Brad Hatcher of the Richart Landscape Company adjusts a sprinkler head to make sure that it only sprays water onto grass at the Country Club of Mount Dora in Mount Dora on Thursday. This type of simple maintenance, combined with system upgrades and the use of plants that need less water, has allowed the Country Club of Mount Dora to save more than five million gallons of water.

Conservation programs show big gains in Lake County

The problem became noticeable quickly to Mount Dora city officials and Country Club of Mount Dora employers.

Utility records showed the country club was consuming a lot of water because the timers were set too high.

"A lot of water was being thrown out onto the boulevard," said Bobby Douglas, community association manager of the Country Club of Mount Dora. "It was causing the boulevard islands to be soggy and drenched with water."

Michael Quinn, Mount Dora city manager, said the city had concerns about the amount of water being used.

"Our concern as a city was not only water conservation but the fact (that) over watering was also impacting the road surface," he said of the issue in 2012.

Since then, Douglas and other employees have started conserving water by replacing rain sensors, upgrading spray heads, instituting a cycle-and-soak program and training homeowners to conserve water.

With those new measures in place, there was a 40 percent decrease in residential water use for the 417 homes within the Country Club of Mount Dora, Douglas said.

In addition, 5.66 million gallons of water has been saved in the boulevard and common areas, according to Douglas.

As a result of their efforts, the business was honored with the Florida Communities of Excellence

AG: Chinese military hacked US companies

ERIC TUCKER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Accusing China of vast business spying, the United States charged five military officials on Monday with hacking into U.S. companies to steal vital trade secrets in a case intensifying already-rising tensions between the international economic giants.

The Chinese targeted big-name American makers of nuclear and solar technology, stealing confidential business information, sensitive trade secrets and internal communications for competitive advantage, according to a grand jury indictment that the Justice Department said should be a national "wake-up call" about cyber intrusions.

A company's success in the international marketplace should not be based "on a sponsor government's ability to spy and steal business secrets," Attorney General Eric Holder declared at a news conference.

The alleged targets were Alcoa World Alumina, Westinghouse Electric Co., Allegheny Technologies, U.S. Steel Corp., the United Steelworkers Union and SolarWorld. The indictment, which includes charges of trade-secret theft and economic espionage, was issued in Pittsburgh, where most of the companies are based.

China denied it all. In a statement, the Foreign Ministry said the charges were based on "fabricated facts" and would jeopardize China-U.S. "cooperation and mutual trust."

"China is steadfast in upholding cybersecurity," said the statement. "The Chinese government, the Chinese military and their relevant personnel have never engaged or participated in cybertheft of trade

Poll: Few preparing for elder care needs

LAURAN NEERGAARD and JENNIFER AGIESTA
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — More Americans may wind up helping Mom as she gets older, but a new poll shows the most stressful kind of caregiving is for a frail spouse.

The population is rapidly aging, but people aren't doing much to get ready even though government figures show nearly 7 in 10 Americans will need long-term care at some point after they reach age 65.

Pauline King cares for her husband Jerry King at their home in Anna, Ill. Jerry was diagnosed with Multiple Sclerosis in 1978.

In fact, people 40 and over are more likely to discuss their funeral plans than their preferences for assistance with day-to-day living as they get older, according to the poll by the AP-NORC Center for Public Affairs Research.

Five findings from the poll:

EFFECT ON FAMILIES

Half of people 40 and older already have been caregivers to relatives or friends. Six in 10 have provided care to a parent, mostly a mother, while 14 percent have cared for a spouse or partner.

Overwhelmingly, caregivers called it a positive experience. But it's also incredibly difficult, especially for spouses. While

Florida led nation in foreclosures

Associated Press

ORLANDO — Florida had the nation's highest foreclosure rate in April, even though it was lower than the same time last year.

The research firm RealtyTrac reported last week that Florida's April foreclosure rate was the highest in the nation, despite being down 9 percent from April 2012.

RealtyTrac says one in 400 Florida homes had a foreclosure filing in April.

Among U.S. metro areas with populations of more than 200,000 people, 11 of the 20 cities with the highest foreclosure rates were in Florida.

Orlando was at the top of the list. It was followed by the Daytona Beach area, South Florida, Jacksonville, metro Tampa and the Space Coast area. Lakeland and metro Sarasota were ranked ninth and 10th.

Mount Dora Bible grad: 'This place shaped me'

Meet some special seniors from this year's graduating class

Ashley "Taylor" Parr, 18, was bitter about school, her family and her life when she was sent from Ocoee to go live at the children's home at Mount Dora Bible School.

"I came here in August of my seventh-grade year because I was getting into some trouble," Parr said, recalling when she was 12. "My mom thought it was best for me to be sent to a nice Christian school and be around Christian people."

Parr resented the idea. It took her nearly a year to accept her new surroundings.

"At first, I was really bitter. I did not want to be here and I was upset about it, but then I saw the way that people were treating me here and I realized that this was the place for me. I started appreciating it; I saw the difference between my public school friends and Christian school friends," she said. "It was a big difference."

She noticed Mount Dora Bible was filled with supportive people.

"And that's what everyone needs, no matter who you are," she said. "You always need a support group. This is a great school and the teachers are really nice. If you don't understand something, they will stop a lesson and go through the whole thing again. They are not only teaching education, they are teaching how to walk with Christ, and 7 in 10 who cared for a spouse said their relationship grew stronger as a result, nearly two-thirds said it caused stress in their family compared with about half among those who cared for a parent.

It's not just an emotional challenge but a physical one: The average age of spouse caregivers was 67, compared to 58 for people who've cared for a parent.

Virginia Brumley, 79, said caring for her husband Jim for nearly five years as he suffered from dementia strengthened their bond. But eventually he needed a nursing home because "he was too big for me. He was as helpless as a baby," she said.

LONG-TERM PLANNING

A third of Americans in this age group are deeply concerned that they won't plan enough for the care they'll need in their senior years, and that they'll burden their families.

Yet two-thirds say they've done little or no planning. About 32 percent say they've set aside money to pay for ongoing living assistance; 28 percent have modified their home to make it easier to live in when they're older.

In contrast, two-thirds have disclosed their funeral plans.

Anthony Malen, 86, of Gilroy, California said he and his wife Eva Mae, who has a variety of health problems, never discussed a plan for caregiving as they got older.

"She doesn't want anyone in the house. She doesn't want any help. She fusses about it so much, I just give up on it. But if it gets any worse, we're going to have to have it," Malen said. "I'm getting older too."

BECOMING A CAREGIVER

Three in 10 Americans 40 and older think it's very likely that an older relative or friend will need care within the next five years.

Just 30 percent who expect to provide that care feel very prepared for the job, while half say they're somewhat prepared. But only 40 percent have discussed their loved one's preferences for that assistance or where they want to live. Women are more likely than men to have had those tough conversations.

WHAT DOES IT COST?

Some 53 percent of people underestimate the monthly cost of a nursing home, about $6,900. Another third underestimate the cost of assisted living, about $3,400. One in 5 wrongly thought a home health aide costs less than $1,000 a month.

Contrary to popular belief, Medicare doesn't pay for the most common long-term care — and last year, a bipartisan commission appointed by Congress couldn't agree on how to finance those services, either. But nearly 6 in 10 Americans 40 and older support some type of government-administered long-term care insurance program, a 7 point increase from last year's AP survey.

WHAT ELSE MIGHT HELP?

More than three-fourths of this age group favor tax breaks to encourage saving for long-term care or for purchasing long-term care insurance. Only a third favor a requirement to purchase such coverage.

Some 8 in 10 want more access to community services that help the elderly live independently.

More than 70 percent support respite care programs for family caregivers and letting people take time off work or adjust their schedules to accommodate caregiving.

The AP-NORC Center survey was conducted by telephone March 13 to April 23 among a random national sample of 1,419 adults age 40 or older, with funding from the SCAN Foundation. Results for the full survey have a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 3.6 percentage points.

Providing long-term care for family

A new poll asked adults age 40 and older about their experiences giving long-term care to a relative or friend.

More than half of Americans 40 or older have given long-term care to a relative or friend.

The relationships between caregivers and recipients of care extend across generations and throughout the family.

The AP-NORC Center for Public Affairs Research survey with funding from The SCAN Foundation was conducted from March 13 through April 23, 2014, among a random national sample of 1,419 adults age 40 or over living in the U.S. The results have a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 3.6 percentage points for results among all respondents. "Don't know" responses and item refusals are not shown.

Overall, caregivers reflect positively on their experience providing ongoing living assistance to their friends and family, though it does take a toll on many relationships, particularly between spouses.

Award for Water Conservation.

Paul Queen, director of marketing for Sentry Management, wrote in a press release "the award is the only comprehensive, independent recognition program for community associations in Florida."

"We are not getting any return on our investment," said Douglas. "We are being good stewards by spending extra money by conserving water. We want to be an example for Lake County about what a community should look like to save water."

Water conservation has been gaining traction in Lake County.

County Commissioner Sean Parks hopes to establish a non-profit association that would become a main source of information about water conservation.

This is in conjunction with the South Lake Regional Water Initiative, consisting of the South Lake Chamber of Commerce, the county and the municipalities of Clermont, Groveland, Minneola , Mascotte and Montverde.

They are working in conjunction with the Central Florida Water Initiative, to find a cost effective and alternative water source.

Further, there are other efforts taking place to better conserve water in the county.

Irrigation systems are being put in place in new developments that do not use potable water, homeowners are beginning to put in Florida-friendly landscaping including adding native species to their landscapes to reduce the amount of turf grass, and many are purchasing water-efficient appliances.

Water policy experts are warning that conservation in combination with finding alternative water sources must take place in the coming years to avoid the price of water increasing and shortages of a resource that used to be abundant.

"The price will have to go up because it will be scarce," said Ben Chou, water program analyst for the water program at the Natural Resources Defense Council, a national environmental action group, where his work has focused on how "local and state governments and the federal government are preparing for the water-related impacts of climate change. "There will be more water restrictions put in place if there is not conservation."

Population growth and climate change are contributing factors to the reduction of water supplies, experts said.

There will be demand for 300 million additional gallons of water a day in 2035 in Central Florida. The traditional source, the Floridan Aquifer, can meet a demand of only 50 million additional gallons, according to water experts.

"In the next 40 years we could have over 150,000 people additionally added to our population," Parks said. "We can't bury our head in the sand about it. We need to plan to address how our water needs will be met without determinately affecting our water resources."

Parks said he is looking to the cities and business communities to help fund the non-profit.

"We are looking for alternative water solutions, which include reuse and storm water, but a key to the solution clearly rests with conservation," he said.

It is imperative that homeowners no longer use potable water for irrigation, Parks said.

The National Climate Assessment, a government report that summarizes the effects of climate change now and in the future, states "population expansion in the (southeast) region is expected to increase domestic water demand."

"Such increases in water demand by the energy, agricultural and urban sectors will increase the competition for water, particularly in situations where environmental water needs conflict with other uses," states the report, which was prepared by a team of more than 300 experts and reviewed by federal agencies and a panel of the National Academy of Sciences.

While Florida has improved conservation efforts, those efforts are not as widespread as in California, where "the total amount of water has decreased even though the population has grown," Chou said.

Effective conservation methods include using recycled water and collecting rain water for irrigation, and updating building codes in using alternative water sources for things that don't require drinking water, Chou said.

Putting in native landscaping has proven beneficial in California and could be implemented successfully in Florida, Chou said.

"In areas of Florida there are vegetations that can survive and be successful with natural rainfall and don't have to be irrigated," he said.

Deirdre Irwin, Florida Water Star coordinator for the St. Johns River Water Management District, said she is seeing more sustainable landscaping that includes native plants.

Irwin agreed with Chou that conservation "is a huge part of the solution for water supply in Florida."

"Outdoor irrigation is considered the low hanging fruit for water conservation," she said. "Historically, we have seen poorly designed and inefficient irrigation systems."

One way homeowners can save water is to look at an irrigation timer and see how long it is set to run, she said.

"A common rule of thumb is 20 minutes for spray zones and 40 minutes for rotors," she said, emphasizing every system is different.

Irwin also suggested hiring an irrigation professional to find ways to lower your outdoor water use.

The challenge with instituting conservation within new development is the price, Irwin contended.

"When you build a house, landscapers are the last ones to come on the job and at that point money is running out," she said. "Oftentimes people don't have the money to pay the appropriate fee for better irrigation systems."

FRUITLAND PARK

Charter Committee to pitch ideas

STEVE FUSSELL
Special to The Daily Commercial

Fruitland Park's Charter Review Committee plans to pitch its ideas on how to amend the city's governing document to city voters at tonight's public hearing in the City Commission chambers.

The city sent meeting notices to all residents with their utility bills last week, and City Manager Gary La Venia said he expects a moderate turnout.

"All Charter Review Committee meetings have been open to the public, and while we have had a few spirited discussions, nothing controversial has emerged," La Venia said.

Most commissioners have attended most of the group's meetings along with a handful of local residents, he added.

"The committee has taken up several suggestions from the audience, both from commissioners and from residents," La Venia said.

La Venia said he expects tonight's meeting to focus on the charter group's plan to change the way the city elects its public officials.

Committee members voted unanimously last month to recommend dividing the city into five single-member districts. Voters in each district would then elect one commissioner who resides in their district.

The commission would then elect

$915M tunnel under Miami ready to relieve city's streets

Associated Press

MIAMI — After four years of work and with a price tag of $915 million, the tunnel that will allow port traffic to bypass the streets of downtown Miami is ready to open this month, officials said at a ceremony Monday.

U.S. Secretary of Transportation Anthony Foxx joined Gov. Rick Scott and other federal, state and local officials to mark the completion of the Port of Miami Tunnel. Foxx called the project "good for America because thousands of containers move through this port every day."

Before the tunnel, the only way into the port was through Port Boulevard, which caused heavy traffic for cargo trucks and cruise ship passengers. The tunnel will alleviate congestion, officials said.

"It's bottlenecks just like this one that relieve what we call first and last mile problems facing our nation's ports," Foxx said at the event. "It's why a national effort to improve ports must be accompanied by a strong national surface transportation program."

Glenn Farner, wearing his "Build 305" shirt, waits for the grand opening of the tunnel.

Chris Hodgkins, vice president of the project, said officials hoped to have the tunnel open to the public by the end of the month. On Monday, a truck coming through the tunnel for the ceremony broke down. "We had our first incident in the tunnel today," Hodgkins joked after the event.

The tunnel is about 4,200 feet long and 120 feet below the surface at its deepest point. It has two dedicated lanes in each direction that will connect Miami International Airport and Interstate 95 directly to PortMiami, Scott said.

"If we want to become a destination not just for the world's tourists, but for the world's jobs we have to keep investing in our ports," he said.

Scott also said former Gov. Jeb Bush "put a lot of effort into this.

Trial over political maps gets underway

GARY FINEOUT
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — A trial over whether Florida legislators broke the law when drawing new political maps started Monday with an attempt to delve into the often secretive world of the state's top politicians and their consultants.

Groups suing the Republican-controlled Florida Legislature contend GOP leaders ignored a 2010 constitutional amendment that requires them to draw up congressional districts that do not protect incumbents or members of a certain party. Attorneys for the Legislature have denied the allegations. If the court finds the current district unconstitutional it could force legislators to redraw congressional districts.

The entire first day of the scheduled 11-day trial was taken up by repeated questioning of a Republican consultant and friend of former House Speaker Dean Cannon. Attorneys representing the League of Women Voters and other groups tried to show that Marc Reichelderfer was part of a "shadow" process where he gave legislators advice on how to draw congressional districts that favored Republicans.

Credit Suisse pleads guilty

ERIC TUCKER and MARCY GORDON
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — European bank Credit Suisse AG pleaded guilty Monday to helping wealthy Americans avoid paying taxes through secret offshore accounts and agreed to pay about $2.6 billion.

The Justice Department said it was the largest penalty imposed in any criminal tax case. It is also the largest bank to plead guilty in more than 20 years.

The settlement resolves a yearslong criminal investigation into allegations that Credit Suisse, Switzerland's second-largest bank, recruited U.S. clients to open Swiss accounts, helped them conceal the accounts from the Internal Revenue Service and enabled misconduct by bank employees. The case is part of an Obama administration crackdown on foreign banks believed to be helping U.S. taxpayers hide assets.

EVAN VUCCI / AP

Attorney General Eric Holder speaks during a news conference at the Justice Department on Monday in Washington.

Officials said a criminal charge was necessary to account for the bank's pattern of misconduct, which included a lack of cooperation and document destruction. But the deal was structured in such a way as to allow the bank to continue operating.

The penalties will be paid to the Justice Department, the Federal Reserve and the New York State Department of Financial Services.

Attorney General Eric Holder, criticized last year after telling Congress that large banks had become hard to prosecute, appeared to foreshadow the guilty plea in a video message earlier this month in which he said no financial institution was "too big to jail."

"A company's profitability or market share can never and will never be used as a shield from prosecution or penalty," Holder told a news conference. "And this action should put that misguided notion definitively to rest."

The criminal case follows a Senate subcommittee investigation that found the bank provided accounts in Switzerland for more than 22,000 U.S. clients totaling $10 billion to $12 billion. The report said Credit Suisse sent Swiss bankers to recruit American clients at golf tournaments and other events, encouraged U.S. customers to travel to Switzerland and actively helped them hide their assets. In one instance, a Credit Suisse banker handed a customer bank statements hidden in a Sports Illustrated magazine during a breakfast meeting in the United States.

Credit Suisse chief executive Brady Dougan has said previously that senior executives at the bank were not aware that some Credit Suisse bankers were helping U.S. customers evade taxes. More than a half-dozen former bankers have been charged for their role in aiding the tax evasion. The case was filed in federal court in suburban Alexandria, Virginia, where individual bankers have been charged.

from Reichelderfer's computer show that he got copies of proposed redistricting maps days and weeks before the Legislature released them to the public. Reichelderfer exchanged information about these proposed maps with other Republican consultants and he talked about one of the maps with U.S. Rep. Dan Webster.

Reichelderfer insisted that just because information was given to him did not mean he was giving any advice on what legislators should do. One email that was unearthed includes an assertion that one district was "messed up."

"I didn't tell them where to draw lines on a map, I didn't tell them which maps to pick," Reicheldefer said.

But Reichelderfer also had trouble recalling conversations he had with Cannon and others. He insisted he was given the maps ahead of time because it was important to him "professionally" and because he would get asked questions about politicians he represented.

Every 10 years, state legislators use updated population numbers to draw up new legislative and congressional districts. Voters in 2010 passed the "Fair Districts" amendment that, for the first time, imposed new standards on how that job is carried out.

The lawsuit says several districts, including the one held by U.S. Rep. Corinne Brown in Jacksonville, were drawn in a way to help Republicans because legislators packed her district with black voters who are usually registered as Democrats. Brown's district winds all the way from Jacksonville to Orlando and was described as "serpentine" by one of the coalition lawyers.

Legislative attorneys have countered that the loss of several Republicans during the 2012 elections including U.S. Rep. Allen West is proof that legislators did not draw districts just to help GOP politicians.

Currently there are 16 Republicans and 10 Democrats in Florida's congressional delegation, although Republican Curt Clawson is expected to win election next month to a vacant southwest Florida seat.

The second day of the trial is expected to include testimony from current House Speaker Will Weatherford, who was in charge of House redistricting efforts in 2011 and 2012.

Unfortunately Charlie Crist didn't. And we lost jobs while he was governor, but look at what we've gotten done now. We're going to get the dredge done now, and we're going to have a lot of jobs ... 33,000 more private sector jobs when all of this is finished."

Crist spokesman Kevin Cate responded in an email: "It's unfortunate that Rick Scott is attempting to score political points, once again, on something that was the result of bipartisan work, crossing three administrations — and it's another reason why Floridians don't trust Rick Scott."

A statement on the tunnel opening released earlier Monday said Crist was "quite proud of how all the partners worked together during my administration to finally get this project from the drawing board to construction." Crist is running again for governor, this time as a Democrat.

one commissioner to serve as mayor, with the responsibility to set the agenda, preside over meetings and represent the city at community functions.

After considering any additional public input, the Charter Committee will submit its recommendations to the City Commission, which will decide which amendments to put on the ballot this November.

City voters can then adopt each individual amendment by a majority vote.

La Venia said the charter group has proposed another amendment to require that any future charter changes be adopted by a majority of voters city-wide with a majority of voters in at least four of the city's five districts.

Commissioners paneled the Charter Review Committee three months ago in an effort to preserve the city's small-town character when an estimated 4,000 new residents — a majority of city voters — move into the Villages of Fruitland Park next year.

Tonight's meeting will start at 6 p.m.

hopefully it will hold out so if the people all come they'll enjoy what Mount Dora has to offer as far as the outside activities and just walking the town and things like that," Hoechst said.

She added the conference would help bring awareness to the town Mount Dora has a central location, and she hopes it would be a convenient venue.

Jim Gunderson, who co-owns the Lakeside Inn with his wife Alexandra, said Monday he is expecting around 100 people.

He said the conference gives the inn more exposure and brings people to the inn and city who might not have been there before.

He added the Lakeside Inn, while hosting a lot of smaller meetings, does not do a lot of larger conferences but is hoping to change that.

"Anytime we're able to host a statewide conference and gain the exposure, it's always positive for us," Gunderson said.

Gundersdon said it would be good for people to see Mount Dora when there isn't a major festival going on so people can walk around, and visit the shops and restaurants.

"I think Mount Dora shines in those situations as much as it does during the festivals," he said.

Guardian ad Litem volunteers needed in Lake, Sumter

Staff Report

The Guardian ad Litem (GAL) program is currently seeking volunteer advocates to be a voice for abused, neglected or abandoned children whose cases are in the court system.

"On any given day in the 5th Judicial Circuit, more than 1,500 children are involved with our local dependency courts due to abuse and neglect," Marcia Hilty, Circuit Director of GAL Program for 5th Judicial Circuit which includes Lake County, said in a press release. "The majority of these children are below eight years of age. These children need someone who will speak up for them."

According to Hilty, a GAL is a trained volunteer appointed by the court to advocate on behalf of a child. The GAL becomes familiar with the child's case and makes recommendations to the court to help ensure a safe, stable, permanent environment for the child.

Research shows that when a child whose case is being heard in dependency court is assigned to a GAL volunteer, they spend less time in foster care and do better in school, Hilty said.

Eligible volunteers must be 21 years of age and older, successfully complete the pre-service training program and be cleared of any serious criminal history. On average, volunteers should expect to spend up to 10 hours a month on a case, and most cases last 10 months.

The program's next four-part training session begins June 9 and continues on June 10, 12 and 13 at the Oxford Assembly of God, 12114 N. U.S. Highway 301 in Oxford near The Villages. To find out more, call 352-274-5231 or email Sarah.Jay@gal.fl.gov.

there have been many teachers here who have adopted me like their own child."

A cheerleader at the school for the past three years and active in several clubs, Parr will graduate Friday night as one of 48 seniors. She has maintained a 3.3 GPA.

"I am very excited about graduation," said Parr, who aspires to further her education at a Christian college, majoring in early childhood education or elementary education. One of the private Christian colleges Parr is considering applying to is Florida College in Temple Terrace, outside of Tampa.

JUST THE FACTS

GRADUATION: Mount Dora Bible School

DATE: 7 p.m. May 23

PLACE: High school gymnasium

NUMBER OF GRADUATES: 48

VALEDICTORIAN: Madison Cooney

SALUTATORIANS: Troy Clark and Morgan Lee

KEYNOTE SPEAKER: Kenny Backhaus

She had been accepted at a university in Tennessee, yet Parr found it was not going to work because she did not receive enough in scholarships to be able to go out of state. And that's OK, she said, as she's happy to stay in Florida.

"There is always a reason for everything; some doors close so that other doors can open," she said, noting her advice to other students is simple: "Always stay true to yourself and remember to put God first because he knows what's good for you."

Parr is pleased that her family will be attending her graduation.

"I am the first one in my family to graduate high school," she said, noting her older relatives now wish that they could have graduated from high school and gone to college. "But, I have a whole bunch of little nephews and nieces," she added, hoping to be a role model for them.

The senior said Mount Dora Bible will always remain close in her heart.

"I will definitely come back and visit because this place shaped me for who I am today and who I am going to be in the future," said Parr, who wants to come back to provide occasional respite for the house parents who care for children who live on campus.

"I know what the kids are going through," she said. "I have been there and I want to help them."

HACKING

secrets. The U.S. accusation against Chinese personnel is purely ungrounded and absurd."

The charges underscore a longtime Obama administration goal to prosecute state-sponsored cyberthreats, which U.S. officials say they have grappled with for years. One government report said more than 40 Pentagon weapons programs and nearly 30 other defense technologies have been compromised by cyber intrusions from China. The cybersecurity firm Mandiant issued a report last year alleging links between a secret Chinese military unit and years of cyberattacks against U.S. companies.

Monday's prosecution was announced on the heels of a separate worldwide operation over the weekend that resulted in the arrests of 97 people in 16 countries who are suspected of developing, distributing or using malicious software called BlackShades.

The new indictment attempts to distinguish spying for national security purposes — which the U.S. admits doing — from economic espionage intended to gain commercial advantage for private companies or industries, which the U.S. denies it does. Classified documents disclosed by former National Security Agency analyst Edward Snowden have described aggressive U.S. efforts to eavesdrop on foreign communications that would be illegal in those countries.

Unlike in some countries, there are no nationalized U.S. industries. American officials have flatly denied that the government spies on foreign companies and then hands over commercially valuable information to U.S. companies. In China, though, many companies are state owned, particularly those that supply the military.

"These five people were just doing their jobs. It's just that we object to what their jobs are," said Mark Rasch, a former U.S. cybercrimes prosecutor. "We have tens of thousands of dedicated, hard-working Americans who are just doing their jobs, too."

The indictment says that hackers, officers with the China's People's Liberation Army, stole proprietary information from the companies and the labor union, including design specification for Westinghouse pipes and pricing and strategy information from SolarWorld. Working from

In surprise call, Thailand's army declares martial law

THANYARAT DOKSONE and TODD PITMAN

WASON WANICHAKORN / AP

A Thai soldier mans his machine gun atop a military vehicle outside the Centre for the Administration of Peace and Order after soldiers were sent in to seize the center Tuesday in Bangkok, Thailand.

BANGKOK — Thailand's army declared martial law before dawn Tuesday in a surprise announcement it said was aimed at keeping the country stable after six months of sometimes violent political unrest. The military, however, denied a coup d'etat was underway.

The move effectively places the army in charge of public security nationwide. It comes one day after the Southeast Asian country's caretaker prime minister refused to step down and follows six months of anti-government demonstrations that have failed to oust the government.

Armed troops entered multiple private television stations in Bangkok to broadcast their message and surrounded the national police headquarters in the city center. Army jeeps mounted with a machine-guns diverted traffic on a major road in front of Central World, one of the country's most luxurious shopping malls. But the vast metropolis of 10 million people appeared calm, and commuters could be seen driving and walking to work as usual.

An army official, speaking on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the situation, told The Associated Press "this is definitely not a coup. This is only to provide safety to the people and the people can still carry on their lives as normal."

Thailand's army has staged at 11 successful coups since the end of absolute monarchy in 1932. The last was in 2006.

Utah officials ordered to recognize more than 1,000 same-sex marriages

Plaintiff Matthew Barraza, left, looks on as his husband Tony Milner, right, holds their son Jesse, 4, following a news conference in Salt Lake City.

SALT LAKE CITY — When Matthew Barraza and Tony Milner's 5-year-old son starts kindergarten next fall, both of his fathers could finally be recognized as his legal parents.

A federal judge on Monday ordered Utah officials to recognize more than 1,000 same-sex marriages that took place in the state before the U.S. Supreme Court issued an emergency stay. If the rulings stands after a 21-day hold the judge placed on it, the state would be required to lift its freeze on benefits requested by gay couples.

Barraza and Milner married in December and have a pending request to have Milner recognized as a legal parent of their son, Jesse, who currently is only Barraza's son under the law.

"We're ecstatic," Barraza said. "It's something that is really good for us and our family."

The gay and lesbian couples married after a federal judge overturned Utah's same-sex marriage ban Dec. 20. Those weddings came to a halt Jan. 6 when the Supreme Court granted the stay.

Utah officials argued that they had no choice but to hold off on benefits until an appeals court rules on same-sex marriage.

U.S. District Judge Dale Kimball disagreed in his ruling Monday, saying Utah's decision to freeze all benefits put the couples in an unacceptable legal limbo regarding adoptions, child care and custody, medical decisions and inheritance, among other things.

"These legal uncertainties and lost rights cause harm each day that the marriage is not recognized," Kimball wrote.

He stayed his ruling three weeks to give the state an opportunity to appeal the ruling to the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver.

The ruling has no bearing on a decision pending from that court about the constitutionality of the same-sex marriage ban that Utah voters passed in 2004.

Utah Gov. Gary Herbert said in a statement that the state is reviewing the ruling, evaluating options and determining how this relates.

The conservative Sutherland Institute of Utah decried the ruling in a statement, saying it gives too much merit to a "novel ruling" by one judge.

In issuing the freeze in early January, Gov. Gary Herbert told state agencies to hold off on any new benefits for the couples until the courts resolve the issue.

Agencies were told not to revoke anything already issued, such as a driver's license with a new name, but were prohibited from approving benefits.

Putin orders troops home

VLADIMIR ISACHENKOV
Associated Press

MOSCOW — In what could be a move to ease tensions with the West and avoid another round of sanctions, Russian President Vladimir Putin on Monday ordered troops deployed near Ukraine to return to their home bases. Putin also praised the launch of a dialogue between the Ukrainian government and its opponents even as fighting continued in the eastern parts of the country.

Putin specifically ordered Defense Minister Sergei Shoigu to pull back forces involved in "planned spring drills" in the Rostov, Belgorod and Bryansk regions to their home bases, the Kremlin said. The order appears to go further than a similar statement by the Russian leader two weeks ago that troops were being pulled back from the border to shooting ranges.

The three regions border Ukraine and the withdrawal of troops deployed there to other Russian provinces would signal a genuine attempt by Moscow to de-escalate the worst crisis in its relations with the West since the Cold War. It also would be easily verifiable by Western intelligence.

The Kremlin statement didn't say how many troops would be pulled out from the three regions or specify how quick the withdrawal would be.

The United States and NATO said they saw no sign of a pullout after Putin's earlier claim of a withdrawal. On Monday, NATO Secretary General Anders Fogh Rasmussen reiterated the military alliance has "not seen any evidence at all that the Russians have started withdrawal of troops from the Ukrainian border."

He said that NATO remains open to a political dialogue with Moscow, and has proposed holding a meeting at the NATO-Russia Council next week.

ALEXANDER ZEMLIANICHENKO / AP

A gunman aims his weapon as he prepares to patrol in Slovyansk, eastern Ukraine, on Monday. Behind him is Donetsk People's Republic flag.

Putin's move appears to represent an attempt to ease tensions with the West and avoid another round of crippling sanctions. The U.S. and the European Union have slapped travel bans and asset freezes on members of Putin's entourage over Russia's annexation of Crimea. They threatened to target entire sectors of the Russian economy with sanctions if Russia tries to derail Ukraine's presidential vote set for Sunday.

Pavel Felgenhauer, an independent Moscow-based military analyst, said on Dozhd TV that the pullout is a sign that Putin has decided not to send troops to Ukraine, at least for now. Felgenhauer said that Putin may hope to achieve his targets by non-military means instead.

"They think that the Ukrainian government won't be able to consolidate despite the presidential election, and the economic, political and social crisis will escalate," Felgenhauer said. "They see no need to take the risky move of invasion, which would trigger serious sanctions."

Russia wants guarantees that Ukraine doesn't join NATO and conducts a constitutional reform that would give broader powers to its regions, something that would allow Moscow to maintain its clout in the Russian-speaking eastern regions that form the nation's industrial heartland.

Ukraine's Foreign Ministry said it was checking the information about the troops' withdrawal and urged Moscow to also cancel an air force exercise, set to take place in southwestern Russia between Wednesday and Sunday. It said the exercise — which would involve more than 70 combat aircraft, including Tu-22M long-range bombers — would fuel tensions during the vote.

Pro-Russian rebels, who have seized government buildings in eastern Ukraine and fought government troops, have declared two sprawling provinces independent and vowed to block Sunday's vote. Ukraine and the West have accused Russia of fomenting the mutiny — claims that Russia has denied.

Facing Western pressure, Putin supported a peace plan for settling the crisis, which was brokered by the Swiss chairmanship of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe. Putin, who earlier had called for postponing the presidential vote, has now softened his stance, welcoming Sunday's election.

Violence in north Mexico heats up; so do protests

Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — The bodies of four men and three women have been found stuffed inside a sport utility vehicle in the port city of Tampico in a northern Mexico border state where a surge in violence in recent weeks has brought triggered civic protests over drug-fueled killings.

Tamaulipas state prosecutors said the unidentified bodies found Sunday in Tampico were the result of killings linked to "internal disputes between presumed criminal gangs."

A week ago, activists in Tampico held a rare protest for peace in which about 12,000 people participated, organizer Eduardo Cantu said. On Sunday, about 1,000 people turned out for a peace march farther north in the state capital of Ciudad Victoria, the first of its kind in recent memory in that city.

"We can't go on this way," said Raul Villarreal Caballero, a store owner who was one of the organizers of Sunday's march. "There are a lot of people already who have left Ciudad Victoria. I haven't because we have a furniture store that has been open for 99 years."

"There is a lot fear, but we put ourselves in the hands of the Lord," he added.

Villarreal Caballero said people in the state capital were feeling a bit more hopeful with the federal government's announcement last week of a new security plan for Tamaulipas. "We have some hope that this situation is finally ending," he said of recent shootouts, road blockages and kidnappings.

The new plan includes appointing military commanders for security forces, blocking smuggling routes for people, weapons and drugs, and vetting local police for corruption.

AT&T to acquire DirecTV for $48.5B

RYAN NAKASHIMA
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — AT&T says it views its planned $48.5 billion purchase of DirecTV as a way to help redefine the video entertainment industry, giving it opportunities to bundle services and tap into growing Latin American markets.

AT&T Inc.'s proposed transaction primes it for the age of Internet-delivered video.

AT&T and DirecTV promised consumer benefits like more economical bundles that tie mobile phone, pay TV and Internet service together on a single bill. AT&T said that it'll probably be 12 to 18 months for robust streaming video offerings to be available, but that bundled offerings should be available soon after the deal closes, which the companies expect to occur within 12 months.

AT&T is currently the second-largest wireless provider with 116 million customers.

The company will gain access to DirecTV's 20.3 million U.S. customers and its 18.1 million Latin American customers. DirecTV's U.S. customers, coupled with 5.7 million U-verse TV customers, will give the combined AT&T-DirecTV 26 million U.S. users for video. That would make it the second-largest pay TV operator behind a combined Comcast-Time Warner Cable, which would serve 30 million under a $45 billion merger proposed in February.

"What it does is it gives us the pieces to fulfill a vision we've had for a couple of years — the ability to take premium content and deliver it across multiple points: your smartphone, tablet, television or laptop," AT&T Chairman and CEO Randall Stephenson said during a conference call Sunday.

Michael White, chairman and CEO of DirecTV Inc., said Monday that his company has been talking off and on with AT&T about a potential transaction for years, but that recent trends in the industry helped make the deal happen now.

The companies are aiming to eke out $1.6 billion in annual cost savings in an increasingly expensive and maturing pay TV business. Using DirecTV's cash flow, AT&T has greater ability to invest in its landline and mobile networks for broader reach and faster speeds in an Internet service market where it risks falling behind a bulked up Comcast-Time Warner Cable.

But the deal could face regulatory scrutiny from the Federal Communications Commission and Department of Justice. Unlike the cable company tie-up, the AT&T-DirecTV merger would effectively cut the number of video providers from four to three for about 25 percent of U.S. households.

This combo made from file photos shows the AT&T logo on the side of a corporate office in Springfield, Ill., left, and a DirecTV satellite dish atop a home in Los Angeles.

Cable companies operate in regions that don't overlap. By comparison, AT&T provides TV service to 22 states, where it is a direct competitor to DirecTV, which operates nationwide. Reducing choice in those markets could result in higher prices for consumers, and that usually gives regulators cause for concern.

White said Monday that customers will see more competitive pricing from the combination with AT&T.

Stephenson said regulatory concerns would be addressed with a number of what he called "unprecedented" commitments. Among them:

■ DirecTV would continue to be offered as a stand-alone service for three years after the deal's closing.

■ AT&T would offer stand-alone broadband service for at least three years after closing, so consumers could consume video from Netflix and other online services, with download speeds of at least 6 megabits per second where feasible.

■ AT&T would expand high-speed broadband access to 15 million more homes — to 70 million total — within four years.

■ AT&T vowed to abide by the open Internet order from 2010 that the Federal Communications Commission is now in the process of revising after a court struck it down.

■ AT&T vowed to sell its roughly 9 percent stake in Latin American wireless carrier América Móvil for about $5 billion.

Delara Derakhshani, policy counsel for Consumer Reports magazine's lobbying arm, Consumers Union, complained that the deal "is just the latest attempt at consolidation in a marketplace where consumers are already saddled with lousy service and price hikes."

"You can't justify AT&T buying DirecTV by pointing at Comcast's grab for Time Warner, because neither one is a good deal for consumers," she said in a statement.

Under the terms announced Sunday, DirecTV shareholders will receive $28.50 per share in cash and $66.50 per share in AT&T stock, bringing the value to $95 a share. The total transaction value is $67.1 billion, including DirecTV's net debt.

Oil up near $103 amid Libya, Ukraine conflicts

Associated Press

The price of oil approached $103 a barrel Monday as violence in Libya threatened to once again delay a potential increase in the country's exports of crude.

By early afternoon in Europe, benchmark U.S. crude for June delivery was up 78 cents to $102.80 a barrel in electronic trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange. On Friday, the Nymex contract added 52 cents to close at $102.02, gaining about 2 percent for the week.

Brent crude for July delivery, a benchmark for international oil, was up 35 cents to $110.10 on the ICE Futures exchange in London.

In Libya, which has Africa's largest proven reserves of crude, political instability deepened Sunday after militiamen loyal to a renegade general stormed the parliament building in the capital city of Tripoli. On Monday, the country's army chief ordered the deployment of Islamist-led militias in Tripoli, which could lead to a showdown between the two sides.

Libya, earlier a key crude supplier to European refineries, has been struggling to stabilize its oil output and exports since the 2011 ouster of dictator Moammar Gadhafi. Production is down to around 200,000 barrels a day from some 1.4 million barrels a day a year ago.

"In light of the latest reports, any significant and lasting rise in the production level appears illusory," said analysts at Commerzbank in Frankfurt in a note to clients.

The developments in Libya also pointed to tighter supplies in the second half of the year, as predicted last week by the International Energy Agency, unless other OPEC countries increase their output.

Pfizer's $119B offer for rival nixed

GREGORY KATZ and LINDA A. JOHNSON
Associated Press

LONDON — The board of AstraZeneca on Monday rejected the improved $119 billion takeover offer from U.S. drugmaker Pfizer, a decision that caused a sharp slide in the U.K. company's share price as many investors think it effectively brings an end to the protracted and increasingly bitter takeover saga.

The board said in a statement that it "reiterates its confidence in AstraZeneca's ability to deliver on its prospects as an independent, science led business."

Pfizer, which is the world's second-biggest drugmaker by revenue, has been courting No. 8 AstraZeneca since January, arguing their businesses are complementary. On Sunday, it raised its stock-and-cash offer by 15 percent to $118.8 billion, or 70.73 billion pounds. That would be the richest acquisition ever among drugmakers and the third-biggest in any industry, according to figures from research firm Dealogic.

AstraZeneca didn't take long to reject the new offer, its board arguing Pfizer is making "an opportunistic attempt to acquire a transformed AstraZeneca, without reflecting the value of its exciting pipeline" of experimental drugs.

Because Pfizer said it won't raise its offer again or launch a hostile takeover bid over the heads of AstraZeneca's board, the prospect of a deal looks increasingly remote unless AstraZeneca shareholders urge a change of mind. Pfizer has said it hopes AstraZeneca's shareholders will push for a deal.

"This has been going on for quite some time and we have been in very deep engagement over the whole of the weekend," AstraZeneca Chairman Leif Johansson told the BBC. "If Pfizer now says this is the final offer I have to believe what they say."

Shareholders in AstraZeneca PLC seemed to think a deal is now unlikely, with the company's share price slumping 11.1 percent to 42.87 pounds.

Johansson said his management team had told Pfizer Inc. over the weekend that it would need to see a 10 percent improvement over the 53.50 pounds-per-share offer that was on the table at that time. He said Pfizer's latest offer represented only a "minor improvement" that fell short of the 10 percent needed.

Though it has said its indicative offer is final, Pfizer has, under U.K. takeover rules, until 5 p.m. local time on May 26 to make a formal bid. If it doesn't, it cannot make another offer for six months.

The Market In Review

Today

Remodeling bump?

Home Depot's latest quarterly earnings should provide insight into the strength of the home remodeling market.

The home improvement retailer, due to report fiscal first-quarter financial results today, has benefited from rising U.S. home prices, which have spurred many homeowners to renovate their homes. Severe weather this winter stalled some of those home makeovers, leading to a decline in Home Depot's revenue for the three months ended Feb. 2.

Plosser speaks

One of the Federal Reserve's bank presidents will deliver remarks today on the economy.

Charles Plosser, president and CEO of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, is due to speak at a luncheon in Washington hosted by Women in Housing & Finance. Last month, Plosser and other members of the central bank's policymaking committee agreed to further cut the Fed's bond purchases, concluding that the U.S. job market needs less help.

Improved results?

Financial analysts predict that Medtronic's fiscal fourth-quarter earnings and revenue improved from a year ago.

Last month, a federal appeals court handed the world's largest medical device maker a legal victory in its dispute with rival Edwards Lifesciences. The court delayed the implementation of an injunction that would have blocked sales of Medtronic's CoreValve heart valve system. Edwards claims CoreValve infringes on patents that protect its own valve system.

Staying true to Net neutrality

Chairman Tom Wheeler of the Federal Communications Commission said all the right things about Net neutrality Thursday as the agency voted to release draft rules for preserving the open Internet. Nevertheless, real questions remain about whether the proposal he's championed is the right way to protect the Internet's reach, connectivity and innovative spirit. Perhaps that's why the commission provided an unusually long time for the public to comment on Wheeler's proposal and possible alternatives. It's a reminder that, despite the near-hysteria drummed up by some Net neutrality advocates, we're still at the start of the rule-making process, not the end.

At issue is whether and how the government should try to stop certain Internet service providers — companies such as AT&T, Verizon and Time-Warner Cable that connect individual users to the Net — from favoring some sites and services over others. The fear is that ISPs would sell high-priority delivery to deep-pocketed companies, enabling their content to look and perform better at the expense of everyone else's. Although the FCC has been saying for a decade that broadband access service should be free from such interference, the courts have twice rejected its rules and enforcement efforts. There are no neutrality rules in force today, just antitrust and consumer protection laws to deter ISPs from tilting the online playing field.

Wheeler has proposed taking a case-by-case approach that would forbid ISPs from striking "commercially unreasonable" deals with sites and services that want to pay for premium access to Internet users. Critics on the left say his approach would lead to a "two-tiered" Internet with fast lanes for big companies and slow lanes for start-ups and innovators, while those on the right say it's a solution in search of a problem. The proposal is moving ahead in part because of language Wheeler added to clarify the sorts of deals ISPs would be barred from making, providing more assurance that consumers and content providers wouldn't face slowdowns, and giving more weight to a stringent regulatory alternative favored by many neutrality advocates.

Before Thursday's vote, Wheeler emphatically declared his opposition to a two-tiered Internet. "There is one Internet. It must be fast, it must be robust, and it must be open," he said, adding, "The prospect of a gatekeeper choosing winners and losers on the Internet is unacceptable." He's right about all that, yet good intentions don't count for much. The commission needs to show that whatever rules it adopts will actually promote innovation and investment, set clear guidelines for ISPs that won't shift with the political winds, and have a solid basis in law. Wheeler's statements raise the hope that the new rules will meet those tests. But the scrutiny is just starting.

Let's have some civility at commencement speeches

Dan K. Thomasson

MCCLATCHY-TRIBUNE NEWS SERVICE

A year ago attending my oldest granddaughter's graduation from a major Virginia university, I was somewhat curious about the lack of a commencement speaker. There was instead a short, perhaps six or seven minute statement by the dean of her particular college, the largest in the school, praising the newly minted graduates and wishing them luck.

I was told that because of the size of the class and ancillary requirements like the awarding of faculty and student academic honors, it was decided to forgo the usual celebrity pep talk. I accepted this as sensible and plausible but suspected that another reason was the difficulty these days of enlisting men and women of stature to make the traditional speech and receive an honorary — both designed to increase the prestige of the school as well as to honor the person chosen.

The furor now swirling around campuses this year is ample proof that tradition may be coming to an end with more and more colleges and universities deciding it may not be worth the potential embarrassment to the institution to engage a speaker who some view as too controversial.

According to the Washington Post and the Foundation for Individual Rights in Education, since 1987 there have been at least 145 instances in which speakers have withdrawn their names, had their invitations rescinded or been the subject of protests. The list seems to have grown exponentially in the last five years with 100 such examples. In 2010 for instance Butler University found John G. Roberts Jr., the chief justice of the United Sates and an Indiana native, too controversial to address its graduates. Earlier in 2008, former everything including Secretary of State Hillary Clinton had the same honor heaped on her by the College of St. Catherine.

This year former Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice canceled her Rutgers University graduation appearance because of student and faculty protests and other major figures like former New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg and New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie as well prominent academics from places like the University of California Berkley and Harvard have faced the same situation for past decisions or current policies.

I tried to recall my own college commencement speaker and wasn't able to do so and I was too lazy to try to find out. Besides, I remember nothing of the speech as I daresay neither do 99.9 percent of graduates 10 minutes after they shift their tassels. Their only thoughts naturally center on what comes next.

But that seems beside the point. There are larger issues here not the least of which is the belief that college is a place for the exchange of all ideas, no matter how outlandish, to be accepted or rejected as one sees fit. That isn't, at least I was taught, limited to the classroom where the audience is captive but extends also to those outside the academic circle who have a record of achievement.

In other words, the fact that a handful of student protesters or timid administrators or activist faculty members can deny access to the likes of the chief justice of the United States or the nation's chief foreign policy experts, no matter whose presidential administration they served, is an assault on academic freedom second to none. Is there any greater hypocrisy? Furthermore it is an insult to the students who are deprived of making their own judgment. Whatever happened to the mantra "I disagree with what you say but I will defend ..."?

We're not talking about peddlers of hate here or those who would advocated the return of slavery or preach sedition. It goes without saying that to give them a platform would be wrong. But these are people of solid prominence and expertise in their fields, who just might have a suggestion that would benefit a student audience.

My mother and father taught me that open mindedness was crucial to success in any endeavor. "Listen and sort," my mother used to say. "If you don't like what you hear, reject it. If it makes sense, accept it as long as it isn't a threat to civil order or the rights of others." I always found that good advice.

I didn't miss having to sit through a long address at my granddaughter's commencement, but I would have done so politely.

Girls basketball coach to retire to his native North Carolina

FRANK JOLLEY | Staff Writer
frank.jolley@dailycommercial.com

Mark Oates, who led the Leesburg High School girls basketball team to three Final Four appearances in 11 seasons, resigned Monday.

Oates said he submitted his letter of resignation and spoke to Leesburg Principal Bill Miller on Monday morning and told his team during an afternoon workout.

"It's time," Oates said. "I've given Leesburg High School and the girls basketball program here all I've got. We've have a lot of success here, but I'm ready to move on to the next challenge."

Oates said he is returning to his native North Carolina to be closer to his mother and the rest of his family.

Leesburg's Keshawn Johnson pats Oates' head as they talk on the sideline during the Leesburg-New Smyrna class 6A-Region 2 quarterfinal game on Feb. 6 at Leesburg High School.

"I'll be able to watch some (University of) North Carolina basketball and some of that good Carolina barbecue," Oates said.

During his time at Leesburg, Oates compiled a 224-84 record with the Yellow Jackets. Under his tutelage, Leesburg made state Final Four appearances in 2007, 2008 and 2011.

Leesburg won three regional titles and reached four regional championships.

"The one thing that still gnaws at me is that we were never able to win once we got to state," Oates said. "We had teams capable of winning state championships. In 2008, I thought we were the best team in the state.

"For whatever reason, we just never got over the hump when we got to Lakeland (site of state championships)."

Oates believes he was able to generate the success he had at Leesburg because the players and parents were willing to let him do his job. He set high expectations for the program when he took it over and convinced his players they were capable of achieving the lofty goals he set.

Nasal strip OK'd for California Chrome

RICK FREEMAN
Associated Press

NEW YORK — California Chrome beat out an idiosyncratic racing rule — by a nose.

The colt is back on track for his Triple Crown try after an only-in-New York equipment ban appeared ready to put a kink in his Triple Crown try at the Belmont Stakes.

The Kentucky Derby and Preakness Stakes winner was cleared to wear the nasal strip he has worn all through a six-race winning streak that has set him up for a chance at horse racing's 12th Triple Crown.

New York racetracks have a rule prohibiting any equipment not specifically approved by stewards, and nasal strips were not on their list. A statement from the New York Racing Association and the state's Gaming Commission on Monday said the track's three stewards unanimously agreed to lift

Seahawks, Broncos favorites for Super Bowl

TIM DAHLBERG

LAS VEGAS — Training camps are weeks away, but Las Vegas' legal bookmakers are already making bets on what the NFL season will look like.

Turns out it could be a lot like the last, with the defending Super Bowl champion Seattle Seahawks and the Denver Broncos favored to meet again next February in Arizona.

Seattle is a 9-2 favorite at the LVH sports book,

Pressure on Miami after George, West key 107-96 Game 1 rout

INDIANAPOLIS — The Pacers waited all season for the playoff rematch with Miami.

In Game 1 of the Eastern Conference finals, they made the wait worthwhile.

Paul George and David West helped Indiana stagger the two-time defending NBA champs early, knock them out late and take the opener in the best-of-seven series 107-96 on Sunday.

"All season, we've been waiting for the opportunity to be where we're at right now. They're the champs and we just have to bring it to them."

Lance Stephenson
Indiana Pacers

"All season, we've been waiting for the opportunity to be where we're at right now. They're the champs and we just have to bring it to them," Lance Stephenson said. "We have to think Pacers basketball and be the first on the floor."

These teams certainly are well acquainted.

The home team won each of the four previous meetings this season — by six points, three points and one point before Miami's 98-86 "blowout" last month. Last season, Indiana won two of the three regular-season contests — both at home — before succumbing in Game 7 of the Eastern Conference finals at Miami. In 2011-12, the Pacers went 1-3 against Miami in the regular season but had the eventual world champs on the ropes after taking a 2-1 lead in the conference semifinals. The Heat rallied to win the final three.

Indiana Pacers' David West goes to the basket during the second half of Game 1 of the Eastern Conference finals against the Miami Heat on Sunday in Indianapolis.

On Sunday, the Pacers ignored history and played their most complete game in months.

Indiana was so dominant that it finished with its highest point total this postseason, never let Miami take the lead and never even allowed the Heat to get within one possession after George Hill scored the first five points in the game's first 40 seconds.

At times, the Heat looked befuddled and frustrated — just like the Pacers planned.

"We know these guys and we're pretty familiar with them," West said after finishing with 19 points and seven rebounds. "I thought our resolve and playoff-style of ball was where it needed to be."

Now Indiana has a chance to do something it couldn't in either of their last two playoff series against the Heat — taking a 2-0 lead. Game 2 is Tuesday in Indy.

And Miami has plenty of work to do before then.

While LeBron James finished with 25 points, 10 rebounds and five assists, and Dwyane Wade had 27 points and five assists, the rest of the Heat starters combined for 18 points, six rebounds and nine assists.

The Pacers, meanwhile, had six players in double figures including Paul George, who had 24 points and seven assists, West with 19 points and seven rebounds, Roy Hibbert with 19 points and nine rebounds, and Stephenson with 17 points and eight assists.

Miami also was a dismal 6 of 23 on 3-pointers, had just four offensive rebounds, allowed the Pacers to shoot 51.5 percent from the field and make six of their first seven 3s and sent them to the free-throw line 37 times.

And James made his only two free throws of the game.

STRIP

The strip worn by California Chrome during his six-race winning streak is thought to assist airflow through the nostrils — something that should come in handy June 7 for Belmont's grueling run.

"I think it opens up his air passage and gives him that little extra oomph that he needs, especially going a mile and a half," trainer Art Sherman said. "Any time you can have a good air passage that means a lot for these thoroughbreds."

Other states allow equine nasal strips while racing, and even some jockeys wear them, as do humans in other sports. American marathon star Meb Keflezighi can be seen sporting one during his winning run in Boston last month.

California Chrome doesn't need to go 26.2 miles to reach racing immortality, though. Just 1½ will do.

Racing hasn't had a Triple Crown winner since Affirmed in 1978, and the sport's popularity has waned in the nearly four decades since. But it gets a boost every time a horse heads to the Big Apple with a Triple Crown on the line.

Sherman raised the possibility his horse wouldn't run in the Belmont if barred from using a nasal strip, but the problem was solved in about 24 hours, clearing the way for big crowds and plenty of betting at Belmont in less than three weeks.

Two years ago, Doug O'Neill trained I'll Have Another to victories in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness with the colt wearing a nasal strip. New York officials told O'Neill his horse couldn't wear one in the Belmont. The issue became moot when I'll Have Another was scratched the day before the race because of a leg injury.

BETS

while the Broncos are next at 5-1 to win the Super Bowl. Both teams are favored to win more regular-season games than any other team, with oddsmakers putting the over/under for wins at 11 games.

"The Broncos have a real tough schedule so it won't be an easy task," said Jeff Sherman, part of a team that sets the odds at the LVH. "They have some tough early games outside their division, including the Super Bowl rematch with the Seahawks in Week 3."

The Seahawks are 3½-point favorites to beat the Broncos at home in that game, a line that figures to draw some early action even before either team puts on the pads this summer. Denver was a 2-point favorite in the Super Bowl, which Seattle won 43-8.

Sherman said there is more parity than ever in the NFL, with 19 teams expected to win between seven and nine games and only five expected to win 10 or more. At the bottom of the pack is Jacksonville, with a 4½-win line, and Oakland at five games.

Despite the parity, teams in the NFC are favored more than teams in the AFC. Bettors can wager on which conference wins the Super Bowl, with the NFC a 3½-point favorite.

"The one thing that really stood out when we sat down and went through this game by game was how many good teams are in the NFC," Sherman said.

NFL games are by far the biggest attraction for sports bettors, who placed a record $119.4 million in legal wagers in Nevada on the last Super Bowl alone. Nevada is the only state where full betting on games is allowed, though bettors in Delaware can wager on parlays of more than one team.

Sherman said most of the so-called "wise guys" who can move the lines at sports books wait until the exhibition season to begin making wagers, though some might pounce on the early numbers if they think the oddsmakers have made an error evaluating a team.

"Once the preseason games start and you can see what the coaches are thinking it becomes more clear," he said.

OATES

After the players bought into his system, Oates got the parents on board and the program began its successful run.

"I was so blessed to have great kids and parents while I was here," Oates said. "The kids were looking for someone who believed in them when I got here and they found out that I did. They trusted me and their parents trusted me to take care of their daughters.

"I don't know that we would've enjoyed the same level of success if it weren't for the players and their parents."

Oates said there was no secret to the success his program enjoyed. He felt the Yellow Jackets simply outworked many of their opponents.

Under Oates, Leesburg was known for tenacious, full-court defense and an offense that fed off that defensive pressure. His teams were deep — he often replaced three, four or even five players at a time — and created a decisive home-court advantage at "The Hive," the school gymnasium.

"Our teams played hard each time they stepped on the floor," Oates said. "We might've gotten beat from time to time, but no team was ever going to play harder than our girls did. And that was part of the life lesson I tried to bring to the court. Nothing was given to these girls.

"They worked hard for everything they accomplished in school and on the basketball court."

Oates said it wasn't an easy decision to leave Leesburg. He got married last summer and developed a number of friendships within the community over the years.

He also said the relationship he has developed with current members of the Yellow Jackets' program and past members, who often come back to visit and work out, forced him to think long and hard about his options.

Still, his decision to leave doesn't mean he will never return.

"(Interstate) 95 will always be open, so it's not like I can't come back and visit," Oates said. "Or that anyone can't come to see me. There are so many people here that I'm going to miss. I'll always remember Leesburg and the Lady Jackets. And I'll never forget my kids — the players who helped to make Lady Jacket basketball what it has become.

"But, it is time for me to go home."

AUTO RACING

Franchitti at peace as he roams Indy as spectator

Dario Franchitti, of Scotland, answers a question during his first public appearance since a crash ended his IndyCar career, on Monday in Indianapolis.

INDIANAPOLIS — This visit to Indianapolis Motor Speedway is like none other for Dario Franchitti.

Wearing jeans and a black polo shirt with the Target logo, the three-time Indianapolis 500 winner scoots through the paddock on a golf cart at his own pace. Aside from a team meeting here or there, he marches to a wide-open schedule.

Franchitti sleeps late and stays out socializing long after his driver buddies have called it a night.

Everyone suspected he would miss racing terribly following his reluctant retirement last November from injuries suffered in a career-ending crash at Houston. And even if he adapted to life outside of the car, his return to Indy as a spectator was expected to be gut-wrenching for Franchitti.

How wrong we all were.

Retirement clearly suits the Scot, who doesn't show any outward signs of regret over how his illustrious career came to a sudden end. He fractured his spine, broke his right ankle and suffered a concussion in the last-lap crash in October. Doctors warned him another hit could cause severe brain damage.

The injuries were obvious for months as Franchitti walked with a noticeable limp, got sore when he stood too long and would shift his weight uncomfortably or suddenly begin stretching. Not so clear was the trauma to his head. Franchitti remembers next to nothing from a five-week period following the crash.

He revealed Sunday during ABC's coverage of Indy 500 qualifying that the concussion symptoms are finally going away — seven months after the crash.

Franchitti, like all racers, started each day with a clear understanding of the risk vs. reward that came with his profession. He'd suffered heartbreak many times over, none more devastating than the death of best friend Greg Moore in a 1999 accident and, 12 years later, the death of Dan Wheldon, whom he often viewed as a little brother.

He had been in his own horrific wrecks, suffered broken bones and concussions and spent time out of the car because of injuries. He returned to the race car every time, fueling his addiction to speed with a rush of adrenaline like nothing else he has ever experienced.

Tiger Woods: Surgery erased any doubts: No firm date for return

Golfer Tiger Woods walks behind the Quicken Loans National PGA golf tournament trophy after speaking at Congressional Country Club on Monday in Bethesda, Md.

BETHESDA, Md. — Tiger Woods still doesn't know when he'll return. For a while, he didn't know whether he would return at all.

Woods said Monday his back injury became so debilitating this year it caused him to doubt his ability to play golf again.

"Forget about playing golf at the highest level. I couldn't get out of bed," Woods said. "I was certainly doubtful at that point. What's it going to feel like? Am I going to be pain free? Am I going to be able to actually do this again, where I can to get out of bed, and go out there and play with my kids and play golf? All those things were up in the air."

Woods said the doubt was erased after microdiscectomy surgery March 31. He said the procedure, which relieved pain from a pinched nerve, provided immediate relief, although he said there's still "no timetable" for his return to golf — or even for taking a full swing. As of now, he remains limited to chipping and putting.

"It's not going not be up to me whether I play or not, it's going to be up to my docs," Woods said. "Obviously, I want to play now."

Speaking at Congressional Country Club in his role as host of next month's Quicken Loans National, Woods even joked that he wished he could join reporters on the course for their media day rounds — "even though I don't like to play with you guys."

But he offered no hint that he might be anything more than an onlooker for the Quicken Loans tournament on June 26-29 — or at the U.S. Open at Pinehurst two weeks earlier. He's already missed the Masters for the first time.

To hear Woods, known for unyielding resolve, give voice to doubts is certainly unusual. But this injury is different from those he has endured before. He said rehab has been tedious and it's a challenge simply not to join in when his children want to play sports.

"I'll tell you what," he said, "I am damn good at video games."

When Woods does return, he'll resume his pursuit of Jack Nicklaus' record of 18 major victories. Woods, 38, sounded as if the surgery has given him a new lease to keep playing for a good while.

Manziel passes first test with Browns; will practice with vets

TOM WITHERS

Cleveland Browns quarterback Johnny Manziel hands off during a rookie minicamp practice on Sunday at the NFL football team's facility in Berea, Ohio.

CLEVELAND — Johnny Manziel spent his first weekend in the NFL hanging around other rookies and unsigned free agents.

He's about to take the field with the bigger boys.

Manziel, who had a "positive" rookie minicamp with Cleveland, will practice this week with the club's veteran players, including Brian Hoyer, the quarterback he'll try to unseat as starter.

Browns first-year coach Mike Pettine made it clear that Manziel and Hoyer realize what's at stake and that their competitive juices are already flowing.

"I don't know if they're going to be sending each other Christmas cards anytime soon," Pettine said of the relationship between Manziel and Hoyer. "But they both know they're in it together and they're going to compete."

Pettine reported that Manziel, the uber-hyped former Texas A&M star, succeeded in every aspect of the three-day minicamp, which was only open to the media for 15 minutes on Saturday as the team tries to curtail "Manzielmania."

"It was a good start for him," Pettine said. "We weren't that concerned about the execution of plays. It was very difficult with a pieced-together offensive line and receiving corps guys who were learning the offense, too. It was a little ragged across the board when you're bringing in guys and it's new to all of them. I thought he did a good job handling himself in the huddle and making the call and the pre-snap communication, knowing where to go with the ball.

"It was a good learning process for him. I think it was a positive thing."

Pettine limited media access to only local reporters and photographers. He wants to minimize any distractions for his young players, who might get caught up in the hoopla surrounding Manziel.

"We know the fire is burning, we just don't want to throw gas on it," he said.

Manziel may have a larger-than-life persona and celebrity friends, but Pettine said the young QB came across as grounded and humble around his teammates.

"They see Johnny in the locker room and they know he's a good guy and a good teammate. There's no diva-type personality there — he's just another guy. He's funny and fun to be around and he's going to work hard and that's something they all respect."

Hoyer, who is coming off right knee surgery after being injured in his third start last season, might be allowed to do more in this week's camp than he did during last month's "voluntary" workouts. Hoyer was limited then to 7-on-7 passing drills.

Pair of rookies taking American League by storm

NOAH TRISTER
AP Baseball Writer

The American League rookie of the year race is already showing signs it could be a memorable contest.

Chicago White Sox slugger Jose Abreu leads the league in home runs and RBIs, and he might not even be the front-runner. Masahiro Tanaka has been just what the New York Yankees were hoping for when they signed the Japanese right-hander in the offseason. He's 6-0 with a 2.17 ERA entering Tuesday night's start at Wrigley Field against the Chicago Cubs.

The 27-year-old Abreu would be among the oldest rookie of the year winners if he ends up with the award, and Tanaka turns 26 in November. Both had experience — in Cuba and Japan — before making their major league debuts this season.

Although it may seem odd to compare older players like Abreu and Tanaka with some of the game's other top rookies, that precedent was established a while ago in the award voting.

Ichiro Suzuki turned 28 in 2001, the year he swept the AL MVP and rookie of the year awards after coming over from Japan. A player arriving from overseas may sometimes be in his prime, age-wise, but he still faces challenges of his own.

"The U.S. players that are playing in the minors, they have a better understanding of what the major leagues are going to be like because they see them on TV, they've been around," Suzuki said through a translator.

FIELDER RETURNS

Detroit hosts Texas for a four-game series starting Thursday, which was supposed to be Prince Fielder's return to Motown after the Tigers traded him to the Rangers for Ian Kinsler in the offseason. But Fielder's consecutive games streak ended Saturday at 547 because of a stiff neck, and it remains to be seen how soon he'll be back.

ON A ROLL

Cincinnati right-hander Johnny Cueto has gone at least seven innings in every start this season, and he has yet to allow more than two runs in a game. He'll take the mound Tuesday night in Washington against Doug Fister and the Nationals.

MOVING ON

Jose Fernandez's elbow injury was a jolt for the Marlins, but he's not Miami's only promising young pitcher. Anthony DeSclafani, the organization's minor league pitcher of the year last season, allowed two runs in six innings in his major league debut against the Los Angeles Dodgers on Wednesday. He's scheduled to start again Tuesday night against Philadelphia.

SLIPPING

After charming Pittsburgh with its run to the playoffs in 2013, the Pirates are seven games under .500. Pittsburgh's starters are 5-19, and the bullpen has blown 10 saves. The Pirates host Baltimore and Washington this week.

BIG SERIES

The San Francisco Giants lead the NL West by three games over Colorado and by five over the high-priced Los Angeles Dodgers. The Giants will try to extend that margin when they head to Colorado for a three-game series with the Rockies that begins Tuesday night. Madison Bumgarner starts the opener for San Francisco.

Guest marks his territory, but in the wrong bathroom

JEANNE PHILLIPS

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: My husband has a male co-worker, "Bo," who comes to our house occasionally. We have two bathrooms, one of which is in our bedroom. The other is the guest bathroom.

When Bo needs to use the restroom, he goes into our bedroom and uses ours. He never asks; he just goes in, even after I have pointed out the guest bathroom. It creeps me out. I feel like he's invading my personal space, and I think it's rude.

What can I do, since pointing out the guest bathroom hasn't worked? Bo is intimidating. He thinks he can do whatever he wants. Please tell me what I can do. — CREEPED OUT IN GREENVILLE

DEAR CREEPED OUT: I agree your husband's co-worker's behavior is creepy. If you have medications in your bathroom, you should check to be sure he isn't helping himself to some of them when he visits.

Because you can't seem to convey the message to "Bo the Boor," before his next visit, ask your husband to tell him that guests are supposed to use the guest bathroom. And if that doesn't discourage him, install a lock on your bedroom door.

DEAR ABBY: My 21-year-old daughter, "Alex," and her 6-year-old moved into an apartment with her 18-year-old boyfriend. We had a tough time accepting this, but I make do because I love Alex and want to be part of her life.

My boyfriend of eight years, "Niles," can't accept my daughter's new boyfriend. We were invited over for dinner and Niles refused to go.

How do I handle this? I feel all future events will be strained and I'll be forced to choose between my daughter and Niles. Please advise. — SAD MOTHER IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR SAD MOTHER: Tell Niles that if you must choose between him and your daughter, you will choose your daughter. Her romance may — or may not — last forever, but your relationship with her will. There is nothing to be gained by punishing her and alienating her young man. If Niles has a problem with that, do not let him make it your problem, too. Continue your relationship with your daughter and see Niles separately.

DEAR ABBY: Today is my 50th birthday. I'm a person with a few close friends, but I'm not widely social.

The members of my book club knew it was my birthday when we met a few days ago. I had mentioned it before our meeting. Nothing was said when we met.

My best friend is going on vacation and hasn't remembered. My husband asked me what plans I had made for us to do today. My sister, bless her, has been wonderful and feels responsible to try to make this day special for me.

Is it really my job to plan a celebration and remind everyone I'm close to? I have talked enough about how important this particular birthday is to me. I'm hurt that no one feels I'm worth the effort. Am I making too big a deal out of this? — VEXED IN VERMONT

DEAR VEXED: I think so. My dear mother used to say, "If you want something done right, do it yourself!" That's good advice when those around you are too preoccupied to be as nurturing as you would like them to be.

HOROSCOPES

JACQUELINE BIGAR

BIGAR'S STARS

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, May 20, 2014:

This year you will start enjoying all the excitement that surrounds you. At first, you might be exhausted by the unexpected changes. You will get used to this high frequency in your life, and it will energize you. If you are single, with so much going on, you inevitability will meet several potential suitors. Don't commit too quickly. If you are attached, be willing to verbalize what you desire, and remain equally as sensitive to your sweetie. Look at what is behind a short fuse and consider the trigger, especially if it is a repeating issue. Schedule a special trip together that the two of you have been discussing for a long time. AQUARIUS can be provocative.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) An offer might seem too good to be true, so check it out. You could find an associate to be difficult and possibly touchy as well. Right now, certain associates might feel as if they can't say "no" to you, even if they want to. Be as direct as possible.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Take charge of a situation, especially if someone involved is being somewhat hostile. Check out an invitation carefully before expressing your decision. Do not share a certain emotional choice yet. A conversation could be enlightening.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You'll be unusually verbal, and therefore capable of seeing the big picture. Curb a tendency to allow situations to get out of control, especially those that demand your self-discipline. A friend might have strong feelings about you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Deal with others on a one-on-one level. You might want to understand more before making any decisions. A boss or an older person could express him- or herself easily. This person could be full of praise for you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Others won't hesitate to challenge you. Your sense of humor will emerge. You could feel as if you can't approach a loved one. This person's importance to you can't be denied. Your creativity will emerge when facing a hassle.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Dive into work, and get past a problem that keeps reappearing. You have enough energy to make a boss more than content with your participation. Verbalize more of what you want with an expectation that your desires will be fulfilled.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You might be overwhelmed by an offer from someone you look up to. Don't worry about your finances today. A loved one will go out of his or her way to let you know how much he or she cares. News filters in from a distance that forces a lot of thought.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You could be in a position of making a change on the home front. You'll see a personal matter a lot differently because of a problem that arises. Family plays a significant role in what occurs. A co-worker could care about you more than you are aware.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Make the most of some extra time and catch up on calls. A partner or loved one will go overboard for you. Remain upbeat with a new, flirty friend. Listen to this person's news; you will discover that you have reason to celebrate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You might want to change directions, especially when the issue is financial. Understand where a loved one is coming from. This person might be moody right now, but keep in mind that he or she usually is more upbeat than down.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Your gentle manner will open up doors and allow a lot more give-and-take. Your smile and relaxed style will draw others to you. Be willing to listen and brainstorm with a contemporary who needs you to play devil's advocate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You'll need to say less and remain more anchored than you have in the recent past. Your impulsive ways emerge, no matter how much you hold yourself back or try to restrain yourself. Reach out to someone you respect, and ask for this person's advice.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 NT	Pass	3 NT

Opening lead — two of spades.

Every card played tells a story. In most cases, you don't have to be a genius to decipher the message; the cards usually speak for themselves, and all you have to do is to understand what they say.

It did not take South long to go wrong on this deal. He won East's nine of spades with the queen and led a low diamond to dummy's ace. East showed out, and there was now no way to make the contract. South continued diamonds, but West took his queen and led another spade, and declarer eventually went down one, losing a diamond, three spades and a heart.

Had declarer instead played the king of diamonds at trick two, he would have made five notrump! The question is whether South should have known that leading the king of diamonds was a better play than leading a diamond to the ace.

The answer is yes. The telling card was West's lead of the deuce of spades, presumably his fourth-best spade. There were two clues South could have latched onto to read the message contained in that lead. One was that since West apparently had four spades, East had to have five. It followed that if the diamonds were divided 3-0, West was more likely to have all three of them than East.

The other clue rests on the presumption that West would have led from a five-card suit if he had one. Once West is credited with nothing longer than a four-card suit, it follows that he cannot be void of diamonds. Therefore, playing the king of diamonds at trick two is a much better play than leading a low diamond to the ace.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, May 20, the 140th day of 2014. There are 225 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 20, 1939, regular trans-Atlantic mail service began as a Pan American Airways plane, the Yankee Clipper, took off from Port Washington, New York, bound for Marseille, France.

On this date:

In 1712, the original version of Alexander Pope's satirical mock-heroic poem "The Rape of the Lock" was published anonymously in Lintot's Miscellany.

In 1902, the United States ended a three-year military presence in Cuba as the Republic of Cuba was established under its first elected president, Tomas Estrada Palma.

In 1914, the song "By the Beautiful Sea" by Harry Carroll and Harold R. Atteridge was published by Shapiro, Bernstein & Co. Inc., in New York.

In 1927, Charles Lindbergh took off from Roosevelt Field in Long Island, New York, aboard the Spirit of St. Louis on his historic solo flight to France.

In 1932, Amelia Earhart took off from Newfoundland to become the first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic. (Because of weather and equipment problems, Earhart set down in Northern Ireland instead of her intended destination, France.)

In 1942, during World War II, the Office of Civilian Defense was established.

In 1959, nearly 5,000 Japanese-Americans had their U.S. citizenship restored after renouncing it during World War II.

In 1961, a white mob attacked a busload of Freedom Riders in Montgomery, Alabama, prompting the federal government to send in U.S. marshals to restore order.
