Shelter makes improvements

Review shows Lake County Animal Services now 'adequate'

An internal review of the Animal Services Intake Process concluded that the "current process relating to vaccination and deworming animals is adequate."

Bob Melton, inspector general with the Lake County Clerk of Court's office, who conducted the audit, said between February and May when the procedures were reviewed, the office noted a gradual improvement in the way the shelter handled animals.

But prior mistakes and the need for consistency were also noted in the report.

"Over the past several months there have been mistakes and they need to make sure those mistakes are not repeated," he said.

Those mistakes included inconsistencies in deworming and vaccinations within the intake process, where before written procedures were put into place at the end of April, the actual practices varied for deworming.

But the same report also determined prior to the written protocols, "animals were not vaccinated until they left the facility."

"It is important they are consistent in following these policies and procedures," Melton said.

The data reviewed in the report found an 80 percent compliance rate for deworming for the four months.

The review notes "the hiring of a new shelter supervisor, which was vacant during the event, is expected to provide significantly higher compliance."

Further, the review noted several areas that required improvement. Staff was inadequately trained on software, screening procedures needed to be implemented for animal rescue groups, record keeping had to improve, and an inventory system was needed to track vaccinations and microchips.

In the last year, Lake County Animal Services Division has had a growing list of problems in the shelter.

Clermont facility eases veterans into life at home

Returning veterans — especially those who served in combat zones or who endured sexual trauma while in service — may have things to work out as they readjust to civilian life.

But some veterans don't realize this.

That's where the Vet Center in Clermont comes in, making those veterans feel comfortable in their own skins again. Eligible veterans and their families are given free, confidential, readjustment counseling, led by team leaders and therapists who can relate to them because they, too, are veterans.

In fact, the motto for such Vet Centers across the country is "Veterans Helping Veterans."

"I tried for years to get help but the V.A. (U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs) failed me there," said ex-Marine Corp. member Connie Louramore from Webster, who during her time in the military, endured sexual trauma. They didn't have anything female sensitive in the way of help, and the services they did offer me didn't help.

"(It was) because they weren't treating my problems the same as those of other veterans who had endured other

Ukraine hails 'turning point' as troops capture rebel stronghold

SLOVYANSK, Ukraine — Ukrainian troops forced pro-Russian insurgents out of a key stronghold in the country's embattled east on Saturday, a significant success that suggested the government may finally be making gains in a months-long battle against a spreading separatist insurgency.

As rebels fled from Slovyansk, vowing to regroup elsewhere and fight on, President Petro Poroshenko hailed the recapture of the city as "the start of a turning point" in a battle that has claimed more than 400 lives since April.

After a night of heavy fighting that saw heavy artillery fire from Ukraine's troops, government soldiers were in full control of rebel headquarters in Slovyansk, a city of about 100,000 that has been a center of the fighting between Kiev's troops and the pro-Russian insurgents.

Soldiers raised the Ukrainian flag over the city council building, while troops carried stockpiles of weapons out of the city's administrative and police buildings, which have been under rebel control since early April.

"It's not a total victory. But the purging of Slovyansk of these bands, made up of people armed to the teeth, has incredible symbolic importance," Poroshenko said in a (traumas), although I had the same symptoms like not being able to go places, trust people and experiencing the same fears and anxieties as they did."

After getting out of the military in 1983, Louramore said she literally disappeared from her family and friends for 10 years and cannot remember much of what she even did or where she went. After returning, however, she met her husband, George Louramore, and worked through some of her issues with him.

But it wasn't until three months ago that she was able to "let of the demons," something she credits the Vet Center and her counselor for helping her do.

"This Vet Center has been the only place I've been able to get help," Louramore said. "I come here for one-on-one counseling and for group sessions about once a week, and I'm so thankful because I feel safe. When I found this place, I knew it was different right away, and it's because they (counselors and all staff) are veterans. There's just something about a veteran. It's a brotherhood or a sisterhood and it's camaraderie you can't get somewhere else."

Her husband said he feels a weight lifted off his shoulders because he knows his wife can open up about her experiences, fears and concerns, and he can be involved in the counseling process.

"She (Connie) has been able to finally get the bad feelings she was harboring for the last 30 plus years out of her and deal with it," George Louramore said. "I have dealt with it for about 15 years, but it was between me and her. Now with this place, she can get it out with people she was there with."

Team Leader and Facility Manager Wayne Plummer said eligible veterans can receive counseling in many areas, such as anger, irritability and rage control, nervousness, depression, difficulty trusting others, survivor's guilt, isolation, nightmares, alcohol issues, suicidal thoughts, post traumatic stress disorder, etc. In addition, family/marriage counseling and group sessions are available, as are bereavement counseling for family members of veterans who died while serving in active duty within the past five years.

The center also offers financial counseling, self-improvement classes and job seeking assistance.

Plummer said the center has been able to help a lot of veterans, as long as they have had the courage to walk through the door. Plummer said medical services are still handled through various VA hospitals.

"A lot can be gained here, but the hard part is stepping through the front door and asking for help," he said. "It's not just about counseling, either, it's about bettering lives, kind of like going to the gym. Sure, people go to the gym to rehabilitate a hip or an injury, but people also go to the gym to better themselves, get healthier and gain strength. Same here."

"We're here to offer an opportunity to living," Plummer added. "Veterans have a tendency to put themselves in survival mode like they've been trained to do, but if they don't incorporate strategies to living and dealing with issues, it can make long term happiness difficult. That's where we come in."

The center was opened to the public last week for a "Salute to Soldiers and Sailors" pre-Fourth of July picnic," so veterans and members of the community could tour the facility, meet staff, mingle with veterans and hear about what the center offers.

Congressman Daniel Webster even stopped by for a surprise visit, tour and mingling session.

Many people in attendance said they never knew the center existed, even though it's been in Clermont for more than three years.

George Louramore called it "a hidden gem," adding that he hopes veterans find it if they need it, as his he and wife did.

Navy Veteran Chris Gonzalez, at the picnic with his wife and children, said he likes the center because of its low key feel, and the mentality of the staff and counselors who put no heavy burdens or expectations on anyone who chooses to seek help or services from them.

"Everyday I am trying to adjust and it's nice to know I can come here with my whole family," Gonzalez said.

Former Marine Corps machine gunner Chris O'Connor, a counselor at the center and a combat veteran who served in Fallujah, Iraq, through 2005, said the center is somewhat of a "veteran run" center because they (veterans) choose what they want to participate in and what they don't.

O'Connor called the center "a bridge between the community and the V.A. Medical Center."

O'Connor, with a background in clinical social work and on his way to earning a PhD in psychology, said his most valuable asset when helping a fellow veteran, is his own experiences in the military.

"I was severely injured and went through the whole transition of readjusting upon returning myself, and that makes all the difference sometimes," O'Connor said.

For more information on the Vet Center, located at 1655 East Highway 50, Suite 102, in Clermont, call 352-536-6701 or visit www.vetcenter.va.gov.

record keeping at the shelter and the other on pet licensing laws, cited at least 45 areas for improvement.

Management also has not been consistent at the shelter. The head of the Animal Services division announced her resignation in March, citing a tight budget and public pressure over the department's euthanization rate. Cyndi Nason was the second director of Animal Services to resign within the past year.

Nason and Marjorie Boyd both resigned amid pressure from animal activists who claim the shelter was euthanizing too many animals.

But the public criticism is only a partial reason for the resignations, county officials said, pointing to funding issues that kept the county from hiring a field supervisor and rescue coordinator to help take the pressure off the director. County commissioners agreed in a meeting on March 11 to delay funding those positions until Oct. 1.

Brian Sheahan, former director of animal services, said euthanizations have been reduced. Euthanization rates for dogs from October to May were at 19 percent, compared with 22 percent the prior year.

But the incidents that occurred in the last few months particularly concerned officials.

In April, six puppies adopted from the shelter received no treatment and all later died as a result of what a veterinarian said was a case of hookworm in one puppy. Two other puppies adopted from the same litter were also found to have hookworms but were saved through blood transfusions and intravenous drips, said Allison Zachary, a member of Plenty of Pitbulls, a rescue organization that adopted the animals.

Then, the shelter experienced a parvovirus outbreak the following month. Sixteen dogs were euthanized and the shelter was closed temporarily.

Shortly thereafter, county officials called for a special review of the shelter's intake and vaccination policies.

Following the review request, Lake County commissioners agreed on June 10 to transfer operations of Animal Services to the Lake County Sheriff's Office.

Melton said it is critical to train staff on software.

"When you have different staff put in (information) in different locations, it is impossible to generate accurate management reports," he said.

Melton said he is especially concerned about the two records kept for each animal: computer software and animal ID cards not having the same, consistent information.

"When you have inconsistencies in actions and dates, then no one can be sure what information is accurate," he said.

This is why he said it is critical to train staff on the software.

"If people do not know how to use the software properly, it is not generating the information that Animal Services needs to adequately manage the organization," he said.

The need to screen rescue coordinators is also vital, he added.

"In many respects, rescue organizations are similar to the counties' animal shelter and they should have protocols in place regarding vaccination and deworming," he said.

Linda Coletta, president of Houndhaven, a rescue organization working with the shelter, said she believed the screenings are a good policy.

Several commissioners said they were pleased with the review and expressed hope the problems would go away under the sheriff's leadership.

Commissioner Tim Sullivan said the review is critical in "making sure we are following proper procedures" while also fixing areas that need to be addressed.

Citing the review's suggestion to screen rescue groups, Sullivan said a rescue coordinator must be hired as soon as possible.

"There will be one point of contact that knows the rules and regulations and who the rescue organizations are," he said.

Borders previously said filling the rescue coordinator position is paramount.

Commissioner Leslie Campione, who had made the suggestion to the County Commission that Borders take over the shelter, also highlighted the report's importance.

"Fortunately the audit found that the Animal Services Division has the right processes, but having the right processes is only part of the equation," she wrote in an e-mail message. "Executing them consistently is equally important. It is critical that the suggested improvements be implemented immediately to protect the healthy animals in the shelter."

Lt. John Herrell, spokesman for the sheriff, wrote in an email that Borders would not be able to comment about the special review until he reviewed it.

Shark bites man near Calif. beach

Associated Press

MANHATTAN BEACH, Calif. — A 7-foot-long great white shark bit a man swimming off Southern California's Manhattan Beach on Saturday, officials said.

Rick Flores, a Los Angeles County Fire Department spokesman, said the man was bitten on the upper right side about 9:30 a.m., suffering puncture wounds described as moderate injuries. He was taken to a hospital conscious and breathing on his own, Flores said.

The attack started when a person fishing off the Manhattan Beach Pier hooked the shark and spent over 30 minutes trying to reel it in, which, Flores said, made the shark grow agitated and take out more and more fishing line.

The victim was in a group of long-distance swimmers about 300 yards off the beach swimming past the pier, where Flores said the shark bit the man.

The shark remained in the area for the next 20 minutes and then disappeared into the murky water, Flores said.

Dems call for end to Cuba embargo

MICHAEL J. MISHAK
Associated Press

MIAMI — When Charlie Crist went to Miami's Little Havana recently, the Democratic candidate for governor stood before a crowd and said what few politicians have in decades of scrounging for votes in the Cuban-American neighborhood: End the trade embargo against Cuba.

"If you really care about people on the island, we need to get rid of the embargo and let freedom reign," he said, shouting above a small band of protesters who responded with chants of "Shame on you!"

Crist's supporters cheered louder.

It was a scene inconceivable just a few years ago, when politicians were careful about what they said on the issue, for fear of alienating Cuban-American voters, many of whom fled Fidel Castro's Cuba in the 1960s.

But Democrats now sense an opening with newer Cuban arrivals and second-generation Cuban-Americans who favor resuming diplomatic relations with the communist island.

In a sign of just how much the climate has shifted, Democrat Hillary Rodham Clinton, who backed trade limits when she ran for president in 2008, is now calling for the embargo to be lifted. She described it as "Castro's best friend" and said it hampers "our broader agenda across Latin America."

Her words mark the first time a leading presidential contender from either political party has suggested reversing the 52-year-old policy.

The efforts represent the largest challenge to

Clermont Police Dept. re-accredited

ROXANNE BROWN | Staff Writer
roxanne.brown@dailycommercial.com

The Clermont Police Department has been awarded re-accreditation by the Commission for Florida Law Enforcement Accreditation.

BROADWAY

Besides the Clermont Police Department, city officials said only two other Lake County law enforcement agencies have achieved this standard: the Lake County Sheriff's Office and the Mount Dora Police Department.

Clermont Chief Charles Broadway said he was notified of the re-accreditation during the commission's conference last week.

The police department has been accredited since 2004. The process happens every three years and this is the Clermont's PD's third time achieving the status, Accreditation Manager Sgt. Aaron Grassi said.

"The men and women who serve in the Clermont Police Department have worked hard to maintain this high standard, and I am proud to serve with them," Broadway said.

The accreditation program is recognized as a means of maintaining the highest standards of professionalism. Agencies must pass a rigorous review process and must comply with more than 200 standards to receive the accreditation.

Four dead after 3 boats crash

CHRISTINE ARMARIO
Associated Press

MIAMI — Three boats collided near a Miami marina around the end of a fireworks display, killing four and injuring a dozen others in a chaotic scene that left bodies and survivors tossed overboard.

Multiple law enforcement agencies responded to the crash Friday night near the Dinner Key Marina in Miami, with officers plucking several people out of the water. The boaters are believed to have been out celebrating the Fourth of July holiday.

Rescuers were alerted by one of the boaters at about 10:45 p.m. He said he'd been hit by another vessel and that his 36-foot pleasure craft was taking on water, authorities said.

"We kept getting report after report of more people in the water," Miami Fire Rescue Lt. Ignatius Carroll said.

Eight people were initially transported to Miami hospitals. Two of them, man and a woman, later died. Relatives of a third victim found her body in the water on Saturday, and a fourth body was located later by investigators, authorities said.

The victims' names and ages weren't immediately released.

"My understanding is they may have been out there enjoying the fireworks display, and typically after the fireworks are over, everyone makes a mad dash for the nearest marina," said Jorge Pino, a public information officer with the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission.

Cuban-American orthodoxy in decades and could help reshape American foreign policy.

It also could alter the political landscape in the largest swing-voting state, where Republicans long have dominated the Cuban vote by taking a hard line on the embargo.

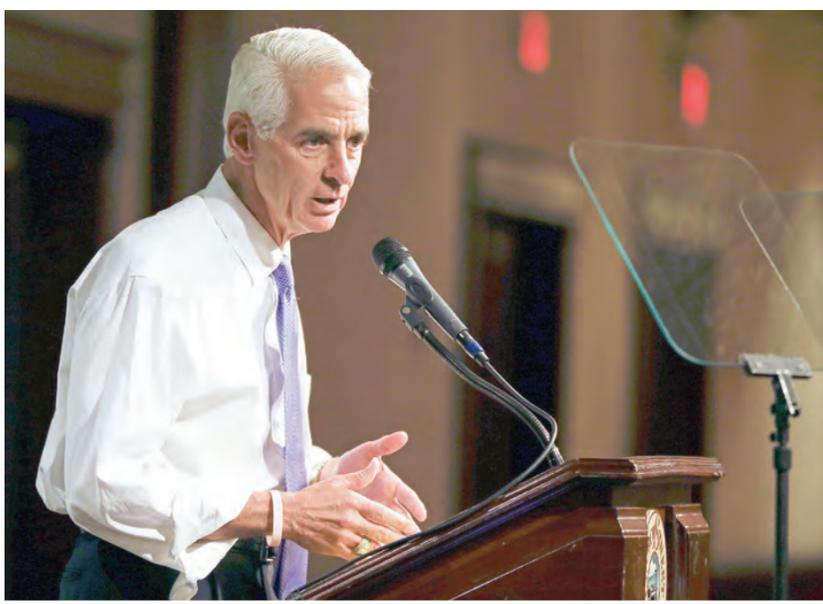

Crist's campaign will be the first statewide test of whether the trade restrictions are still a live wire for politicians in Florida, home to 70 percent of the nation's Cubans.

Crist is a former Republican governor who once said he would only visit Cuba "when it's free." Now that he's a Democrat and trying to regain his old job, he has floated the idea of going to Havana "to learn from the people of Cuba and help find opportunities for Florida businesses."

He argues that the embargo has failed because it has not toppled the Castro government, but has hurt the Cuban people. "The definition of insanity is doing the same thing over and over again and expecting a different result," he told reporters at the opening of a campaign office in Little Havana.

Florida Republicans are outraged, casting Crist's position as a betrayal of the Cuban-American community.

"I'm going to stand with Cuban-Americans that believe in freedom, believe in democracy, believe in freedom of speech and oppose the oppression of Cuba," said GOP Gov. Rick Scott. Crist, he added, will "be standing with Castro."

U.S. Sen. Marco Rubio, a potential GOP presidential candidate whose parents left Cuba in the 1950s, said the embargo is "the last tool we have remaining to ensure that democracy returns to Cuba one day."

Lifting the embargo, he said, would "further entrench the regime in power by giving them more money to carry out their violent repression of people's fundamental rights and dignity."

Nationwide, the share of Cuban registered voters who identify with or lean toward the Democratic Party has doubled in the past decade, from 22 percent to 44 percent, according to the Pew Research Center. Less than half of Cuban voters now affiliate with the Republican Party, down from 64 percent over the same time period.

President Barack Obama won Florida twice, campaigning on easing travel restrictions for Cuban-Americans who want to visit their families on the island and allowing them to send more money to their relatives. In 2012, he captured nearly half the Cuban-American vote, a record for a Democrat.

The shift is driven in part by changing demographics.

Cuban-Americans, once the dominant bloc of Florida's Hispanic vote, have seen their political clout diminished by a huge influx of Puerto Ricans, Mexicans and people from Central and South America, who lean Democratic. In the 2012 election, 42 percent of Hispanic voters in the state were Cuban, an 11 percentage point drop from 2000, according to the Census Bureau's Current Population Survey.

The exiles who arrived in the decade and a half following Cuba's 1959 revolution have been dying off while their children and fresh waves of immigrants hold a different view of Cuba. More than one-third of the Cubans residing in Miami-Dade County arrived after 1995, with many supporting travel and trade policies that strengthen ties between the U.S. and Cuba, said Guillermo Grenier, a lead researcher for the Cuban Research Institute at Florida International University.

Even some of South Florida's most prominent Cuban-American business leaders, long among the most strident defenders of the embargo, are publicly talking about investing in Cuba.

"The politics are way behind public opinion on this one," said Steve Schale, a Democratic consultant and Crist adviser who managed Obama's Florida campaign in 2008.

Overall, polls of the community have confirmed a tilt toward engagement, with the most recent survey by Florida International University finding Cuban-Americans in Miami split over the embargo, which was a near record, and 71 percent saying it had not worked either very well or at all.

"The embargo! It's so screwed up!" said Caridad Novo, as she sipped espresso at a cafe in Doral, a Miami suburb.

The 52-year-old Cuban, who came to Florida during the 1980 Mariel boat crisis, said U.S. trade restrictions drive up the cost of sending goods to her family in Cuba. Shipping a 4-pound can of milk to her 3-year-old grandson in Havana costs $55, she said.

But some scholars and political operatives say Crist risks energizing Republicans in the conservative exile community while attracting little support from younger Cuban-Americans and newer arrivals, who tend to be less politically active.

The recent Florida International University poll found that less than one-third of those who have arrived since 1995 are U.S. citizens. Voter registration rates among newer arrivals lag their older counterparts by double digits.

characteristics they would like to see in Eustis' next city manager," according to an online survey.

On a scale of 1-6, citizens are asked how important it is for the next city manager to have prior experience as a city manager in Florida, the Southeast, the public sector or the private sector.

Residents also are asked to note high priorities or the greatest challenges the city manager must be prepared to address, with categories including growth, utilities, financial management, public safety, employee development and community identity.

Ten areas of professional experience and expertise are listed and citizens are asked to pick three that are important to them, such as technology, developing public/private partnerships, and leadership and morale.

Lastly, people are given 17 areas of management and leadership characteristics, and are asked to pick six that are important to them. Choices include things like customer service focus, championing change and conflict management.

Access to the survey can be found through the city's website at www.eustis.org.

Grassi said the accreditation is not an easy process for an agency to go through but it is definitely worth it because, in essence, it is keeping the agency at the highest standards possible.

"The accreditation process is a voluntary one, but we choose to be involved in the process because we want to ensure that we maintain a high standard for the department and the community. It's a big deal for us," Grassi said. "The main focus of the process is to make sure that our policies are meeting the accreditation board's best practice standards and that we are doing what we say we are going to be doing in our policies."

"It also allows us to be able to say in court or in the public that we have good policies and we obey the policies that we have." Grassi said that during accreditation time, people come in to the department and basically talk with anyone they want to talk with there and look at anything they want to look at.

"This time around, they came in and talked with people from every spectrum of the department — from the police chief to street officers, to people who work in the accounting and records department," Grassi said.

Clermont City Manager Darren Gray said accreditation benefits the entire community. People can rest assured that the department's operation and policies are up to par, he said.

"Accreditation sets high standards. It's a point of pride to the city of Clermont and shows our police officers are following policies and procedures that are most likely to prevent and control crime," he said.

Free birth control becoming standard for many women

RICARDO ALONSO-ZALDIVAR
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — More than half of privately insured women are getting free birth control under President Barack Obama's health law, a major coverage shift that's likely to advance.

This week the Supreme Court allowed some employers with religious scruples to opt out, but most companies appear to be going in the opposite direction.

Recent data from the IMS Institute document a sharp change during 2013. The share of privately insured women who got their birth control pills without a copayment jumped to 56 percent, from 14 percent in 2012. The law's requirement that most health plans cover birth control as prevention, at no additional cost to women, took full effect in 2013.

The average annual saving for women was $269. "It's a big number," said institute director Michael Klei- rock. The institute is the research arm of IMS Health, a Connecticut-based technology company that uses pharmacy records to track prescription drug sales.

The core of Obama's law — taxpayer-subsidized coverage for the uninsured — benefits a relatively small share of Americans. But free preventive care— from flu shots to colonoscopies —is a dividend of sorts for the majority with employer coverage.

Expanded preventive coverage hasn't gotten as much attention as another bonus for the already insured: the provision that allows young adults to remain on their parents' policy until they turn 26. That may start to change with all the discussion of birth control.

Business groups and employee benefits consultants say they see little chance that employers will roll back contraceptive coverage as a result of the Supreme Court ruling. The court carved out a space for "closely held" companies whose owners object on religious grounds. Most companies don't fit that niche.

"I don't think you will see a broad impact," said Neil Trautwein, the top employee benefits expert for the National Retail Federation. "It's a commonly offered benefit for many employers, including retailers."

The court decision involved "a very unique set of facts," Trautwein added. "Intense religious beliefs, closely held companies and the vehement objection to contraceptive coverage."

Before the Supreme Court ruling, some "grandfathered" plans unchanged since the health care law passed were already exempt from covering prevention at no cost, but that number is expected to shrink over time as employers make coverage changes.

IMS says it is still too early to discern the health care law's ultimate impact on birth control.

Family wants officer held accountable in beating

ANDREW DALTON

LOS ANGELES — The California Highway Patrol has vowed to carry out a thorough investigation after a video emerged of one of its officers repeatedly punching a woman he had pinned down on the side of a Los Angeles freeway.

The woman had been walking on Interstate 10 west of downtown Los Angeles, endangering herself and people in traffic, and the officer was trying to restrain her, CHP Assistant Chief Chris O'Quinn said at a news conference. O'Quinn said the woman had begun walking off the freeway but returned when the confrontation occurred.

The video shows the woman struggling and trying to sit up while the officer punches her in the face and head until an off-duty law enforcement officer appears and helps him handcuff her.

A California Highway Patrol officer straddles a woman while punching her in the head on the shoulder of a Los Angeles freeway.

Passing Driver David Diaz recorded the Tuesday incident and provided it to media outlets including The Associated Press. He told the AP in a phone interview Friday that he arrived as the woman was walking off the freeway. He said she turned around only after the officer shouted something to her.

"He agitated the situation more than helped it," said Diaz, who started filming soon after.

Los Angeles attorney Caree Harper said the woman's family wants authorities held accountable for "beating a great-grandmother in broad daylight." She declined to disclose the woman's name or answer questions about what the woman was doing along the edge of one of the city's busiest freeways.

She is undergoing psychiatric evaluation, authorities said.

statement posted on his official website.

Artillery fire on rebel forces began late on Friday and lasted into the night. On Saturday, fighting could still be heard on the northern outskirts of the city.

Ukraine's newly appointed Minister of Defense, Valery Heletey, was milling around with troops in the city center. He said that three planes with food and other supplies will soon arrive in Sloviansk.

A spokesman for the National Security and Defense Council said earlier that mopping-up operations were continuing.

"Sloviansk is under siege. Now an operation is going on to neutralize small groups hiding in buildings where peaceful citizens are living," Andriy Lysenko told journalists in Kiev.

Andrei Purgin of the separatist Donetsk People's Republic told The Associated Press that rebels were evacuating, but claimed the army's campaign had left the city "in ruins."

The capture of Sloviansk represented the government's biggest victory since it abandoned a shaky cease-fire this week and launched an offensive against the separatists. Until now, the Ukrainian army had often appeared feckless in the months-long campaign against the rebels. On Thursday Poroshenko shook up his defense team, appointing Ukraine's third defense minister since the former president was ousted in February.

It was not yet clear whether the latest advance has permanently crippled the rebels, many of whom are relocating to other cities.

In the city of Donetsk, streets were deserted on Saturday as local officials urged people to stay at home. They said a battle was ongoing near the Donetsk city airport, but did not provide details.

"Militants from Sloviansk and Kramatorsk have arrived in Donetsk," said Maxim Rovinsky, spokesman for the city council.

Purgin claimed 150 fighters injured in Sloviansk were in Donetsk for treatment.

"More than a hundred militiamen have been killed in the last three days," said Viktor, a 35-year-old Sloviansk native who had a shrapnel wound in his leg. "The mood is very bad. It seems that we've lost this war. And Russia isn't in a hurry to help."

Alexei, a driver and local Sloviansk resident who would not give his last name for fear of reprisal, told the AP by phone that he heard bombing throughout the night. When the bombing stopped in the early morning, he left his house and saw that all the rebel checkpoints were abandoned.

Palestinian teen burned to death, autopsy shows

MOHAMMAD DARAGHMEH
Associated Press

RAMALLAH, West Bank — An autopsy showed an Arab teenager who Palestinians say was killed in a revenge attack was burned to death, officials said Saturday, while Palestinian militants fired two rockets toward a major southern city deeper into Israel than any other attack in the current round of violence.

The Israeli military said its "Iron Dome" defense system intercepted the rockets that were aimed at Beersheba. The military also said at least 10 other rockets were fired from the Gaza Strip and said it had retaliated with airstrikes.

Clashes between Israeli police and Palestinian protesters spread Saturday from Jerusalem to Arab towns in northern Israel as hundreds of people took to the streets and threw rocks and fire bombs at officers who responded with tear gas and stun grenades.

Palestinian Attorney General Abdelghani al-Owawi said he received initial autopsy results from a Palestinian doctor who was present at the autopsy in Tel Aviv. He said it shows that 16-year-old Palestinian Mohammed Abu Khdeir, whose death has sparked large protests in his east Jerusalem neighborhood, suffered burns on "90 percent of his body."

"The results show he was breathing while on fire and died from burns and their consequences," al-Owawi said.

His account provided the first details of the preliminary findings to be made public. The Israeli Health Ministry could not be reached for comment.

The autopsy found evidence that Abu Khdeir had breathed in the flames as burns were found inside his body, in his lungs, bronchial tubes and his throat, al-Owawi said.

He also said the young man had suffered wounds on the right side of his head apparently from impact with a rock or another hard object.

Abu Khdeir's charred body was found in a forest Wednesday after he was seized near his home. Palestinians immediately accused Israeli extremists of killing him to avenge the deaths of three Israeli teens who had been abducted and killed in the West Bank. Israeli police said an investigation is still underway and they have not yet determined who killed the boy or why.

Israeli leaders have widely condemned the killing of the Palestinian youth, and Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu vowed those responsible would be brought to justice.

Palestinians took to the streets in protests after news of the boy's death on Wednesday and clashed with police in east Jerusalem. Riots erupted in east Jerusalem Friday as thousands of Palestinians massed for the boy's burial.

The violence spread to Arab towns in northern Israel early Saturday, with protesters throwing rocks at passing cars, burning tires and lobbing rocks and firebombs at police, who responded with tear gas and stun grenades, Israeli police spokeswoman Luba Samri said.

Near the town of Qalansawe, protesters also pulled over a car driven by an Israeli Jew, pulled him out and set the vehicle on fire, Samri said. The driver was not injured. Several other Israeli cars were also torched, she said. Dozens of people were arrested.

Protests subsided by noon Saturday but resumed in the evening with violent demonstrations in several Arab towns in the north of the country, police said.

Israel's public security minister, Yitzhak Aharonovitch visited areas of friction and said police would display "zero tolerance" toward those "who take the law into their own hands and harm innocent people."

Israeli Arabs, unlike Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, hold citizenship rights. But they often face discrimination and mostly identify with the Palestinians. Even so, violent riots like these are rare.

Palestinian protesters in Jerusalem also used an electric saw to damage the light rail that connects the heavily Arab populated eastern sector of the city with the mostly Jewish West, Samri said.

Suspected Iraq uprising leader makes first public appearance

RYAN LUCAS and DIAA HADID
Associated Press

BAGHDAD — A man purporting to be the leader of the Sunni extremist group that has declared an Islamic state in territory it controls in Iraq and Syria has made what would be his first public appearance, delivering a sermon at a mosque in Iraq's second-largest city, according to a video posted online Saturday.

The 21-minute video that is said to show Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi, the head of the Islamic State group, was reportedly filmed on Friday at the Great Mosque in the northern city of Mosul. It was released on at least two websites known to be used by the organization and bore the logo of its media arm, but it was not possible to independently verify whether the person shown was indeed al-Baghdadi.

There are only a few known photographs of al-Baghdadi, an ambitious Iraqi militant believed to be in his early 40s with a $10 million U.S. bounty on his head. Since taking the reins of the group in 2010, he has transformed it from a local branch of al-Qaida into an independent transnational military force, positioning himself as perhaps the pre-eminent figure in the global jihadi community.

Al-Baghdadi's purported appearance in Mosul, a city of some 2 million that the militants seized last month, came five days after his group declared the es-establishment of an Islamic state, or caliphate, in the territories it seized in Iraq and Syria. The group proclaimed al-Baghdadi the leader of its state and demanded that all Muslims pledge allegiance to him.

In the video, the man said to be al-Baghdadi says that "the mujahdeen have been rewarded victory by God after years of jihad, and they were able to achieve their aim and hurried to announce the caliphate and choose the Imam," referring to the leader.

"It is a burden to accept this responsibility to be in charge of you," he adds. "I am not better than you or more virtuous than you. If you see me on the right path, help me. If you see me on the wrong path, advise me and halt me. And obey me as far as I obey God."

Ex-editor Coulson gets 18 months for hacking

Associated Press

LONDON — Andy Coulson went from the editor's office at Britain's best-selling newspaper to the corridors of 10 Downing St. as Prime Minister David Cameron's communications chief. On Friday, he went to prison for conspiring to hack phones.

Coulson was sentenced to 18 months by a judge who told him his considerable accomplishments "now count for nothing."

Coulson was convicted last week after an eight-month trial triggered by a tabloid-wrongdoing scandal that led Rupert Murdoch to shut down the News of the World in 2011. Another former editor, Rebekah Brooks, and four others were acquitted.

Judge John Saunders said that over several years Coulson and several senior News of the World journalists listened illegally to the voicemails of celebrities, royals, politicians and crime victims in a bid to beat the competi-

Finnish couple wins quirky 'wife carrying' race

Associated Press

HELSINKI — A Finnish couple has narrowly won the 19th World Wife Carrying Championships — a quirky competition in which men race to be the fastest while carrying a female teammate.

Ville Parviainen and Janette Oksman cleared the grueling 278-yard obstacle course in 63.75 seconds on Saturday, less than a second ahead of Britain's Rich Blake Smith and Anna Marguerite Smith.

Thirty-six couples from a dozen countries including Australia, Japan, and the United States took part in the race, which was held in the central Finnish municipality of Sonkajarvi, north of the capital, Helsinki.

The rules stipulate that the woman must be over 17 years of age and weigh at least 108 lbs. Despite the event's name couples don't have to be married, and organizers say male contestants could "borrow a neighbor's wife" if they didn't have a female companion.

The men can carry their teammate in various ways, though a popular method is for the woman to hang upside-down with her legs around the male contestant's shoulders.

Cavendish falls, Kittel wins Tour's first stage

JAMEY KEATEN
Associated Press

HARROGATE, England — Marcel Kittel of Germany won the first stage of the Tour de France for a second year in row after a late crash brought down British rival Mark Cavendish in the presence of royals on Saturday. Kittel, who earned four Tour stages last year, won the 190.5-kilometer (118-mile) run in mainly bucolic Yorkshire countryside from Leeds to Harrogate. The German raised his arms skyward and cried after he edged Peter Sagan of Slovakia in second, and Ramunas Navardauskas of Lithuania in third.

"I am incredibly proud of this victory," Kittel, a Team Giant-Shimano rider who also won two Giro d'Italia stages in May, said through a translator.

"It happened pretty easily. It was like coming out of a tunnel. I was able to accelerate like never before. "It's really awesome. Deja vu, yeah."

The two top favorites for victory in the three-week race, Alberto Contador and Chris Froome, finished safely in the trailing pack that clocked the same time as Kittel: 4 hours, 44 minutes.

Near the finish, and with the speedsters rushing ahead, Cavendish veered slightly to his left and bumped Australia's Simon Gerrans. The two crashed alone, with Cavendish landing hard on his right shoulder.

Cavendish got up gingerly and cruised over the finish line — cradling his right arm. After returning to his Omega Pharma QuickStep team bus Petra Kvitova of the Czech Republic holds up the trophy after winning the women's singles final against Eugenie Bouchard of Canada on Saturday at the All England Lawn Tennis Championships in Wimbledon, London.

Special K: Petra Kvitova notches second title in rout

HOWARD FENDRICH

LONDON — Petra Kvitova plays so much better at the All England Club than anywhere else, and now she owns two championships to prove it.

In one of the most dominant performances in a women's final at Wimbledon, the sixth-seeded Kvitova of the Czech Republic overpowered and overwhelmed 13th-seeded Eugenie Bouchard of Canada 6-3, 6-0 in only 55 minutes Saturday to add to her 2011 title at the grass-court Grand Slam.

"I know," Kvitova said, "this is the best tournament for me."

SANG TAN / AP

Kvitova plays a return to Bouchard.

Absolutely true. Her career record of 26-5 at Wimbledon translates to an .839 winning percentage, compared to her marks of .667 at the three other majors and .681 at all other events.

In 2014, Kvitova lost in the first round at the hard-court Australian

Open, and in the third round at the clay-court French Open. But get her on the grass court, and those speedy serves and flat forehands really shine.

"For sure, she was on," Bouchard said. "We know that when she's on, she's very tough to beat. Especially on this surface."

On Saturday, the 24-year-old Kvitova certainly was "on." Oh, was she ever. Pretty much perfect in every way.

The left-hander hit serves that reached 113 mph (182 kph) and earned easy points. Walloped big, deep returns that left Bouchard little time to react. Smacked flat groundstrokes off both wings that zipped right where she intended, often skidding near lines, helping accumulate a 28-8 edge in winners. Won 11 of 14 points she played at the net.

Most surprisingly, even to Kvitova herself,

Marlins rally past Cardinals 6-5

R.B. FALLSTROM

ST. LOUIS — Casey McGehee didn't have to wait long to get another shot against Cardinals closer Trevor Rosenthal with a game on the line. Just a few hours.

The Miami Marlins cleanup hitter grounded into a game-ending double play in a one-run loss Friday night. He wasn't thinking about instant redemption before getting the key two-out hit in a ninth-inning rally of a 6-5 victory on Saturday.

"A lot of times you don't ever get it," McGehee said. "You've got to be OK with the fact that those guys, they're going to get you some times — more times than not."

"You can't go up there with that in your mind, but when you are able to get a hit like that it definitely feels good."

Rosenthal called it a

Archer pitches into 9th, Rays beat Tigers

DETROIT — Tampa Bay's Chris Archer came within two outs of a complete game, holding the Detroit Tigers to six hits in the Rays' 7-2 victory Saturday.

The Rays broke the game open with three runs in the fifth inning and four in the sixth, and the Tigers never mounted much of a rally against Archer (5-5). The 25-year-old right-hander allowed solo homers to Alex Avila in the seventh and J.D. Martinez in the ninth.

Argentina reaches World Cup semis for first time since 1990

KARL RITTER

BRASILIA, Brazil — Gonzalo Higuain's first goal of this World Cup sent Argentina into the semifinals on Saturday with a 1-0 win over a disappointing Belgium.

Argentina, which hadn't advanced past the World Cup quarterfinals since 1990, controlled the match after Higuain's eighth minute goal, more due to disciplined defending than sparkling attack.

The Napoli striker fired home Angel Di Maria's deflected pass just inside the area, beating Belgium goalkeeper Thibaut Courtois with a low shot to the far corner of the goal as he turned.

"Since the first game of this World Cup I said I was calm, that the goals would come. It came and at an important moment," Higuain said. "It's been so many years since we made it to the semifinals. Now we did."

Higuain came close to making it 2-0 in the second half when his shot smashed into the crossbar. Lionel Messi missed a chance to score his fifth goal of the tournament when he failed to beat Courtois on a counterattack.

with scratches all over his back, he climbed into an ambulance without speaking to reporters.

Patrick Lefevere, Cavendish's team manager, said the Briton was taken to hospital for X-rays after injuring his head, right shoulder and right wrist: "The orthopedic doctor thinks there is nothing broken but we need to wait for the images ... if nothing is broken, he can continue" the race on Sunday.

According to Lefevere, Cavendish said Gerrans slowed down in front of him, and he couldn't get out of the way. "(Cavendish) was so sure that he would win that he probably made a mistake. He wanted to get out, he pushed, Gerrans pushed back, and they crashed," Lefevere said.

Many British fans were hoping for a win by Cavendish, a native of the Isle of Man, whose mother is from Harrogate. Prime Minister David Cameron, Princes William and Harry, and Kate, Duchess of Cambridge, were on hand among throngs of British fans who lined the route — a testament to the cycling craze in the U.K.

Cubs send Samardzija, Hammel to Oakland to finalize blockbuster trade

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — The beginning of July's first blockbuster trade occurred about a month ago, when Oakland Athletics general manager Billy Beane called Chicago Cubs executive Theo Epstein to ask about Jeff Samardzija and Jason Hammel.

Beane told Epstein he liked the starting pitchers, and he was going to be aggressive in an attempt to improve the AL West leaders. Fast forward to this weekend, when Beane proved just how serious he was during that initial call.

Oakland and Chicago announced a big trade on Saturday, with Samardzija and Hammel heading to the West Coast for a package of prospects that included the A's first-round selections in each of the past two drafts.

The Athletics began the day with the best record in baseball, but Beane felt he needed to add depth to a rotation that responded well to season-ending injuries for Jarrod Parker and A.J. Griffin. Drew Pomeranz also is on the disabled list with a broken right hand.

Hammel join Scott Kazmir, Sonny Gray and Tommy Milone in one of the majors' best group of starting pitchers.

"We had to dig into our depth really early, and we felt like we needed two (starting pitchers)," Beane said.

Minor leaguers Addison Russell, Billy McKinney and Dan Straily went to Chicago in another painful deal for the lowly Cubs, who have played better of late, but are still last in the NL Central. Chicago also gets a player to be named in its latest July sell-off.

The Cubs lost at least 91 games in each of the previous three years. They traded away starting pitchers Ryan Dempster and Paul Maholm in July 2012, and Matt Garza and Scott Feldman last July.

"We certainly hope that this is the last year that we're obvious sellers at the trade deadline," Epstein said.

The key piece for Chicago in the deal with Oakland was Russell, a 20-year-old shortstop headed for Double-A Tennessee. A torn right hamstring sidelined the No. 11 overall selection in the 2012 draft earlier this season, but he was batting .333 in 13 games for Double-A Midland at the time of the trade.

Chicago and Oakland talked about a Samardzija for Russell deal, but Epstein said the one-for-one framework didn't work. He spoke with Beane on Thursday night, and that's when the trade grew into the larger package.

Herrera's big hit in 9th lifts Red Sox to win

Associated Press

BOSTON — Jonathan Herrera had a pinch-hit, broken-bat single with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning, giving the Boston Red Sox a 3-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles on Saturday in the opener of a day-night doubleheader to snap a three-game skid.

After poor hitting and fielding spoiled Red Sox left-hander Jon Lester's attempt for a 10th win, the Red Sox rallied in the ninth.

Pinch-hitter Jonny Gomes legged out a leadoff infield single off reliever T.J. McFarland (1-2). David Ross then bunted Gomes to second before Herrera's blooper over second base scored Gomes.

Koji Uehara (4-2) worked a perfect ninth and Stephen Drew hit his first home run since the World Series for Boston.

The Orioles' two runs came on Xander Bogaert's two-out error in the third inning of a game being made up after Friday's game was rained out.

Lester allowed two unearned runs and five hits in eight innings, striking out seven with no walks.

Miguel Gonzalez, who had struggled in his previous three starts since returning from an oblique injury, allowed two runs — one earned — and seven hits, striking out six with two walks in eight innings.

Drew ripped Gonzalez's first-pitch fastball into the right field bleachers in the second inning. Drew, who re-signed with Boston in May, was hitting .136 and hadn't homered since World Series championship clinching win in Game 6.

Simmons, Harang spark Braves to victory

ATLANTA — Braves shortstop Andrelton Simmons wasted no time recovering from a rare two-error inning.

"It's a tough when your errors are a little costly, but (Aaron) Harang picked me up and kept us in the game," Simmons said. "The other guys got on base and we ended up winning, so it's a good day after all."

Simmons drove in four runs, Harang won his third straight start and the Atlanta Braves beat the Arizona Diamondbacks 10-4 Saturday for their season-high ninth straight victory.

Justin Upton added a two-run homer and a third RBI for the Braves, who have won 11 of 12 and are 11 games over .500 for the first time this season.

Harang (8-6) has a 3.00 ERA over his last three starts after allowing nine hits and four runs with one walk and one strikeout in eight innings.

Arizona, which has dropped eight of 12, lost its 53rd game, most in the majors.

Simmons had an RBI single in the first and a two-run double in the fourth. He appeared to turn his left ankle while running the bases in the sixth but stayed in the game. He drove in his fourth run with a groundout in the seventh to make it 10-4. It marked the third time in his career and second time this season that he had four RBIs in a game.

The Diamondbacks went ahead 3-0 in the first on Goldschmidt's RBI double, Montero's RBI single and Gerardo Parra's RBI single.

Rockies hold on for 8-7 win over Dodgers

DENVER — Jorge De La Rosa sweated almost as much watching the Colorado bullpen preserve the win as he did earning it.

These days, nothing comes easy for the Rockies.

De La Rosa pitched six strong innings before giving way to a shaky bullpen and the Rockies snapped a five-game skid by holding off the NL West-leading Los Angeles Dodgers 8-7 on Saturday.

"We won and that's all that matters," De La Rosa said.

The Rockies are 3-16 since June 16 — with De La Rosa (9-6) accounting for every win. The lefty allowed two runs and three hits, all in the first inning. He then watched the bullpen almost completely unravel.

What looked like a blowout — Colorado led 8-2 — suddenly turned into a game when the Dodgers scored five runs in the seventh. But Adam Ottavino put the brakes on the rally, with De La Rosa nervously watching on a television in the clubhouse.

"It was a tough situation, but we got out of there," said De La Rosa, who tied Jeff Francis for the second-most wins (64) in Rockies history.

Dan Haren (8-5) gave up a season-high eight runs in 5 1-3 innings while striking out eight. He had a hard act to follow after teammate Clayton Kershaw's masterful performance the night before, when he allowed two hits in eight innings.

"I did my best, just didn't work out," Haren said.

Drew Stubbs hit a two-run homer, Corey Dickerson added a solo shot and Wilin Rosario contributed two RBI singles as the Rockies ended a six-game slide against the Dodgers. The team was without NL hitting leader Troy Tulowitzki, who rested a tight groin for a second straight game.

Los Angeles took advantage of three hits and two errors in a two-run first.

Krul's penalty-kick saves give Netherlands win

MIKE CORDER
Associated Press

SALVADOR, Brazil — Tim Krul came on as a substitute in the final minute of extra time and then saved two penalties in a 4-3 shootout victory over Costa Rica on Saturday, giving the Netherlands a spot in the World Cup semifinals.

Krul saved spot kicks from Costa Rica captain Bryan Ruiz and Michael Umana after the match had finished 0-0.

"We had a lot of chances but it didn't go in," Krul said on Dutch television. "Then I come in, stop two penalties and here we are."

In another stroke of tactical genius at this year's World Cup, Netherlands coach Louis van Gaal pulled Jasper Cillessen moments after the Ajax goalkeeper had saved a shot from Marcos Urena in extra time.

"The trick is good," said Krul, who plays for Newcastle. "A lot of preparation went into it."

The Dutch team will next face Argentina in the semifinals on Wednesday in Sao Paulo.

Krul looked super confident during the shootout at the Arena Fonte Nova, saving the second and fifth penalties by diving to his left and sticking out his hand.

When Krul stopped Ruiz's penalty, Cillessen, watching from the sideline, punched the air in celebration.

When he saved the second to win the match, Cillessen out-sprinted the rest of the bench to get to Krul, who was already being mobbed by jubilant teammates who had watched from the halfway line.

Costa Rica goalkeeper Keylor Navas had kept his team in the match with a string of great saves in the first half and again in extra time.

"We had a lot of chances but it didn't go in. Then I come in, stop two penalties and here we are."

Tim Krul
Netherlands goalkeeper

When Wesley Sneijder twice beat him late in regulation and again in the second half of extra time, the woodwork made the stop.

Sneijder hit the post with a free kick in the 80th minute and sent a curling shot over Navas and off the crossbar before the penalty shootout.

At the end, however, Navas could not stop any of the four Dutch penalties as veterans Robin van Persie, Arjen Robben, Sneijder and Dirk Kuyt all scored.

The Krul substitution will only boost Van Gaal's reputation as a coach who leaves nothing to chance and who has a golden touch with replacements. And it kept his tenure with the Netherlands alive for two more matches before he becomes the manager at Manchester United next season.

Montoya heating up for Penski as IndyCar hits Pocono

DAN GELSTON
AP Sports Writer

LONG POND, Pa. — Juan Pablo Montoya has been sprayed with champagne, doused with milk, and feted with confetti.

But he never expected to find himself buried under a potato chip shower courtesy of teammate Helio Castroneves.

Unable to contain his patriotic fervor after his native Brazil scored a World Cup goal, Castroneves sprung from his seat and dumped a bowl of chips all over Montoya. Montoya seemed slightly irked at the mess and dusted the crumbs off the Colombian jersey he wore at IndyCar's soccer watch party.

Montoya had no use for another chip — after all, there's a reason he signed with Roger Penske — but the secret snack attack was just a minor annoyance in a major successful stretch for the former Indianapolis 500 champion in his open wheel return.

In the true IndyCar crunch time, Montoya's adjustment to the car after an uneven seven-year stint in NASCAR may be over. After only two top 10s in his first seven starts, Montoya reeled off a third, second and seventh in his past three.

And because of two

Once a brash and fearless driver, Montoya is starting to feel like his old self — and that could spell bad news for the rest of the field down the stretch.

"I'm getting more cocky," Montoya said.

Montoya said he now has a better understanding of how to make the car do what he wants. With each day, his speed improves, his confidence swells and he believes he's now on the same pace as Team Penske teammates Will Power and Castroneves. "It's fun because I feel it starting to click," Montoya said. "The more it starts to click, the more confident you get in the car, the more you push it."

Montoya is making his championship push at the right time with eight races left in the season including some that boast double points.

After World Cup, MLS looks for steady growth

RONALD BLUM and JANIE MCCAULEY
AP Sports Writers AP Sports Writers

Even before millions of people packed into outdoor fan parties, ran out to bars for long lunches and sneaked peeks of games at their offices during the Americans' World Cup run, Major League Soccer began thinking about how to convert some of those fans into supporters for its own teams.

Playing its 19th season and preparing for an expansion to 24 teams in its post-David Beckham era, MLS has grown in support and interest but remains a feeder league — with most young star players it produces leaving for more lucrative contracts in Europe.

MLS Commissioner Don Garber wants to change that quickly, and it only helps his cause when stars such as Clint Dempsey and Michael Bradley come home to play on U.S. soil.

"We want to be thought of the way the Premier League is thought of, Serie A is thought of, La Liga is thought of, the Bundesliga is thought of," Garber said. "When people think about the best leagues in the world, everybody knows who they are, and we want to be one of those leagues."

Dempsey and Bradley each returned to MLS from Europe in the past year. Jermain Defoe joined Thierry Henry and Tim Cahill as the league's top international attractions. David Villa and Kaka already are signed for 2015 and Frank Lampard may be on the way, too.

Garber has set 2022 as the year for MLS to achieve his goal and says that while the league has come a long way, it still has a lot further to go.

To attract top players,

Fans cheer as a record-setting attendance of more than 67,000 is announced on Aug. 25 during an MLS soccer match between the Seattle Sounders and the Portland Timbers, in Seattle.

"Any time there's a World Cup it's going to put a focus on soccer for this country, and if there are guys playing in MLS it can only help boost the sport in general and also our league."

MLS must pay top prices. Part of the funds will come from new eight-year broadcasting deals by MLS and the U.S. Soccer Federation with ESPN, Fox and Univision that start next season and will average more than $90 million annually.

MLS says sponsorship revenue has nearly doubled since 2010 for the league and its marketing arm, Soccer United Marketing. Among the corporate partners investing in soccer are Adidas, Allstate, AT&T, General Motors' Chevrolet division and Continental Tire.

From Seattle to Salt Lake City, the California cities of Los Angeles and San Jose, from Kansas City to Houston and up to Toronto, general sports fans watched their local MLS players along with the die-hards during the World Cup.

Now, MLS' tallest task is to get those same supporters — and more — to attend league games each weekend. MLS was much more central to this year's tournament, sending 22 players for an increase from six in 2010.

"Any time there's a World Cup it's going to put a focus on soccer for this country, and if there are guys playing in MLS it can only help boost the sport in general and also our league," said Real Salt Lake midfielder Kyle Beckerman, who started three games in Brazil.

People now in decision-making positions got there in the era after the 1994 World Cup in the U.S., which drew a record 3.6 million fans. They've viewed shifts in the taste of American sports fans and the population as a whole, where there has been a growing Hispanic population.

In addition to 16.5 million who watched the United States' World Cup loss to Belgium on ESPN, there were 5.1 million tuned in on Spanish-language Univision. The 24.7 million total watching the U.S. draw against Portugal topped the averages of the most recent World Series and NBA Finals.

"We have been dealing with a generation of soccer moms and a massive youth participation," Garber said. "They now have gone through a generational turn. They are now influencers. They grew up with the game. It's certainly not foreign to them. They care about it in ways that their parents did not and now they are becoming MLS fans and becoming soccer fans overall."

But only a fraction of the people watching the World Cup have tuned into MLS. ESPN2's regular-season average dropped from 259,000 in 2012 to 206,000 last year, the first season after Beckham's departure. It rebounded to 251,000 this year, and the league hopes having regular time slots as part of the new contracts will provide a boost.

Marc Ganis, president of Chicago-based consulting firm Sports Corp, says the league should be happy with steady if not spectacular growth.

Billy Hurley extends lead to 2 at Greenbrier

JOHN RABY
AP Sports Writer

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. — Billy Hurley III doesn't plan to lose much rest sitting on a third-round lead for the first time on the PGA Tour.

The former U.S. Navy officer shot a 3-under 67 on Saturday to extend his advantage to two strokes over Angel Cabrera entering the final round of the Greenbrier Classic.

"I've been working for a long time to win on the PGA Tour," Hurley said. "I figure if I shoot the lowest score tomorrow, I can't lose."

Hurley never relinquished the lead he has held since midway through the second round at Old White TPC. He birdied the par-5 12th and par-4 13th before dropping a stroke on the par-3 15th.

He had a 12-under 198 total. No third-round leader has won the Greenbrier Classic, now in its fifth year. Playoffs have decided the tournament twice.

Cabrera shot 64. He's looking for his first non-major win on the PGA Tour.

Kevin Chappell was third at 9 under after a 69. Steve Stricker had a 68 to top the group at 8 under.

There will be more than a trophy to raise and a $1.2 million winner's check available Sunday. The four best finishers not previously eligible for the British Open among the top 12 on the final leaderboard will earn spots in the July 17-20 tournament at Royal Liverpool.

Hurley finished his five-year Navy service in 2009 and would still be a naval officer if golf wasn't keeping him busy. He returned to the PGA Tour this year after playing on the Web.com Tour in 2013.

He said nerves won't play a part in how he gets ready for what could be a memorable day today.

"I'm going to keep doing what I'm doing," he said. "I just want to put my mind in position so that I can play well. I slept fine last night. The benefit of the Navy if you learn how to sleep anywhere. I think I'll sleep fine tonight, too."

Cabrera wore an Argentine blue shirt in the third round and is riding his country's momentum in the World Cup, including Saturday's 1-0 win over Belgium to advance to the semifinal round.

"I was very happy when I found out they won," Cabrera said, adding that he was equally as giddy when he started his round with four birdies on the first six holes.

FRENCH OPEN

SAINT-QUENTIN-EN-YVELINES, France — In challenging conditions, Kevin Stadler shot a 1-over 72 and still managed to extend his lead to four strokes over Victor Riu and Thongchai Jaidee after the third round of the French Open on Saturday.

Leading since the first round, Stadler endured wind gusts and brief showers and made two bogeys and a birdie for a 9-under 204 total.

"I didn't play that great," Stadler said. "Made a whole lot of pars, a couple of nice up-and-downs for pars. Not nearly as many looks as I had the last couple of days, but you can't expect to play that well for four days in a row."

Riu, of France, wasted a solid front nine after the turn with six bogeys to card a 73, sharing second place with Thongchai, the Thai who shot 69. U.S. Open champion Martin Kaymer signed off on a 70 to move into fourth, six strokes off the lead.

"The way he plays golf and the way I know him, very laid-back guy, it will be difficult to catch him," Kaymer said of Stadler.

Stadler could become on Sunday the first American to win this tournament since Barry Jaeckel in 1972. However, he will have to cope with a tight back.

"On 8, and from then on, it was just a little tight," Stadler said. "But wasn't too painful, and I could figure out how to get around after that."

Stadler went into the third round with a three-stroke lead over Riu. But Stadler missed a short par putt on the third hole while Riu birdied No. 5 and No. 9 to claim a share of the lead at 9 under.

The momentum changed after the turn as Riu dropped his first shot of the day on the 10th by finding water off the tee.

Riu's best result this year was 38th in Singapore in May. He has never won on the European Tour.

Too few options for Fla. voters

It is no wonder that Florida voters have limited choices at the polls.

If there were employment ads for state lawmakers, the job description would hardly be enticing.

WANTED: Qualified people to run for elected office. Must overcome barriers such as an election system rigged to favor incumbents and entrenched interests. Job pays about $30,000 a year and gets little respect.

Even with the obvious difficulties in recruiting good people to run for the Florida House and Senate, this year features an abysmal lack of choices. The qualifying deadline for candidates expired on June 20 with a third of the state Legislature facing absolutely no opposition.

Eight state senators, all incumbent Republicans, and 38 state representatives — all but one an incumbent — automatically won despite having no ballots cast in their districts, the Tampa Bay Times reported.

Another 14 state lawmakers face only third-party or write-in candidates that typically never win.

Thus, 43 percent of the Legislature was decided four months before the election, based on the number of candidates with token opposition or no challengers, the Times reported.

It gets worse. Even incumbents with challengers are likely to win. In 2012, incumbents won 96 percent of their races, according to the Times.

From the perspective of incumbent lawmakers, of course, this isn't a problem. They'll tell you that the lack of opposition is merely an indication that the public believes they're doing a good job.

Hogwash. A Quinnipiac University poll in April found that less than a third of respondents approved of the way the Legislature was doing its job.

But low approval ratings don't matter when the system is rigged in your favor.

As shown by the redistricting trial that ended this month, a voter-approved initiative to remove politics from the drawing of districts was largely ignored by lawmakers. Campaign finance reforms have left loopholes for large donors.

Ballot access laws make it difficult for independent and third-party candidates to make the ballot. And when they run as write-in candidates, the end result actually limits voter participation.

In races where candidates from just one party qualify, all voters can cast ballots in the primary. If a write-in candidate runs, the primary is closed.

That happened this year in 10 state legislative races.

Given all these barriers, Florida voters shouldn't be surprised that they have limited options at the polls.

Despite dissatisfaction with the Legislature, throwing the bums out really isn't an option.

True election reforms are the only way to bring real choices to state races.

Guest columns should be limited to 550 words in length. The writer also must submit a recent photo to be published with the column, as well as a brief biographical sketch.

LETTER of the WEEK

A Florida disgrace

Shame! Shame! Another mess-up with Florida vote counters.

A judge, in the last 15 seconds of the time allotted to vote, drew lines to reverse his first vote during the Miss Florida pageant. The vote should not have been counted at all and the ballot should have been declared invalid, especially since Miss Florida had already been crowned.

What a tragedy for Leesburg's Elizabeth Fechtel, who has already won many pageants, including the early talent award, already made Miss America plans and looked forward to the competition and preparations to go to Miami, all because one non-vote gave the crown to the second in show.

Knowing neither of these ladies, I can only ask myself, how much power did this judge have? Was he in his right mind? And how could the Miss Florida director, Mary Sullivan, uphold this travesty of justice?

Is this really the American Way?

Companies hide behind religion

The debate over the contraception mandate in the Affordable Care Act (Obamacare) has taken a dangerous and alarming turn.

One hundred businesses, religious entities and nonprofits have come out of the woodwork and sued to block women from receiving the reproductive health care to which they're entitled under the law.

The entities that have filed lawsuits against the contraception mandate in the Affordable Care Act include military contractors, car dealerships, food processors and other for-profit businesses that depend on maintaining a good relationship with the public. I'm offended by their use of religion to justify discrimination against women.

That's why I'm supporting the National Organization for Women (NOW) in its Stand Against the Dirty 100 campaign. I refuse to support companies and groups that have decided that their personal beliefs are more important than the rights of their employees.

Birth control is a vital and common aspect of women's reproductive health care. Ninety-nine percent of sexually active women in the United States have used birth control at some point, and here I include myself. I do not believe that the religious beliefs of an employer trump the religious freedoms and bodily autonomy of their company's female employees.

A for-profit corporation is not a "person" capable of religious exercise. And, the birth control coverage requirement applies to the company not the individuals who own it.

American values celebrated

Parades, fireworks, patriotic music and family gatherings mark the annual holiday celebrating the birth of our nation. I have great memories of taking my children to the Mount Dora Fourth of July parade and watching the evening fireworks on the shores of Lake Dora in Tavares.

The Fourth of July is a great time to celebrate our nation's heritage. But it is also a time to reflect on those great Americans who preserved our freedoms. Woodrow Wilson said: "A nation which does not remember what it was yesterday does not know what it is today, nor what it is trying to do. We are trying to do a futile thing if we do not know where we came from or what we have been about."

How can we honor our nation's heritage? President Ronald Reagan had the answer. He said, "Our families nurture, preserve and pass on to each succeeding generation the values we share and cherish, values that are the foundation for our freedoms ... in raising and instructing our children, in providing personal and compassionate care for the elderly, in maintaining the spiritual strength of religious commitment among our people."

I believe it's important to remember that each man, woman and child make of themselves what they make of their country.

A weaker America

The editorial in today's paper, "Hillary Clinton, world-class troublemaker," by Gina Barreca describes her record as secretary of state as an asset. It is the opposite.

She failed to send help in Benghazi, lied about it later, didn't negotiate any treaty with anyone and said on her book tour the five prisoners released posed "no threat to America."

Hello? What's happening in Iraq now? The foreign policy of this president and State Department has emboldened our enemies and weakened our military substantially. Anyone who can read or watch television can see that.

MARY ALDERTON | Grand Island

A hidden gem

Clermont, the "Gem of the Hills," is an undervalued jewel. Since becoming a resident of Clermont last month, I realized it is one of the best kept secrets in Central Florida. The mix of big business and small entrepreneurial ventures creates an opportunity to satisfy anyone's curiosity.

As I go out and explore with my family, I continuously come across a variety of independently owned businesses that add to the charm of the city. While I have not fully tapped into the vast amount of possibilities, what I have experienced so far has been out of this world. I have enjoyed traditional dishes at Troy's Cuban Deli, exceptionally created tacos at The Urban Spot and mouthwatering desserts from Sugar Momma's Bake Shoppe.

Whether driving on State Road 50 or US 27, I get excited seeing the large variety of businesses available to me. As reported by Roxanne Brown for the Daily Commercial, my new city is "attracting businesses at a record rate." The growth and establishment of these businesses, whether established chains or small mom-and-pop start-ups, proves that Clermont is the place to be.

I don't know how long the secret will be kept, but I will enjoy it while it lasts.

OTHERVOICES

America's attention deficit disorder at the polls

The medical condition now known as Attention Deficit Disorder was first defined by the Psychiatric Association in the 1980s. It is a condition more prevalent among children, usually between ages 6 and 12, but it is also found in adults.

One of the primary identifiers of ADD is the inability to stay focused on tasks and activities or to multitask effectively. If this is a key trait of ADD, then a good share of American voters have developed political ADD.

Probably the most glaring case of ADD among a populace is described in The Bible when God's miracles led to the release of the Israelites from bondage in Egypt. Can you imagine being there and witnessing the 10 great calamities and plagues that fell upon the people of Egypt which eventually forced Pharaoh to release the Israelites? However Pharaoh, having freed the Israelites, then changed his mind and pursued them. As we know, God parted the Red Sea, allowing the Israelites to escape from Egypt and then the parted sea fell and swallowed the Egyptians when they attempted to follow.

Now free, God fed and watered the Israelites on a barren desert. When Moses went up on Mount Sinai for 40 days and nights to receive the 10 Commandments from God, the Israelites developed a case of ADD, lost their focus, their belief in God and instead turned to praying before a golden calf.

Another striking example of a nation succumbing to ADD occurred in Britain during WWII. Winston Churchill's unwavering leadership led the British people through their darkest days and to eventual victory over Hitler and the Nazis in 1945. With Hitler defeated, the British people lost their focus and in the first election after Germany's surrender they voted Churchill out of office in spite of his steadfast Bulldog leadership which led them to victory. They turned to the golden calf called Socialism.

America is now dealing with its own case of ADD. After the attack on 9/11 we were intent on getting Bin Laden and defeating Al-Qaeda. When we finally found Bin Laden and killed him, President Obama then coined the 2012 campaign phrase "Bin Laden is dead and

RUSS SLOAN

GUEST COLUMNIST

Al-Qaeda is on the run." We then seemed to lose our focus on also defeating terrorism (except for a few select drone attacks) and abandoned Iraq prematurely.

I understand America's being "war weary," but I guarantee that our enemies are not "war weary" and will not stop killing as many Americans as possible. We lost our focus on insuring Iraq's survival as a democracy and we now see the calamity which is unfolding before our eyes. It is pretty clear that the terrorists feel that they can take advantage of poor leadership, both here and in Iraq and that their hate can outlast our vigilance.

We soon may see an organized terrorist state from Syria infiltrate a large portion of Iraq. Iran's influence is also growing in Iraq, and I predict that Iran will ignore our president's threats and develop their nuclear weapons, which means that both America and the nation of Israel will be in great danger.

A nation as large as America must be able to multitask effectively. We have not only enabled terrorism to grow, but our national ADD has caused us to lose our focus on job creation, energy independence and securing our borders.

For a nation to develop ADD can be deadly, as in the case of the first attack on the World Trade Center, the bombing of the U.S.S. Cole and the deadliest attack on American soil, 9/11. While Bin Laden is dead, his terrorist philosophy is alive and thriving.

As a nation we cannot afford to live with ADD. The battle against the evil of terrorism may well be with us for decades. There will be no signing of surrender on the battleship Missouri which ended WWII.

The great question of this 21st Century is, can America multitask effectively in fighting terrorism, becoming energy independent, securing our borders, invigorating our economy, improving our educational system and becoming fiscally responsible with our budget and fixing our entitlement programs for generations to come.

Neither Obamacare nor a golden calf will cure our national Deficit Disorder problem.

Fechtels class shines through

By now, we all know the story of Elizabeth Fechtel, the Leesburg woman who was crowned Miss Florida two weeks ago before losing the title five days later when pageant organizers discovered there had been an error in the scoring.

Imagine the hurt she felt. Instead of preparing for the Miss America pageant, Fechtel was left to wonder what went wrong and contemplate her future as first runner-up.

Suddenly, Fechtel's awe-inspiring achievement turned soured.

Or did it.

It is a testament to Elizabeth Fechtel's character and resilience that instead of seeking pity, instead of angrily denouncing the decision to award the crown to Victoria Cowen, she humbly accepted the outcome and vowed to live out her commitment to her Miss Florida platform — title or no title.

"It was not a fun situation," she told the Daily Commercial's Theresa Campbell in an interview last week, "but I think everyone has a period in their lives where they go through something that causes them to switch directions and this is mine.

"It has given me this extra boost of energy," she said. "The past five days just opened my eyes to what my heart would really want to accomplish if I did have those resources (as Miss Florida) and now I am so motivated to know that I can do these things on my own."

So Fechtel will head back to the University of Florida in the fall. She wants to work with disadvantaged children, is developing an interest in social entrepreneurship — running a business that supports a cause — and, at least for now, has no plans to enter any more pageants.

It is perhaps ironic that Fechtel has garnered more national attention for losing the crown than she did for winning it. She has been inundated with requests for interviews, been in the national press and has received tens of thousands of notes of support on Facebook.

There is a lesson for all of us in Fechtel's adversity. She, herself, characterized her ordeal as minor compared to the plights of so many who suffer personal and professional losses. And it's true. Yet she reminds us that personal disappointment and adversity can, and should, be catalysts for growth.

Elizabeth Fechtel may not wear the Miss Florida crown, but her ability to keep her loss in perspective, willingness to sweep aside her hurt and determination to bring success from sorrow is inspiring in a way that dwarfs her pageant triumph.

Obama grabs power and Congress sits silent

President Obama doesn't worry about Congress. He bypasses Congress by appointing czars who answer only to him. They write new rules and regulations, whatever is written becomes law in 30 days. Obama writes executive orders, again bypassing Congress.

If both houses of Congress pass a law, presidents either sign, veto or order a signing statement for their signature. What's a signing statement?

Signing statements have been used since the early 19th Century. They could be rhetorical, pointing out positive or negative aspects of a bill and how it fits in with the administration's views. They can be political, or defining, or clarifying the ambiguous aspects of the bill. And last, they could be constitutional, which would be to announce the president's view of the constitutionality of certain aspects of the bill.

The real purpose is saying that a presidential administration will only allow parts of the bill to become law.

There is nothing set forth in the Constitution about signing statements. A signed law is still a law regardless of what a president says in an accompanying signing statement.

Franklin Roosevelt used one in 1943. In 1972, President Nixon used a signing statement to declare that certain parts of the bill did not "represent the policies of this administration." A federal court ruled it not legal.

Lawsuits involving signing statements usually argue that in effect such statements constitute a veto to which Congress cannot respond, and therefore represent a line-item veto. Line-item vetoes were ruled unconstitutional by the Supreme Court in 1998. But presidents continue to use them. Reagan used them. George W. Bush signed over 200, usually on the grounds that parts of a law infringed on the authority granted to the executive branch. So far Obama has signed 27.

The Congressional Lawmaking Authority Protection Act of 2007 was introduced in the 110th Congress. It was "to prevent the President from encroaching upon the Congressional prerogative to make laws, and for other purposes." It got nowhere.

Why do we need Congress? Few surveys approve of anything they do. They live in a world we can't even imagine. Almost all are millionaires, or if not when they enter Congress, they leave as millionaires. Their main objective is getting re-elected. Only term limits would reign in their influence.

Today, Congress has little influence. Our president does as he pleases and the Republican Congress does nothing but talk, knowing the Democrat-controlled Senate will block anything Republicans propose.

Obama's latest unilateral action was releasing five known Islamic terrorists, without consulting Congress, in exchange for an American soldier who deserted his post by walking away, leaving his rifle behind. Some could argue this is an impeachable offense for a president.

Wait! Obama did consult some in Congress. All said, "No!" Obama did it anyway.

Why do we need Congress? Presidents can pick and choose what parts of a law benefit them and their party while ignoring parts they don't like. Obama brags about how he bypasses Congress and the Democrat-controlled Senate lies and blames Republicans when very little gets done. The mainstream media refuses to criticize anything Obama does.

With almost 50 percent of the population voting for the party that promises them the most, we Americans deserve the politicians we have in Washington, D.C. We voted for them.

Anderson collector loves his simple VW Beetle

MIKE MCMILLAN

ANDERSON, S.C. — Few cars have exemplified minimalist motoring better than the Volkswagen Type 1 — better known as the Beetle.

The bubble-shaped, rear-engined runabout has sold millions since it debuted in 1938 during World War II. The car itself was a project developed by Ferdinand Porsche and commissioned by Adolf Hitler himself. The idea involved a car that could cruise Germany's new autobahn roads at high speeds while still getting commendable fuel economy.

Despite its origins, the car has a huge cult following, and seeing at least a couple at a car show is a given.

Bill Armstrong has owned a Beetle for a couple of years, but it's definitely not his first. Years ago, he got his hands on a pair of Beetles in a trade he doesn't really want to talk about.

"If I told you what I traded for my first Beetle, you'd think I'm nuts," he said.

Still, he's owned several over the past few years, and this 1972 example is a peach. It was originally an Arizona car, which is significant because vehicles bought in northeast New York, where Armstrong lives, tend to disintegrate in as little as 10 years.

There are a few extras, like large dual single-barrel carburetors, new wheels and a pistol-grip shifter. While many Beetles suffer from acceleration that could be outpaced by continental drift, this one jumps off the line with surprising gusto. Armstrong said the dual carbs help with the lack of power but don't do much for gas mileage.

LaCrosse leads GM's campaign to attract younger buyers

G. CHAMBERS WILLIAMS III
MCT

While Chevrolet and Cadillac have charged forward to help lead General Motors' post-bankruptcy revival, Buick has undergone a renaissance as well, an effort that has worked to bring a younger clientele into the premium brand.

Helping to lead that effort is the latest generation of the LaCrosse sedan, introduced for 2010 and now updated with new styling cues, technology and amenities for 2014.

One of the primary goals of GM in re-making the LaCrosse for 2010 was to create a vehicle that would appeal to a much-younger audience than Buick traditionally attracted — the over-50 crowd.

The newest designs are keyed to attract young executives, giving them Buicks that they can enjoy and even get excited about owning. With that goal in mind, the LaCrosse seems to be right on target. The car, based on the same architecture as the widely praised 2014 Chevrolet Impala, brought positive comments wherever I took it during my recent weeklong test.

It also proves that Buick hasn't abandoned its former core customers. The car also catches the eyes of older consumers, while also appealing to people in their 30s and 40s.

This vehicle's stunning exterior and superb interior craftsmanship prove that GM can build cars with the best of the Japanese and European premium automakers. Driving it is just as much fun as many of those competitors, as well, especially with the optional V-6 engine in our test vehicle.

The LaCrosse is a full-size premium sedan that was introduced to help build on the success of Buick's popular large crossover, the Enclave.

Among the LaCrosse's features for 2014 are front- or available all-wheel drive, a variety of new technological options, and a choice of either the base eAssist light hybrid with a 2.4-liter, four-cylinder engine and 182 horsepower, or the 304-horsepower, 3.6-liter V-6, a version of the six-cylinder used in the Chevrolet Camaro.

Both are connected to a six-speed automatic transmission.

For 2014, LaCrosse prices begin at $33,535 for the base front-drive sedan with the four-cylinder, and range as high as $40,285 for the Premium Group 1 model with all-wheel drive.

Our tester was the Premium 2 model ($39,755) with front drive, the highest trim level for the LaCrosse without all-wheel drive. The Premium 2 model isn't offered with the all-wheel drive.

Other trims are the Leather Group front drive ($35,610); Leather Group all-wheel drive ($38,615); and Premium 1 front-drive ($39,210).

Among new features for 2014 are advanced safety technologies and enhanced in-vehicle connectivity, GM says. There are available wing-shaped LED daytime running lights and LED wrap-around taillights (included on our tester); new seats; a redesigned central instrument panel and console; and Buick's next-generation IntelliLink infotainment system, with natural voice recognition.

Other styling changes include a new front fascia, sculpted hood and larger waterfall grille; active grille shutters that close at Lindy Hartsfield-Vasquez likes trucking.

She started in January and likes the independence, the money and the opportunity to crisscross the country with her husband and driving partner, Jose, and their cat, Houdini.

She even has a new tractor, a 2014 Freightliner with "all the bells and whistles." But as a 5-foot-2-inch woman, she faces challenges when she hits the road.

Turning the crank that lowers or raises the landing legs — the things that support the front end of a trailer when it's standing on its own — can be tough. Same for disengaging the "fifth wheel" that hooks the tractor to the trailer.

After she scales an 18-inch-high step to get into the cab and straps herself in, the shoulder belt tends to cut into her neck. Then there's a trade-off between good visibility and easy access to the foot controls.

"Being as short as I am,

I have trouble," Hartsfield-Vasquez, 49, said during a rest stop while on her way to Oak Creek, Wis., to pick up a load of freight bound for Gaffney, S.C. "When I get the seat low enough to hit the pedals, I have trouble seeing over the dash."

Not exactly ideal when you're guiding a vehicle weighing tens of thousands of pounds down the interstate at 60 mph.

"It's absolutely a challenge for a shorter individual," said Drew Bossen, a physical therapist and vice president with Atlas Ergonomics LLC, a Grand Haven, Mich., consulting firm that has studied discomfort among long-haul truckers.

Now, though, a Wisconsin-based advocacy group and a University of Wisconsin-Stout professor are working to make truck driving easier and more appealing for women.

Their work has gotten the attention of Ryder System Inc., a $6.4 billion Miami company

Auto review: Audi A3 is more exciting than it looks

TERRY BOX
MCT

No Audi ever seared my synapses like the raucously exotic R8 roadster, a shrieking 10-cylinder dazler.

It resembled an angry metallic teardrop wrapped around 525 horsepower.

When started on cool mornings, the mid-engine R8 would erupt into ragged snorts and snarls, sounding like a trunk full of wolves from the Black Forest.

We seized every day with retina-flattening, chest-compressing acceleration.

Life was good for a while. But the sensual, six-figure R8 also established an extremely high standard for other Audis — fairly or not.

So when I first walked up on the silver 2015 A3 sedan I had recently, I thought: small, lumpy and tame.

As I am learning, though, things aren't always what they seem.

The A3 is the second near-luxury compact German sedan to arrive in the U.S., closely following the Mercedes-Benz CLA250 — both of which are typically priced under $40,000.

And while the strutting CLA is dressed for dancing at a bar at midnight — in a thumping clump of bizarre people — the A3 looks more business casual.

But ignore the A3's clean-but-conventional lines for a second, because a whole lot of goodness is stuffed into its rather unremarkable packaging.

Actually, I'm probably being a little hard on the A3. It is a fairly handsome small sedan. It just has to follow in the deep, unique tire tracks of stunners like the R8, A5 and A7 — cars with such proportion and potency that they light up garages.

Like most Audis these days, the A3 I had sported a deep seven-bar grille that dominated its rounded face.

Mildly fierce modern that leases tens of thousands of heavy trucks and runs its own freight-carrying operation with a fleet of about 4,000 semitractors.

And the quest to more comfortably accommodate both women and smaller men comes as the country's carriers face a driver shortage that some believe will get worse.

Jeanette Kersten, who teaches in the operations and management department at UW-Stout, teamed up with Wisconsin-based Women in Trucking to survey its members for their thoughts about truck design.

They found plenty. "Seat adjustability was really important," Kersten said. "(And) adjustable steering wheels. Not all trucks have adjustable steering wheels. Adjustable foot pedals. Not only adjustable foot pedals, but guess what — foot pedals are too small."

And for some, like Hartsfield-Vasquez, too far away.

"Women typically have shorter legs, wider hips, shorter arms," said Ellen Voie, president and CEO of Women in Trucking. "And the seat belts are an issue. A lot of our drivers have said, 'Hey, the seat belt's chafing against my chest for 11 hours a day.' So they would put the seat belt behind them. Well, that's just wrong."

Hartsfield-Vasquez doesn't do that, but she's sometimes tempted to slip the belt under her left arm — also a no-no.

The problems aren't gender-specific, Voie said.

"We try to make it clear because a lot of drivers misunderstand," she said. "We're not trying to make the trucks designed for women; we're trying to make them adaptable."

highway speeds to reduce drag; new headlights; and a new rear deck lid with integrated spoiler.

There's also a new Ultra Luxury Interior Package, which was included on our vehicle. It brings Sangria Opus leather seats, real wood trim on the doors/console/instrument panel, leather-wrapped center console and armrests, a suede headliner, and a four-spoke leather steering wheel.

Our tester also came with two safety technology packages — the Driver Confidence Package 1, with forward collision and rear cross-traffic alerts, side blind-zone alert, lane-departure warning, adaptive high-intensity-discharge headlights, a head-up display and fog lights; and the Driver Confidence Package 2, which added adaptive (radar) cruise control and automatic collision preparation.

Other options included the very cool panoramic sunroof, which extended from the front to over the rear seat, and the special Midnight Amethyst Metallic exterior paint.

With freight and options, our tester's sticker totaled $48,735, putting it up into the price class of some of the European bluebloods. But this was a very well-equipped, luxurious car with loads of modern safety and convenience technology.

The interior is quite spacious and comfortable. The front bucket seats included eight-way power adjustment on both sides, and both were heated and ventilated. A memory system holds settings for two drivers for seats and mirrors.

We would like to have had more cubbies for our personal devices — i.e., smartphones and such. There were two 12-volt outlets up front, and a third on the rear of the center console, along with a 115-volt power outlet, accessible to rear passengers.

2014 BUICK LACROSSE SEDAN

THE PACKAGE: Full-size, four-door, five-passenger, mild-hybrid four-cylinder or V-6 powered, front- or all-wheel-drive sedan.

HIGHLIGHTS: Updated for 2014, this is Buick's premium midsize sedan, available with a variety of high-tech options and intended to appeal to a more youthful audience than the traditional Buick sedans of the past. It gives GM a strong competitor against the leading Japanese and European premium sedans.

NEGATIVES: Lack of convenient storage cubbies for portable phones and audio devices up front; limited trunk space, especially on four-cylinder models.

ENGINE: 2.4-liter inline four-cylinder eAssist; 3.6-liter V-6.

TRANSMISSION: Six-speed automatic.

POWER/TORQUE: 182 horsepower/172 pound-feet (I-4); 304 horsepower/264 pound-feet (V-6).

LENGTH: 197 inches.

CURB WEIGHT: 3,757-3,896 pounds.

BRAKES, FRONT/REAR: Disc/disc, antilock.

TRUNK VOLUME: 10.8 cubic feet (four-cylinder); 13.3 cubic feet (V-6).

SIDE AIR BAGS: Front seat-mounted, roof-mounted side-curtain for both rows, standard.

ELECTRONIC STABILITY CONTROL: Standard.

FUEL CAPACITY/TYPE: 15.7 gallons (four-cylinder); 18 gallons (V-6), unleaded regular.

EPA FUEL ECONOMY: 25 mpg city/36 highway (I-4); 18/28 (V-6, front drive); 17/26 (V-6, AWD).

BASE PRICE: $33,535

PRICE AS TESTED, INCLUDING DESTINATION CHARGE: $48,735

ON THE ROAD RATING: 9.3 (of a possible 10).

The second 12-volt outlet up front was inside the center console under the armrest, along with the USB and auxiliary audio ports. Many newer vehicles have moved these to an open tray area in front of the shifter to make them more easily accessible, and also to provide a place to keep a phone or two while driving, instead of having to stick them into the cupholders as I did in the LaCrosse.

While there are two cupholders up front, the only ones in the rear are in a pull-down center armrest that eliminates the middle seating position. There are front and rear door pockets, but they're not big enough to include bottle holders. Map pockets are included on the backs of the two front seats.

There is plenty of knee and leg room for the rear bench seat, and three adults can sit back there rather comfortably.

Cargo space is less than most cars in this class — 13.3 cubic feet with the V-6 engine, and just 10.8 cubic feet with the four-cylinder because of space lost to the battery for the eAssist system.

A rearview camera system is included, and next year (2015), all Buick models will have this as standard equipment, GM says.

Our LaCrosse also came with the Safety Alert seat, which vibrates with pulses when a collision threat is detected.

All trim levels come with Buick's QuietTuning, which is designed to reduce or block outside noise and vibration. That helped make our vehicle very quiet at highway speeds.

Standard safety gear includes eight air bags, electronic stability control with traction control, four-wheel antilock disc brakes, tire-pressure monitoring, and the OnStar system.

Our vehicle also had snazzy 20-inch alloy wheels — the first time wheels this large have been offered on the LaCrosse. Other wheel sizes are 17, 18 and 19 inches.

Electric power steering is standard with the four-cylinder engine and the front-drive V-6 models.

was bolted to a six-speed automatic — the CLA had a seven-speed — the A3 was a second quicker to 60, completing the sprint in an impressive 5.4 seconds, according to Car and Driver.

It felt more refined, too, leaping away from stops with minimal turbo lag and solid torque as it pulled smoothly past 5,500 rpm. But lag awaits you if you catch the car putting along in a high gear at low speed and punch it hard.

I also thought the dual-clutch automatic in the A3 was less clunky at low speeds than the seven-speed in the Mercedes.

But you pay for the goodness. My A3 carried a sticker price of $39,495, about $3,000 more than the Mercedes.

That's a substantial spread for those of us who make monthly payments.

In addition, the CLA gets better fuel economy — 26 miles per gallon in town and 38 on the highway compared with the A3's 24/33.

headlamps abutting it slid into relatively short front fenders.

As a matter of fact, the A3's slight overhangs front and rear, coupled with its tall top, made it appear to be smaller than the CLA.

But the truth is it had better leg- and head-room in back than the CLA, as hinted by its big doors.

Taking a fairly conservative tack, the A3 wore a standard character line above the door handles on its fairly flat sides, as well as a less obvious line down low.

The hood was mostly flat, and the car rode on nice-looking 18-inch alloy wheels shod with 225/40 tires.

Attractive and practical, the A3 was nonetheless pretty easy to lose on a crowded parking lot.

But like that woman your mom tried to talk you into marrying — the one you ignored to focus on flashy, flaky Frida — the A3 has a lot of unseen beauty.

Built on the newest Volkswagen GTI platform, all-wheel-drive models of the A3 like the one I had will pull an impressive 0.94 g on the skidpad, according to Car and Driver.

That number underscores the outer limits of the A3's handling, which is balanced, composed and grippy in routine driving.

Though the car felt quite firm going down the road, its longish wheelbase helped soak up most of the harshness and was considerably better than the clomping CLA.

With its deep German roots, the A3 turned eagerly — maybe even aggressively — into corners, showing a touch of body lean just to remind you to get off that blankety-blank cell-phone and pay attention.

Once into a corner, it settled into a clean line, ripping comfortably through every curve I could throw at it.

Its steering felt lighter and livelier than the CLA's, with slightly better road feel.

But the A3 mostly seemed more agile and flingable than the CLA.

Besides all-wheel-drive, my 3,400-pound A3 was equipped with Volkswagen/Audi's fine turbocharged two-liter motor, a tough little warrior that has been tweaked and shaped into one of the best four-bangers on the market.

It churned out 220 horsepower, 12 more than the CLA.

Though the engine

There are no air conditioning or power windows, and switches are placed wherever there's space. The heating and air controls sit between the seats on either side of the handbrake.

The brakes and steering are all manual, and it takes a firm grip on the wheel when the car's parked to get the wheel turned. But when it's in motion, you hardly miss the lack of power steering. Without the weight on the front wheels, power steering is really not an issue.

Armstrong plans on selling it. "I'm thinning 'em out," he said. "I wanna cut back."

Right now, he owns the Beetle, a '63 Impala, a '40 Chevy coupe he's working on and a '71 Buick Skylark that he's just about to get on the road. Before long, he wants to sell the Impala, too.

Still, it comes down to one short sentence that explains his affinity for the Bug.

"It's fun to drive," Armstrong said.

"I never did get good gas mileage, no matter what I drove," he said.

As for what's under the hood ... err ... trunk ... err whatever, he's not quite sure. It could be the 1,600 cc pancake motor, or it could be the 1,500 cc variety. Still, the flat four is highly customizable, and it can be massaged for as much power as you have the budget for.

The cars have a surprising amount of head and shoulder room, considering their diminutive size. The footwell in the driver's side, however, left much to be desired. The aftermarket pedals crowded much of the compartment, and smooth operation of the car for taller drivers was a bit tricky.

Since its raison d'etre is minimalism, it's free of most creature comforts.

Samsung reaches beyond smartphones with home appliances

LINDA MOSS
MCT

In Manhattan's Meatpacking District, a group of Michelin star-rated chefs — the creme de la creme of cuisine — were whipping up gourmet appetizers for a crowd of more than 100 people, mostly members of the media.

Celebrity restaurateur-chef Daniel Boulud, for example, made Colorado Wagyu ribeye wine-braised short ribs. The culinary offerings from the other chefs included duck foie gras royale, accompanied by champagne. And all the cooking was done in a demonstration kitchen featuring Samsung's Chef Collection line.

Ridgefield Park, N.J.-based Samsung Electronics America Inc., the U.S. unit of the Korean electronics giant, was the host of the evening party last month. The media got a close-up look at Samsung's latest line of home appliances. Samsung's Chefs premium kitchen collection was center stage at the festive showcase, which many of the company's top U.S. and global executives attended.

The party was serious business. Long an industry leader in TVs and later smartphones, Samsung has turned its attention big-time to white goods — refrigerators, clothes washers and dryers, dishwashers and ranges. And it's making solid inroads against leaders such as General Electric, Whirlpool, Kenmore and others as it sets its sights on being No. 1 in that category as well.

Exuberant young fans scream and wave at the appearance of Ricky Dillon, one of their YouTube heroes at the Anaheim Convention Center last month in Anaheim, Calif.

VidCon's popularity a sign of YouTube community's growth

SABA HAMEDY AND YVONNE VILLARREAL
MCT

Want to be a YouTube star? There's a convention for that.

About 18,000 video content creators, viral video stars and their fans were expected at the Anaheim Convention Center last week for the fifth annual VidCon. The three-day conference featured everything from panels featuring YouTube stars such as Rebecca Black to workshops on becoming an online celebrity.

The attendees — mostly teens and young adults armed with smartphones and video cameras — greeted one another in the convention halls with ice breakers such as "Do you have a channel?" and "OMG! I subscribe to you!"

Crowds lined up outside the ballroom as early as 9 a.m. to hear VidCon

"I think (online video content) is a huge cultural phenomenon that no one can take credit for or explain or understand. We're all just sort of watching it happen and trying to reflect it and ride along with it in the most effective ways we can."

Hank Green, conference creator founders John and Hank Green (known as "VlogBrothers" on YouTube) introduce the conference and speakers such as Dreamworks Animation CEO Jeffrey Katzenberg.

"I find this world of short-form video is such an amazing place to create laughter," Katzenberg told the crowd.

When VidCon began in 2010, the conference took place at a smaller venue in Los Angeles and drew in about 1,400 attendees. This year, it occupies two halls at the Anaheim Convention Center.

The growth in popularity is a testament to the success of online video content, especially among younger people who use websites as creative outlets to video blog, called vlog, or follow their favorite online personas. Viewers tend to skew younger, which is a prime audience for advertisers.

The amount of money being spent on digital video advertising is growing fast. In 2013, digital video ads hit $4.2 billion — and that number is expected to reach nearly $6 billion this year.

Meanwhile, the number of people posting online videos is rising at an eye-popping rate. In 2006, only 7 percent of 16- to 34-year-olds created online content, and that number has jumped to 77 percent today, according to one industry executive. That same age bracket is watching an average of 500 videos a month.

The Green brothers came up with the idea for the convention after going on a small tour around the U.S. for their YouTube fans. Though Hank Green said he knew their YouTube channel had fans, it wasn't until about 80 people showed up at a small library in Michigan to see the duo that he realized the magnitude of their viewership.

"It was shocking so many people showed up to see us," Green said. "We absolutely knew we wanted to create something for our audiences and everyone else's audiences because there was a desire for it."

Stocks, bonds, Kevin Costner and Charlie Rich

"Can't take it with you when you're gone..."

*"But I want enough to get there on."
"Rolling With the Flow" Written by Jerry Hayes and recorded by Charlie Rich*

Today's markets are "through the looking glass," as Kevin Costner said in the 1991 film "JFK." What do we mean? Well, bonds (fixed income) have traditionally been considered a less risky investment than equities (stocks). But this is not necessarily true. It's an upside-down investing world. Alice, it's your move in the Wonderland of capital markets.

Historically, bonds are popular for many reasons. Bondholders are high on the "default ladder" and are paid before stockholders, should a default occur. Secondly, when a bond matures, you get your original investment

Deal creating top German mobile company gets OK

JUERGEN BAETZ
Associated Press

BRUSSELS — In a deal that creates Germany's biggest mobile phone company in terms of customers, the European Union's antitrust authority on Wednesday approved network operator Telefonica's bid to buy its competitor E-Plus under certain conditions.

The move comes as analysts argue Europe's fragmented telecommunications sector needs consolidation to shoulder the investments needed for faster networks and to offset losses from the EU's crackdown on lucrative surcharges leveled on cross-border use of mobile phones, so-called roaming fees.

Telefonica agreed to purchase E-Plus from Dutch telecommunications company Royal KPN NV in a cash and stock deal estimated at about 8.5 billion euros ($11.6 billion). Telefonica, a Spanish company, plans to merge E-Plus with

CEO Brian Roberts bulks up Comcast for the future

MEG JAMES
MCT

At least three times during the last year, Comcast Corp. was asked to be the white knight.

But Brian Roberts said no.

The chairman and chief executive of cable giant Comcast initially rebuffed Time Warner Cable Inc.'s requests to combine the nation's two largest cable companies. Comcast was still digesting its acquisition of NBCUniversal, and the company had been telling Wall Street that it didn't need to buy any more cable systems to be successful.

But the pleas accelerated as Time Warner Cable tried to fend off a hostile takeover, and turned to Roberts to be its white knight. The beleaguered cable operator had lost 300,000 subscribers during last summer's blackout of CBS stations during an ill-fated battle over programming fees.

Blood was in the water. And Roberts' lieutenants urged him to go for it.

"I just looked in the mirror and said: 'If you are going to be an innovator, and if your products are not available in L.A. and New York, then will you truly be a great company?'" Roberts said during an interview at Comcast's gleaming headquarters, the tallest tower in Philadelphia.

Building "a great company" has been a driving motivation of the Roberts family for more than 50 years.

Roberts' father made a living in the 1950s selling men's cologne, belts and suspenders. Then Ralph Roberts took a chance on what he saw as the next big thing. In 1963, he plunked down $250,000 to buy a Tupelo, Miss., community TV antenna system with 1,200 customers willing to pay for clear television signals.

The family has spent the past two decades on an aggressive buying spree, rolling up one company after another to build Comcast into one of the world's most powerful corporations. Comcast now is the nation's largest cable company, with more than 22 million subscribers and $64 billion a year in revenue.

takeover of Time Warner Cable will help do that, particularly as major technology companies, including Google Inc., Apple Inc. and Amazon.com, try to crowd into America's living rooms to control the TV-watching experience.

He still needs the blessing of federal regulators, who are expected to decide early next year. If they approve, Comcast would be a dominant provider of cable TV and Internet service — an increasingly vital connection for tens of millions of families — along the nation's East and West coasts. It would gain 7 million subscribers and claim two major pieces on the chessboard, Los Angeles and New York, an audacious move even for a company known for its daring bets.

Comcast would command the major population centers: New York, L.A., Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Atlanta, Dallas, Seattle and San Francisco. In Los Angeles, Comcast would become the sole cable TV operator, with reach into nearly 1.8 million homes.

The deal would complete Comcast's transformation into a national company from a regional cable operator, all of it done without having to dig trenches and extend its fiber lines through every state.

"Something closer to world domination" was how veteran cable analyst Craig Moffett described Comcast's ambitions.

Roberts, who turned 55 recently, does not come across as a power-hungry CEO. Instead, he is bookish and polite, with a dry sense of humor.

He possesses a quiet confidence that business associates say comes from his strong relationship with his father — and the corporate structure of Comcast. Roberts controls 33 percent of the company's voting shares, which means that he doesn't have to worry about being bounced out of the CEO office. He can take the long view.

back, in addition to the yield you've been paid throughout the life of the bond.

Bonds have also been known traditionally for their stability: In good times and bad, bondholders of credit-worthy institutions are paid on time and their money is considered reasonably safe. Payments were made to owners of U.S. Treasuries even while the Civil War raged. Municipal bonds remain one of the few ways that high wage earners can catch a tax break, since interest earned from "muni" bonds is not subject to federal tax. In years past, some investors even went so far as to create all-bond portfolios.

Currently, though, most investors are leaning toward equities. Why? While equities certainly are more expensive than they were even 18 months ago, many dividend-paying stocks are paying more than bonds when considered on an apples-to-apples basis, a comparison known as the equity risk premium.

And some equities, like utilities (referred to as widow and orphan stocks) for instance, represent investments whose dividends are seen as sound as the yields offered by some types of bonds. Another bond concern is that the face value of longer-dated debt will likely decline when the Federal Reserve raises interest rates, perhaps as early as next year.

Naturally, an investor's financial objectives and risk tolerance should always be considered. Certain bond purchases may indeed successfully fill a fixed income need in a portfolio, even in an economy in recovery amidst a rising interest rate environment. Convertible bonds, high yield bonds, senior loans and bank loans are a few to consider. But the traditional 60 percent equities / 40 percent bonds investment ratio that so many investors have utilized for years wasn't designed for this type of environment. Even "Bond King" Bill Gross of PIMCO declared an end to the 30-year bond bull market last year.

Equities are no longer cheap, but they aren't extremely overvalued when compared to what bonds are offering these days. There are always underappreciated companies whose prices haven't risen with the rest of the market.

And because Los Angeles is the "geographical center" for YouTubers, Green said it was an obvious choice for the conference's location.

"I think (online video content) is a huge cultural phenomenon that no one can take credit for or explain or understand," Green said. "We're all just sort of watching it happen and trying to reflect it and ride along with it in the most effective ways we can."

Many VidCon-goers attend the conference primarily to meet and network with their favorite YouTube stars such as Tyler Oakley, whose channel has over 4.6 million subscribers. Oakley, who began his YouTube channel in 2007 as a way to stay in touch with friends, now makes a living as a successful full-time vlogger. He's known as an advocate for LGBT rights, and comments often on politics and pop culture. His YouTube page description reads, "Here you'll find plenty sassiness and beauty and fabulousness!"

"I realized that more and more people were watching," Oakley told the Los Angeles Times in an interview.

"From that, I discovered that YouTube had a community and there were ways to build an audience," he said, "and experience something that was bigger than a fun hobby."

This is his fourth VidCon and his second time as a special guest. Now, Oakley said it's difficult walking around at the convention center without a fan stopping him for a photo, autograph or just to chat.

"Traditional celebrities get that everywhere they go. ... A YouTuber can kind of walk around a bit in everyday life," he said. "But when you take the super fans of all super fans and put them in one convention center, it kind of changes the entire feel of what you do."

its own German arm, O2.

For the merger to go through, Telefonica must sell upfront up to 30 percent of the merged company's network capacity to service providers to boost competition in Germany's mobile market, the EU Commission said.

Telefonica must also sell some assets and improve conditions offered to service providers. Those firms sell mobile phone contracts without having their own network, relying on wholesale agreements with incumbent operators.

The merger will bring together E-Plus, currently Germany's No. 3 operator with about 23 million customers, with O2 — the fourth-biggest with some 19 million customers. The merged company will have a market share of about 30 percent in Germany, the Commission said.

The Commission, which is the 28-nation bloc's antitrust body, in February objected to the deal for fear of weakening competition. But on Wednesday it said the latest set of concessions offered by Telefonica — which are legally binding — will ensure competition won't be harmed.

"Consumers will continue to enjoy the benefits of a competitive market," EU antitrust chief Joaquin Almunia said.

KPN and Telefonica's German arm welcomed the Commission decision, saying they expect the transaction to be finalized by the end of September. Thorsten Dirks, the current chief executive of E-Plus, will become the CEO of the merged company, Telefonica said.

Germany's biggest mobile operator is Deutsche Telekom AG's T-Mobile with 36.6 million customers; Vodafone is second with 33.9 million.

share with a combination of technological innovation and stylish design in what the company claims had been a stagnant sector ripe for change. Part of the strategy is offering higher-end products that aren't as pricey as luxury brands such as Viking, "premium mass-market" appliances that are getting rave reviews and winning industry awards.

"Definitely, the Samsung brand has come a very long way in the past 10 years," said Alan Wolf, a senior editor at TWICE magazine, a trade publication that covers the consumer electronics industry. "Samsung was very focused, very concentrated and very determined."

This year, Samsung, which bills itself as America's fastest-growing appliance company, ratcheted up its product introductions, with its largest launch to date. The company, which believes that its prominence in TVs and cellphones will have a halo effect on consumers for its home appliances, is promoting its new refrigerators and other products with its biggest marketing campaign, run out of Ridgefield Park.

The home appliance debuts include new additions to the Chefs Collection — which incorporates suggestions from members of Samsung's Club des Chefs such as Boulud — and includes a four-door refrigerator with metal cooling plates to prevent temperature fluctuations, and a dishwasher with "Water Wall" technology, a sweeping spray of water that shoots up from the bottom of the appliance and moves back and forth, rather than conventional circular water jets, which can miss cleaning dishes in corners.

"Essentially, we're changing the way that we clean dishes," Kevin Dexter, senior vice president of home appliances for Samsung's U.S. unit, said during his presentation. "Over the years, dishwashers have been trying to fit a round peg in a square hole, or in more technical terms, conventional rotary water jets in a box-shaped dishwasher."

Apart from the Chefs Collection, Samsung has premiered new models of its "Food Showcase" refrigerators, which feature an exterior door for easy access to frequently used food items, such as beverages and large capacity, 30-minute quick-speed washers.

Silicon Valley tech startups find second home in Ireland

HEATHER SOMERVILLE
MCT

Trailing the trans-Atlantic moves of Apple, Intel, Google and Facebook, fledgling Silicon Valley tech startups are opening offices in Ireland.

But Ireland's famously low corporate tax isn't the primary draw for startups — unlike their predecessors — because U.S.-based companies are taxed on their profits, which startups generally do not have. These startups are setting up their first overseas offices hoping the booming tech city of Dublin will become their launch pad to global success.

Dublin looks a lot like home: a young and educated workforce, global business culture, population thirsting for new technology, and Twitter and Facebook signs dotting the horizon. Labor and real estate are cheaper than in other European destination cities and, more than the familiar language or palatable food, the city's tech tenant roster makes Dublin feel comfortable to Silicon Valley transplants.

"It feels a little bit like a mini-San Francisco," said Patrick Moran, chief marketing officer of San Francisco big data software startup New Relic. "All of our startup friends are there."

In February, New Relic opened a Dublin office — the company's first location outside the U.S. — and plans to hire about 50 employees.

"Dublin is the launching point for our European strategy and an essential part of our global expansion plans," said Chris Cook, president and chief operating officer at New Relic.

San Francisco-based Airbnb moved into Dublin last year, as did San Francisco cloud software company Zendesk. And San Francisco file storage and sharing startup Dropbox stepped outside the U.S. for the first time when it opened a Dublin office in early 2013.

More are following: San Francisco-based Yelp announced this month plans to open a 100-person Dublin office, and in April SurveyMonkey from Palo Alto, Calif., unveiled plans for an office in the Irish capital within a year.

"Now what you're seeing is much smaller companies (that) at a very early stage decided they needed a European presence," said Rory Mullen, senior vice president of

JOHN GREEN / MCT

Workers collaborate in one of the open work spaces at New Relic last month in San Francisco.

IDA Ireland in Mountain View, Calif., an organization funded by the Irish government that helps U.S. companies set up operations in Ireland.

These startups are the third wave of tech companies moving to Ireland, which beginning in the 1970s became the destination for Apple, HP, Intel and Dell to establish a European presence, get a tax break and begin expanding into the multinational corporate giants they are today. They were followed by Google, Facebook, Zynga, PayPal, LinkedIn and Salesforce.

In the past several years, tech behemoths have helped transform Dublin's old industrial canal docks into an area the global tech industry coined "Silicon Docks" and groomed the next generation of tech talent, setting up an easy transition for startups to move overseas.

"There are many companies that have ended up there and done well, so it gives you confidence," said Mark Harris, chief financial officer of Malwarebytes, an anti-virus software company in San Jose, Calif., that is preparing to open in Ireland in the next year. "When you're making this type of leap you don't want to feel like you're on your own."

Startups' interest in Dublin has strengthened Silicon Valley's business ties with Ireland: Silicon Valley Bank has invested $50 million into Irish tech- and science-based companies and plans to double that, valley venture firms have opened offices in Ireland, and Silicon Valley VC investments in Irish startups increased 158 percent in the first quarter of this year from the same period in 2013.

Underscoring the growing ties between Ireland and Silicon Valley, Prime Minister Enda Kenny and California Gov. Jerry Brown hosted an event for startups and venture capitalists last month. But the relationship has not been without tension, and Brown at the event called out Apple for storing cash in Ireland to avoid paying U.S. taxes. Ireland's 12.5 percent corporate tax rate is less than half of the maximum U.S. rate of 35 percent. Google and Oracle have also been scrutinized by both U.S. and U.K. government officials for tax maneuvers that help them save billions of dollars. Along with Microsoft and IBM, these tech giants have reported tax rates as low as 4.5 percent on overseas earnings, according to company filings.

But for most startups heading to Ireland, tax breaks will have to wait.

"One of the great myths is that those companies are coming because of our low taxes. Of course that's part of the picture, but it's also about Ireland being English-speaking, having a good business environment, being part of the eurozone," said Brian Caulfield, a partner at venture firm DFJ Esprit in Ireland, which also has a Menlo Park, Calif., location. "A lot of these startups aren't profitable and aren't going to be profitable for a long time."

"There's no place like home...!"

UK investigating Facebook over psych experiment

DANICA KIRKA
Associated Press

LONDON — British data protection authorities are investigating revelations that Facebook conducted a psychological experiment on its users.

The Information Commissioner's Office said in a statement Wednesday that it wants to learn more about the circumstances of the experiment carried out by two U.S. universities and the social network.

The commissioner's office is working with authorities in Ireland, where Facebook has headquarters for its European operations. French authorities are also reviewing the matter.

The researchers manipulated the news feeds of about 700,000 randomly selected users to study the impact of "emotional contagion," or how emotional states are transferred to others. The researchers said the evidence showed that emotional contagion occurs without direct interaction between people and "in the complete absence of nonverbal cues."

Facebook acknowledged that the research was done for a single week in 2012.

The survey provoked an outcry on social media sites and sparked essays in media outlets including the New York Times and The Atlantic about how ethical it is to manipulate users' feeds without their consent.

"It's clear that people were upset by this study and we take responsibility for it," the company said in a statement. "We want to do better in the future and are improving our process based on this feedback. The study was done with appropriate protections for people's information."

"On the other hand, it's extremely understandable that many people are upset that their behavior may have been manipulated for purely scientific purposes without their consent. In particular, Facebook's user base is so wide that everyone wonders if they were in the experiment."

Suzy Moat, Warwick Business School

Facebook's data use policy says the company can use user information for, "internal operations, including troubleshooting, data analysis, testing, research and service improvement."

The concern over the experiment comes amid interest in Europe about beefing up data protection rules. The European Court of Justice last month ruled that Google must respond to users' requests seeking to remove links to personal information.

Suzy Moat, a Warwick Business School assistant professor of behavioral science, said businesses regularly do studies on how to influence behavior.

She cited the example of Facebook and Amazon experimenting with showing different groups of people slightly different versions of their websites to see if one is better than another at getting customers to buy products.

"On the other hand, it's extremely understandable that many people are upset that their behavior may have been manipulated for purely scientific purposes without their consent," Moat said. "In particular, Facebook's user base is so wide that everyone wonders if they were in the experiment."

Birthday girl boldly asks guest to bring a second gift

DEAR ABBY: I am planning to attend a birthday party for my friend "Sophia" who is turning 50. When I mentioned to her that I would be shopping for her birthday gift, she asked that while I was shopping for her, that I also pick up a gift for her friend "Stacy."

I have met Stacy only a couple of times, and I think it was extremely nervy for Sophia to ask me to do it. The party is only for her, and I don't see the connection.

Sophia has done this in the past, and I'm trying to think of a way to tell her I'd rather not buy a gift for her friend. How should I handle this? — NO LONGER A DOORMAT

DEAR NO LONGER A DOORMAT: Tell Sophia with a SMILE that you are not close to Stacy, don't know her taste and do not feel comfortable shopping for her. Smiling when you say it should prevent your refusal from appearing confrontational.

P.S. I agree she had a lot of nerve to ask.

DEAR ABBY: We went out to dinner with another couple. The wives are psychiatric nurses; the husbands are a banker and a business owner. All of us are accustomed to dealing with "sensitive" issues.

A woman at the table next to ours went to the ladies' room. When she returned, a short "train" of toilet paper was caught in the waistband of her slacks. It was very obvious. There was silence, but a palpable "energy," so the woman knew something was amiss and it might have something to do with her. The tissue "floated" with each step, so I knew it wasn't weighed down with moisture.

Because I didn't perceive it to be an imminent public health threat, I joined the silent legion. Did I miss a moral imperative by not letting her know? I didn't know how to do it discreetly. If this should ever happen again, what — if anything — should I do? — MR. MANNERS IN MASSACHUSETTS

JEANNE PHILLIPS

DEAR ABBY

DEAR MR. MANNERS: Imagine if the person with the paper trail was you or your wife. Would you want to know, so that when you got up to leave the restaurant all eyes didn't follow you out? A discreet way to have let the woman know there was a problem would have been for you or your wife to have written her a note, and given it to her server to pass to her. That way, she would know there was a problem with the least amount of embarrassment.

DEAR ABBY: My husband, who is nearing 60, throws plates of food at the wall if he gets upset about something. It is usually minor and totally spontaneous. He then leaves it for me to clean up and won't apologize. I am sick of living with a 60-year-old going on 4. What can I do? — HAD ENOUGH IN ILLINOIS

DEAR HAD ENOUGH: How long have you been tolerating your husband's explosive outbursts of temper? Has he been breaking other things, or raising a hand to you?

There are several things you can do. The first is stop cleaning up after him. Eat separately if you have to. You could also warn him that if he doesn't seek help now for his temper that you have had it. If you need my permission to go, I am giving it to you.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

HOROSCOPES

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, July 6, 2014:

This year you often feel as if you need to make a decision for the group. Pressure to deal with the outside world often conflicts with your personal life. A physical move is a strong possibility. If you are single, you will have an opportunity to stop thinking about a former love. Get to know this new love interest well before getting too involved. If you are attached, the two of you might make a major change on the homefront. Often you have different opinions from each other. Learn how to compromise. SCORPIO absolutely adores you!

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Allow a loved one to steal the stage. You have a strong personality that easily could outshine many people. Be more responsive to a special request without asking too many questions. Just go with the flow for a change.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You could be more practical and direct if you were not so worried about others' responses. Allow someone else to take the lead for a change, and all you'll have to do is simply respond. You could gain a sudden insight into a close loved one.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You might want to start working on a project that you have been putting off for way too long. Loosen up, and enjoy some downtime. A friend easily could surprise you with an offer you can't say "no" to. Verbalize what is on your mind.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You have a tendency to overindulge. A loved one might entice you into going on what he or she deems a fun adventure. Don't make a judgment — just be willing to revise your plans. Spontaneity can add a delightful element to your day.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll make your point easily, especially if you are relaxed. Others won't be too reactive. Zero in on what is important for friends when choosing plans. Someone might let you know exactly what he or she wants from you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll perk up by mid-afternoon. Return calls, and you might be surprised by some of the news you hear. You could feel pressured by someone who wants to feel more secure. A loved one is likely to react in his or her normally quirky way.

JACQUELINE BIGAR

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You might wake up feeling as if you are unstoppable. By midafternoon, some of that exuberance might no longer be present. Relax and enjoy a more easy-going pace. Your sensitivity and openness could make all the difference in an interaction.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You could feel energized in the afternoon, which will bring you out of a funk that has been plaguing you for a while. Reach out to someone at a distance who you care about. Catching up on news and gossip could be fun.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You might have a problem when dealing with someone who wants to control others. You can try to explain that one cannot control others, but if this person is set on using manipulation, then your words are likely to be powerless.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Now that some of the weekend craziness has died down, reach out to a pal you go out with often. Catch up on each other's news. A parent or older relative might be irritated or angry. Return this person's calls as soon as possible.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Reach out to someone who you weren't able to spend time with this weekend. You tend to enjoy this person more than you do others. Your conversation could involve an unexpected twist, so be sure to listen carefully.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Catch up on someone else's news, and make plans to get together very soon. Be willing to indulge a loved one, but be careful, as you could pull the wild card financially. Anything can happen when it comes to money.

Opening lead — six of hearts.

Optimism is certainly an important ingredient in any declarer's makeup, but a positive outlook must always be tempered by an equal degree of pessimism. Without this latter trait, a declarer may all too often blithely plunge ahead and in so doing miss a superior line of play.

For example, take this case where you're in three notrump and win the opening heart lead with the jack. If you are overly optimistic, it would seem automatic to play the queen of diamonds at trick two and finesse. But if you did, you'd quickly go down one, losing four heart tricks and a diamond.

But suppose, before leading a diamond at trick two, you stopped to think about what might happen if East has the king of diamonds. After all, there's about a 50 percent chance that he has that card, and if he does, your chance of making the contract is virtually nil.

The possibility that this might occur should lead you to the correct line of play: At trick two, you cross to dummy's king of clubs, then lead the nine of spades and let it ride. As it happens, the nine loses to West's jack, but no return by him can harm you.

Let's say he shifts to a club. You win in dummy and try another spade finesse. When it succeeds, your mission is accomplished. You can return to dummy with a diamond to repeat the finesse, after which you have nine sure tricks.

By tackling spades instead of diamonds, you raise a 50 percent chance for the contract to about 75 percent — the probability of finding East with either one or both of the missing spade honors.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, July 6, the 187th day of 2014. There are 178 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On July 6, 1944, an estimated 168 people died in a fire that broke out during a performance in the main tent of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus in Hartford, Connecticut. (Among the survivors was future actor Charles Nelson Reilly, then age 13.)

On this date:

In 1483, England's King Richard III was crowned in Westminster Abbey.

In 1535, Sir Thomas More was executed in England for high treason.

In 1777, during the American Revolution, British forces captured Fort Mifflin.

In 1854, the first official meeting of the Republican Party took place in Jackson, Michigan.

In 1917, during World War I, Arab forces led by T.E. Lawrence and Auda Abu Tayi captured the port of Aqaba (AH'-kah-buh) from the Turks.

In 1933, the first All-Star baseball game was played at Chicago's Comiskey Park; the American League defeated the National League, 4-2.

In 1957, Althea Gibson became the first black tennis player to win a Wimbledon singles title as she defeated fellow American Darlene Hard 6-3, 6-2.

In 1964, the movie "A Hard Day's Night," starring The Beatles, had its world premiere in London. The British colony Nyasaland became the independent country of Malawi.

In 1971, jazz trumpeter and singer Louis Armstrong died in New York at age 69.

In 1988, 167 North Sea oil workers were killed when explosions and fires destroyed a drilling platform. Medical waste and other debris began washing up on New York City-area seashores, forcing the closing of several popular beaches.

Walgreens draws criticism after hinting overseas move

AMEET SACHDEV
MCT

The nation's largest drugstore chain is considering a move that would allow it to significantly cut its tax bill and increase profits. But it's being painted by critics as un-American for looking to make money for shareholders through financial engineering at the expense of the communities that it grew up in. Walgreen is considering a so-called corporate tax inversion, in which an American company is able to incorporate abroad by acquiring a foreign company. The buyer, in effect, becomes a subsidiary of a foreign parent.

Walgreen would accomplish an inversion by completing its purchase, which is expected to happen in early 2015, of Switzerland-based Alliance Boots and moving its corporate home to Europe's largest pharmacy chain.

The Deerfield, Ill.-based company faces a tough choice, one in which it must balance profits with corporate social responsibility. By going ahead with an inversion, Walgreen would give ammunition to critics who claim the company is essentially renouncing its U.S. citizenship.

The decision could alienate the consumers who put their confidence in the chain since its inception in 1901, making it one of America's trusted brands.

Millions of people depend on Walgreen to dispense their prescription drugs safely and responsibly. Its more than 8,000 pharmacies are everywhere — one-stop convenience stores where you pick up your Lipitor as well as your lipstick. The company likes to say that 75 percent of the American population lives within five miles of a Walgreens store.

The average person who pays taxes cannot take advantage of the tax loopholes exploited by corporations, and they don't think it's fair, said Klaus Weber, associate professor of management and organizations at Northwestern University's Kellogg School of Management.

"I do think people now more than before care because of rising issues of income inequality and justice and the fact that large companies have come under more scrutiny," Weber said. "People expect corporations to fulfill their citizen duties as taxpayers like everyone else."

While several U.S. companies have moved to lower-tax countries since 2012, Walgreen has caught the attention of taxpayer groups and unions that have criticized the potential tax maneuver. They have blasted Walgreen for contemplating fleeing the United States even though it benefits from government insurance programs. Nearly one-quarter of Walgreen's $72 billion in sales in its last fiscal year came from Medicaid and Medicare, according to a report by Americans for Tax Fairness and Change to Win Retail Initiatives, a union-backed group.

"It is unconscionable that Walgreen is considering this tax dodge — especially in light of the billions of dollars it receives from U.S. taxpayers every year," Nell Geiser, associate director of Change to Win Retail Initiatives, said in a statement. "Walgreen should show its commitment to our communities and our country by staying an American company."

In an inversion, Walgreen would still pay U.S. income taxes but much less than the approximately 37 percent effective tax rate (including state and local taxes) it now pays for its U.S.-based business, corporate tax experts said. One stock analyst estimated that a Walgreen inversion would cost U.S. taxpayers $2.35 billion in the first three years after the transaction.

Illinois Sen. Dick Durbin, without citing Walgreen directly, said he hoped U.S. companies would not pursue such a path. He put his opposition in patriotic terms.

"I am troubled by American corporations that are willing to give up on this country and move their headquarters for a tax break," Durbin, a Democrat, said in an interview. "It really speaks to your commitment."

High-tech firms focusing on energy efficiency to confront climate change

EVAN HALPER
MCT

WASHINGTON — As President Barack Obama pushes ahead on a strategy for confronting climate change that relies heavily on energy efficiency, some Americans may see flashbacks of Jimmy Carter trying to persuade them to wear an extra sweater and turn down the thermostat.

Silicon Valley sees dollar signs.

Long overshadowed by wind turbines, solar panels and other fashionable machines of renewable power, energy efficiency has lately become a hot pursuit for tech entrepreneurs, big-data enthusiasts and Wall Street speculators.

They have leveraged multibillion-dollar programs in several states, led by California and Massachusetts, to cultivate a booming industry. This one-time realm of scolds, do-gooders and bureaucrats has become the stuff of TED talks, IPOs and spirited privacy debates.

"This is not about extra sweaters anymore," said Jon Wellinghoff, a San Francisco lawyer who formerly chaired the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

Power companies are tapping databases to profile intensely the energy use of their customers, the way that firms like Target track customer product choices.

Google Inc. spent $3.2 billion this year to buy Nest Labs, a company that makes thermostats that resemble iPhones and are designed to intuit the needs of their owners. Energy regulators are providing seed capital to startups building such things as waterless laundry machines.

"There was this notion that energy efficiency would never be sexy, never be something people wanted," said Ben Bixby, director of energy products at Nest, which has attracted employees from Apple Inc., Google and Tesla Motors Inc. to its base in Palo Alto, Calif.

"Nest has built this object of desire," he said.

On hot days, Nest's technology enables Southern California Edison to precool the homes of customers before the evening rush.

'Lost' and 'Skins' alum reunite in 'Finding Carter'

By Jacqueline Cutler
© Zap2it

Carter has a fun life. She's 16, and has a mom who ascribes to the BFF form of parenthood.

Then, overnight, she finds she's not Carter, and that cool woman is not her mom.

MTV's compelling new series, "Finding Carter," premiering with a double episode Tuesday, July 8, is that rare drama that appeals to a teen and adult audience. Carter (Kathryn Prescott, "Skins"), was kidnapped as a toddler, and is reunited with her biological family, in the pilot.

The drama opens with Carter (Kathryn Prescott, "Skins") enjoying frozen yogurt with her mom, Lori (Milena Govich), who looks as if she's trying hard to look a little younger than she is.

They had just enjoyed their night out and Lori urges Carter to go out with her friends. She does and the group of teens break into an amusement park, turn on the rides, drink, and what a shock — attract the attention of the police.

They're thrown into lock-up and it's Carter who reassures her friends that they will all go home with their parents and a warning. Sure enough, they do. But not her.

While being held, it comes to light that Carter is actually Lyndon, who was 3 when she was kidnapped from her front yard. Her biological parents arrive to claim her.

Kathryn Prescott stars in "Finding Carter," premiering Tuesday on MTV.

All of this is news to Carter, who does not seem to have memories of her early life.

"What struck me about the show, mostly, was that it was based around a young girl," Prescott says. "The main story line was not her relationship to a man. And I know that sounds really simple. As much TV as you watch, the female characters are very linked to the male characters. This is a show that really is about a young girl and her relationship to her mother and it is not because of her relationship to a man in the show."

SUNDAY'S BEST BETS

Dylan Walsh

3 p.m. on 20 28 2014 Wimbledon Championships

A men's singles champion will be crowned today at Centre Court of London's All-England Club as the Wimbledon Championships wrap up after two weeks of stellar tennis on grass. Last year, Andy Murray became the first U.K. player in 77 years to come away with the men's title by defeating Novak Djokovic in straight sets in the final, 6-4, 7-5, 6-4.

9 p.m. on 6 10 Reckless

A custody battle keeps Jamie and Roy (Anna Wood, Cam Gigandet) courtroom opponents in the new episode "Parting Shots." Neither lawyer is prepared for the dangerous turn the case ultimately takes. Roy faces an additional dilemma involving missing footage from the sex tape that implicates some police officers. Vanessa Bell Calloway, Sunny Mabrey and Michael Landes guest star.

9 p.m. on (TNT) The Last Ship

In the new episode "Dead Reckoning," it's out of the frying pan and into the fire for the crew of the Nathan James, as they escape the complex at Guantanamo, only to find themselves in the gun sites of a Russian war ship with nuclear missiles. Its commander issues a terse ultimatum to Chandler (Eric Dane): Turn over Rachel (Rhona Mitra) and the primordial strain of the virus or be blown to smithereens.

10 p.m. on 6 10 Unforgettable

Why didn't a boxing champ put up any defense against whoever beat him to death? Carrie and Al (Poppy Montgomery, Dylan Walsh) are perplexed by the question in the new episode "The Combination." The detectives delve into the victim's past to determine why it apparently was made so easy for the killer. Jane Curtin and Dallas Roberts also star.

LEADING EDGE DENTAL!

All Aspects of Dentistry in one Friendly Location Specializing in Seniors

Proudly celebrating 20 YEARS in Leesburg.

- IV Sedation
(Sleep through your dental work)
- Extractions
- Immediate Dentures
- Implants

I have suffered with teeth problems all of my adult life.

As a result I have had several procedures over the years, all of which were to be the "final correction", to my problems and none were.

December 2002, after consulting with Dr. Vaziri he suggested implants as a method of securing my lower plate. I agreed to the procedure and we started the process that day, and now 12 years later I can say my problem has been solved. I am without problems eating, talking and have learned to enjoy life again. This was the "Best" dental decision I have ever made, I only wish this option was given years ago.

Family of eccentrics takes law into own hands in NBC's 'Engels'

Andrea Martin stars in "Working the Engels," premiering Thursday on NBC.

By George Dickie
© Zap2it

With the stateside success of such Canadian-made series as "Rookie Blue," "Love It or List It" and "Top Chef Canada," NBC hopes to catch summer lightning in a bottle with another import from north of the border, "Working the Engels."

The half-hour sitcom, which premieres Thursday, July 10, stars Kacey Rohl ("The Killing," "Red Riding Hood") as Jenna, a young lawyer who inherits her father's legal practice upon his death.

It turns out, though, that Dad wasn't great at paying the bills, as the practice is $200,000 in debt, so Jenna and the rest of her clan come together to rescue it from the brink.

That cast of ne'er-do-wells and crazies is composed of Ceil (Andrea Martin, "SCTV," "My Big Fat Greek Wedding"), the overly dramatic, slightly narcissistic mother hen who works as the firm's paralegal; Sandy (Azura Skye, "Zoe," "Jack and Jane"), the slacking ex-druggie sister who takes over as the receptionist; and Jimmy (Benjamin Arthur, Canada's "Less Than Kind," "American Reunion"), the career petty criminal whose street smarts come in handy as the investigator.

Katie Ford ("Desperate Housewives," "Miss Congeniality"), an executive producer who created the series with sister Jane Cooper Ford, explains she originally pitched the series to the American networks as an hour procedural, but wound up retooling it to a comedy after getting laughs at the pitch.

"It was sort of a light drama with the idea that it was really character-based with these fun, rich characters," she says. "That's what really stayed with me and that was what felt the most fun. I didn't know what I was talking about in terms of pitching a procedural, but the rest of it really kind of came to life.

"One of the weird sort of inspirations for it, oddly, some time ago was 'Dog the Bounty Hunter,'" she continues. "Because to me that was like the only family that was working together, and all they did was smoke and pray, but I found it compelling to watch them. So I thought that'd be fun to actually take that, a family working together, and put that in a narrative."

Jenna, the central character, is the glue of the Engels, someone whom Rohl describes as the "only one who has her feet on the ground."

"She is the rock, I think, that everybody uses to help themselves stand up when they're in various states of whatever," she says. "But she's definitely the only one with a solid head on her shoulders and the only one who sort of thinks logically and practically. And yeah, she does hold everybody together. I think she's the pillar that everybody holds onto."

While Jenna is the pillar, her mother, Ceil, thinks she is. Though her portrayer, Martin, says there's nothing she wouldn't do for her kids.

"I think that she lives through her children," Martin says. "I think that she's slightly in denial about her own abilities. I think there is a bit of narcissism but I don't think that that comes first. I think the love for her family — and family — comes first. But of course, she has her own eccentricities, and probably her husband pampered her a little bit. So now she's in the world without much purpose. He's gone, the kids are grown ... Freud said there's two things in the world: love and work. And now she's able to combine both of them in 'Working the Engels,' so it seems for Ceil it's everything."

"What I love that Andrea brought to this character," Ford says, "is she brought a warmth. I mean, the character Ceil has a warmth and loves her kids. And like she says in the pilot, 'I'm like a bull in a candy store when it comes to my kids.' I mean, it's all about them. And Andrea brought this sort of warmth and support. Like we would have a couple of lines where we would have Ceil kind of dismiss Sandy or dismiss Jimmy in some way. But Andrea always turns those lines around to make them supportive, and it actually made it funnier.

"And Andrea's such a wonderful actress," Ford continues. "I love how she approaches everything from finding the truth of it and from there it can get ridiculous. And I think that's part of what is the glue of this show, is kind of the truth of moments and the humor that sort of keeps a family connected."

Rohl, also a Martin fan, agrees.

"I can't speak for her," she says, "but I don't think she's ever been a real fan of that sort of cut down, laugh-at-someone comedy. And I think that affected the tone of our show in a really great way."

Mike Vogel

9 p.m. on 13 35 51
24: Live Another Day

The clock has almost run out again on Jack Bauer (Kiefer Sutherland). "Day 9: 9:00 PM — 10:00 PM," the next-to-last episode of the new miniseries, finds him trying to stop a global cataclysm along with Kate and Boudreau (Yvonne Strahovski, Tate Donovan). Audrey (Kim Raver) goes her own way in striving to achieve the same result, literally attempting diplomacy to prevent the unthinkable from happening.

10 p.m. on 6 10
Under the Dome

Butterfly eggs sitting atop much of the Chester's Mill food supply is probably not a good thing. Rebecca and Barbie (Karla Crome, Mike Vogel) take action to save the town's nourishment in the new episode "Infestation." The situation ultimately poses a life-or-death threat to Barbie. Rachelle Lefevre, Dean Norris, Eddie Cahill and Britt Robertson also star.

Jacky Ido

8 p.m. on 18 44

iHeartRadio Ultimate Pool Party

Indeed, it is the season for pool parties — including this musically inclined one. Nick Cannon presides at the Fontainebleau Miami Beach as Jennifer Lopez, Ariana Grande and Neon Trees are among this new special's performers. The CW also uses the occasion to promote one of its new fall series, since actresses Gina Rodriguez and Andrea Navedo of the forthcoming "Jane the Virgin" are on hand as well.

The Goldbergs

When jewelry belonging to Beverly's (Wendi McClendon-Covey) mother goes missing, Adam (Sean Giambrone) begins a search in "Goldbergs Never Say Die." Obsessed with "The Goonies," he launches a treasure hunt like the one in the movie. His siblings (Troy Gentile, Hayley Orrantia) and some friends (Jacob Hopkins, Stephanie Katherine Grant, Natalie Alyn Lind) join in.

10 p.m. on (FX)

The Bridge

The critically acclaimed but ratings-challenged crime drama returns for its second season with "Yankee," in which Sonya (Diane Kruger) encounters a man from her past and Marco (Demian Bichir) discovers to his dismay that he isn't safe any longer in his own department.

10:01 p.m. on 2 8

Taxi Brooklyn

Cat (Chyler Leigh) comes to Leo's (Jacky Ido) rescue when he runs into immigration trouble in the new episode "Cherchez les Femmes." That's not his only problem, though: He also has to deal with the murder of a friend, a Holocaust survivor. The investigation of the death leads to another shock, since an underworld family with a link to Cat apparently is involved.

CELEBRITY PIPELINE

Details of Zee big day for 'GMA' weathercaster

By Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

Q: I missed the details of Ginger Zee's wedding. When and where did she get married?
— Erin Collins, Bend, Ore.

A: The weekday meteorologist on ABC's "Good Morning America" tied the knot with Ben Aaron — a reporter for New York's WNBC-TV — in her native Michigan on June 7. The occasion was relatively intimate, with only 55 guests.

Q: I was saddened to learn of the death of Maya Angelou. In reading about her, I saw that there was a TV-movie version of "I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings." What can you tell me about it? — Ellen Clark, Columbus, Ohio

A: Inspired by a traumatic period early in Angelou's life, the drama first aired in 1979 with Constance Good as Maya, surrounded by a very impressive cast of actresses — Diahann Carroll, Esther Rolle, Madge Sinclair and Ruby Dee (who, sadly, passed away last month not long after Angelou).

Q: It seemed odd to me that Clint Eastwood was among the presenters at the Tony Awards when he's not involved in Broadway. What was the reasoning? — Pete Davis, Pawtucket, R.I.

A: It's pretty simple. The screen icon is the director of the current movie version of "Jersey Boys," the story of pop music's Four Seasons that is one of the longest-running musicals on the Great White Way ... the 13th longest, in fact, as of April.

The stage show was expected to get a considerable box-office bump from the release of the film. Having Eastwood on the Tonys was largely in service of that — and also to remind an audience that would be attuned to anything Broadway-related that the movie was coming.

CELEBRITY SCOOP

Checking in with Greg Poehler

By Kate O'Hare and John Crook
© Zap2it

Art imitates life in "Welcome to Sweden," a new NBC sitcom premiering Thursday, July 10. Its creator and star, Greg Poehler (kid brother to Amy), saw the show as a valentine to his adopted home country, where he lives nowadays with his family.

Like Poehler himself, the show's main character, celebrity accountant Bruce Evans, meets and falls in love with Swedish beauty Emma Wiik (Josephine Bornebusch, also one of the sitcom's writers) while working in New York. When Emma decides to return to her native Stockholm to accept a major banking job, Bruce impetuously decides to chuck his career in America and make a fresh start in Sweden.

What follows is an engaging fish-out-of-water romantic comedy, as Bruce tries to adjust to the cultural, culinary and linguistic challenges his new life presents.

"There are both American and Swedish writers on the show, and when we were writing the show we always were thinking of selling it in both (Sweden and America)," Poehler explains, "so whenever there was a joke that too American or too Swedish, we just got rid of it. The goal was to find the universality in the humor, to find things that everyone could relate to. ... In order for the show to work, we needed to make Bruce and Emma almost the straight man and woman with the craziness around them."

Apart from Poehler and guest cameos from sister Amy Poehler, Aubrey Plaza, Patrick Duffy, Will Ferrell and Gene Simmons, among others, "Welcome to Sweden" features an almost completely Swedish cast headed by Lena Olin ("Alias") as Emma's acerbic mother. Since Bruce proves fairly hopeless at learning Swedish, however, the other characters usually speak English around him, although a few brief scenes are performed in Swedish with English subtitles, usually for comic effect.

Born: Oct. 11, 1974, in Burlington, Mass.

Family ties: Married to wife, Charlotta Poehler, with whom he moved to Sweden in 2006. They live near Stockholm with their three children.

Education: Fordham University School of Law; Boston College, Burlington High School, Stockholm University.

THURSDAY'S BEST BETS

Josephine Bornebusch

8 p.m. on 20 23

Black Box

Believing he's already dead, a patient submits to tests in the new episode "I Shall Be Released." Several doctors fail to diagnose a young woman's apparent meningitis correctly. Catherine (Kelly Reilly) comes forth with surprising honesty after Will accuses her of keeping information from him.

9:01 p.m. on 2 3

Welcome to Sweden

It's appropriate that this new sitcom had its premiere in — where else? — Sweden ahead of its U.S. debut. Greg Koirala, brother of Amy (an executive producer here), mirrors his real-life experience by playing a man who moves overseas to be with his true love (Josephine Bornebusch). In "Day One/Valkommen," the culture shock is immediate for him, heightened by the fact that the couple has to live with her family.

FRIDAY'S BEST BETS

Bridget Moynahan

8 p.m. on 18 44

Whose Line Is It Anyway?

Can Mini-Me maximize his improvisation skills? The answer is evident in this episode as Verne Troyer — alias the diminutive sidekick to Mike Myers' Dr. Evil in the "Austin Powers" spy-spoof movies — makes a guest appearance. So does comic Nyima Funk, teaming with regular players Wayne Brady, Colin Mochrie and Ryan Stiles in bringing the studio audience's comedic suggestions to life. Aisha Tyler is the host.

9 p.m. on (TNT)

Cold Justice

In the new episode "Kirby's Speed Shop (Columbus, OH)," ex-prosecutor Kelly Siegler and former crime-scene investigator Yolanda McClary head to Columbus, Ga., for their latest cold case, sifting through evidence they hope may point them toward the identity of the person who double-crossed a popular local auto mechanic, who was fatally shot in his own shop.

9 p.m. on (TRAV)

Monumental Mysteries

In a new episode, history explorer Don Wildman travels to Brookline, Vt., to visit the famous Round Schoolhouse built in 1821 by resident scholar Dr. John Wilson, who — his pupils were astonished to learn after his death — had previously been a notorious Scottish highwayman known as Captain Thunderbolt. Don also revisits the stirring David-and-Goliath saga of the newsboys of New York.

10 p.m. on 6 10

Blue Bloods

Erin and ex-husband Jack (Bridget Moynahan, guest star Peter Hermann) are in peril together as courtroom hostages in "To Protect and Serve." They're held at gunpoint by a murder suspect (guest star Armando Riesco) as Danny (Donnie Wahlberg) tries to negotiate the captives' release. A worried Frank (Tom Selleck) monitors the situation, and also decides not to intervene when Jamie (Will Estes) is suspended for disobeying a commanding officer.

Halle Berry returns from space with a surprise in 'Extant'

By Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

Halle Berry doesn't say "yes" to television work every day, but Steven Spielberg is a powerful lure.

The Oscar-winning actress stars in the executive producer's home-screen latest project as CBS debuts the sci-fi thriller series "Extant" Wednesday, July 9. No one connected to the show seems to mind any thematic references to last year's Oscar-winning movie "Gravity" as Berry plays another woman in space, this one newly returned home from a yearlong solo mission ... but with a very unexpected development.

She discovers she's pregnant, and if she's confounded by the news, so are loved ones including her husband (Goran Visnjic, "ER") and a doctor friend (Camryn Manheim, "The Practice"). Also factoring into the story is the married couple's humanoid son (Pierce Gagnon), who's at the crux of a scientific debate over what constitutes a soul.

Michael O'Neill ("Bates Motel"), Hiroyuki Sanada, Annie Wersching ("24") and Meryl Streep's daughter Grace Gummer ("The Newsroom") are among other "Extant" cast members.

"I'm a fan of sci-fi, but I'm even more a fan of Steven Spielberg sci-fi, which is more supernatural," Berry explains. "I love that this show is rooted solidly in strong characters before you get into the otherworldly aspects. You first get to know this family, and I think it's a beautiful set-up for what's to come as we get further and further into the series."

Indeed, "Extant" is based on Earth for a number of its initial scenes before the first flashback-cued sighting of a space station. Berry deems her character, Molly, "an everyday woman. Sure, she has an extraordinary job — I'm not suggesting that people go into space in a pedestrian way — but at the end of the day, she's fighting for what every woman would fight for, and that's her baby. No matter what that is, it's hers, and it's part of her."

Halle Berry stars in the premiere of the sci-fi-thriller series "Extant" Wednesday on CBS.

"Extant" was created by another of the series' executive producers, Mickey Fisher, who had written the pilot simply on spec. He acknowledges that the success Spielberg, his Amblin Television firm and CBS had with "Under the Dome" last summer "really opened the door for us. I'd carried the idea around in my head in different versions; at one point, it was going to be a one-person play. Then about three years ago, I moved out to L.A. go try to break into TV, and I did the thing they always tell you to do as a writer: 'Write the show that you would want to watch.'"

Enter Spielberg, who became a patron of "Extant" early on. "Even just the possibility that he would read it at all," Fisher reflects, "that the most successful filmmaker of all time was going to read something I wrote, that in and of itself is a surreal thought. Then to hear that he liked it and that it was going forward ... I tell people that I sat and stared at a wall for 15 minutes, trying to wrap my head around it."

2014 Tour de France

Stage 8 brings the riders through varied terrain as "Le Tour" winds its way through the countryside of eastern France. Breakaway artists will certainly have the advantage on an 80-mile flat stretch that opens the stage, while the climbers should come to the fore in the Vosges Mountains, where grades of 10 to 15 percent are not uncommon. The field for this year's race includes Nairo Quintana, Alberto Contador and defending champion Chris Froome.

Movie: Presumed Dead in Paradise

After her father's death years ago, rebellious teenager Madison drifted away from her aloof step-mother, Patricia, moving from one boarding school to another. When Patricia suddenly reappears in her life, suggesting that the two of them vacation on a remote island where the family stayed in happier times, Madison is understandably wary, yet holds out hope for rebuilding broken family ties. Patricia, as the savvy viewer quickly will figure out, has other plans, however. Malese Jow ("The Vampire Diaries"), Olivia d'Abo and Gavin Houston star.

The Blacklist

When a well-known prosecutor resurfaces after having been missing for 12 years, Red (James Spader) suspects the man was a target of Ruth Kipling (guest star Dianne Wiest), aka The Judge. She reportedly runs an underground court to punish people responsible for wrongfully convicting others. Another woman in Red's sights is the one coming on to Tom (Ryan Eggold) while he's in Florida at a conference. Megan Boone also stars in "The Judge."
