Massey's first-degree murder trial begins today

MILLARD K. IVES | Staff Writer
millardives@dailycommercial.com

Sumter County prosecutors say alleged drug dealer Leonard Antonio Massey Jr. liked to barter crack cocaine for use of a vehicle — even if it was just long enough for the customer to gather the money they owed.

During a pre-hearing last week for Massey's murder trial, which starts today, Assistant State Attorney Pete Magrino pointed to a 2010 case in the Royal community of Wildwood, where Massey and other suspects were accused of beating up a customer and burning his vehicle after a disagreement over money that was owed.

However, after an encounter between the victim and the suspects in the Sumter County jail, the victim became uncooperative with investigators and the case was never prosecuted, Magrino said.

But Massey's business practice of swapping drugs for use of vehicles came to an end on Jan. 11, 2011 after he allegedly spotted Gerald Devon Patterson, an acquaintance, driving the 1996 Toyota Camry of Richard Len, a customer who owed Massey $200 for drugs.

According to prosecutors, Sumter County Sheriff's reports and arguments during last week's pre-trial hearing, Massey got in the car. Massey, Patterson and a third passenger drove to Len's job in Marion County, picked him up and drove back to Royal.

An argument ensued between Massey and Len over the money. During the ride, Len made a telephone call to his wife,

Chris P. Bacon is back on TV

ROXANNE BROWN | Staff Writer

Ask Dr. Len Lucero about Chris P. Bacon, the celebrated pig born with non-working hind legs, and you'd think he was talking about a child, especially when he says it's "like a brother" to his own children.

"We (my family) have always been close to him," Lucero said of the pot-bellied porker, who will appear in a PBS documentary series "Nature" at 8 p.m. on Wednesday in an episode entitled "My Bionic Pet."

"I was very excited about being contacted for the show and can't wait to see it," Lucero said.

"If you go to PBS Nature and type in "Chris P. Bacon," they have some really good teasers out there. We've been anticipating this for a while now, and I'm anxious to see what ends up on the segment, because the shoot took a long time — a whole day actually."

Obama uses executive actions to test workplace ideas

JIM KUHNHENN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Lacking congressional support to raise wages or end gender pay disparities, President Barack Obama is again imposing his policies on federal contractors, in keeping with presidents' tradition of exerting their powers on a fraction of the economy they directly control.

Obama will sign an executive order Tuesday barring federal contractors from retaliating against employees who discuss their pay with each other. The order is similar to language in a Senate bill aimed at closing a pay gap between men and women. That measure is scheduled for a vote this week, but is unlikely to pass.

The president also will direct the Labor

Department to adopt rules requiring federal contractors to provide compensation data based on sex and race.

He plans to sign the two executive orders during an event at the White House where he will be joined by Lilly Ledbetter, whose name appears on a pay discrimination law Obama signed in 2009.

The moves showcase Obama's efforts to seek action without congressional approval and demonstrate that even without legislation, the president can drive economic policy. At the same time, they show the limits of his ambition when he doesn't have the support of Congress for his initiatives.

Republicans say Obama is pushing his executive powers too far and should do more

Hundreds walk to raise cancer awareness

THERESA CAMPBELL | Staff Writer
theresacampbell@dailycommercial.com

Under bright floodlights with luminaries lighting the way, hundreds of cancer survivors, family members and friends walked around the track of Leesburg High School in the wee hours Sunday for the Relay for Life of Leesburg and Lady Lake, a 16-hour event to raise awareness and funds for the American Cancer Society. The supporters wanted to show cancer doesn't sleep. They also wanted cancer victims to know they're not alone.

"It was empowering to know that I am not the only one," said uterine cancer survivor Wanda Linger, 41, of Bushnell, who cherished meeting other survivors at her first Relay for Life, an upbeat event filled with music, food, games and an Iron Man contest and prizes.

Even though Linger was tired, she stayed for the entire relay, which began at 2 p.m. Saturday and ended with the 6 a.m. closing ceremony and final lap.

I am nine months cancer free," Linger said. The Relay for Life was her chance to celebrate.

saying he was being held against his will with a gun and needed $200 — but the call abruptly ended on Len's end.

The following day, Len's gold Camry was found burning off County Road 216A in Wildwood.

A little more than a week later, Len's body was found off County Road 228 in Wildwood, with multiple gunshot wounds.

Massey was already in the Sumter County jail on unrelated drug charges when he was charged with being the trigger man in the shooting.

"It seems (Massey) didn't have much patience," Magrino said in an interview outside the Sumter County courtroom last week.

Jury selection in Massey's first-degree murder trial for the Len shooting is expected to start today, and testimony could start as early as Tuesday.

Patterson is one of the witnesses slated to take the stand. His trial on first-degree murder charges in the case was recently halted after he accepted a plea deal that downgraded his charge to second-degree murder that will likely send him to prison for 20 years — in exchange for his "truthful" testimony against Massey.

Another witness scheduled to take the stand against Massey will be his own sister, Latonia M. Latimer. She is accused of allowing her vehicle to be used to take Len's body to the backyard of an abandoned home off of County Road 227 in Wildwood.

She will likely get probation on the accessory charge, also in exchange for her "truthful" testimony.

Magrino added the third passenger in the car during the 2011 incident got out before the shooting and was not charged.

The 2010 and 2011 cases occurred within just over a mile of each other in Royal.

Last week, Sumter County Judge William Hallman III ruled, over the defense's objections, that the 2010 case could be used against Massey in this week's trial, citing there were enough similarities between the two.

For those who don't know Chris P. Bacon's story, a lady came to the Eastside Veterinary Clinic in Clermont, where Lucero used to work, about 15 months ago to inquire about putting down the animal. But one look at the piglet, who weighed less than 1 pound, stirred something in Lucero.

"I told her if she surrendered (the pig) to me, I would try to give it the best life possible," Lucero said.

The doctor took the pig to his Summerville home and built a tiny rear-end wheelchair out of K'Nex blocks, a children's building toy similar to Legos. A video posted on YouTube — showing Chris P. Bacon scooting around in his wheeled contraption — went viral, and the pig got national television exposure (the "Today" show, Anderson Cooper, TMZ, Discovery network, etc.), his own Facebook page with 107,174 likes and even worldwide T-shirt sales.

"He's healthy and happy and that's all you can ask for," Lucero said. "I guess I did my job. Beyond that, he inspires me, and as I keep seeing over and over again, he inspires many others as well."

Once called a "cute little pig," Chris P. Bacon is not that little anymore, having added 72 pounds to his frame since Lucero first got him.

The PBS episode is about animals given a second chance at life through human intervention and prosthetics, or in Chris P. Bacon's case, the mobile device Lucero built for him.

"A lot of people probably don't realize what goes into a 15- to 20-minute segment," Lucero said of the TV shoot at his home. "I know I didn't. It was take after take after take, and I'm pretty sure Chris did better than I did."

These days, Chris P. Bacon remains a busy pig, making appearances at schools and hospitals.

"I hope and really think Chris is inspiring a lot of people but, if nothing else, every person who meets him ends up with a huge smile on their face."

Last weekend, Lucero and Chris P. Bacon made an appearance at the MDA Muscle Walk in Orlando and, last month, participated in the Boating and Beach Bash for people with disabilities in Boca Raton.

Lucero has written a children's book about acceptance, the first of a three-part series featuring Chris P. Bacon, himself and his family. The doctor also hopes to drum up interest in a movie deal about the pig on wheels.

WALK

Mary Shaner of Lady Lake was joined by her infant granddaughter, Tinslee Price, 4 1/2 months old, one of the youngest relay participants.

"She stayed all night and slept for a little while. This is her first relay, first of many," said Shaner, who has been involved in Relay for Life for 15 years.

"We relay for many friends affected by cancer," Shaner said, recalling she became more involved in Relay for Life in 2009 after her son's teenage girlfriend was diagnosed with bone cancer.

"Since then, we have been full blast into it," Shaner said of serving on committees and forming a family-and-friends relay team.

The Family and Friends of Cops Against Cancer team, headed by Leesburg Police Captain Rob Hicks, was out in force, too.

"It's so wonderful to support American Cancer Society, Cops Against Cancer and Relay for Life. This is just a wonderful cause in trying to help raise awareness, and I feel honored to be a part of it," said Jeanine Rubino.

Rubino walked with Erin Mann and Molly Rowe as they made their final lap around the track.

"I think everybody has been affected by cancer one way or the other," Mann said. "This is something that the community can do to get involved ... to come out here and support people who are fighting cancer."

Chuck Kirk, event chair for Relay for Life of Leesburg and Lady Lake, hailed the relay a success, bringing in an estimated $50,000 and up to 700 attendees at the peak of the event.

"This was awesome and a great day," Kirk said after the closing ceremony.

"We started out with a huge opening ceremony, better than we have had in a couple of years, and it went through the entire day. Even with the heat, people stayed out. ... This group of really passionate people really made a difference, and when you think of all the challenges, the economy, what they have done is just phenomenal."

Leesburg Regional Medical Center employees were among the relay's biggest supporters.

Janice Collins of LRMC said she enjoys being able to cheer for the survivors at the event.

"It's showing them that we are here to help them and support them," she said, "and that's what the relay is all about."

to work with Congress. His new executive orders are sure to lead to criticism that he is placing an undue burden on companies and increasing their costs.

Federal contracting covers about one-quarter of the U.S. workforce and includes companies ranging from Boeing to small parts suppliers and service providers. As a result, presidential directives can have a wide and direct impact. Such actions also can be largely symbolic, designed to spur action in the broader economy.

"This really is about giving people access to more information both to help them make decisions at the policy level but also for individuals," said Heather Boushey, executive director and chief economist at the Washington Center for Equitable Growth. She has been working with the administration to get compensation information about the nation's workforce.

President Barack Obama works at his desk in the Oval Office of the White House in Washington, on Jan. 27.

"This is definitely an encouraging first step," she said.

Federal contractors, however, worry that additional compensation data could be used to fuel wage related lawsuits, said James Plunkett, director of labor policy at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

What's more, he said, such orders create a two-tiered system where rules apply to federal contractors but not to other employers. Those contractors, knowing that their business relies on the government, are less likely to put up a fight, he said.

"Federal contractors ultimately know that they have to play nicely to a certain extent with the federal government," he said.

In a separate action Monday, Obama intends to announce 24 schools that will share more than $100 million in grants to redesign themselves to better prepare high school students for college or for careers. The awards are part of an order Obama signed last year. Money for the program comes from fees that companies pay for visas to hire foreign workers for specialized jobs.

The moves represent a return to economic issues for the president after two weeks devoted almost exclusively to diplomacy and the final deadline for health insurance coverage. A trip to Asia in two weeks is sure to change the focus once again.

Still, Obama has declared this a year of action, whether Congress supports him or not.

In February, Obama signed an executive order increasing the hourly minimum wage for federal contractors from $7.25 per to $10.10. While White House officials estimated such an increase would affect only a small percentage of federal contract workers, they said the move could encourage states or individual businesses to act on their own to increase workers' wages.

Obama has also pushed his workplace initiatives beyond just federal contractors where possible.

Last month he instructed the Labor Department to come up with new workplace overtime rules for all employers, a power the administration has under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

But presidents have most direct power over the workforce that is paid with taxpayers' money.

Through executive actions, Obama also has drawn attention to areas where he has chosen not to act on his own.

The White House has resisted pressure from gay rights advocates who want have Obama to sign an anti-discrimination executive order that would protect gays and lesbians working for federal contractors. The White House wants the House to approve a Senate-passed bill extending those protections to all Americans.

It's law enforcement versus the First Amendment, and citizens are losing

If you drive down Buckeye Road at the southern edge of Lima, Ohio, you'll pass an industrial complex where General Dynamics makes armored vehicles for the U.S. military. But if you stop and take a photograph, you just might find yourself detained by military police, have your camera confiscated and your digital photos deleted. Which is exactly what happened to two staffers for the Toledo Blade newspaper on Friday, in an unacceptable violation of the First Amendment and common sense.

According to the Blade, staff writer Tyrel Linkhorn and photographer Jetta Fraser had just covered a news event at another Lima-area factory and decided to take photos of other businesses for future use, a common media practice. Linkhorn, who was driving, pulled into a circular driveway at the Joint Systems Manufacturing Center — also known as the Lima Army Tank Plant — and stopped short of an unmanned security booth. Fraser took her photos, and as they were preparing to leave they were approached by military police. The staffers, who were wearing credentials from their newspaper, identified themselves as journalists. Fraser, who was in the passenger seat, refused a request for her driver's license because she wasn't driving; she was subsequently handcuffed and removed from the car. After more than an hour, the two were allowed to leave — but without Fraser's cameras. When the equipment was finally retrieved seven hours later, the photos of the tank plant, and of another location, had been deleted.

Several lines were crossed here. Law enforcement officials have the right, even the responsibility, to investigate suspicious activity. But it's hard to imagine a scenario in which a person with a camera standing in broad daylight taking a photograph of something openly visible to the public — indeed, which is visible to the world through Google Maps — clears the hurdle of suspicious activity. And to delete the work of a photojournalist is indefensible.

Unfortunately, this is not an isolated incident. In the years since 9/11, various police agencies have acted with occasional callous disregard for the First Amendment rights of journalists and photojournalists, as well as citizens documenting public occurrences — particularly police activities.

The Blade has filed a complaint with the FBI, and we urge a quick and detailed investigation followed by a public accounting. But we also urge law enforcement officials at all levels to reacquire themselves with the First Amendment rights of citizens and journalists, and to issue new policies and training directives as necessary.

Gwyneth needs to recouple with reality

How do you spell conscious uncoupling? Where I came from, we always spelled it the way Tammy Wynette sang it, which is D-I-V-O-R-C-E.

I had one of them myself, several decades ago. That's when I discovered that even uncontested divorces still prove bad marriages are like hell: It's a lot easier to get in than it is to get out.

So when approximately 176 friends posted on their Facebook pages and Twitter accounts that movie star Gwyneth Paltrow and rock star husband Chris Martin announced their "conscious uncoupling" via her website "Goop," I felt a moment of genuine sympathy.

Then I laughed so hard my sternum started to hurt.

Seriously? "Conscious uncoupling"? Posted on a website called "Goop"? From a woman who named her kid Apple? And who shills, at $425 a go (so to speak), a colon-cleanse regime also called "Goop"?

Forget about the movies: This is a woman who needs a scriptwriter to prepare her lines in life.

Paltrow needs to do what elementary school teachers call "exhibiting mastery" over her native language. She seems to be doing less well with using her own words than she did with singing in her own voice.

(And don't you think the real reason they broke up is because she made that "Country Strong" movie? I do. She couldn't just let her spouse have his music career without making a film where she played a character inspired by — I'm not making this up — music, um, personality Britney Spears? My money is that "Country Strong," where Paltrow hams it up as a substance-friendly singer named Kelly Canter, although decidedly not the kind of cantor found in a synagogue, was the beginning of the end of that marriage.)

In addition to needing a writer, she also needs an editor — and maybe a therapist — because some of her sayings seem to have become infamous enough to generate their own line of snarky T-shirts. "I would rather die than let my kid eat Cup-a-Soup," she announced on an episode of "Conan." Here's another Paltrow gem: "We're human beings and the sun is the sun — how can it be bad for you? I don't think anything that's natural can be bad for you." Guess Gwyneth never heard of melanoma, which is nature's own sunshiny gift.

Without irony, mind you, the woman whose net worth is around $140 million was all wistful about the simple lives of women with children who don't have to deal with the hassle of being movie stars but instead work regular jobs: "I think it's different when you have an office job, because it's routine and, you know, you can do all the stuff in the morning and then you come home in the evening ... I think to have a regular job and be a mom is not as — of course there are challenges, but it's not like being on set."

Actually, death is also natural (and organic!), but I hear that's very bad for you, too.

But those declarations are violently sane compared to what Paltrow recently said during her interview with "E! News."

have to deal with the hassle of being movie stars but instead work regular jobs: "I think it's different when you have an office job, because it's routine and, you know, you can do all the stuff in the morning and then you come home in the evening ... I think to have a regular job and be a mom is not as — of course there are challenges, but it's not like being on set."

And most working-stiff moms with regular jobs would, I'm sure, agree: There are challenges, and it's not like being on a set. Unless, of course, we're talking about the set of "Lockup: Extreme Dinnertime Tantrums."

Making up words — "Goop" — and mangling phrases — "conscious uncoupling" — that render a significant event meaningless by bankrupting its significance doesn't help anybody accept, understand or cope with life's vicissitudes.

Calling something by another name doesn't change what it is. Consider those buses you see at every airport with "Elegant Limousine Transport" italicized in flaking gold paint on their side. They are not really limousines, are they? They're buses. There's nothing whatsoever wrong with them because they no doubt provide adequate transportation.

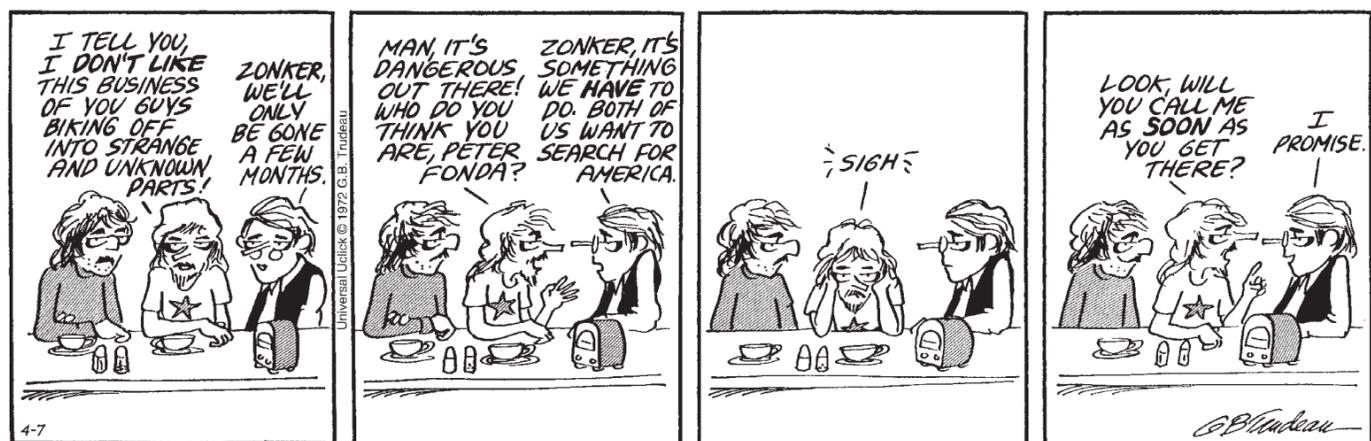

To refer to them by another name is, however, pretentious, misleading and disingenuous.

Sure, their owners can do whatever they want and who really cares? Yet, if we contort and misalign words to fit eccentric meanings, we obscure rather than explain what we're trying to communicate.

Life isn't easy for anybody, and divorce is always hard. But it's still probably easier if you're brave enough to spell it out.

Emmert: Unionization 'grossly inappropriate'

NCAA President Mark Emmert answers a question at a news conference on Sunday in Arlington, Texas.

ARLINGTON, Texas — The NCAA president called an effort to unionize players a “grossly inappropriate” way to solve problems in college sports while insisting the association has plans to change the school-athlete relationship.

Mark Emmert said Sunday that the NCAA wants to allow the big conferences with mon-eymaking teams to write their own rules, and those changes could solve many athletes' complaints more effectively than unionization.

“To be perfectly frank, the notion of using a union-employee model to address the challenges that exist in intercollegiate athletics is something that strikes most people as a grossly inappropriate solution to the problems,” Emmert said at his annual news conference, held the day before college basketball's national championship.

He said it would “throw away the entire collegiate model for athletics.” The NCAA has spent the last three years writing up plans to change its governance structure to allow the five biggest conferences to have different rules from hundreds of smaller schools. Because smaller schools have fought against costly changes such as paying athletes stipends, the independence of the big schools could break a logjam.

Although the issues have been simmering for years, they have drawn attention in recent weeks with a lawsuit filed by former

Darvish returns as Rangers beat Rays

MARK DIDTLER

ST. PETERSBURG — Yu Darvish allowed seven hits over seven innings in his season debut, Elvis Andrus hit a two-run homer, and the Texas Rangers avoided a three-game sweep by beating the Tampa Bay Rays 3-0 on Sunday.

Darvish (1-0) struck out six and walked one. Sidelined by neck stiffness, it was his first outing since a spring training game on March 16.

Darvish got his 500th career strikeout, coming in 401 2-3 innings, by fanning David DeJesus and Wil Myers in the first. According to the Rangers, it is the fewest innings for a starter to reach 500 strikeouts in major league history.

Gators: Successful season despite Final Four flop

MARK LONG
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas — Scottie Wilbekin sat hunched in his locker, his eyes red, his voice hush and his legs still cramping.

Teammates Casey Prather, Will Yeguete and Patric Young were a few feet away, also fighting back tears while trying to find words to explain how they played so poorly on college basketball's biggest stage.

It was a painful ending for Florida's four seniors, the mainstays of coach Billy Donovan's team.

But when the disappointment flees, when the vivid details of how Florida's national semifinal unfolded Saturday night at AT&T Stadium fade, the Gators will be able to smile about what will go down as one of the most successful seasons in school history.

Florida guard Lexx Edwards sits dejected in the locker room after his team lost to Connecticut 63-53.

“This team was so special, something I'm never going to forget for all my life,” Young said after a 63-53 loss to Connecticut. “We accomplished a lot just by loving each other and being really committed and loving playing with one another. So I'm just really going to cherish everything that we had this year and it's going to be something I'll never forget.”

Florida won a school-record 30 consecutive games, set another mark with 32 consecutive home wins, became the first team to go 18-0 in the Southeastern Conference's regular season, swept the league tournament and earned the top overall seed in the NCAA tournament for the second time.

And after losing in a regional final the last three years, the Gators finally made it to the Final Four.

They talked all week about not being satisfied with just getting here and finishing the journey. They recited Donovan's recent anecdote about getting to a potential stopping point while climbing Mount Everest, and instead of settling for the small accomplishment, finding the fortitude to make it the rest of the way despite potential pitfalls and adversity.

Florida tried. The Huskies got in the way — again.

The Gators (36-3) lost to UConn in early December on Shabazz Napier's buzzer-beater, which many called lucky. The rematch was

Jones' playoff chip-in tops Kuchar in Houston Open

KURT VOIGT
AP Sports Writer

HUMBLE, Texas — Matt Jones told his caddy he was about to make a 42-yard chip-in on the first playoff hole at the Houston Open.

The Australian did just that on Sunday, earning his first PGA Tour win in spectacular fashion — and changing his immediate travel plans in the process.

Jones, who began the day six shots off the lead, shot a final-round 66 and ended the tournament 15 under to earn his first trip to the Masters with the dramatic win over Matt Kuchar.

He earned nearly $1.2 million for the win, also making amends for a disastrous missed putt last September that appeared destined to keep him from playing at Augusta National.

Destiny, however, had other plans for the 33-year-old who played collegiately at Arizona State.

“Going to Augusta is amazing,” Jones said. “The win means everything to me right now because that's what we play for is to win. To have Augusta as a reward for that win is amazing.”

In September, Jones lipped out an 8-foot birdie putt on the last hole of the BMW Championship — a putt that would have earned him a trip to next week's Masters by sending him to the Tour Championship.

and Carmelo Anthony managed only 13, on 4 for 17 shooting. Anthony had two points after halftime, while James had 22. The Heat (53-23) ensured they would finish the day still ahead of Indiana atop the East standings. New York (33-45) has only four games left and will be either two or three losses behind Atlanta when Sunday ends, depending on the outcome of the later game between the Hawks and Pacers. Miami's lead was 15 with just under 9 minutes to go after a 3-pointer by Allen, before the Knicks came up with one last rally and made it more than a little interesting. Iman Shumpert missed a wide-open 3 with 3:30 left that would have gotten New York within four. Instead, James had a layup at the other end and after Smith made his ninth 3 of the game, Chalmers answered with one of his own, making Miami's lead 97-88. So Smith made another, giving the Knicks life. And Miami again answered, this time Bosh doing the long-range honors and restoring the nine-point edge with 1:32 remaining. Smith missed two more 3s from there — his 20th and 21st attempts of the day — and that just about sealed things for the Knicks.

After briefly tying Kuchar in the middle of the round on Sunday, Jones' chances at redemption for last year appeared finished after he bogeyed the next-to-last hole in regulation. The setback left Jones at 14 under, two shots back of Kuchar. However, Jones — in the first of his two memorable moments on the 18th — rolled in a 46-foot putt for birdie. That pulled the Australian within one shot of Kuchar, who was watching his closest challenger from the tee. "I was going to three-putt before I left it short," Jones said. "I didn't care about finishing second or third or fourth; it didn't matter. I was only trying to get the win." Kuchar went on to bogey the final hole of regulation after sending his second shot into the water. That set the stage for the playoff in the soggy conditions at the Golf Club of Houston. Jones sent his tee shot on the first hole of the playoff into the right fairway bunker. He then landed just short of the greenside bunker with his second shot, while Kuchar found the bunker from the fairway. It was the second straight miss of the 18th green from the fairway for Kuchar, who sent his fairway metal on the 72nd hole into the water before recovering to make bogey and reach the playoff. Jones didn't leave Kuchar any room for error in the playoff, sending his chip over the greenside bunker and watching as it rolled in — causing a roar from the gallery and leaving Jones standing with his arm raised in celebration. "I walked up there and told my caddy I was going to chip it in," Jones said. "... You don't know if it's going to lip out, low or high, but when I saw it disappear it's probably the happiest I've been on the golf course." Jones is the second straight Australian to win on the PGA Tour, following Steven Bowditch's win at the Texas Open last week.

athletes about to go to trial and a National Labor Relations Board director's ruling that Northwestern football players should be able to form a union. If the NCAA loses the unionization fight or the lawsuit, filed by former UCLA basketball player Ed O'Bannon, it could drastically alter the relationship between NCAA schools and 460,000 college athletes. But, Emmert said, nothing the NCAA might do in coming months will be a direct response to either of those legal cases: "Those are conversations that have been going on for several years now," he said. Neither Emmert nor the administrators who joined him for the news conference sounded overly concerned about drawing up contingency plans in case unions start sprouting up in the aftermath of the Northwestern case. "There's 50 different sets of rules for 50 different states," Big 12 commissioner Bob Bowlsby said. "So, we're a long way from having unions. I think about it a lot. Haven't spent any time talking about it. I'm not going to speculate on it. It's a long way down the road." Bowlsby and a panel that included presidents at Wake Forest, Kansas State and the future president at Ohio State agreed that many of the NCAA's thorniest issues, including paying athletes and improving their long-term health care, could be more easily resolved if the ACC, Big Ten, Big 12, Pac-12 and SEC were given "autonomy" to draw up their own regulations. "I think most of Division I memberships see that we're standing at a fork in the road," Kansas State president Kirk Schulz said. "What we're going to put out there again is not perfect, but I believe that the vast majority of members recognize that some of these things must change and that we need to do it rapidly."

Andrus put the Rangers up 2-0 with his homer off Joel Peralta (0-1) in the eighth. Donnie Murphy made it 3-0 on an RBI infield during the ninth. Neal Cotts replaced Alexi Ogando for the Rangers with two on and two outs in the eighth, and struck out Matt Joyce on a 3-2 pitch. Joakim Soria pitched the ninth for his first save. Alex Cobb struck three hits, walked one and struck out six in seven shutout innings for the Rays. Only one runner reached second against the Tampa Bay right-hander. Tampa Bay had runners on second and third with one out in the fifth, but failed to score when Myers hit an infield pop fly and Ben Zobrist flew out. Darvish got three consecutive outs after allowing Evan Longoria's double to lead off the sixth. He also worked out of a jam during the seventh after Ryan Hanigan hit a leadoff double. The Rays were 0 for 11 with runners in scoring position. Notes: Darvish was activated from the 15-day disabled list and RHP Nick Martinez was optioned to Double-A Frisco. ... Rangers RHP Colby Lewis (hip surgery) gave up four runs and four hits over five innings in a rehab start for Triple-A Round Rock. ... Texas LHP Joe far from a fluke, with the Huskies dominating the final 30 minutes of the game. During the last break, with just a few seconds left on the clock, Florida's seniors huddled on the court with tears in their eyes. It was over, and everyone knew it. "Obviously the four seniors, we came together and we have been through a lot," Yegueté said. "Just finishing up doing all the things we done this year, I think it's really special. Going to a Final Four is something special as well. I think we're going to continue to just cherish our friendship and we're going to stay close after this. "This game is not changing anything, regardless of how I feel, about my relationship with them. They're great guys. I love them, love to be around them. I just wish them the best and I know they're going to be successful in life." The seniors finished with a program-record 120 victories, including 13 in the NCAA tournament. They also won three SEC titles. They provided Donovan with a unique combination of players who stayed in school, committed to the process, got better every year and ended up with significant roles for the one of the nation's top teams. It wasn't enough to beat UConn. But it surely will cement this group as one of Donovan's best, right behind that star-studded team that won back-to-back national titles in 2006 and 2007.

Saunders (bruised left ankle) is not expected to be ready for his regular bullpen session Monday and could miss his next start. ... Texas RHP Tanner Scheppers (0-0) will face Boston RHP John Lackey (1-0) Monday night in the opener of a three-games series at Fenway Park. ... Tampa Bay LHP Matt Moore (0-1) and Royals LHP Jason Vargas (0-0) are the scheduled starters for Monday night's game in Kansas City.

"Everybody will remember this season for the team that we were able to become," Wilbekin said. "At the beginning of the year, it didn't look like we would be much of a team. Then throughout the year, we just really came together and did a lot of special things, broke a number of records at the school and won some really tough games. "Unfortunately, we didn't go out the way we would like to, but only one team is going to do that. So we just have to try and remember all the good things that we did before this point. Even though it's hard right now, I'm sure that I'll look back on this year and be really proud of the guys that were standing next to me." The guys behind them should be worth watching, too.

Sharp-shooter Michael Frazier II, dynamic guard Kasey Hill, versatile forward Dorian Finney-Smith and big man Chris Walker are a solid nucleus to build around next season. Throw in transfers Eli Carter, Alex Murphy and Damontre Harris, as well as incoming freshmen Chris Chiozza, Brandon Francis and Devin Robinson, and the Gators could be a contender again in 2015. They have a tough act to follow, though. "The No. 1 question I ask myself every year is: Did our team play as close as possible to their potential?" Donovan said. "Maybe more so than any team that I've coached based on the talent level, we played way beyond our potential as a team."

DETROIT — Chris Tillman outpitched Justin Verlander, allowing one run while working into the ninth and the Baltimore Orioles beat the Detroit Tigers 3-1 Sunday to avoid getting swept.

Tillman (1-0) gave up five hits, including Torii Hunter's solo homer in the fourth, in 8 1/3 innings. Tommy Hunter entered with one out in the ninth and Victor Martinez on second base and retired the last two batters for his second save.

Verlander (0-1) gave up two runs on five hits and two walks over eight innings.

YANKEES 6, BLUE JAYS 4

TORONTO — CC Sabathia pitched six innings for his first victory of the season, Brett Gardner hit a two-run home run and the New York Yankees beat the Toronto Blue Jays 6-4 on Sunday afternoon.

Sabathia (1-1) allowed four runs and seven hits, walked none and struck out six.

Sabathia was hit hard in Tuesday's opening day loss at Houston, allowing six runs and eight hits, including two home runs, in six innings.

TWINS 10, INDIANS 7

CLEVELAND — Chris Colabello drove in four runs, Brian Dozier scored three times and the Minnesota Twins outslugged the Cleveland Indians 10-7 on Sunday.

Colabello, who played seven seasons of independent ball in Canada before signing with the Twins in 2012, broke a 6-6 tie with a three-run double in the sixth inning off Blake Wood (0-1). The 30-year-old Colabello leads the AL with 11 RBIs after six games.

Baltimore Orioles' Matt Wieters, right, is congratulated after his solo home run by teammate J.J. Hardy during the ninth inning against the Detroit Tigers on Sunday in Detroit.

Joe Mauer had three hits and scored twice for the Twins, who took two of three in the series and will play their home opener Monday against Oakland.

ANGELS 7, ASTROS 4

HOUSTON — Scott Feldman threw seven strong innings, five Astros homered, and Houston snapped a three-game losing streak with a 7-4 victory over the Los Angeles Angels on Sunday.

Feldman (2-0) did not allow a hit until two outs in the fourth, when Josh Hamilton managed an infield hit.

WHITE SOX 5, ROYALS 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Chris Sale gave up four singles in eight scoreless innings as the Chicago White Sox defeated the Kansas City Royals 5-1 on Sunday.

Alexei Ramirez and Tyler Flowers each drove in a pair of runs as the White Sox won the series finale after dropping the first two games.

Sale (2-0) struck out six and walked one. In his previous four starts against the Royals, the White Sox had backed him with one run, enough to beat James Shields 1-0 in the 2012 opener.

BREWERS 4, RED SOX 0

BOSTON — Yovani Gallardo made his second straight scoreless start and the Milwaukee Brewers completed a three-game sweep of the Boston Red Sox with a 4-0 victory Sunday.

The World Series champion Red Sox, who never had a losing record last year, fell to 2-4 and matched their longest skid of 2013. They were swept just once last season, in a three-game series against the Texas Rangers from May 3-5.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

REDS 2, METS 1

NEW YORK — Alfredo Simon pitched seven impressive innings in his first start in more than two years and began the go-ahead rally with his second career hit, helping the Cincinnati Reds beat the New York Mets 2-1 Sunday to salvage a win in the three-game series.

Joey Votto had a sacrifice fly and Ryan Ludwick a tiebreaking single off Jonathon Niese (0-1), who was making his first start of the season after a being slowed by shoulder and elbow injuries this spring.

PADRES 4, MARLINS 2

MIAMI — Pinch-hitter Alexi Amarista celebrated his 25th birthday by delivering a go-ahead, three-run homer in the seventh inning to lift the San Diego Padres to a 4-2 victory over the Miami Marlins on Sunday.

Ian Kennedy (1-1) allowed one run and three hits in six innings for the Padres. He struck out five.

Four relievers then helped the Padres end a four-game losing streak, including two against the Marlins to begin the series. Huston Street pitched the ninth for his second save.

NATIONALS 2, BRAVES 1

WASHINGTON — Ian Desmond led off the seventh inning with a home run — the only run of the game scored on a hit — and the Washington Nationals and their makeshift lineup avoided a sweep Sunday with a 2-1 win over the Atlanta Braves.

Desmond ripped a down-the-middle fastball from Alex Wood (1-1) well into the left field bleachers, the Nationals' first hit since the first inning. But it was enough to win on a day when four Washington pitchers combined to allow eight hits.

PIRATES 2, CARDINALS 1

PITTSBURGH — Tony Sanchez hit a tiebreaking RBI double in the seventh inning and the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the St. Louis Cardinals 2-1 on Sunday.

Sanchez's double to deep center field with two outs came off Cardinals ace Adam Wainwright (1-1) and snapped a 1-1 tie.

The hit by the rookie reserve catcher scored Pedro Alvarez, who led off the inning with a walk, and was Sanchez's second game-winning hit of the week.

INDIANAPOLIS — Jeff Teague scored 25 points in the Atlanta Hawks' 107-88 rout Sunday of the reeling Indiana Pacers, who were held to a franchise-low 23 points in the first half of an embarrassing performance on their home floor.

The Hawks (34-42) have won three of four and extended their lead over the Knicks for the final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference to two full games.

The Pacers (53-25) have lost four of five and fell a full game behind Miami in their quest for the No. 1 seed in the East. Paul George scored 18 points and David West had 17 on a night All-Star center Roy Hibbert did not play the final 30 minutes.

Atlanta jumped to a 9-0 lead, extended the margin to 33-11 after one and 55-23 at the half.

CLIPPERS 120, LAKERS 97

LOS ANGELES — Blake Griffin and Chris Paul scored 23 points apiece, and the Los Angeles Clippers hung another rout on the Lakers, winning 120-97 Sunday to take three of four games this season from their beleaguered Staples Center co-tenants.

It wasn't quite the blowout of the Clippers' previous two wins — 48 points on March 6 and 36 points on Jan. 10 — but they were easily in command as the designated home team.

J.J. Redick added 15 points and DeAndre Jordan had 11 points and 12 rebounds for the Pacific Division-winning Clippers, who improved to 32-6 at home.

A Sunday for the ages at Augusta National

DOUG FERGUSON

AUGUSTA, Ga. — The biggest thrill of his life was making a 20-foot putt across the 18th green at Augusta National, and moments later he was wearing a green jacket.

It could have been a replay from last year at the Masters, except the big moment wasn't for Adam Scott.

On this Sunday at Augusta National, the endless smile belonged to 11-year-old Leo Cheng of Northridge, Calif. He was among eight winners from different age groups at the inaugural Drive, Chip and Putt contest.

"I just had a vision of Adam Scott making that putt," said Cheng, who won the boys' 10-11 division.

The final shot in the skills challenge was a putt from the same spot where Scott made birdie last year in the Masters, which he won in a playoff.

Cheng and other seven kids didn't win a green jacket. Cheng's parents bought him a dark green sports coat to wear, win or lose, for making it to the finals of the skills challenge sponsored by Augusta National, the USGA and the PGA of America.

To make Cheng's day even more memorable, Scott showed up at the trophy presentation wearing the real green jacket.

"It's amazing to see so many people out there and the kids having a fun time," Scott said.

This was a Sunday unlike any other at Augusta National.

Natalie Pietromonaco of Auburn, Calif., was on one side of the practice green standing over a 6-foot putt as Fred Couples watched from the other side.

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Andrea Petkovic ended a surprising week at the Family Circle Cup by winning her first WTA tournament in three years, outlasting Jana Cepelova for a 7-5, 6-2 victory Sunday.

Petkovic was once ranked ninth in the world before several injuries slowed her progress and cost her much of the 2012 season.

Petkovic's powerful forehand and grind-it-out mindset helped her oust three straight top 10 seeds in No. 4 Sabine Lisicki, No. 9 Lucie Safarova and No. 6 Eugenie Bouchard on the way to the finals.

The 26-year-old German used that same formula against Cepelova, a rising 20-year-old from Slovakia competing in her first WTA final.

"I still have a long way to go for me and I have a lot of potential," Petkovic said. "But I feel I'm on the right track."

Cepelova led 5-4 and was a point away from capturing the first set. But Petkovic rallied to win that game and begin a run of eight in a row to take control of the match.

SAKHIR, Bahrain — Lewis Hamilton edged Mercedes teammate Nico Rosberg after an intense race-long duel to take victory by just one second at the Bahrain Grand Prix on Sunday.

The two Mercedes were predictably in a different league to their rivals and recorded their second one-two finish in eight days after Hamilton's victory last weekend in Malaysia.

With no team orders, the two were allowed to race for the lead and there were several close calls when the pair came inches away from colliding, providing a thrilling spectacle under the lights at the Bahrain International Circuit.

Mercedes driver Lewis Hamilton of Britain celebrates after winning the Bahrain Formula One Grand Prix on Sunday at Bahrain International Circuit in Sakhir, Bahrain.

"It was very, very fair and it was very hard to keep him behind," Hamilton said. "He was very fast on the option tires and I was on the knife-edge the whole time. ... Me and Nico haven't had a race like that since back in our karting days. In our first (karting) race, he led all day and I overtook him on the last lap and won, and I thought for sure he is going to do that to me today."

Force India's Sergio Perez was third in his first podium finish since 2012 and Nico Hulkenberg fifth.

UConn and Kentucky meet for national title

JIM O'CONNELL

ARLINGTON, Texas — Connecticut and Kentucky couldn't have met in last year's championship game and few people gave them a chance to be in this year's.

No. 7 seed Connecticut and eighth-seeded Kentucky meet Monday night in one of the unlikely NCAA championship games ever.

Neither was around in last year's postseason — Connecticut because of a tournament ban over academic issues; Kentucky because it didn't make the field. And neither looked like national title contenders at times this season.

Kentucky (29-10) and its outstanding freshmen went from preseason No. 1 to out of the rankings after some bad losses. And Connecticut (31-8) was not a popular postseason pick after finishing tied for third in the American Athletic Conference with multiple losses to Louisville and SMU.

In the tournament, the Huskies have stopped some of the country's top guards and put themselves in position for their fourth national championship, the previous three under Naismith Memorial Hall of Fame coach Jim Calhoun.

"Hopefully we have an opportunity to fall back on our defense," second-year coach Kevin Ollie said. "We have been doing that the whole year."

If Kentucky has a chance to win in the final minute, that defense better pay attention to guard Aaron Harrison, one of five freshmen starters.

He has hit huge 3-pointers in the Wildcats' last three games. Harrison rattled in a 26-footer with 5.7 seconds to go in the 74-73 win over Wisconsin in the semifinals. He made almost the exact same shot with 2.3 seconds left against Michigan for a 75-72 win that sent the Wildcats to the Final Four. Against Louisville, he hit a 3 with 39 seconds left to give Kentucky the lead for good in a 74-69.

"The biggest thing is he's not afraid to miss," Kentucky coach John Calipari said. "He's OK with it. He's comfortable in his own skin. ... If you're going to make those kind of shots, you absolutely cannot be afraid to miss them."

These two programs have combined to win six of the last 18 NCAA titles.

Lexi Thompson outduels Michelle Wie for Kraft title

JOHN NICHOLSON

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. — Lexi Thompson left Michelle Wie behind Sunday — off the tee and on the leaderboard in the Kraft Nabisco Championship.

The 19-year-old Thompson closed with a bogey-free 4-under 68 at Mission Hills for a three-stroke victory over Wie. Thompson birdied four of the first nine holes to open a five-stroke lead and parred the final nine.

Wie birdied the final hole for a 71. She used her driver only four times, choosing to hit fairway-metal stingers on the other 10 driving holes — leaving her as much as 60 yards behind Thompson. When both hit 3-woods, Thompson also had the advantage.

the second-youngest major winner in LPGA Tour history at 19 years, 1 month, 27 days. Morgan Pressel set the record in her 2007 victory at Mission Hills at 18 years, 10 months, 9 days.

Thompson finished at 14-under 274 for her fourth LPGA Tour victory. She opened with a 73, shot a tournament-best 64 on Friday and had a 69 on Saturday to tie for the lead with Wie at 10 under. The 6-foot Florida player had only one bogey — when she missed a 3-footer on the par-5 18th Saturday — in her last 55 holes.

Thompson won the 2011 Navistar LPGA in Alabama at 16 to become the youngest winner in tour history, a mark broken by Lydia Ko in the 2012 Canadian Women's Open. Last year, Thompson won the LPGA Malaysia and Lorena Ochoa Invitational.

The 24-year-old Wie made her 12th start in the event. She was ninth in 2003 at age 13, fourth the following year and tied for third at 16 in 2006. She also was sixth in 2011.

Wie has two tour victories, winning the 2009 Lorena Ochoa Invitational and 2010 Canadian Women's Open.

Test accurately rules out heart attacks in the ER

MARILYNN MARCHIONE
AP Chief Medical Writer

WASHINGTON — A simple test appears very good at ruling out heart attacks in people who go to emergency rooms with chest pain, a big public health issue and a huge worry for patients.

A large study in Sweden found that the blood test plus the usual electrocardiogram of the heartbeat were 99 percent accurate at showing which patients could safely be sent home rather than be admitted for observation and more diagnostics.

Of nearly 9,000 patients judged low risk by the blood test and with normal electrocardiograms, only 15 went on to suffer a heart attack in the next month, and not a single one died.

"We believe that with this strategy, 20 to 25 percent of admissions to hospitals for chest pain may be avoided," said Dr. Nadia Bandstein of the Karolinska University Hospital in Stockholm.

She helped lead the study, published in the Journal of the American College of Cardiology and presented Sunday at the cardiology college's

Retirees help caregivers cope

LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Edwin Pacheco was in and out of the hospital for months. He'd survived one organ transplant and desperately needed another. But he wasn't the only one suffering. Few people asked how his wife was holding up as she kept vigil, cornered hard-to-understand doctors and held job and family together.

"Everybody was like, 'Oh, you're a good caregiver.' But inside, I'm dying," Minerva Pacheco of New York recalls of those tumultuous days.

Then one day in the intensive care waiting room at Montefiore Medical Center, a pair of strangers introduced themselves as volunteer coaches for caregivers and offered a shoulder. It's part of an unusual program that recruits retirees and specially trains them to help overwhelmed family members cope with a scary hospital stay — for their own health, and so they can better care for their loved one.

"The caregiver needs to be taken care of, too," said Montefiore coach Dave Wolfe, a retired high school guidance counselor who spotted Pacheco's distress. "If they're sick, or they break down, feel helpless or hopeless, they're not going to be too helpful to the patient."

The coaches offer more than emotional support and a sympathetic ear. They're trained to help people navigate a complex hospital system and to help them locate community resources that may ease the strain, too.

They can track down a doctor to answer a caregiver's questions. Or find someone to translate all the medical jargon. Or alert a professional to signs of depression. Or gently probe about just how prepared the family really is for continuing care at home: Are they comfortable giving injections, or cleaning a wound — or might they need some more planning with the discharge team?

Today's caregivers "are being asked to do a lot of things they're really not equipped to do," said social worker Randi Kaplan, who directs the Montefiore Caregiver Support Center. The program evolved as the hospital realized, "we're ignoring a very, very overstressed population."

Millions of Americans regularly care for older or impaired adult relatives or friends, and a hospitalization only adds to the stress. Yet research shows that patients who have supportive care from family or friends during a hospitalization fare better.

"You don't eat right, you don't sleep right," said Pacheco, who hadn't known she could seek help for herself as her husband worsened between his first transplant in December 2012 and the one that finally restored his health last summer. "You're scared to ask what's next."

Families need an advocate, said Dr. Paul Levin, SEE COPE | C4

Surgery gives long-term help for diabetics

MARILYNN MARCHIONE,
AP Chief Medical Writer

WASHINGTON — New research is boosting hopes that weight-loss surgery can put some patients' diabetes into remission for years and perhaps in some cases, for good.

Doctors on Monday gave longer results from a landmark study showing that stomach-reducing operations are better than medications for treating "diabesity," the deadly duo of obesity and Type 2 diabetes. Millions of Americans have this and can't make enough insulin or use what they do make to process food.

Many experts were skeptical that the benefits seen after a year would last.

Now, three-year results show an even greater advantage for surgery.

Blood-sugar levels were normal in 38 percent and 25 percent of two groups given surgery, but in only 5 percent of those treated with medications.

The results are "quite remarkable" and could revolutionize care, said one independent expert, Dr. Robert Siegel, a cardiologist at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles.

"No one dreamed, at least I didn't," that obesity surgery could have such broad effects long before it caused patients to lose weight, he said. Some patients were able to stop using insulin a few days after surgery.

At three years, "more than 90 percent of the surgical patients required no insulin," and nearly half had needed it at the start of the study, said its leader, Dr. Philip Schauer of the Cleveland Clinic. In contrast, insulin use rose in the medication group, from 52 percent at the start to 55 percent at three years.

The results were reported Monday at an American College of Cardiology conference in Washington. They also were published online by the New England

Journal of Medicine.

Doctors are reluctant to call surgery a possible cure because they can't guarantee diabetes won't come back.

But some patients, like Heather Britton, have passed the five-year mark when some experts consider cure or prolonged remission a possibility. Before the study, she was taking drugs for diabetes, high blood pressure and high cholesterol; she takes none now.

"It's a miracle," said Britton, a 55-year-old computer programmer from suburban Cleveland.

"It saved my life. I have no doubt that I would have had serious complications from my diabetes" because the disease killed her mother and grandmothers at a young age, she said.

About 26 million Americans have diabetes, and two-thirds of them are overweight or obese. Diabetes is a leading cause of heart disease, strokes, kidney failure, eye trouble and other problems.

It's treated with various drugs and insulin, and doctors urge weight loss and exercise, but few people can drop enough pounds to make a difference. Bariatric surgery currently is mostly a last resort for very obese people who have failed less drastic ways to lose weight.

It costs $15,000 to $25,000 and Medicare covers it for very obese people with diabetes. Gastric bypass is the most common type: Through "keyhole" surgery, doctors reduce the stomach to a small pouch and reconnect it to the small intestine. Another type is sleeve gastrectomy, in which the size of the stomach is reduced less drastically.

Schauer's study tested these two operations versus medication alone in 150 mildly obese people with severe diabetes. Their A1c levels — a key blood-sugar measure — were over 9 on average at the start. A healthy A1c is 6 or below and the study aimed for that, even though the American Diabetes Association sets an easier target of 7.

Heather Britton holds a photo of herself made before her weight-loss surgery, at her home in Bay Village, Ohio.

After three years, researchers had follow-up on 91 percent of the original 150 patients. The medication group's A1c averaged 8.4; the surgery groups were at 6.7 and 7, with gastric bypass being a little better.

The surgery groups also shed more pounds — 25 percent and 21 percent of their body weight versus 4 percent for the medication group.

Some cholesterol and other heart risk factors also improved in the surgery groups and they required fewer medicines for these than at the start.

Doctors don't know how surgery produces these benefits, but food makes the gut produce hormones to spur insulin, and trimming away part of it affects many hormones and metabolism.

Four patients needed a second surgery within a year but none did after that. Out-of-control diabetes has complications, too — many patients lose limbs or wind up on dialysis when their kidneys fail, and some need transplants.

An obesity surgery equipment company sponsored the study, and some of the researchers are paid consultants; the federal government also gave grant support.

Dr. Robert Ratner, chief scientific and medical officer for the American Diabetes Association, said he was "very encouraged" that so many stayed in the study, and said it will remain important to follow participants longer, because many people who have weight-loss surgery regain substantial weight down the road.

"Any way you lose weight is beneficial" for curbing diabetes, he said, but "we need to be concerned about the cost and complications" of treatments. Diets cost less and have fewer side effects, Ratner said.

One other common type of obesity surgery, stomach banding, was not part of this study. Its use has declined in recent years as other types of surgery have shown long-term benefits for keeping weight off.

Montefiore's vice chairman of orthopedic surgery, who tells the volunteer coaches, and medical students, how caregivers can get lost in the shuffle.

Years ago, Levin's oldest daughter had a roller-blading accident and was run over by a bus, suffering life-threatening injuries while at college hundreds of miles from home. In a hospital where he knew no one, even Levin had a hard time cornering doctors, got conflicting reports and once watched his daughter wheeled off to deal with a dangerous complication without any explanation.

"I'm a trauma specialist who knows the system, knew the questions to ask, but I couldn't get a straight answer," Levin said.

Many hospitals offer support groups for caregivers, or services from a social worker or other professional.

The volunteer coaches are different: Retirees with no background in health care undergo training to support caregivers in hopes that families will let their guard down with a peer. They make daily rounds through Montefiore's waiting rooms and nursing stations to offer the services of the support center, where families can talk with a coach or a social worker, research caregiver resources online, or just relax in a quiet room.

There are no statistics on similar volunteer initiatives, but Montefiore and a handful of community hospitals have modeled programs on one at Northern Westchester Hospital in New York.

"This caregiver coach idea is very innovative," said Lynn Feinberg of AARP, who tracks efforts to help caregivers — and says too often what's missing is someone to call at a moment's notice, rather than awaiting a monthly support group meeting. "Utilizing retirees is really a win-win, to provide that basic emotional, practical support and advice."

It takes strong supervision to know the boundaries, cautioned Carol Levine of the non-profit United Hospital Fund, which provided a startup grant to Montefiore and has created online caregiver guides.

RICHARD DREW / AP

Janet Lipson, left, is counseled by volunteer David Wolffe, and observed by Caregiver Center Director Randi Kaplan, of Montefiore Medical Center.

"They are not there to be nurses or social workers," she said. Instead, the program "really treats people with respect and dignity and understanding that they're in a difficult situation."

Montefiore put its 21 volunteers through a training course that stresses those boundaries, teaches nonjudgmental listening and lets them role-play difficult situations. The support services don't expire when the patient goes home, Kaplan said. Caregivers still can call or come in indefinitely, but there are no home visits.

Does the program make a clinical difference? The hospital has begun a pilot study comparing whether cancer patients stick with a grueling chemotherapy-and-radiation treatment better when their caregivers are coached in providing support.

Like many of the coaches, Wolffe, 69, had been a caregiver. He sought out Montefiore's support center while his wife, Janet Lipson, was undergoing complex cancer treatment. When she recovered, the couple became volunteer coaches to give back.

Wolffe recalls a mother of three with terminal cancer whose own parents didn't understand how badly chemotherapy sapped her strength until Lipson explained it. Later, Wolffe brought in professionals for advice on telling the young children about their mother's illness.

Mostly, Wolffe says, caregivers need to vent: "Sometimes I know I have to bite my tongue because I want to say something. But they just need me to listen."

FDA approves easy-to-use heroin overdose antidote

LAURAN NEERGAARD and

medicine cabinet.

Opioids include legal prescription painkillers, such as OxyContin and Vicodin, as well as illegal street drugs like heroin.

Called Evzio, the device contains naloxone, a long-used antidote for overdoses that is usually administered by syringe in ambulances or emergency rooms. But with the rise in drug overdose deaths, there has been a growing push to equip more people with the protection.

The FDA said Evzio's design makes it easy for anyone to administer. Once Evzio is turned on, it provides verbal instructions, much like defibrillators that laymen frequently use to help people who collapse with cardiac arrest. It is about the size of a credit card or small cellphone.

The antidote is not a substitute for immediate medical care, the FDA said, as anyone who has overdosed will need additional treatment.

Still uncertain is how much the antidote will cost. Executives of the drug's manufacturer, kaléo, Inc., of Richmond, Va., said it is too soon to say, but they are working with health insurers to get broad coverage.

Eric Edwards of kaléo says the antidote is intended not just for heroin or prescription drug addicts, but also for people who have accidental overdoses, unexpected drug interactions or are on very high doses of the drugs. People who overdose may suffer slower breathing or heart rates or loss of consciousness.

FDA Commissioner Margaret Hamburg said in a statement that 16,000 people die every year due to opioid-related overdoses, and that drug overdose deaths are now the leading cause of injury death in the United States, surpassing motor vehicle crashes. She said the increase in overdose deaths has largely been driven by prescription drug overdoses.

"While the larger goal is to reduce the need for products like these by preventing opioid addiction and abuse, they are extremely important innovations that will help to save lives," Hamburg said.

The announcement follows several state efforts to widen access to the antidote. At least 17 states and the District of Columbia now allow naloxone — commonly known by the brand name Narcan — to be distributed to the public. Some of those states allow for third parties, such as a family member or friend of an intravenous drug user, to be prescribed it. On Thursday, the state of New York announced that every state and local law enforcement officer will now carry syringes and inhalers of naloxone.

TEST

they'll have to pay a share of, plus unnecessary tests.

The study included nearly 15,000 people who went to the Karolinska University hospital with chest pains over two years. About 8,900 had low scores on a faster, more sensitive blood test for troponin, a substance that's a sign of heart damage. The test has been available in Europe, Asia and Canada for about three years, but it is not yet available in the United States.

The patients were 47 years old on average and 4 percent had a previous heart attack. About 21 percent of them wound up being admitted.

Researchers later looked back to see how the blood test and electrocardiogram would have predicted how they fared over the next month.

They figured that in order to find one heart attack in patients like this, 594 would have to be admitted — a huge waste of resources.

A test like this would be "enormously useful," and the study's results are "almost too good to be true," said Dr. Judd Hollander, an emergency medicine specialist at the University of Pennsylvania.

annual conference in Washington.

Chest pain sends more than 15 million people to emergency rooms in the United States and Europe each year, and it usually turns out to be due to anxiety, indigestion or other less-serious things than a heart attack. Yet doctors don't want to miss one — about 2 percent of patients having heart attacks are mistakenly sent home.

People may feel reassured by being admitted to a hospital so doctors can keep an eye on them, but that raises the risk of picking up an infection and having expensive care

Parents of boys with Duchenne urge drug OK

TRACIE MAURIELLO
Pittsburgh Post-Gazette

WASHINGTON — A wheelchair by age 12, maybe 15 if he were one of the lucky ones. A ventilator would be next and then would come the casket, probably before he turned 30.

That was what Terri and Bill Ellsworth expected for their son when doctors confirmed his diagnosis of Duchenne muscular dystrophy, a debilitating and fatal disease striking one in 3,500 boys.

Instead, Billy has become an active, happy teenager who likes to dance to Beatles songs, walk around at classic car shows, hike on local trails and jog in his living room along with avatars of Michael Jackson and Elton John he created for his Wii video game.

He's like a lot of other 13-year-olds but for an awkward gait and the Wednesday afternoons he spends at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh of UPMC for an infusion of an experimental drug that's keeping his disease at bay — and without any side effects.

Billy, of Coraopolis, Pa., is one of a dozen Duchenne patients who are receiving eteplirsen as part of a clinical trial. The drug was expected only to slow the progression of the disease, but Billy and others in the trial are finding their symptoms are improving. Testing confirms that their lungs are getting stronger and their bodies are producing dystrophin, an essential protein that wasn't present in muscles biopsied two and a half years ago when the trial began.

Results astounded researchers.

"I've done many, many clinical trials and never encountered one that was so clean, effective and very well tolerated," said principal investigator Dr. Jerry Mandell, Ohio State University professor of medicine and director of gene therapy at Nationwide Children's Hospital in Columbus, where testing was initially conducted.

For the 12 boys and their families, it's a miracle drug, but other Duchenne patients can't access it because the Food and Drug Administration hasn't yet approved it. Terri Ellsworth and other mothers are lobbying regulators to expedite approval under a 2012 law that encourages faster reviews of breakthrough therapies that address unmet medical needs for rare and life-threatening diseases.

REBECCA DROKE / MCT

Billy Ellsworth works on social studies lessons at home in Coraopolis, Pa., March 27. He is part of a clinical trial for eteplirsen, a drug that has not only slowed the progression of Duchenne muscular dystrophy, but also improved his symptoms.

They spent the past month collecting signatures on a petition they sent to the White House urging the administration to expedite approvals of drugs that treat Duchenne muscular dystrophy. The White House has promised to respond publicly in writing to petitions with at least 100,000 signatures. The Duchenne petition reached that threshold Tuesday. Supporters can still sign by going to TheRaceToYes.org.

Duchenne parents believe eteplirsen meets all the requirements for expedited approval, and they're urging action now because their children are running out of time.

They were hopeful last July when the FDA expressed interest in eteplirsen, but were disappointed when the agency came back three months later and paused the process, saying government scientists needed more data from drug developer Sarepta Therapeutics. The Massachusetts-based company is awaiting more direction from the agency.

"FDA's drug approval process requires well-controlled clinical trials that provide the necessary scientific data," agency spokeswoman Sandy Walsh said in an email message, noting she could not discuss specific cases under review. "If a drug product is to be marketed, well-controlled clinical trials are needed to ensure that the drug is safe and effective when used as indicated."

The issue seems to be the size of the sample, not the quality of the research, Mandell said.

Complaints of e-cigarette poisonings on the rise

DELTHIA RICKS
Newsday

Accidental exposure to nicotine in e-cigarette refills has fueled a dramatic jump in calls to poison control centers, according to federal health authorities, who say the substance triggered eye, skin and inhalation injuries.

Kids drank flavored e-liquids, lured by deceptively sweet odors. Adults got squirts of nicotine in their eyes and through the skin. Nicotine poisons people when appreciable amounts of the substance are absorbed, inhaled or swallowed.

Calls to poison centers have largely involved e-cigarette vials used to refill the devices. Phone calls to poison centers rose from one per month in September 2010 to 215 monthly by February of this year, researchers at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported Thursday in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

More than half the calls to poison centers were about children exposed to toxic levels of nicotine, but 42 percent involved people 20 and older, also suffering from nicotine exposure.

By comparison, monthly calls involving conventional cigarettes didn't show a similar increase during the same time period. Hazards linked to cigarettes ranged from 301 to 512 calls per month and were more frequent in summer, researchers found.

"When e-cigarettes first came out, the nicotine was contained in a cartridge," said Dan Jacobsen of the North Shore-LIJ Center for Tobacco Control in Great Neck, N.Y.

"Now, to make them cheaper and easier to use, they are refillable and because these refills have flavors, they entice children," he said. Flavors include chocolate, strawberry and bubble gum.

Jacobsen said it's time the U.S. Food and Drug Administration considered regulating the products, which have evolved from disposable devices resembling cigarettes to trendy wands from which billowing clouds of vapor are emitted.

He said there are no quality-control guidelines on their manufacture in the U.S. or abroad.

Dr. Tim McAfee, director of the CDC's Office on Smoking and Health, said the new report is designed as a wake-up call to the public and health care professionals.

"People are reporting symptoms through inhalation, eye exposure and skin exposure," McAfee said. "E-cigarettes have a reservoir of liquid that has a heavy concentration of nicotine."

The devices are battery-powered and also contain an atomizer with propylene glycol that can produce a vapor.

Among 9,839 poison control calls with information about severity of injuries, those from e-cigarettes were more likely to report adverse health effects.

Nicotine, a highly addictive substance that targets the brain, can cause serious cardiovascular side effects, such as dramatic palpitations and racing heart rate. The devices, however, are marketed as safe.

Dr. Shahriour Andaz, director of thoracic oncology at South Nassau Communities Hospital in Oceanside, N.Y., said although his work largely involves patients who've developed lung cancer caused by conventional cigarettes, the culprit in their addiction, he added, was also nicotine.

"There is 1 milligram of nicotine in a conventional cigarette, but an e-cigarette can have amounts several times as high," he said.

In high concentrations, nicotine can be deadly, say experts who warned Thursday that guidelines need to be set on the amount in e-cigarettes, which are highlighted as smoking-cessation devices. Nicotine patches and gum are regulated by the FDA.

The nicotine amount varies with the e-cigarette maker. The lowest concentrations are about 1.5 percent per volume but some sell e-liquids online with higher concentrations.

Brandon Rockstad, manager of Vapor World

in Midwest City, Okla., sells e-liquids and nicotine. He said the amount of nicotine in his products varies, depending on the purchaser.

Vapor World can sell a gallon or more of e-liquids to brick and mortar stores, Rockstad said. "For personal use we do not sell products with a high nicotine concentration," he said.

The leader of an e-cigarette trade organization — Smoke Free Alternatives Trade Association — said in a statement she supports child-safety measures.

"We are aware of reports of increased calls to poison control centers that involve e-liquids and support federal age restrictions on the purchase of vapor products, childproof caps and proper labeling to safeguard against accidental ingestion," said Cynthia Cabrera, executive director.

Dave Dobbins, chief operating officer of the Legacy Foundation in Washington, an anti-smoking research group, said unless the FDA enacts guidelines — as it said it will do — e-cigarette poisonings will only increase.

"When you buy these products you don't even know how much nicotine is in them ... it's the wild, wild West out there," he said.

Mother who lost baby wants to find right words for grief

DEAR ABBY: My 1-year-old baby recently passed away. I have two other children, one with special needs. I find it irritating and not at all comforting when people tell me that "at least I have other children and that I should concentrate on them."

How can I politely tell them that I have never stopped taking care of my other children, and that nothing eases the pain of burying your child? — MOURNING MY BABY IN PUERTO RICO

DEAR MOURNING: Please accept my deepest sympathy for the loss of your child. My heart goes out to you.

While I can imagine that you might be tempted to lash out at these insensitive individuals, I hope you realize their comments are made out of ignorance. Sometimes it isn't what you say as much as how you say it. In a case like this, exactly what you have written to me would be an appropriate response as long as it is said calmly and without anger.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter was married for eight years before divorcing her cheating husband. They have two children. When my daughter found out about the affair, she was inconsolable. The girlfriend actually phoned her and said, "Why are you so upset? Everyone cheats!"

Now, two years later, the girlfriend is pregnant. My daughter would like a paternity test done before the kids are introduced to this new child. She thinks it would be harmful if they are introduced to a new half-sibling who may later prove to belong to another man. ("Everyone cheats"?)

What do you think about this? Is it wrong for my daughter to want proof that this is her ex's baby? He feels certain he's the father, but he also knows the other woman has kept in touch with her ex-boyfriend. — JUST WONDERING IN CONNECTICUT

JEANNE PHILLIPS

DEAR ABBY

DEAR JUST WONDERING: If your daughter's ex wants to claim paternity without a paternity test, there is no legal basis I can think of to prevent him from being considered the father. While your daughter has reason to be angry at her ex and to dislike the woman with whom he cheated, she can't prevent her children from seeing the baby if he wants them to.

(P.S. You'd think her ex would WANT to know for certain, but it takes all kinds ...) DEAR ABBY: What is the best way to answer your children when they ask if you have taken drugs? I smoked a little marijuana back in college, but stopped before graduation and I haven't done it since.

My children are about ready to go to high school. I have avoided answering their questions in the past, but I know I'll have to say something sometime. What? — TONGUE-TIED IN ANYTOWN, USA

DEAR TONGUE-TIED: I don't believe in lying to children. When you are asked, tell them you tried it in college, didn't like it and considered it a waste of time. Then tell them that as long as they are living under your roof, using ANY illegal substance will not be condoned.

HOROSCOPES

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, April 7, 2014:

This year you will have plenty of opportunities to deal with your anger. You will learn to turn this uncomfortable feeling into a positive one for you and those around you. Your willingness to look within yourself will be important. If you are single, you could be passionately drawn to a Libra. The fireworks will be incredible, but the fighting also could be intense. Ask yourself if you really want a relationship like this. If you are attached, you could be forging a new path where both you and your sweetie express your deeper feelings. Rather than judge your partner, learn to empathize and understand where he or she is coming from. CANCER can drag you down. ARIES (March 21-April 19) You could find others to be demanding. Know that you can't make everyone happy all the time. A loved one or associate will let you know this fact in no uncertain terms. Explaining can only go so far with someone who does not want to listen. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Keep communication flowing. You might want to consider what is said without personalizing the comment. You could feel as if you have no say with a volatile person in your life. It might be good to go to the gym to work out some stress.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be open to a different method of handling your finances. You might get some important tips that could help you in the future. Be more forthright in your dealings with others. A loved one could cause some problems.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You could be facing a problem you don't want to deal with, but you will have little choice. You might not be sure what to say. Honor a change with a friend or loved one. You could find some of this person's views challenging at best.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You might be walking right into a hornet's nest without even realizing it. You could have very little to do with the situation, yet you could be the one being blamed. Listen to your instincts. Use care with flaring tempers. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Emphasize the positives, even if all you are hearing are the negatives. The more you detach from this situation, the better your choices will be. Honor a need for a change, but know that you don't have to act just yet.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You might want to try a new approach or find a different way of handling a problem. Clearly you do not have all the answers. Still, you must take a bigger role in what is going on. Be sensitive to a boss who could be off-kilter.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Detach from any volatile situation. You might be angrier than you realize. Express your side of a disagreement by saying what you want. A friend could be very difficult to deal with. Don't be petty.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Your creativity will be pushed to the max when dealing with a changeable situation. The issue could involve a friend or loved one. You will need to renegotiate what was previously thought to be written in stone.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You defer to others easily and probably too quickly. Honor a change within yourself, and keep in mind that a situation could get better with time. You seem to be less attached to a personal matter than you realize. Let go and relax.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Try to stay away from controversy. Buckle down and get your work done. Others might share a lot of their feelings. Detach and gain a new perspective. It is important for you to stay neutral.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Your imagination and creativity will take you to a new level. A partner suddenly might be very short and irritable. Be smart and walk away from an argument. Understand that a money matter needs to be handled. Realize what you want here.

Opening lead — five of hearts.

East's queen with the ace and immediately cashed the K-Q of diamonds, a move that later proved very costly.

When East showed out on the second diamond, declarer led a club to the jack, losing to East's queen. East returned a club to the king and ace, and West exited with the jack of diamonds to dummy's ace. Coon then threw West back on lead by conceding a diamond to the ten.

This time, Rohowsky exited with a heart, dummy's nine forcing East's king. East then returned a heart to the jack, removing dummy's last entry. As a result, Coon was unable to benefit from the lucky fall of West's queen of spades, and he finished with only two spades, two hearts, three diamonds and a club trick for down one.

At the other table, where North, Jochen Bitschene, wound up as declarer at three notrump, the U.S. East led the heart queen. Declarer took dummy's ace and immediately led a club to the jack and East's queen. East played the K-7 of hearts, declarer winning with the jack and leading a club to the king and ace. West then cashed his good heart and exited with the queen of spades.

The appearance of the spade queen gave Bitschene his ninth trick, since he still had the diamond ace as an entry to his jack of spades. The result gave the Germans a 12-IMP pickup and a 2-IMP lead in the match.
