DCF funding a thorny issue in Tallahassee

Staff and Wire Report

MIAMI — In the wake of dozens of child abuse-related deaths, Florida lawmakers are considering a bill that would add 400 new child protective investigators, but critics worry it overlooks funding to treat mental health and substance abuse problems that are at the root of most child deaths.

Gov. Rick Scott has proposed giving the Department of Children and Families $32 million to hire more investigators in hopes of reducing caseloads and high turnover rates in the agency. The bill also seeks to professionalize the workforce, employing higher caliber staff with experience in social work. Scott also wants an $8 million increase for sheriff's offices handling abuse cases.

The governor's proposal would also fund two-person teams to investigate cases involving the 20,000 most at-risk children. DCF launched a pilot program using two-person teams in Miami-Dade and Polk counties and says it's resulted in faster and more thorough investigations.

Florida is failing in its efforts to prevent child abuse deaths because welfare authorities aren't picking up warning signs in at-risk families, according to a report released last fall. The report reviewed the deaths of 40 children and concluded that welfare authorities overlooked danger signs like parental drug abuse or domestic violence. Most children who died were younger than 5.

Cops brace for human trafficking

The Lake County Sheriff's Office made its first arrest last week for human trafficking. Members of the county's Human Trafficking Task Force said it illustrates the organization is remaining vigilant in addressing the issue before it becomes a major problem.

"We want to make sure it does not become a problem in this county," said Capt. Todd English, co-chair of the task force. "It is very important to prepare, be aware and trained on how to handle it."

STORY HIGHLIGHTS

- There are 27 million people enslaved worldwide.
- Florida ranks third in the nation for trafficking activity.
- Lake has 10 cases under investigation and has seen 10 other potential victims in the last three years.

Sources: Lake County Human Trafficking Task Force, National Human Trafficking Resource Center and Haven of Lake and Sumter Counties Inc.

Last week's undercover operation resulted in the rescue of a 14-year-old victim of human trafficking and the arrests of 44 alleged prostitutes, pimps and "johns."

The suspect, Gregory Lionel Foster, 28, is accused of abducting the 14-year-old from a gas station on April 9 and trying to force her to have sex with a man for money at an Orlando home and raping her himself before taking her to the motel where he thought another customer awaited, according to an arrest affidavit.

The task force is currently investigating an estimated 10 possible human trafficking cases in the county, representing a relatively low number in comparison to larger cities such as Orlando.

Lake bans sale of synthetic marijuana

LIVI STANFORD | Staff Writer

Lake County commissioners unanimously passed an ordinance Tuesday banning the sale of synthetic marijuana countywide.

Health experts and the Lake County Sheriff's Office have warned that the drug has an adverse effect on children.

Commonly marketed as potpourri, incense or bath salts — and packaged in colorful cellophane wrappers with brand names like Mr. Happy — synthetic marijuana is frequently sold in convenience stores and smoke shops. Health experts say the use of the substances can cause psychotic episodes.

Also marketed as bath salts, drugs are sold over-the-counter and can be swallowed, snorted, smoked or injected to obtain a euphoric effect.

Other drugs are sold as "incense," with exotic names like K2, Black Mamba and Spice. Other brand names

Nonprofits, clubs benefit from Bikefest fundraisers

The Deaf and Hearing Services of Lake and Sumter Counties was able to provide 30 hearing aids to area residents who could not afford them as a direct result of funds raised by volunteers at Leesburg Bikefest last year, the nonprofit organization confirmed.

"We so appreciate the opportunity to participate in Bikefest," said Amy Johnson, executive director of the organization, which provides support and advocacy services for the deaf and hard of hearing.

Johnson said the organization has participated in Bikefest for the last five years and, in 2013, raised $9,500.

"Bikefest is the largest fundraising event for the Leesburg Partnership and subsidizes the majority of other events they produce in downtown Leesburg," according to its website. "Bikefest is also a main fundraiser for many local charities."

Banker Steve Knowles, a board member of the Leesburg Partnership, recently told the Leesburg City Commission that "it gave me considerable pride to know that some 40 nonprofit organizations located in Leesburg received $170,000 in funding as a direct relationship to Bikefest."

The First Baptist Church of Leesburg has also been participating in the event for the last five years, raising funds for the church's youth camps in the summer.

"We park bikes for donations," said Chris Wegmann, youth pastor at the church.

As a result, Wegmann said they are able to send at least 30 students to camps, where they reach out to inner city kids and

Ex-Florida LG didn't report income

GARY FINEOUT
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Former Lt. Gov. Jennifer Carroll failed to report thousands of dollars she earned from a veterans charity that was accused of running an illegal gambling operation, newly released documents show.

Carroll abruptly resigned in March 2013 after state investigators questioned the work she did for Allied Veterans of the World before she ran with Gov. Rick Scott. She denied any wrongdoing, but for more than a year there has been no public explanation of why she was initially interviewed by investigators.

Documents obtained by The Associated Press from the Florida Department of Law Enforcement show Carroll's company was paid nearly $100,000 by Allied Veterans in 2009 and 2010 for her work as a public relations consultant. Most of the money was then transferred to her personal banking account.

But Carroll, who was a state legislator at the time, did not report earning that much on either mandatory financial disclosure forms she filed with the state or on her federal income tax filings. She changed them only after she was questioned by state investigators about it.

executive officer of Big Bend Community Based Care, said the bill is well intended but doesn't deal with mental health and substance abuse issues at the core of changing parents' behavior and ultimately reducing abuse.

"There's some good provisions in here but it's largely administrative. It does not change the policy framework of the state of Florida to get at the root issues," Watkins told a House committee recently.

It's a safe bet the bill will pass, but it's unclear what the funding will be. The House has approved Scott's proposal and Senate leaders are working on their own.

Hiring more investigators will likely lead to an increase in the number of children placed in foster care. That's why DCF's foster care contractors are seeking $7.6 million to hire 103 caseworkers and an additional $17.8 million for safety management services.

"If you add 400 investigators but don't provide additional funding for services you will have an influx of children in need of services, without any resources to provide those services," said Kurt Kelly, president of the Florida Coalition for Children, which represents the contractors.

In other news from Tuesday's session:

■ VOUCHERS: A proposal to expand Florida's main private school voucher program advanced in the Legislature. A Senate committee agreed to include the expansion of the voucher program in a bill that would help parents of disabled children get additional educational services.

The Florida House has made expanding the voucher program a top priority and earlier this month voted in favor of it.

Florida already has a popular program where nearly 60,000 students from low-income families attend private schools. State figures show that more than 80 percent of the schools participating are religious.

■ MEDICAL ASSISTANTS: Florida physicians would be allowed to double the number of certified medical assistants under their supervision under legislation that passed the House.

The bill (HB 1275) would allow most doctors to supervise eight assistants instead of four.

■ ALLOWING CRAFT BEER GROWLERS: Gov. Rick Scott supports the legalization of the refillable half-gallon beer containers known as growlers among craft beer lovers.

But Scott spokeswoman Jackie Schutz said Tuesday whether he signs a bill to allow 64-ounce growler sales at Florida craft breweries is still to be determined.

Breweries can now sell unlimited gallon and quart growlers, but Florida's odd container laws prohibit the half-gallon size that's the industry standard in 47 states. Legalizing the half-gallon size is the top priority this legislative session for the booming craft beer industry.

■ MARIJUANA: A proposal that would decriminalize a form of marijuana that could dramatically reduce seizures in children with a rare form of epilepsy is on its way to the Senate floor.

appear to target children, like Scooby Snacks, Mad Hatter and Joker.

Commissioner Sean Parks pushed for the ordinance after hearing about a child who went into cardiac arrest from using the drug.

"I think this is a very necessary step to protect our children in Lake County," Parks said. "This synthetic stuff is pure poison."

Commissioner Jimmy Conner said the ordinance was critical.

"There are always people trying to get around the law to do something that is bad for kids," he said.

"They are trying to make a buck at the deadly expense of our kids," Parks added.

Sheriff Gary Borders applauded the move, stating he hopes as a result the drug will be taken off the shelves.

"It will help prevent the stores from selling it countywide," he said. "It is going to make it a safer community for everyone, especially our children."

A recent 2012 Florida Youth Substance Abuse Survey of ninth to 12th graders in Lake and Sumter counties found that 5.8 percent of Lake and 4.2 percent of Sumter students reported synthetic marijuana use in the past 30 days.

Those who violate the ordinance will face a civil fine of $500 for the first offense and $1,000 for any repeat violation within five years of a previous offense, according to the ordinance.

Hillsborough, Broward, Miami-Dade, Hernando and Pasco counties have instituted similar rules, and officials claim these laws have been effective in deterring the problem.

west increases the potential for human trafficking. The truck stop in Wildwood could also be a catalyst for trafficking.

"Based on my training experience, all truck stops should not be ignored as a potential location where drugs are bought and sold as well as women," he said.

Currently, the task force receives no federal funding and two detectives in the homicide and special victims unit are investigating human trafficking cases as part of the task force.

English said he hopes to apply for federal funding.

"It comes with building your task force and the infrastructure of your task force that federal grants require," he said. "At this point we take this task force on essentially as an added job responsibility."

Human trafficking is considered a form of modern day slavery by experts. Victims of human trafficking are subjected to force, fraud or coercion for the purpose of sexual exploitation or forced labor, according to the Florida state statute 787.06 on human trafficking.

About 27 million people are enslaved worldwide, according to the National Human Trafficking Resource Center.

In 2011, the resource center ranked Florida third in the nation in the number of calls received by the center's human trafficking hotline.

Representatives from the Department of Children and Families and Lake County Shared Services Network in 2012 approached Sheriff Gary Borders about starting the task force.

"Lake County is a wonderful example of getting ahead of the curve, being smart and getting prepared," said Kimberly Grabert, statewide human trafficking prevention director for the Florida Department of Children and Families and the task force's chairwoman. "We are building a continuum of care. We are working closely with leaders, providers and therapists across the state."

Grabert said many of the victims of human trafficking "are desperate to be part of something and to be loved."

As a result, they are often drawn into sexual or labor exploitation when they meet a pimp who tells the victim she "is wonderful, beautiful and they will provide the clothing and food for them," said LCSO Detective Daniel Morales, an investigator for the task force.

"The juvenile or adult then goes back with that trafficker and soon afterward becomes hooked on drugs," Morales said.

Then, the trafficker will tell the victim they must repay them for providing food and clothing through prostitution, he added.

What we know about this population is there is a "high rate of them being exposed to violence in their household," Grabert said. "They are seeking relationships with people they are lacking in their personal lives. It fills the void for the child and we have to fill that void: sometimes it is their therapist or child protective investigator."

Statewide, Grabert said she is seeing quite a bit of gang activity in which victims are sold by siblings.

The hardest part of many cases is getting victims to comply and keeping them safe, task force officials said.

"When law enforcement recovers them, they disappear," Grabert said. "It is a hard population, but they desperately need our help."

The biggest challenge, Morales said, is many don't feel they are victims of human trafficking.

"A lot of people in that lifestyle don't understand the meaning of human trafficking," he said.

English said it is much harder to get victims to come forward.

"They won't cooperate with us in the interview process to give us what law enforcement needs to have probable cause to hold their traffickers," he said. "They can be difficult cases as far as to investigate, bring to conclusion and bring to an arrest."

Kelly Smallridge, executive director of Haven of Lake and Sumter Counties Inc., a shelter, which provides emergency, long-term shelter and counseling for victims of domestic violence, said about 10 potential victims of human trafficking have come through her shelter in the last three years.

All of the victims were from southeast Asia and Russia and did not speak English.

Smallridge said she would never forget the 21-year-old girl from Asia who was in the hospital for six weeks after being beaten severely by a trafficker.

"She finally healed and went back to Thailand," she said.

Many traffickers take advantage of the fact that the victims often don't speak English, Smallridge said, threatening many with deportation if they do not do what the traffickers wanted.

Morales said he is encouraged that the Florida Legislature has implemented stricter penalties for those charged with human trafficking.

"It is now a felony," he said. "It makes it more difficult to get out of jail."

Stiffer laws could be on the horizon. If passed, HB 1019 would "prohibit minors from working in an adult theater, remove the statute of limitations for human trafficking violations and increase certain penalties relating to the trafficking of children," among other things.

The bond for Foster, who was arrested and charged last week with human trafficking, is $200,000.

Gabriel Fielder, director of the Leesburg High School Band, said parents and students take part in the event and help by parking cars, contributing 1,680 volunteer hours.

The funds raised make up 15 percent of the band's income, he said.

As a result, Fielder said they are able to provide students with instruments, private lessons and uniforms.

"It is an important part of fundraising for the band," he said.

"Bikefest has always been a successful form of fundraising for many local civic groups and charities," the Leesburg Partnership's website states. "It is not uncommon to see a church youth group or Cub Scout pack parking cars or selling flags to raise money to offset their annual organizational costs."

Last year, five churches, two schools, a half-dozen clubs and groups like Leesburg Chamber of Commerce, Beacon College and the Leesburg Center for the Arts, also raised funds during Bikefest.

Tavares, Eustis & Gulf Railroad officials announced that service between Tavares and Mount Dora is scheduled to begin May 3.

Staff Report

The Orange Blossom Cannonball will begin serving Mount Dora again after a five-year absence.

Tavares, Eustis & Gulf Railroad officials have announced that service between Tavares and Mount Dora is scheduled to begin May 3, according to a press release from the railroad. The last tourist train to serve the city halted operations on Dec. 31, 2009.

"The train returning to Mount Dora will have a tremendous impact," Mount Dora Mayor Cathy Hoechst said in an email. "We're looking forward to welcoming even more visitors to our town now that the train is back. We're all very excited."

The initial schedule calls for three round-trips between Tavares and Mount Dora. Departures from Mount Dora will be at 11 a.m., 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. Departures from Tavares will be noon, 2 p.m. and 3 p.m.

The railroad will maintain depot facilities in both cities. The Mount Dora depot will be at 150 West Third Ave. The gift shop/ticket agency is housed in a 1935 former Seaboard Air Line American Flyer passenger coach.

The Tavares depot is in a new facility in Wooton Park.

Tuesday through Friday trains will be pulled by a 1941 GE center cab diesel

Sections of the two top decks of Leesburg's 10-year-old parking garage are falling apart and city officials want to know why.

"I'm concerned what might be the root cause of the problem and I hope that it is as simple as a minor maintenance issue," Leesburg Public Works Director D.C. Maudlin said Tuesday. "It could be a simple routine maintenance issue, based on the way the deck was put together, or it could be as serious as a column or two settling at a different rate than the other columns, and then we would have to go in and figure out a way to shore that up.

"It could be fairly extensive, but at this point we don't know, but I am anxious to find out."

The third and fourth decks of the four-deck garage next to the city library has been cordoned off to the public, including the Leesburg Bikefest crowd this weekend, until an engineering firm completes a thorough analysis to see what has caused 19 holes to appear in the concrete floor panels.

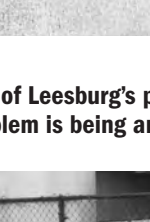
Homeless beatings net prison terms

Associated Press

A St. Petersburg man who produced and sold videos of scantily-clad women beating up homeless men has received a seven-year prison sentence, while one of those women, from Fruitland Park, was given three years.

Jeffrey Williams, 61, was sentenced Monday after he was found guilty of aggravated abuse of a disabled adult for the taped beating of a developmentally disabled schizophrenic. Circuit Judge Keith Meyer also sentenced 27-year-old Zuzu Vargo to three years for administering the beating.



VARGO

In the video, Vargo punched the groaning man in the ribs and face and then kicked and punched him after he fell to the ground.

Williams had argued that the victim had signed a waiver. Williams had produced about 1,000 similar videos and sold them to sadomasochism aficionados. He usually of Corrections.

Hendrix and his cousin, Scott, were arrested for breaking into a house in 1990. Scott accepted a plea deal that would keep him out of prison if he testified against Hendrix, who was offered a plea agreement of four years imprisonment and five years of probation.

However, on Aug. 27, 1990, the day before his court date, officials say Hendrix went to Scott's home in Sorrento and shot him in the head. His wife, Michelle, tried to intervene and Hendrix slashed her throat.

The deaths orphaned the couple's 5-month-old daughter.

All of the detectives with the Lake County Sheriff's Office who worked the case are no longer with the department and could not be reached for comment. But Ken Adams, a sheriff's detective at the time of the murder, who now works for the State Attorney's Office, said it was a case he remembers.

"It was a big case" Adams said.

Hendrix will be the sixth death row inmate to die from a controversial new killer cocktail after dwindling supplies of pentobarbital, a sedative, led to the drug being replaced last year with midazolam hydrochloride, which critics said was unproven and have filed lawsuits.

Jessica Cary, a spokeswoman with DOC, defended the new procedure.

"The department is confident in its readiness to perform our duty to carry out the sentence of the court each time in a humane and dignified manner," said Cary in an emailed response Tuesday.

William Frederick Happ, 51, executed last year after being convicted in Lake County after his Citrus County murder trial was moved here, was the first to be killed with the new drug.

paid the homeless men $50 to be beaten and the women $300 to administer it.

"We're not in the business of hurting people ... we're in the business of a fantasy enactment for a certain subset of the population," Williams said. "I deeply regret the pain and the anguish that we caused."

But prosecutors and the judge doubted he could not tell that the man was mentally disabled and incapable of volunteering to be beaten.

"I find it completely incredible that you would not have picked up within the first few seconds how substantially he was impaired," Meyer said.

Vargo, who lived on Brook Road in Fruitland Park when she was arrested last year, tearfully told the judge she did not know the man was disabled.

Williams and Vargo are awaiting trial for the alleged beating of another disabled man.

Communications Director Joyce Ross.

"We welcome pilots to come fly in and check the place out, especially people who haven't been here before. They fly in on their own schedule," Ross said. "Unless they want to participate in the competition, they're flying in and out all day long."

The first recorded seaplane flight in Tavares took place in 1914, according to a press release, and Saturday's event will also be celebrating 100 years of seaplanes in Tavares.

Saturday's event will have someone re-enacting the pilot of that flight, Tony Jannus, who will be talking about the original flight and flying in that era, according to Ross.

The event will also have historical exhibits and memorabilia and, weather permitting, flying demonstrations of a typical seaplane from the early 1900s, according to Ross and a press release.

Tavares Economic Development Director Bill Neron said the event will also have a one-third scale replica model of the plane that flew in 1914.

A seaplane competition will begin at noon and the competitions include fastest takeoff, fastest landing, spot landing and a competition where grapefruits are dropped from the planes trying to hit targets, Ross said.

She added the public will have opportunities to get up close to the seaplanes and to talk to the pilots.

"You don't get that opportunity in too many airports anymore," Ross said.

Ross said the event gives the city the opportunity to attract pilots to the city.

"It's an opportunity to reach out to pilots that have not been here before and want to know what it's all about," Ross said.

The number of planes that show up for the fly-in is usually influenced by weather, Ross said.

"Sometimes we can have up to 65 or more, sometimes it's only 25, depending on the weather," Ross said.

She added the event would likely get a boost in attendance from Bikefest going on in Leesburg.

The seaplane event takes place every spring and every fall.

The Wooton Park boat launch will be closed on Saturday.

Meanwhile, Chapter 534 of the Experimental Aircraft Association in Leesburg also will be having a pancake breakfast and lunch from 9 a.m. through 2 p.m. this Saturday at Leesburg International Airport and is encouraging people to fly in, according to a press release.

locomotive. Saturday and Sunday trains will be pulled by a 1907 2-6-0 wood-burning steam locomotive.

All trains will feature vintage coaches with snack service on board.

Several companies have tried to serve Mount Dora with tourist trains in recent years. The Mount Dora and Lake Eustis Railroad took over operation of the former Orlando and Mount Dora Railway about 15 years ago, leasing about seven miles of track from Florida Central Railroad.

Then, in 2005, Inland Lakes Railway, later known as Florida Rail Adventures, had a tourist train operating between the towns of Mount Dora, Tavares, Eustis, Lake Jem and Orlando. That ended in 2009.

Since then, some 6,000 railroad ties have been replaced, new crossings installed and ballast added to bring the railroad track up to federal standards.

The Tavares, Eustis & Gulf Railroad began operating between Tavares and Lake Jem in October 2011. Since then, more than 58,000 guests have ridden the train.

Steam train tickets are $35 for adults and $24 for children ages 4-12, while diesel train tickets are $25 for adults and $16 for children those same ages.

The company's steam locomotive #2 and its vintage cars have been featured in the movies "3:10 To Yuma," "True Grit" and "Appaloosa." The train was recently used in the feature film "Walt Before Mickey," set to release in June.

Reservations can be made at www.orangeblossomcannonball.com or by calling 352-742-7200, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday.

of the welded metal connectors — used to hold the concrete sections of the garage decks together — are now missing, and if the problem areas will require minor or major repair.

"I'm very interested in finding out what caused the problem that we have on the third deck and we want to get it repaired as quickly as possible," Maudlin said.

The engineering firm of Jones Edmunds and Associates Inc. is doing a detailed assessment of the garage following the firm's initial two-day study where the city was informed that it was OK for residents to continue to park in the first deck and half of the second deck, while the third and fourth levels remain closed off.

It was on the third deck where the Daily Commercial counted 16 see-through holes in the concrete sections on Tuesday, along with an additional three see-through gaps spotted on the fourth deck.

Asked if there were concerns about a sinkhole, and Maudlin said the engineering firm did not mention it as an issue.

"They did not say anything about sinkholes, but they did say there was a concern," he said. "The decks are supported by a number of very large columns and if those columns are settling at a different rate, it can cause stress that is on the (concrete) panels and that could be the problem."

Maudlin said most of the problems appear to be in one area "so it could be a very localized problem."

City officials were initially alerted to the problem about three weeks ago by a resident who noted some of the support pieces of the parking garage's concrete panels didn't look right or appeared to be broken.

The entire garage was closed off as a result, and the lower portions were reopened after the engineering firm gave its initial assessment and noted the lower 1½ deck areas were OK and could still be used.

"The only caveat is if we were to hit some very high winds, with hurricane warnings for example, we would go ahead and close the garage entirely," Maudlin said.

"And that would be for a safety precaution if there were high winds," added Leesburg spokesman Robert Sargent.

The city officials said they do not know when the detailed assessment of the parking garage will be finished, yet Maudlin said he told the firm to do it as quickly as possible.

Trooper injured after crashing into Mack truck

MILLARD K. IVES | Staff Writer
millardives@dailycommercial.com

A Florida Highway Patrol trooper was sent to Leesburg Regional Medical Center Tuesday morning after running into a Mack truck.

According to a FHP sergeant on the scene, trooper Richard Taylor was heading west on State Road 44, near Leesburg Municipal Industrial Park, when he struck the back of an 18-wheel flatbed truck that pulled out in front of him from Satellite Court.

Taylor, a Lake County resident, was heading to a hearing at the Sumter County courthouse in Bushnell.

The collision left debris scattered across the road, the back of the truck frame damaged and the front end of the Charger crushed.

Taylor was sent to a hospital with minor injuries for a medical evaluation.

Troopers were still investigating the accident at 11 a.m. as Leesburg police rerouted traffic.

Richard Vincent LaBelle, 60, of Sorrento, the driver of the flatbed, will be cited for violation of right-a-way, according to the FHP sergeant leading the investigation.

Reaction divided on affirmative action ruling

ED WHITE
Associated Press

DETROIT — The U.S. Supreme Court decision Tuesday upholding the state's ban on using race as a factor in college admissions comes as the University of Michigan has been taking steps to reach out to minorities and make them feel welcome on campus.

Blacks made up just 4.6 percent of undergraduate students last fall, a figure that has dropped since voters in 2006 said race couldn't be used as a factor in the selection process. Nearly eight years later, the Supreme Court said the Michigan constitutional amendment will stand.

"To take away the rights of minorities is a shocking decision," said George Washington, a Detroit lawyer who challenged the law. "With this, and the voting rights decision last year, it's clear the Supreme Court is undoing the rights gained by blacks and Latino people in the 1960s and 1970s."

The university declined to make officials available for an interview. It released a statement from President Mary Sue Coleman, who said the school would use "every legal tool at our disposal to bring together a diverse student body."

Asians make up 13 percent of undergraduates, well above the state's Asian population, and Hispanics represent 4.4 percent.

AP PHOTO

Jose Alvarenga, center, and reads a statement on the campus of the University of Michigan regarding the Supreme Court's ruling on Tuesday in Ann Arbor, Mich.

Leaders of the Black Student Union have proposed ways to increase black enrollment and enhance the campus for minorities. They include lower housing costs for low-income students, better promotion of emergency financial assistance and improvements at a multicultural center.

The group wants black enrollment to be 10 percent, which is closer to the state's 14 percent black population. The university last week said it's had good conversations with the group and is upgrading the multicultural center while a site for an additional center is being explored.

The university also is making money available for transportation between the campus and surrounding communities when buses aren't available.

Jennifer Gratz of Fort Myers, was involved in the campaign for the constitutional amendment and said the Supreme Court decision is a "great victory" for Michigan voters. She sued over the university's racial preferences in 1997 after being rejected for admission.

Gratz, who is white, recently challenged a black Detroit high school senior to a debate about affirmative action after Brooke Kimbrough appeared at a rally to complain about not getting accepted to the University of Michigan with a 3.6 grade-point average and a 23 on the ACT.

Attorney General Bill Schuette, who defended the amendment at the nation's top court, praised the 6-2 decision.

FBI investigates suspected serial child molester

STEVE KARNOWSKI
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — The FBI asked for the public's help Tuesday to identify at least 90 potential victims of a suspected child predator who worked at 10 American and other international schools abroad for more than four decades before committing suicide last month in Minnesota.

William James Vahey, 64, killed himself in Luverne on March 21, the FBI said. That was two days after agents in Houston filed for a warrant to search a computer thumb drive that belonged to Vahey, a U.S. citizen with residences in London and Hilton Head Island, S.C. An employee of the American Nicaraguan School in Managua, where Vahey had recently taught ninth-grade world history and geography, gave the drive to the U.S. Embassy there.

VAHEY

The storage device contained pornographic images of at least 90 boys, ages 12 to 14, who appeared to be drugged and unconscious, the FBI said. The agency's spokeswoman in Houston, Special Agent Shauna Dunlap, told The Associated Press that investigators suspect all of the boys in the images were students of Vahey's, going back to 2008, and that he had molested all of them.

"When confronted about the images by a school administrator, Vahey confessed that he was molested as a child and had preyed on boys his entire life, giving them sleeping pills prior to the molestation," according to a statement posted prominently on the FBI's website, www.fbi.gov , with links for potential victims.

The photos were catalogued with dates and locations that corresponded with overnight field trips that Vahey had taken with students since 2008, but he had led students on such trips for his entire career, the FBI said.

"I'm concerned that he may have preyed on many other students prior to 2008," Special Agent Patrick Fransen of Houston said in the statement. "I've never seen another case where an individual may have molested this many children over such a long period of time."

The director general of the American Nicaraguan School, Gloria Doll, said by phone from Managua that Vahey was "famous for wanting to lead student experience trips." She said that's why several of his previous schools hired him.

Doll said that, as far as she knew, none of her students had been molested. Vahey started teaching at her school last August but had not led any trips for her school before the allegations surfaced. She said he had been due to take a group to a model United Nations event in the Dominican Republic the very next day.

"We realized we had probably been spared what was happening," Doll said.

Doll said Vahey's flash drive had been taken by his domestic employee, who returned it to the school and urged officials to take a look.

The FBI said Vahey was jailed for child molestation in California in 1969, but Doll said his arrest didn't turn up when the Nicaraguan school checked his background.

South Korea ferry toll tops 100

GILLIAN WONG and HYUNG-JIN KIM
Associated Press

JINDO, South Korea — For a moment there is silence in the tent where bodies from the ferry disaster are brought for identification. Then the anguished cries begin.

The families who line up here to view the decomposing bodies have not known for nearly a week whether they should grieve or not. Now that they know, they sound like they're being torn apart.

"How do I live without you? How will your mother live without you?" a woman cried out Tuesday.

She was with a woman who emerged from the tent crying and fell into a chair where relatives tried to comfort her. One stood above her and cradled her head in her hands, stroking her face.

"Bring back my daughter!" the woman cried, calling out her child's name in agony. A man rushed over, lifted her on his back and carried her away.

LEE JIN-MAN / AP

Messages wishing safe return of passengers aboard the sunken ferry Sewol hang with a Buddhism lotus decoration in Jindo, south of Seoul, South Korea on Tuesday.

The confirmed death toll from the April 16 disaster off South Korea's southern coast reached 113 on Tuesday, officials said, and about 190 people were still missing. Four crew members accused of abandoning the ship and failing to protect the passengers were arrested, three days after warrants were issued for the captain and two other crew.

The victims are overwhelmingly students of a single high school in Ansan, near Seoul. More than three-quarters of the 323 students are dead or missing, while nearly two-thirds of the other 153 people on board the ferry Sewol survived.

The number of corpses recovered has risen sharply since the weekend, when divers battling strong currents and low visibility were finally able to enter the submerged vessel.

Emergency task force spokesman Koh Myung-seok said bodies have mostly been found on the third and fourth floors of the ferry, where many passengers seemed to have gathered. Many students were housed in cabins on the fourth floor, near the stern of the ship, Koh said.

One by one, coast guard officers carried the newly arrived bodies covered in white sheets from a boat to a tent on the dock of Jindo island Tuesday.

The bodies are then driven in ambulances to two tents: one for men and boys, the other for women and girls. Families listen quietly outside as an official briefs them, then line up and file in. Only relatives are allowed inside.

Russian President Vladimir Putin chairs a Security Council meeting in the Kremlin in Moscow, Russia, on Tuesday.

Putin likely to ignore West on Ukraine

LYNN BERRY
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Since he took over Crimea, President Vladimir Putin has seen his popularity soar and his opposition fall silent. So when the U.S. vice president told Russia to defuse tensions in Ukraine, Putin had few reasons to listen.

Emboldened by the national euphoria over the annexation of Crimea, Putin has moved against the few remaining critical voices in Russia and further neutered the news media. On Tuesday, a court cleared the way for sending his most vocal critic to prison.

Opposition leader Alexei Navalny was found guilty of slandering a lawmaker and fined the equivalent of $8,400. As a result, he may be jailed during a trial in a second case that starts Thursday. If found guilty, he could be sent to prison.

Navalny was nearly jailed last summer, when he was running a high-profile mayoral campaign in Moscow, but his conviction brought thousands into the streets in protest. The Kremlin evidently calculated it would be better to allow him to run for mayor, but he surprised everyone by finishing a strong second with 27 percent of the vote.

But now Putin, with his approval rating at 80 percent, no longer appears willing to tolerate any criticism.

Chillingly, Putin has begun to cast his critics as "national traitors," an intimation that anyone who opposes the Kremlin is serving the interests of the West. He has compared Russians who oppose his aggressive actions in Ukraine to the Bolsheviks, who took advantage of Russia's defeat in World War I to stage their 1917 revolution.

Navalny, who for years has led a relentless effort to expose government corruption, wrote an opinion column for The New York Times last month that urged the U.S. to impose sanctions on Putin's closest friends as punishment for the takeover of Crimea. The next day, five of the nine people Navalny mentioned were hit.

He understood that the Kremlin would make him pay for taking delight in the sanctions. "Time to pack a bag for jail," said a post on his Twitter feed.

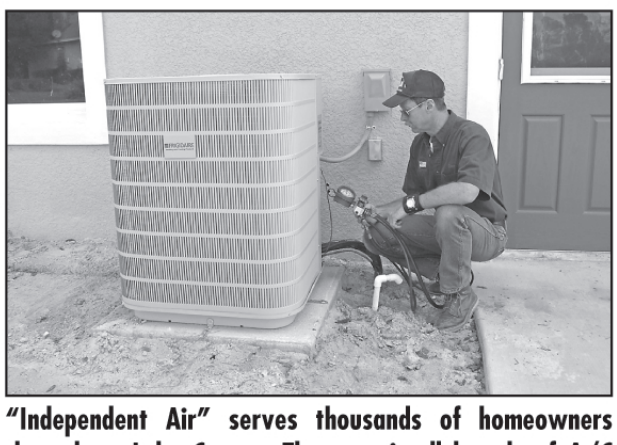
Quality A/C Service Provided At "Independent Air"

The air conditioning system in your home is certainly one of your largest and most vital investments. Shopping for and selecting the right A/C equipment deserves careful consideration.

Before deciding, I urge you to consult with a qualified A/C contractor. Here in Lake County, "Independent Air" (phone 352-357-9678) is widely regarded to be one of the most experienced and reputable air conditioning and heating companies in the area. Owners Janice and Chuck Munson and their terrific staff have been serving area residents for 20 years and "Independent Air" has grown to become one of the county's most successful and trusted A/C firms.



"Independent Air" serves thousands of homeowners throughout Lake County. They repair all brands of A/C equipment and provide outstanding service.

Unlike most places who sell just one or two brands, "Independent Air" sells and installs many different A/C brands. By remaining more independent and not being married to just one or two manufacturers, "Independent Air" is able to offer you a much broader range of A/C technology as well as newer emerging cost saving options and energy efficient systems designed to save you money over time. You'll love the responsive and caring service provided at "Independent Air". Their technicians repair and service all makes and models of A/C equipment, and many top custom home builders in the area use them. Call 352-357-9678. [CAC056944]

Q – My wife and I are looking for someone who will buy our car. Is there a local car dealer or anyone around here who buys used cars from the general public?

A – Yes there is. I encourage you to contact Brown's Auto Sales, located at 9942 County Road 44 in Leesburg, phone 352-365-1990. Now celebrating their 17th year, Brown's Auto Sales has grown to become one of the largest and most successful family owned used car dealerships in Lake County. No one offers lower prices and the selection of pre-owned cars and trucks they carry is outstanding. They have an excellent reputation in the community and are known for providing great customer service. Also, they're constantly buying cars from the general public. Brown's Auto Sales will pay you more for your used vehicle than anyone else. If you've got a car or truck you want to sell, make sure you contact them. They also have a second location at 11231 Hwy. 441 in Tavares, phone 352-508-5500.

Q – My wife and I are getting up in years, and neither of us hear as well as we once did. Where can we get our hearing tested? And who sells hearing aids at affordable prices?

A – I encourage you to contact dB Hearing Solutions. They have been awarded the Citizen's Choice Award as the area's best hearing aid center six times. This popular hearing aid center provides experienced care and service, and they'll test your hearing free of charge. If you are indeed suffering with a hearing loss, they can fit you the right hearing aids to correct the problem. dB Hearing Solutions has an excellent reputation and is one of the most trusted and best hearing aid offices in Central Florida. In addition, they have the lowest prices around on the world's most advanced hearing aids. You can save thousands of dollars going to dB Hearing Solutions. Plus, they provide free in-house service to everyone - regardless where you bought your hearing aids. dB Hearing Solutions has three offices in Central Florida including a location in Belleview – 12301 SE U.S. Hwy. 441 in Belleview (a half mile north of Market of Marion), phone 352-307-8371. Drone use creates privacy problems

It's simple to explain Google's and Facebook's sudden, intense interest in drone technology: An estimated 65 percent of the world's population today lacks Internet access, and flying robots probably can connect those 4.5 billion potential users to the rest of us.

Talk about expanding markets. Even the Silicon Valley mind boggles.

Engineers think they can mount lightweight broadband equipment on drones and keep them aloft for days, weeks or months to make connections from the remotest and least advanced regions of the world.

It's exciting. It's also another reminder that privacy concerns are reaching new highs, and drones can only drive them higher.

The valley is already struggling with worldwide consumer confidence. The National Security Agency is hacking into systems willy-nilly, while tech companies themselves resist telling consumers how their personal information is being used. And now come drones, which the Obama administration uses to kill people.

Silicon Valley's future hinges largely on whether it can rebuild the trust that smartphone, laptop and tablet users have in the privacy of tech products. If it can't, then the potential of the Internet will be limited.

Drones just up the ante. People won't want them buzzing their once-private backyards, cameras rolling, or tracking their movements based on smartphone signals.

President Barack Obama's use of drones to spy on and kill military targets doesn't make the job any easier. The sinister element goes beyond privacy concerns to physical safety — and setting limits will be difficult.

Google elevated snooping concerns in 2013 when it admitted intercepting data transmitted over household Wi-Fi networks while its car-mounted cameras were snapping street-view photos. If Google's cars were acquiring hundreds of gigabytes of information from users, imagine what drones equipped with transmission gear can do, flying 50,000 feet above cities around the clock.

Google needs to abandon its assertion that data transmitted over unencrypted Wi-Fi networks is fair game. Instead it should be leading the charge to make emails, photos and data more secure as the age of drones approaches.

Back in 2012, Obama set a 2015 deadline for the Federal Aviation Administration to come up with regulations for domestic use of drones. It will be none too soon; drones are expected to emerge as a $6 billion market in the next 10 years.

But the FAA's purview is safety. It is not likely to deal with privacy.

So we're back to our recurring theme: To protect its own industry, Silicon Valley needs to formulate privacy principles that reassure a legitimately worried public and keep the focus on the positive aspects of technology, including the latest drone advancements.

If it doesn't, consumers around the world may begin bailing on digital connections and commerce, trading convenience and connectivity to regain their privacy.

Faith in Obamacare and the government is misplaced

Cal Thomas

MCCLATCHY-TRIBUNE NEWS SERVICE

One of the reasons our political structure has become dysfunctional no matter which party is in power is that too many of us are living in the moment. The closest we get to history is the instant replay.

It is as if there is nothing the past can teach us; no wisdom that might be culled from those who have gone before. We buy guidebooks, or go online for information about countries or cities we plan to visit, trusting those who have been there to tell us the best places to stay, see and eat. When it comes to more momentous things, like health care, too many people believe government does best, regardless of historical and even contemporary evidence to the contrary.

The well-known quote "That government is best which governs least," often attributed to Henry David Thoreau, has been supplanted in our day by the notion that government is my keeper, I shall not want.

All of the promises about health care "reform" are proving dubious at best. The move from insurance exchanges to single payer to the eventual takeover of the health care industry will happen incrementally, but inevitably, unless Republicans win back control of government and have the courage to repeal and replace Obamacare with something better.

What should awaken apathetic Americans is a story in last week's The New York Times headlined "Cost of Treatment May Influence Doctors." The story said some of the country's largest medical groups are now suggesting that physicians consider cost when treating patients. The Times says a subtle shift is taking place within medicine as "doctors are starting to redefine their roles, from being concerned exclusively about individual patients to exerting influence on how health care dollars are spent."

All of the promises about health care "reform" are proving dubious at best. The move from insurance exchanges to single payer to the eventual takeover of the health care industry will happen incrementally, but inevitably, unless Republicans win back control of government and have the courage to repeal and replace Obamacare with something better.

In other words, are you "worth" being treated for cancer or other illnesses that can cost a lot of money? When government pressures health care providers to accept a utilitarian view of human life, it is a short step to government deciding whose life is worth living and whose is not.

When the dollar becomes almighty, the Almighty who creates life takes a back seat.

Promises that the misnamed Affordable Care Act would reduce costs are already being proved wrong. Health care spending is surging, according to another New York Times story. President Obama promised it would decline. We heard similar promises 50 years ago when Medicare was introduced. Politicians then promised costs would never exceed a certain level, which they did in very short order.

Critics of Obamacare say one of its objectives is to put insurance companies out of business. The UnitedHealth Group is one of the nation's largest. It recently reported lower earnings and said the health care law is partially responsible.

The "sound of inevitability," to quote from the film "The Matrix," can be heard across the Atlantic. The National Health Service (NHS) continues to sputter as its experiment in socialized medicine produces horror stories that could be replicated in the United States if government is ever allowed to control not only insurance, but treatment.

A UK Daily Mail story tells of a great-grandmother who died in agony at Manchester Royal Infirmary. She suffered from a perforated bowel and while she screamed in pain for help she was told a nearby doctor, who was playing on a computer, "wasn't on duty." Stories of neglect, long waits for treatment, insensitivity toward patients and unusual numbers of deaths in some UK hospitals are no longer exceptions, but are increasingly common.

Why do so many have faith in government when government has a track record of failure and incompetence in the many tasks it undertakes? How can government be expected to miraculously acquire competence when it comes to health care?

Real faith is based on something substantive, not false hope. Government is a false god that history proves can't deliver on most of its promises.

Lloyd becomes FAL's first football signee

Trevor Lloyd is typical of many students at First Academy of Leesburg.

He's respectful, particularly toward adults, always looks others in the eyes when speaking to them and is quick to offer a greeting and a firm handshake.

One thing, however, sets Lloyd apart from all other students who have attended the small Leesburg private school — he is the first student-athlete in school history to sign a National Letter of Intent to play football at the next level.

Lloyd inked a deal on Tuesday to attend Methodist University, a private school in Fayetteville, N.C., where he is expected to be a receiver for the Division III institution. He hopes to help the Monarchs improve on their 8-2 overall record in 2013, which included 6-1 mark in USA South Athletic Conference.

"This is a great feeling for me," Lloyd said after a signing ceremony in the library at First Academy of Leesburg. "It's always nice to be the first. The football program here is still very young, but it's building interest because of the success we've had.

Area teams set for regionals

FRANK JOLLEY | Staff Writer
frank.jolley@dailycommercial.com

The Eustis High School softball team is one of eight area squads preparing for regional play on Thursday as the Florida High School Athletic Association tournament begins.

Four teams — Eustis, Mount Dora Bible, Montverde Academy and The Villages — will host quarterfinal games, while the other four — East Ridge, South Lake, Tavares and South Sumter — will begin on the road.

Eustis is one of Lake County's two Class 5A teams in the postseason. The Panthers will host Satellite Beach Satellite at 7 p.m. at the Panther Den.

Tickets for all regional quarterfinal games are $7 — a price set by the FHSAA.

In Eustis' win in the district championship against Tavares, a 4-3 decision, Tamesha Glover had the game-winning hit in the seventh inning. Alexis Silvas got the win in the circle and helped her cause by scoring two runs.

Tavares' opening-round game will be at Rockledge. A victory by the Bulldogs and Panthers will set up a rematch in the regional semifinals next week in Eustis.

In Class 7A, East Ridge lost to Winter Park Lake Howell in the district championship game and will play at Gainesville Buchholz in a Region 1 contest. A victory against Gainesville Buchholz and a loss by Winter Park Lake Howell would give East Ridge a home game in the regional semifinals.

In Class 6A, South Lake will travel to Deltona. A win on Thursday, coupled with a win by Ocala Forest would set up a rematch between the district rivals in Ocala in the regional semifinals.

Three local teams in Class 4A advanced to regional play.

Miami's LeBron James (6) drives to the basket as Charlotte's Chris Douglas-Roberts, left, defends during Game 1 on Sunday of the teams' opening-round playoff series in Miami. Game 2 is today.

Heat looking for improvement in Game 2 against Bobcats

TIM REYNOLDS
Associated Press

MIAMI — LeBron James grabbed a basketball off a rack as he left the practice court Tuesday, then turned and took a 40-footer without so much as jumping.

Swish.

Seems like James and the Heat aren't worried about much right now. Their opponents in this Eastern Conference first-round series can't feel the same.

Charlotte star Al Jefferson's availability for Game 2 is clearly in some doubt, yet another indicator of how difficult it may be for the Bobcats to even up this series when they visit Miami again today.

"If Jefferson is laboring a little bit ... my approach, and our team's approach, shouldn't change," James said.

The Heat took Game 1 on Sunday, shaking off a slow start to win 99-88, increasing James' record to 9-0 in his postseason openers. Jefferson was hurt in the first quarter of that game, diagnosed with a plantar fascia strain in his left foot. He limped throughout the final three quarters, needed two injections to play, left in a walking boot

(to sign) is a deal."

Lloyd, like many players at First Academy of Leesburg, played multiple positions for the Eagles. On offense, he was primarily a receiver, while on the other side of the ball, he was a defensive back and a linebacker.

He played an integral role in leading First Academy to the Sunshine State Athletic Conference championship in 2013. Lloyd averaged 21.5 yards per catch, with three of his 13 grabs going for touchdowns.

Defensively, he had three interceptions and defended 17 passes. He returned one interception for a score.

Lloyd said he had "three or four" schools on his short list, but made his decision after his official visit to Methodist. He liked the philosophy of Monarchs coach C.J. Goss and the campus.

"It was an easy decision after seeing the school," Lloyd said. "I could see myself going there for four years. I was comfortable the whole time I was there and then when I talked to (Goss), everything seemed to fit what I wanted in a college.

"It's the right school for me."

Lloyd took time during his signing ceremony to thank his teammates and his family for his success. His parents, Leroy and Vernetta, sat beside him as he signed his National Letter of Intent.

"My parents kept me level-headed through the entire process," Lloyd said. "And my teammates, especially quarterbacks David (Elliott) and Byron (Masoline) made the difference for me. I don't think I'm signing today without the support of my teammates."

Lloyd also credited the atmosphere at First Academy of Leesburg for his success. A transfer from Leesburg High School prior to his senior year, Lloyd said First Academy's stiffer academic requirements and the unique athletic demands at the school made him a better person and player.

"We only had 17 players on our football roster last year, so conditioning was a much bigger deal," Lloyd said. "Coach (Sheldon Walker) stressed the we had to be in tip-top shape to do all the things we had to do, like playing different positions. I got to play more here than I did at Leesburg, but it was more than that.

"First Academy got me ready for college."

Walker added that Lloyd's signing proves the school's football program is growing by leaps and bounds. The Eagles have posted a 16-5 record over the past two six seasons.

He also said Lloyd's signing will not be the last.

"Our players are getting recognized now for their accomplishments in the classroom and on the field," Walker said. "This is the next step for us — getting players to the next level. We've had players in the past walk on and play college football. Coaches are starting to notice what we we're doing here and the fact that we produce true student-athletes.

"Trevor's signing is a landmark day for our school, but he's just the first of what I hope becomes a steady line of signees."

HEAT

and hasn't practiced since.

Jefferson wants to play. That doesn't guarantee anything.

"It's really going to be depending on his level of pain right before the game because in order to give him as much time as possible to heal, they're going to keep the walking boot on there," said Charlotte coach Steve Clifford, who isn't sure if Jefferson will participate in a walkthrough today. "My understanding is that we really won't know until they take it off and he tries to put more weight and pressure on his foot."

Miami has an injury concern as well, with starting point guard Mario Chalmers being held out of practice Tuesday because of a bruised shin.

Whether Jefferson plays or not, Miami expects Charlotte to get Kemba Walker even more involved in the offense, using his pick-and-roll strengths to try and create some issues for the Heat.

"It doesn't change what we're doing," Heat coach Erik Spoelstra said. "You hope that everybody's healthy. He was able to establish a big low-point presence in the first half. He'll still be able to do that if he's in the game."

Here's five things to know going into Game 2:

MKG NEEDS TIME

Keeping Michael Kidd-Gilchrist on the floor is critical for Charlotte. The Bobcats outscored Miami by eight when he played in Game 1. But he logged a season-low 14:41 because of foul trouble — a double-whammy for the Bobcats since he was primarily guarding LeBron James. It was only the 14th time this season that Kidd-Gilchrist had at least four fouls in a game, but three of those have come against Miami.

WADE WATCH

Heat guard Dwyane Wade said Tuesday he still considers himself "working my way back" but hopes he can find the same rhythm in Game 2 as he had in Game 1. Wade was highly efficient in the series opener, making 10 of 16 shots, scoring 23 points and best of all for Miami, he felt relatively fine afterward. Miami is 41-9 when Wade shoots better than 50 percent in a playoff game.

HEAT ROTATION

Spoelstra said one of the lessons Miami has learned throughout its past playoff runs is that everyone, at some point, gets called upon to fill some role. The rotation he's planning in Game 2 remains a bit of a mystery, but the job James Jones did off the bench in Game 1 still has not been lost on teammates. "Everybody needs to contribute," Spoelstra said.

BOUNCEBACK FACTOR

One of Charlotte's best traits in its run to the playoffs was resilience. Since mid-January, the Bobcats are 13-4 in the game immediately following a defeat. Whether that will be enough to end this 17-game losing streak against the Heat is another matter. If nothing else, it's a sign that these young Bobcats tend not to wallow in misery too long.

MILESTONE WATCH

The Heat should hit several longevity milestones today. James is seven minutes shy of becoming the 22nd player with 6,000 in a playoff career. ... Ray Allen will tie A.C. Green and Jerry West for 32nd all-time with 153 postseason appearances. ... This will be the 100th home playoff game in team history.

Montverde Academy, which advanced to last year's state semifinals, will host Titusville Astronaut. If the Eagles win and Winter Park Trinity Prep upsets Cocoa Beach, Montverde Academy would host a rematch in the regional semifinals.

The Villages will play Gainesville P.K. Yonge at the Buffalo softball complex in another Class 4A game. South Sumter, which lost to The Villages in its district championship game, will play Starke Bradford in Starke.

Should all three local teams win their regional quarterfinal games, the possibility exists for an all-area game for the regional championship. The winner of that game would advance to the state semifinals.

In Class 3A, Mount Dora Bible hosts Jacksonville Providence. A victory by the Bulldogs could set up a rematch between Mount Dora Bible and Oviedo Master's Academy in the regional semifinals.

The FHSAA state finals is set for May 7 to May 10 at Dodgertown in Vero Beach.

Kentucky freshman Julius Randle to enter draft

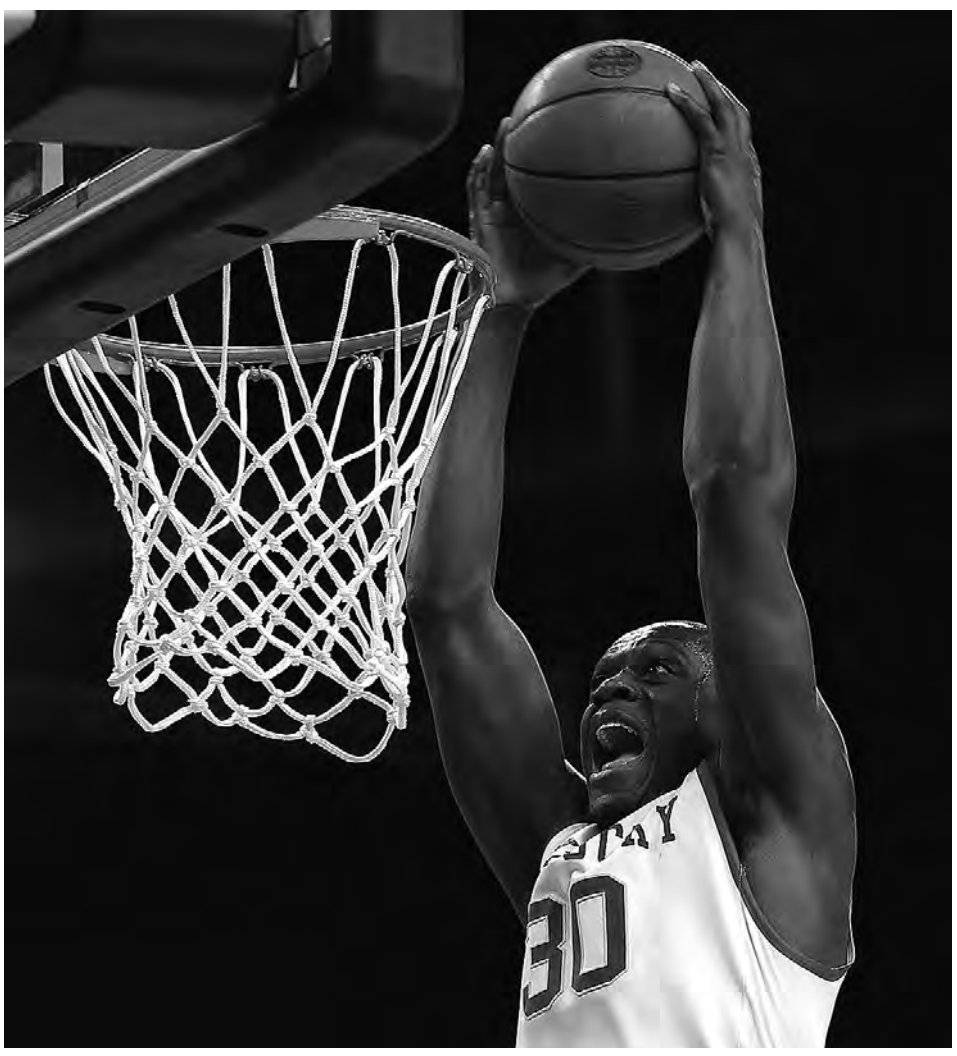
GARY B. GRAVES
Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Kentucky forward Julius Randle took a lot of time and talked to a lot of people before deciding to leave after one season for the NBA draft, where he is expected to be among the top five selections.

With five days left before the deadline for underclassmen to declare, the 6-foot-9 Dallas native announced the decision many expected even before he arrived as part of Kentucky's best recruiting class ever. Projected as a lottery pick from the outset, Randle solidified his draft stock by leading Kentucky (29-11) to the NCAA final behind a string of double-doubles despite being double- and triple-teamed.

Randle averaged 15.0 points and 10.4 rebounds and was voted to The Associated Press ' All-American third team. With Tuesday's announcement, he joins guard James Young, who said last week that he would enter the June 26 draft.

"Kentucky will always have a special place in my heart, but growing up as a kid, there's always been my dream to play in the NBA, and there's no better opportunity for me to achieve that goal than now," Randle said at a news conference attended by his mother, Carolyn Kyles, and teammates Alex Poythress and Willie Cauley-Stein, who rode in on a scooter.



STEVE HELBER / AP

Kentucky forward Julius Randle (30) dunks the ball against LSU in the quarterfinals of the Southeastern Conference, in Atlanta. Randle announced Tuesday that he will leave after one season to enter the NBA draft, where he is expected to be among the top five selections.

Decisions remain for three more freshmen — twin guards Aaron and Andrew Harrison and center Dakari Johnson — along with sophomore forward Poythress, who didn't talk about his future Tuesday. But Randle's announcement was the most anticipated, even though Kentucky's fan base was resigned to him becoming the latest of the program's "one and done" players.

Randle's steady low-post play led to positive feedback from league executives about his NBA potential. After spending the past couple of weeks talking with his family, Kentucky coach John Calipari — who didn't attend the news conference — teammates and others, Randle made the decision many expected. His next step is hiring an agent.

"It wasn't something that we said we were going to do overnight," Kyles said of the decision-making process. "We prayed about it and talked about it for a while and decided this is the best decision for him. ...

"It was important to know their feedback, if they thought he was ready to go out there and contribute to a team. The positive feedback, there was enough of it coming from coach Cal that we felt this was the right thing to do."

Added Randle's mentor, Jeff Webster, "I just wanted to hear him say it, that this is what he wanted to do."

Considered the best player of Kentucky's much-heralded eight-man recruiting class featuring six high school All-Americans, the 250-pound Randle was initially described by Calipari as the "alpha beast" of this talented group.

The Wildcats overcame a stretch-run slump to reach the NCAA championship game before they lost 60-54 to Connecticut. Randle had 10 points, six rebounds and four assists in the final, but the Huskies' defense kept him from being a threat in the paint.

The left-handed freshman led the Wildcats in rebounding and scoring and posted a nation-leading 24 double-doubles in spite of opponents' work in limiting his options near the basket.

Calipari said in a statement that Randle "was Shaq'd all year — in every way," referring to defenses applied to former NBA great Shaquille O'Neal. "I cannot wait to watch him shine at the next level."

Randle scored nearly half of his 599 points from the foul line, as he often had to muscle his way through double teams. He also provided one of Kentucky's season highlights in late February with a game-winning putback in the final seconds of a 77-76 overtime victory over LSU, one of many hard-fought games for a gifted yet inexperienced Wildcats squad that needed all season to come together.

Through it all Randle remained a steady force with physical play that reinforced speculation that he would be among the top players chosen in June.

''I came here to win a national championship. I came here to mature on and off the court, and I did that," Randle said. "I came (up) one game short of winning a national championship, we did as a team. But everything we went through this year was just an experience I'll never forget. That alone kept me at peace."

Big 12 coaches talk about state of the game

DAVE SKRETTA
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The mercurial state of college football could be summed up by listening to Big 12 coaches respond to questions Monday as spring practices draw to a close.

What was once an opportunity to discuss X's and O's, the hot-shot freshman or a new starting quarterback instead became a discussion of whether players are employees, the perils and merits of transfers, and the money associated with the new format for college football's playoff.

Perhaps nobody in the Big 12 is better able to characterize the changes to the game than Bill Snyder, who took over at Kansas State in 1988 and has been witness to the shifting landscape.

Take the issue of whether players are university employees, a hot-button issue after players at Northwestern sought to form a union. A regional director for the National Labor Relations Board has said that they meet the definition of employees under federal law. The university has filed an appeal, saying it provided "overwhelming evidence" that players are "students first."

Players are set to vote by secret ballot Friday on whether to form a union.

"I haven't thought about it that way," Snyder said. "I consider them to be young men going through a stage in their life where they're trying to formulate a foundation to be successful in life. I don't see it any other way right now."

MICHAEL THOMAS / AP

Texas coach Charlie Strong gives the "hook 'em horns" sign while his players raise their helmets on Saturday after the Orange and White spring football game in Austin, Texas.

Oklahoma coach Bob Stoop was even more succinct: "If they're employees," he argued, "I guess you get to fire them, and I never want to do that to a young man."

"I look at them as part of our family in a way," Stoops said, "and that we're here to support them and help them in every way possible, and help guide them and help them get their education and develop them to be as good of athletes as they want to be."

One of the arguments made by players in support of becoming employees, and thus getting paid for playing, is the significant time demands of big-time college football. It is no longer enough to put in practice time and film study during the season. Rather, the game has become a year-round endeavor, and players often put in longer hours during spring and summer workouts.

Oklahoma State coach Mike Gundy recalls his offseason in the 1980s, when he was a quarterback for the Cowboys. There were still offseason workouts, but mostly "we hung out at the pool."

"We didn't have near the time commitment these guys have. They put in tremendous work," Gundy said. "It's a choice they make. They go out on their own in the summer, they put their time in. I think it's a great teaching tool for them in life. You're' only going to get out what you put into something, and these guys learn about discipline, structure and accountability."

Naturally, when players are investing most of their free time, they want to see results. And that has led to an increase in the number of transfers in recent years.

Kansas coach Charlie Weis, who has accepted several high-profile transfers since his arrival in Lawrence, said it is not enough for players to engage in a "fire drill" simply because of their place on the depth chart. But he believes the NCAA should give players the freedom to move between schools when there's been a change in coaching staff or philosophy.

"I think that every situation is unique," Weis said.

As for the new playoff format, which has replaced the long-derided Bowl Championship Series, most coaches said they don't believe it will change the way they operate. The Big 12 is generally among the toughest conferences in the country, and Gundy and others believe that winning it will usually be enough to land among the four teams chosen for the new semifinals.

Asked whether his non-conference scheduling will change, Gundy replied: "That debate could go on forever, based on what you please preseason-wise or whatnot."

This Date In Baseball
April 23

1903 — The New York Highlanders won their first game as a major league team, 7-2 over the Washington Senators.
1913 — New York Giants ace Christy Mathewson beat the Phillies 3-1, throwing just 67 pitches.
1939 — Rookie Ted Williams went 4-for-5, including his first major league home run, but the Red Sox lost to Philadelphia 12-8 at Fenway Park.
1946 — Ed Head of the Brooklyn Dodgers no-hit the Boston Braves 5-0 at Ebbets Field. Head was making his first start after a year's military service.
1952 — Bob Feller of the Cleveland Indians and Bob Cain of the St. Louis Browns matched one-hitters. Cain wound up as the winner, 1-0.
1952 — Hoyt Wilhelm of the Giants hit a home run at the Polo Grounds in his first major league at-bat. He was the winner, too, and pitched 1,070 games in the majors — but never hit another homer.
1954 — Hank Aaron hit the first home run of his major league career. The drive came against Vic Raschi in the Milwaukee Braves' 7-5 victory over St. Louis.
1962 — After an 0-9 start, the expansion New York Mets won their first game, beating the Pittsburgh Pirates 9-1 behind Jay Hook.
1964 — Ken Johnson of the Houston Colt .45s became the first pitcher to lose a nine-inning no-hitter when Pete Rose scored an unearned run to give the Cincinnati Reds a 1-0 victory.
1989 — Nolan Ryan came within two outs of his sixth career no-hitter, losing it when Nelson Liriano tripled in the ninth inning as the Texas Rangers beat the Toronto Blue Jays 4-1. Ryan finished with his 10th lifetime one-hitter.
1999 — Fernando Tatis hit two grand slams in one inning to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to a 12-5 win over the Los Angeles Dodgers. Tatis became the first player in major league history to hit two grand slams in one inning and set a record with eight RBIs in one inning.
2000 — Bernie Williams and Jorge Posada each homered from both sides of the plate as the Yankees beat Toronto 10-7. It is the first time that feat has been accomplished by two players on the same team in the same game.
2007 — Alex Rodriguez became the first player in major league history to hit 14 homers in the first 18 games of a season and tied the record for April homers, connecting in the second and ninth innings of the New York Yankees' 10-8 loss to Tampa Bay Devil Rays.
2008 — The Chicago Cubs won their 10,000th game, joining the Giants as the only franchise to reach that mark with a 7-6 10-inning victory at Colorado.

E-cigarette industry awaits looming federal regulation

MICHAEL FELBERBAUM
AP Tobacco Writer

RICHMOND, Va. — Smokers are increasingly turning to battery-powered electronic cigarettes to get their nicotine fix. They're about to find out what federal regulators have to say about the popular devices.

The Food and Drug Administration will propose rules for e-cigarettes as early as this month. The rules will have big implications for a fast-growing, largely unregulated industry and its legions of customers.

Regulators aim to answer the burning question posed by Kenneth Warner, a professor at the University of Michigan School of Public Health: "Is this going to be the disruptive technology that finally takes us in the direction of getting rid of cigarettes?"

The FDA faces a balancing act. If the regulations are too strict, they could kill an industry that offers a hope of being safer than cigarettes and potentially helping smokers quit them. But the agency also has to be sure e-cigarettes really are safer and aren't hooking children on an addictive drug.

Members of Congress and several public health groups have raised safety concerns over e-cigarettes, questioned their marketing tactics and called on regulators to address those worries quickly.

Smokers like e-cigarettes because the nicotine-infused vapor looks like smoke but doesn't contain the thousands of chemicals, tar or odor of regular cigarettes.

Job market for college grads better — but still weak

PAUL WISEMAN
AP Economics Writer

Graduates pose for photographs during commencement at Yale University in New Haven, Conn.

WASHINGTON — With college commencement ceremonies nearing, the government is offering a modest dose of good news for graduating seniors: The job market is brightening for new grads — a bit.

But finding work — especially a dream job — remains tough for those just graduating. Many are settling for jobs outside their fields of study or for less pay than they'd expected or hoped for.

The Labor Department on Tuesday said the unemployment rate for 2013 college graduates — defined as those ages 20 to 29 who earned a four-year or advanced degree — was 10.9 percent. That was down from 13.3 percent in 2012 and was the lowest since 7.7 percent in 2007. The drop reflects the steady recovery in overall U.S. economic growth and hiring.

But unemployment for recent grads was still higher than the 9.6 percent rate for all Americans ages 20 to 29 last October, when the government collected the numbers.

"I'm finding that all these entry-level jobs are requiring experience I don't have or degrees that are just unattainable right out of college," says Howard Rudnick, 23, who graduated last year in political science from Florida Atlantic University and wound up earning $25,000 a year working for an online shoe company.

"The worst part is that I'm afraid at some point I may have to go back to school to better myself and take on more debt just so I can get a better-paying job."

Over time, though, Americans who have college degrees are still far more likely to find employment and to earn more than those who don't.

Last year's female graduates fared better than men: 9 percent were unemployed as of October last year, compared with 13.7 percent of men. Analysts note that the economy has been generating jobs in many low-wage fields — such as retail and hotels — that disproportionately employ women

"It seems like the jobs that are growing fastest are jobs that are low-wage jobs, service jobs," says Anne Johnson, executive director of Generation Progress, an arm of the liberal Center for American Progress that studies youth issues.

Work underway at Wildwood Publix

The walls are going up for a new Publix supermarket at Powell Road and State Road 44 in Wildwood. The store will be just under 46,000 square feet, and will have a pharmacy and a liquor store.

A Publix is planned to open in the fall at Powell Road and State Road 44, according to a company spokesperson.

The store will be just under 46,000 square feet, and will have a pharmacy and a liquor store, Brian West of Publix said.

"We are very excited to be able to serve the needs of the people living in and around The Villages," he said.

The new Publix is in Wildwood city limits, Wildwood Mayor Ed Wolf said, adding there are two Winn-Dixie stores nearby, one of which was just converted from a Sweetbay, as well as a Save-A-Lot.

"There's a lot of folks that enjoy shopping (at) Publix," Wolf said.

He added there is another Publix east of the city near the Lake and Sumter County line.

He said the new Publix will give Wildwood residents, "another choice for shopping."

Wolf said with all the development from The Villages, there are plenty of employment opportunities in the service industry.

"It's really helped the employment opportunities in and around Wildwood, for those type jobs," Wolf said.

He added that based on how construction looks at the location, it will be a plaza and not be a stand-alone Publix.

"They've got the walls up. You can see it's going to be quite a few additional stores," Wolf said.

There are currently five Publix stores in The Villages and Lady Lake, according to the company's website.

Publix was founded in Winter Haven in 1930 and had $28.9 billion in retail sales in 2013, according to the company's website. It has more than 167,000 employees company-wide and 754 stores in Florida.

Spotlight on Apple

Wall Street predicts Apple's fiscal second-quarter report card will show the company's earnings and revenue edged higher.

While Apple sold more iPhones and iPads in the final three months of 2013 than in any previous quarter, many investors worry that the company is now mostly selling its mobile devices to repeat customers instead of reeling in new converts. Will Apple's latest financial results, due out today, help ease investors' nagging doubts about the company's growth prospects?

Spring thaw?

U.S. sales of new homes slowed in February to their slowest pace in five months.

The decline came as much of the country was battered by severe winter snowstorms. Did sales of new homes begin to recover in March as the annual spring homebuying season ramped up? Find out today, when the Commerce Department reports its latest data on new home sales.

Better quarter?

Facebook reports first-quarter financial results today.

The social networking giant is expected to report that its earnings and revenue increased versus the same quarter last year. Investors will be tuned in for what Facebook has to say about its plans for a couple of recent headline-grabbing acquisitions: The virtual reality company Oculus and messaging startup WhatsApp.

Seasonal stars

A springtime take on the classic crabcake

SARA MOULTON
Associated Press

As the weather gets warmer, I cook lighter. And in The Husband's taxonomy of food, crabcakes are relatively light. So I thought I'd employ of couple of seasonal stars — peas and radishes — to put a spring spin on them.

I blithely went shopping for fresh crabmeat at my local market, but found to my horror that it's almost unaffordably pricey — and that pasteurized refrigerated crabmeat isn't much cheaper. In search of an ingredient with which to stretch the crab (I thought of it as Crab Helper), I settled on boiled shrimp, which are readily available, but not astronomically expensive. Happily, the crab and the shrimp played very nicely together.

We bind up the cakes with eggs, mayonnaise and panko breadcrumbs, then season them with tarragon, which always teams up nicely with both shellfish and peas. If you're not a fan of tarragon, which is unpleasantly reminiscent of licorice to some folks, substitute some dill, chives or parsley.

As this also is the season for fresh peas, I added some of them to the crab/shrimp mix. Their natural sweetness chimes in well with the shellfish, and they add a little crunchy pop to the texture of the cakes.

Flavor and texture aside, I used to discount the nutritional value of peas, until I finally scrutinized the data and discovered that the little fellers are packed with protein, fiber and micronutrients. If you find fresh peas at the farmer's market, by all means scoop them up. But keep in mind that the sugar in fresh peas starts turning to starch the minute they're harvested, so be sure to bring them home, shell them and boil them right away.

And if your only option is frozen peas, don't despair. Those guys are picked at the height of their ripeness and blanched immediately in water, which sets their flavor and texture.

We bind up the cakes with eggs, mayonnaise and panko breadcrumbs, then season them with tarragon, which always teams up nicely with both shellfish and peas. If you're not a fan of tarragon, which is Minted lemon and olive chicken wraps are served on a plate.

Recipe: Minted lemon and olive chicken wraps

ALISON LADMAN
Associated Press

Fresh mint so rarely gets its due in America. We gladly pair it with chocolate and fruit, but it almost never makes appearances in savory dishes. But the rest of the world knows better, adding it with abandon to all manner of savory dairy, vegetable and meat dishes. That's because a little bit of its naturally sweet, herby flavor can go a long way to playing up the savory elements of a dish.

To demonstrate what a delicious addition mint can be to meaty dishes, we created these chicken wraps that are seasoned with salty capers and olives, a sweet hit of honey and a splash of lemon — all flavors that meld wonderfully with fresh mint.

MINTED LEMON AND OLIVE CHICKEN WRAPS

INGREDIENTS:

- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 medium yellow onion, chopped
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 tablespoons chopped capers
- 1/2 cup oil-cured black olives, pitted and chopped
- Pinch red pepper flakes
- 1 tablespoon coriander seeds, crushed
- Zest and juice of 2 lemons
- 2 1/2 pounds boneless, skinless chicken thighs, trimmed and cut into 1-inch chunks
- 1 tablespoon honey
- 1/4 cup chopped fresh mint
- Salt and ground black pepper
- 8 pita breads or baguette sections, to serve
- 1 cup fresh ricotta cheese
- 1 cup sliced seedless cucumber

DIRECTIONS:

1) In a large saute pan over medium-high, heat the oil. Add the onion, garlic, capers, olive and red pepper flakes, then saute for 6 to 8 minutes, or until the onion is tender and starting to brown. Add the coriander, lemon zest and juice, and the chicken. Cook, stirring often, until the chicken is cooked through, 8 to 10 minutes.

2) Stir in the honey and mint, then season with salt and pepper. To serve, spoon some of the chicken mixture onto each pita bread or section of baguette, then top with ricotta and cucumber slices.

Apple variety creates confusion in the grocery store

MARY RYDER
PRACTICAL POTWATCHER

When I approached the fruit section of the supermarket, all I wanted was an apple.

Just one single apple, not too big, but not one of the little ones sold in bags of 3 or 5 pounds for school lunches and nibbling between meals. A reasonable-sized apple so I could dice half for a tuna salad. The other half would be sliced and the slices spread with peanut butter for mid-morning snacking.

It should have been the work of seconds to select that single apple from the several commonplace varieties usually available these days, and promptly go on my way to the more demanding tasks of the day.

HELPFUL HINTS

- Notwithstanding the great popularity resulting from its spectacular flavor, the Honeycrisp apple is not the ideal selection for that pie you're planning to make. It's simply too juicy for a good pie or apple crisp.
- The old green Granny Smith is probably still top pick among pie-makers, although the Pink Ladies also offer crisp texture and a good, tart-sweet flavor balance. And some cooks prefer to make their pie fillings using two, or even three, apple varieties.

Instead, I was confronted by a choice of around a dozen varieties, three of which I'd never tried, and two of which I'd never even heard of. For salad, the McIntosh and Rome are generally tied for my first choice, with that old standby, Red Delicious, as runner-up. Or if I'm in the mood for something on the sweet side, Red Delicious wins, hands down. All very simple.

But now I found myself looking at not only Gala, Royal Gala, Fuji, Cameo, Pink Lady and Granny Smith, as well as and both Red and Golden Delicious, but such new-fangled fruits as Jazz, Kanzi and Ambrosia. And Honeycrisp.

Jazz I had tried before, when the store offered three-bite-sized samples to tempt customers into buying something new and different. It had a nice aroma and a pleasantly strong apple flavor, but the texture wasn't simply crisp, it was super crisp. Crunchy, almost, so that, even knowing the noise was magnified inside my head, I felt that chewing it sounded like someone playing bongo drums.

I had seen the Honeycrisp from time to time over the last few years, and I had tried it, though not as a sample item. Tempted by both name and appearance, I bought a nice large one in a fit of rebellious adventurousness, took it home for savoring and gloating over and ignored the ensuing pinpricks of guilt over the price. (After all, we must expect new apples to be a bit more expensive — just like with new roses.) Unfortunately, I now observed, the price hadn't moderated noticeably in the last couple of years. Only a penny short of four dollars a pound.

Kanzi and Ambrosia were completely new to me. I've read somewhere that trying new things keeps the brain healthy, and surely I owed it to my brain to try one of these new apples. Kanzi sounded very exotic, and it had an irresistible fragrance. But Ambrosia is a word meaning "food of the gods," and who could resist that? I took one of each, although the Ambrosia was even more expensive than Kanzi.

One of the little Jazz apples also found its way into my basket. I could crunch away at home, without fear of being reported for disturbing the peace, especially if I did so when my neighbor was practicing his drums. Or I might put on a Beethoven symphony, and let Jazz blend right in with the kettle drums.

Finally, I contemplated the Honeycrisps radiating their promise of sheer goodness. My Budgetary Conscience objected. "That's four dollars a pound, for all practical purposes!" "It's not a pound; it's just one apple," I argued.

I paid for my extravagance of apples and took them out to the truck, then, remembering my original intention, returned to the apple counter and selected one large, succulent Red Delicious.

After all, when you buy pricey apples for tasting experiments, you don't go mixing them up with tuna salad and peanut butter.

unpleasantly reminiscent of licorice to some folks, substitute some dill, chives or parsley. The panko does double duty, thickening the interior of the cakes and adding crunch to their crust. And as long as you brown the cakes in a nonstick or stick-resistant skillet, you won't have to use much oil.

The cakes are topped off with a peppery cream flavored by both horseradish and red radishes. Kissing cousins from the same family — brassicaceae — the radishes add a little kick to the otherwise bland shellfish. The sour cream is a moist and tangy complement to the panko crust. The Husband was very happy with my springtime rendition of one of his faves!

SPRING CRAB AND SHRIMP CAKES WITH DOUBLE RADISH SAUCE

■ Start to finish: 30 minutes

INGREDIENTS:

■ 1/2 pound peeled and deveined cooked shrimp
■ 1 large egg, plus 1 egg yolk
■ 1 cup cooked English peas or thawed frozen peas
■ 1/2 cup finely chopped scallions
■ 1 2/3 cups panko breadcrumbs, divided
■ 1/4 cup light mayonnaise
■ 1 to 2 tablespoons chopped fresh tarragon, or to taste
■ Kosher salt and ground black pepper
■ 1/2 pound lump crabmeat, picked over for any shells
■ 2 tablespoons vegetable oil, divided
■ 1/4 cup plus 2 tablespoons light sour cream
■ 1 cup coarsely shredded red radishes
■ 1 tablespoon bottled horseradish (do not drain)
■ Heat the oven to 300 F.

DIRECTIONS:

1) In a food processor, pulse the shrimp until very finely chopped, but not reduced to a paste. Transfer the chopped shrimp to a medium bowl and add the egg and egg yolk, peas, scallions, 2/3 cup of the panko, the mayonnaise, tarragon, 1/2 teaspoon of salt and 1/4 teaspoon of pepper. Stir well, then gently fold in the crabmeat. Divide the mixture into 8 portions, shaping each into a patty. Coat the patties with the remaining panko.

2) In a large, nonstick skillet over medium-high, heat 1 tablespoon of the oil. Reduce the heat to medium, then add 4 of the patties and cook until golden, about 4 minutes per side. Transfer the patties to a rimmed baking sheet and place them in the oven to keep warm. Repeat with the remaining patties, using the remaining 1 tablespoon of oil in the skillet.

3) Meanwhile, in a small bowl whisk together the sour cream, radishes and horseradish. Season with salt and pepper.

4) To serve, arrange 2 patties per plate and top with the radish sauce.

New Americans turn to goats to address food demand

LISA RATHKE
Associated Press

COLCHESTER, Vt. — A bunch of kids in a minivan are solving twin challenges in northern Vermont: refugees struggling to find the food of their homelands and farmers looking to offload unwanted livestock.

The half dozen kids — that is, baby goats — that arrived last week at Pine Island Farm were the latest additions to the Vermont Goat Collaborative, a project that brings together new Americans hungry for goat meat with dairy goat farmers who have no need for young male animals. Some dairy farmers who otherwise would discard bucklings at birth or spend valuable time finding homes for them now can send them to Colchester, where they will be raised and sold to refugees, some of whom have spent full days traveling to Boston or New Hampshire for fresh goat, or have settled for imported frozen meat.

When community organizer Karen Freudenberger realized that the roughly 6,000 new Americans from southeast Asia, Africa and elsewhere living in the Burlington area were buying what amounted to 3,000 goats a year from Australia and New Zealand, she saw an opportunity. Since some of them had been farmers raising goats in their native countries, why couldn't they do it in Vermont, prized for its working landscape and locally raised foods?

"People keep saying, are you sure you can sell all those goats? We are sure we can sell all those goats," said Freudenberger, who helped launch the project.

Now in its second year, the collaborative includes two families from Bhutan and Rwanda who are raising about 200 baby goats that will be slaughtered on site and sold in the fall.

While there are no federal statistics on goat meat consumption, the USDA says demand for it is increasing, driven in part by a growth in ethnic populations. The U.S. had 2.3 million head of meat goats in January 2013, according to the National Agricultural Statistics Service, with Texas producing the most, followed by Tennessee.

Some of the refugees Freudenberger has worked with had trouble communicating with farmers when trying to buy fresh goat meat, while others were questioned by authorities for slaughtering an animal by the side of the road or for having a goat in a car. They are looking forward to being able to select, buy and slaughter their goats in a matter of hours instead of making the long, expensive trip to Boston, said goat farmer Chuda Dhaurali.

"It's very helpful," he said. "They are so excited."

"The whole project is really designed around trying to meet this particular niche demand that this community has ... in a way that meets the particular cultural and taste desires of their communities," Freudenberger said.

The project is a collaboration between the Vermont Land Trust, which is giving the farmers access to the farm property on the Winooski River, and the Association of Africans Living in Vermont, now called AALV. The idea is that the land will be transferred to a cooperative entity representing the new American population and that group will take over the costs of the land — such as the insurance and taxes, Freudenberger said.

A grant of about $20,000 from Green Mountain Coffee Roasters helped to get Dhaurali started last year with electric fencing, feed and other supplies. Another Vermont Working Lands grant of more than $10,000 helped create the custom slaughter facility. The project subsidizes the farmer for the first year, but when they sell the goats in the fall, it allows them to finance future years.

Last year the project sold about 100 goats to families from more than 15 nationalities. Often, whole families including grandparents visit the farm to pick out the goat. Goat buyers can slaughter the animals on site the way they are accustomed to.

NEW GAME EVERY WEDNESDAY

Hawaii is genetically engineered crop flash point

AUDREY MCAVOY
Associated Press

WAIALUA, Hawaii — You can trace the genetic makeup of most corn grown in the U.S., and in many other places around the world, to Hawaii.

The tiny island state 2,500 miles from the nearest continent is so critical to the nation's modern corn-growing business that the industry's leading companies all have farms here, growing new varieties genetically engineered for desirable traits like insect and drought resistance.

But these same farms have become a flash point in a spreading debate over genetic engineering in agriculture.

Kauai and Hawaii counties have moved in the past several months to regulate genetically modified organisms and the pesticides the farms use. In Maui County, a group is collecting signatures for a potential ballot measure that would impose a temporary ban on the crops.

"People are very concerned, and it's my job as a council member to determine whether those concerns are valid and take steps to protect them," said Gary Hooser, a councilman in Kauai.

Hooser and the council passed a law last year, over the mayor's veto, to require large farms to create buffer zones around their crops and to disclose what pesticides they use. The law is set to take effect in August.

Seed companies with Kauai operations — Syngenta, Pioneer, BASF and Agrigentics — have sued the county to stop the law, saying they are already regulated by state and federal laws and there is no need for additional county rules.

"We don't plant anything that isn't permitted and approved through the proper regulatory agencies, be it the EPA, the FDA and UDSA," said Mark Phillipson, the head of Hawaii corporate affairs for Syngenta, referring to the Environmental Protection Agency, the Food and Drug Administration and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Hawaii's origins as a critical node in corn production dates to the 1960s when James Brewbaker, a recently arrived researcher at the University of Hawaii, noticed he could plant three crops a year in Hawaii's warm climate instead of one as in most places on the mainland.

Around the same time, Pioneer Hi-Bred was trying to squeeze more research into a year by using greenhouses and farms in Florida. Brewbaker suggested researchers come to Hawaii.

Seed farms grew as research expanded and more land became available as Hawaii's sugar and pineapple plantations became less competitive in the global market and shut down.

As of 2012, the most recent data available, seed crops in Hawaii were worth $217 million, up from $140 million in 2007. About 95 percent of it is corn. In all, they exceed the value of the state's next several largest crops — including sugarcane and macadamia nuts.

Developing a new seed variety takes about 10 to 12 growth cycles, said Phillipson. On the mainland, this could take 10 to 12 years. Being able to get three to four growth cycles a year in Hawaii dramatically shrinks the time it takes to bring a new product to market.

"It's getting your newest and best hybrids to market quickly," said Richard McCormack, who leads Hawaii operations for Pioneer Hi-Bred International, which is part of DuPont and has farms on Kauai and Oahu.

New genes — such as those making corn resistant to drought or floods — are inserted in a lab on the mainland.

Spring cleaning: the perfect time to organize and restock your pantry

ZE CARTER
ROAMING GOURMET

When I was growing up, no matter what the calendar said, it was not officially spring in our house until after Easter. With what my mom considered the beginning of spring came spring cleaning, and it has become my tradition as well.

I like to start my spring cleaning routine by cleaning out my pantry, replacing staples and stocking up on new things my family has begun to enjoy over the past year. I also take the opportunity to check expiration dates. I donate things that are close to expiration to the local food pantry.

The old way to stock a pantry meant you had to store things like white flour, white sugar, cereals and whatever canned items you could get your hands on, such as vegetables and processed foods like spaghetti sauce.

I have nothing against Chef Boyardee, as long as it is used in moderation. Many processed foods, meaning foods not in their natural state, contain a lot of sodium, preservatives and sugar. It takes a lot to make something in a can taste good a year from now.

Canned food has its place, and in many households it is a necessity. Make sure you drain and rinse your canned vegetables, and buy low sodium whenever it is offered.

Many people are afraid of healthy food because they are concerned that it will not taste as good, but believe me, when they are prepared properly, most healthy dishes taste better than their processed version.

Some things do take a little getting accustomed to, like brown rice. Its nutty flavor, color and the fact that it can take up to 30 minutes to prepare seem a bit much for what many call a simple dish. Keep in mind the health benefits of brown rice outweigh any other concerns you may have.

You don't have to replace everything in your pantry. Small, subtle changes here and there will help you start and keep a healthier pantry. Here are a few more tips and ingredients for stocking a healthier pantry.

1) Invest in quality containers to store bulk items. Earlier this year I had a spider problem in my home. When investigated, the root of the problem was a little pest called a grain weevil. Well, there went all of the food in the dry pantry. You don't have to have a Tupperware party (it would be fun though) or turn your pantry into one of those pantries we see on television, just make sure the containers you use are clear and can be tightly sealed.

2) Buy a variety of dried beans. Beans are a great source of protein. Soaking them in warm water for an hour can speed up cooking time, and you can control the taste and the sodium content.

3) Olive Oil. I know it is three times as expensive as canola or vegetable oil, but it is more versatile, adds more flavor and can be used to make a great tasting oil-and-vinegar dressing that is great for all types of dishes, not just salad.

4) Local honey. Known as one of nature's nectars, honey does not spoil. If used properly, with no bacteria being introduced to the storage jar, a little honey will go a long way. It makes a great sugar substitute in tea and can replace or reduce the amount of sugar in a dish.

5) Whole wheat pasta and flour. It may cost a little more than its white counterpart, but it is better for you and makes baked goods taste better. The bleaching agent in white flour can sometimes overpower and make certain foods taste salty when they are meant to be sweet. A seasoned baker can always taste this. You may also notice that it will take less pasta to make you feel full, so you don't need to avoid pasta altogether and can enjoy your favorite Italian dishes more often.

Fennel and tarragon blend in a rich clam chowder

ALISON LADMAN
Associated Press

Many cream-based chowders suffer from the same problem — it's hard to taste anything but the cream.

Admittedly, all that fat is mighty delicious. But if you're going to go to the trouble of making a chowder, wouldn't it be nice to taste some of the other ingredients? So we set about making a simple clam chowder that draws on fresh herbs to marry the various flavors.

Fresh tarragon and the lightly herbaceous flavor of fresh fennel were the right choice. Both play so well with the flavors of the cream, potatoes and clams. The result is that this dish has no one flavor star, and that's as it should be. The ingredients are perfectly harmonious together.

TARRAGON-FENNEL CLAM CHOWDER

■ Start to finish: 45 minutes

INGREDIENTS:

■ 6 strips thick-cut bacon, diced
■ 1 large yellow onion, diced
■ 2 cloves garlic, minced
■ 1 large or 2 small fennel bulbs, bulb only, diced
■ 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
■ 2 medium yellow potatoes, peeled and diced
■ 8-ounce bottle clam juice
■ 12 ounces canned or frozen clams, chopped
■ 2 cups half-and-half
■ 1 cup heavy cream
■ Kosher salt and ground black pepper
■ 3 tablespoons chopped fresh tarragon

DIRECTIONS:

1) In a large heavy-bottomed saucepan over medium-high heat, cook the bacon until crisp and it has rendered all its fat. Use a slotted spoon to transfer the bacon to a plate and set aside.

2) Return the saucepan of bacon fat to medium-high heat and add the onion, garlic and fennel. Cook for 6 to 8 minutes, or until the onion is very tender. Stir in the flour, coating the vegetables all over. Add the potatoes, clam juice, clams, half-and-half and cream, then bring to a bare simmer.

3) Cover and cook for 15 minutes, or until the potatoes are tender. Season with salt and pepper, then stir in the tarragon. Serve topped with the crispy bacon.

The simple art of hard-boiling eggs

RUSS PARSONS
Los Angeles Times

Call it the Great Egg Smackdown of 2014. Every time I write about hard-boiled eggs, I seem to get a flood of mail telling me, essentially, "You're an idiot, and you're doing it all wrong."

So this year I threw down the gauntlet. On our Daily Dish blog and on social media, I posted a challenge to all those hard-boiled naysayers: You tell me how you do it, and we'll give it a try.

Not to get all smug, but my method won out again. Though I did pick up a couple of refinements along the way.

What makes the perfect hard-boiled egg? Our requirements are few but strict: The whites should be firm but creamy and not tough. The yolks should be completely set and orange (not yellow).

It should go without saying that any egg that turns up with a trace of green ring around the yolk is instantly disqualified with a sneer.

The weird thing, after all the flak I've taken, is that most of the people who sent in ideas this year actually recommended some slight variation of my technique (see accompanying article) — a little different timing, a covered pot, salted water ... something like that.

Maybe the critics have given up on me. Or maybe they've listened to my pleas and given it a try, have seen the error of their ways and become converted. (I know, on the Internet? Well, it's a dream.)

One technique we tried was suggested by a chef friend. He lowers the eggs into boiling water and cooks them for nine minutes exactly, then puts them into an ice bath. This was the second-best technique we tried, but the yolks turned out just a little underdone. They were orange, to be sure, but slightly runny.

Still, that was miles better than our experiment with baking the eggs, which was another suggestion that several people made. Our luck was not good: 13 minutes at 350 degrees, and we had what were very good over-easy eggs.

One thing I noticed about a lot of these suggestions: It seems like the simpler the task, the more specific and sometimes complicated the instructions.

One very good cook suggested a method that involved bringing water to a boil, taking the pot off the heat, adding the eggs and letting them sit for a few seconds off heat, then returning them to the heat and simmering them at a reduced temperature for 12 to 15 minutes, then plunging them into cold water.

That's pretty convoluted (and also a bit vague on the crucial details, like how low a simmer and for how long). In the hard-boiled egg world, there's a big difference between 12 and 15 minutes). We went for the 15-minute mark and wound up with a green ring. Maybe our simmer was too high?

We also tried some variations on my technique. We tried cooking the eggs covered and uncovered, and in salted and unsalted water. Neither made any difference that we could detect.

The issue of timing was slightly more interesting. To try to find the exact right cooking time, we pulled sample eggs every 60 seconds between 10 and 15 minutes.

At the upper extreme, though the yolk seemed to keep the same texture, the whites did seem slightly tough. This makes sense. Because the whites contain pure protein with no fat, they are set at a lower temperature than the yolks. Though the eggs are cooking off the heat, the water was still in the 165- to 170-degree range; that's enough to affect the whites but not the yolks. And at the lower extreme, the whites and yolk were slightly underdone.

It wasn't enough that you would complain if you weren't comparing side by side, but it was noticeable to us.

And to take home the crown in the Great Egg Smackdown, that just wouldn't do.

HERE'S HOW TO PREPARE IDEAL HARD-BOILED EGGS

How do you cook a perfect hard-boiled egg? It's really quite simple.

1) Arrange the eggs in a single layer in the bottom of a pan and cover completely with room-temperature water.

2) Set on high heat, and when the water just begins to boil, cook for 1 minute.

3) Turn off the heat and let the eggs stand in the pot for 12 minutes.

4) If you're going to use them right away, drain the eggs, shake them in the pan to crack the shells and plunge them into an ice-water bath to cool for a few minutes. If you're going to store them, plunge them into the ice-water bath uncracked and let them sit for an hour or so.

Married couple's sex life has become all about the numbers

JEANNE PHILLIPS

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to a wonderful man for 30 years. Our marriage may not be perfect, but it's quite good.

My dilemma is this: My husband keeps track of every time we have sex and has a personal goal of 100 times a year. In 2013, he informed me that we'd had sex only 76 times, and that was not adequate for him. He was quite upset about it.

Do you think tracking your sex life is normal, and what do you think about a couple married for 30-plus years having sex 76 times in a year? Is that normal? Also, keep in mind that he travels for business and is gone about 60 days a year. — PRESSURED

DEAR PRESSURED: Your husband sounds like a college student who is striving to get 100 notches on his belt. Rather than obsess about the number of times you have had sex, the quality of the experience should be more important. Fifty GREAT times a year would be better than 100 so-so times, one would think. And no, I do not think your husband's preoccupation is "normal" — whatever normal is these days.

DEAR ABBY: After six years of unsuccessful fertility work, my husband and I were forced to give up. Last summer his sister offered to be a surrogate for us, and we'll use a donor egg since I have none. We have told only a few people.

We're having an embryo transfer next week and thought we'd wait until after the first trimester to "announce." But what is the proper way to do it when it's not actually I who is expecting? And is there etiquette for having a baby shower in this situation?

We're excited and proud of this opportunity, but it takes a lot of explaining for people to understand and not be judgmental. This is the closest we'll ever get to experiencing pregnancy, and I want to enjoy it to the fullest. — MODERN MOM-TO-BE IN WASHINGTON

DEAR MOM-TO-BE: Congratulations on your pregnancy. Because it takes explaining, I recommend you share the happy news with your family and close friends by telling them in person. That way, you can answer any questions they may have directly. When you want "the world" to know, you may decide to send a mass email or post photos on the Internet.

As to having a baby shower — because this is a happy event you are celebrating and you will need things for the baby, I'm sure a friend will want to host one for you. Be sure to include your sister-in-law if she would like to attend.

DEAR ABBY: My 18-year-old granddaughter is seeing a 30-year-old man. What can I say to let her know he is way too old for her? I don't want her to hate me. — LOVING GRANDMA IN FLORIDA

DEAR LOVING GRANDMA: I don't think that telling your granddaughter the man is too old for her would be a good idea because it would imply that she is too young, and no 18-year-old wants to hear that. Tell her instead that you think she would have a lot more in common with someone closer to her age. This is particularly true if she is still in high school.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

Opening lead — six of hearts.

This deal occurred in the 1981 North American Open Pairs.

When Harold Lilie and David Berkowitz were North-South, they got to seven hearts as shown. The bidding was highly artificial, but they reached a grand slam with only 27 high-card points between them.

South's opening one-club bid was artificial and promised at least 16 high-card points. North's two-club response showed a genuine club suit and at least nine high-card points. Two hearts was natural and asked partner about heart support. Two notrump denied the ace, king or queen of hearts.

North's three-spade bid showed the ace of spades as well as secondary heart support. Four diamonds and five clubs each indicated first-round control of those suits; five spades and six diamonds promised second-round control of those suits. That was all Berkowitz needed to know, and he bid seven hearts.

The contract would have been laydown without a trump lead, since declarer could ruff three diamonds in dummy to produce 13 tricks. But when West led a trump, declarer had to play carefully to make the slam.

Berkowitz won the heart lead in dummy, cashed the ace of clubs, ruffed a club, cashed the ace of diamonds, ruffed a diamond, then ruffed a club, a diamond and another club, establishing the club nine as his 13th trick. After drawing trumps, he claimed the rest of the tricks for a score of 2,210 points.

As it turned out, Berkowitz and Lilie were the only pair to bid the grand slam.

Tomorrow: The better way.

BIGAR'S STARS

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, April 23, 2014:

This year you open up to strong feelings, which often is not easy to do. Unexpected events and stunning insights point to your perspective changing. You will not be able to look at the same situations in the same way you have in the past. You'll expand your mind as a result. Travel and/or higher education is likely to open doors for you. If you are single, you will be attracted to someone quite different from you, who could be from a different culture. You have a lot to offer each other. If you are attached, you might decide to sign up for a class together or go off on an exotic trip. AQUARIUS is far more adventuresome than you are.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You could be driven to bring other like-minded individuals together. There may be an important talk regarding money. Determining who assumes the role of the leader might be worth discussing, as well as what direction the group will head in.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You might be more of a role model than you realize. What seems impossible could force you into a situation where you'll lose your temper, absorb extra work and/or move in a new direction. Be sensible when making your choices.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You could be searching for new information. If you choose to stay on the same course, how you see a situation could surprise you. You might want to consider an alternative and have a discussion with someone who has more experience.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Reach out to someone who makes a difference in your life. A family member could have strong opinions about a potential sweetie. You might not want to indulge this person in airing his or her views. The only opinion that matters is yours.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You could be taken aback by a situation in which someone's temper gets the better of him or her. It would take a swift interaction to stop what might seem inevitable. You could be exhausted by a strange turn of events.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You might want to rethink a personal matter that is affecting a serious relationship. A child could act out and cause you to question what is really going on. Stay focused on the issue. Understand that you likely will have to take action.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You might push someone into saying something you would prefer not to hear. You could be wondering exactly what is next and what needs to come down the pike. Use your charm to calm down what could be a difficult situation. You know your limits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You might be far from where you want to be. Your anger could emerge from out of the blue and cause a problem. Understand your limits. Know what you want to happen. Encourage someone to create more of what he or she feels is important.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You are in the moment, and you know what to do. A call that heads your way could allow greater give-and-take. You have a strong drive, and you'll need to fulfill certain projects and errands in a timely manner. Clear out as much as you can.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be more forthright about what your desire. Rest assured that there are many ways to get past a minor roadblock. You could push someone beyond his or her natural limits when it comes to finding the right solution. Know that the outcome will be favorable.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Listen to your sixth sense when you see a disagreement arise. Strive to stay neutral, as you are likely to hit a lot of problems. Recognize a deficiency for what it is. Understand that you must accept this issue.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Keep reaching out to someone who understands you. Once you discuss a potential change, you will feel renewed and more decisive. You might want to rethink your goals, as they also could be changing.
