A look back at Trump's first year

President on his goals: Yes on tax cuts, but where's the wall?

By Calvin Woodward and Jill Colvin
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump often brags that he's done more in his first year in office than any other president. That's a spectacular stretch.

But while he's fallen short on many measures and has a strikingly thin legislative record, Trump has followed through on dozens of his campaign promises, overhauling the country's tax system, changing the U.S. posture abroad and upending the lives of hundreds of thousands of immigrants.

A year in, Trump is no closer to making Mexico pay for a border wall than when he made supporters swoon with that promise at those rollicking campaign rallies of 2016.

He's run into legislative roadblocks — from fellow Republicans, no less — at big moments, which is why the Obama-era health law survives, wounded but still insuring millions. His own administration's sloppy start explains why none of the laws he pledged to sign in his first 100 days came to reality then and why most are still aspirational.

Nevertheless, Trump has nailed the tax overhaul, his only historic legislative accomplishment to date, won confirmation of a conservative Supreme Court justice and other federal judges, and used his executive powers with vigor to slice regulations and pull the U.S. away from international accords he assailed as a candidate.

Poor Leesburg High graduation rate overshadows gains countywide

By Carlos E. Medina

LEESBURG — It was a mixed bag for Lake County Schools after the state released high school graduation rates for Florida last week.

While seven of the nine high school programs in the county graduated a higher percentage of students in 2016-17, a steep decline at one school dragged the countywide graduation rate lower than the prior year. The drop also widened the gap between the county's average graduation rate and the state's average, which rose again this year.

Leesburg High School's graduation rate dropped from 75.5 percent in 2015-16 to 67.1 percent.

The 8.4 percent drop was by

"It is a significant drop. The concerns were evident and that's why that administration is no longer with us. We're seeing the effects of that administration still lingering. There is not a doubt in my mind that we will see a significant increase at Leesburg," said Stephanie Luke, Lake County School Board chairwoman.

Medicaid changes bring uncertainty

By Andrew DeMillo and Gretchen Ehlike
The Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Republicans this past week began to realize their long-held goal of requiring certain adults to work, get job training or perform community service in exchange for getting health coverage through Medicaid.

Whether that's a commonsense approach or an added burden that will end up costing many Americans their health insurance will now be debated in states across the country considering the landmark change to the nation's largest health insurance program.

To Medicaid recipients such as Thomas J. Penister of Milwaukee, it's created uncertainty about their ability to have health coverage.

He's been unemployed for the last four or five years and has received Medicaid for the past two. He sees a behavioral health specialist to deal with anxiety and said Medicaid has made a big difference in his life.

Leaders: Trump is at odds with MLK's legacy

By Errin Haines Whack
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — The first Martin Luther King Jr. holiday of Donald Trump's presidency is taking place amid a racial firestorm of Trump's own making.

In the same week that he honored King by making a national park out of the ground where King was born and preached until his death, Trump denigrated practically the entire African diaspora, and left many Americans headed into the civil rights icon's birthday convinced that the leader of their country is a racist.

For African-Americans in particular, this latest insult from Trump felt like whiplash. Barely a year ago, America's first black president, Barack Obama, marked his final King Day in office with his usual community service; now, his successor is presiding over a racial backlash the country has hardly seen in more than a generation.

Trump has denied being racist, labeling himself the "least racist person there is" during his 2016

LONDON Reports: London's Harrods to remove Diana memorial

Harrods, the luxury London department store and tourist destination, is reportedly planning to remove a memorial to Princess Diana and Dodi Fayed.

British media, including The Times and the BBC, reported Saturday that the bronze statue will be returned to Dodi's father, Mohammed Al Fayed, the Egyptian tycoon who previously owned Harrods.

The businessman commissioned the bronze statue depicting his son and Diana dancing after the two were killed in a Paris car crash in 1997.

WEST CHESTER, OHIO Man holding boy hostage, firing at officers near Cincinnati

Authorities outside Cincinnati say a man is holding a 10-year-old boy hostage at an apartment complex and has been shooting at officers and their vehicles.

Butler County Sheriff Richard Jones says no one has been hurt since the hostage situation began early Saturday after midnight.

He says there was an altercation inside an apartment and that a man who doesn't live there stayed behind with the boy.

The sheriff says the man isn't related to the boy.

'This is not happening today'

Hawaii officials mistakenly warn of inbound missile

By Audrey McAvooy and Jennifer Kelleher

The Associated Press

HONOLULU — A push alert that warned of a ballistic missile heading straight for Hawaii and sent residents into a full-blown panic Saturday was issued by mistake, state emergency officials said.

The emergency alert, which was sent to cellphones just before 8:10 a.m., said in all caps, "Ballistic missile threat inbound to Hawaii. Seek immediate shelter. This is not a drill." The Hawaii Emergency Management Agency tweeted that there was no threat about 10 minutes later. But a revised push alert stating there was no threat went out sometime after that.

Agency spokesman Richard Repoza confirmed it was a false alarm and the agency is trying to determine what happened.

The incident prompted defense agencies including the Pentagon and the U.S. Pacific Command to issue the same statement, that they had "detected no ballistic missile threat to Hawaii."

Michael Kucharek, spokesman for the North American Aerospace Defense Command in Colorado Springs, Colorado, said NORAD and the U.S. Northern Command are still trying to verify what happened in Hawaii — but that "NORAD did not see anything that indicated any sort of threat to Hawaii."

NORAD is a U.S.-Canada joint command that conducts aerospace warning, aerospace control and maritime warning to defend North America.

The White House said President Donald Trump, who is in Florida, was briefed on the false alert. White House spokeswoman Lindsay Walters said it "was purely a state exercise."

The alert caused a tizzy on the island and across social media.

At the PGA Tour's Sony Open on Oahu, Waialae Country Club was largely empty and players were still a few hours from arriving when the alert showed up. The tournament staff urged the media center to evacuate. A local radio show from the clubhouse, next to glass windows that overlook the Pacific, kept broadcasting. Staff members at the club streamed into the clubhouse and tried to seek cover in the locker room, which was filled with the players' golf bags, but instead went into the kitchen.

Several players took to Twitter.

"Just woke up here in Hawaii to this lovely text. Somebody can verify this?" tweeted Emiliano Grillo of Argentina.

Justin Thomas, the PGA Tour player of the year, tweeted, "To all that just received the warning along with me this morning ... apparently it was a 'mistake'?? hell of a mistake!! Haha glad to know we'll all be safe."

In Honolulu, Jaime Malapit, owner of a hair salon, texted his clients that he was cancelling their appointments and was closing his shop for the day. He said he was still in bed when the phone started going off "like crazy." He thought it was a tsunami warning at first.

"I woke up and saw a missile warning and thought 'no way.' I thought 'No, this is not happening today,'" Malapit said.

He was still "a little freaked out" and feeling paranoid even after hearing it was a false alarm.

Richard Ing, a Honolulu attorney, was doing a construction project at home when his wife told him about the alert.

He dug his phone out and had confirmed he had the same alert. Attempts to find further information on the television or radio didn't provide further information, but then he saw on Twitter that it was a false alarm.

While he was trying to confirm, his wife and children were preparing to evacuate in case they needed to move to safer ground.

After finding out it was a mistake, Ing tried to find some humor in the situation.

"I thought to myself, it must be someone's last day at work or someone got extremely upset at a superior and basically did this as a practical joke," he said. "But I think it's a very serious problem if it wasn't that, or even it was, it shows that we have problems in the system that can cause major disruption and panic and anxiety among people in Hawaii."

Others were outraged that such an alert could go out in error.

Hawaii U.S. Sen. Brian Schatz tweeted the false alarm was "totally inexcusable" and was caused by human error.

"There needs to be tough and quick accountability and a fixed process," he wrote.

Federal Communications Commission Chairman Ajit Pai also took to social media to announce the panel would launch an investigation.

Force main break causes spill of treated water effluent

There was a 30,000 gallon spill of treated water effluent Thursday night at the Cutrale Citrus Juice USA plant, according to the Florida Department of Environmental Protection.

The 10 p.m. accident was caused by a force main break, according to the state notice. The effluent leaked onto Bentley Road and swale. Repairs are underway.

DELAND
Man, 61, killed in DeLand accident Friday identified

The Florida Highway Patrol has identified the name of the man killed Friday in an accident on County Road 42 in Lake Mack Forest Hills east of DeLand.

Donald Styer, 61, of DeLand, died in the 3:15 p.m. accident when he turned left off CR 42 into the path of another vehicle.

Styer was westbound in his 2005 Dodge van and was turning onto Third Street. Loren Dunton of Orange City was heading east in his 2005 Jeep when the front of his vehicle struck the side of the van. The accident is still under investigation.

TAMARAC
Officials: Florida man shoots man breaking into cars

Florida authorities say a man shot and killed a person he says had tried to break into his car.

The Broward Sheriff's Office said in a statement that the homeowner was walking his dog and saw the suspect walking around the neighborhood burglarizing other cars early Saturday in Tamarac, northwest of Fort Lauderdale. He watched him approach his home and try to steal from his vehicle.

The homeowner was armed and confronted the burglar. Officials said there was an altercation between the two men before the homeowner fired the weapon.

Local media identified the dead man as 22-year-old Walder Saintelus.

They identified the other man as 64-year-old Frank Johnston.

The suspect was taken to a nearby hospital and pronounced dead there.

MOUNT DORA — Wawa is one step closer to a grand opening celebration in Mount Dora, a location the company has been working to secure since early 2017.

The property — 1.25 acres at the corner of U.S. Highway 441 and Morningside Drive — was annexed and rezoned commercial by Mount Dora City Council members in March and as of Dec. 20, 2017 the Planning and Zoning Commission has given Wawa's site plan final approval.

"In the near future, Wawa will start building the site," said Mount Dora's Interim Planning Director Vince Sandersfeld on Friday. "That approval allows construction to start on the building and

National champs, sidewalk strategy and Powerball dreams

Editor's Note: This is the inaugural edition of Notes & Quotes, a weekly peek at odd, funny and poignant moments stuck somewhere in the notebooks of our reporters

This year's College Football Playoff National Championship was a duel between the University of Alabama and the University of Georgia. But for some, the "national champions" were already crowned.

The case for the University of Central Florida, which ended the season undefeated, gained traction across Florida. Surprise.

Parades, proclamations and even trophies declared them champs.

At the Lake County School Board meeting on Jan. 8 — the same evening as the official championship game — School Board Chairwoman Stephanie Luke used her titular post to sneak in one more UCF claim on the crown.

"I can't let this opportunity go. I just want to say, everybody, enjoy the game tonight, but I think everybody here knows who the real national champion is. Right, Mr. Dodd? Oh, UCF? Oh, yes. Go, Knights. Meeting adjourned!" Luke said, pounding the gavel and ending the on-the-record proceedings.

Luke, a UCF graduate, targeted fellow board member Marc Dodd, a University of Florida alumnus, to taunt him over the Gators less than stellar season and past crowing about Florida's three national championships.

By the way, Alabama — which claims its fair share of dubious national titles — won the game.

2 charged in Ocala bank robbery

Suspects, both from Wildwood, nabbed less than 1 hour after heist

By Austin L. Miller
Gatehouse Media

Ocala police officers quickly arrested two men in connection with a Friday afternoon bank robbery.

The suspects, both from Wildwood, have been identified as 65-year-old Sidney Sussman and Errol Denard Perry, 50.

According to Detective Brandon Sirolli's report, at 2:23 p.m. Friday police received a call that the Bank of America at 1120 SE 17th St. had been robbed.

A short time later, officers found a maroon Honda Accord parked at the Fortune Food Mart, which is in the 1600 block of South Pine Avenue. Two men, later identified as Sussman and Perry, were in the vehicle. Officers detained both men. Inside the vehicle police found a large amount of money on the passenger floor board.

The teller told police a man wearing a dark hooded sweater entered the bank and handed her a note. The note read, "I have a weapon, cooperate and no one gets hurt ... $100 $50 $20 no dye pack ..."

The teller gave the robber money and he fled.

Sussman denied knowing anything about Perry robbing the bank. He said Perry told him to go to the bank so he could cash a check. He said Perry quickly came out of the bank and told him to "get the hell out of here," according to the report. He said Perry had a large amount of cash.

Sussman said that as they were leaving, he saw multiple police officers arriving. Asked what he thought, he said he believed that Perry robbed the bank. He said he would not turn in Perry because Perry was his friend.

Perry reportedly told investigators he robbed the bank because he owed a drug dealer $20,000. He said he did not have a weapon during the robbery. The men received less than $2,000 from the robbery, officials said.

Clifford C. Purner

Clifford C. Purner, 87, died peacefully December 7, 2017 in Tavares. Predeceased by father Clifford C. Purner, mother Ethlyn, sister Gloria (Thomas) and wife Betty. Survivors include sisters Patricia Hammond (Jim) and John Ross, their daughters Alice Papenberg, sons David Purner (Lisa), Mark Purner, Clifford C. Purner Jr., several grandchildren, nieces and nephews and 1 great grandchild, and his fiancée Jane Rogers. Cliff served in the Army (Paratrooper) during the Korean Conflict. He learned well drilling from his father, then started his own business, piloted his own plane (for work and weekend golf). Cliff invented the Purner pump puller, a hydraulic machine which cut down on labor. He was awarded the 1st place prize in equipment category by the National Well Drillers Assoc. After retiring, Cliff built a home on Lake Eustis. He and Betty later moved to Fox Run, joined the Boat Club and he helped build the barge used to keep the canal clean. In later years he learned to paint, especially sea scapes and invented a new way of lighting paintings. Cliff was a friendly and helpful neighbor with a good sense of humor and will be missed by us all. A memorial service will be held at 2:00PM Saturday January 20, 2018 at the First United Methodist Church in the UMAC building past the large church and large parking lot. Memorial donations may be made to the Church at 600 W. Ianthe St., Tavares, FL 32778 or Cornerstone Hospice, 2445 Lane Park Rd. Tavares, FL 32778.

How to Make Government Work

On Jan. 10, Lake County School Board member Bill Mathias was at Pine Ridge Elementary School for the grand opening of new sidewalks along County Road 561 in Clermont. Pine Ridge third, fourth and fifth graders helped push for the sidewalks.

The students, many of whom are now in middle school, pleaded their case for the sidewalks before numerous Lake County government boards. The sidewalks would make it safer for them to walk or bike to school, they argued. It took three years, but their efforts paid off. During a conversation at the event between Mathias and Lake County Commission Chairman Tim Sullivan, Mathias said the children's pleas were powerful. He noted how professional and well researched their presentation was, as he and Sullivan looked over a model showing the unpaved paths the children had to take to get to school. Sullivan also remembered how impressed he was. But what sealed the deal for Mathias was the kids' sweet and child-like excitement about the project.

"Our takeaway is if you want to get something done, you bring the kids before the commission. We can't resist them," Mathias said.

Recently, the Powerball jackpot topped $570 million, stoking millionaire dreams across the nation. After an impressive win by The Villages Charter School's Lady Buffalo over Mount Dora on Jan. 5, girls basketball coach Bill Hodges was feeling lucky. "After I win the lottery, I'm going to buy cars for all my girls. That's not illegal in high school," he said. His dreams fell apart after a single winning ticket sold in New Hampshire on Jan. 6.

Girl Scouts join fight over bridge

Scouting group hires lobbyist to get suspension bridge renamed after founder

By Russ Bynum
The Associated Press

SAVANNAH, Ga. — Lawmakers can expect face-to-face meetings with Girl Scouts from across Georgia next month at the state Capitol, where the young scouts plan on treating legislators to a milk- and-cookie reception.

These girls bearing gifts of Thin Mints and Samoas will also come packing an agenda. They want to see Savannah's towering suspension bridge renamed in honor of Juliette Gordon Low, who founded the Girl Scouts in the coastal Georgia city more than a century ago.

The Girl Scouts saw an opening last fall when Savannah's city council formally asked state lawmakers during their 2018 session to strip the name of segregationist former Gov. Eugene Talmadge from the bridge. Georgia scouts are getting support from the Girl Scouts' national headquarters in New York, which has hired a lobbyist to help sway lawmakers in Atlanta.

Rep. Ron Stephens, a Republican from Savannah, is on board with the switch. He said he plans to introduce a bill on Feb. 6, when Girl Scout leaders plan to bring as many as 300 scouts to the Capitol.

"I can't think of a name that could go on the bridge at the Savannah River that would mean more," Stephens said of Low, though he's not optimistic fellow lawmakers will agree if that means rescinding an honor bestowed on a former governor. "My opinion is chances of passage are slim to none."

Since 1956, the span crossing the Savannah River at the Georgia-South Carolina line has been named for Talmadge, a populist Democrat who served three terms between 1933 and 1942. Talmadge railed against the New Deal for offering blacks with whites. He defended whites-only primary elections in Georgia. And he once proclaimed a black man's place was "at the back door with his hat in his hand."

In September, Savannah's city council unanimously called on the legislature to take Talmadge's name off the bridge. Mayor Eddie DeLoach sought the change following the violence in Charlottesville, Virginia, as white supremacists rallied to protect Confederate statues. DeLoach said Savannah's bridge should "no longer be named for a man who divided us."

By law, only Georgia lawmakers can name or rename state roads and bridges. Girl Scouts leaders say it's an ideal chance to honor Low, who insisted Girl Scouts have a place for all girls regardless of race, religion or disabilities.

"All her life, Juliette sought to bring people together to solve problems and make the world a better place," Girl Scouts CEO Sylvia Acevedo told The Associated Press by email. "And I can't think of a better symbol to her legacy than a bridge that connects people to others."

Low recruited the first troop of Girl Scouts over tea at her Savannah home in March 1912. In their first year, the girls learned to cook and care for babies. But Low also taught them how to shoot rifles and tie up burglars.

While Low began with only 18 Girl Scouts, 1.8 million are enrolled today. Acevedo said scouts from across the U.S. attending an October convention embraced their Savannah colleagues' cause. Roughly 10,000 Girl Scouts and alumnae have signed a petition asking lawmakers to rename the bridge for Low.

In December, Acevedo joined the leaders of Georgia's two Girl Scout councils at the state Capitol in Atlanta to meet with Gov. Nathan Deal. While the meeting focused on boosting girls' interest in science and math, the Girl Scout leaders also told the governor they want Low's name on the bridge.

"I don't know that he ever came out and said, 'I'm supportive of this,'" said Sue Else, chief executive of the Girl Scouts of Historic Georgia, who attended the meeting with Deal. "But he's been very supportive of Girl Scouts in general."

Meanwhile, Girl Scouts national leaders hired Savannah lobbyist Amy Hughes for the legislative session that began last week. Hughes was hired specifically to lobby lawmakers on the bridge issue, said Alice Hockenbury, the Girl Scouts' vice president for advocacy in Washington.

Stephens doubts fellow lawmakers will take action. A prior attempt to strip Talmadge's name from the bridge fell flat in 2013. He said it could be tougher this year, as the Republican-controlled legislature tries to avoid election-year backlash from GOP voters amid controversies over Confederate statues and memorials.

"As far as I can tell, just by the conversations I've had with people, they're going to run from anything that's extremely controversial," Stephens said.

gas canopy. We are just waiting for them to pull permits. With a site level permit they could start on the parking lot and other improvements."

Sandersfeld said Wawa is required to pull permits from entities including the city for the actual building, the county and the Florida Department of Transportation for road improvements to Morningside Drive and U.S. Highway 441 and the Environmental Protection Agency for water and sewer.

Other permits include right of way utilization and commercial driveway connections.

"Wawa is working to prepare those applications," Sandersfeld said.

According to the documents presented to and approved by Planning and Zoning last month, the site which formerly housed a Shell station and the adjacent land will now house a convenience store with 12 gas pumps — the Wawa.

Plans include many conceptual drawings of the Wawa building, including its logo and name and notes a no-surcharge PNC Bank ATM.

Building specifications on the documents note the demolition of the existing 2,709 square-foot building to be replaced with a new 6,119 square-foot Wawa to include a 25-foot tall gas canopy.

The approval also includes specifications regarding the ingress and egress design at Old Eustis Road and 441, the requirements of a frontage road, parking and landscaping and lighting not to exceed a certain illumination so as not to interfere with residential properties located behind it.

Meanwhile, in Leesburg, another Wawa is believed to be under consideration on a site that was formerly a Sonny's BBQ at U.S. Highway 441 and the Citizens First Bank site to the north of it.

Wawa representatives did not return calls for comment Friday regarding either location or when the Mount Dora store is slated for opening.

When contacted after discussions about the Mount Dora Wawa began in March, Spokeswoman Lori Bruce said the company does not officially announce new Wawa locations until permits are approved, though she did confirm that they were looking at sites in Florida.

Wawa Inc., a privately held company, began in 1803 as an iron foundry in New Jersey. Toward the end of the 19th century, owner George Wood took an interest in dairy farming and the family began a small processing plant in Wawa, Pa., in 1902.

The milk business was a success due to its quality, cleanliness and "certified" process.

As home delivery of milk declined in the early 1960s, Grahame Wood, George's grandson, opened the first Wawa Food Market in 1964 as an outlet for dairy products.

Today, Wawa touts itself as an "all day, everyday stop for fresh, built-to-order foods, beverages, coffee, fuel services and surcharge-free ATM's."

The stores offer a large fresh-food service selection, including built-to-order hoagies, freshly brewed coffee, hot breakfast sandwiches, built-to-order specialty beverages and an assortment of soups, sides and snacks.

Wawa stores are in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and Florida. The first store in Florida, near universal Studios in Orlando, was built in 2012.

In Lake County, there are two Wawas in Clermont. In Florida, there are over 100.

Officials in Sumter County are also entertaining the possibility of a Wawa coming to The Villages.

Wawa is the Canadian word for "goose."

Penister, 36, said he is not yet ready to rejoin the workforce and is unnerved by the prospect of potentially losing Medicaid. His state, Wisconsin, is one of 10 that applied to the federal government for a waiver seeking to implement work and other requirements for single adults.

"Would it be advantageous for me even to go into the workforce instead of me therapeutically transitioning to a state where I'm actually ready to perform in the workforce?" he said. He compared it to someone recovering from a car accident "and saying that in order for me to give you this medication, you got to go to work. Well, I can't."

Yet his story also helps make the case for those who favor some type of commitment from working-age adults who benefit from Medicaid, the state-federal health care program for poor and lower-income Americans. Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker, a Republican, sought federal approval for a work requirement last year and said it helps prepare recipients to leave public assistance.

Penister's status is unclear, because Wisconsin's proposed changes would exempt anyone diagnosed with a mental illness or who is mentally unable to work.

Republicans say work and other requirements will return Medicaid to its original intent — to act as a stopgap until people can find work. They say it has expanded far beyond its basic mission.

The program, created in 1965 for families on welfare and low-income seniors, now covers more than 70 million people, or about 1 in 5 Americans. It expanded Medicaid recipient Thomas J. Penister, of Milwaukee, responds to a question during an interview Friday in Milwaukee. under President Barack Obama's health care law, with a majority of states choosing to cover millions more low-income people.

President Donald Trump's administration announced that it will allow states to implement certain requirements as a condition of receiving Medicaid benefits. Generally, it will mean that states can require many adults on Medicaid to get a job, go to school, take a job-training course or perform community service to continue their eligibility.

Ten states had previously asked the federal government for the requirement waiver, and others are sure to follow. On Friday, Kentucky became the first to have it approved. Gov. Matt Bevin, a Republican, called the new requirement "transformational."

Bevin has said he expects the move to save the state more than $300 million over the next five years in Medicaid costs. But he also estimated that as many as 95,000 Kentucky residents could lose their Medicaid benefits, either because they will not comply with the new rules or will make too much money once they begin working.

Critics of the policy shift point to the number of people who could lose coverage, even if they meet the new requirements.

"We just have concerns that a lot of people who still are legitimately eligible, who do meet the work requirement, will end up falling off the rolls because they don't know how to verify or there's a technology glitch," said Marquita Little, health policy director for Arkansas Advocates for Children and Families.

In Arkansas, the work requirement is among several new restrictions the state has proposed for its hybrid Medicaid expansion. About 285,000 people are on the program, which uses money from Medicaid to buy private health insurance for low-income people.

Supporters of the work requirement cast it as a way to move more people into the workforce and eventually off the program.

"These are people that are either underemployed or do not have sufficient training, and this is a mechanism to put into place to make sure that the health care coverage is really a bridge to training and better employment," Arkansas Gov. Asa Hutchinson, a Republican, told The Associated Press.

Leading Edge Dental

ONE DENTIST, ONE LOCATION
ALL YOUR DENTAL CARE

"I am very appreciative of the concern and comfort I received from Dr. Vaziri. My implants and dentures are more attractive and comfortable than I had imagined they would be. The doctor and staff are very professional and the office is well equipped." Vincentia Y.

"From root canals to implants I needed a tremendous amount of dental work. It was important to me to find a dentist who could accommodate all my dental needs in one office. I found what I was looking for in Dr. Vaziri. I was very impressed with his knowledge and professionalism and highly recommend him to anyone looking for quality dental care." Ron F.

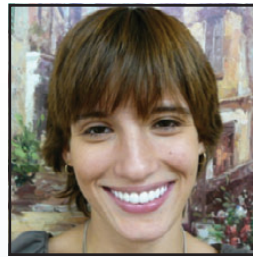

"THANK YOU FOR GIVING ME MY SMILE BACK!"
"Having my teeth extracted 12 years ago was very devastating to me. I was never able to use my lower denture. Time and time again I went to different dentists and was told nothing could be done. I felt very hopeless. Dr. Vaziri and his entire staff are so caring, wonderful and friendly. Everything was thoroughly explained to me about the implant procedure. I loved that it was a painless procedure. Smiling Forever." Suzanne M.

"I remember being initially impressed with Dr. Vaziri's knowledge and expertise on my first visit. He provided three options from which to choose to address my failing upper bridge. Now I have multiple implants that look and function like my natural permanent teeth. It was great that all work was done right in his office. Looking for a full service dentist, and dental implant specialist... Look no further than Dr. Vaziri Leading Edge Dental." Edward D. Leesburg

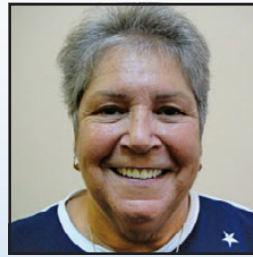

"I have suffered with teeth problems all of my adult life. As result I have had several procedures over the years, all of which were to be the "final correction". Dr. Vaziri recommended the mini implants as a method of securing my lower denture, I agreed to the procedure and we started the process that day. Now years later I can say my problem has been solved. I am without problems eating, talking and I have learned to enjoy life again. This was the "BEST" dental decision I have ever made, I only wish this option was given years ago." Jack C.

"My experience was a wonderful one, my before and after pictures were totally opposite. You couldn't even tell it was my mouth. I love the people there; they are so caring, happy and wonderful to be around." "I truly can't wait to come back." Nina H.

"Why did I go to Dr. Vaziri to check out implants? "Desperation!!" I had massive bone loss. I could not keep my lower denture in without adhesive and even that didn't work well. After reading an article about adhesives and their dangers, I knew I couldn't keep using adhesives. Dr. Vaziri was competent, sympathetic, and he had the answer! "Mini Dental Implants" The procedure was painless. I can now eat anything I want. I recommend it to anyone who wears lower dentures." Rochelle M.

"Having implants is the "Best thing I've done for myself." I tell everyone how great it is not to use powder to secure my teeth after eating every meal. "It's Wonderful" I am such a baby and my husband couldn't believe I was even considering the implants. The staff and Dr. Vaziri made me feel comfortable and stayed by my side through the procedure. If I could have this done, I believe anyone can. I really recommend it to anyone who wears lower dentures." Donna H.

FIRST YEAR

Courts tied his most provocative actions on immigration and Muslim entry in knots, but illegal border crossings appear to be at historic lows.

The upshot? For all his rogue tendencies, Trump has shaped up as a largely conventional Republican president when measured by his promises kept and in motion.

The Twitter version of Trump may be jazzed with braggadocio about the size of his (nonexistent) nuclear button and his "very stable genius." But the ledger of actions taken is recognizable to Washington: mainstream Republican tax cuts, pro-business policy (with exceptions on trade), curbs on environmental regulation and an approach to health care that's been in the GOP playbook for years. That's as of today and this moment. With Trump, you never know about tomorrow.

A look at some of his campaign promises and what's happened:

Taxes

Trump and Republicans

in Congress delivered on an overhaul that substantially lowers corporate taxes and cuts personal income taxes, as promised. It's sizable but not everything Trump said it would be, and it is more tilted to the wealthy than he promised or will admit. He promised a 15 percent tax rate for corporations and settled for 21 percent, still a major drop from 35 percent. He promised three tax brackets; there are still seven. He did not eliminate the estate tax or the alternative minimum tax as he said he would. Fewer people will be subject to those taxes, however, at least temporarily.

"Everybody is getting a tax cut, especially the middle class," he said in the campaign. Most will; some will pay more.

Trade

Trump made good on his promise to withdraw the U.S. from the Trans-Pacific Partnership trade agreement and to reopen the North American Free Trade Agreement in search of a better deal.

He's let China off the hook, though, on his oft-repeated threat during the campaign to brand Beijing a currency manipulator, a step toward potentially hefty penalties on Chinese imports and a likely spark for a trade war.

"We're like the piggy bank that's being robbed," he said of the trade relationship, which has tipped even more in China's favor since. Trump now threatens trade punishment if China does not sufficiently cooperate in reining in North Korea.

Trump promised to impose a 35 percent tariff on goods from U.S. companies that ship production abroad. He's not delivered on that. Instead, his tax plan aims to encourage companies to stay in the U.S. with the lower tax rate and to entice those operating abroad to come home by letting them repatriate their profits in the U.S. at a temporarily discounted rate. His approach so far is all carrot, no stick.

Immigration

Candidate Trump rocked the political landscape when he proposed a temporary ban on all non-U.S. Muslims entering the country. While he's long backed away from such talk, Trump has worked since his first days in office to impose new restrictions on tourists and immigrants, signing executive orders that would have made good on his anti-immigration promises had those orders not been blocked by courts.

He's now succeeded in banning the entry of citizens from several Muslim-majority countries and in severely curbing refugee admissions. He's tried to deny certain federal money for cities that refuse to cooperate with federal immigration authorities.

Trump is now deep in negotiations over an immigration deal that could deliver on other promises, including money for the border wall with Mexico and overhauling the legal immigration system to make it harder for immigrants to sponsor their families. That's in exchange for extending protections for hundreds of thousands of young people brought to the country illegally as children. They are protections he once slammed as an "illegal" amnesty and pledged to end.

Mexico still isn't ponying up money for the wall.

Energy and the environment

Trump promised aggressive action on the energy front and has pursued that.

He announced his intention to take the U.S. out of the Paris climate-change accord. He gave swift approval to the Keystone XL and Dakota Access pipelines stalled by President Barack Obama, moved to shrink protected national monument lands in Utah and Arizona, and acted to lift restrictions on mining coal and coastal drilling for oil and natural gas.

A provision in the new tax law opens the long-protected Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to drilling.

As other countries turn harder toward green energy, Trump is making fossil fuels the centerpiece of his drive toward energy independence — a benchmark that Obama closed in on during an era of surging natural gas development.

SCHOOLS

"I am happy to see that the vast majority of schools made improvements. We are headed in the right direction."

Stephanie Luke, Lake County School Board chairwoman

In June, Michael Randolph took over the reins at Leesburg. He replaced Dennis Neal as principal. Neal is currently an assistant principal at Oak Park Middle School.

"When this came out, (Randolph) did not say, 'That wasn't me.' He said, 'We own that.' He is not passing the buck," Luke said.

On the positive side, two brick and mortar schools increased their graduation rates to more than 90 percent. Lake's Virtual High School also broke the 90 percent barrier. No school had a graduation rate greater than 90 percent in 2015-2016.

East Ridge High School in Clermont posted the biggest percentage jump at 4.6 percent. The school, led by Principal Julie Robinson-Lueallen, registered a 93.2 percent graduation rate, up from 88.6 percent in 2015-16. Lake Minneola High School posted the highest graduation rate in the county with 93.8 percent. Lake Minneola opened in 2011 under current Principal Linda Shepherd-Miller's leadership.

"I am happy to see that the vast majority of schools made improvements. We are headed in the right direction," Luke said.

Countywide, the graduation rate dropped to 77.8 percent from 78.1. The state's average rose to 82.3 percent from 80.7 percent.

Lake County Superintendent Diane Kornegay, who took over the district last January, set a goal for a minimum 90 percent graduation rate across the district in three to four years. To get there, Kornegay implemented several initiatives including assigning "graduation resource facilitators" to each high school. The facilitators monitor students' progress on a monthly basis. The district also offers ACT preparation materials, a system to track graduation requirements and opportunities for remedial credits and grades.

"I am proud of the significant gains at East Ridge, Lake Minneola and Lake Virtual and know that all Lake County high schools can and will achieve at these same high levels. It is our ultimate goal and responsibility to ensure that all students graduate ready for college and/or the workforce. We are working hard every day to make that happen," according to a statement attributed to Kornegay.

Trump immigration platform faces criticism

By Nicholas Riccardi
The Associated Press

DENVER — For years, a movement to limit the number of migrants into the U.S. and end a system that favors family members of legal residents has had to fend off criticism that it's as a poorly veiled attempt to produce a whiter America.

Then its most prominent supporter told members of Congress in the Oval Office this week that the U.S. needs fewer immigrants from Haiti and Africa and more from places like Norway.

President Donald Trump's use of a vulgar term to describe African countries triggered widespread condemnation, and left the small cluster of immigration hard-line groups whose agenda Trump has embraced scrambling to distance themselves from the president.

"They say it's about numbers, merit, security and control," Frank Sharry of the immigrant rights group America's Voice said of organizations that share Trump's desire to reduce both illegal and legal immigration to the U.S. "All of those are coded words that mean fewer brown, black and yellow immigrants into a white nation."

Hard-line immigration activists, who prefer the term "restrictionists," argue that the system they espouse — fewer overall migrants, an end to the family-based system that favors relatives of people already legally in the U.S. and a greater emphasis on picking immigrants with skills — is not racially motivated. They note, for example, that immigrants from some African countries have higher rates of education than the U.S.-born population and may benefit from a more skill-based approach.

"People who suggest merit-based may inherently favor white, northern Europeans — that is inherently racist," said Ira Mehlman of the Federation for American Immigration Reform.

"Immigration is not tied to Donald Trump. This preceded Donald Trump," he added, dismissing the president as someone "whose tweets cause people to cringe."

Groups such as Mehlman's helped torpedo immigration overhauls in 2006 and 2013, but they have few overt supporters in Washington. Before Trump, the most prominent one was Alabama Sen. Jeff Sessions, who became Trump's attorney general and whose former aide, Stephen Miller, is a top White House adviser to the president on immigration.

Sessions is a longtime critic of the country's system that allows people with relatives in the United States a chance to apply for visas. "Almost no one coming from the Dominican Republic to the United States is coming here because they have a proven skill that will benefit us and would indicate their likely success in our society," he said on the Senate floor in 2006. "They come here because some other family member of a qualifying relation is here."

Trump has embraced Sessions' cause of trying to end "chain migration," a term opponents have long applied to the family-based system but that got little attention until the president tweeted it.

campaign. Some of his actions leading up to this year's federal holiday honoring King's birth seemed to be an attempt to live up to that.

He began last week by designating the historic site around King's Atlanta birth home as a national park. By week's end, Trump was signing a King holiday proclamation with the martyred activist's nephew at his side.

But in between, the president sat in a White House meeting on immigration policy and denigrated much of the African diaspora as "shithole countries" while expressing a preference for immigrants from Norway, a majority white nation.

This is the type of thing, activists, religious leaders and scholars say, that puts Trump's presidency in direct conflict with the legacy of King, who was assassinated April 4, 1968 while trying to make America a more inclusive society.

King's daughter, the Rev. Bernice King, will be the keynote speaker at the commemorative service honoring her father at Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta. As is the custom for most presidents, Trump is not expected to participate, but she does hope he will observe the holiday.

"This is what I would like President Trump to do: Don't let the King Holiday find you using your Twitter account in an inappropriate way," Bernice King told The Associated Press in an interview. "If he can dare to do that, I would be proud on that day that our president honored Dr.

King by not doing things that are offensive."

Much of Trump's first year as president has been marked by racial controversy.

Last February, Trump kicked off Black History Month by praising long-dead abolitionist Frederick Douglass in the present tense, as if Douglass were still alive. He referred to NFL players protesting systemic racism as "sons of bitches" and suggested they should be benched or fired for their refusal to stand during the national anthem.

During a speech to African leaders last fall, he referred to the non-existent country of "Nambria" when attempting to discuss Namibia. In June, he said Nigerian immigrants would "never go back to their huts" after coming to the U.S.

King's son, Martin Luther King III, met with Trump on the last King holiday, four days before Trump took office. He spoke to the then-president-elect about the importance of voting rights — only to see Trump establish a now-defunct commission to investigate voter fraud, which some saw as a move to intimidate minority voters.

"I would like to believe that the president's intentions are not to be divisive, but much of what he says seems or feels to be divisive," King III told AP in an interview. "It would be wonderful to have a president who talked about bringing America together and exhibited that, who was involved in doing a social project ... that would show humility."

Civil rights leaders said Friday the president's comments are not new, but are the most recent and glaring proof of Trump's racist views, and shocking to the point that congressional leaders and Americans can no longer ignore his bigotry.

"The Trump era ... is a direct assault on the legacy of Dr. King," said the Rev. Raphael Warnock, pastor of Ebenezer, where King preached for the last eight years of his life. "The conversation about who we are as Americans has shifted and given in to a kind of xenophobia that makes it difficult to discuss issues that affect all Americans."

OUR OPINION

A crisis at Leesburg High

Lake County Schools got some good news last week when the Florida Department of Education released a report showing the graduation rates for all the high schools in the state.

Seven of Lake's nine high schools showed improvement in their graduation rates. The schools in south Lake County paced the pack, with East Ridge increasing its graduation rate 4.6 percent to an outstanding 93.2 overall and Lake Minneola increasing its rate 4.5 percent to a whopping 93.8 and South Lake High jumping .9 percent.

Of the nine, only four didn't reach the state average of 82.3 - South Lake High, Eustis, Tavares and Leesburg. And three of them didn't miss by much.

You might wonder, then, how the overall graduation rate for Lake County Schools managed to drop slightly from the previous year.

The answer, sadly, is Leesburg.

Leesburg High School had a miserable showing, dropping 8.4 percent and graduating just 67.1 percent of its seniors last school year.

Think about that. 33 percent of seniors at Leesburg High failed to fulfill the requirements for graduation. That's one out of every three.

Pick a descriptive word here and you're probably not exaggerating the severity of this statistic: Shocking, appalling, stunning, disgraceful. This, folks, is what a crisis looks like in the education system.

Leesburg High has had its share of well-documented problems in recent years. Several years ago, it was a bubbling cauldron of violence, a place where brawls broke out so often that community leaders came together to look for solutions. The school also has a grotesque rate of absenteeism. As any educator will tell you, you can't teach 'em if they're not there.

And while the school jumped a letter grade on the state's annual report card last summer, from a D to a C, a C is nothing to crow about. Frankly, almost every school either improved or held steady in the second year of the state's new grading system, so the "improvement" should be taken with a grain of salt.

In short, Leesburg High appears to be fracturing, if it isn't broken already.

Lake County School District administrators are keenly aware of the problem. In fact, in June, new Superintendent of Schools Diane Kornegay replaced the principal at Leesburg High with Michael Randolph. Randolph, according to School Board Chairwoman Stephanie Luke, took responsibility for the slide, even though the data reflects the performance of the previous administration, not his.

In an interview with Daily Commercial reporter Carlos Medina, Luke expressed optimism that Randolph will right the ship, saying, "There is not a doubt in my mind that we will see a significant increase (in the graduation rate) at Leesburg."

But how? Is there a plan? Because the data coming out of Leesburg High reflects a troubling trend that needs to be halted and reversed immediately.

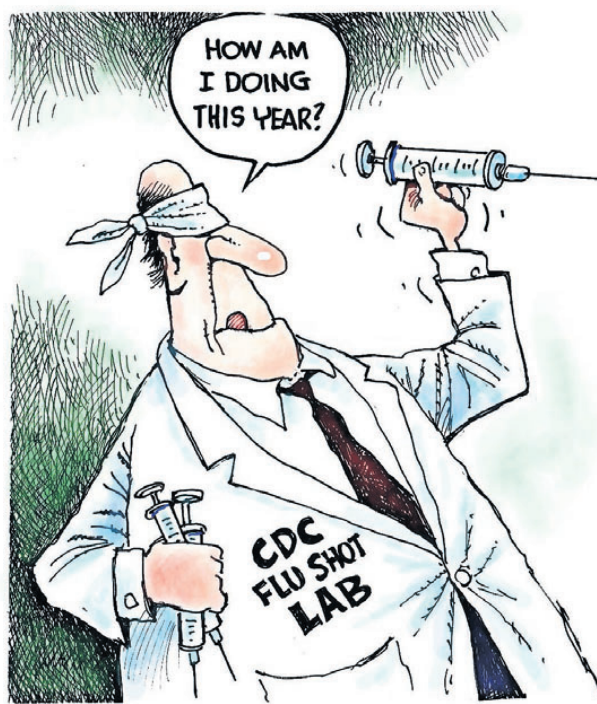

The reasons behind this slide are likely complicated. There are undoubtedly socioeconomic factors at work as well as leadership issues. What is clear, though, is that the recent culture - the shared values, expectations and standards, the strategies for addressing what ails students individually and collectively - has been weak.

Fix the culture, fix the problem.

There is no amount of resource the School District should be unwilling to expend to address the social, academic and environmental factors that have eroded this once-proud institution of learning.

This, friends, is a crisis.

Questions for enlightened people who write to the editor

Is there a double standard by the leadership of the NFL when they fine a player $6,000 for placing some Christmas decorations on his shoes, yet they do not fine them for kneeling in protest against our flag?

Has there been any refuting of the information from the Navy veteran who has more than 50 years evaluating weather patterns and the approximate 44-year cycle? To confirm his knowledge, I offer the following fact from the book, "Back in the Day."

In the year 1936, a major heat wave struck North America and high-temperature records were set, with Nevada reaching 134 degrees. Then from 1977-78, there was concern about global freezing.

In the top-10 major cities in America with all their problems, do any of them have a Republican mayor? I know of none.

Would all of you that question our democracy open your dictionary and look up the words democracy, socialism and communism? All you progressives will love the answer to numbers two and three but hate number one. The rest of us will love number one!

Whatever you do, please do not tell those who hate FOX News about One American News Network!

Rick Scott didn't stop oil drilling

Anyone who seriously thinks that Rick Scott actually made a difference in the decision not to drill on the Florida coast is sadly mistaken. All Scott did was call and ask for a meeting with Zinke but never actually spoke to him. Mysteriously, Florida is suddenly exempt? It wasn't Scott, it was Mar-a-Lago.

Stop the name calling

In a recent opinion, Mr. Daniel Andrews called Trump voters idiots. It appears that many in society today are rude and use name calling when trying to win an argument or make a point.

Mr. Andrews said he applauds the women who have come forward to tell their stories about sexual misconduct. May I remind him that Hillary Clinton threatened the women who came forward with sexual accusations against her husband? These women stated that they feared for their lives. A vote for Hillary could be considered further suppression against all women who are victims of such abuse. I can only assume that those who voted for her condone her behavior.

Sexual misconduct seems to be measured in degrees today. Was your misconduct of a lesser nature than perhaps someone else? Does this make you a better person because you perceive yourself to be on the lower end of the scale? People voted for Trump despite his locker room talk and many voted for Hillary despite her threats against women.

Trump voters want to see support for the military and police, the defeat of ISIS, more American jobs, improved border control, less poverty, less dependence on foreign oil and more money in their pockets. Stop putting us down, and while you're at it, grab your thesaurus and find some new words to use because yours are getting old.

Check-cashing places charge too high a price

On Saturday, my home heater blower went bad and I gave my friend a $500 check to purchase a brand new part. His bank was closed so he went to cash the check at one of those check-cashing places and they charged him a $50 fee.

What a rip-off! How do these companies get away with this? The state of Florida needs to enact strict laws against companies who profit largely from cashing personal checks with this much profit margin.

People need to tell their friends and neighbors to avoid these places at all cost.

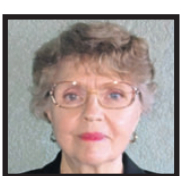

Linda Green, Leesburg

What would the ideal community look like?

Jane Hepting

Children and adults should be in no danger of physical harm, bullying or harassment wherever they are. We should be protected from terrorists, pollutants, epidemics and financial ruin from forces beyond our control.

Next, we agreed that the ideal community should be fair. Fairness means that everyone has a voice, has input into the decisions affecting our lives and has an equal vote. In a fair community, everyone is equal under the law, and diversity is welcome. Politicians are not controlled by special interest groups, but work to improve the lives of everyone. In a fair community, people earn a living wage, receive equal pay for equal work and pay taxes based upon their means. In a fair community, living a good life is affordable for everyone.

Railroads, government, waste and terrorism

Russ Sloan

The recent Amtrak derailment in the Northwest rail corridor connecting Seattle to Portland was not only tragic in loss of lives and injuries but brought to light a staggering expenditure of money to shave off 10 minutes of travel time.

The cost to trim 10 minutes of travel time was $181 million. I can't imagine any private sector entity that would spend $181 million to gain 10 minutes in travel time. Then to compound that poor fiscal decision, the inaugural run of this "improved" route saw a terrible Amtrak wreck take place as the train approached a 30 mph zone at 80 mph, costing three lives and 70 injured. Lakewood, Washington leaders had warned about the probability of a wreck occurring at the very area of their concern. The city's lawsuit to stop the project failed. How the train's engineer allowed this to happen is puzzling and under investigation. As part of the expenditure to "improve" the route was the addition of "positive train control" equipment to limit unsafe speeds or to halt trains before any collisions. Amtrak officials acknowledged that that life-saving retrofit was not engaged. The wreck has caused $40 million thus far in damage and cleanup.

Dr. King's words still ring true ... 61 years on

Leonard Pitts

A few words on the difficulty of voting while black.

As we mark what would have been his 80th birthday, it seems fitting to recall that Martin Luther King spoke to that difficulty in a 1957 speech whose words ring relevant 61 years later.

"All types of conniving methods are still being used to prevent Negroes from becoming registered voters," lamented King.

As he saw it, neither political party was blameless. He castigated Democrats for capitulating to the rabid racists of their Southern wing — the so-called "Dixiecrats" — and blasted Republicans for caving in to "right-wing reactionary Northerners."

"Both political parties," he said, "have betrayed the cause of justice."

While there are no more Dixiecrats and the right-wing reactionaries to whom the GOP kowtows are more likely to be found in the South and Midwest now than in the North, it is noteworthy that King's central point remains valid. Neither party covers itself with glory where African Americans are concerned. To the contrary, African-American issues — police reform, job discrimination, mass incarceration — routinely go unaddressed by both.

And here, someone will demand to know how it is, if both parties share blame, black voters remain overwhelmingly loyal to one of them, reliably casting about 90 percent of their presidential ballots for Democrats. But it isn't that hard to understand.

Imagine you have two suitors. One of them tends to ignore you, often seems ashamed to be seen with you, but occasionally brings you flowers. The other beats you.

If you must date one, is it any wonder you'd choose the former?

So Republicans, who pioneered the Southern strategy, opened the 1980 election praising state's rights, demonized Willie Horton, gutted the Voting Rights Act, issued coded appeals to white racial resentment, demeaned the first African-American president, and were hit just last year by federal judges for a photo I.D. law designed with "surgical precision" to stop black North Carolinians from voting, have no standing to ask black people, "Why don't you like us?"

Unfortunately, the GOP's resort to these "conniving methods" has left Democrats no meaningful competition for the black vote — and where competition is absent, neglect invariably flourishes. Although they occasionally come bearing flowers — e.g., Barack Obama's quiet dismantling of the War on Drugs — Democrats are far too likely to ignore black issues or, at best, pay lip service to them. And they are forever stepping over black voters while giving the high sign to white ones, like a married man winking and mouthing "call me" to some other woman while his wife is standing there.

Witness Democrat Doug Jones, elected to the Senate in December over that odor in a cowboy hat, Republican Roy Moore. According to election postmortems, Jones owed the upset in large part to African-American voters, women in particular. Yet days later, there he was on cable news, pivoting to the right, warning that he would side with Republicans on certain issues. So much for gratitude to the voters who gave him his victory.

But one gets used to being shoved aside when voting while black.

Indeed, it says something that presidential candidates routinely spend more time discussing the concerns of 50,000 coal miners than those of 43 million black people. What it says is that African-American votes, like African-American lives, count for less.

"Give us the ballot," demanded King in 1957. And yes, much has changed since then.

But in some sense, we're still waiting.

FROM THE RIGHT

Thanks, China (maybe)

Cal Thomas

One of the reasons empires and great nations have collapsed throughout history is burdensome debt. No individual can keep spending as if there is no tomorrow, so why would anyone think that a nation can continue deficit spending and still expect a tomorrow?

“When prosperity comes, do not use all of it.” — Confucius

Is China about to do the United States a big favor, however unwittingly?

According to Bloomberg, China is considering whether to slow, or even stop, purchases of U.S. Treasuries. At $3.14 trillion, China holds the world's largest foreign exchange reserves.

It is also the largest underwriter of U.S. debt. Financial experts and political observers have long worried that becoming financially dependent on an unfriendly and rival nation is not good for the U.S. in the long term.

In the short term, however, should Beijing choose to pull back its major underwriting of America's $20 trillion debt, it could force politicians to do something they have heretofore seemed incapable of doing: halt spending or start reforming or eliminating unnecessary and outmoded government programs.

Most of us who are not billionaires have had a “we can't afford it” moment when considering purchases for which we don't have the money. It usually doesn't take long before what was once considered essential becomes, upon reflection, nonessential. Not so with government. Most politicians see everything government does as essential and since they don't have to pay for anything with their own money, they are reluctant to cut spending, which they believe helps extend their careers.

Before he ran up the debt more than any other president, Barack Obama criticized George W. Bush for increasing America's debt. While a senator from Illinois and during a debate about whether to raise the debt ceiling, Obama said, “The fact that we are here today to debate raising America's debt limit is a sign of leadership failure.”

Debt rose by $3.5 trillion in Bush's first five years in office, partially the result of the terrorist attack of September 11, 2001 and the subsequent war in Afghanistan. During Obama's two terms, the debt increased by $8.9 trillion.

How credible is China's reported consideration of slowing or halting the purchase of U.S. treasuries?

For one answer I turn to Ric Edelman, my financial adviser, whom Barron's has consistently ranked high among the nation's top 100 independent financial advisers.

Responding by email to a question about Chinese intentions, Edelman says, “I'm not sure I buy it — either that the Chinese will pare down its U.S. debt holdings, or that doing so will cause Congress to rein in spending. On the former, what will the Chinese buy, if not Treasuries?

It's not like there's a huge array of alternatives for them. On the latter, I don't think I need to elaborate.”

He may be right on both counts.

One of the reasons empires and great nations have collapsed throughout history is burdensome debt. No individual can keep spending as if there is no tomorrow, so why would anyone think that a nation can continue deficit spending and still expect a tomorrow?

Companies that consistently spend more than they take in usually go bankrupt.

Nations that consistently spend more than they take in and continue borrowing to keep the illusion of prosperity going usually just collapse.

There is always a day of reckoning for such irresponsible behavior. It is not a matter of if, but a matter of when.

Whether China actually slows or stops buying U.S. Treasuries, just the threat should awaken sober minds in Washington. Unfortunately, I fear Mr. Edelman is right in his skepticism and sober minds hardly exist in a capital that is drunk on spending.

We also concluded that the ideal community, besides being safe and fair, should be thriving. A thriving community has excellent public services, including top-quality public schools, a variety of recreational activities, mass transportation, affordable housing and affordable health care. Everyone takes pride in the achievements of the community and assumes a stewardship role in making the community a good place for everyone.

What role should government play in creating and sustaining the ideal community? It should play a huge role. In fact, my friends and I believe that the very purpose of government is to promote communities that are safe, fair and thriving. This vision of government is not new. Our nation's founding fathers declared, in our Declaration of Independence, that “governments are instituted” to secure “certain unalienable rights” such as “life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.” The larger our nation, the more good government we need.

Sadly, the Republican Party does not embrace this vision. It sees government as existing to enrich a small portion of our citizenry. So, it fights for big, permanent tax cuts for the super-rich, while trying to appease the middle class with tiny, temporary tax cuts. Republican politicians move public education dollars into the hands of for-profit schools and their stockholders. They cut health care for millions of Americans and scheme to cut Social Security. To increase corporate profits, they slash governmental regulations that help ensure safe nursing homes and clean air and water. To weaken the voice of the people, they gerrymander voting districts and pass laws limiting the power of local governments. Moving more money and power into the hands of a few people destroys, rather than builds, communities that are safe, fair and thriving.

How can we make our government build better communities? The task is not easy, especially with Russian propaganda pushing hatred and fear, but we must try.

First, we must demand that Congress end the corrupting influence of big money and foreign meddling in politics.

Second, we must teach voters to seek out the facts, untainted by propaganda. When some of the population gets all of its “facts” from conservative Fox News, some from liberal MSNBC, and some from Facebook friends, we have a recipe for disaster.

Third, we must encourage civil discourse on the best way to solve problems. As Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. warned, “We must learn to live together as brothers or perish together as fools.”

Finally, we must urge every citizen to participate in government by paying attention, speaking out, advocating for change and voting for candidates who believe in communities that are safe, fair and thriving for everyone.

FIRST AMENDMENT

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

But as tragic as this example is of wasteful spending and the chain of questionable judgments involved, I fear that the High Speed Rail (HSR) program in California has far, far more prospects of wasteful spending and potential loss of life. I contacted the California HSR Authority and asked one simple question: “How do you protect over 800 miles of HSR from a terrorist attack?” I received a prompt response from an information officer with the HSR Authority who explained the numerous safety factors they have built into their system, which was impressive for law-abiding citizens but did not at all provide adequate protection from a terrorist attack. There are legs within the California system where their trains will travel at 200 mph. It doesn't take a destructive terrorist genius to figure out multiple ways to destroy a train at high speeds in an 800-mile network. Impossible to protect, especially if a terrorist is willing to die in the process. Think of the consequences of just one or two successful terrorist attacks in both loss of lives, injuries and on future ridership. With air travel, once passengers and baggage are safely aboard, the threats of a terrorist attack become minimal. Not so with any rail line, especially in remote areas.

I look at the huge investment to build HSR and then how vulnerable 800 miles is to a terrorist attack and wonder, did anyone in the chain of planning think about HSR being a likely target? My guess is that the vulnerability of HSR is the 800 pound gorilla in the room that the proponents of HSR choose to ignore so as to not alarm potential ridership.

Cost estimates to complete the first of two stages are projected at $65 billion (2012 estimate) and climbing. The first stage of 520 miles is scheduled to be completed in 2029. It would connect downtown San Francisco, downtown Los Angeles and downtown Anaheim via a route through the Central Valley of California. I seriously question the ability of the California HSR to operate in a self-supporting manner, much less being completed according to budget estimates.

I look at the huge investment to build HSR and then how vulnerable 800 miles is to a terrorist attack and wonder, did anyone in the chain of planning think about HSR being a likely target? My guess is that the vulnerability of HSR is the 800 pound gorilla in the room that the proponents of HSR choose to ignore so as to not alarm potential ridership. As an alternative option to the HSR system, California might be better served by an aircraft like the Bell Boeing V-22 Osprey, which can take off vertically like a helicopter then redirect its engines forward to fly as a normal airplane. The use of this kind of airplane for instate flights would require far smaller airports and minimal runways throughout the state at a cost far less than HSR and minus the vulnerability of protecting and maintaining 800 miles of rail lines.

Advocates of HSR should not ignore the threat of terrorists now or in the foreseeable future. Even without the threat of terrorism attacking 800 miles of rail, I will be stunned if it will be built as budgeted and even more surprised if it can operate without a substantial taxpayer subsidy.

Life on paradise island

Phu Quoc, Vietnam, is a getaway for millennial travelers

By Mark Kuryandchik
Detroit Free Press (TNS)

Azure-hued water. Soft, white-sand beaches. Palm trees swaying in the ocean breeze. Deliciously fresh seafood. For most Westerners who've never been to the island of Phu Quoc, these aren't exactly images we would typically equate with Vietnam.

But the rapidly developing resort island in the Gulf of Thailand offers all that and more at a price point that even perpetually underemployed and overdebted millennials can afford. Imagine seaside resorts for $20-$60 a night, freshly caught and prepared seafood for a few bucks and a full body massage right on the beach for less than the price of a single cocktail in an American city.

A relatively new international airport and relaxed visa rules for Phu Quoc visitors make this paradise resort island the most accessible to Western tourists it's ever been. And with the monsoon rains of summer now in the rearview, the island comes alive for the dry season from November to March, when the humidity drops and average daily temperatures hover around a pleasant 80 degrees.

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

Vietnam has been a Communist country since its reunification 40 years ago, although private ownership, free commerce and foreign investment have been encouraged since reforms in the 1980s. As a result, Vietnam is one of Southeast Asia's most rapidly developing countries with a growing list of economic successes. For casual tourists, there are few markers of communism as experienced in day-to-day life.

American tourists to mainland Vietnam must obtain an entry visa either ahead of time or at the airport. This process can be confusing, as the rules and forms change frequently. To attract more tourists to Phu Quoc, Vietnam offers a 30-day visa waiver for visitors to the island.

The push for tourists is also changing the character of the island long known for its prized fish sauce and deserted beaches. Now might be your last chance to experience this quaint fishing island before it's overtaken by the rapid development that's popping up along its beaches and in the main town of Duong Dong.

The 2030 master plan, adopted in 2014, calls for Duong Dong to expand its population tenfold and for the island to become Vietnam's tourism diamond.

Currently, most tourists come from Russia, Australia and other countries in Asia as well as Europe, but that will surely change as development continues. To that end, most hotels have staff who speak passable English, Russian and some French, but that quickly becomes less common outside touristic areas.

The crime rate is very low in Phu Quoc, a generally safe island for tourists and locals alike. Still, crimes of opportunity typically increase with tourism, so tourists should never leave valuables unattended.

The local currency is the Vietnamese Dong and the exchange rate is typically around 22,000 VND to $1 USD. Most resorts, taxis, cafes and restaurants accept credit cards, but cash is still king, particularly at street-food carts and locally driven restaurants. ATMs are plentiful.

WHERE TO STAY

The island offers a range of accommodations and experiences, with low-cost hostels at the low end and five-star resorts at the top end. But even in the middle, a three-star hotel located right on Long Beach, where most resorts are located, can be found for as little as $20-$60 USD a night. At the top end of the scale, rooms at the ultra-chic JW Marriott Phu Quoc Emerald Bay Resort & Spa start at around $400 a night and go up from there.

Accommodations on Long Beach offer the convenience of being right on the main drag, with beachside bars and restaurants lining the strip all the way into Duong Dong town. Located on the western side of the island, Long Beach also offers multiple locations to watch breathtaking sunsets.

Accommodations can be booked on Agoda and Booking.com.

WHAT TO DO

Most visitors come to Phu Quoc for its pristine beaches. Resorts on Long Beach provide lounge chairs and food and drink service. There are also vendors hawking fresh coconuts to drink from ($1.30) and other fruit, delivered right to your chair. You can get an hourlong full-body massage on the beach for less than $9.

Bai Sao Beach, on the southeastern tip of Phu Quoc, is the most picturesque of the island's better-known beaches. It can get crowded midday, making the morning and late afternoon the best times to visit.

For a more active water experience, there are plenty of guides and boat operators for hire who'll take you snorkeling, scuba diving or night fishing for squid. Some resorts also offer jet-ski and kayak rental.

Before it became Asia's next big resort destination, Phu Quoc was known internationally as home to the world's finest fish sauce — a funky, salty and sweet condiment ubiquitous in Vietnamese and Southeast Asian cuisines. Today the island boasts more than 80 fish sauce factories, many of which are open to the public for tours. You might want to hold your nose as you visit the warehouses of enormous wooden tanks full of fish that ferments often for longer than a year.

More than half of the island is protected National Park land, making it a destination for ecotourism as well. The island boasts rich biodiversity of flora and fauna as well as hiking trails and waterfalls for adventure travelers.

Watching the sunset is somewhat of a daily ritual on Phu Quoc and one of the best spots to do so is the Dinh Cau temple, lighthouse and pier, where locals and tourists alike gather every evening to watch the sun disappear into the ocean. The temple is located atop a rocky outcropping that reaches into the sea, offering unobstructed views.

As darkness falls, the surrounding area fills up with street vendors hawking all sorts of grilled meats, banh mi sandwiches, fresh fruits and cheap souvenirs. For a boozier sunset option, grab a Hanoi beer ($1.32) and a seat at Sunset Beach bar and toast the end of another day in paradise.

When the night takes over, the island comes alive with activity. Children zoom around on lighted bicycles and other two-wheeled vehicles in a park near the marina in Duong Dong, and families gather for dinner at low tables in open-air restaurants and residences.

RICK STEVES' EUROPE

What's new in Scandinavia for travelers in 2018

Rick Steves

Anyone traveling in Scandinavia this year will find a region that's investing productively in itself. Numerous urban, cultural and transit projects are underway, continuing the Scandinavian devotion to quality of life for residents and visitors alike. Here are some newsworthy notes to keep in mind as you travel in the region in 2018.

In Denmark's capital city, a massive subway project is creating havoc aboveground, but when completed in 2019, a new circular line will make sightseeing in Copenhagen's city center a breeze. Several museums are being rebuilt or renovated: The Museum of Copenhagen will reopen later this year in a new building; the Museum of Danish Resistance, long shuttered because of a devastating fire, will be back in late 2019; and the National Gallery of Denmark is renovating, but staying open through most of the work.

Major construction is also ongoing in some of Denmark's other large cities. In Aarhus, a new light rail line just opened. In Odense, the Hans Christian Andersen Museum is being completely rebuilt and will reopen in 2020. In the meantime, travelers can visit a temporary museum space, the home where Andersen was born, and his childhood home.

In Oslo, Norway, the urban streetscape continues to evolve, with a five-mile harbor promenade now running nearly the entire length of the city's waterfront. The historic Grand Cafe at the Grand Hotel is open again after renovation, and still has beautiful old artwork, including a mural showing Norway's literary and artistic legends from a century ago. The National Gallery, home to magnificent works by celebrated Norwegian artists, is scheduled to close in fall 2019. The collection will move to the new National Museum being built near the harbor, where it will be joined, in 2020, by a brand-new building for the Edvard Munch Museum.

Norway is also working on improvements to its transportation infrastructure. In Bergen, a tram now travels from the city center to the newly remodeled Flesland Airport. Oslo's outlying Moss Rygge Airport is closed; discount airlines now primarily use the even farther Sandefjord Airport Torp, 70 miles south of the city. And construction on the speedy X2000 train line from Oslo to Stockholm will likely interrupt service through 2020 — plan on taking take a slower intercity train instead.

Sweden's museums continue to switch back and forth from charging admission to being free — it all depends upon which political party is in power. (As you might imagine, the left wingers want culture to be free for all, and the right wingers want to put a price on it.) As recent elections brought in a left-leaning majority, admission charges have been dropped (for now) at many of Stockholm's sights, including the Royal Armory, Museum of Medieval Stockholm, Museum of Modern Art and Swedish History Museum.

Several of Stockholm's top attractions are either closed for renovation or in the process of moving, including the Royal Armory (main exhibit halls closed in 2018), Royal Coin Cabinet (moving; closed until 2020), Stockholm City Museum (closed until 2019), Saluhall market (closed for renovation) and the National Museum of Fine Arts (reopening in late 2018).

Stockholm's new Vikingaliv Museum (on the Djurgården waterfront) busts myths about the Vikings. Interactive displays present them as colonizers and traders more than looters and warriors — you won't find a horned helmet in the place.

Southeast Sweden is Glass Country — the traditional home of the country's art-glass business. In the 1990s, many independent hotshops went out of business or were gobbled up by corporate conglomerates. But the region has regained its footing as a showcase for small glass producers, including several new boutique enterprises: the Orranas Bruk glassworks in Orrefors (with an open-air hotshop) and the Glass Factory in Boda — part glass-art museum/showroom and part glassblowing hotshop. The handy town of Vaxjo, convenient to Glass Country, has also perked up, with good restaurants and a high-end hotel.

Like its Scandinavian neighbors, Finland's capital city of Helsinki is undergoing major redevelopment work. Construction on the Hernesaari peninsula just outside the city center (where cruise ships dock) and the West Harbor terminals (with ferry service around the Baltic region) will add green spaces, a mix of residences and recreational marinas to what is now a barren industrial zone. Visitors to Hernesaari can already get a taste of what's to come at the stylishly modern Loyly sauna, with water views and an indoor/outdoor restaurant.

And Iceland, while technically not part of Scandinavia, is now one of Europe's trendiest destinations. It's getting help from its homegrown airline, which offers Americans heading for Europe great stopover incentives. Expect big crowds and book your rooms well in advance — especially if visiting in summer.

The Nordic countries have a lot to offer, and those traveling with the latest information will have a truly rich experience.

Leesburg High bill passes first hurdle

Project requesting $1.5 million for construction academy approved by first committee

By Lake County Schools

LEESBURG – The plan to revitalize a construction academy at Leesburg High School, aimed to prepare students for high-demand careers in the field, has passed its first legislative hurdle.

House Bill 4145, entitled “Destination Lake: Building a Strong Community,” requests a one-time appropriation of $1.5 million for the project. The bill, sponsored Rep. Jennifer Sullivan, unanimously passed its first committee of reference, the Pre-K-12 Appropriations Subcommittee, on Jan. 10.

The initiative is designed to grow the construction academy and provide high school students in Lake and surrounding districts the opportunity to earn job skills and related industry certifications in carpentry, masonry, electrical and plumbing. Florida’s housing growth and the impact of Hurricane Irma have contributed to these jobs becoming high-demand, high wage employment sectors in Central Florida.

The program will have three basic features: a small learning community, college preparatory curricula coupled with job skills training and partnerships with local builders and contractors.

Participating students will have opportunities for internships, job shadowing and projects with industry partners using the latest in technology to simulate the equipment they will use on the job.

Currently, 76 students are enrolled in the academy. With the extra funding requested from the state, the program offerings will be expanded, new partnerships established, and enrollment opened to all high school students in Lake and surrounding districts with an initial capacity of 300.

East Ridge Middle receives national recognition for performance

By Lake County Schools

CLERMONT – East Ridge Middle School has been revalidated as a National Demonstration School by AVID (Advancement Via Individual Determination), a nonprofit organization that provides educators with proven, real-world strategies to accelerate the performance of underrepresented students so that these students and all students across the entire campus succeed in college, career and life.

The school first earned the distinction in 2014. In December 2017, it was revalidated through fall of 2020.

East Ridge joins approximately 170 other AVID National Demonstration

Schools and was selected through an application process, screening and review, which included a site visit. AVID is implemented in over 5,600 schools in 44 states, the District of Columbia, and 16 other countries/territories and impacts almost 1.3 million students annually in grades K-12 and postsecondary institutions.

AVID Chief Executive Officer Sandy Husk, PhD, noted the significance of attaining Demonstration Site recognition. “Schools recognized as National Demonstration Sites have proven their ability to successfully implement the AVID Elective course and take the strategies schoolwide to impact all students,” she said. “East Ridge Middle School was selected as an AVID National Demonstration School because it has implemented the AVID System throughout the school and can serve as a model for new AVID sites.”

The recognition of being an AVID National Demonstration School was established in 1993 with a $250,000 award from the Charles A. Dana Foundation of New York. As part of the AVID Demonstration Sites Network, sites are expected to develop a model program with schoolwide participation. With AVID’s proven methodologies used throughout subject-area classes, performance levels improve for all students, but especially for those students who are the least likely to attend four-year colleges. Schools from around the world that are preparing to implement the AVID System will visit Demonstration Schools, such as this one, to observe a highly evolved AVID System.

Stephanie Mayuski, East Ridge Middle School principal, is pleased that the school was chosen as an AVID National Demonstration School, noting the impact of the program on staff and students. “It is a tremendous honor to be selected as a Demo, and we are proud of our AVID program and our school as a whole,” she said. “The use of AVID strategies schoolwide has positively impacted students and staff, and we continue to see a more engaged and college-ready student body.”

Contest winners will get college help

By Florida Department of Education

Gov. Rick Scott and First Lady Ann Scott have invited Florida K-12 students to participate in the 2018 Black History Month art and essay contests based on this year’s theme, “A Celebration of Innovative African-American Leaders.” Students, parents, teachers and principals are also invited to nominate full-time educators in elementary, middle and high schools for the Black History Month Excellence in Education Award.

“Ann and I are proud to join Florida families in celebrating Black History Month this February and encourage every Florida student to participate in the 2018 Black History Month contests and nominate one of our state’s great educators for the Excellence in Education Award,” the governor said.

The Black History Month art contest is open to all Florida students in grades K-3. Two winners will be selected.

The Black History Month essay contest is open to all Florida students in grades 4-12. Three winners will be selected: one elementary student (grades 4-5), one middle-school student (grades 6-8), and one high school student (grades 9-12). Winners will receive a four-year Florida College Plan scholarship provided by the Florida Prepaid College Foundation.

The annual Black History Month Excellence in Education Award Contest is open to all full-time educators in an elementary, middle or high school in Florida. Three winners will be selected: one elementary teacher (grades K-5), one middle school teacher (grades 6-8) and one high school teacher (grades 9-12).

Student contest forms and educator nomination forms must be submitted online at www.FloridaBlackHistory.com or mailed to:

Teacher selected for Supreme Court training program

By Lake County Schools

TAVARES – Julie Lively, who teaches 7th grade civics at Tavares Middle School, has been selected to participate in the 2018 Justice Teaching Institute sponsored by the Supreme Court of Florida.

The program provides innovative hands-on training to 20 to 25 secondary teachers in Florida each year. It is recognized internationally as a model in law-related civic education, and its graduates receive the honor of becoming Fellows of the Justice Teaching Institute. Past Fellows include Howard Gowan of Clermont Middle School and Vincent Montuori of Lake Minneola High School, both in 2014.

The training, scheduled for

Feb. 18-22, incorporates an overview of the state courts system, history of the Supreme Court of Florida, mock oral arguments, technology and the courts, alternative dispute resolution, law-related lessons, case studies, visits to trial and appellate courts and more.

“I am incredibly excited to spend a week in our state’s capital learning directly from the Florida Supreme Court,” Lively said. “The knowledge I bring back to Tavares Middle School students will help make meaningful connections for our students that a textbook just can’t make. I hope it also inspires my students to know that we are lifelong learners and our education doesn’t stop when we leave the classroom.”

Julie Lively, who teaches 7th grade civics at Tavares Middle School, has been selected to participate in the 2018 Justice Teaching Institute sponsored by the Supreme Court of Florida. “I am incredibly excited to spend a week in our state’s capital learning directly from the Florida Supreme Court,” Lively said. Announcer Keith Jackson, 89, dies

Sportscaster with 'Whoa, Nelly!' call 'the perfect voice for college football'

By Jay Reeves
The Associated Press

Keith Jackson laid down the soundtrack to Saturday for a generation of college football fans with phrases such as his signature "Whoa, Nelly!"

From the World Series to the Olympics, NFL to NBA, he did it all over five decades as a sportscaster, but most appropriately his final assignment before retiring 12 years ago was one of the greatest college football games ever.

Jackson died Friday. He was 89.

A statement by ESPN, which consolidated with ABC Sports, Jackson's longtime employer, announced his death Saturday. No cause was given. He was a longtime resident of Sherman Oaks, California, and died near his home there.

A native of west Georgia, near the Alabama border, his smooth baritone voice and use of phrases like "big uglies" for linemen gave his game calls a familiar feel.

"He was one of our giants," longtime broadcaster Brent Musburger told The Associated Press. "He could do anything and loved doing it."

Jackson might be best known for his "Whoa, Nelly!" exclamation, but he didn't overuse it. Borrowed from his great-grandfather, a farmer, the phrase also part of a commercial Jackson did for Miller Lite in the mid-'90s. But it was no catchphrase.

"He never made anything up," Musburger said. "That's how Keith talked."

In a Fox Sports interview in 2013, Jackson said his folksy language stemmed from his rural upbringing and he became comfortable with the usage through the years.

"I would go around and pluck things off the bush and PHILADELPHIA — Fly Eagles Fly.

With the wind and against it.

With Nick Foles engineering several long drives, Jake Elliott converting three field goals, and the defense getting stingy in the tightest spot, Philadelphia moved into the NFC championship game with a 15-10 victory over the Atlanta Falcons on Saturday.

Foles directed brilliant marches of 74 and 80 yards in the second half — one into the whipping wind, the other with it — and Elliott atoned for missing an extra point by converting from 53 yards at the end of the second quarter, 37 and 21 in the second half. Then the Eagles (14-3) held when Atlanta (11-7) got to the 9-yard line with a first down, and to the 2 on fourth down.

When Matt Ryan's final pass sailed over Julio Jones' head in the end zone, Philly could celebrate its first playoff victory since the 2008 season.

Next Sunday, the Eagles will host either Minnesota or New Orleans for the conference crown. The Eagles last made the Super Bowl in the 2004 season, losing to New England.

No. 23 Florida State defeats Syracuse

TALLAHASSEE — Florida State squandered a double-digit halftime lead for the second straight game, but this time it was able to overcome that despite needing overtime.

The 23rd-ranked Seminoles scored the first six points in the second overtime to propel them to a 101-90 victory over Syracuse on Saturday.

"This is a very big win for us. Going 2-3 (in the Atlantic Coast Conference) is better than 1-4," said Brian Angola, who had 24 points, including five in the second overtime. "We let Louisville slip out of our hands. Today we executed what we had to do."

Jaguars surging, Steelers wary in high-stakes rematch

PITTSBURGH — At the time the score looked like a misprint.

Jacksonville 30. Pittsburgh 9.

On the road.

A result so stunningly one-sided Steelers quarterback Ben Roethlisberger stood in the locker room on that gray October afternoon and only half-jokingly wondered if he still had "it."

Throwing five interceptions, two of which the Jaguars returned for momentum-swinging, confidence-sapping touchdowns, will do that.

Yet Roethlisberger insists he's not out for revenge in the rematch on Sunday when the Jaguars (11-6) visit Heinz Field in the divisional round with a trip to the AFC title game on the line.

There's too much at stake for him to settle some sort of personal vendetta.

Or so he says.

"I'll play anyone in the postseason," Roethlisberger said.

Only Jacksonville isn't "anyone." Not anymore. Not after the NFL's top-ranked defense proved that breakout performance three months ago was a sign of things to come.

The Jaguars don't play a particularly pretty brand of football. They also don't particularly care.

Doubt them all you want. Mock their offense at your leisure.

Last they checked, there will be 24 teams watching the playoffs this weekend and Jacksonville isn't one of them.

"We've just got to score one more point than they do," Jaguars quarterback Blake Bortles said.

Ole Miss beats Florida 78-72 with strong inside game

The Associated Press

OXFORD, Miss. — Deandre Burnett had beaten Florida before in his college career, but each time after is just as sweet to him.

Bruce Stevens scored 22 points, Burnett added 20, and Mississippi held off Florida for a 78-72 win on Saturday afternoon.

Burnett — a transfer from the University of Miami — added six assists and two rebounds. It was his first game back after sitting out against No. 22 Auburn last Tuesday after a bout with the flu.

"It's very big being in Florida and beating a team like Florida," Burnett said. "I felt great. The win helped me push through. My teammates behind me and us staying together just got us a real gutsy win down the stretch."

The Rebels (10-7, 3-2 Southeastern Conference) used success in the paint and on the boards to hand the Gators their first conference loss of the season.

Ole Miss shot 41 percent from the floor, including 15 of 25 in the second half, outscored the Gators 32-22 in the paint, and out-rebounded them 44-35. After shooting 30 percent in the first half, the Rebels doubled it with a 60 percent effort in the second.

"I think our ball movement was a little bit better," Ole Miss coach Andy Kennedy said. "We were still trying to go through Bruce (Stevens) because Bruce had 10 or 12 (points) at the half. We were trying to make a concerted effort of throwing it close and don't settle. In the second half, quite frankly, we just made more shots."

After one for the ages, Australian Open now a fitness test

By John Pye
The Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — With Rafael Nadal and Novak Djokovic among the walking wounded and Serena Williams already deciding not to defend her title, injuries and absences have been the focus of attention ahead of the Australian Open.

That's not bothering Roger Federer, who is returning as defending champion just 12 months after entering the season-opening Grand Slam tournament seeded 17th and uncertain of his prospects after six months off the tour with an injured left knee.

He beat Nadal in a five-set final for his 18th Grand Slam title — and his first since 2012 — and later won Wimbledon.

"I just thought that the game and the wins weren't going to come ... because I would just run into a red-hot Djokovic or Murray or Nadal or somebody and my game wasn't going to be good enough," Federer recalled. "I had all these great five-setters and, at the end, the epic match against Rafa. After six, seven matches, you start feeling like a different player, that you can't miss anymore. The fifth set (of the final) was maybe the best set I ever played."

"What a comeback it was and it was definitely the highlight of the year."

Second-seeded Federer and No. 14-seeded Djokovic have almost traded places.

This time, Federer breezily walked into the Australian Open draw carrying the trophy just a few days after helping Switzerland win the Hopman Cup mixed team even. His 2017 comeback could be inspiration for the likes of Djokovic, who has won the Australian title a record six times but has been sidelined since Wimbledon with a right elbow injury.

They're in the same half of the draw — along with No. 4 Alexander Zverev, No. 5 Dominic Thiem, No. 7 David Goffin and No. 9 Stan Wawrinka, the 2014 Australian Open winner who is also returning from injury.

Nadal skipped the year-end championship last November and delayed the start of his 2018 season, so he's also had only exhibition matches to see how his right knee has recovered.

"If I'm not feeling good, probably I will not be here," Nadal said after his error-filled loss to Richard Gasquet in an exhibition this week. "So that's the good news."

Five-time finalist Andy Murray withdrew more than a week ahead of time, deciding to have surgery on a right hip problem that had kept him off the tour since Wimbledon. Kei Nishikori also withdrew.

And so if the 2017 Australian Open was one for the ages — the revival of the Federer-Nadal rivalry and another Williams sisters final — the 2018 edition is shaping as a survival of the fittest.

Serena Williams, who was pregnant when she beat Venus here last year to claim her 23rd major title, gave birth to her first child — Alexis Olympia — in September. She said it didn't leave her enough time to feel confident of winning a major.

The No. 1-ranked in 2017, with five different women assuming top spot — three for the first time.

Venus Williams says Serena is "here in spirit" supporting her in Australia, where she's hopeful of ending an almost decade-long Grand Slam title drought. At 37, Venus is seeded No. 5, coming off a loss to former No. 1 Anglique Kerber in Sydney and has a tough opener against Belinda Bencic, who combined with Federer last week to win the Hopman Cup.

"I feel my biggest expectation is from myself," Venus Williams said, dismissing any notion that age or expectations will weigh heavily on her. "No one ever wants to let themselves down."

She led the WTA Tour in prize money last year ahead of Wimbledon champion Garbine Muguruza and Simona Halep, who ended the year at No. 1.

Entering as the No. 1 seed for the first time at a major and at a tournament where she's had back-to-back first-round exits, two-time French Open finalist Halep opens against teenage wild-card entry Destanee Aiava. She could face two-time Wimbledon champion Petra Kvitova in the third round and Karolina Pliskova in the quarters.

Muguruza, who withdrew from the Sydney International before the quarterfinals with a sore right thigh after retiring during her first match at the Brisbane International because of cramping, is in the same quarter as U.S. Open finalist Madison Keys, Australian Open 2016 champion Kerber and five-time major winner Maria Sharapova, returning to Melbourne two years after a failed doping test here led to a 15-month suspension.

Muguruza is expecting the constant changes at the top of the women's game to continue in 2018. "I don't feel there's somebody that different from the rest," Muguruza said. "This is going to be a very interesting year. A lot of changing, I feel."

No. 2 Caroline Wozniacki, who hasn't won a major and last appeared in a Grand Slam final in 2014, is on the bottom half of the draw with Williams and has French Open champion Jelena Ostapenko and last year's Australian semifinalist CoCo Vandeweghe in her quarter.

Missy Franklin starting new chapter in Georgia

By Beth Harris
The Associated Press

Missy Franklin has gone to the dogs, as in the Georgia Bulldogs.

The five-time Olympic gold medalist has relocated to Athens, Georgia, where she is pursuing a psychology degree and mounting a comeback in the pool.

Starting the new year with a cross-country move from Northern California, where she was attending the University of California in Berkeley, was a huge decision for the 22-year-old from Colorado. Although happy training under Cal men's coach Dave Durden, Franklin longed for the support her extended family in Georgia could provide and the chance to be around a women's and men's team run by one coach.

Finally, she decided, it was time to do what was best for her.

"I really struggled with that for a while because I looked at it from a selfish perspective," she told The Associated Press by phone on Thursday. "It really isn't a selfish decision. I started thinking about the road I have ahead of me. I started looking at options, which is really big for me."

That road includes the 2020 Tokyo Olympics.

Another chance on her sport's biggest stage would be redemptive for Franklin. She had a puzzling clunker of a showing at the 2016 Rio de Janeiro Games after barely making the U.S. team, a memory she's eager to replace.

Franklin washed out in her individual events and earned gold for a morning preliminary swim on a relay. It was a stunning result for the bubbly teenager who won four golds and a bronze swimming in seven events in London.

A couple months before Rio, Franklin was diagnosed with depression and anxiety. She kept it all to herself, though, and publicly smiled through the difficulties she endured at the games.

Even while mired in her woes, Franklin noticed a change in Michael Phelps. Her teammate was visibly different from the previous four years, smiling and happy and enjoying the sport.

She knew she wanted that for herself again.

Last year, Franklin underwent a pair of shoulder surgeries that kept her out of the pool. She missed the U.S. nationals and world championships in Hungary, leaving her plenty of time to reconsider her priorities and focus.

When she was considering colleges after her breakout four golds performance at the 2012 London Olympics, Georgia was runner-up to Cal. Now, it's her first choice.

The move has reunited Franklin with Bulldogs coach Jack Bauerle, who coached her when she made her first national team at age 13. He kept in touch even after Franklin settled on the West Coast.

"I've always adored him," she said. "He cares about you."

Franklin no longer competes in the collegiate ranks. Her fellow pros who train at Georgia include national team members Chase Kalisz, Melanie Margalis and Olivia Smoliga.

Besides extended family, Franklin is back in the same city as her Cal roommate who teaches in Atlanta. Her long-time boyfriend isn't far away in Nashville.

"It already feels like home," she said. "I felt so welcomed and so accepted."

That's important to Franklin, a self-described people pleaser who was always worried about others' opinions and happiness, sometimes at her own expense.

"That was some hard lessons I had to learn at 16, 17. It's impossible to please everyone and make everyone happy all the time," she said. "To be able to sit here and shrug off those opinions that don't matter took me a lot to learn."

Franklin remembers walking into Durden's office at Cal to tell him she was moving on, and she felt good about it.

"I can truly say I don't know if I would still be swimming if it wasn't for Dave Durden," she said. "He's one of those coaches that want the best for me."

Franklin is wrapping up her first week of classes in Athens, still about 1 1/2 years from earning a degree after some of her credits from Cal didn't transfer. She's going full-on in the pool, too, working with Bauerle on building up her stamina and strength in pursuit of regaining her speed.

She's hitting the weight room and feeling reassured that her shoulders are healed, although she sees a physical therapist a few times a week for maintenance.

She may swim some Pro Series meets in the coming months. Her main target is U.S. nationals in July in Southern California.

"I'm kind of coming back from the bottom," she said. "I could feel pressure because people are expecting a comeback, but I don't care. I don't really care what kind of pressure people are putting on me because I can't control that."

Instead, Franklin is focused on why she wants to swim again.

"I want to get back to that 17-year-old who truly loved the sport," she said. "It's less about the hardware I bring back and more about getting back there and showing people the Missy that is so happy."

Travel an extra grind for Division I's smallest schools

By John Marshall
The Associated Press

POCATELLO, Idaho — As the bus rolls past mileage signs for places like Malad City, Arimo and Woodruff, the long frames of Northern Arizona's basketball players splay across the seats. Heads rest on makeshift pillows of jackets and backpacks, legs stretch across aisles, feet rise above headrests.

Outside, flurries dance in the headlights as roadside reflectors flash like car turn signals. Yellow weed stalks, evidence of a recent thaw, peek through the white blanket along the highway.

Pockets of dense fog envelop the bus, visibility measured in yards for perilous moments before thankfully clearing.

The players are oblivious to the cold world outside. Their only concern is finding comfort on this opening three-hour leg of a two-day return to Flagstaff, Arizona.

"It's pretty hard travel after a game," NAU coach Jack Murphy said. "You want to get home, get the guys some rest on their day off, but it's a long day of travel on their 'day off.'"

Travel is one of the most arduous aspects of college basketball. Hours upon hours every season are dedicated to getting to the next town, buses and planes essentially becoming players' and coaches' mobile second homes.

Some have it easier than others.

At the highest levels of Division I, buses park next to charter planes filled with spacious seats, teams' schedules based on when the runway is open. Convenience affords efficiency: Practice at home, fly out in the evening, play the next day, head straight home.

Travel at the low-major level can feel like "Planes, Trains and Automobiles." All that's missing is the train and Del Griffith.

Charter flights are not within the smallest D-I schools' budget, so commercial is the only way to go. That means long security lines and clock-watching gate waits, just for the opportunity to fold into seats barely big enough for averaged-sized humans.

Six-foot-10 and a middle seat is like 5-9 squeezed into a toddler car seat.

"I'm hurting for like two hours and when I get up, my knees finally get back to normal," said Isaiah Thomas, NAU's 6-9 junior forward. "It's not enjoyable."

Nor is planning.

The dilemma: Early-morning practice before flying out or a pre-sunrise departure to practice later at the destination? For the return, leave early on little sleep and rest later or sleep in and get back later?

No matter how coaches work it, the players end up tired.

"You have to factor it in," Sacramento State coach Brian Katz said. "You try to convince your guys, you're 19 years old, you shouldn't get tired from anything. But in your mind you try to account for it because it's a factor for sure."

••• Northern Arizona's 26-person contingent — 15 players — started its two-game road trip to Utah and Idaho just before 7 a.m. at Flagstaff Pulliam Airport.

A two-hour layover in Phoenix followed, a nearly two-hour flight to Salt Lake City next, a 50-minute bus ride north to Ogden after that. Once at the hotel, players grab room keys from director of basketball operations Bryan Fisher, get a short rest, then it's a film session in a conference room and practice at Weber State's Dee Events Center — 11 hours after leaving home.

"You can spend an entire day trying to get where you need to go," said Mitch Strohmman, radio and TV voice of NAU basketball since 1991. "People don't understand how much energy that sucks out of you. You're exhausted. That's a lot to ask the body to do, no matter how young you are."

Young college try: Boeser, Keller impress as NHL rookies

By Stephen Whyno
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In his final season at the University of North Dakota, Brock Boeser took a high-level course on what life in the NHL would be like. He aced it.

Boeser fought through a wrist injury that required surgery and was defended like the star he is quickly becoming as a rookie with the Vancouver Canucks.

"More guys started keying on you, so I think you learn from that," Boeser said. "The frustrations, I think you really can develop from that."

Boeser developed into the NHL's only rookie All-Star and is making a quick adjustment to the professional game along with fellow NCAA product Clayton Keller, who went from Boston University to a substantial role with the Arizona Coyotes in his first season. Five of the league's top eight rookie scorers came out of five different college programs: Boeser, Keller, the Boston Bruins' Danton Heinen from Denver, the Winnipeg Jets' Kyle Connor from Michigan and the Colorado Avalanche's Alexander Kerfoot from Harvard.

"The facilities and stuff they have really allowed you to grow (and help) your body get stronger," Boeser said. "I think college hockey is a great route to go through. Keller's one of my buddies, too, and to see him have that success doesn't surprise me."

Boeser and Keller each benefited from not coming into the NHL cold during training camp. The Coyotes and Canucks decided to sign them late last season and plug them directly into the lineup, which gave them a head start.

"I got a little bit of a taste last year, so I knew what to expect," said Keller, who's third among rookies and leads Arizona with 32 points. "It was huge. You never really know how hard it is until you play in the NHL and see how fast and strong guys are."

No matter how fast and strong the rest of the league is, it hasn't slowed these

Vancouver Canucks right wing Brock Boeser (6) skates during overtime of a game against the San Jose Sharks on Dec. 21, 2017, in San Jose, Calif. The 23rd overall pick of the 2015 NHL draft opened some eyes last season, notching four goals and an assist in nine games. He's kept that pace going this season. [AP PHOTO / MARCIO JOSE SANCHEZ, FILE] college-cultured rookies. Boeser is fifth among all players with 22 goals and is by far Vancouver's leading scorer with 40 points.

"I'm not worried about the next step for him," Canucks coach Travis Green said. "The league's been trying to focus on him for a little while here, and he seems to be doing all right. If things don't go his own way, good players find a way to get themselves out of it."

Like Boeser, Keller knows what he doesn't know, namely what an 82-game schedule would be like after college games were mostly on weekends. Halfway through, he has begun to figure it out.

"You never really get much rest, and I think the days that you do get off, you really have to recover and take care of your body," Keller said. "It's definitely a grind and I think you've just got to take care of your body and good things will happen."

Keller is one of the best things to happen this season for the NHL-worst Coyotes, who could use him as a building block for their future. First-year coach Rick Tocchet noticed Keller in rookie camp and has seen the 19-year-old Missouri native's defensive game and quickness to the puck improve with experience.

"He's got a very outstanding hockey IQ," Tocchet said. "I think if you're a young player and you have a high hockey IQ, you can have a really good chance to be a good player in this league. ... He doesn't force passes, too. That's what I like about him. He just doesn't throw pucks away. A lot of his goals are around the net. He's a 19-year-old, 180-pound kid that is not afraid to go to the net."

Boeser isn't afraid of anything at age 20 and has the kind of shot that Washington Capitals coach Barry Trotz compares to Alex Ovechkin's. Ovechkin teammate T.J. Oshie, a fellow North Dakota product, worked out with Boeser last summer and was impressed by his shot, strength and ability to make the right play.

"He seems not to overthink with the puck," Oshie said. "Skating, the thing that surprised me most was the jump in his speed, how quick he was from a standstill, and also his shot. He doesn't have the biggest (stick) curve, but the way he's able to release the puck is really quick, really hard."

Boeser arrived in the NHL with that kind of shot and gained confidence from playing nine games with the Canucks last spring. He also came equipped with the same kind of smarts Tocchet raves about with Keller, so perhaps it's not surprising that Boeser had similarly positive results.

FISHING REPORT

Source: maps4news.com/©HERE

GATEHOUSE MEDIA

Tip of the week: According to www.fishingtipsdepot.com, when perch fishing, live bait on a crappie rig often works best. Stay focused, though, as perch are known for being excellent bait muggers.

1. Yankeetown/Waccasassa: According to Jim Zaloga, sheepshead are in ledges and rock piles offshore. Shrimp have proven to be the best bait. Redfish are up the creeks, and most are undersized. Live shrimp and mud minnows work best with those.

2. Crystal River/Homosassa: Capt. William Toney said that this past week's weather dropped the water temperatures to a lethal low for most fish. Toney said he saw some dead snook, mullet, ladyfish, pinfish and one trout. The water temperature at Hell's Gate on Sunday was a chilly 48.7 degrees. Although the area did take a good hit, he said he understands that the local consensus is that it was not as bad as the freeze 10 years ago. On the bright side, he did see small schools of redfish and trout sunning on the shallow banks of the river who appeared healthy when they saw his vessel, taking off at full speed. The Citrus County coastline rivers with its many springs became life saving refuges for manatees and fish. He believes what fish did not go to the springs are out in deep Gulf waters riding out the cold and will return back to the shallows in time. Those fish that perished were quickly taken advantage of by many different marine birds and mammals. He said he had a buzzard who flew off with more than he could hold onto and nearly had a direct hit on his boat with a large jack crevalle! A cold-water fish that should be ready to bite is the sheepshead. The nearshore rocks are the best spots to target. Finding live shrimp may be an issue for bait, but fiddler crabs or small rock crabs will work just as well. He uses a 2/0 Owner Bait style hook with a 1/4 oz. sliding sinker (knocker rig). Cast just to the edge of the structure and let it settle in the sand. A sheepshead bite can be subtle so if you feel the line bounce or become heavy set the hook. This weekend's incoming tide will be mid-morning.

3. Withlacoochee: Capt. Bob at Angler's Resort on the Withlacoochee River in Dunnellon reports that fishing on the river and Lake Rousseau continues to be on the slow side. Those fishing in the deep holes and phosphate pits using Missouri minnows are having some success catching crappie. Those using worms and fishing slow on the bottom, on the river and lake, have had some success catching bass. Those using wild and domestic shiners on the river and the lake are still having some success also. Remember to practice catch and release.

4. Orange Lake/Lochloosa: Laurie at Lochloosa Harbor is reporting that specks are biting with regularity near the middle. Some have come in around two pounds. The baits of choice primarily have been live minnows with a jig edge and a skirt. There haven't been many bass caught, and those that have been brought in haven't been very big.

5. Ocklawaha River: Roger Robins at Buck 'N Bass Sports Center reports that the Ocklawaha River and Rodman Reservoir have produced nice bass on wild shiners and sink-type worms in junebug and green pumpkin color spectrums. Specks have been caught below the dam and in the river heading towards Highway 19.

6. Salt Springs: Roger Robins at Buck 'N Bass Sports Center reports that fishing on Lake George, Lake Kerr and Salt Springs Run continues to be hit or miss with the weather. The people who are fishing continues to catch bass and specks. Specks are being caught at the bombing range in Lake George and in Lake Kerr. Minnows and Jiffy Jigs trolled are the best bait.

7. Forest Lakes: Roger Robins at Buck 'N Bass Sports Center reports that Lake Delancy has been producing a few bass with signs of moving onto the beds for spawning.

8. Lake Weir: Fat Daddy's reports that specks were caught here in abundance in late December. Most are using either small minnows with jigs or large minnows without jigs. Halfmoon Lake and Lake Bryant also have seen specks caught with regularity.

9. Harris Chain: According to BassOnline.com, bass often can be found here in the open water. The canals have them at times, too.

10. Panasoffkee/Tsala: No update.

11. Astor Park: Roger Robins at Buck 'N Bass Sports Center reports that fishing hasn't been slow on the St. John's River from the south end of Lake George to Astor Bridge due to high water. When the water drops, bass should start moving into the canals and in beds. Specks are showing up under Astor Bridge but in limited schools.

12. Ponce Inlet: According to www.floridasightfishing.com, the bite is still red hot in the Mosquito Lagoon and near New Smyrna Beach and Ponce Inlet. Redfish have been biting with regularity since Hurricane Irma. Tours are fishing schools of redfish every morning in Mosquito Lagoon and wrapping things up catching bunches of spotted sea trout. There are lots of snook and tarpon in the deeper waters around New Smyrna. Fishing is not going slow down for a while, then we'll start to see baitfish thinning out and the fall transition taking place. Fishing for Mosquito Lagoon redfish have been excellent the last couple weeks. Lower water levels have the fish schooled up big time during the morning. Numerous groups of 75-150 grouped up fish ranging between five and 10 pounds. Giant bull reds have also been schooled up in both lagoons for their annual spawn with fish in the 20-40 pound range coming to the boat each day recently. Summer and early fall is prime time for catching these trophy-sized redfish. Live bait has been the ticket with mullet, pinfish, pigfish all catching plenty. Soft plastics, plugs and spoons have worked when throwing lures. The speckled trout bite in Mosquito Lagoon is still going strong. It's also picked up well in New Smyrna Beach around oysters, creek shorelines, and docks. Live bait is producing around 15-to-20 trout each day. Many are smaller keeper-sized fish with some big ones upwards of seven or eight pounds. Fishing for speckled trout will remain like this until the cold fronts start to roll through and baitfish supplies run out in late September. Fishing for snook n New Smyrna Beach and Ponce Inlet has been good around the docks, bridges and shorelines. However, it's going to get even better next month when cold fronts start to get going and baitfish begin their fall migration. Where snook are hanging out now makes for tougher fishing with heavy gear and lots of lost fish or break-offs but anglers are getting a fair number of bites each time out.

In this Jan. 25, 2014 file photo, Keith Jackson arrives at 66th Annual DGA Awards Dinner at the Hyatt Regency Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles. Jackson, the down-home voice of college football during more than five decades as a broadcaster, died Friday. He was 89.

see if I could find a different way to say some things. And the older I got the more willing I was to go back into the Southern vernacular because some of it's funny," Jackson said.

ESPN "College GameDay" host Rece Davis, who grew up in Alabama, said listening to Jackson assured him that it was OK for a national broadcaster to sound Southern.

"Some people become the voice of the sport through their expertise, which Keith certainly had. But it's almost as if the good Lord created that voice, which sounds like what red clay ought to sound like if it could talk, to be the perfect voice for college football," Davis told the AP.

Jackson is a member of the Sports Broadcasting Hall of Fame, and called more Rose Bowl games, 15, than any other announcer.

"When you heard his voice, you knew it was a big game," said Bob Iger, chairman and chief executive of The Walt Disney Co., which owns ESPN.

Jackson's death comes just three weeks after that of another sportscasting titan — Dick Enberg, known for his own excited calls of "Oh, my!" during a 60-year career.

Kirk Herbstreit was among the college football broadcasters paying tribute to Jackson on social media.

"Can close my eyes and think of so many of his special calls. Thank you Keith for all the memories and the grace in which you provided them," Herbstreit posted on Twitter.

After serving four years in the Marine Corps, Jackson broadcast his first college football game in 1952 as an undergraduate at Washington State. He worked in radio and television before joining ABC Sports in 1966.

Jackson first announced his retirement in 1998 but returned to work. He retired for good after the 2006 Rose Bowl, when he called Texas' upset of Southern California for the BCS championship on Vince Young's last-minute touchdown scramble.

"Fourth-and-5. The national championship on the line right here," Jackson said right before Young took the snap on that memorable play. "He's going for the cornerrrr. He's got it! Vince. Young. Scores."

The Rose Bowl stadium's radio and TV booths were renamed in his honor two years ago. He is in the Rose Bowl Hall of Fame for his contributions to the New Year's Day game, which he is credited with nicknaming "The Granddaddy of Them All."

Jackson was also the first play-by-play announcer on ABC's "Monday Night Football" telecasts before being replaced in the program's second season by Frank Gifford.

He called multiple World Series and baseball All-Star games, and was ABC's lead NBA play-by-play announcer. He worked college basketball with Dick Vitale, and covered 10 Olympics, calling swimming, track and field, basketball, speedskating and ski jumping.

Musburger recalled doing the radio play-by-play for the 1986 National League championship series between the Mets and Astros when Jackson was on the television call ABC. The series ended in the Astrodome with a dramatic, 16-inning victory in Game 6 by the Mets.

"Keith was in the television booth right next to me," Musburger said. "I'll never forget when the game was over, Keith's hand, and I didn't know whose hand it was, but it came around the corner extension into the radio booth and he offered me a vodka after the game to celebrate what we had been through."

Desmond Howard, who returned a punt for a touchdown at Michigan in one of Jackson's best-known calls, tweeted that he had a hard time expressing how much Jackson meant to him, his alma mater and college football.

"May his family find some comfort in knowing how much joy he brought us for so many years and that his legacy endures," Howard said.

Jackson is survived by his wife of 63 years, Turi Ann.

Funeral arrangements were not announced.

December. "That was it. Our team never wavered, defense did an amazing job, special teams — that's just been the story this year is that we just all stuck together..."

Foles finished a very efficient outing by going 23 of 30 for 246 yards.

The Falcons, of course, memorably blew a 28-3 second-half lead to the Patriots in last year's Super Bowl. They will not get the opportunity to atone for it, though Ryan got them close at the end. Jones had nine receptions for 101 yards, and Ryan was 22 of 36 for 210 yards on a difficult day to throw.

Despite being underdogs as the No. 1 seed, the Eagles showed plenty of moxie.

A masterful 74-yard, 12-play drive on which Foles was 5 for 6 for 70 yards — the only incompletion was Jay Ajayi's drop — led to Elliott's 37-yard kick into the wind that made it 12-10.

The Eagles put together their best drive, an 80-yarder covering 14 plays, yet again faltered close to the end zone. Elliott added a 21-yarder with 6:02 remaining after coach Doug Pederson briefly considered going for it on fourth-and-1 at the Atlanta 3.

Then, as the fans in the Linc held their breath, the Eagles held deep in their territory.

"Man, just stay calm," said defensive tackle Fletcher Cox, who was a force all day. "We always talk about that. We've been in those situations during the regular season, so we kind of know how to handle those situations, not try to make a play but let the play come to us."

And the road to the Super Bowl remains through Philly.

Falcons coach Dan Quinn could have opted to take the wind in the fourth quarter after deferring on the opening coin toss. Instead, he took the ball to start the second half, but it was the Eagles who got the only points of the third period. And in the end, Atlanta had to deal with the currents on that final drive, which included a 20-yard completion to Jones on fourth-and-6.

Mistakes hurt the Eagles in the opening half. Ajayi's fumble and a misplayed punt that bounced off Bryan Braman led to all 10 Atlanta points.

Things began nicely for Philadelphia when safety Brian Poole was tagged with pass interference on a deep pass by Foles that was held up by the wind. But Ajayi fumbled on the next play with Keanu Neal recovering.

Atlanta efficiently mixed runs and passes to drive to Matt Bryant's 33-yard field goal for an early lead.

That was it for most of the opening quarter, though Philadelphia got the run game going with Ajayi in the final moments. Then, with the wind, the Eagles kept the Falcons off-balance so much Atlanta took two timeouts in three plays.

Receiver Nelson Agholor's 21-yard run got the ball to the 3, and Foles botched a handoff to Corey Clement. But the quarterback quickly dived on the loose ball and was ruled to have scored before replay showed him down short of the goal line.

Pederson showed no hesitation going for it, and Blount surged in from the 1. Elliott's missed extra point left it 6-3.

Soon after came Matt Bosher's punt that took a wicked bounce and hit Braman while he was blocking. From the Philly 18, the Falcons benefited from two penalties before Ryan scrambled from pressure and found Devonta Freeman for a 6-yard TD and a 10-3 lead.

With 46 seconds left in the half, the hosts got lucky. Foles' errant pass ricocheted off Neal's hands to Torrey Smith for 20 yards. Alshon Jeffery made a long stretch to haul in another throw with 1 second remaining, and Elliott's 53-yard field goal just made it over the crossbar.

Up next

Philadelphia will host either Minnesota or New Orleans next Sunday night for the NFC title.

Atlanta's season ends after a wild-card berth and a win at Los Angeles before Saturday's defeat.

JAGUARS

scores it, where it comes from, how we do it, what it looks like, we score one more than them and I'm happy with how we did it."

Bortles and the other 52 guys on the roster might be the only ones.

The Steelers (13-3) entered the season as one of the favorites to reach the Super Bowl.

Despite a fall filled with drama (much of it self-created) Pittsburgh was really only pushed around once. By the Jaguars.

Take Jacksonville lightly at your peril, something the Steelers found out on Oct. 8.

"Some people come in thinking a team may be easier by their record or tougher by their record, but we know that can't be on our mind," Pittsburgh running back Le'Veon Bell said.

"I think that kind of got us in the first game because the Jacksonville Jaguars, they're normally not a good team but those guys got players this year. They've been making plays."

If the Jaguars can do it for another 60 minutes, they'll reach the NFL's final four for just the third time in franchise history.

Yes, really.

Some things to look for as the Jaguars try to pull off a second stunner against a team that believes its season is destined to end with a trip to Minneapolis for the Super Bowl.

AB'S BACK: Pittsburgh All-Pro wide receiver Antonio Brown is expected to play after missing the final 2½ games of the regular season with a left calf contusion. Brown practiced all week, though he was sent home on Friday because of an illness.

Brown caught 10 passes for 157 yards in the first meeting with Jacksonville and his return means all of Pittsburgh's "Killer Bs" will be ready to go.

"If he's out there, I expect him to be AB," Steelers cornerback Joe Haden said.

LEONARD'S LEAP: Jaguars rookie running back Leonard Fournette hammered the Steelers for a season-high 181 yards in October, including a 2-yard touchdown leap and a 90-yard sprint to the end zone in the final two minutes that sealed it.

Fournette's production has dipped in recent weeks. He's only averaged higher than 3.9 yards per carry once over the past eight weeks, though Bortles doesn't think Fournette has smacked into the rookie wall.

"There has obviously been some hiccups and bumps in the road with different things," Bortles said. "It's not on him, it's on guys up front, it's on me getting us in the right play, receivers blocking. It's on everyone."

CHILL OUT DUDE: Temperatures are expected to be in the teens at kickoff, a decided departure for the Jaguars.

While Jacksonville coach Doug Marrone downplayed the elements, Bell believes he has an advantage when the mercury drops.

A year ago against Miami in the wild-card round, he pounded the Dolphins for 167 yards and two touchdowns as the temperature hovered around 17 degrees.

"It definitely affects guys who are tackling," Bell said. "That's why when it's cold outside I take a lot of pride because I know guys don't want to tackle."

COACH SHAY: Injured Steelers linebacker Ryan Shazier spent some time at the team's facility this week, getting around in a wheelchair while recovering from spinal stabilization surgery last month following a hit against Cincinnati that left his lower body motionless.

STATE

by Tyus Battle cut FSU's lead to 88-84 but it scored nine of the next 11 points to put it out of reach.

Christ Koumadje had a career-high 23 points and Phil Cofer added 16 for Florida State (13-4, 2-3 Atlantic Coast Conference), which played without leading scorer and rebounder Terance Mann, who missed the game due to a concussion.

"We had a little more depth, we had some guys step up and make some plays. We were fortunate to come away with a victory.... We just kind of hung on a little longer," coach Leonard Hamilton said.

Florida State had a 10-point lead at halftime but found itself down 48-41 with 10:11 left as Syracuse took advantage of turnovers and cold shooting from the perimeter. In a 73-69 loss to Louisville on Wednesday, the Seminoles led by 13 at halftime but were also victimized by poor shooting and turnovers.

This time though FSU was able to chip away. They were 5 of 24 from 3-point range at one point, but made five of their last six in regulation.

FSU had a 74-71 lead after CJ Walker made one of two free throws but Battle tied it with a 3-pointer with 6.4 seconds left. The Seminoles had a chance to win it in regulation but Mfiondu Kabengele missed a driving layup.

"They were a lot more aggressive than we were in that period (when Syracuse made a 19-3 run)," Hamilton said. "Then PJ (Savoy) made a couple 3s, Braian made a couple baskets and we got some momentum going. Sometimes you need games like this to reach down deep and overcome some challenges."

Syracuse scored the first four points in the first overtime but was unable to hold on. Trent Forrest tied it at 82 with a jumper with 24 seconds remaining and Syracuse's Oshae Brissett missed a 3-pointer.

at halftime, led the Orange (12-6, 1-4) with 37 points and Brissett added 14. Battle is the first player to score 30 or more points in an overtime game for the Orange since Rakeem Christmas had 35 against Wake Forest on Jan. 3, 2015.

"We put some motion in which helped open things up for us in the lane," Battle said. "We need to start grinding out some wins."

BIG PICTURE

Syracuse: The Oranges have dropped four straight conference games for the second time since joining the ACC in 2013. Despite being 1-4 in the ACC, coach Jim Boeheim is not alarmed over the slow start.

"We had a tough start including three on the road but we've played close games," he said. "I think we can play better on offense. We've got an extremely young team. Everyone knew that coming in."

Florida State: The Seminoles are likely to be short-handed going into Monday's game at Boston College. Besides Mann being in concussion protocol and being doubtful, Savoy could miss some extended time after going down with a right knee injury with 2:04 remaining in regulation. Savoy had 11 points and helped lead the Seminoles back with a pair of 3-pointers in the second half.

POLL IMPLICATIONS

The win might be able to keep Florida State in the rankings for the sixth straight week despite Wednesday's loss to Louisville.

ROLE PLAYER

Trent Forrest got his first career start in place of the injured Mann. The 6-foot-5 sophomore scored seven points and had a career high 11 rebounds

DIVERSIONS

Love wasn't enough to keep man close to grandparents

DEAR ABBY: I love my grandson dearly. He lived with us off and on growing up because there were problems in his birth family.

When he grew up he joined the military and met a girl on the opposite side of the country who he's planning to marry.

To say our hearts are broken doesn't describe our feelings of abandonment and sorrow. While we think he's making a mistake by marrying such a controlling person, we realize it's his decision to make.

Please help me deal with all this hurt. How do we cope with our feelings of betrayal and rejection from someone we love so dearly? We have done nothing to deserve being treated this way. -- CAST ASIDE

DEAR CAST ASIDE: Your grandson may have joined the armed forces, but where his love life is concerned, the stronger partner is his fiancée.

How they cope with their hurt and disappointment varies. Some of them talk to their religious advisers, others to therapists. The healthy ones keep their eyes forward and go on with their lives, and that's what I am hoping you eventually decide to do.

DEAR ABBY: My neighbor, "Sandy," gave me a "thank-you pie" she had baked, saying it was a family recipe. I am aware that I have reactions to the standard allergens of life, bee stings and poison ivy, but after one bite of her pumpkin pie, I felt an intense burning sensation in my mouth and my throat swelled up.

Sandy has called twice and left messages asking if I liked her pie. I haven't responded because I'm not sure what to say to her. I'd really like to know what was in that recipe so I can avoid it in the future. -- NO MORE PIE, PLEASE

DEAR N.M.P.P.: Apologize to Sandy for not returning her call sooner and explain that you didn't because you had a serious allergic reaction to one of the ingredients in her thank-you pie. Tell her you were fortunate to have had medication with you or you would have wound up in the emergency room.

BRIDGE

The bidding tells the tale

East dealer. North-South vulnerable.

NORTH: K 7 3, J 4, J 5 4 2, 10 8 7 6

WEST: A Q J 9 6 4, K 10 3, K 9 7, 5

EAST: 5 2, 9 8 6 5 2, 10 8 3, J 9 3

SOUTH: 10 8, A Q 7, A Q 6, A K Q 4 2

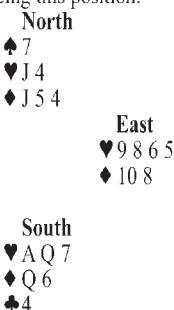

The bidding: East Pass, South 2 NT, West 3 spades, North 3 NT. Opening lead — queen of spades.

If you look at all four hands, it seems South can't make three notrump. After West leads a spade, declarer has only eight top tricks; if he tries for a ninth by taking a finesse in either red suit, West wins and cashes his remaining spades to defeat the contract.

But South made three notrump, and, what's more, there was nothing the defenders could do about it. The key to the winning line of play was West's three-spade bid, which came back to haunt him later on.

Continuation with the king. The A-K-Q of clubs were cashed. West discarding a heart and a diamond, and a fourth club was led to dummy's ten, on which West discarded a spade.

South had eight sure tricks at this point; had he tried either the heart or diamond finesse, he would have gone down one after West won and cashed three more spades. However, acting on the assumption that West had both red kings for his three-spade bid, declarer next led a diamond to the ace, producing this position:

When the club four was now cashed, West had no satisfactory reply. Since a discard in either red suit would immediately prove fatal, he elected to let go of a spade.

South thereupon exited with a low diamond, and West was a goner. After taking the king and cashing two spades, he had to concede the last two tricks to declarer's ace of hearts and queen of diamonds.

HOROSCOPES

HAPPY BIRTHDAY FOR SUNDAY, JAN. 14, 2018:

This year you become very serious-minded and accepting of new responsibilities. Remember, this attitude is only a phase. Life at times could feel heavy, but again, know that this period will end, given some time.

ARIES (MARCH 21-APRIL 19) What was acceptable yesterday might not be OK today. This feeling might be the direct result of your awareness of your responsibilities.

TAURUS (APRIL 20-MAY 20) Keep reaching out to a loved one at a distance. Your ability to turn a personal matter around emerges. You might not always like sudden change, yet you don't fight it. However, the other party involved could have a strong reaction.

GEMINI (MAY 21-JUNE 20) You mix a sense of being carefree with an element of thoughtfulness. You might need this combo to deal with a loved one and his or her reservations about a matter that involves both of you.

CANCER (JUNE 21-JULY 22) You would like to defer a problem to someone else, and you are likely to do just that. This person loves to have control, and enjoys calling the shots.

LEO (JULY 23-AUG. 22) Reach out to someone who often has strong opinions. You might like this person's suggestions when he or she explains an evolving situation.

VIRGO (AUG. 23-SEPT. 22) You might not be ready for a friend's sense of mischief. You can't help but react. Just throw yourself into the moment, and you will wind up smiling.

JACQUELINE BIGAR

BIGAR'S STARS

LIBRA (SEPT. 23-OCT. 22) Stay close to home. You need to be more present, and you could be feeling exhausted. Take a nap if you can.

SCORPIO (OCT. 23-NOV. 21) Deal with a financial matter early on, even if it's as simple as buying a lottery ticket. Once you join a friend, you will barely have any time to think.

SAGITTARIUS (NOV. 22-

DEC. 21) Be willing to admit when you are wrong about an issue. Others also have strong opinions. Reaching an agreement takes time, mutual respect and understanding.

CAPRICORN (DEC. 22-JAN. 19) You might not be sure what the best thing to do is. When encountering an unexpected jolt that affects your personal life, you might wonder if the actions you took were the right ones.

AQUARIUS (JAN. 20-FEB. 18) Reach out to someone you care a lot about. You might feel the need to withdraw and distance yourself. Do, by all means, as you will need all of your energy in the near future.

PISCES (FEB. 19-MARCH 20) You see what others can't even imagine. Part of the reason this is possible is that you are not involved. You'll look at all the actions, reactions and subsequent actions from an observer's perspective.

TODAY IN HISTORY

TODAY IS SUNDAY, JAN. 14, the 14th day of 2018. There are 351 days left in the year. TODAY'S HIGHLIGHT IN HISTORY:

On Jan. 14, 1968, the Green Bay Packers of the NFL defeated the AFL's Oakland Raiders, 33-14, in the second AFL-NFL World Championship game (now referred to as Super Bowl II). ON THIS DATE: In 1900, Puccini's opera "Tosca" had its world premiere in Rome. In 1927, the Paramount silent romantic comedy "It," starring Clara Bow (who became known as "The 'It' Girl"), had its world premiere in Los Angeles.

D. Roosevelt, British Prime Minister Winston Churchill and French General Charles de Gaulle opened a wartime conference in Casablanca. In 1963, George C. Wallace was sworn in as governor of Alabama with the pledge, "Segregation forever!" — a view Wallace later repudiated. In 1967, the Sixties' "Summer of Love" unofficially began with a "Human Be-In" involving tens of thousands of young people at Golden Gate Park in San Francisco.

In 1969, 27 people aboard the aircraft carrier USS Enterprise, off Hawaii, were killed when a rocket warhead exploded, setting off a fire and additional explosions.

FROM THE PORCH STEPS

I am three generations behind

Nina Gilfert

Different generations seem to have different priorities based on what is happening in the world at the time.

In today's "me" society we all tend to look for what is of benefit to ourselves. The feminine mystique, the quality that makes women uniquely qualified to show tenderness and love and gentleness, the quality that makes them loving wives and mothers, seems no longer important. On the other side of the coin, a loving father when he is present helps instill in a young girl these feminine qualities. Are these qualities that are so valuable to the nurturing of children being lost because women want what they see as a more valuable lifestyle for themselves in the working world? They see license as freedom. Most intelligent folks have learned that license is just another responsibility. Some unfortunate women see their menfolk as failing them and think it necessary to fill the breach. I realize that this is a matter of personal perspective.

Single fathers also are learning to discover their nurturing side when raising children on their own because it works both ways. They learn that the boys in the family may be more rough and tumble, but they need some gentleness and nurturing the same as girls. We are all learning some hard lessons.

My husband left me with five children to raise, so I was forced to be both father and mother. I would much rather have remained just a wife and mother until my children were grown but I had to find employment after 17 years off the job with no marketable skills. Many hard-working, intelligent women have done this and gone on to do a remarkable job of both. My hat is off to them. My five children may have been better served by having their own father and mother raise them, but they did a pretty good

'Together like family'

Local woman, 91, enjoys volunteering at Leesburg Regional Medical Center

By Linda Florea
Correspondent

LEESBURG — While most people avoid hospitals, Elizabeth "Betty" Kitchen finds family there as a volunteer.

Looking and acting 20 years younger than her actual age of 91, Kitchen has been a volunteer with the Leesburg Regional Medical Center Auxiliary for more than 25 years and is still going strong. She's logged over 25,000 volunteer hours over the years.

Kitchen started volunteering in her early 60s after her husband passed away. She said volunteer work gave her something rewarding to do.

"I really look forward to days I'm going to be here," Kitchen said. "Each shift that I work, we work together like family."

In the past Kitchen was able to volunteer 5 days a week, and until a few years ago she helped discharged patients from the hospital. Now that it's harder for her to get around, Kitchen works at the front information desk.

Kitchen's children donated an outdoor bench at the hospital in her name for her 90th birthday.

She said volunteering is a good way for retired people to stay active and involved.

Jennifer Woods, volunteer coordinator, said many of the volunteers have similar life experiences and often become very close.

Volunteers are only required to work 4.5 hours a week, more if they want to, and are able to work the lobby desk, emergency department, urgent care, ambulatory diagnostic unit, ambulatory surgery unit, cardiovascular intensive care waiting room, intensive care waiting room, thrift shop, gift shop, human resources, health information services and as golf cart drivers.

Perks for volunteers include a free meal with every shift, an annual banquet, Volunteer of the Year award, a ham or turkey during Christmas and recognition in April for National Volunteer Week.

To volunteer, stop by the west lobby desk of the hospital for an application or call Woods at 352-323-5062.

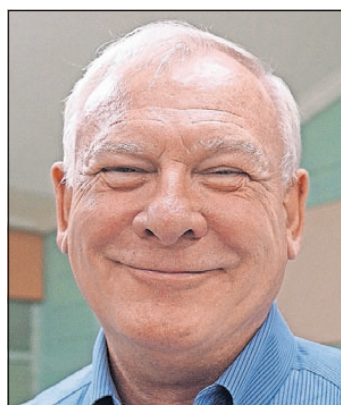

WORD ON THE STREET

WHAT IS YOUR FAVORITE 'STAR WARS' MOVIE?

"My favorite would be "A New Hope," because that's the one that started the fire. That's the one that started generations and generations of fans."

Matthew Bennett

"I'm actually going to have to go with the very first movie. The special effects at the time just blew you out of the water."

Duane "Mike" Smith

"That would have to be the original. It was just so amazing for that time period. It was something we'd never seen before. I like science fiction. "Star Wars" was great to me. It was the first big production that actually focused on science fiction stuff."

James Davis

"I'd have to say "Star Wars 5," because it was the darker of the original three movies."

LAKE COUNTY HISTORY DID YOU KNOW?

By Rick Reed
Correspondent

A clerical error by a 1920s mapmaker put a local man on a mission to correct the spelling of an important Lake County waterway.

Haynes Creek, which connects Lake Griffin and Lake Eustis, was named for Capt. Melton Haynes, who was only 18 when he arrived in 1845 to what would become Lake County. Bob Grenier, who wrote and published "Florida's Forgotten Pioneer: The Gallant Captain Melton Haynes," in 2003 took it as a personal crusade to correct the spelling of a body of water that was named to honor Haynes: Haines Creek.

Haynes began making his mark as an early pioneer and listed among his accomplishments are bringing sweet oranges to the area. He was also recognized for his military prowess during the Seminole Indian uprising in 1848. His skills as a soldier were remembered during the Civil War, when Col. J.J. Dickson, who received fame as the "Swamp Fox" of the Civil War, sought out Haynes' services.

In 2005 Grenier appealed to local municipalities and organizations to support his quest. He then petitioned the federal government to make things right.

Grenier knew that once the action became official it would take years for maps and other publications to reflect the correct spelling. But he's satisfied that the mistake has finally been made right.

Florida was booming in the early 1920s and Lake County was one of the "boom-iest" counties in the state, according to the Tampa Tribune of April 29, 1923.

The Tribune devoted 20-plus pages in two sections for its Lake County Development Section that was dominated by a 108-point "LAKE COUNTY" headline in red ink. Stories on the front page explained the reason for the boom. Headlines boasted of orange hammers, excellent roadways, unusual enterprises and an "alive" county board of trade.

Interestingly, roadways were important in bringing all the folks into Lake County. By 1923 Lake was second only to Polk County in mileage of roads. Lake County had only 215.75 miles of improved highways in 1920. When all the approved roads under the voted bond issues were built in 1923 that mileage jumped more than 50 percent to 341.75 miles. Construction projects in 1923 included the 19.1-mile Umatilla-Astor road, the 18.9-mile Eustis-Cassia road, the 13-mile South Clermont road and the 10.5-mile Lake Shore Drive, though it didn't list which Lake Shore Drive it was. There were also several shorter projects linking the highways.

job of helping raise each other as the older ones helped with the younger ones while I struggled to help support them.

I am struggling with today's mores because I am three generations behind. Things have changed so dramatically from when I was young. If we are fortunate to know our grandparents and great-grandparents, we become familiar with five generations — the one preceding ours, the one preceding our parents, our own generation and the generation after our own and their children. I remember a time when grandparents were revered for their opinions and advice. Today's grandparents understand little of their grandchild's problems because the gap has become so large. They don't even listen to their music because it is completely foreign to them.

Speaking of music, my mother and father loved music and it was a big part of our household. Their music was part of their middle-class culture and the folk tunes they learned as children. Mom sang as she went about her housework and when she rocked her babies to sleep. She talked to me sometimes of the music of her youth, of Flappers and the roaring 20's. She showed me how to do the Black Bottom.

My dad loved to sing and play the banjo, piano and mouth organ. He never had any musical training but made it up as he went along. Some of the songs he sang were never written down but were passed on from generation to generation. My mother's brother Ken sang and played the fiddle with Slim Bryant and the Georgia Wild Cats over radio KDKA in Pittsburgh. Daddy taught him some of the funny old folk songs he knew and Uncle Ken sang them on the radio. Daddy would listen and get very frustrated if he sang the words wrong.

The gulf between their music and the music of today's young people is startling. Before television and movies, singing was a large part of our entertainment. You didn't have to be good, just loud and hopefully on key.

Our world was very narrow back in the 40s and our entertainment was simple. We were a little more worldly than Mom and Dad but we were steeped in tradition. There were more divorces but most folks took their marriage vows seriously. We had more freedom because of radio, television and the automobile. We were much more mobile and sophisticated. We went to nightclubs and movies and imagined ourselves enlightened. When our young men went off to war our young women went off to work. That dynamic made a lot of changes in our way of life and it didn't change back in the next generation but became much more liberal. If you had an occasional drink, danced, dated and went to nightclubs, you were considered pretty liberal.

I am now observing the raising of the third generation beyond mine and am having a difficult time accepting the new normal. I rarely am asked my advice and I am timid about offering it. I am of the cloth diaper and Johnson's baby powder generation. The new generation has disposable diapers and Desitin.

No, your dog isn't dumb, a toy or a vegetarian

By Lisa Moore
Tribune News Service

As we start the new year, the inevitable lists begin to show up. New Year's resolution lists, want lists, to do lists, dieting lists — the lists go on and on. I've come up with a new list; one of memorable dog training challenges of last year.

1. Dogs named Bo, Joe and Moe. No kidding, all in the same house. One can only imagine the chaos and confusion of having three dogs all answering to — or collectively ignoring — a similar sounding name. After an hour of "Bo, no!" and "Joe, no!" I told the owner I could take "no Moe" and we discussed necessary name changes for all.

2. The "My Dog is Dumb" syndrome. Many a client will describe his dog as a few kibbles short of a bag, wrongly assuming that the dog is incapable of learning. The bored dog at the end of the leash looks to be thinking the same of his owner. These are such fun cases to work with, because once we can teach the client how to relate to the dog in a canine way, learning becomes easy, and success is achieved. So, bring on your "dumb" dogs — a good trainer will prove to you the brilliance of your canine friend.

3. The Wrong Dog and Owner Combination. Time and again we see people matched with the wrong dog for their situation or lifestyle. Dog and owner are caught in a failure chain, as neither individual can meet the needs of the other. The senior citizen with a crazy Border collie, the 6-year-old with the Great Dane, the marathon runner with a Basset hound, the knitting nester with a German Shorthaired Pointer, the infirm individual with a young puppy. Training will not supersede the essence of the dog's character or activity level. The solution for this is simple — know what energy level you are able to handle for the next 10 years, and then choose a puppy or adult dog accordingly. Don't expect to bend the will and nature of the dog's spirit — you won't succeed.

4. The "Its My Child's Dog" syndrome. Parents, take note. No matter how much your child wants to be involved with obtaining, training, and caring for a dog, the ultimate responsibility is yours. Should your child be involved? Absolutely, but at best it is a joint project, and as your child continues to grow and develop other interests, the family dog will continue to require care, training, and companionship, and that's on you. So, if you do not have the time or interest to take on a new furry family member, skip the puppy, and get your child a goldfish. Note: Pet fish can be trained to do tricks too!

5. The "She's Not a Dog, She's a Person" disorder.

Contrary to current pop culture trends, dogs do not need or enjoy being dressed up in costumes, spritzed with cologne, or used as an accessory for an outfit. No matter the breed or size, dogs are canines, and to ignore their needs as a species is to do them a great disservice. Dogs will put up with all manner of ridiculous things we humans thrust upon them, but embracing and providing your dog with what her true canine needs are is what takes your relationship with her to the next level.

6. "My dog is a vegetarian, just like me" delusion. One merely needs to open a dog's mouth to know that canines — wolves, jackals, foxes and our own dogs — are carnivores, as proven by their long canine teeth made for tearing and gulping meat. If dogs were meant to eat plants, they would have a set of molars for grinding, like a cow. No. Just no.

7. "My dog is sooo smart!" Yes, actually, he is. All dogs are smart, and when given the opportunity to learn with proper training, they will amaze you with their brilliance!

Cal's dark past resurfaces in Season 3 of Hulu's 'The Path'

By George Dickie
© Zap2it

As Season 3 of Hulu's "The Path" gets underway this week, Cal comes face to face with demons from his past, a scenario that presented a tall order of challenges for the charismatic Meyerism leader's portrayal, Hugh Dancy.

Hugh Dancy

"There's a real dive into some of the reason for what could make a person like him," the British actor explains. "And for an actor, there's nothing more nightmarish as a scenario than being presented suddenly with a whole load of information about a character than you didn't previously have. But in this case, it seemed to be a real kind of missing jigsaw piece. What I'm taking about, because it comes up pretty quickly, is the specter of abuse in his childhood.

"And so what I was doing throughout the season was trying to imagine what it would be like for somebody who's really only just realized this thing about their past that's been buried so deep that they've turned away from it and what that might look like. And obviously it would not play out immediately."

In the opener of the 13-episode season on Wednesday, Jan. 17, a miracle by Eddie (Aaron Paul) has gone viral, resulting in the exponential growth of Meyerism around the world. As the movement's new leader, he wrestles with how best to grow it without becoming a cult leader.

Sarah (Michelle Monaghan), meanwhile, begins to doubt her faith and starts looking outside the movement for answers, which could lead her to discover a deep secret about Meyerism.

Movie: Ride Along

Comedian Kevin Hart's movie success was confirmed by the surprisingly strong box-office showing of this 2014 action comedy, with Hart as a security guard determined to prove himself to his prospective fiancée's (Tika Sumpter) Atlanta policeman brother (Ice Cube). The men go on patrol together, only to run into a case bigger than either of them could have imagined.

10 p.m. on (HBO)

Divorce

Robert and Frances (Thomas Haden Church, Sarah Jessica Parker) finally have signed divorce papers as Season 2 of this tart comedy opens with "Night Moves." Frances is struggling with insomnia and a realization that things with her kids are suddenly more complicated, while Robert, who's having a severe cash-flow problem, looks for work and a new place to live. A new communication technique Diane and Nick (Molly Shannon, Tracy Letts) have adopted leads Nick to an unexpected decision.

Mandy Moore

OF "THIS IS US" ON NBC

Do you feel the series itself has made you more open?

I think I've always sort of found myself in the position to do that. I'm comfortable being vulnerable and being an open book, but I think it's allowed other people around me to feel the same way. The show brings up issues, whether they're about loss or grief or joy. I think it's allowed other people to start having those conversations, but I've always been like, "What do you wanna know?"

Do your parents watch the show?

They do watch, and it's more of a texting situation. We're constantly in communication via text about it.

With your acting now as recognized as it is, has that also helped move your music back toward the front burner?

I want it to be. I miss it, but this is all-consuming. This is all I have time for right now.

The series and related activities occupy so much of your time, how do you balance that with your personal life, especially since you're now engaged (to musician Taylor Goldsmith)?

I think I'm still coming to terms with how to best execute that.

Now that you're midway through Season 2 of "This Is Us," with Season 3 already guaranteed, what's the standout memory for you of first seeing the pilot script?

I read it and I bawled. It's just the best job. I think it's brought me closer to everyone in my life.

I find myself having conversations not just about my own connections with my family and my parents and my brothers, but with other people about theirs. It just elicits an open dialogue about their relationships with their families, and our relationships with one another.

OF "BOOZE TRAVELER" ON TRAVEL CHANNEL

You threw out the first pitch at Fenway in September. That had to be the thrill of a lifetime, no?

Oh my goodness, I'm telling ya, I do some great things on the show – and I mean fun, exciting things that are an honor for me – but as a little kid growing up in the shadows of Fenway and really not being able to afford tickets even though they were much cheaper back then, to throw out the first pitch – and then we filmed there.

So to run around in left field and take balls off the Green Monster, pitch with Ryan Dempster, who closed out Game 1 of the World Series in 2013, and have him a guest on the show. And drink, by the way. Behind third base, they have the Fenway Farms out there and they get mint and other herbs and make cocktails. It was really one of the best days of my life. And I threw a strike as well ... and I threw it from the rubber.

Who was your catcher?

Ryan Dempster, but I used Dustin Pedroia's glove.

So they were cool guys?

As cool as can be, for Dustin to let me use his glove and then Dempster to be our guest in scene. Regular, down-to-earth, sweetheart of a guy. Turns out he's a big bourbon fan, so I sent them my best bottle of Four Roses Barrel Strength as a thank you, and nothing says "thank you" like some of our best liquor. But he made the scene and the day so much better. His entrée to the other people there and the field itself and the stories he told, it's going to be one of our best episodes ever.

Yara Shahidi

OF "GROWN-ISH" ON FREEFORM

Do you expect you will get a sense of déjà vu when you get to Harvard in the fall after having gone through the freshman experience as Zoey on "grown-ish"?

In shooting Season 3 of "black-ish," I had a lot of déjà vu because that was when Zoey was going to see the college (campus) and I was doing the same thing. And Zoey opened her acceptance letter maybe two weeks before Yara did and that was a crazy moment where I remember filming that scene and being like,

"What? That is not how it happens. You don't get all of your acceptance letters at once." And then March 31st all at once, every single acceptance letter came out. And so that was really hilarious.

But in terms of "grown-ish" being similar to my college experience, I know of course there will be parallels but Zoey is so different from Yara that I don't find myself in as many predicaments as she finds herself in. But at the same time, I am kind of excited. ... I'm hoping when I go to college, I can be like, "Wait, I've been through this. Episode 3, scene 27."

Many comparisons have been made between your show and "A Different World." How do you feel about that?

I think if you talk to the creator of the show Kenya Barris, he definitely attests to the fact that "A Different World" is really a major reason as to why he went to college ... So we definitely pay homage to the space that "A Different World" has created but at the same time they're very much two different shows. I so appreciate that our show can be said in the same breath as "A Different World," with so many iconic people and iconic characters who've left an impact on an entire generation. And I think part of paying homage to something is also realizing that we're not trying to create any sort of content that would replace how special "A Different World" is. So it's very much a different show because there's no need to touch the perfection of that."

Sarah Jessica Parker enters her second phase of 'Divorce'

Sarah Jessica Parker and Thomas Haden Church return in Season 2 of "Divorce," beginning Sunday on HBO.

"Divorce" is about to run deeper for Sarah Jessica Parker, but fortunately, it's only an on-screen matter.

The actress-producer (and wife of fellow talent Matthew Broderick) returns with Season 2 of her serio-comic, post-"Sex and the City" HBO series Sunday, Jan. 14. Her character Frances struggles to adapt to life apart from her now-ex-husband Robert (Thomas Haden Church), which entails strained relations with her children, a potential love interest (played by former "Doubt" co-star Steven Pasquale) and new professional considerations at her art gallery.

"I think that many people who are contemplating divorce imagine a fairly different life," the pleasant Parker says. "Most people are not expert at being divorced, so the theoretical is different than the actual day-to-day. If you combine that with being a parent and financial stress, Frances discovers that it's not as simple as liberating yourself from another person. Many of the problems don't go away, so it's been interesting to sort that out."

That translates into Frances and Robert being in different places, quite literally, for much of "Divorce's" second season. "I really missed him," Parker says of co-star Church. "The problem with a show called 'Divorce' is that I have to, as an actor, divorce myself from Thomas in certain ways. By the end of the season, though, I think some of the better feelings in (the characters') past start to surface. That's the ideal situation ... that you get to a place with a former partner that is based on love, and that you can get past the battles."

Much as "Sex and the City" was the saga of several women, so is "Divorce," though Parker (also one of its executive producers along with series creator Sharon Horgan, of "Catastrophe" fame and "Sex" alum Jenny Bicks) clearly is the show's first among equals. Molly Shannon and Talia Balsam also return as Frances' friends, who sometimes are linked into her life more closely than she suspects.

"I wish we'd had more together this season," Parker notes of those performers. "I love them so much, and I love working with them. They're such different actresses, and they're both so good and so seasoned. It's great to have time with them; I just wish we'd had more."

"BLADE RUNNER 2049"

Directed by Denis Villeneuve ("Arrival"), the three-decades-later sequel to one of the all-time sci-fi and fantasy classics – visually arresting in the same manner as the first film – finds another futuristic police detective (Ryan Gosling) questioning his existence and his work as a replicant assigned to track others of his kind who have gone rogue. Suspecting that one of them has given birth, his boss (Robin Wright) assigns him to locate and destroy the child, fearing that a war between humans and replicants may result otherwise. His quest eventually leads him to "blade-running" forerunner (Harrison Ford, a welcome presence as he reprises his role from the original film). Edward James Olmos also makes a return in a supporting cast that includes Jared Leto, Dave Bautista ("Guardians of the Galaxy"), Ana de Armas and Lennie James. Original screenwriter Hampton Fancher also co-wrote this script. DVD extras: six "making-of" documentaries. ★★★ (R: AS, N, P, V) (Also on Blu-ray and On Demand)

Ryan Gosling

"THE SNOWMAN"

Based on one of the mystery novels of internationally popular author Jo Nesbo, this intense thriller casts Michael Fassbender as his series-fueled detective character Harry Hole, whose search for a missing person eventually suggests that a serial killer – who makes a snowman a motif for his crimes – may be active again. The sleuth teams with another investigator (Rebecca Ferguson) as the pursuit forces the reopening of long-dormant cases that could be linked to the current one. Also featured are Charlotte

Gainsbourg, Val Kilmer, J.K. Simmons, Chloe Sevigny and Toby Jones. ★★★ (R: AS, N, P, V) (Also on Blu-ray and On Demand)

"HAPPY DEATH DAY"

The premise of "Groundhog Day" – which is referenced very directly in the course of this film – gets a melodramatic spin as a self-involved college student (Jessica Rothe, "La La Land") ends her birthday by being murdered, only to find herself reliving the day again ... and again and again, as she gets closer each time to determining the identity of her killer. A classmate (Israel Broussard) tries to help her solve the mystery, but he also makes himself a target, causing the heroine to alter her approach as the investigation continues. ★★★ (PG-13: AS, N, P, V) (Also on Blu-ray and On Demand)

"BETTER CALL SAUL: SEASON THREE"

One of the most acclaimed series currently on television, AMC's "Breaking Bad" prequel brings its latest round – which earned 10 Emmy nominations – to home video. Chuck's (Michael McKean) efforts to elicit a confession covertly pose potential problems for the professional image and duties of Jimmy and Kim (Bob Odenkirk, Rhea Seehorn), while Mike's (Jonathan Banks) hunt for a nemesis could have big repercussions. Giancarlo Esposito, Patrick Fabian and Michael Mando also star. DVD extras: two "making-of" documentaries; audio commentary by cast and crew members; outtakes; "Los Pollos Hermanos" training videos. ★★★ (Not rated: AS, P, V) (Also on Blu-ray)

"CROOKED HOUSE"

The mystery novels of Agatha Christie have been ideal inspirations to gather all-star casts in their screen incarnations – as proven again recently by "Murder on the Orient Express" – and this Christie adaptation also provides evidence. After a rich family's patriarch is killed, one of its members asks her detective ex-beau (Max Irons) to determine who the culprit is before Scotland Yard gets involved. Glenn Close, Gillian Anderson ("The X-Files"), Terence Stamp and Christina Hendricks ("Mad Men"), Julian Sands and Stefanie Martini ("Prime Suspect: Tennison") are in the cast of presumed "suspects." DVD extras: two "making-of" documentaries. ★★★ (Also on Blu-ray and On Demand) (PG-13: AS) (Also on Blu-ray)

NO GUARANTEES IN THE NFL PLAYOFFS

The NFL's post season is in full stride this week with the Divisional Round of the playoffs taking place the weekend of January 13 and 14 on CBS, Fox and NBC networks. Perhaps some of the best football of the season will be played over the course of that weekend with the winners moving on to next Sunday's conference championships.

Many feel that the Pittsburgh Steelers and New England Patriots are on a crash course for the AFC Championship. Perhaps the same theory applies to the Minnesota Vikings and even the Philadelphia Eagles, who are now without second-year quarterback Carson Wentz, in the NFC. There's still talk about an all-Pennsylvania Super Bowl LII.

But any sports fan with a memory knows that anything can happen in the playoffs. The NFL has as much nostalgia as any sport, and part of that nostalgia is teams rising to the occasion in the playoffs, overcoming the odds, the experts predictions and even winning championships.

There's been some of that in recent history. During in the 2013-14 season we knew the Seattle Seahawks, led by Russell Wilson were good. They proved it in the playoffs, especially when they man-handled Peyton Manning and the Denver Broncos by a score of 43-8 in Super Bowl XLVIII.

Manning was the victim of a surprise team a year earlier. The Broncos were the top seed in the AFC and had the Baltimore Ravens all but put away in a Divisional Round playoff game when Ravens quarterback Joe Flacco orchestrated a comeback, overtime win and Baltimore went on to win in all.

Peyton's brother, Eli Manning was on the winning end of two New York Giants teams who overcame adversity in the playoffs and beat the Patriots not once, but twice in Super Bowls XLII and XLVI in 2007 and 2011.

There are numerous similar stories throughout the history of football. Look up the 2005-06 Steelers team, or the 2000-01 Ravens. A year later, in 2001-02, it was Tom Brady and the Patriots who seemingly came out of nowhere and began a stretch of success that obviously continues to this day.

On the nostalgic side, go back to the 1975-76 Dallas Cowboys who snuck into the playoffs as the Wild Card team (there was only one back then). They came up to Minnesota to face a Vikings team many expected to win the Super Bowl. Then Roger Staubach hit Drew Pearson with a 50-yard touchdown pass in the final seconds and the "Hail Mary" was born. The Cowboys destroyed the Los Angeles Rams in the NFC Championship, but lost to Pittsburgh in Super Bowl X, a game that is still considered one of the best Super Bowls of all time.

Bet on the favorites if you like, but don't be surprised if they get knocked off in the Divisional rounds.

GET YOUTUBE AND GET FIT IN THE NEW YEAR

BY GEORGE DICKIE
@ZAP2IT.COM

Maybe you overdid it with the egg-nog or the endless parade of cheese and cookie platters. Perhaps you didn't see any slice of pecan pie you didn't without a second thought consume. And the workouts? Really? Who has time or inclination to exercise during the holidays?

So here we are a few weeks into January and you've let things get out of control, which the bathroom scale and some of your clothes have informed you of in no uncertain terms. And it's time to do something.

That's where YouTube comes in. The all-encompassing video platform has a wide array of fitness channels, ranging from pilates and yoga to cardio training and bodybuilding. So log on, get your heart rate up and watch those holiday pounds melt away.

BEFIT (WWW.YOUTUBE.COM/USER/BEFIT): Health, fitness and wellness are the calling cards of this channel that offers workouts via paid downloads, subscriptions, DVDs and free content, from top trainers such as Jillian Michaels, Billy Blanks Jr., Denise Austin and others. There is even a series of BeFit Go workouts meant to be watched on a smartphone and done anywhere.

BLOGILATES (WWW.YOUTUBE.COM/USER/BLOGILATES): If you're challenged for space, this female-focused channel from creator Cassey Ho boasts a wide range of workouts that target specific body areas and can be done on only a yoga mat. Ho also preaches the virtues of having a positive body self-image, even posting videos detailing her struggles with it.

FITNESS BLENDER (WWW.YOUTUBE.COM/USER/FITNESSBLENDER): If you're the type who hates working out, this channel of simple, easy-to-understand workouts may be just the tonic, offering more than 500 routines ranging from 10 minutes to more than an hour that can be done at home using body weight and minimal equipment. Its 4.5 million subscribers are testament to their appeal.

JESSICA SMITH TV (WWW.YOUTUBE.COM/USER/JESSICASMITH-TV): Certified personal trainer Smith leads viewers on full-length workouts in a wide variety of areas from core strengthening and cardio to walking practices and yoga, that even have options for those with physical limitations. And in some videos, her dog joins in.

MONDAY'S BEST BETS

Garret Dillahunt

8 p.m. on 18 35 51

The Gifted

Stopping Dr. Campbell (guest star Garret Dillahunt) from making his anti-mutant initiative a national cause is the mission for many of the major characters in the series' two-hour season finale, combining the episodes "eXtraction" and "X-roads." As Polaris (Emma Dumont) makes discoveries and a big decision, the mutants' headquarters is targeted. Skyler Samuels and Sharon Gless also reprise their guest roles. Stephen Moyer, Amy Acker, Sean Teale and Jamie Chung also star.

9 p.m. on 18 44

Valor

Military veteran Shamar S. White wrote the new episode "Command & Control," which puts Nora and Gallo (Christina Ochoa, Matt Barr) at odds when Col. Haskins (Nigel Thatcher) decides which of their plans he wants to initiate. Charlie Barnett, W. Tre Davis and Corbin Reid also star.

9 p.m. on (NGEO)

Chain of Command

Chris Evans ("The Avengers") narrates this new eight-part documentary series that examines the U.S. military's determined mission to fight violent extremism across the world. Filmed over 18 months, the series opens with "By, With & Through," set in Mosul, Iraq, where Capt. Quincy Bahler of the 101st Airborne Division monitors ISIS fighters via drone feeds, alongside Iraqi generals. They're looking for the optimal opportunity to strike, in a prolonged attempt to liberate this city.

BEST BETS

Cress Williams

8 p.m. on (FREE)
The Fosters

A highly motivated Callie (Maia Mitchell) takes an active role to help make Ximena's (Liseth Chavez) more visible to the public in the new episode "Invisible." Elsewhere, an awareness of Grace's (Meg DeLacy) medical diagnosis complicates her and Brandon's (David Lambert) desire to be intimate, while Marianna (Cierra Ramirez) suddenly finds herself being wooed by multiple would-be boyfriends.

9 p.m. on (18) (44)
Black Lightning

Another DC Comics character joins the CW series lineup with this premiere, titled "The Resurrection," as Cress Williams ("Hart of Dixie") plays a charter-high-school principal who left his days as a crime-fighting vigilante long in the past. Or so he thought: The activities of a gang prompt him to take up his secret crusade for justice again, to protect both his family and the community at large. The show's executive producers include "Girlfriends" alums Salim Akil and Mara Brock Akil.

9:30 p.m. on (20) (23)
The Mayor

"Lockdown" is the appropriate title for a new episode in which City Hall is sealed off after a strange package is found there. While inside with his team, Courtney (Brandon Micheal Hall) learns some information that may explain the situation. Lea Michele, Bernard David Jones and Marcel Spears also star.

WEDNESDAY'S BEST BETS

Matt Ingebretson

8 p.m. on 2 3 The Blacklist

The series marks its 100th episode with "Abraham Stern," named for the character played by guest star Nathan Lane. He's a man who long has pursued the fortune he believes is due him, and he's used and discarded many people in that process — and, unwisely, he makes Red (James Spader) his next intended target.

8 p.m. on (FREE) grown-ish

In the new episode "Star-boy," Zoey (Yara Shahidi) strikes a deal with Dean Parker (Chris Parnell) to tutor the college's star basketball player in exchange for a letter of recommendation, but her friends quickly jump to the conclusion that something else altogether is going on between Zoey and the jock.

10 p.m. on (COM) Corporate

Fans of the sadly short-lived 2009-10 ABC sitcom "Better Off Ted" probably will want to check out this new comedy, which similarly is set inside a soulless corporation that grinds its employees into demoralized dust. The series premiere, "The Void," finds junior executives in training Matt and Jake (series creators Matt Ingebretson and Jake Weisman) tasked with identifying and firing the employee who sent out an offensive tweet from the company's Twitter account. Another episode immediately follows.

CELEBRITY PIPELINE

Remembering the 'Challenge' posed by Dick Enberg

By Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

Q: I was sad to learn of the passing of sportscaster Dick Enberg. I remember his "Sports Challenge" game show. When was that on the air? — Jim Storey, via e-mail

A: The syndicated show was televised for most of the 1970s, from 1971 to 1979, with two teams of three former or then-current athletes being posed questions related to film clips that were shown. The series had a brief revival in the early 1980s on ESPN as "The Best of Sports Challenge," and it also has been shown on other ESPN networks over the years.

Some fans also may remember a product that was related to the series: the Sports Challenge Instant Replay toy manufactured by Mattel, which involved discs being inserted into a handheld device — essentially a small record player — that would give statistics about sports players and milestones.

Q: What's the background of the youngster who played Ralphe in Fox's live version of "A Christmas Story"? — Mary McQueen, Aiken, S.C.

A: Seattle, Wash., resident Andy Walken was found in a nationwide digital casting call. He ultimately was chosen for the production from more than 350 contenders for the role, and he joined a cast that also included such pros as Matthew Broderick, Maya Rudolph and David Alan Grier as he played the youngster constantly warned that "You'll shoot your eye out" in hoping for his most desired Christmas gift.

Q: I was interested to discover that "The Long Road Home" is based on a book by Martha Raddatz of ABC News. Has she written any others? — Joseph Lang, Reading, Pa.

A: That's the one for her, at least up to now. The source of the National Geographic miniseries was indeed "The Long Road Home: A Story of War and Families," her book about an assault on American troops during the Iraq War. It became a New York Times best seller and inspired the recent miniseries that starred Michael Kelly, Jason Ritter and Kate Bosworth.

Q: It was nice to see the "I Love Lucy Christmas Special" again this year. Do they always show one of the same episodes every time? — Chris Hunt, via e-mail

A: They do. Each year when CBS presents the program, it includes "The Christmas Episode," which is built largely out of flashbacks to earlier stories as Lucy and Ricky (Lucille Ball, Desi Arnaz) think about the differences in their lives since the birth of Little Ricky. First aired on Christmas Eve in 1956, the story wasn't part of the "I Love Lucy" repeat package shown for many years, then was found by CBS in 1989 and later colorized for its current use during the holiday season.

CELEBRITY SCOOP

Checking in With Catherine Zeta-Jones

By Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

Others might be surprised that Catherine Zeta-Jones is headlining a Lifetime movie, but she's not.

The "Chicago" Oscar winner and "A Little Night Music" Tony winner credits the female-centric cable network with letting her make the true drama "Cocaine Godmother" — premiering Saturday, Jan. 20 — the way she wanted to, after she'd nurtured the material for several years. Quite gritty by usual Lifetime standards, the movie casts her as Griselda Blanco, a mother of three who took to the drug trade quickly ... then became a major, murderous Miami cocaine smuggler using unlikely "mules" to transport her wares, and gaining notoriety as "The Black Widow."

"I've been in and out of trying to get a production made of this," the charming Zeta-Jones confirms, "and it came down to Lifetime opening its doors to me and promising me that they would show it in the light in which I wanted to do it. This woman had no redeeming qualities. As an actor, one always wants to find something within oneself that's similar to the character, or something you can play on. This was not that.

THURSDAY'S BEST BETS

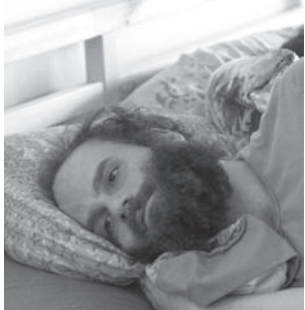

Burkely Duffield

8 p.m. on (FREE)
Beyond

With his mission in the Realm evidently wrapped up, Holden (Burkely Duffield) tries to concentrate on his "new normal," which includes a mundane job and a promising relationship with Willa (Dilan Gwyn), but he can't shake a feeling of foreboding as this supernatural drama returns for its sophomore season in the two-hour premiere "Two Zero One." Diane (Romy Rosemont) is asked to make a major sacrifice to help the investigation into Hollow Sky, and it's something that Tom (Michael McGrady) doesn't like.

FRIDAY'S BEST BETS

Ben Sinclair

8 p.m. on 2 8 Blindspot

A personal connection may help a professional mission in the new episode "Balance of Might," as the team tries to dismantle a terrorist plot. The key to doing so may be Reade's (Rob Brown) girlfriend (guest star Reshma Shetty, "Royal Pains"), who's a reporter. Tori Anderson ("No Tomorrow") continues her guest role. Jaimie Alexander, Sullivan Stapleton, Audrey Esparza, Ashley Johnson and Luke Mitchell also star.

9 p.m. on (LIFE) Bring It!

Dianna takes a huge gamble in the season's final creative dance competition, placing some of the less experienced girls front and center for an elaborate "around the world" routine in the new episode "Doll Meets World." Elsewhere, an aggressively ambitious Tanishia causes major drama as the Dolls compete to be featured in photographer Jordan Matter's next book of photos.

11 p.m. on (HBO) High Maintenance

This sly, character-driven comedy returns with fresh slices of New York life as perceived by The Guy (Ben Sinclair), a pot-dealing deliveryman. In the Season 2 premiere, "Globo," the troubling state of world affairs means a sharp increase in demand for his services. The morning after a hookup, two hotel guests enjoy a carefree day, oblivious to what's going on outside their door. A client's roommate (Joshua Schubart) tries not to let his worries drive him to break his diet.

COVER STORY

'American Crime Story' Season 2 dramatizes the Gianni Versace murder

By Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

Just as executive producer Ryan Murphy has told a different tale with each season of "American Horror Story," the same is true of his "American Crime Story."

That stands to reason in the latter case, since that series is telling finite, true stories. First was the nine-E Emmy-winning "The People v. O.J. Simpson," and though Hurricane Katrina was envisioned as the second subject, that has turned out instead to be "The Assassination of Gianni Versace," which begins its 10-episode FX run Wednesday, Jan. 17.

Opening with an elegantly staged sequence directed by Murphy and detailing the actual 1997 crime in Miami Beach, the drama stars Edgar Ramirez ("The Girl on the Train") as iconic fashion designer Versace, Penelope Cruz as his sister Donatella, singer-actor Ricky Martin as Versace's longtime partner Antonio D'Amico, and Murphy-show veteran Darren Criss ("Glee") as serial killer Andrew Cunanan.

"I think the thing about 'American Crime Story,'" says Murphy, "is that we're not just (dramatizing) a crime. We're trying to talk about a crime within a social idea. This was always interesting to us because the idea was that Versace, who was the last victim, really did not have to die. Part of the thing that we talk about in the show is, one of the reasons Andrew Cunanan was able to make his way across the country and pick off these victims — many of whom were gay — was because of homophobia at the time.

"Homophobia (factored in)," Murphy maintains, "particularly within the various police organizations that refused in Miami to put up 'Wanted' posters, even though they knew that Andrew Cunanan had probably committed many of these murders and was probably headed that way ... all of which we deal with in the show. I thought that that was a really interesting thing to examine, to look at again, particularly with the president we have and the world that we live in."

Ramirez explains his principal interest in playing Versace "has to do with (his) being haunted.

Both being haunted and hunted. And I think that is something that I really connected to, a character that basically came into the States to change everything, forever. The world that we live in is a world, aesthetically, that basically Gianni Versace created.

For the first time, he combined sexiness and glamour and opulence, like no one has ever done before. He could see the sexiness of the '70s, and then all the opulence of the '80s, and he sensed that in the '90s. And he combined it, and everybody went crazy. So I think that it's a disrupter, and I was very attracted to that."

CLAIRE

DID YOU KNOW

Claire Danes was born in Manhattan in 1979, the daughter of Carla (Hall), a day-care provider and artist, and Christopher Danes, a computer consultant and photographer. She has an older brother, Asa. Her paternal grandfather, Gibson Andrew Danes, was a Dean of the Yale School of Art and Architecture.

Claire was educated at Dalton School, New York, The New York City Lab School for Collaborative Studies, The Professional Performing Arts School and Lycée Français de Los Angeles. She attended Yale University, studying psychology, but dropped out after two years to concentrate on her acting career. She also attended the Lee Strasberg Theater Institute.

In 1994, Danes played Beth March in the film adaptation of "Little Women." She gained major public attention when she appeared as Angela Chase in "My So-Called Life" (1994), winning an Emmy nomination and a Golden Globe award for this performance. A successful film career followed, including the role of Juliet, opposite Leonardo DiCaprio in "Romeo + Juliet" (1996). She continued acting in such varied projects as "The Hours" (2002), "Terminator 2: Rise of the Machines" (2003), and "Stardust" (2007).

She was named Harvard University's 2012 Hasty Pudding Woman of the Year. Also, in 2012, TIME magazine named Danes one of the 100 Most Influential People in the World.

Danes and her mother are supporters of the charity Afghan Hands, which helps women in Afghanistan gain independence, education, and livable wages. Danes is also a long-time supporter of Donorschoose.org, a website that allows public school teachers to create project requests. Donors then choose what projects inspire them, and help to fund those projects. Danes is a feminist, and has been critical of female under-representation within Hollywood.

SATURDAY'S BEST BETS

Catherine Zeta Jones

8 p.m. on (LIFE)

Movie: Cocaine Godmother: The Griselda Blanco Story

Academy Award winner Catherine Zeta Jones ("Chicago") takes the title role in this new 2017 docudrama based on the career of the woman who became a pioneer in the Miami-based cocaine trade. Shortly after arriving in that Florida city with her first husband (Carlos Rodriguez), Griselda soon entered the local drug trade, using beautiful women, the elderly and children as mules to import Colombian cocaine. A documentary on the same subject follows.

9 p.m. on (AMC)

Planet Earth: Blue Planet II

The next installment in BBC America's Emmy-winning "Planet Earth" series, which premieres simultaneously across such other AMC Networks as AMC, IFC, WE tv and SundanceTV, takes viewers on a revelatory journey into the world of our planet's oceans, still the most undiscovered places on Earth.

9 p.m. on (HALL)

Movie: One Winter Weekend

Tired of her current job as a relationship columnist at a women's magazine, Cara Huntley (Taylor Cole) jumps at the opportunity when her editor agrees to let her turn her experiences on a snowboarding weekend with a friend into a piece for the publication. When a reservations mix-up forces the women to share a chalet with two male guests, romance takes its usual course in this new 2018 TV movie.

NatGeo follows the 'Chain of Command' in the fight against global extremism

The next time you thank a serviceman or woman in uniform for their service, the makers of a new National Geographic series want you to know exactly what you're thanking them for.

Which is the objective of "Chain of Command," premiering Monday, Jan. 15. Made in collaboration with the Pentagon and narrated by Chris Evans ("Captain America"), the eight-part documentary series chronicles the U.S. military's mission to fight violent extremism around the world, from the halls of power in Washington, D.C., to the front lines in Iraq, Afghanistan, Somalia, Niger and South America and even the surprising ISIS recruiting ground of Trinidad and Tobago in the southern Caribbean.

It also profiles some of the men and women involved in this fight and shows how a decision made in the Pentagon has a direct impact on everyone in the chain of command, right down to the soldiers on the ground.

"It's been an amazing experience to be able to meet and then tell the stories of these ... heroes," series showrunner Scott Boggins told a recent gathering of journalists in Beverly Hills, Calif. "They're inspiring individuals from the highest levels of the U.S. military to the boots on the ground. We have several of our field producers here who spent a huge amount of time, and it's pretty dangerous places, but we were always with groups of men and women who showed incredible commitment, and we were there with them to tell their stories during this time where extremism — you know, violent extremism affects everyone."

movie review

BY JAY BOBBIN

For those who worry that the "Star Wars" franchise never will again produce something on the order of the first thrilling films, there's good news: "The Last Jedi" sure comes close.

Of course, after 40 years, we know so much about the series that it never can be a novelty on quite the same level again, but here's to writer-director Rian Johnson ("Brick") for being smart enough to incorporate cherished "Star Wars" themes while beefing up newer characters that were introduced by "The Force Awakens."

One of those characters provides a major plot line of "The Last Jedi," as Rey — played again by Daisy Ridley — wants to learn the Jedi ways from the rediscovered Luke Skywalker (Mark Hamill, of course), just as he did from Yoda. That's the story that really has the most impact here, though John Boyega as Finn and Oscar Isaac as Poe Dameron also are back and largely get their own tales.

Though it's a tad disappointing at first that they're all separated this time, it's clever from a series development standpoint in setting things up for the future. Each of them is fleshed out in a way that probably wouldn't be possible if they were on the same exact turf again; such a set-up has precedence in the "Star Wars" canon, with early sequences of "The Empire Strikes Back" also standing out in that way.

Still, there is enough of the past here, too. That applies very specifically in the case of the late Carrie Fisher, whose appearance is bittersweet, given the knowledge that this is the last of her performances as princess turned general Leia.

It's just one example of the emotion that is quite present in "The Last Jedi," automatically separating this chapter from many others in the franchise. And it's also what made it a wise decision to put fresh eyes on it, namely Johnson's. Certainly, it's a gamble to place the tried and true in different hands, as was the situation with J.J. Abrams on "The Force Awakens."

Some devotees felt he played it too safe, but Johnson is willing to take big leaps forward. Not only should he be applauded, but so should Disney and Lucasfilm Ltd., since they also had to sign off and hold their collective breath when it came to tinkering with the "family recipe." The payoff has proven to be worth it.
