Lake County School District Chief Academic Officer David Christiansen expressed both concern and optimism Wednesday about the first set of results of the Florida Comprehensive Assessment Test scores.

"We did better in one category: writing," he said.

Boy plotted to kill his teachers

Deputies quash planned attack at East Ridge Middle

MILLARD K. IVES | Staff Writer

Officials at a Clermont middle school say a boy with a knife had plotted to kill his teachers, front office workers and himself.

The unidentified student was taken to a mental health facility.

According to the Lake County Sheriff's Office on Wednesday, a school resource officer at East Ridge Middle School was summoned to the student's classroom on the morning of May 19 after three other students told their teacher about the plot.

According to a sheriff incident report, the deputy found in the student's possession the concealed pocket knife as well as a "little black book" that had a drawing of the school with "X" marks where he wanted to kill his teachers.

After the deputy confronted the student in the classroom, the suspect wrote on a piece of paper his plans and handed it to the deputy, according to the report.

"He was going to come in through the grassy area by the library, then he was going to go to the front office and kill everyone there, then go to the math and history buildings and kill two of his teachers there. He would then proceed to the science building and kill his teacher there," the report stated.

Afterward, he was going to go to his drama class and kill the teacher there, the report added.

The student reportedly told the resource deputy "after he killed the people he wanted killed, he would go to the cafeteria and kill himself in front of all of his peers."

Sheriff's officials said the father told them he had been concerned about his son's behavior. The boy had recently been suspended for 10 days and was in the process of being placed in an alternative school.

Sumter students score above state average

Staff Report

Sumter County FCAT scores have matched or exceeded the state average in all categories, officials say.

Third-grade students improved their performance in reading by one percentage point, with 64 percent scoring at a level 3 or above, compared with 63 percent last year, district spokesperson Allison Nave said in a press release. Statewide, 57 percent of third-graders passed this year.

Sumter's third graders also achieved a mean score of 204 in reading, compared with a statewide mean score of 200.

For two years in a row, 68 percent of Sumter third graders scored at level 3 or above in mathematics, compared with 58 percent statewide, Nave said.

At the fourth-grade level, 52 percent of Sumter students scored 3.5 or above in writing, compared with 53 percent statewide. Fourth graders also achieved a mean score of 3.3 on a 6.0 scale, which is at the state average, Nave said.

At the eighth-grade level, 64 percent of Sumter students scored at level 3.5 or above in writing, compared with 56 percent statewide. They also achieved a mean score of 3.6, which is 2 percentage points higher than the state average, Nave said.

At the 10th-grade level, 72 percent of Sumter students scored at a level of 3.5 or above in writing, compared with 64 percent statewide. Sumter 10th graders also achieved a mean score of 3.6, slightly above the 3.5 statewide average, Nave said.

Seth Stein has experienced fewer ups than downs in his 18 years, giving him plenty of excuses not to become the first person in his family to graduate high school.

In fact, his guidance counselor at South Lake High School said she cannot believe Stein's attitude remains so positive.

"It speaks volumes to me that he (Stein) can still achieve what he's achieved, in spite of what he's been through," Judy Mitchell said. "He's very positive, he's got good aspirations and I believe he's going to be able to help a lot of people, based off his own experiences."

Lake students in eight and 10th grade saw substantial improvement on the writing portion.

However, he expressed concern about the third-grade reading results, which showed the district lagging behind the statewide average by two percentage points.

"What resources can we put in pre-k to second-grade level to get in front of this?" he said. "Half or more of the kids are not reading at grade level."

Christiansen said he is building more resources and support for students in pre-k to third grade and sixth through ninth grades.

Christiansen said he is assigning additional teachers and tutors to work directly with students.

School board members and educators agree more needs to be done to pinpoint students who are having difficulties and promote collaborative efforts between teachers.

Meanwhile, the FCAT 2.0 results for third grade math showed 58 percent of Lake County students were proficient, dead even with the state. The Florida Department of Education also released the complete results from the writing portion of the test administered to fourth, eighth and 10th graders.

"Eighth graders scoring a 3.5 or better (the test is graded on a 6-point scale, with a score of 3.5 considered proficient) increased district-wide by 4 percent to 48 percent," according to a press release from the district.

Further, 10th graders scoring a 3.5 or better jumped 9 percentage points to 57 percent, the district reported.

Some of the middle schools with the largest percentage of students scoring a 3.5 or better on the writing assessment included Carver Middle School, with a 21 point increase. At Umatilla Middle School, 44 percent of students were proficient, a 14 percentage jump. At Windy Hill Middle School, 64 percent were proficient, representing an 11 percent increase. And at Eustis Middle, 56 percent were proficient.

High schools with the largest gains on the writing assessment included Leesburg High School, South Lake High School and Mount Dora High School. The top scores went to Lake Minneola High School, where 65 percent of students were proficient, and 62 percent of East Ridge High School students were proficient.

In particular, Sorrento Elementary School made strong gains in third-grade math and fourth-grade writing.

In fourth grade writing, 65 percent of students were proficient, a 24 percent increase from last year; and 74 percent in third-grade math, a 17 percent increase.

Susan Pegram, principal of the school, said she credited the school's improvements to coming up with an action plan and identifying the school's weaknesses.

The school focused on collaborative planning and more effective progress monitoring of the students, Pegram said. The curriculum resource teacher also served as an effective tool, meeting with the groups and breaking down the Florida Standards.

Pegram said she met with a teacher each morning to identify specific concerns regarding student progress.

"I am so proud of the students and teachers," she said.

Similarly, Lost Lake Elementary School, which also continues to score high on the third grade math portion of the FCATs, held steady at 73 percent, employs similar methods to achieve student success, including common planning for teachers.

"We give low-achieving students extra time on assignments and extra practice," said Rhonda Hunt, principal for Lost Lake. Also effective, she said, is the use of interactive math journals and thinking maps.

Stuart Klatte, president of the Lake County Education Association, said Lake County FCAT scores have always been around the state averages.

"I feel that all schools tend to spend too much time in benchmark testing and testing in general so that the students lose a lot of instructional time," he said. "Time is better spent in instruction rather than in repeating testing."

Some of the low performing schools on the FCATs included Beverly Shores Elementary, Leesburg Elementary and Eustis Heights Elementary, which all have more than 80 percent of students on free or reduced lunches.

"Schools that have a higher percentage of students on free or reduced lunch tend to have a lower percentage of students passing," said Klatte.

While agreeing with Klatte, Christiansen said there is no reason the district can't buck that trend.

Bill Mathias, board member, said he was not satisfied with the scores and agrees with Christiansen that addressing issues early is paramount to student success.

"We need to have earlier intervention for those children having issues and focused on the personalized learning initiatives," he said.

Lt. John Herrell, sheriff's spokesman, said it was not clear when the student planned to carry out the attack. However, Herrell said no guns or any other weapons were found at the boy's home. And while they initially took the threat seriously, based on an interview of the suspect and his thought pattern, detectives were convinced the student was in a "mental health crisis."

The student was taken to Lifestream Behavioral Center for evaluation under the Baker Act.

Christopher Patton, Lake County School's spokesman, said school officials did not consider the middle school to be in danger and didn't inform parents of the plot.

Herrell praised the three students who revealed the plot.

"They did exactly what they should have done when they hear something like that," Herrell said.

time he was a freshman in high school, Stein was completely on his own.

Stein said he once stayed with a transvestite prostitute in Myrtle Beach named "Dianne," whom he met on the street.

By that time, Florida Department of Children and Families was trying to place him into foster care, Stein said.

Stein avoided that for years, and then Stein and his dad caught a break when a family member willed them a little money.

"We collected some annuities and bought a car," Stein said, adding that he dropped out of high school and he and his dad went north to look for a better life.

The two were there a few months when Stein was taken back to Cape Coral by DCF and placed into foster care.

Stein soon was too old to remain in the system and ended up at Vision of Hope in Groveland, a now-defunct facility for troubled teen boys run by a church organization.

While there, Stein was beaten by three other teens and suffered a punctured lung and was hospitalized for two weeks.

Finally, Stein was sent to South Lake High School.

Stein got his own place, got a job at a local pizza parlor, took his dad in to live with him and started the 2013-14 school year with the anticipation of better things to come.

Stein's unlucky streak wasn't quite over, however, because after a couple of months into the school year, Stein was involved in a serious car crash and airlifted to Arnold Palmer Hospital in Orlando in critical condition.

"I have a head-sized hole on my back from that accident still," Stein said last week. "But I'm still here, I don't know how."

Stein recovered and came back to school, his attitude more positive than ever.

"When it comes to buckling down, I guess I can just do it," he said. "And although I could have gone all bad attitude about everything that's happened to me, I just didn't feel it."

Instead, Stein decided he wanted to set a new path for his family.

"I have one brother and him included, no one in my family has graduated high school," Stein said. "Everybody is working dead-end jobs and I just want to make a whole new life for the Steins. I'm trying to be a good example for future generations and prove that all this craziness can come to an end."

When Stein was in the hospital recovering from his crash, he was placed in a school program called "medical homebound" which allowed him to continue his studies.

"I was really behind, but somehow, with the help of a lot of people, because I had my dad with me to take care of and my own causes, I caught up, got through it and I'm graduating," Stein said.

On Friday, Stein will walk across the stage on the football field at South Lake High School and receive his diploma.

After graduating, Stein will be moving to Gainesville to attend the University of Florida, hoping to graduate with a degree in social work.

Stein said his dream is to work as a therapist or a counselor and help kids in the foster care system.

He said he hopes to use his own experiences as motivation for others.

"I am flabbergasted, because if I really think about everything that's happened to me, I think there's no way I could have survived all of it," Stein said. "But I decided after my accident, that what's the point of having a bad attitude instead of a positive attitude? Where would that get me?"

A Sumter County motorist, who helped hide the body of a man killed in a 2011 drugs-for-vehicle deal gone bad, was sentenced to 10 years in prison on Wednesday after his lawyer argued the defendant not only led officials to the body but helped them prosecute the trigger man.

The prosecution wanted 12 years in prison for Gerald Devon Patterson and the defense wanted eight years. The judge met them halfway, although he could have given Patterson up to 20 years on the second-degree murder charge he faced in the killing of Richard Len.

Defense attorney Michael Johnson argued during Wednesday's sentencing hearing that the

Beetle-rearing lab to combat invasive vine

Staff and Wire Report

At the Oakland Nature Preserve in Orange County, just over the Lake County line near Clermont, air potato beetles were released there two weeks ago to combat air potato plants, according to a press release from the preserve. In the past three years, volunteers have removed thousands of pounds of the "potato" from the preserve and officials see the beetles as less costly and more efficient than herbicides and hand harvesting.

"Permission to release the beetle was approved by the USDA-APHIS (Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service) after extensive testing to determine that it is host-specific and presents virtually no risk to other plants," the press release said.

A beetle-rearing lab run by high school students may help combat an invasive plant species plaguing Florida parks and yards, researchers said Wednesday.

Carpenter to run for commission seat

LIVI STANFORD | Staff Writer
livi.stanford@dailycommercial.com

Orange County Sheriff's Capt. Sandy Carpenter has filed paperwork to run for the Lake County Commission District 2 seat, facing incumbent Commissioner Sean Parks, according to the Supervisor of Elections office.

Carpenter previously ran for Lake County sheriff in 2012 against current incumbent Sheriff Gary Borders. In the August 2012 primary election, Carpenter received 32 percent of the vote compared with 67 percent for Borders.

PARKS

CARPENTER

Parks, who is running for his second term, said he was surprised Carpenter had prefiled to run.

Parks said he takes his role as commissioner seriously.

"I believe the residents know how hard I work and how accessible I am," he said. "I like serving residents and solving problems."

Parks said the county is improving economically.

"The small business success rate has improved from 47 percent to 70 plus percent," he said.

Certainly, Parks said he is proud to have brought quality of life and water resources protection to the forefront.

Parks, along with Groveland Mayor Tim Loucks, founded the South Lake Regional Water Initiative, consisting of the South Lake Chamber of Commerce, the county and the municipalities of Clermont, Groveland, Minneola, Mascotte and Montverde. The group has come together in conjunction with the Central Florida Water Initiative to find an alternative water source for south Lake County.

The primary election is Aug. 26.

Despite repeated attempts, Carpenter could not be reached for comment.

was trying to mess around with a prostitute … and wanted Hernandez to join in to make it a threesome," police said. "When she declined, Melusky became upset, got in her face and started calling her names."

Hernandez said she may have pushed Melusky, who allegedly responded by punching her twice in the face, causing a bruised left eye, according to the woman.

Officers contacted Melusky at the motel, who said he and Hernandez were drinking when a girl stopped by to say hello. He claims Hernandez got upset, told him to go have sex with her, then threw a canned good at him, which struck him in the face, leaving a two-inch cut above his left eye that police confirmed.

Melusky denied touching Hernandez.

Police said both were placed under arrest for domestic battery. They remained jailed Wednesday under $20,000 bond each.

The affidavit states Melusky has four prior battery convictions and Hernandez has one prior battery charge on a law enforcement officer. Jail records show that both have more than a dozen combined arrests in Lake County.

BEETLES

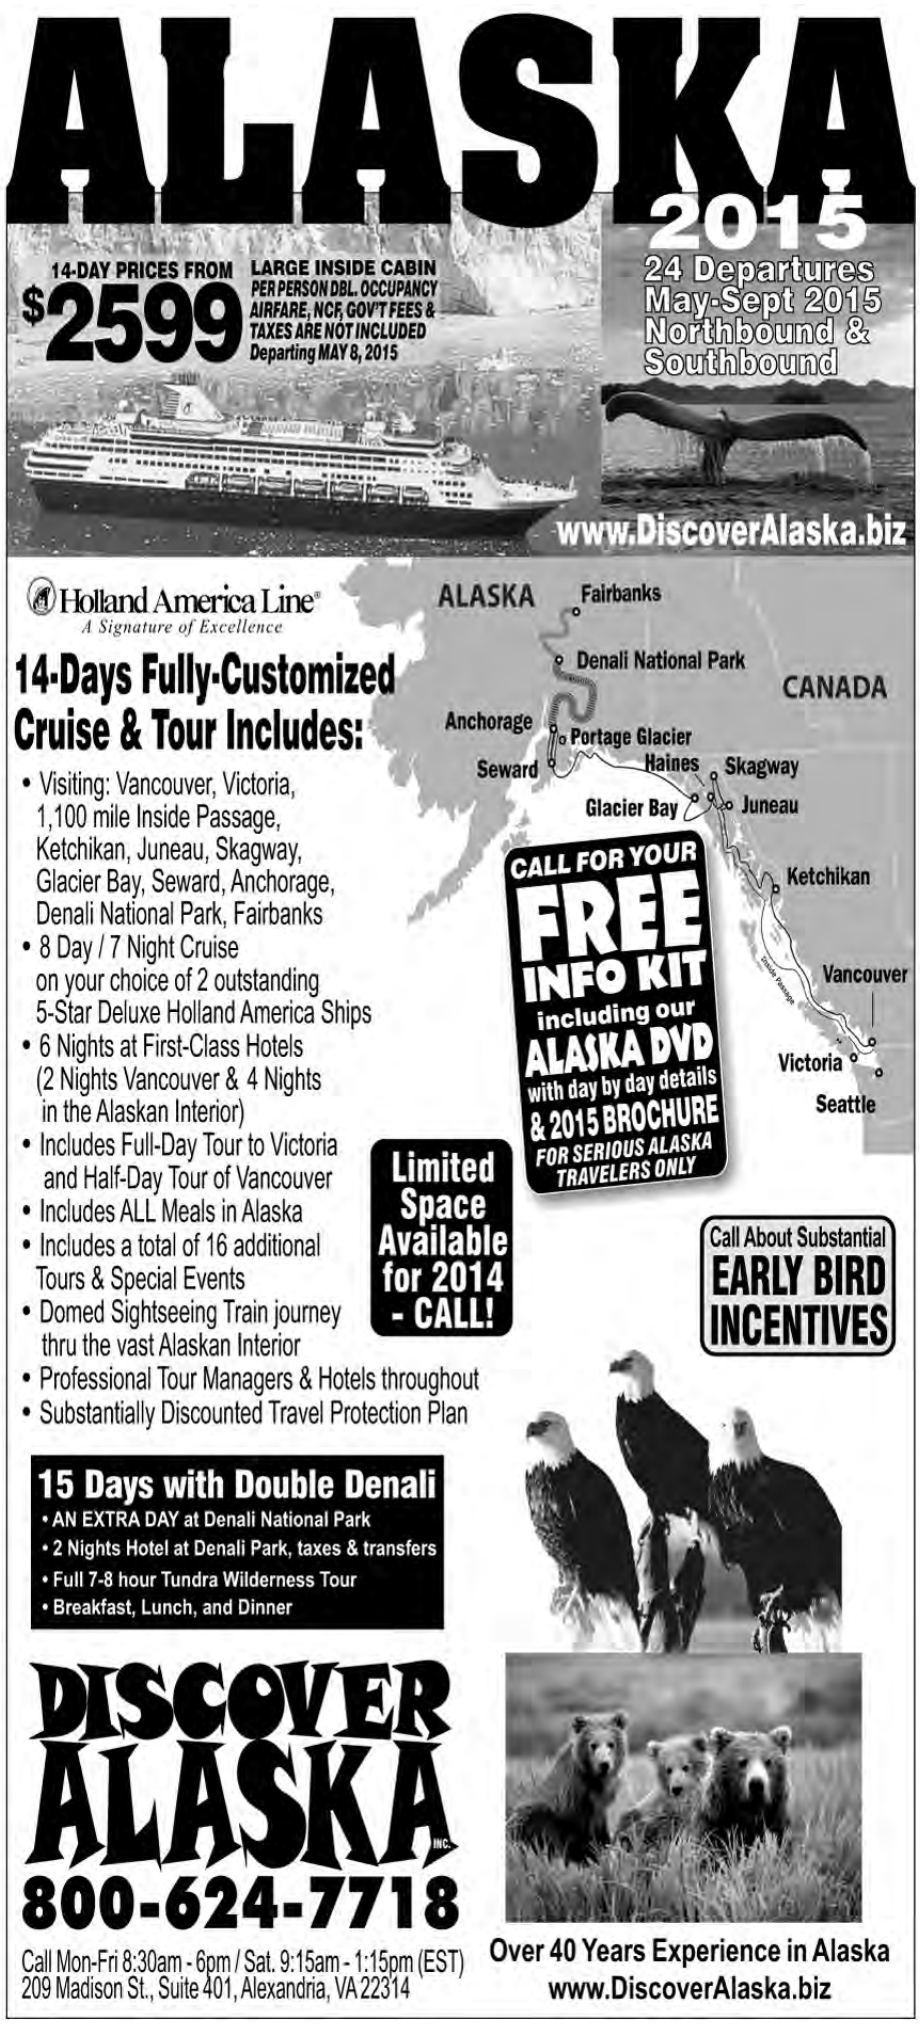
USDA in 2011 in Florida (45 beetles in Miami-Dade and another 45 in Broward counties). The USDA, along with Miami-Dade Parks' Natural Areas Management, wanted to provide a chemical-free and cost-effective method for combating the invasive vine.

The living laboratory started with a $30,000 grant from State Farm Youth Advisory Board to the Parks Foundation of Miami-Dade at the end of 2013. By early 2014, equipment was being acquired for the lab and then the USDA trained the six high school seniors on how to develop the lab and provided the initial starter beetles to mate.

Counting the larvae was the most difficult part of the project for Rolando Martinez, a senior at TERRA who participated in the project.

"It's very important for me to maintain a natural environment," the 18-year-old said as he held a plastic container filled with the adult red bugs that were mating.



STING

Keane's Linkedin profile said he works at Walt Disney World as a learning and development manager, and was previously a cast recruiter there.

Polk Sheriff Grady Judd said that among those arrested, 16 were accused of being pimps who brought prostitutes, 28 were accused of being prostitutes and 52 were "johns" attempting to pay for sex. The department used e-commerce sites to set up the sting.

Judd said the focus of the operation, which began Thursday, was to find victims of human trafficking and to get them out of the prostitution business.

"From this investigation we have identified at least three people who we very well think may be the victims of human trafficking," Judd said Tuesday at a news conference. "One victim who showed up was only 15 years old."

The 15-year-old girl, who was brought to Polk County from Miami, was a runaway, Judd said. He said deputies are working with the Florida Department of Children and Families to get the girl treatment and to help keep her away from prostitution.

PRISON

trigger man, Leonard Antonio Massey, scared Patterson into helping hide the body and keeping quiet about it. Johnson said that Massey had threatened Patterson and his family.

"Gerald was afraid of him," Johnson argued in front of Judge William Hallman III. "His involvement (in the murder) was marginal at best."

Assistant State Attorney Pete Magrino said while he agreed that Patterson helped with the prosecution, the defendant had to be pushed into doing so. Magrino also cited the violence of the crime.

According to Magrino and the Sumter County Sheriff's Office, Patterson and Massey had made it a practice of swapping crack cocaine to customers for the use of their vehicles. On Jan. 11, 2011, Massey spotted Patterson, a distant relative, driving a 1996 Toyota Camry belonging to Len, a customer who owed both men money for drugs, including $200 to Massey.

All of the men were Wildwood residents.

Massey reportedly commandeered the car and he, Patterson and a third passenger drove to Len's job in Marion County, picked him up and drove back to Wildwood. At some point, the third man got out of the car and an argument ensued between Massey and the victim over the money.

Massey then shot Len to death over the debt.

The following day, Len's gold Camry was found burning off County Road 216A in Wildwood. A little more than a week later, officials found his bullet-riddled body off County Road 228 in Wildwood.

Both Patterson and Massey were initially charged with first-degree murder and armed robbery in a case in which they were accused of moving the body several times.

Both faced life without parole if convicted on the first-degree murder charge.

Massey was to face trial in April, with Patterson slated to take the stand against him in a plea deal that had his charges downgraded to second-degree murder. However, on the day the trial was to begin, Massey, also known as "Deebo," reached a plea deal with prosecutors in which his charge was also downgraded to second-degree murder.

Massey was given a sentence of 25 to 30 years in prison for the murder.

Patterson was also sentenced to 10 years of probation on an armed robbery charge, to start after his prison sentence.

LEESBURG AREA RESIDENTS CASH IN: Pictured above are the sealed Vault Bags loaded with rarely seen U.S. coins that everyone is trying to get. That's because each Vault Bag is known to contain over 100 U.S. Gov't issued coins some dating back to the early 1900s so there's no telling what you'll find until you sort through all the coins.

Thousands stand to miss deadline to claim free U.S. Silver coins

Bags of U.S. Gov't issued coins are up for grabs as deadline looms to claim the money, now any Florida resident who finds their zip code listed below can claim the bags of money filled with over 100 U.S. Gov't issued coins for themselves just by covering the Vault Bag fee within the next two days

FLORIDA - The phone lines are ringing off the hook.

That's because for the next 2 days Vault Bags containing valuable U.S. Gov't issued coins are actually being handed over to Leesburg area residents who find the first two digits of their zip code listed in today's publication.

"Now that the bags of money are up for grabs Florida residents are claiming as many as they can get before they're all gone. That's because after the Vault Bags were loaded with over 100 U.S. Gov't issued coins the bags were sealed for good. But, we do know that some of the coins date clear back to the early 1900s, including: Silver, scarce, highly collectible, and currently circulating U.S. Gov't issued nickels, dimes and quarter dollars, so there's no telling what you'll find until you sort through all the coins," said Timothy J. Shissler, Chief Numismatist for the private World Reserve.

The only thing residents need to do is find the first two digits of their zip code on the Distribution List printed in today's publication. If their zip code is on the list, they need to immediately call the National Claim Hotline before the 2-day order deadline ends.

Everyone who does is being given three rarely seen 90% pure Silver U.S. coins minted nearly 100 years ago for free. Including the elegant Walking Lady Liberty Silver coin, the highly sought after 50th anniversary John F. Kennedy Silver coin and a stunning Benjamin Franklin Silver coin just by covering the fee for each Vault Bag loaded with over 100 U.S. Gov't issued coins for only $149 and shipping-handling as long as they call before the deadline ends.

Since this advertising announcement can't stop dealers and collectors from hoarding any of the valuable Silver coins they can get their hands on the World Reserve had to set a strict limit of ten Vault Bags per resident.

"Coin values always fluctuate and there are never any guarantees, but those who get in on this now will be the really smart ones. Just think what some of these coins could be worth someday," said Shissler.

Each Vault Bag is loaded in part with highly sought after collector coins dating clear back to the early 1900s including a 90% pure Silver Walking Lady Liberty Half Dollar, a 50th anniversary John F. Kennedy Silver half dollar, a Benjamin Franklin Silver half dollar, an Eisenhower Dollar, some of the last ever minted U.S. Dollars, JFK Half Dollars, Silver Mercury Dimes, rarely seen Liberty 'V' Nickels, nearly 100 year old Buffalo Nickels and a big scoop of unsearched currently circulating U.S. Gov't issued nickels, dimes and quarter dollars.

"We're bracing for all the calls because there are just hours left for residents to get the Silver coins free," he said.

So, Leesburg area residents lucky enough to find their zip code listed in today's publication need to immediately call the National Claim Hotlines before the 2-day deadline ends to get the Silver coins free so if lines are busy keep trying, all calls will be answered. ■

Who gets the free Gov't issued Silver coins: Listed below are the Leesburg area zip codes that get to claim the free Silver coins. If you find the first two digits of your zip code below immediately call: 1-866-338-2833

U.S. Gov't issued: Scarce 1955 Benjamin Franklin Silver Coin
Official Red Book Collector Value: $15 - $22

U.S. Gov't issued: Scarce 1964 John F. Kennedy Silver Coin
Official Red Book Collector Value: $12

How is all this possible:

This is all possible because thousands of U.S. residents stand to miss the deadline to claim the money. Now Leesburg area residents who find the first two digits of their zip code listed in today's publication and beat the 2-day deadline get to claim the bags of money for themselves and keep all the U.S. Gov't issued coins found inside.

Are the Silver coins really Free:

Yes. All Leesburg area residents who beat the 2-day deadline are instantly being awarded a free Walking Lady Liberty Silver coin issued by the U.S. Gov't between 1916-1947, a free 1964 50th anniversary John F. Kennedy Silver coin and a free Benjamin Franklin Silver coin issued between 1948-1963 with each Vault Bag they claim before the order deadline ends.

What happens if I can't get through:

Thousands of residents are calling to claim as many Vault Bags as they can get before the deadline ends. That's because each Vault Bag is guaranteed to contain 3 free Silver coins issued by the U.S. Gov't nearly 100 years ago. So there's no telling how much just one scarce coin alone, like those shown to the left, could be worth in collector value. And since the Vault Bag fee is just $149 everyone is claiming as many bags as they can get before they're all gone. So if lines are busy keep trying, all calls will be answered.

How much are the Vault Bags worth:

Coin values always fluctuate and there are never any guarantees, but here's why Florida residents are claiming as many Vault Bags as they can get before they're all gone. After the Vault Bags were loaded with over 100 U.S. Gov't issued coins including: Silver, scarce, highly collectible, and a big scoop of unsearched currently circulating U.S. Gov't issued coins the bags were sealed for good. But we do know that some of the coins date back to the early 1900s. That means there's no telling what you'll find until you sort through all the coins. So you better believe at just $149 smart collectors are snapping up all the Vault Bags they can get because there's no telling how much just one scarce coin alone could be worth in collector value.

Why is the Vault Bag fee so low:

Because thousands of U.S. residents have missed the deadline to claim the money the World Reserve has re-allocated Vault Bags that will be scheduled to be sent out in the next 2 days. That means the money is up for grabs and now any resident who finds the first two digits of their zip code above gets to claim the bags of money for themselves and keep all the U.S. Gov't issued coins found inside. Each Vault Bag fee is set at $199 for residents who miss the 2 day deadline, but for those who beat the 2-day deadline the Vault Bag fee is just $149 and shipping-handling as long as they call the National Claim Hotline with this claim code MSV171 before the deadline ends at: 1-866-338-2833

Maya Angelou remembered for her universal appeal

HILLEL ITALIE
AP National Writer

NEW YORK — You didn't have to love books or share her background or even know a lot about Maya Angelou to feel that she somehow knew a lot about you.

You might have sensed you were in a club that accepted everyone and that the reasons for joining were as vast and complicated as the life and talents of the author herself.

Perhaps it was the story of Angelou, who died Wednesday at age 86: A poor, black woman from the segregated South who somehow ascends to the worldwide stage. Or the people she befriended: Martin Luther King Jr. and Malcolm X, Oprah Winfrey and Toni Morrison, the Clintons and Barack Obama. You might have seen her read the inaugural poem for Bill Clinton, caught one of her interviews with Winfrey, remembered her from the television series "Roots" or were assigned "I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings" in English class.

Maybe her speaking voice was enough — deep, warm and understanding, like a family matriarch or the Supreme Court justice of your dreams; or her written voice, lyrical and personal, inviting you to share and relate to the most hurtful memories, such as the white girls who mocked Angelou's grandmother as they approached the store where the author worked as a child.

"Before the girls got to the porch I heard their laughter crackling and popping like pine logs in a cooking stove," she wrote in "Caged Bird," published in 1969. "I suppose my lifelong paranoia was born in those cold, molasses-slow minutes.

Poet Maya Angelou smiles at an event in Washington.

"At first they pretended seriousness. Then one of them wrapped her right arm in the crook of her left, pushed out her mouth and started to hum. I realized that she was aping my grandmother."

Angelou needed half a dozen books just to get through her first 40 years and even longtime followers could find themselves amazed at some new detail they discovered. Did you know that she and Quincy Jones co-wrote a song for B.B. King, that Muhammad Ali dined at her house in Ghana, that she performed at the same nightclub as Phyllis Diller? Have you seen that picture of her dancing with Amiri Baraka, or towering over Baraka and Morrison as the three arrived at James Baldwin's funeral?

Angelou worked not just outside the literary canon, but beyond it. Awards committees ignored her until nearly the end, but the public seemed to honor Angelou daily. You'd spot one of her poems or sayings in a yearbook, find yourself among the 5 million liking her Facebook page, or learning that one of your friends had read — and loved — "Caged Bird," too.

In every way, she seemed without limits. She could write, sing, dance, compose, act and direct. Depending on your age, or background, she was like a mother, a sister, a close friend, a sage. You may not have liked everything she did, but it seemed impossible not to at least admire one thing, and for that to be enough to admire her overall.

Her body had been weak for years, but her spirit will live on. At a gala poetry reading last month at Lincoln Center, the actress Rosie Perez smirked and strutted as she reeled off the unstoppable lines of Angelou's "Still I Rise":

Does my sassiness upset you?

Why are you beset with gloom?

'Cause I walk like I've got oil wells

Pumping in my living room.

Just like moons and like suns,

With the certainty of tides,

Just like hopes springing high,

Still I'll rise.

Ukraine believes Russia to be source of insurgent threat

PETER LEONARD
Associated Press

DONETSK, Ukraine — As separatists conceded that militants from Russia's province of Chechnya had joined the rebellion, a Ukrainian government official cautioned Wednesday that its borders had become a "front line" in the crisis.

Chechnya's Moscow-backed strongman brushed away allegations he had dispatched paramilitary forces under his command to Ukraine, saying he was powerless to stop fellow Chechens from joining the fight.

While there is no immediate indication that the Kremlin is enabling or supporting combatants from Russia crossing into Ukraine, Moscow may have to dispel suspicions it is waging a proxy war if it is to avoid more Western sanctions.

In a wide-ranging foreign policy speech at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, New York, President Barack Obama addressed the crisis in Ukraine by saying, "Russia's recent actions recall the days when Soviet tanks rolled into Eastern Europe."

The Kremlin welcomed the election Sunday of billionaire Petro Poroshenko as the president of Ukraine. An advocate of strong ties with Europe, Poroshenko also favors mending relations with Russia.

He replaced the pro-Moscow leader who was driven from office in February. That ouster led to Russia's annexation of the Crimean Peninsula in southern Ukraine — which triggered the sanctions — and a violent pro-Moscow insurgency in the east.

Reports circulate almost daily of truckloads of gunmen crossing from Russia, and authorities believe they are a vital reinforcement to the armed rebel force that has repeatedly thwarted government security operations. Intense fighting from a government offensive Monday to dislodge rebels from the Donetsk airport appeared to have died down, with only sporadic violence reported Wednesday.

Ukrainian border service head Mykola Lytvyn said he has deployed all reserves to the eastern and southern frontiers.

"Our border, especially in the Donetsk and Luhansk regions, has become a front line that various terrorists are trying to break through," Lytvyn said at a news conference in Kiev. "Daily fighting with terrorists and groups of criminals near the Ukrainian and Russian border have become our routine reality."

Women join Somali army

ABDI GULED
Associated Press

FARAH ABDI WARSAMEH / AP

Somali soldier Naeemo Abdi, left, and another female colleague guard a police station in Mogadishu, Somalia on Sunday.

MOGADISHU, Somalia — With an AK47 automatic rifle slung over her shoulder, Naeemo Abdi frisks people coming into a Mogadishu police station.

When she holds back a man who tried to enter unchecked, he scowls at her and barks: "Woman and soldier?"

She did not respond but directed the man to the security checkpoint.

It's unusual to see a female in the military in traditionally conservative Somali society where women's duties are generally at home and limited to family chores. But Abdi and other determined women are breaking down those barriers. About 1,500 females are now in the military of 20,000, according to estimates.

The lean 25-year-old Abdi explains that she has endured many challenges joining the army two years ago. She moved from a conventional domestic role as a wife and mother of three to work in the army because she liked the prestige. She said she faced massive opposition from her spouse and family who thought she'd be cast off should she decide to become a soldier.

"It was difficult, but I must do this to serve my country unreservedly," she said.

Her work as a soldier receives mixed reactions from her fellow Somalis. A few approve, but many think women should not be in the military.

"Gender is not boundary," said Abdi, tightening her bootlaces. "If committed, women can work far better than men."

At work they often wear camouflage trouser uniforms, boots and bright blue or purple headscarves topped by a beret with the military's insignia. At other times they wear long skirts to observe Islamic dress codes. They also often carry heavy backpacks.

Somali army officials report female army recruits have increased following the ouster from the capital in 2011 of the Islamic extremist rebels of al-Shabab. Order is slowly being restored in Somalia following more than 20 years of chaos and violence. Somalia's state largely collapsed after a dictator was overthrown in 1991 and the country was run by feuding clans and more recently by Islamic militants. With support from the U.N. and the African Union, Somali forces pushed the extremists of al-Shabab out of the capital.

Bank earnings down 7.7 percent

Interest rates dampening mortgage business

MARCY GORDON
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. banks' earnings declined 7.7 percent in the January-March quarter from a year earlier, as higher interest rates dampened demand for mortgage refinancing and reduced banks' revenue from the mortgage business.

The data issued Wednesday by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. highlighted the impact of the increase in interest rates that occurred in the spring of 2013.

It was only the second time in the last 19 quarters that the banking industry, which has been recovering from the financial crisis, posted a decline in net income from the year-earlier quarter.

The FDIC reported that the banking industry earned $37.2 billion in the first quarter of this year, down from $40.3 billion in the same period in 2013.

It was the first time since the third quarter of 2013 that banks marked a year-over-year profit decline — and that was the first decline since the spring of 2009, when the country was still mired in the Great Recession.

The latest report also showed the number of banks on the FDIC's problem list fell to 411 in the first quarter from 467 in the fourth quarter of last year.

Despite recent declines, long-term mortgage rates still are nearly a full percentage point above record lows reached about a year ago. The increase over the year was driven in part by speculation that the Federal Reserve would reduce its bond purchases, which have helped keep long-term interest rates low. Indeed, the Fed has announced four declines in its monthly bond purchases since December because the economy appears to be healing. But the Fed has no plans to raise its benchmark short-term rate from record lows.

Reduced income from trading also contributed to the first-quarter decline in banks' profit, the FDIC said. But the comparison was being drawn with banks' highest-earning quarter on record in January-March of last year, which the FDIC said was pumped up by some unusual profit gains.

The health of the banking industry continued to improve in the first quarter, with sour loans on the books declining, lending getting more robust and fewer banks unprofitable, FDIC officials said.

"The first-quarter results show a continuation of the recovery in the banking industry," FDIC Chairman Martin Gruenberg said in a statement.

The pace of banks' lending picked up in the first quarter. Total loan balances rose by $37.8 billion, or 0.5 percent, from the final quarter of 2013 even as mortgage lending declined and credit card loans marked a seasonal decrease.

Some experts have predicted strong growth in lending this year, with demand for loans growing as new jobs are created, incomes rise and business confidence strengthens.

Google unveils prototype of truly driverless car

JUSTIN PRITCHARD
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Google plans to build and launch onto city streets a small fleet of subcompact cars that could operate without a person at the wheel.

Actually, the cars wouldn't even have a wheel. Or gas and brake pedals. The company says the vehicles will use sensors and computing power, with no human needed.

Google Inc. hopes that by this time next year, 100 of the two-seaters will be on public roads, following extensive testing. The cars would not be for sale and instead would be provided to select operators for further tweaking and have limitations such as a 25 mph top speed.

The announcement presents a challenge to automakers that have been more cautious about introducing fully automated driving and to government regulators who are scrambling to accommodate self-driving cars on public roads. Other companies are working on the technology but none as large as Google has said it intends to put such cars in the hands of the public so soon.

To date, Google has driven hundreds of thousands of miles on public roads and freeways in Lexus SUVs and Toyota Priuses outfitted with special sensors and cameras. But with a "safety driver" in the front seat, those vehicles were not truly self-driving.

Instead of the standard controls, the prototypes would have buttons to begin and end the drive. Passengers would set a destination. The car would then make turns and react to other vehicles and pedestrians based on computer programs that predict what others might do, and data from sensors including radar and cameras that read in real time what other objects are actually doing.

The route might be set by typing a destination into a map or using spoken commands, Chris Urmson, the leader of Google's self-driving car team, told reporters Wednesday.

The car will be powered by electricity and could go about 100 miles before charging. Its shape suggests a rounded-out Volkswagen Beetle with headlights and sensors arrayed to resemble a friendly face.

Major automakers have steadily introduced technology that helps cars stay in their lanes and avoid accidents. However, all those vehicles come with a steering wheel and pedals — and the expectation that a driver will jump in should trouble arise. Several companies have said they expect by 2020 to market vehicles that can drive themselves under certain conditions.

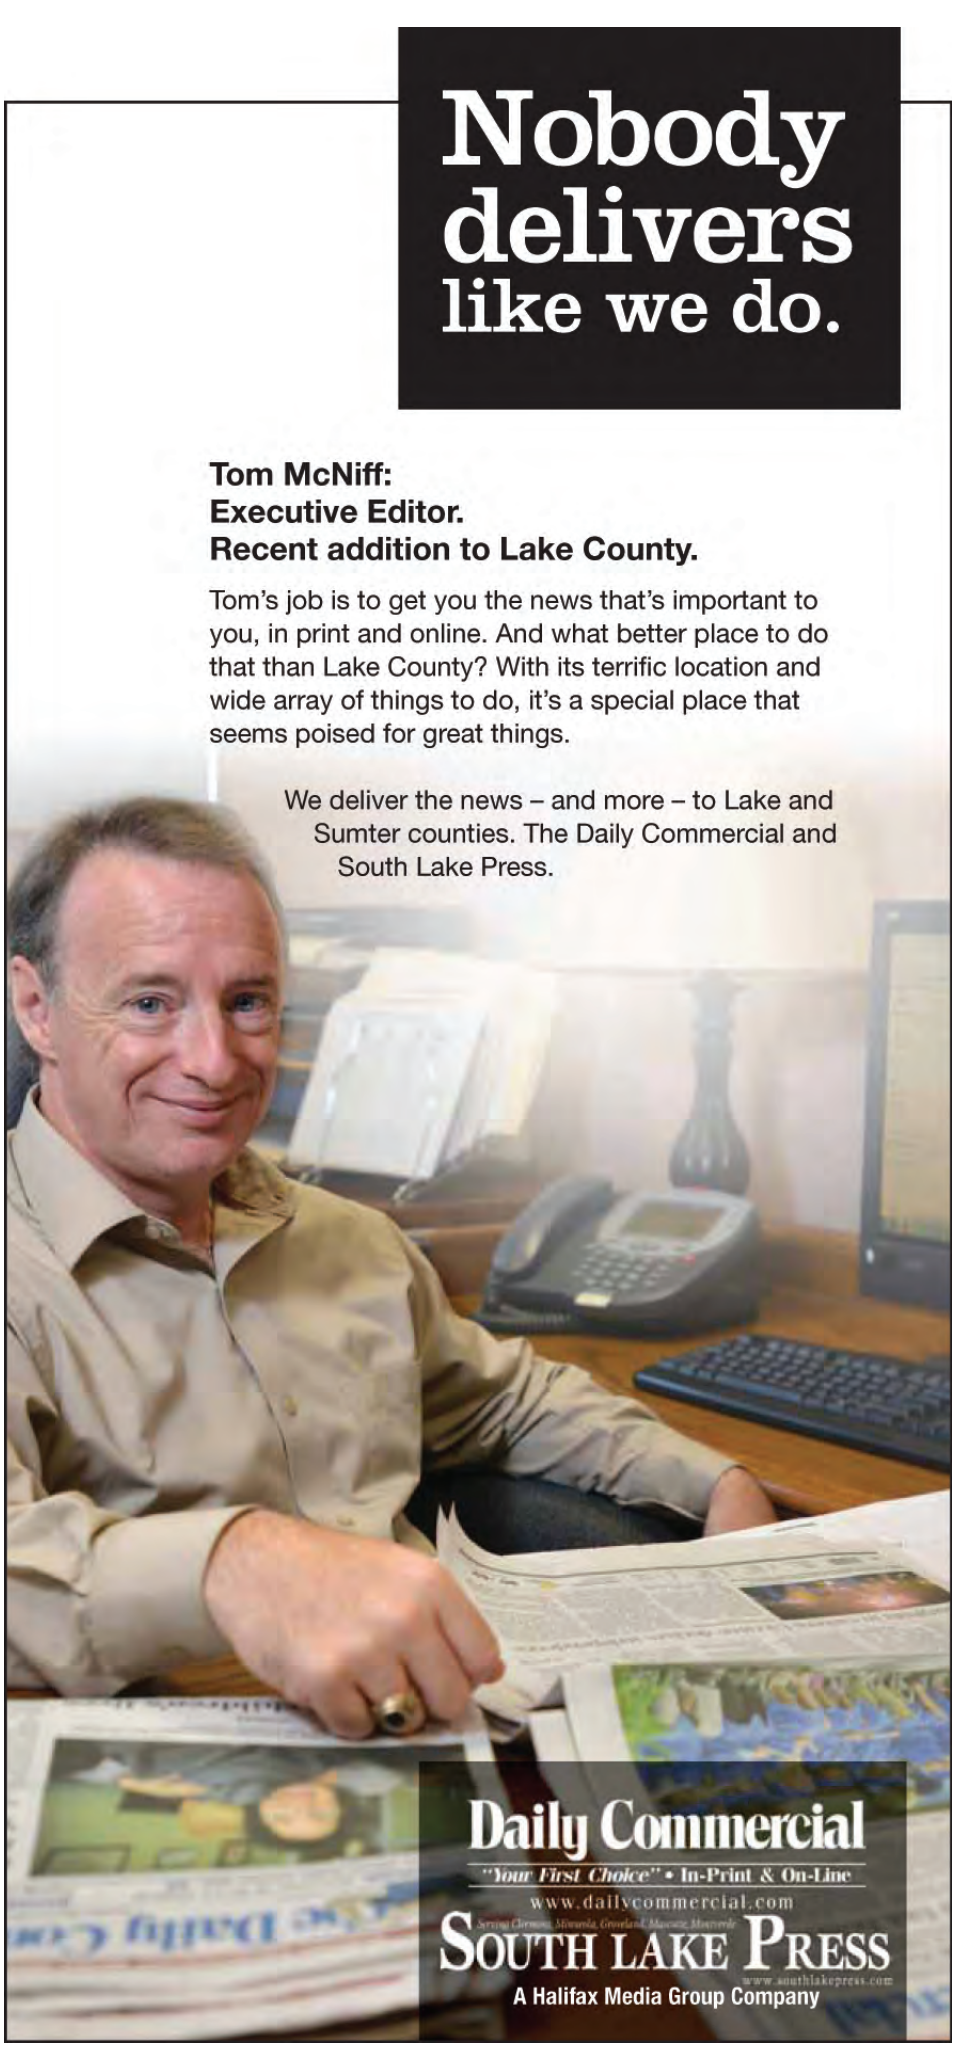
"Nothing is going to change overnight, but (Google's announcement) is another sign of the drastic shifts in automotive technology, business practices and retailing we're going to witness," said Karl Brauer, a senior analyst at Kelley Blue Book's KBB.com.

A French company, Induct Technology, has produced a driverless shuttle, which in February drove people around a hospital campus in South Carolina. But in terms of a truly self-driving car from a major company, Google looks to be first.

The tech titan began developing the prototype more than a year ago after it loaned some employees its retrofitted Lexuses and saw that some "would basically trust the technology more than it was ready to be trusted," Urmson said. Making a car that drives itself seemed more practical than somehow ensuring that people zoning out behind the wheel could take over at a moment's notice.

The first 100 prototypes will be built in the Detroit area with the help of firms that specialize in autos, Google said. It would not identify those firms or discuss the cost of each prototype.

This summer, Google plans to send test prototypes on closed courses, then later this year on public streets. Those test cars will have a wheel and pedals because under California law a test driver must be able to take immediate control.



Oil drops on expected rise in supply

Associated Press

The price of oil fell below $103 barrel Wednesday as traders expected the Energy Department to report an increase in U.S. supplies.

Benchmark crude for July delivery dropped $1.39 to close at $102.72 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Brent crude, a benchmark for international oils, fell 21 cents to $109.81 on the ICE exchange in London.

Traders were waiting for the latest information on U.S. supplies of crude and refined products. Data for the week ending May 23 is expected to show an increase of 1 million barrels in crude oil stocks and a decline of 200,000 barrels in gasoline stocks, according to a survey of analysts by Platts, the energy information arm of McGraw-Hill Cos.

Meanwhile, U.S. drivers are paying an average of $3.65 a gallon at the gas pump. That's down 5 cents from a month ago, but 2 cents higher than at this time last year.

Consumers holding back?

Costco reports financial results for its third fiscal quarter today.

Wall Street will be listening for an update on the wholesale club operator's sales trends and what they suggest about consumer spending. The retailer's second-quarter results were dampened by softer sales of some nonfood items and weaker profit margins in its fresh foods business.

Economic monitor

Economists predict that the U.S. economy didn't grow in the first three months of the year.

The Commerce Department's initial estimate in April had the economy growing at a barely discernible 0.1 percent annual rate in the January-March period. The second estimate, due out today, is expected to show that the economy shrank by 0.5 percent as the frigid weather exacted a toll on business activity.

Rough quarter?

Restructuring costs and declining sales hurt Abercrombie & Fitch's financial results in its fourth fiscal quarter.

Financial analysts anticipate the trend continued in the retailer's subsequent quarter. The company is expected to report today a wider quarterly loss and lower revenue for its first fiscal quarter versus a year ago. Abercrombie & Fitch has been closing its Gilly Hicks stores, shifting the brand's products to its Hollister stores and website.

Obama's Castro pick could be very good for HUD, nation

President Barack Obama, following in the footsteps of President Bill Clinton 20 years ago, picked a young Hispanic mayor of San Antonio to become the next secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Like Henry Cisneros, who was selected by Clinton in 1993 as HUD secretary, three-term San Antonio Mayor Julian Castro is a rising star in the Democratic Party who, if confirmed by the Senate, will be one of the highest-ranking Hispanics in the federal government.

He will replace HUD Secretary Shaun Donovan, whom Obama will name to head the White House Office of Management and Budget.

There's little doubt that Castro, whose twin brother, Joaquin, is a member of Congress, was chosen for the position because of his overall star-power and his particular appeal to a major part of the Democratic base. His being tapped to give the keynote speech at the 2012 Democratic National Convention was a major part of his carefully orchestrated advancement.

Castro's back story of being raised by a single mother and then going on to graduate with honors from Stanford and earn a law degree from Harvard doesn't hurt the political narrative that surely will be used in some of the midterm elections this year, including helping to get out the Latino vote for Democrats in Texas.

The politics no doubt will help his party, but what can/will Castro do for the gigantic HUD agency and the people it was designed to serve?

The San Antonio mayor, who when elected was the youngest of any mayor among the nation's 50 largest cities, has put together an impressive resume besides his education, demonstrating determination, vision and compassion, all attributes that would be beneficial in serving a complex department like HUD.

Two years ago, in a bold and unprecedented move, he called on San Antonio voters to approve expanding high-quality universal pre-K programs to thousands of 4-year-olds. The measure passed.

HUD, created in 1965 as part of Lyndon Johnson's "Great Society" program, was designed to provide sustainable affordable housing for millions of Americans who were living in substandard conditions.

The agency has gone through several incarnations over the years, from trying to maintain over-crowded, underfunded and mismanaged giant urban "projects" to community redevelopment that included demolishing "ghettos" to relocating public housing residents in private developments with Section 8 funding.

Cisneros, before leaving office because of personal indiscretions, was crucial in helping to transform HUD during the 1990s, and Castro can certainly learn from some of his initiatives.

Obama's choice for HUD secretary is a young, smart, capable leader who could bring some much-needed new energy and new ideas to the oversized, cumbersome agency.

Sensible solution to Veterans Affairs woes isn't new at all

Martin Schram

MCCLATCHY-TRIBUNE NEWS SERVICE

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., has proposed an urgent, sensible solution to the scandalous crisis of treatment delays at Veterans Affairs hospitals — and it should finally, belatedly, become official policy.

At a time when U.S. military veterans are languishing, and even dying, while being forced to wait for weeks just to see a doctor, McCain's proposal to allow veterans to treatment at any non-VA hospital — with the VA paying the bill — is attracting bipartisan support in Congress because it is simply common sense.

Then again, you won't be surprised to know the proposal also seemed urgent and sensible to me when I first proposed it in a 2008 book chronicling what seemed to be chronic problems at the VA. After detailing sad stories of veterans who died after they could not obtain prompt treatment at a VA hospital, I wrote the VA should issue to each veteran a "Vet-med card" that would serve veterans' medical needs just as a Medicare card serves senior citizens' needs. Veterans who couldn't get prompt treatment at a VA hospital could go to another hospital, perhaps one nearer their homes, and be treated — with the VA paying the bill.

I also urged the VA to adopt a more flexible approach so that its hospitals, which are highly rated for treatment of those wounded in war, might not need to duplicate costly cardiac and cancer care readily available at other nearby institutions.

But, as you may have noticed, Washington did not exactly rush to adopt any of those ideas.

Now this: In a May 23 Wall Street Journal op-ed piece, McCain wrote, "Veterans have earned the right to choose where and when they get their medical care, and it is our responsibility to afford them this option." He said two fellow

At a time when U.S. military veterans are languishing, and even dying, while being forced to wait for weeks just to see a doctor, McCain's proposal to allow veterans to treatment at any non-VA hospital — with the VA paying the bill — is attracting bipartisan support in Congress because it is simply common sense.

Republicans, Sens. Richard Burr of North Carolina and Tom Coburn of Oklahoma have joined him in authoring a bill to "give far greater flexibility to veterans to get the care they need and deserve, where and when they want it, whether in the VA system or not."

In the House, Veterans Committee Chair Jeff Miller, R-Fla., and House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., have backed the idea, too. "We can't have another backlog of people waiting for permission to go to a federally qualified clinic in a region," the former House speaker told reporters last week.

What has changed to ignite this urgency that was missing-in-action for years in which the VA's sad history of disservice to veterans has been so painfully documented?

Part of it has been recent disclosures that VA whistleblowers have said that at the Phoenix VA hospital and many others officials had been using secret double lists to conceal from their VA bosses and the public the fact that veterans were not being treated within the 14-day limit mandated by VA Secretary Eric Shinseki's department.

And part of it surely is that the latest demands for reforms have been led by Republicans who used the VA crisis as a new reason to attack President Obama's job performance. Yes, McCain did just that. And in previous years of documented VA incompetence, Democrats didn't rush with similar zeal to blast President George W. Bush or demand the firing of his VA secretaries. Not even when VA Secretary Jim Nicholson, a former Republican National Committee chairman, pooh-poohed a 2006 report that 40 percent of veterans who needed individual counseling for post-traumatic stress were forced into group sessions instead, by insisting: "We're dealing with it with great excellence." Indeed, veterans might be better off today, if Democrats had been more combative on this back then.

Interestingly, it turns out the latest VA scandal of secret double waiting lists isn't really new. Back in 2012, the Government Accountability Office issued a report that surfaced the scandalous VA conduct but was all but overlooked by the news media — indeed even congressional watchdogs didn't bark. Perhaps that was because the true outrage was obscured by the GAO's government-speak (which we will mercifully omit). But tucked into it was a brief disclosure:

"For example, three schedulers changed the desired date based on appointment availability; this would have resulted in a reported wait time that was shorter than the patient actually experienced."

And that, we now know, turned out to be the VA's secret recipe for cooking the books.

Area student-athletes sign before summer

FRANK JOLLEY | Staff Writer

Student-athletes in Lake and Sumter counties have been busy lately, wrapping up the school year with a number of signings.

Eighteen local signees have been reported to the Daily Commercial, including a class of nine from Tavares High School. In addition, five student-athletes from First Academy of Leesburg signed or are in the process of signing, along with two soccer players at South Lake, one basketball standout from Eustis and one from Liberty Christian in Tavares.

The contingent from Tavares inked their deals during a ceremony in the school auditorium on May 22. According to school officials, the group represents the most signings in recent memory.

All nine played football for the Bulldogs and helped Tavares to a 7-3 record in 2013 — the school's best record in more than a decade. Among the victories were wins against Eustis and Mount Dora, arguably, two of the Bulldogs' biggest rivals.

"This group of seniors worked extremely hard and helped make a firm foundation for the program," Tavares coach Chris Gauntlett said. "They were instrumental in turning this program around. We owe them a lot."

Among the signees were: Garrett Payne, Christian Sears, Osirus Munn, Demetrius Ramirez, Cole Higginbotham, Trevor Lamm, Michael Smith, David Buckner and Kristopher Wolfe.

Payne, a linebacker, signed with Florida Atlantic University, while Sears, a quarterback, signed with The Citadel. Munn and Ramirez, both receivers and defensive backs, signed

LONG AFTERNOON FOR SISTERS AT ROLAND GARROS

Serena Williams returns the ball during Wednesday's second round match at the French Open against Garbine Muguruza at Roland Garros, in Paris. Williams lost in two sets 2-6, 2-6.

French Open champ Serena Williams loses; Venus, too

HOWARD FENDRICH
Associated Press

PARIS — Wind was whipping, rain was falling, and thick gray clouds overhead were foreboding as Serena Williams double-faulted, then raised her hands in despair and wailed, "I can't serve!"

As if to prove the point, Williams double-faulted again moments later, before pushing a routine backhand wide to get broken at love.

Truth is, the French Open's defending champion couldn't do much properly on this particular afternoon, absorbing the most lopsided loss of her 288-match Grand Slam career. Unable to figure out how to get herself going or counter her unheralded opponent's aggressive game, Williams was beaten 6-2, 6-2 Wednesday by 35th-ranked Garbine Muguruza of Spain in the second round.

"Nothing really worked," said Williams, whose older sister Venus also lost. "I don't know anything that actually worked."

Ever since last week's draw, there was talk about a possible all-Williams match in the third round, which would have been their first Grand Slam meeting since the 2009 Wimbledon final. So much for that: Exactly one minute before Serena's match began on Court Suzanne Lenglen, the

Longtime Bucs owner Malcolm Glazer dies at 85

FRED GOODALL
Associated Press

TAMPA — Malcolm Glazer, the self-made billionaire who owned the NFL's Tampa Bay Buccaneers and led the takeover of English football's Manchester United, has died. He was 85.

The Bucs said Glazer died Wednesday.

The reclusive Palm Beach businessman had been in failing health since April 2006 when a pair of strokes left him with impaired speech and limited mobility in his right arm and leg.

GLAZER

Glazer raised his profile in 2005 with a $1.47 billion takeover of Manchester United that was bitterly opposed by fans of one of the world's richest football clubs. Before that, his unobtrusive management style helped transform the Bucs from a laughingstock into a model franchise that in 2003 won the Super Bowl 48-21 over the Oakland Raiders.

The thoughts of everyone at Manchester United are with the family tonight," Manchester United said in a statement

Born Aug. 25, 1928, in Rochester, New York, the son of a watch-parts salesman, Glazer began working for the family business when he was 8 and took over the operation as a teenager when his father died in 1943.

As president and CEO of First Allied Corp., the holding company for the family business interests, he invested in mobile-home parks, restaurants, food service equipment, marine protein, television stations, real estate, natural gas and oil production and other ventures. In March 2010, Forbes ranked him as tied for the world's 400th richest person, estimating his net worth at $2.4 billion. The magazine's separate ranking of Americans put him and his family at 139th in fall 2008.

He purchased the Bucs for a then-NFL record $192 million in 1995, taking over one of the worst-run and least successful franchises in professional sports. And while Glazer once said he probably overpaid by $50

Prosecutor: Aaron Hernandez killed 2 over spilled drink

DENISE LAVOIE
Associated Press

BOSTON — A spilled drink in a Boston nightclub led former New England Patriots tight end Aaron Hernandez to kill two people in a drive-by shooting because he felt he'd been disrespected, prosecutors said Wednesday.

"I think I got one in the head and one in the chest," Hernandez said to a friend as they fled the intersection where the victims were shot in their car, prosecutors said at the former gridiron star's arraignment.

Hernandez, already charged with killing another man last year, pleaded not guilty Wednesday to seven charges — including two counts of first-degree murder — in the 2012 shooting that killed Daniel de Abreu and Safiro Furtado. A third man was wounded.

In the months before the killings, Suffolk County First Assistant District Attorney Patrick Haggan told the court Hernandez had become increasingly convinced that people "had been testing, trying or otherwise disrespecting him when he frequented nightclubs in the area."

The night de Abreu and Furtado were killed, Haggan said Hernandez and a friend drove from Connecticut to a Boston nightclub called Cure. They were standing at the edge of the dance floor when de Abreu accidentally bumped into Hernandez, smiled at him and did not apologize, according to prosecutors. Haggan said de Abreu and his friends did not appear to recognize Hernandez and had no idea he was upset.

Hernandez became increasingly agitated and told his friend that de Abreu had deliberately bumped into him and "was trying him," Haggan said.

Surveillance video outside the club shows Hernandez pacing back and forth on the sidewalk as his friend tried to with Methodist University — Gauntlett's alma mater.

Higginbotham, a punter, Lamm and Smith, both receivers, signed with North Carolina Wesleyan. Buckner, a kicker, signed with Southeastern in Lakeland, and Wolfe, a guard, signed with Lutheran College.

FIRST ACADEMY OF LEESBURG

The Eagles' class of signees represented a variety of sports and included many of the top student-athletes the school has produced.

Byron Masoline, a running back who gained 1,885 yards in 2013 during First Academy's run to the Sunshine State Athletic Conference championship, will play for Warner University in Lake Wales. School officials at First Academy said Masoline has not officially signed, but will do so "in the coming days."

Also among the First Academy's recent signees were: Luke Lea, Chip Gause and Trent Scarbrough. David Elliott took part in a recent ceremony at the school, but is still considering track offers from Gardner-Webb College and Anderson College.

Elliott represented First Academy at this season's state track-and-field finals in the 400-meter dash and the triple jump.

Lea is heading to Dallas Baptist University to play basketball. He averaged 15 points and 12 rebounds per game in 2013-14 for the Eagles.

Scarbrough will play basketball with Mount Vernon Nazarene College in Ohio. He finished his career at First Academy with 206 3 pointers, and scored 15 points per game during his senior season.

Gause is moving on to play basketball at Trinity Baptist College in Jacksonville.

EUSTIS

Coy Patterson, a 6-foot combo guard for the Panthers, signed with Indian River State College in Fort Pierce. Patterson averaged 13 points and two assists this season for Eustis.

LIBERTY CHRISTIAN PREP

Devante Green, a 6-foot point guard, became Liberty Christian's first basketball signee during a ceremony on Tuesday at the school. Green signed to attend Lindenwood University in St. Charles, Mo.

SOUTH LAKE

A pair of boys soccer players will sign to play at Harcum College in Bryn Mawr, Pa.

Ricardo Tafolla and Jordy Fernandez will commit during a ceremony in the South Lake auditorium to continue playing as teammates in college.

MURDER

calm him down, Haggan said. Hernandez and his friend then crossed the street to another nightclub, where Hernandez thought he saw de Abreu and his friends come in, according to Haggan.

Hernandez then told his friend he believed he was "being targeted and being disrespected," Haggan said. In fact, de Abreu and his friends had not left the other club.

Haggan said Hernandez later drove around with his friend until he saw de Abreu, Furtado and others going to their car, then followed them and pulled up alongside their car at a red light.

"At this time, the victims were completely unaware there was any problem with the defendant," Haggan said.

Hernandez leaned out the driver's side, said "Yo, what's up now," followed by a racial slur, then fired at least five shots into the car, killing de Abreu and Furtado, and injuring a man sitting in the back seat, Haggan said.

Hernandez's attorney, Charles Rankin, objected, saying the prosecutor's account of the shooting was an attempt to poison the jury pool. Clerk Magistrate Gary Wilson dismissed the objection, saying it is standard procedure for prosecutors to describe evidence during arraignments in murder cases.

Family members of the victims filled four rows in the courtroom. One woman sobbed loudly as Hernandez entered his not guilty pleas.

De Abreu and Furtado were close friends who attended school and served in the military together in Cape Verde before coming to the United States, according to the attorney who represents their families in a $6 million civil suit against Hernandez.

The two men were shot about six weeks before Hernandez signed a five-year, $40 million contract with the Patriots. He went on to catch 51 passes and score five touchdowns that season, his last in the NFL.

Hernandez, 24, was released by the Patriots last summer after he was charged in the June 17 killing of semi-pro football player Odin Lloyd, who was dating a sister of Hernandez's fiancee. Lloyd's body was found in an industrial area near Hernandez's home in North Attleborough.

Hernandez's lawyers have said he is looking forward to proving his innocence.

Suffolk District Attorney Daniel Conley would not comment when reporters asked if Lloyd's killing was linked to the earlier killings of de Abreu and Furtado. He said Lloyd was not the friend who was with Hernandez the night the two men were killed.

million, the value of the team has more than quadrupled since he assumed control.

"Malcolm Glazer was the guiding force behind the building of a Super Bowl-champion organization. His dedication to the community was evident in all he did, including his leadership in bringing Super Bowls to Tampa Bay," NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell said.

"Malcolm's commitment to the Bucs, the NFL and the people of the Tampa Bay region are the hallmarks of his legacy. Our thoughts and prayers are with his wife, Linda, their six children and the entire Glazer family."

In an era when many owners of professional teams attract nearly as much attention as the athletes, Glazer was content to allow three of his sons handle daily operation of the Bucs and rarely granted interviews or visited the team's offices and training facility.

FRENCH

29th-seeded Venus' 2-6, 6-3, 6-4 defeat against 56th-ranked Anna Schmiedlova of Slovakia wrapped up in the main stadium.

"I felt like this was a match that I was most likely going to win," Venus said. "I don't know how Serena felt, but I'm sure she feels like that every time she goes on the court. So I think our expectation was to play in the next round."

Instead of the 25th Williams vs. Williams encounter on tour, it'll be the 20-year-old Muguruza vs. 19-year-old Schmiedlova.

Serena's exit came a day after a loss by No. 2 Li Na, the first time in the Open era, which began in 1968, that the top two women were gone before the third round at any major tournament.

"Nobody's safe," summed up Patrick Mouratoglou, the coach who began working with Serena after the 2012 French Open.

"Usually when she's in trouble, she always finds a way," Mouratoglou said. "But she's a human being, so today she couldn't."

The biggest beneficiary might be Maria Sharapova, who won the 2012 French Open, lost to Serena in last year's final and potentially faced a quarterfinal against the American this time. Sharapova beat 42nd-ranked Tsvetana Pironkova 7-5, 6-2 in a drizzle.

Alize Cornet of France, seeded 20th, was surprised 6-4, 4-6, 6-4 by 18-year-old Taylor Townsend, an American wild-card entry ranked 205th and making her Grand Slam debut. On the men's side, No. 15 Mikhail Youzhny and No. 20 Alexandr Dolgopolov were sent home, while No. 2 Novak Djokovic, No. 4 Roger Federer and No. 8 Milos Raonic won in straight sets.

HORSE RACING

Past Triple Crown winners ready for new champ

BETH HARRIS
Associated Press

Patrice Wolfson is ready to give up her title as the co-owner of the last Triple Crown winner.

She will get the chance if California Chrome is successful in his bid to join Affirmed and 10 other horses atop racing's pinnacle.

No horse since Affirmed in 1978 has swept the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes. Since then, 11 have won the first two legs only to fail in the 11/2-mile Belmont, the longest and most grueling of the three races that are run over a five-week span. Wolfson and other connections of Triple Crown winners believe this may be the year they get to induct another member into their exclusive club.

"You just like to see a great horse win it and I think he's got the potential to be a great horse, so we'll be cheering for him," Wolfson said Tuesday by phone from New York.

"If this horse can win the Triple Crown, I want to be there," Chenery said from her home in Boulder, Colo.

The jockeys who rode the last three Triple Crown winners will be at Belmont, too: Steve Cauthen (Affirmed), Jean Cruget (Seattle Slew) and Ron Turcotte (Secretariat).

The 1970s produced three Triple Crown winners, with Secretariat breaking a 25-year drought. Seattle Slew followed in 1977 and Affirmed came along the next year, leading many to believe the Triple Crown was an easy feat.

Now 36 years have passed since Cauthen, who was then 18, teamed with Affirmed to hold off Alydar in three thrilling races, capped by their victory by a head in the Belmont.

At 3-5, Affirmed was the last odds-on favorite to win the Belmont. California Chrome figures to be a low price, too, just like in the Preakness, where he was the overwhelming favorite.

Cauthen has watched California Chrome from afar and the chestnut colt reminds him of Affirmed. Cauthen and his horse got along well, and he sees California Chrome and jockey Victor Espinoza doing the same.

Billy Turner carries a title of his own: the last living trainer of a Triple Crown winner. He's gotten a close-up view of California Chrome, who has been training at Belmont Park where Turner's stable is based.

"He's such a nice horse," he said. "He goes out there, jogs off, gallops around, does whatever they like him to do, sort of notices the crowd and just seems to really enjoy what he's doing."

Turner had his hands full with Seattle Slew, describing the colt as "an absolute monster."

"All he wanted to do was train. He wasn't lovey-dovey," Turner said. "Once you trained him, he'd settle right down. My biggest concern with him was trying to figure out how to get him settled down enough to go a mile and a half in the Belmont."

That's a distance no 3-year-old has ever run before and few will be asked to go that far again in their careers. California Chrome has proven adaptable in the 1 1/4-mile Derby and 1 3/16-mile Preakness, where he got good trips and wasn't bothered by the noise of large crowds.

"He's proven already that he's the dominant horse in the 3-year-old ranks today," Turner said. "He would be unlucky not to win the Belmont."

Unlike some of the more regal bloodlines that produced the 11 Triple Crown winners, California Chrome comes from a modest pedigree as the product of a $2,500 sire. Top pedigree stallions typically cost between $75,000 and $100,000.

But he does have some Triple Crown connections. His father's side of the family traces back to both Seattle Slew and Secretariat.

"That makes it exciting for me," said Jim Hill, who co-owned Seattle Slew.

The last two horses to win the first two legs of the Triple Crown were never factors in the Belmont. Big Brown failed to finish the race in 2008 and two years ago I'll Have Another was scratched the day before with an injury.

"You never know," Cauthen said. "That's why they have to run the race."

SOCCER

Official: Brazil to 'surprise' with successful Cup

STEPHEN WADE
Associated Press

RIO DE JANEIRO — Brazil's Deputy Sports Minister Luis Fernandes believes Brazil will organize a successful World Cup despite what he called "prejudice" against so-called developing countries trying to organize major sporting events.

"We are confident that Brazil will surprise the world with a successful event in the World Cup," Fernandes said Wednesday in a teleconference.

"There is no embarrassment and no panic," he added. "We are absolutely confident, excited and proud that we will deliver a fantastic World Cup in Brazil. That's the general atmosphere in government. We are absolutely confident."

Brazil's preparations of the World Cup, which opens June 12 in Sao Paulo, have been characterized by delays building or remodeling 12 stadiums, unfinished upgrades to airports and transportation. There's been criticism that the $11.5 billion spent on the World Cup should have been used to improve the country's poor schools and rundown hospitals.

This Date in Baseball

May 29

1916 — Christy Mathewson defeated the Boston Braves 3-0 for the New York Giants' 17th consecutive road win.
1922 — The U.S. Supreme Court ruled organized baseball was primarily a sport and not a business, and therefore not subject to antitrust laws and interstate commerce regulations. The suit had been brought by the Federal League's Baltimore franchise.
1928 — Bill Terry hit for the cycle to lead the New York Giants to a 12-5 win over Brooklyn at Ebbets Field. Terry became the first player in major league history to include a grand slam as part of the cycle.
1942 — New York's Lefty Gomez, self-described as the worst-hitting pitcher in baseball, banged out four hits while pitching a 16-1 four-hitter against Washington.
1946 — In a reverse integration role, Edward Klep became the first white to play in the Negro leagues in a game played in Grand Rapids. Klep pitched seven innings for the Cleveland Buckeyes against the American Giants in his debut with the Negro American League team.
1956 — Dale Long went hitless for the Pirates, ending his major league record streak of home runs in eight consecutive games. The Brooklyn Dodgers beat Pittsburgh, 10-1.
1965 — Philadelphia's Richie Allen hit a 529-foot home run over the roof of Connie Mack Stadium off Chicago's Larry Jackson in the Phillies' 4-2 victory.
1976 — Houston's Joe Niekro was the winning pitcher and hit a home run off his brother, Phil Niekro. The Astros beat the Atlanta Braves 4-1. It was the only home run hit by Joe in his 22-year major league career.
1990 — Oakland's Rickey Henderson broke Ty Cobb's 62-year-old American League stolen base record, but the Toronto Blue Jays still beat the Athletics 2-1. Henderson's 893rd steal came in the sixth inning.

'NORMAL HEART': Ruffalo brings depth / C6

Manaus is Brazil's jewel of the Amazon jungle

MIMI WHITEFIELD

It's that special time in the late afternoon when the light turns golden and life seems to move at the pace of a bygone era in the square that anchors this Amazon city's opera house.

Children clamor to catch soap bubbles sent aloft by a vendor, tourists pedal by the African House on three-wheeled bikes as patrons sample juice made from the fruits of the rain forest, and the stand in the corner of the plaza turns out bowl after bowl of steaming tacacá soup.

If there's one square that encapsulates all that makes Manaus special, it's the Largo de São Sebastião. The architecture, culture, cuisine and history of the Amazon are all on display in this historic district near the Port of Manaus.

Entering the pink opera house with its neo-classical and Greco-Roman flourishes is like stepping back into the 19th century when the rubber industry made Manaus Brazil's golden city — the richest in the entire country.

It was a time when the "aroma of rubber perfumed the air," when women sent their gowns out to be laundered in Portugal, the best opera companies in the world visited and rubber barons lit their cigars with currency, says Robério Braga, secretary of culture for Amazonas, the largest state in Brazil but one of the most sparsely populated.

But like a candle in the wind, Manaus burned so brightly only briefly, from 1879 to 1912. Then the rubber

'Korengal' marks return of 'Restrepo' documentarian

DERRIK J. LANG
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Sebastian Junger wants 84 minutes of moviegoers' time, especially civilian moviegoers.

In "Korengal," the filmmaker employs that amount of footage unused in his 2010 Afghanistan war documentary "Restrepo" to paint a psychological portrait of soldiers, not to re-chronicle the conflict cunningly captured in the Oscar-nominated original.

"I really thought of it an inquiry," said Junger, a journalist and author. "'Restrepo' wasn't an inquiry. 'Korengal' is an inquiry into the experience of war and how it affects people. Civilians really need to understand the experience. We sent them out there in the first place, and now we have to bring them back. The more we understand about what they went through, the better."

Junger is optimistic that the new film will have as much of an impact as "Restrepo," which was co-directed by the late documentarian Tim Hetherington and told of the year the two spent embedded with a U.S. platoon in Afghanistan's dangerous Korengal Valley.

(Hetherington was killed by shrapnel from a mortar round while covering fighting in Libya in 2011.)

Junger financed "Korengal" with partners but turned to crowd-funding for distribution of the film, which opens in New

CANNES, France — Simav Bedirxan chokes up when she recalls watching images of the children she once taught. "In the video they're so alive, still dancing and playing," the soft-spoken woman said as she sat in an apartment in this coastal Riviera town, barely getting the words out between tears. "But they're all gone now."

A Kurdish schoolteacher from Homs, Bedirxan, 35, is co-director of "Silvered Water," a new impressionistic documentary about the Syrian war and its many victims. In the film she and veteran Syrian filmmaker Ossama Mohammed engage in lyrical dialogue over more than 1,000 gripping images of the conflict, filmed by them and many ordinary citizens. The movie had a special screening recently at the Cannes Film Festival.

Also in the official selection this year is "Maidan," industry sputtered out, after rubber tree seeds were smuggled out of Brazil and planted by the English in Malaysia, Sri Lanka and British colonies in Africa. When England undercut Brazilian rubber in the world market, Manaus fell on hard times.

BRAZIL

The famous opera house was shuttered for decades. "We had a very poor period. Everything was devalued," Braga said.

But the renovated opera house is once again a cultural hub, home to the Amazonas Symphony Orchestra and open for guided tours and performances, including some that are free. And Manaus is once again hoping for a star turn when it hosts four World Cup games from June 14 to June 25, with the United States playing Portugal on June 22.

"This is a special opportunity, so we must take advantage of it. This is not so much a financial windfall, but an opportunity to promote our state" and cement its reputation as a cultural and tourism center, Braga said.

There's plenty to see in Manaus starting with the Teatro Amazonas (Avenida Eduardo Ribeiro). Finished in 1896, it boasts a dome with 36,000 pieces in the colors of the Brazilian flag, the original painted stage curtain imported from Paris, and a driveway made of rubber that muffled the sounds of horses and carriages during a performance.

The Murano crystal chandeliers were imported from Italy, the pine floors noted for their acoustic properties came from Lithuania, the gilded mirrors were sent across the ocean and up the Amazon from France, and the furnishings brought in from France and Italy. And if you crane your neck toward the ceiling, the view mimics what you would see if you were looking up from under the Eiffel Tower.

The São Sebastião church, whose bells toll on the quarter hour, sits on the opposite corner from the opera house, and it's worth popping in if you're in the neighborhood.

MIMI WHITEFIELD / MCT

Lanchas rapidas serve as taxis on the waterways of the Amazon region and dock at the floating restaurant on Lake Janauari near Manaus, Brazil.

IF YOU GO

WHAT TO EAT: The food of the Amazon is influenced by Indian, African and Portuguese cuisine and also the fruits and spices of the rain forest. You could spend an afternoon sampling tropical juice. Try açaí and cupuaçu to get started. Don't leave Manaus without trying tacacá — the spicy soup — or the coconut milk and shrimp dishvatapá, sampling Amazon region fish such as arapaima (also known as pirarucu), tambaqui and tucunaré (peacock bass), slathering yellow tucupi sauce on your fish or duck or sampling some guarana tea.

THE ELECTRICAL PLUGS ARE DIFFERENT IN BRAZIL: Though Manaus operates on 110 volts, most of the sockets are Type C and D and won't work with the typical two-pronged plug of the U.S. Most hotels provide adaptors, but it's best to take your own if you want to make sure your small appliances will work.

MONEY EXCHANGE: Parmetal, Rua 10 de Julho 651 in central Manaus near the opera house offers good rates.

AFTERNOON BREAK: Between 1-2 p.m. many stores, offices and even restaurants are closed.

Around the square are bars where tables are drawn out on the sidewalk and patrons take their time nursing ice-cold bottles of beer, restaurants that serve freshwater fish from the Amazon. At art galleries, cafes and souvenir shops, you'll find dolphins and monkeys carved from exotic woods, woven baskets and jewelry crafted by indigenous groups.

Familia Sulaiman, Rua 10 de Julho 603 has a good selection of handicrafts and good prices. For high-quality items, try nearby Galeria Amazônica, Rua Costa Azevedo 272.

The weather in Manaus is tropical, so after you've finished your tour of the opera house, stop by Sorvete Glacial for cones or scoops of ice cream that you buy by the weight. My favorite combo was açaí — made from the berries of the açaí palm, maracujá (passion fruit), and cupuaçu — a custardy white fruit that tastes a bit like pineapple meets chocolate meets apple.

Though it sounds counter-intuitive to drink a hot soup on a steamy day, don't leave Largo de São Sebastião without stopping by Tacacá da Gisela for a spicy concoction of mandioca broth, tapioca paste, the lip-numbing jambú leaves and dried shrimp.

Mix it all together and you have tacacá, a signature dish of the Amazon. The curious melding of tang, tartness and briny shrimp is flavor heaven. It's served in the waterproofed shell of a gourd with a little wooden pick to stab the shrimp and jambú.

Walking across the black and white mosaic tiles of São Sebastião square will put you in the mood for another must-see attraction. The wave-like patterns represent the Meeting of the Waters.

Just east of Manaus, the Rio Negro joins the Rio Solimões (the name given the Amazon River around Manaus and west to the Peruvian border) but when the two rivers meet, they don't mingle.

Like neighbors who can't get along, the Rio Negro, which looks like black tea due to decomposing material, and the muddy brown Solimões keep to themselves for nearly four miles before they finally mix and flow on as the mighty Amazon.

The striking demarcation between the two results when the slower, warmer Rio Negro meets the faster, colder Solimões, whose headwaters are in the Andes. Differing water densities slow the mixing process too.

Tours of the Encontro das Águas are available by both air and water.

No trip to Manaus is complete without putting in some time on the Amazon and its tributaries, which are so essential to this region's way of life. Though Manaus itself is a bustling metropolis set up on a grid with good bus connections, there are few roads outside the city.

Long narrow motorized boats, the lanchas rapidas, are the taxis of the Amazon; kids who live along the rivers take school boats not buses. Tour operators will arrange visits to Amazon families where you can learn how they live on the river.

Manaus is also a convenient jumping off place to the world's largest tropical rain forest, and many Amazon tour operators and outfitters are clustered in the side streets near Largo de São Sebastião.

I had long heard stories of the pink freshwater dolphins of the Amazon but I had my doubts about how pink they really were. The ones I saw at a rustic floating dolphin attraction at Acajatuba Lake were a delightful rosy hue. Even though it was pouring rain, seeing these creatures was one of the high points of my trip.

A dolphin encounter is an easy day trip from Manaus and you'll see the flooded jungle that reminded me of Florida's Ten Thousand Islands, sans mangroves, where ceiba and other trees have acclimated to the fluctuating water levels of the rivers and the high-water marks reaches far up on the stilt homes along the edge of the Rio Negro.

You'll also enjoy a trip through the Anavilhanas Archipelago — a labyrinth of small islands in the Rio Negro — where you'll catch sight of manatees, jacanas whose yellow flight feathers look like fluttering butterflies, and monkeys.

CANNES

a documentary on the Ukrainian uprisings shot as recently as March; more traditional dramas from Russia and Turkey try to show those countries' complicated new realities.

The French confab that ends Sunday is best known for celebrity glitz and high-end dramas. But as crises in several parts of the world have mushroomed and as improvements in technology have allowed for movies to be shot and edited ever more quickly, Cannes has taken on a somewhat unlikely role: as a venue for charged, newsy stories, the film festival as political sanctuary. In a sense these movies mark a return to Cannes' ideological roots and also offer the kind of political edge to the everyday that the French tend to esteem.

Bedirxan and Mohammed last weekend held a touching ceremony in which they tagged the upscale Boulevard de la Croisette with graffiti commemorating Syrian war victims. And the recent imprisonment by Russian authorities of Oleg Sentsov, a Ukrainian filmmaker living in Crimea, on terrorist charges sparked calls for his release at a press conference at the festival.

"Cannes is a place that will have you when others won't," Mohammed said. "It's a different idea of cinema, maybe a more important one."

Mohammed has firsthand experience. In 2011, he flew here to speak on a panel about the burgeoning Syrian conflict. To a question about the state of affairs under President Bashir Assad, he questioned the regime's holding of political prisoners. The massive media coverage of the festival combined with the exponential effect of social media helped the comments quickly reach his home country, prompting death threats. He fled to Paris and has lived there since.

A somewhat similar dynamic was in play this year with the Iranian actress Leila Hatami, a member of the nine-member competition jury. Cannes protocol has many female jury members and filmmakers greeting festival director Thierry Fremaux with a customary two-cheek peck.

VIRGINIA MAYO / AP

Jury members Sophia Coppola, left, and Leila Hatami arrive for the screening of the Palme d'Or winner, Winter Sleep, during the closing night of the 67th international film festival in Cannes, France, on May 25.

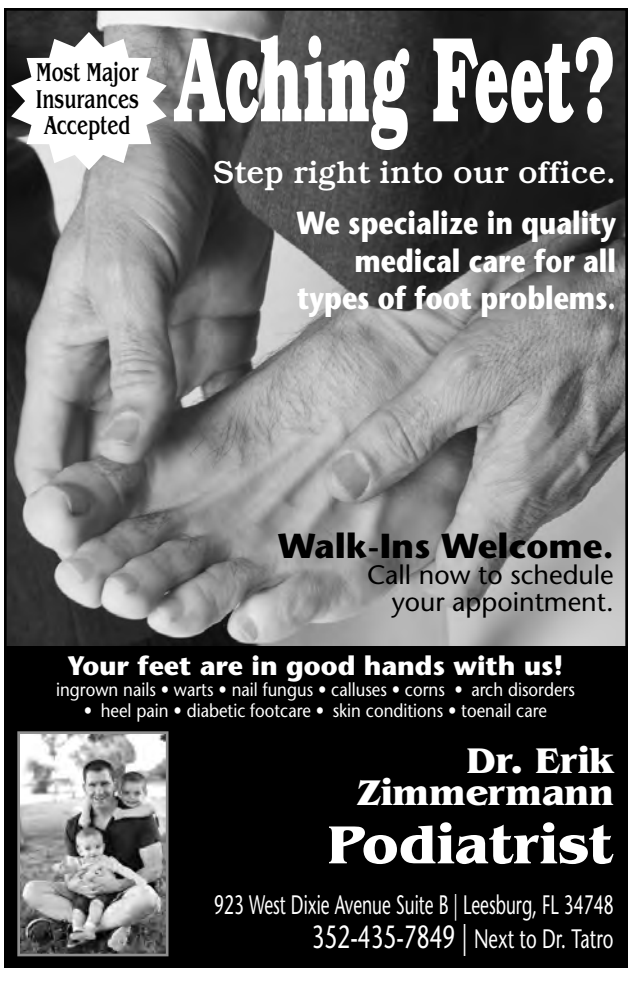
Few thought anything of it when Hatami, dressed in traditional garb, did just that before a premiere. But the image quickly reached authorities in Iran, and deputy culture minister Hossein Noushabadi rebuked her on a state news-service site for projecting a "bad image of Iranian women."

On Wednesday, a kind of vicarious protest took place at an official screening when Ukraine's Sergi Loznitsa, a respected narrative filmmaker, presented "Maidan," an observational documentary he shot over three months in Kiev's eponymous square.

The movie tracks the period that saw hundreds of thousands of citizens take to the streets to protest the government of then-President Alexander Yanukovych. Unlike hand-held pieces that have emerged from similar hot spots, such as Egyptian Oscar nominee "The Square," "Maidan" uses static shots and long takes to capture tableaux of everyday Ukrainians participating in the political process. As the voices of chanters and speakers ring in the background, Loznitsa holds the shot for minutes at a time so viewers can feel like a part of the protests as well as scan the busy frame, where they can pick up details such as individual facial expressions.

At the movie's debut Wednesday night, Loznitsa made an explicit connection between the setting and the events of his film. "It's a great place to make a premiere of this film, in a country of a great revolution," he said.

Loznitsa next aims to bring his movie to the fifth-annual Odessa Film Festival in July. The gathering in the troubled region will go on, said the festival's director, Julie Sinkevych.



Residents work to save the Eustis Historical Museum

The Eustis Historical Museum and Preservation Society, which had been teetering on the verge of collapse, has a new board of directors that hopes to rebuild membership and interest in the organization.

"We cannot lose this museum," Eustis City Commissioner and lifelong resident Michael Holland said in a press release, referring to the museum's dwindling membership and the departure of its curator.

The museum also needed to recruit 13 residents to serve on the Governing Board or the museum would lose its nonprofit status and role as the repository of history in the city of Eustis.

"This organization is part of the heart of our city," Holland added, "and preserving the history is one of the most important jobs we have as citizens."

Holland, along with former city commissioners Sue Hooper and Dr. Jim Rotella, joined Christie Bobbitt, executive director of the Lake Eustis Area Chamber of Commerce, and concerned citizen Aja Lake to form a nominating committee to seek new members for the museum's board.

Elections were held May 13, according to the press release.

Business owner Timothy Totten was elected president; registered nurse Jill Baker, first vice president; business owner Nan Cobb, second vice-president; John Blankenship, treasurer; banker Terri Holt, assistant treasurer; Christie Bobbitt, recording secretary and Aja Lake, correspondence secretary.

The membership also elected nine trustees: B.E. Thompson, Ethel Ryan, Louise Carter, Dr. Jim Rotella, Sue Hooper, Kim Winn, Jeff Stephan, Chuck McMaster and Susan Snell.

The first tasks for the new board members will be re-energizing the museum's membership and creating a plan to carry the museum forward into the future.

Those interested in joining or volunteering at the museum may call 352-483-0046 or send an email the president at eustismuseum@gmail.com.

Where the cruise is going just as important as what's on the ship

JILL SCHENSUL
MCT

PRINCESS CRUISES / AP

Princess Cruises' new ship, Regal Princess, has officially joined the fleet.

A cruise is basically made up of two ingredients: the ship (aka the "what") and the ports it sails to (the where).

For many years, we heard a lot about the what — especially as ships got so big they warranted their own ZIP codes. (That ZIP code reference was supposed to be a joke, but when 6,000 people gather in one well-defined area for a week or more, you've got a small city. Or at least a self-contained resort.)

Each new ship came with a new can-you-top-this amusement — climbing walls were just the beginning. Basketball courts, putting greens, virtual-reality experiences — passengers have been conditioned to expect something wow-worthy when they come aboard. Royal Caribbean Cruise Lines' 4,905-passenger Quantum of the Seas, which doesn't sail until September, has created a major buzz with news of its sky-diving simulator, RipCord by iFly, and its Ferris wheel-style sky ride, North Star.

In the past, this is what made news in the cruise world. This is what gets potential passengers interested.

But the "where" can also make a cruise line stand out.

With competition fierce and so many ships sailing the same routes to the popular ports around the world, every cruise line is under constant pressure to find a new "wow" factor, according to the Cruise Lines International Association (CLIA), an industry trade association with 26 member cruise lines and 10,500 travel agencies.

Cruise lines big (Carnival, for example) and small (Azamara) are finding wow factors beyond what's onboard. They're adding new ports or two every season, or developing a new itinerary in a popular destination. They're also moving ships to new destinations in areas they wouldn't have even considered five or 10 years ago, including Montenegro and Afghanistan.

Viking Cruises, American Cruise Lines, UniWorld and other small ship lines are commissioning new builds. Besides ships, whole small-ship cruise lines have either just opened (Emerald Waterways, DreamCruise) or are expanding (Aqua Expeditions, Ponant Croisieres, Tauck Cruises) to keep up with demand.

Time has also been spent researching and testing waterways that have long been the lifeblood of civilizations but are not on our radar today, because size matters when it comes to ships and where they can go when they're carrying a few thousand people. Destinations on the rise today include Japan, China, Vietnam, Cambodia and the Amazon among the exotics. France — yes, France, its many canals, rivers from the Seine to the Saône to the Rhône — is especially au courant right now for small-ship sailing.

The big cruise lines are adding ports in all parts of the globe. Regent Seven Seas has added 21 ports, ranging from Natal, Brazil, to Nosy Be, Madagascar. Crystal's two ships have 12 maiden calls, including Oban, Scotland, and Luanda, Angola. Holland America is adding Burma, Labrador and Angola, as well as itineraries based out of Singapore.

The big lines know they can't tread water, even in the Caribbean, which is still the most popular destination for cruisers. So they are adding new islands to their Caribbean itineraries. Even fans of "the islands" who don't really care about the "where," as long as it's sunny and warm, eventually want a change of scenery — provided it's still sunny and warm, of course.

York on May 30. He said revisiting the hundreds of hours of footage filmed in 2007 and 2008 with Hetherington was invigorating after working on the biographical HBO film, "Which Way Is the Front Line from Here? The Life and Time of Tim Hetherington."

"I had made a whole film about Tim's life and his death, so I had sort of hacked my way through that emotionally already," said Junger. "There were some poignant moments looking at the footage he shot, but it also felt like I was breathing new life into the footage that he and I shot during that amazing year, so he was living on a little more."

With the influx of soldiers returning home from the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, Junger hopes the film can act as a bridge to understanding between civilians and veterans. For instance, Junger said a former military spouse recently wrote to him and acknowledged she wouldn't have divorced her veteran husband had she first seen "Restrepo."

"The next big project, which will probably take longer and cost more money, is reintegrating almost 3 million combat veterans from the past two wars back into society," said Junger. "For me, 'Korengal' is the beginning of the process. It's about understanding who these people are coming home and how they've been affected by what they've been through."

Michael Cunningham, a member of the platoon chronicled in "Restrepo" and "Korengal," agreed. Whether it's watching his fellow bored-out-of-their-skulls soldiers play "Guitar Hero," thanks to a generator delivered to their mountainous outpost, or gleefully engaging in a violent firefight with insurgents, Cunningham believes audiences will learn from the film.

"I think people should go see this movie out of respect for themselves, not because of what I did or other soldiers are doing," said Cunningham. "Whether you like it or not, you're an American citizen, this is your country, so you might as well get the best understanding you can from something that I think aptly sums up the experience."

Mark Ruffalo brings depth to 'The Normal Heart'

MARY MCNAMARA
MCT

As the great Cynthia Ozick once observed, "In saying what is obvious, never choose cunning. Yelling works better."

In the early 1980s several things were obvious to writer Larry Kramer. Gay men were literally dropping dead and neither the government nor the medical establishment seemed to be doing much to stop it. Moreover, no one, outside of other — increasingly terrified — gay men, seemed to care.

So Kramer wrote "The Normal Heart," a blunt instrument of a play debuting in 1985 in which his thinly disguised avatar, a New York writer called Ned Weeks, watches friends die, helps form the Gay Men's Health Crisis center and does a lot of yelling. About homophobia and the Holocaust, about the perils of the closet, about society's unforgivable hypocrisy and gay men's own self-destructiveness.

"The Normal Heart" was a howling call to action, designed to push people out of their ignorance, complacency and seats to demand justice, and funding, for all.

Now, after years of languishing in development purgatory, it has been turned into a film. Directed by Ryan Murphy, who worked with Kramer on the adaptation, and featuring a remarkable cast that includes Mark Ruffalo, Matt Bomer, Julia Roberts, Alfred Molina and Jim Parsons, "The Normal Heart" debuts Sunday night on HBO.

It is a moment of fury and grace and wonder that this "Heart," in which a brutally specific story is deftly re-tailored for another medium and time, loses none of its original passion or pointedness. Where the play sought to make the personal political, this "Normal Heart" steps back enough to make room for characters to develop as fully as the message. The political comes full circle and is personal once again.

JOJO WHILDEN / MCT

Matt Bomer and Mark Ruffalo star in "The Normal Heart" on HBO.

When "The Normal Heart" first debuted, Kramer's refusal to choose cunning, to cloak his rage in metaphor or sneak up on the audience with sentiment, offended many. It will no doubt do so again.

As in the original, Kramer excoriates the Reagan administration, then-mayor of New York City Edward Koch, the medical community and the New York Times for their slow response to the crisis. But Reagan, who famously did not refer to the disease by name until 1987, also blamed gay men themselves, particularly activists, for their circumstance since they refused to change their sexual behavior.

Time, and rewrites, have softened some of the play's stridency. More important, the romance between Weeks (Ruffalo) and his lover, Felix (Bomer), is given a more prominent role as is Felix's death spiral, giving the story power both broad and intimate.

Indeed, the casting of these two men alone gives the play new life. Ruffalo is a performer of such depth he could, and did, infuse the Hulk with soul. Meanwhile, Bomer's fine work on "White Collar" has proved him the actor Hollywood believed for decades could not exist — an openly gay man who can still make women swoon playing a straight lead.

Here, the pair are just heartbreaking.

Maine prep school serves as a battleground in 'Words and Pictures'

BETSY SHARKEY
MCT

LOS ANGELES — "Words and Pictures," starring Clive Owen and Juliette Binoche, is a middle-aged romantic comedy masquerading as a war between literature and art.

The battleground is a Maine prep school set in a small town somewhere along the state's bucolic coastline. Owen plays Jack Marcus, the resident English teacher. Brash, unconventional, Marcus has a love of language, his students and the vodka in his thermos. Dina Delsanto (Binoche) is the new art teacher. An acclaimed abstract painter, she is aloof, unattached and being crippled by rheumatoid arthritis.

Though the argument that swirls around their flirting is ostensibly over which art form is more significant, in reality Marcus and Delsanto are fighting personal demons and diseases. Their attraction comes as a surprise.

In the prep school, adult and teenage angst and intellectual jockeying fill the corridors, classrooms and the teachers lounge. There are contrivances around every corner too. One is a word game Marcus plays that may soon irritate you as much as it does his fellow teachers. But for the most part, the florid flourishes are so lightly played by Owen and Binoche, screenwriter Gerald Di Pego's melodrama can almost be forgiven.

DOANE GREGORY / AP

One of the film's themes is the idea of inspiration — what inspires an artist to paint, a writer to write and students to think. What focuses the "Words and Pictures" discussion — and there is a lot in this very talky film — is a showdown Marcus devises in part to save his job, which his drinking has put in jeopardy.

The honors English and art students are to put the art-versus-literature debate on trial before the entire student body, using as their starting point a new poem Marcus has written and a new piece Delsanto paints after reading it. There are a few too many complications, including other tensions at the school that involve dating, bullying and social media. Most of it is embodied in the poorly drawn conflict between shy talented art student Emily (Valerie Tian) and Swint (Adam DiMarco), her unwanted and increasingly insistent suitor.

Binoche is a surprise. Not so much for what she says as for the painting she does. All of Delsanto's art that we see in the film has been created by Binoche, some from her earlier work, some for the film.

As "Words and Pictures" moves toward its final chapter, you may find yourself liking Marcus and Delsanto. That the couple have any charm is thanks to Owen and Binoche. In fact, it is hard not to hope that they'll get another chance at romance some day — the actors, that is.

"I like being the Umatilla pharmacist," he said. "Most people call me Doc. Being the local hometown pharmacist is a good thing. People feel comfortable coming up to me to ask a question, whether I'm riding a bike, walking or in a restaurant.

"I view this as my mission field and my ministry. I see us as missionaries and hope people see us doing it for the Lord."

Greer wasn't sure he was ready for the task of local druggist when he and Claudia opened Umatilla Drug Store almost seven years ago after nearly 25 years in the corporate pharmaceutical field.

"I really wasn't sure how I'd do stepping out of my role and being a community pharmacist," he said.

And then there were the times he didn't feel he was doing enough. For some reason, he said, many missionaries getting ready to travel abroad have used Umatilla Drug Store to fill their prescriptions.

UMATILLA Neighbors

"They've come from all over," he said. "My human nature says maybe I should be going around the world and fulfilling the Great Commission. Then I realize being a local pharmacist I have an opportunity to fulfill my Christian mission right where I live."

Greer isn't alone. He has 10 like-minded employees fulfill the store motto of working in "Lake County's most caring drug store."

"Everybody here has the same heart," he said. "It's a heart of service, not just customer service but service for the Lord."

It means if they receive a call five minutes before closing from a customer who said they're 15 minutes away that they'll stay there for them.

"If you call a chain store you know what they'd say," said Greer. "We say, 'Come to the drive-thru and we'll wait for you.'"

Being the hometown pharmacy means being patient and encouraging customers to bring all their prescriptions in if they're confused about what to take.

It means calling insurance companies to get vacation waivers if folks need their prescriptions filled before visiting family.

It means taking calls at home on evenings and weekends.

"Sometimes we're the only people who talk to these older people," Greer said. "Every month we sign birthday cards, some months as many as 500 cards. You would be amazed when someone says we're the only person wi

More than 1 million meals were packed by DTD in 2013, and that number is expected to double in 2014.

"I heard somebody say several years ago, 'You find a need and you fill it,'" Bostic said. "And now we're this little place in Eustis and with people, volunteers from Lake, Sumter and Marion county, who are changing the world and that is huge."

He believes Deliver the Difference lives up to its name. "It is what we do. We deliver the difference to families and children in need, one meal at a time."

Bostic was recently awarded the Public Citizen of the Year award from the Lake/Sumter Unit of the National Association of Social Workers, an award that honors a non-social worker whose accomplishments exemplify the values and mission of social work.

"This was totally out of the blue and totally unexpected. I was overwhelmed," Bostic said of the award. "The part that is wild about it is if you talked to my wife, the words 'Bob Bostic' and 'social workers' would have never gone in the same sentence before … In the corporate world, it was never about helping another person. It was focusing on the bottom line, it was about the dollar, and (Deliver the Difference) is about helping others and giving back."

Mairi Bostic said her husband is a different man than the person she met 26 years ago.

"He would not have gotten an award like this. He was a corporate executive when I met him," she said. "And now he's helping others achieve their dreams."

Bostic is quick to say the award belongs to the 2,000-plus DTD volunteers.

"They are the ones who are really making the difference," he said. "We could not do it without every single one of them. The award is really their award."

The DTD founder said the organization will launch some new programs in the summer and in 2015, which will fit with DTD's newly revised mis-barn has been spruced up, and an equipment barn has been built, as well as a 22-stall horse barn (half for boarding horses and half for the therapy horses). A house and a covered riding arena are the next steps. Once the building is done, Morrissette plans on resuming the equine therapy she started years ago.

"It was after I got Missy," she says. (Missy was an Arabian mare, now deceased.) "I was boarding her. I brought the children to my first boarding place, because insurance would not pay for behavioral problems."

Morrissette is still in touch with some of the now-grown children she brought out to her horse those many years ago. The transition into equine therapy was a natural one, for she was already fielding requests from people to help with their horses.

"People would call me, asking for help handling their horses," she says. "I don't know how it happened, it just happened. I've been around horses since I was two years old. I started breaking them when I was six or seven. They were small, pony sized."

As for what makes a good therapy horse, Morrissette is clear that the temperament of the horse is the most important thing.

"I've had highly trained horses that were scared of handicapped people," she says. "The horses have got to be tolerant, not spooked — and compassionate, all at the same time. It's hard to find. A good therapy horse will know what the person needs sometimes even before the person knows."

daughter Susan in 1968 after 10 years of marriage.

She also began teaching social studies at Carver Middle School after teaching kindergarten up North.

"It was easier teaching secondary," Henderson said.

She inherited her love of politics from her father, Tim Sellar, a local attorney who served three terms in the Florida Legislature in the 1940s. The politics bug didn't bite her late brother, Charlie Sellar. But he did become an attorney.

Henderson decided to make the leap into politics with encouragement from her uncle, Ed Merrell, who served as mayor of Leesburg. By that time, her daughter was in college.

"I ran against Charlie Strickland and he won," said Henderson of her first attempt. "When I lost I didn't take it personally. People vote for different reasons. And I developed a thick skin teaching seventh graders."

She ran again in 1980 and beat Jack Bradley. Henderson was installed in January 1981 and served until 1995, when she lost by just 13 votes.

"I thought I was done," said Henderson. "But I still stayed active in a lot of things, like the Friends of the Library. We raised a lot of money for a new library, but I heard the commissioners weren't going to approve spending the money on it. That was the main reason I ran again."

That was in 2004. She was re-elected in 2008 and retired from office in 2012.

During her time on the City Commission, she served as mayor six times, including Leesburg's Sesquicentennial in 2007.

Henderson gave Bill Clinton the Keys to the City during a campaign stop, and she introduced Dan Quayle before a speech at Lake-Sumter Community College.

A committed Democrat, Henderson wasn't sure what she would say when introducing Quayle.

"I didn't agree with much of anything he did," she said. "But he graduated from DePaul University, and so

State Road 50 and saw an old packing house that was badly in need of help.

"I saw it and I saw the owner and said I wanted to start a church in it," McCoy said. "He said if I was brave enough to do the repair work and build it out I'll rent it to you. We've been here six or seven years."

The church is at 7432 Highway 50, Suite 109, in Groveland.

McCoy calls himself a visionary who's never satisfied. While riding along County Road 33 he saw another tract of land and felt called to check it out.

Work is well under way on the new facility, which once completed will have room for more than 1,200 members for worship services. It will also house a day care center, and the church will continue to expand after-school programs and counseling opportunities. Plans also extend to opening a Christian school.

McCoy attended Evans High School in Orlando under the legendary Bill Gierke.

"Bill he saw a lot in me," said McCoy. "He also saw a lot of anger and told me to channel it into football and schoolwork. He said, 'You could be great.' He told me I might even play pro."

McCoy mentioned Defensive Coordinator J.B. Gordo, and a pair of teachers, Miss Kirkland and Miss Paine, who greatly influenced his life.

"Those four believed in me," he said. "They were like fathers and mothers to me."

It was a belief that enabled McCoy to land a scholarship at the University of Florida and play defensive tackle under coaches Galen Hall and Steve Spurrier.

McCoy was one of a few freshman not redshirted and he made contributions on the playing field.

"But I made some bad decisions and got suspended from Florida," he said.

So he went back home, back to his church and was saved.

"I didn't even know if football would be a part of my life anymore," he said. "I just wanted to do what God wanted. I was tired of trying to do it my way."

Apparently Steve Spurrier, who was hired in 1990, and the Lord had other ideas for McCoy.

"Coach Spurrier got the job and heard my story and he called me," McCoy said. "He said, 'I believe in you and I'm going to fight for you. It wasn't me saying I want to come back. It was a God thing. Spurrier had already been there one year and didn't need me but he said since I didn't redshirt I could use another year to get my degree.

"There are some God moments in life and that was definitely one of them."

McCoy teamed with All-American Brad Culpepper to make up a strong interior defensive line for the Gators, and was named honorable mention All-American as well as All-SEC. McCoy was also voted the team's MVP by the players.

He was chosen in the fourth round of the 1992 draft by the Indianapolis Colts and played for them eight seasons. He finished his pro career with the Arizona Cardinals.

has been successful. It has received consistently superior ratings at all district events and four times at the state level. Three years in a row the band also finished in the top 10 at the Florida Marching Band Coalition State Semi-Finals in Class 4A, and two years in a row they were Grand Champion at the Ocala Marching Band competition.

The band's crowning achievement is the Otto J. Kraushaar Award, which is earned by a small percentage of bands in the state who receive straight superior ratings all year long and then a superior rating at the state concert band festival.

Teaching Fielder's passion, as he prepares meticulously for class and is not afraid to challenge his students.

At the same time, he is honest with his students when a piece is not performed to the best of their ability, and he stretches them to do better.

"I feel society is not honest," he said, referring to the fact that everyone is told they are a winner. "I know they respect that."

When students are talking in class or misbehaving, Fielder calls them on it in an even-keeled tone.

"Your behavior is not acceptable at all," he said. "I don't want to put a damper on it."

When several students do not have pencils readily available to jot down notes, Fielder reminds them they should have them ready to go.

While disciplining his students on one hand, on the other, he also encourages them when they perform a piece well.

But in the same measure, if they need to go back and redo the piece, he instructs them to do so.

"I don't want my kids to be ignorant about the world and the challenges out there for them," he said. "We hold them accountable, the way we hold the world accountable."

Fielder said he wants to prepare his students for the adult world.

"I don't want them to be surprised how mean and competitive the adult world can be," he said.

After class, students came in and out of his office in droves, asking him questions about upcoming band events or simply to chat.

"I mix a lot of life lessons," he said. The students "want to know you are there to help them. Kids in Leesburg need to be cared for. We provide a family atmosphere. We provide them a safe place to be themselves. We love and correc Bosshardt did his plastic surgery residency at Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami.

Before that, he was in the Navy for nine years, including residency training. He served both as a general surgeon and an on-ship general medical officer.

"The Navy provided me with a wonderful education (and) a chance to practice for a while in an environment where I didn't have to worry about things like paying for an office or dealing with all the business side of medicine," Bosshardt said.

He said when he was in the Navy, as part of his general surgeon training, he was exposed to plastic surgery and really enjoyed it.

"I liked the meticulous nature of the surgery. I liked the fact that there was a need for, say, an artistic sense," Bosshardt said.

Dr. Peter Marzek has been Bosshardt's partner for 21 years.

"I think we have a very mutual partnership," Bosshardt said. "If you look around in plastic surgery, you don't find a lot of plastic surgeons that are group practices."

Bosshardt also participates in international medical missions to do reconstructive surgery on kids with cleft lip, cleft palate and other issues, according to his practice's website.

He said up until recently he did trips every other year.

"Those trips provide me with a tremendous amount of fulfillment, satisfaction and kind
