously about the physical infrastructure required to support their vision and the cost of improvements.

LPG Urban proposed facilitating the three workshops with local property owners, residents, clubs and city commissioners. The planners noted the main goal of the visioning process is to derive input pertaining to potential infrastructure, existing and proposed land uses, public uses and recreation/open space options.

"Leesburg kind of sits right there in the middle and it hasn't gotten some of that engine that other communities have gotten, and I think that is coming," Minner said.

Also tonight, the commission is expected to approve a supplemental joint participation agreement with the Florida Department of Transportation for the partial realignment of Taxiway Kilo at Leesburg International Airport for $143,376, yet Leesburg's cost in the 80/20 project will be $28,675.

TEACHERS

The Rookie Teacher of the Year nominees are:

■ Cynthia Murray from Eustis Heights Elementary. The Howey-in-the-Hills resident teaches kindergarten and has been with the school system for three years. "The core of my teaching philosophy is based on developing a caring relationship with each of my kindergartners," she said. "Students need to know that you honestly care about and believe in them, and they will strive to reach their highest potential."

■ Laura Fagan from Windy Hill Middle School in Clermont. The Minneola resident teaches eighth-grade social studies and has been with the school system for 18 months. "My philosophy of teaching is centered on the idea that students should interact with history instead of reciting it," she said. "History can be made meaningful by making it applicable."

■ Lindsey Massaro of Umatilla Middle School. The Apopka resident is band director at the school and has been with the school system for five months. "It is my desire as an educator to help my students meet their fullest potential... by providing an environment that is safe, supports risk-taking and involves a sharing of ideas," she said.

The School-Related Employee of the Year nominees are:

■ Nilda Rivera of the school system's human resources department in Tavares. The Clermont resident has been with the department for 16 months as a secretary and assists with background screenings. "Nilda is very organized and contributes to better ways to get tasks completed in the department," said her supervisor, Carolyn Samuel. "She is always looking for better ways to increase productivity in the job that she is assigned."

■ Lydia Flores of the school system's Federal Compensatory Department (Title 1) in Clermont. The Groveland resident has been with that department for seven years. "Her dependability and organization are obvious as she always strives to perform any given task with excellence," Administrative Coordinator L.R. "Dusty" Ross said. "She routinely demonstrates appropriate communication skills and stays on track with her responsibilities."

■ Allison Auld, a bookkeeper at Leesburg High School, where she has been for two years. "She brings expertise, insight and compassion to our school," Principal Bill Miller said. "She has forged great relationships with the community, students and staff."

Fans shun Sochi over bombs, bureaucracy, big bucks

JOHN LEICESTER
Associated Press

SOCHI, Russia — When Sven Kramer wins Olympic gold, he likes to celebrate by communing with the Dutch fans who worship him. Four years ago at the Vancouver Games, 3,000 packed a cavernous hall and went wild when Kramer appeared.

At the Sochi Olympics, Kramer again partied with his flock after leading a Dutch sweep of medals in the 5,000 meters. But what was a roiling sea of people cheering him in Vancouver shrank to little more than a pond — although still a very happy and noisy pond — in Sochi.

Although these are early days at Russia's first Winter Games, indications are that some would-be spectators from overseas have stayed home, seemingly scared off by terrorist bombings, pervasive security, knotty Russian bureaucracy and the big bucks needed to reach President Vladimir Putin's winter wonderland on the Black Sea coast and in the Caucasus Mountains.

Some Olympic venues have a very Russian feel. Figure-skating crowds, for example, seem to be almost exclusively Russian. On the first evening of competition, even four women waving a French tricolor for France's skating team turned out to be Russians from Moscow.

Many foreigners who have made it to Sochi fall into three camps: experienced world travelers who aren't easily spooked; die-hard Olympic regulars who would travel to any host city; or corporate types and wealthier tourists who delegate travel logistics to others.

Spunky Japanese retiree Mitsuko Taguchi, 80, is in the first group.

Having previously traveled to hotspots Afghanistan and Pakistan, she was unfazed by terror threats targeting the games.

But the expense of traveling to Sochi from the southern Japanese island of Kyushu made her wince. Taguchi said she knew of at least five other people who applied to her travel agent, but only one of them ended up joining her.

Including hotel, flights and a $2,000 ticket to the opening ceremony and others for figure skating, she calculated the cost of her five-night stay in Sochi at $18,000. Taguchi said that is four times what she spent at the 2012 London Games, where she found a cheap bed and breakfast, traveled on public transport and bought black-market tickets.

"Very expensive here. I was surprised," she said after cheering on Japanese teenage skating phenom Yuzuru Hanyu.

MARKETS

enough signage to let people know its location.

City officials will be looking at other farmers markets to see what makes them successful before deciding whether to bring the downtown market back, but a different location is not an option, Barnes said.

The Sumter County Farmers Market made its debut in 1937. The last of its original barns was demolished six years ago, but timbers from that building were saved and are now part of the porch roof on the market's restaurant.

The success of the 40-acre Webster operation comes from the quality of its local produce, according to Marc Harrell, the general manager for the past 14 years.

"We probably have some of the best produce, home-grown produce, you know when it's in season, that is still (grown) here locally by farmers and they market their produce here," Harrell said. "To me, that's been the backbone of this market, having a wide variety of different types of produce."

He added the market has one shed dedicated to just produce and the rest of the market is flea market-type vendors. The Sumter County farmers market is open every Monday from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m., and the restaurant is open daily.

"We're only open one day a week, which is only on Mondays," Harrell said. "That's the way it's always been."

One reason for the Monday operation is that vendors sell at other farmers markets on the weekends, he added.

In Mount Dora, The Village Market had its grand reopening in September 2012. Don Stuart, market manager, said vendors make a market successful.

"All markets begin and end with the vendors," he said.

The Village Market has nearly 40 vendors, and 75 to 80 percent of them sell food or food-related products, Stuart said, adding his vendors are fiercely loyal.

"They consider it their market," he said. "They have a great loyalty to the market; that's extremely difficult to develop. So I'm very, very proud of that."

The Mount Dora Village Market takes place from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. every Sunday in Elizabeth Evans Park, with a few exceptions because of major events going on in Mount Dora.

Cole Scharlau, the program manager for the Lake County Expo Center and Fairgrounds, said the Lake County Farmers Market has been around since 1969. During its busy season, it's not uncommon to see 250 vendors there.

Scharlua said keys to a successful farmers market include community support, longevity, vendor consistency, location, size of the property and parking.

"Another really important thing for a successful farmers market is obviously good produce, fresh produce at good prices, which is what most people come here for, I would say," Scharlua said.

Scharlua added location might be the most important aspect.

The Lake County farmers market starts at 8 a.m. every Thursday. Carol Peters is the owner of Slow Turtle Farm outside of Eustis, and she sells at the Mount Dora Village Market. She also sold her pet food goat dairy products at the downtown Eustis market from its beginning to its end.

Peters said accessibility, advertising and quality products are what drives success at farmers markets.

"It's not like a flea market where you're looking for bargains," she said. "You're looking for regional items, either fresh (or) organic, as far as produce goes. Something that is made locally...They (buyers) want to know who it is that they're purchasing from."

Is your credit card safe?

The blockbuster theft of credit card data from Target during the holiday shopping rush was just one example of the way outdated cards are leaving Americans more vulnerable to fraud and identity theft than shoppers are in other developed countries. The good news is that the credit card industry is in the process of fixing part of the problem. The bad news is that squabbling among retailers, banks and payment processors is getting in the way of a more complete solution.

The United States is one of the few remaining places where credit and debit cards rely on a magnetic stripe, rather than a microchip, to store and transmit account information. Magnetic stripes are easy to steal information from and to counterfeit, but that's next to impossible with chips. That's why, as other countries switched to chip-based "smart cards," hackers shifted their attention to U.S. targets.

Belatedly, the companies that process credit card transactions (such as Visa and MasterCard) have given banks and retailers until October 2015 to adopt smart cards. If a bank issues the new cards but a retailer doesn't equip itself to read them, liability for any losses caused by fraud will shift from the bank to the retailer. That's as far as banks and credit card companies want to go; thus far they're refusing to require consumers to use personal identification numbers with smart cards, arguing that many retailers don't have the necessary PIN pads. But requiring PIN use would help combat the unauthorized use of legitimate cards, which seems worth the cost that the added equipment would impose on some retailers.

Unfortunately, even more sophisticated cards can't stop fraud in online shopping, where there are no smart-card readers or PIN pads. The key there is to prevent hackers from stealing account information in the first place, which means that any company storing such data must keep it encrypted.

Several Senate Democrats have called for federal regulators to set minimum standards for protecting stored data. As tempting as this may be, however, the federal government should not be telling companies which technologies to use. Such mandates can't possibly keep pace with the techniques being developed by hackers and the security companies trying to stop them. Instead, lawmakers should make it more expensive for companies that lose credit card data by requiring them to do more to protect customers in the event of a breach. For starters, companies could be required to cover the cost of issuing new cards and, in the case of stolen debit card data, new checks. Today, too many retailers behave as if it's costlier to protect credit card numbers than to lose them. It's time to flip that equation around.

OTHEr VOICES

The real war on women is far more insidious than we acknowledge

When I was in college, I attended a lecture by Eleanor Smeal, feminist icon, former president of the National Organization for Women and founder of the Feminist Majority.

I was swept up in "women's issues" at the time. I marched with my classmates in an annual Take Back the Night event, protesting violence against women. I took women's studies classes, lots of them — enough to make the course of study my second major.

When men challenged me on my beliefs, I frequently responded with phrases like, "You can't possibly understand what it's like to be a woman."

But as I watched Smeal describe the plight of the modern female with what seemed like disdain for her biological condition, a twinge of doubt emerged within me and began to spread. I couldn't help but feel that she didn't like me, or herself, or women at all, really.

Indeed, much of what we generally refer to as "women's issues" today is cloaked in a subtle but insidious strain of female self-loathing. Women are bombarded with the message that they are the woebegone victims of biology, history and culture. The path to freedom is marked by being less like women and more like men.

We see this theme throughout our culture, but it is most conspicuous in campaigns to encourage female sexual license, which we now euphemistically refer to as "reproductive rights." This concept is predicated on the belief that only in an environment where the consequences of sexual activity are identical between the genders, will women be truly free and equal.

The problem for women, despite the insistence of some on the left, is that the risks of "sexual freedom" will never be identical to those of their male counterparts, precisely because, as New York Times columnist Ross Douthat writes, men can take "advantage of a social landscape in which sex has been decoupled from marriage but biology hasn't been abolished."

In other words, our societal sea change in sexual attitudes may actually contradict human nature, at great detriment to women.

A study by University of Texas sociologist and researcher Mark Regnerus found that "striking numbers of young women are participating in unwanted sex" and that they engage in it not because of their own personal, biological desires but because of powerful cultural influences.

Contraception and abortion often exacerbate this problem; while each may prevent certain consequences for women, the emotional and psychological risks are far more complex but no less serious.

An in-depth look at the hookup culture in university life by the Times last year reinforces the notions that even among women of divergent backgrounds, the pressure to adopt the sexual preferences of men over their own is a powerful driver of their behavior.

In the changing sexual marketplace, women increasingly accept the male preference for casual flings over monogamous relationships because they have run out of choices.

As one student put it, in a dating paradigm where men have the control, women "stop expecting that they're going to get a boyfriend." Instead, they just give in and conform to men's desires, often eschewing their own natural tendencies.

In an effort to gain power through sexual liberation, many women find themselves less liberated and more confined to behaving in a certain way, as they are pressured to deny their nature in the same contemptuous manner modeled by many feminist leaders.

The danger here is that (usually progressive) public policies claiming to empower women may in fact have a damaging effect by normalizing behavior that, absent outside pressure, women may not ordinarily engage in.

Further, the unrelenting political push for "reproductive rights" all but ensures that men will relinquish more and more sexual responsibility. There is no need for them to attend to something that is a "women's issue."

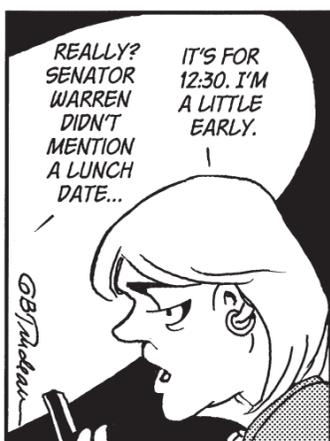

So-called reproductive rights will be a frequently used and highly charged political weapon in the coming elections, as it was during the 2012 cycle, when Democrats successfully portrayed their opponents as purveyors of a "war on women."

But the war on women has far more insidious roots than most progressives will ever acknowledge, and the next generation of females are the ones who will suffer.

UCF no match for No. 22 UConn

Knights suffer eighth straight loss, shoot 39 percent from the floor

Associated Press

ORLANDO — Lasan Kromah and Shabazz Napien each had 17 points and seven rebounds, and No. 22 Connecticut easily defeated UCF 75-55 on Sunday night. The Huskies (18-5, 6-4 American Athletic Conference) got 16 points from DeAndre Daniels and 11 from Ryan Boatright.

Isaiah Sykes led UCF with 17 points and reserve Justin McBride added 13, all in the second half. The Knights, who have lost eight straight, didn't have another player in double figures after shooting just 39.2 percent from the floor.

UConn had 9-0 and 10-0 runs in the first half, helping the Huskies build a 41-24 halftime edge. McBride, who entered the game with just under 15 minutes to go and UCF trailing 47-29, scored 11 points in 7 minutes.

When teammate Kasey Wilson hit a 3-pointer with 7:20 to play, the Knights had closed the gap to 57-49, but that was as close as they got.

SOCHI, Russia — Russia Rules.

The host nation won its first gold medal of the Sochi Olympics on Sunday night in the new event of team figure skating. The resurgence of Russia's once dominant figure skating machine was led by veteran Evgeni Plushenko and teenager Julia Lipnitskaia.

In an Iceberg arena packed with their exulting countrymen, including President Vladimir Putin, the Russians skated away from Canada and the United States to win the gold before the final free dance even started.

In no discipline did they finish worse than third in compiling 75 points to 65 for Canada and 60 for the Americans.

It was a rout built on the experience of Plushenko, the consummate showman who now owns medals from four Olympics — his two gold and two silver are a record for modern-era figure skaters.

It was capped by the freshness of the 15-year-old Lipnitskaia, who donned a Russia baseball cap when she was done with her sublime tour of the ice, sat with her triumphant teammates and grinned like the school kid she is.

"I was calm," Lipnitskaia said, adding it was her coaches, parents and teammates who were nervous.

It didn't matter that some other countries sat out their top skaters or that the Russians did the same in pairs and dance. It never really was a contest.

"I'm 31 and I'm happy gold, silver or bronze," Plushenko said.

The Americans' bronze effort was led by world champions Meryl Davis and Charlie White, who won both the short and free dance, and helped by national champion Gracie Gold's superb free skate, which the judges scored second behind Lipnitskaia.

Canada didn't win any segment, but built enough points throughout to take silver.

But those are just details. This was a night for a Russian show that might be celebrated as much as the Bolshoi.

It signals the country's return to the top of a sport it once owned. As the Soviet Union or Russia, the host nation had won 51 Olympic figure skating medals. But there were no golds in Vancouver four years ago, a first since the country was blanked in 1960.

Now, after one event, Russia stands atop the medals podium.

Magic rally in 4th quarter, stun Pacers 93-92

KYLE HIGHTOWER
Associated Press

ORLANDO — Victor Oladipo had 23 points, including 13 in the fourth quarter, and the Orlando Magic rallied to surprise the Indiana Pacers 93-92 on Sunday night.

Indiana stole Orlando's inbounds pass with nine seconds left and Paul George was able to get off a 20-foot jumper. But it was deflected and rebounded by the Magic, who ran out the clock.

Orlando has now beaten the top teams in both conferences in back-to-back games, having stunned Oklahoma City on Friday. The victory ties the Magic's season-high win streak of three games. It also extends their home win streak to five consecutive games.

Nik Vucevic added 19 points and 13 rebounds.

George led the Pacers with 27 points. Lance Stephenson added 16. The loss ends Indiana's win streak at four games.

The Pacers carried over some momentum from the first half and built as much as a 17-point lead in the third quarter. That advantage was cut to 10 entering the fourth.

But Orlando recovered some of its early-game energy, and started the final quarter on a 14-3 run to take its first lead of the second half — 78-77 — with less than 8 minutes to play.

It would grow as high as 88-81 before the Magic cooled off — missing four straight shots — and allowed the Pacers to cut it to 88-86 on a 3-pointer by George.

But the Magic found their shot and got their lead back to six with just over a minute to play.

Another 3-pointer by George on the other end trimmed it back to 92-90 with 37.7 seconds remaining. That was followed by an offensive foul on Oladipo which turned the ball back over to Indiana.

George got free at the top of the key for another attempt from 3, but his shot bounced off the back of the rim and was grabbed by Oladipo, who was fouled.

He connected on 1 of 2, but a scramble for the rebound ended up in a jump ball between David West and Glen Davis.

West tapped it near midcourt, and George Hill was able to scoop it up and sprint ahead for a layup to cut it to 93-92 with just 14.9 seconds left.

The Pacers led 52-43 at the half, but had to dig out of a first-quarter hole to get there.

The Magic led by six points late in the first quarter before the Pacers used an 18-5 spurt to take the lead back early in the second.

Wisconsin's Traevon Jackson shoots the game-winning basket against Michigan State's Gary Harris (14) and Adreian Payne on Sunday in Madison, Wis.

Jackson lifts Badgers over No. 9 Spartans

MADISON, Wis. — Traevon Jackson hit a pull-up jumper with 2.1 seconds left for Wisconsin, seconds after Michigan State's Adreian Payne tied it with a 3, and Wisconsin beat the ninth-ranked Spartans 60-58 on Sunday.

The Badgers (19-5, 6-5 Big Ten) committed 14 turnovers, six more than their NCAA-leading 8.3 per game, but gutted out a win over the Spartans (20-4, 9-2).

A desperation 3 by Michigan State from midcourt banged off the rim as time expired, and the Wisconsin faithful erupted with applause. The victory snapped a three-game losing skid at home.

Tied at 58, coach Bo Ryan again put the ball in the hands of Jackson, who has a history of hitting clutch shots.

With a man in his face, Jackson veered left of the lane and pulled up from about 10 feet to give Wisconsin the lead in a frenetic final minute.

Nigel Hayes led Wisconsin with 14 points, while Sam Dekker added 11. Payne had 24 points.

Travis Trice added 13 points for Michigan State, though Big Ten-leading scorer Gary Harris was held to six points on 3-of-20 shooting after being shadowed most of the afternoon by defensive specialist Josh Gasser.

And yet Michigan State still had a chance late, even with guard Keith Appling sitting out a second straight game with a wrist injury.

Marcus Smart banned 3 games for shoving fan

STILLWATER, Okla. — Oklahoma State star Marcus Smart was suspended three games Sunday by the Big 12 for shoving a fan in the closing seconds of the Cowboys' loss at Texas Tech on Saturday night.

The Big 12 acted swiftly in banning the All-America guard Sunday, saying in a statement the penalty was handed down for "inappropriate conduct with a spectator."

Smart apologized for his actions before coach Travis Ford expressed support for the sophomore without dismissing the severity of the player's actions.

"Marcus Smart made a big mistake last night. He knows that," Ford said. "I know Marcus Smart. Pretty much been around him on a daily basis for two years. Undoubtedly, last night was not one of his finest moments. But he's had a lot of fine moments as a player and as a person."

Smart will miss games against Texas, Oklahoma and Baylor. He can return for the Cowboys' Feb. 22 home game against Texas Tech. But Ford said Smart will be allowed to practice.

Late in Saturday night's game at Lubbock, Texas, Smart shoved Tech fan Jeff Orr with two hands after it appeared the Red Raiders fan said something to the top NBA prospect. Teammates quickly pulled Smart away as he pointed back in Orr's direction.

Texas Tech released a statement saying they conducted a thorough investigation.

Durant scores 41, grabs 10 boards as OKC beats Knicks

CLIFF BRUNT

OKLAHOMA CITY — The showdown between the NBA's top two scorers turned out to be a mismatch.

Oklahoma City's Kevin Durant outscored New York's Carmelo Anthony 41-15, and the Oklahoma City Thunder defeated the New York Knicks 112-100 on Sunday.

Durant, the league's leading scorer, also had 10 rebounds and nine assists. Anthony, the league's No. 2 scorer, finished with 15 points on 5-for-19 shooting for the Knicks.

Thunder coach Scott Brooks took Durant out of the game with 1:24 remaining, leaving Durant short of a rare 40-point triple-double by a single assist.

"I got on Serge (Ibaka)," Durant said, laughing. "He missed a dunk and he passed up a shot."

Durant also was largely responsible for guarding Anthony.

"He missed some shots that he normally makes," Durant said. "I just tried to play as strong as I can, contest some shots and not get discouraged when he hits them because he makes tough shots and he's a guy that can get hot. I just try to rely on my teammates, and they did a great job of helping me out, building a wall behind me, and I just tried to play as hard as I can."

Reggie Jackson had 19 points and six assists and Ibaka had 16 points and nine rebounds for the Thunder, who were coming off a 103-102 loss to struggling Orlando on Friday.

Raymond Felton and Amar'e Stoudemire each scored 16 points for the Knicks, who have lost four of five.

The Thunder made 12 3-pointers and shot 55 percent overall.

Oklahoma City Thunder forward Kevin Durant, left, is fouled by New York Knicks forward Carmelo Anthony (7) in the third quarter on Sunday in Oklahoma City.

Oklahoma City led 58-53 at halftime as Durant outscored Anthony 19-7.

The Thunder asserted themselves in the third quarter. Jackson drained a 3-pointer to put the Thunder up 76-64 midway through the period. Durant's 3-pointer gave the Thunder an 81-69 edge, and the Knicks called a timeout.

New York cut Oklahoma City's lead to 86-80 early in the fourth quarter on a dunk by Jeremy Tyler, but Oklahoma City pulled away. A 3-pointer by Durant pushed Oklahoma City's lead to 95-86.

Oklahoma City led 97-88 with 5:34 remaining when Ibaka was issued a technical foul. Anthony made the free throw, but the Knicks didn't get anything out of the possession. The Thunder took control from there as a long jumper by Ibaka put Oklahoma City ahead 105-90.

BULLS 92, LAKERS 86

LOS ANGELES — Kirk Hinrich scored 19 points, Joakim Noah had 18 points and 13 rebounds, and the Chicago Bulls held off the stubborn Los Angeles Lakers 92-86 on Sunday after nearly blowing a 19-point lead.

Taj Gibson added 18 points for the Bulls, who never trailed against an injury-ravaged Lakers squad missing Kobe Bryant, Pau Gasol, Jordan Farmar, Nick Young, Jodie Meeks and Xavier Henry.

Gasol, who had a season-high 19 rebounds the previous time the teams met, missed his fourth straight game because of a groin strain.

Center Chris Kaman scored a season-high 27 points off the bench for the Lakers.

NETS 93, PELICANS 81

NEW YORK — Rookie Mason Plumlee scored a season-high 22 points and matched his best with 13 rebounds in a high-flying performance, and the Brooklyn Nets used their best defensive first half in eight years as the springboard for a 93-81 victory over the New Orleans Pelicans on Sunday night.

Brooklyn held New Orleans to 28 points in the first 24 minutes, its lowest total since also allowing 28 against the Lakers on Nov. 27, 2005. The Nets were fueled by their reserves, with their top scorers coming off their bench and no starters finishing in double figures.

Mirza Teletovic had 13 points and 11 rebounds for the Nets, who improved to 13-5 overall and 9-2 at home in 2014. Alan Anderson scored 13 points.

Anthony Davis had 24 points and nine rebounds for the Pelicans, who had won seven of 10. They used big fourth-quarter comebacks to win their previous two games, but fell too far behind to come back in this one.

MAVS 102, CAVS 91

BOSTON — Dirk Nowitzki scored 20 points and Shawn Marion finished with 11 points and 10 rebounds for Dallas in a 102-91 win over the Boston Celtics on Sunday, extending the Mavericks' winning streak to a season-high five straight.

Jose Calderon added 18 points and Monta Ellis scored 11 for Dallas, which won for the sixth time in seven games and pulled 10 games above .500 for the first time this season.

Pistons fire coach Maurice Cheeks

DETROIT — Even by the Detroit Pistons' recent standards, this was an abrupt change.

Detroit fired coach Maurice Cheeks on Sunday after less than a year as coach, with the Pistons languishing well below .500 despite offseason moves aimed at putting the struggling franchise back in contention.

Detroit is 21-29, and although the Pistons still have a decent chance to make the playoffs in the Eastern Conference, their new roster has performed erratically.

"This was a difficult decision for the organization to make but we needed to make a change," team president Joe Dumars said in a statement. "We have great respect for Maurice and appreciate his hard work."

Detroit Pistons guard Brandon Jennings (7) talks with head coach Maurice Cheeks on Dec. 10 in Auburn Hills, Mich. Detroit fired Cheeks on Sunday after less than a year as coach.

A person with knowledge of Detroit's plans said assistant John Loyer will take over as interim coach. The person spoke on condition of anonymity because the team had not announced an interim coach yet.

The Pistons haven't made the playoffs since being swept in the first round in 2009 — in Michael Curry's only season as their coach.

Since then, Detroit has gone through two seasons under John Kuester and two under Lawrence Frank.

After neither of them could make any real progress, Cheeks was brought in as Detroit's ninth coach since the 1999-2000 season.

In addition to hiring Cheeks last offseason, Detroit signed forward Josh Smith and traded for point guard Brandon Jennings, trying to bolster a roster that already included young big men Andre Drummond and Greg Monroe.

But the mix has been uninspiring for the most part. The Pistons have had problems defensively and have struggled to close out games in the fourth quarter.

The poor attendance that's become commonplace at The Palace hasn't really improved — and Detroit's 11-15 home record hasn't helped.

"Our record does not reflect our talent and we simply need a change," Pistons owner Tom Gores said Sunday. "We have not made the kind of progress that we should have over the first half of the season. This is a young team and we knew there would be growing pains, but we can be patient only as long as there is progress."

Walker hangs on to win at Pebble

DOUG FERGUSON
AP Golf Writer

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — The finish wasn't what Jimmy Walker wanted. The result is what he's come to expect.

Walker led by as many as six shots Sunday in the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am, only for it to be decided by his final putt. He ran his birdie attempt 5 feet by the hole, and had to make that for par to close with a 2-over 74 and a one-shot win over Dustin Johnson and Jim Renner.

"It's drama, man," Walker said on the 18th green. "It was too much for me."

But it was a familiar outcome for Walker, a 35-year-old Texan who only four months ago was regarded as one of the best players to have never won on the PGA Tour. This was his third win of the PGA Tour season, a streak that began in October about an hour away at the Frys.com Open.

Walker joined some exclusive company. He is only the fourth player in the last 20 years to win three times in his first eight starts to a season. The others are Tiger Woods (who has done it eight times), Phil Mickelson and David Duval.

For a brief moment, it looked as though Walker might have a chance to join Greg Norman and Sergio Garcia as players to lose a six-shot lead in the final round.

He was never seriously challenged until Johnson, and then Renner, put together a strong finish. Johnson, a two-time winner at Pebble Beach, closed with a 66 on a card that included three bogeys. Renner, who had yet to make a cut all year, made five birdies on the back nine for a 67.

birdie on the 11th hole and was seemingly on his way.

But he hit a poor chip on the par-3 12th for a bogey. He three-putted the 13th for a bogey. He settled down for three simple pars and was two shots clear with two to play. Walker three-putted the 17th, missing a 3½-foot par putt. He tried to play it safe on the 18th with an iron off the tee that found the right rough.

From 25 feet above the hole, he hit the birdie putt too hard and had one anxious moment.

"I hate three-putting," Walker said. "I had two of them back there, and definitely didn't want another one on the last."

Walker finished on 11-under 277 and earned $1.188 million, expanding his lead in the Ryder Cup standings to more than $1 million over Mickelson in second place. The Ryder Cup is based on PGA Tour earnings, though there are still four majors (which count double), three World Golf Championships and The Players Championship remaining.

For now, the stars are aligned for Walker better than anything he sees through his high-powered telescope.

"I just go out and play golf," Walker said. "This is what I want to do and I've worked really hard to do it, to be here, and to be in this position and it's really cool."

Jordan Spieth had to return Sunday morning to complete his third round, which ended with his sixth three-putt of the round for a 78. He faced Pebble at its most vicious throughout the third round, though he bounced back with a bogey-free 67 to at least tie for fourth with Kevin Na (69).

And he hasn't lost his sense of humor.

"Yesterday was a day where you want to play Pebble Beach in that weather once in your life," Spieth said. "You just don't want it be Saturday when you're in the lead."

CHAMPIONS TOUR

BOCA RATON — Michael Allen won the Allianz Championship on Sunday for his sixth Champions Tour title, beating Duffy Waldorf with a two-putt birdie on the second hole of a playoff.

After Allen holed out on the par-5 18th, Waldorf had a chance to extend the playoff, but missed an 8-foot birdie putt after finding the front bunker in two.

Allen closed with a 3-under 69 to match Waldorf at 18-under 198 on The Old Course at Broken Sound. Waldorf, winless on the 50-and-old tour after winning four times on the PGA Tour, shot 67.

Cheyenne Woods wins Australian Ladies Masters

Associated Press

GOLD COAST, Australia — Cheyenne Woods won the Australian Ladies Masters on Sunday for her first major professional tour victory, holding off 17-year-old Australian amateur Minjee Lee by two strokes.

The 23-year-old Woods, Tiger Woods' niece, closed with a 4-under 69 at Royal Pines to finish at 16-under 276. Lee also shot 69 in the event sanctioned by the European and Australian tours.

Woods birdied the par-5 15th to open a two-stroke lead, hitting a wedge from about 120 yards to 4 feet. On the par-5 18th, she matched Lee with a birdie, holing out from 1½ feet.

From Phoenix, Woods is the daughter of Earl Dennison Woods Jr., Tiger Woods' half brother.

Woods turned professional in 2012 after an All-America career at Wake Forest and her only previous pro victory came in 2012 in a SunCoast mini-tour event. In December, she missed the cut in the LPGA Tour's qualifying tournament in a failed bid to earn a spot on the circuit.

Woods will play next week in the LPGA Tour-sanctioned Women's Australian Open in Victoria.

South Africa's Stacy Lee Bregman and Sweden's Camilla Lennarth tied for third at 12 under. Bergman closed with a 72, and Lennarth had a 70.

JOBURG OPEN

JOHANNESBURG

George Coetzee came from four shots back to win the Joburg Open, his first European Tour title, and a place at the British Open on a profitable Sunday for the South African.

Coetzee's final-round 6-under 66, with six birdies and no bogeys, took him to 19-under 268 overall and past compatriots Thomas Aiken and Justin Walters, the overnight co-leaders.

The 27-year-old Coetzee was flawless on the East Course at Royal Johannesburg and Kensington Golf Club to clinch his maiden title in his 107th tour event, a sequence that included 24 top-10 finishes.

"I don't know what I'm feeling," he said. "I'm lost for words. I've been waiting a while and I started doubting so I'm very happy."

Coetzee won by three shots from England's Tyrrell Hatton (66), South Korea's

Jin Jeong (71) and Walters (73), who needed an eagle on the last to take Coetzee to a playoff and made bogey instead. Jeong and Walters claimed the other two British Open places on offer at Royal Joburg, with Hatton missing out because his world ranking was lower than the two he tied with for second, the European Tour said.

Aiken struggled to a 74 and was tied for fifth on 15 under with Englishmen Andy Sullivan and Matthew Baldwin and Spaniard Alvaro Quiros.

Charl Schwartzel, No. 4 in the Race to Dubai and the highest-placed player on Europe's money list competing in Johannesburg, was tied for 59th after a second straight 72.

WINTER OLYMPICS

Austria's Matthias Mayer reigns as Olympic downhill king

FRED LIEF
AP Sports Writer

SOCHI, Russia — Matthias Mayer shut his eyes for a moment, his day's work over.

If he had trouble believing what had just happened as he stood before the crowd it was with good reason. The Austrian struck a big upset Sunday in one of the Olympics' marquee events, capturing the men's downhill and upending the elite of his sport.

"It's amazing to be an Olympic champion," he said.

Mayer has never finished better than fifth in a World Cup downhill. That proved no obstacle in dismissing the preordained favorites — Aksel Lund Svindal of Norway finished fourth and Bode Miller of the U.S. eighth.

Among the eight gold medalists on Day 3 were: snowboarder Jamie Anderson, the American slopestyle queen who triumphed in her sport's Olympic debut; Irene Wust, who showed why speedskating is Dutch territory; and Russia in team figure skating, likewise an Olympic newcomer, for its first gold in Sochi.

SKIING: In a country where skiing is revered, Mayer gave Austria a jolt. A few weeks ago he was not even considered the nation's best shot for gold. But he covered the Rosa Khutor course in 2 minutes, 6.23 seconds and beat Italy's Christof Innerhofer by 0.06 seconds. Norway's Kjetil Jansrud won the bronze. Miller, who dominated the training runs, was so unnerved by the change of visibility he thought he'd have "to do something magical to win." That was left to Mayer, who enjoys good skiing bloodlines — his father, Helmut, won a super-G silver medal at the 1988 Calgary Games.

SNOWBOARDING: The U.S. now has a double gold hit in slopestyle, with Anderson doing her part a day after Sage Kotsenburg. "Even though it's just another competition, the stage and the outreach that this event connects
