Trump hopeful ahead of talks

Some skeptical of diplomacy with North Korea

By Matthew Pennington
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An enigmatic North Korean leader takes a secretive train trip to China to affirm fraternal ties and declare a commitment to denuclearization.

It sounds like Kim Jong Un's visit this week, but his father and predecessor Kim Jong Il made similar declarations on a trip to Beijing, months before he died in 2011. Yet North Korea's nuclear weapons development only speeded up.

President Donald Trump expressed optimism Wednesday after the younger Kim's meeting with Chinese President Xi Jinping, saying there's "a good chance" that Kim will "do what is right for his people and for humanity." But there are plenty of reasons to be skeptical that the U.S.-North Korean summit slated for May will produce the breakthrough that Washington wants.

After a year of escalating tensions, Trump agreed to talks after South Korean officials relayed that Kim was committed to ridding the Korean Peninsula of nuclear weapons and was willing to halt nuclear and missile tests.

That has tamped down fears of war that elevated as Trump and Kim traded threats and insults and North Korea demonstrated it was close to being able to strike the U.S. with a

Mathias ponders temporary sales tax for school safety

By Tom McNiff

TAVARES — Lake County School Board member Bill Mathias has floated the idea of enacting a half-cent sales tax to pay for security upgrades at public schools.

Mathias said he proposed the tax at a Florida League of Cities meeting in February and received a favorable response from the representatives of Lake County's 14 city governments, although the chamber of commerce representatives in attendance were less enthusiastic.

Mathias believes the idea has merit, though.

The tax could be levied on all consumer goods and would raise an estimated $15 million a year. Mathias said that money would be used to "harden" schools by improving perimeter fencing, adding

AKC: Labs still rule, but Frenchies soar in US popularity

NEW YORK — Americans still love Labrador retrievers, but the nation's flirtation with French bulldogs has reached new heights.

Labs remain the country's most popular purebred dog for a 27th year, while German shepherds and golden retrievers have hung onto the second and third spots in new American Kennel Club rankings being released Wednesday.

But Frenchies hit a highest-ever No. 4, and German shorthaired pointers cracked the top 10 for the first time.

Trump fires Veterans Affairs Secretary Shulkin

By Hope Yen and Zeke Miller
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump fired Veterans Affairs Secretary David Shulkin by tweet Wednesday in the wake of a bruising ethics scandal and a mounting rebellion within the agency, and nominated White House doctor Ronny Jackson to lead the agency.

A Navy rear admiral, Jackson is a surprise choice to lead to succeed Shulkin, a former Obama administration official and the first non-veteran ever to head the VA. Trump had been considering replacements for Shulkin for weeks, but had not been known to be considering Jackson for the role.

In a statement, Trump praised Jackson as “highly trained and qualified.”

Jackson has served since 2013 as the Physician to the President, and gained a national profile earlier this year for holding a sweeping press conference on the president’s health.

Shulkin is the second Cabinet secretary to depart over controversies involving expensive travel, following former Health and Human Services Secretary Tom Price’s resignation last September. Trump said in a statement he is “grateful” for Shulkin’s service.

of Defense for Personnel and Readiness, to serve as the acting head of the VA. It is government’s second largest department, responsible for 9 million military veterans in more than 1,700 government-run health facilities. The selection of Wilkie bypasses VA Deputy Secretary Tom Bowman, who has come under criticism for being too moderate to push Trump’s agenda of fixing veterans’ care.

Shulkin had continued to insist he had the full confidence of the White House amid continuing investigations over his travel and leadership of the department. He had agreed to reimburse the government more than $4,000 after the VA’s internal watchdog concluded last month that he had improperly accepted Wimbledon tennis tickets and that his then-chief of staff had doctored emails to justify his wife traveling to Europe with him at taxpayer expense. Shulkin also blamed internal drama at the agency on a half-dozen or so political appointees who were rebelling against him and Bowman, insisting he had White House backing to fire them.

But the continuing VA infighting and a fresh raft of VA watchdog reports documenting leadership failures and spending waste — as well as fresh allegations being reviewed by the IG that Shulkin used a member of his security detail to run personal errands — proved too much of a distraction.

It was the latest in a series of departures for top administration officials, including Secretary of State Rex Tillerson, who was fired by Trump earlier this month.

The sudden departure comes as Trump is currently seeking to expand the Veterans Choice program, a campaign promise that major veterans’ groups worry could be an unwanted step toward privatizing VA health care. His plan remains in limbo in Congress after lawmakers declined last week to include it in a spending bill.

Having pushed through legislation in Trump’s first year making it easier to fire bad VA employees and speed disability appeals, Shulkin leaves behind a department in disarray. Several projects remain unfinished, including a multibillion-dollar overhaul of electronic medical records aimed at speeding up wait times for veterans seeking medical care as well as expanded mental health treatment for veterans at higher risk of suicide.

A major veterans’ organization expressed concern over the Shulkin dismissal and Trump’s intention to nominate Jackson, whom they worried lacked experience to run the huge department.

“We are disappointed and already quite concerned about this nominee,” said Joe Chenelly, the national executive director of AMVETS. “The administration needs to be ready to prove that he’s qualified to run such a massive agency, a $200 billion bureaucracy.”

During the presidential campaign, Trump repeatedly pledged to fix the VA, which was still reeling after a 2014 scandal at the Phoenix VA medical center, in which veterans waited months for care even as VA employees created secret waiting lists to cover up delays. Criticizing the department as “the most corrupt,” Trump said he would bring accountability and expand access to private doctors, promising to triple the number of veterans “seeing the doctor of their choice.”

Currently, more than 30 percent of VA appointments are made in the private sector.

The son of an Army psychiatrist and grandson of a VA pharmacist, Shulkin is a former president of the Morristown Medical Center in New Jersey. He was president and CEO of the Beth Israel Medical Center in New York and chief medical officer at the University of Pennsylvania Health System.

Possible Trump visit could thwart helicopter egg drop

A potential visit to Mar-a-Lago this weekend by President Donald Trump could thwart a church’s plans to drop 40,000 Easter eggs from a helicopter.

NewSound Church has two helicopter egg drops lined up for Saturday and Sunday but an FAA notice posted online warns pilots that temporary flight restrictions will go into effect Thursday and remain through Sunday.

Church organizers told the Palm Beach Post they’re holding out until the last minute. If the helicopter is grounded, they’ll hide tens of thousands of treat-filled eggs the old fashioned way.

Generation Church had planned to drop about 50,000 eggs via helicopter over the field at Roger Dean Stadium last year, but were thwarted by the president’s visit. This year, they’re planning smaller eggs hunts.

Stormy Daniels seeking Trump’s answers under oath

By Catherine Lucey
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Cranking up pressure on the president, porn actress Stormy Daniels wants Donald Trump to answer her attorney’s questions under oath about a pre-election payment aimed at keeping her quiet about their alleged tryst.

If she’s successful, it would be the first deposition of a sitting president since Bill Clinton in 1998 had to answer questions about his conduct with women.

Daniels’ attorney, Michael Avenatti, is seeking sworn testimony from Trump and his personal lawyer, Michael Cohen, about a $130,000 payment made to Daniels days before the 2016 presidential election as part of a nondisclosure agreement she is seeking to invalidate. Avenatti filed the motion in U.S. District Court in California on Wednesday.

Trump has kept a low profile all week, as has first lady Melania Trump, who is spending the week in Florida. White House spokeswoman Sarah Huckabee Sanders said Trump had denied the allegations and directed further questions to outside counsel. Cohen’s attorney, David Schwartz, told CBS that the filing was a “reckless use of the legal system.”

Despite the pushback, the persistent focus on Daniels is a troubling distraction for a White House already struggling with an exodus of top staffers, a floundering agenda and the looming threat from the Russia investigation.

This image released by CBS News shows Stormy Daniels, left, during an interview with Anderson Cooper which aired on Sunday, March 25 on “60 Minutes.” [CBS NEWS/60 MINUTES VIA AP]

Avenatti is just one on a growing list of lawyers looking to question Trump. Attorneys for a former “Apprentice” contestant have said they want to depose the president as part of a defamation suit. And the president’s legal team continues to negotiate with special counsel Robert Mueller over the scope and terms of an interview with the president.

A hard-charging attorney maintaining a near-constant presence on television news, Avenatti wants to question Trump and Cohen for “no more than two hours.” In the filing, he says the depositions are needed to establish if Trump knew about the payment, which Avenatti refers to as a “hush agreement,” and if the future president consented to it.

“We’re looking for sworn answers from the president and Mr. Cohen about what they knew, when they knew it and what they did about it,” Avenatti told The Associated Press.

While he noted that “in every case you always have to be open to settlement,” Avenatti said that “at this point we don’t see how this case would possibly be settled.”

A former businessman, Trump is no stranger to high-stakes litigation, sitting for depositions in contract and defamation lawsuits over the years. Those interviews show his deep experience in giving statements to lawyers, but also reveal a witness who could be voluble, boastful and, at times, combative.

Georgetown University law professor Naomi Mezey said a deposition presented risks because it is the way to get the president in a vulnerable position. “And President Trump is a particularly vulnerable president,” Mezey said.

Daniels, whose legal name is Stephanie Clifford, detailed her alleged 2006 tryst with Trump in a widely watched interview with CBS’ “60 Minutes” broadcast Sunday. She said she’d had sex with him once, shortly after Melania Trump gave birth to the president’s youngest son.

Daniels also said that a man approached her in a Las Vegas parking lot in 2011 when she was with her infant daughter, and threatened her with physical harm if she went public with her story.

The interview prompted a flurry of new legal action, with a lawyer for Cohen demanding that Daniels publicly apologize to his client for suggesting Cohen was involved in her intimidation. Daniels responded by filing a revised federal lawsuit accusing Cohen of defamation.

Cops: Man with drugs flees police, crashes into light pole

It started with police investigating too many block parties, and ended with a host of charges for a man, including racing down a one-way street going the wrong way. Randall R. Copeland, 40, rolled up his car window when he saw police arrive at 698 Jackson

Copeland

Avenue Tuesday, according to arrest reports. Deputy Police Chief Robert Bell walked up to the car, tapped on the window and engaged him in conversation. It was then, he noted, that he could smell the "pungent" odor of "raw" marijuana.

Copeland denied having marijuana in the car. "Randall, I know you are thinking about running, but it won't do you any good because I'm going to file on you anyway." Copeland took off in the car, nearly hitting another officer 10 feet away, then raced down Tremain Street the wrong way. It wasn't long before officers received reports of a car hitting a light pole. When police arrived, a witness reported seeing him throw something out of the window. It turned out to be marijuana and cocaine. Copeland was charged with fleeing and eluding at high speed, leaving the scene of an accident with property damage, reckless driving, possession of more than 20 grams of marijuana with intent to sell, destruction of evidence and possession of cocaine with intent to sell. He was jailed and held on $22,000 bond.

Environmentalists dub reused water proposal 'toilet-to-tap'

By John Kennedy
GateHouse Capital Bureau

TALLAHASSEE — Environmental groups are pushing Gov. Rick Scott to veto a measure that could allow treated wastewater to be pumped into Florida's fragile, underground aquifer to help the state's powerful building industry.

Scott hasn't vetoed any legislation yet this spring. But he has received more than 3,000 petition signatures from people opposing the reused water bill, which the governor has until April 10 to act on.

Supporters defend the legislation as innovative and central to powering the state's economy, by permitting developers whose projects consume vast amounts of water to continue work in an increasingly parched state.

Environmentalists, though, say the legislation threatens to poison the aquifer for generations, and have dubbed it "toilet-to-tap."

"There are too many people, and not enough water," said David Cullen, lobbyist for the Sierra Club, who fought the measure in Tallahassee before it was overwhelmingly approved this month by the Legislature.

The bill was sent Monday to Scott.

"The idea is that if you can put not thousands — but millions of gallons of treated wastewater back into the aquifer, developers won't

LEESBURG — The Lake County Commission committed $40,000 this week to help fund the 22nd annual Leesburg Bikefest next month.

Lake County spokeswoman Elisha Pappacoda said $40,000 is the maximum amount that can be awarded for an event.

"It's our top tourism event each year, which is why it is given the top amount," Pappacoda said.

Erika Greene, the county's interim director of Economic Prosperity, said that although Bikefest organizers are required to fill out an application for the funding like all other applicants, its award has been a norm for many years.

Pappacoda said there's no other event in Lake County that generates as much buzz or inter-county travel as Bikefest. She said participants who come to Leesburg specifically for Bikefest usually visit neighboring cities for lodging, food, entertainment and more.

"It draws so many tourists. It's an event that impacts all of Lake County," Pappacoda said.

Leesburg Bikefest is planned for April 26 through April 29.

"Whereas Lake County Code allows the tourist development tax to be used to promote and advertise tourism in the state of Florida and whereas, coordinator is conducting an event that will generate significant day trips from out-of-county visitors," says the agreement.

Chief Executive Officer Joe Shipes of the Leesburg Partnership, that sponsors the event, said the TDC grant money is much appreciated.

"That grant goes towards the marketing of Leesburg Bikefest nationally through trade magazines, social media, radio and newspaper ads," Shipes said. "We target motorcycle enthusiasts in the entire state of Florida and the national seaboard."

Brown appeal focuses on juror

By Jim Saunders
News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — Former Congresswoman Corrine Brown's attempt to get out of federal prison hinges on an ex-juror who said the "Holy Spirit" told him Brown was not guilty of charges related to a charity scam.

Brown's attorney filed a 64-page brief Monday in the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals arguing the Jacksonville Democrat's conviction should be tossed out because the juror was improperly dismissed from the case due to his religious statements.

"The record in this case supports only one conclusion: that this juror was basing his verdict on his view of the sufficiency of the evidence, after prayerful consideration and as he saw it, in his mind, guidance from the Holy Spirit," Brown's attorney, William Mallory Kent, wrote in the brief. "Whether he should or should not have depended on any guidance from the Holy Spirit does not resolve the matter in favor of his dismissal, because the well established law in this and other circuits is that so long as there is any reasonable possibility that the juror is basing his view on the sufficiency of the evidence, he may not be dismissed. Justices weigh police 'stand your ground' defense

By Jim Saunders
News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — Attorney General Pam Bondi's office this week urged the Florida Supreme Court to overturn a ruling that allowed a police officer to use the state's "stand your ground" self-defense law after being charged with manslaughter in an on-duty shooting.

Bondi's office, in a 22-page brief filed Monday, argued that Broward County sheriff's deputy Peter Peraza was not legally entitled to claim immunity under "stand your ground" in the 2013 shooting death of Jermaine McBean. Instead, the brief argued, officers can seek a more-limited type of immunity under another part of state law.

The Supreme Court agreed in February to take up the case, after Bondi's office appealed a ruling by the 4th District Court of Appeal. That ruling upheld a circuit judge's decision that Peraza was entitled to immunity from prosecution under "stand your ground" and that his use of force was justifiable.

The legal battle stems from an incident in which Peraza received a report of a man walking down a street openly carrying a gun. Peraza and another officer pursued the man and ordered him to stop and drop the weapon, the appeals-court ruling said. The man did not drop the weapon, leading Peraza to fatally shoot him. The weapon turned out to be an air rifle.

Peraza was indicted on a charge of manslaughter with a firearm but successfully used a "stand your ground" defense. Under the law, a circuit judge held a pre-trial evidentiary hearing before siding with the deputy's arguments.

misconduct.”

But in a December court document, U.S. District Judge Timothy Corrigan, who sentenced Brown to five years in prison, rejected arguments that he improperly dismissed the juror.

“In essence, the court (judge) dismissed a juror who it found was unable to follow the law,” Corrigan wrote Dec. 20. “The court applied the governing legal standard to the facts, finding beyond a reasonable doubt that there was no substantial possibility that the juror was able to base his decision only on the evidence and the law as the court had instructed.”

Brown, a former 12-term congresswoman, was convicted in May on 18 felony counts related to her role in using contributions to the One Door for Education charity for personal expenses and events.

In sentencing Brown on Dec. 4, Corrigan issued a 25-page order that said the One Door for Education charity, which was originally established to help children, was “operated as a criminal enterprise” by Brown, her longtime chief of staff, Ronnie Simmons, and the charity’s founder, Carla Wiley.

The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in January rejected Brown’s request to stay out of prison while she appeals the conviction.

She is serving the sentence at the Coleman federal correctional institution in Sumter County, according to the federal Bureau of Prisons website.

The brief filed Monday said the issue about the dismissed juror’s religious statements started after the jury had started deliberating. Another juror informed the court that she had concerns about the man, identified in the brief as “juror number 13.”

Corrigan questioned the juror before deciding to replace him with an alternate juror. The jury subsequently found Brown guilty of the charges.

Brown, 71, long an influential figure in Jacksonville, represented a congressional district that stretched from Jacksonville to Orlando.

She lost a re-election bid in 2016 after the district’s boundaries had been substantially redrawn and as she faced the criminal charges.

The Frenchie surge has bolted from 76th to fourth in just 20 years. It previously peaked at sixth in the 1910s and again in 2015-2016.

Frenchie aficionados appreciate the interest but worry that it’s drawing unscrupulous breeders and under-informed owners.

“It scares me that because it’s popular, everybody wants it. But not every family is right for a French bulldog,” says Kerry Boyd, a Natick, Massachusetts-based dog handler who breeds Frenchies.

The downsized bulldogs with the pointed ears and funny expressions have become favorites of city dwellers who value compact, relatively quiet dogs. They’ve enjoyed exposure from movies, ads and celebrity owners. The late Carrie Fisher’s Frenchie even inspired an alien creature in last year’s “Star Wars: The Last Jedi.”

Then the breed made headlines this month when a Frenchie puppy died after a flight attendant forced it into an overhead bin.

The death stirred discussion of breathing problems in French bulldogs and other short-snout breeds (though no pets belong in overhead compartments). Flat-faced dogs can be prone to overheating and sometimes need nasal or palate surgery. Frenchies and bulldogs also can be susceptible to certain spinal and eye problems. They are often born by cesarean section because of their big heads.

Given all that, New York’s then-newsweekly The Village Voice devoted a 2015 cover to French bulldogs and urged: “Don’t Buy This Dog.”

Newton, Massachusetts-based veterinarian Dr. John de Jong sees Frenchies’ problems firsthand, but he notes that other breeds are prone to conditions of their own.

“I would say to anybody purchasing a breed of any kind: Do their homework,” says de Jong, president-elect of the American Veterinary Medical Association.

“The circuit court found that the officer’s account of the incident was consistent with the other credible witnesses’ testimony and the physical evidence,” the appeals court ruling said, summarizing the decision. “The (circuit) court then found, by the greater weight of the evidence, that the man (McBean) ignored repeated warnings to stop and drop the weapon, turned towards the officers, and pointed his weapon at the officers, causing the officer (Peraza) to be in fear for his life and the lives of others, prompting the officer to shoot at the man, resulting in the man’s death.”

The controversial “stand your ground” law says people are justified in using deadly force and do not have a “duty to retreat” if they believe it is necessary to prevent death or great bodily harm. When the defense is successfully raised in pre-trial hearings, defendants are granted immunity from prosecution.

But in the brief filed Monday, Bondi’s office argued that police incidents are subject to another part of state law that can provide what is known as “qualified” immunity.

Under such a scenario, the officer would not receive a pre-trial hearing that could lead to dismissal but would be able to raise self-defense arguments at trial, according to the appeals court ruling.

Bondi’s office said police officers have never had a duty to retreat and that the “stand your ground” law granted the “average citizen the right to stand his or her ground.”

“It makes no sense to apply this statute to officers who have always had the right to stand their ground,” the brief said. “Thus, permitting an officer, to elect an absolute immunity over qualified immunity bypasses the statute specifically designed for this scenario and renders (the law dealing with qualified immunity) meaningless.”

But Peraza’s attorneys, in a document filed at the Supreme Court in January, said the laws “coexist.”

They wrote that a police officer could raise a “stand your ground” defense in a pre-trial hearing and, if unsuccessful, make arguments under the qualified-immunity law at trial.

“This case needs to be examined through the practical realities of policing,” Peraza’s attorneys wrote.

“To follow the petitioner’s (attorney general’s) argument would allow an average citizen to assert immunity whereas a law enforcement officer who took an oath to uphold the law, to serve and protect, and whose duty entails running toward danger rather than from it, would not be able to avail him or herself of such a defense.”

have any problem getting permits for projects in areas where there really isn’t enough water for them,” said Cullen, who said stricter water conservation efforts are needed across Florida.

The Legislature going to bat for development interests isn’t a new story in Florida, Cullen said.

“This kind of stuff is right out of the 1920s, maybe even earlier,” he added.

Those who steered the bill (HB 1149) through the Legislature said the alarms from environmentalists are unjustified.

“There are a lot of half-truths out there about this bill,” said Rep. Bobby Payne, R-Palatka, a sponsor of the measure. “But this is about putting drinking water — quality water back into the aquifer to accomplish many things.”

Treated sewage water already is being used to irrigate lawns and crops and for a variety of industrial uses.

But the legislation would be the first to order the state’s Department of Environmental Protection to work with regional water management districts on using reclaimed water to both bolster the aquifer and stop saltwater intrusion, another common problem stemming from rising sea levels.

“I think this bill is a good step forward,” said House Government Accountability Chair Matt Caldwell, R-North Fort Myers, whose committee shaped the legislation.

“We’re using reclaimed water everywhere now. I’ve even sampled beer made from it,” said Caldwell, who is a candidate for agriculture commissioner.

Home brewers in the Tampa area, which has been dealing with water shortages for years, have made beer using gallons of recycled, purified water.

But even if the treated waste is cleaned to what Payne said would be federal drinking water standards, environmentalists point out that does not eliminate other toxins found in human waste such as antibiotics, anti-depressants and other drugs.

Drinking water standards also still allow for relatively high levels of nutrients that can further damage Florida rivers and freshwater springs. The almost $89 billion budget signed into law by Scott includes $50 million for springs restoration.

Florida’s 700 known springs are particularly susceptible to pollutants, especially nutrients from farm and urban runoff and septic tanks. Such landmark sites as Silver Springs, Wakulla Springs and Fanning Springs all have experienced spikes in recent years in the level of nutrients and algae in their waters.

“The science is clear — this reused water is contaminated,” said Linda Young, director of the Clean Water Network of Florida.

DEP will be charged with enforcing the rules for what is released back into the aquifer, Young said, but many of the biological agents found in reclaimed water aren’t regulated by the state.

While environmentalists said they doubt that Scott will veto the legislation, his expected candidacy for U.S. Senate gives their case some strength. Some think Scott may want to look more green as he embarks on a nationally watched campaign to unseat Democratic U.S. Sen. Bill Nelson.

The conservation community generally doesn’t support Scott, who successfully pushed the Legislature to reduce water management district revenue and oversight, erased landmark growth management laws, and eliminated the state agency overseeing development during his more than seven years in office.

But just this week, Scott went to Apopka’s Wekiwa Springs State Park to highlight the state budget’s spending on springs, Everglades restoration, beach renourishment and other programs. He also stopped Wednesday in the Keys to tout conservation programs.

DICK AND DORIS KOLOUP & KOKO

Our 55TH Wedding Anniversary would have been today.

We love you and how much you meant to us. We miss you so very much. The years we were together were so meaningful to us. The 25 years of our retirement were so special to us. Our love for each other was never bending. We both enjoyed our togetherness as one. Things happened so fast in your last 2 weeks of your life, I pray to you every day that God is taking care of you better in Heaven than here on earth. We know that we look forward to the day that we all will be together again.

With all our love to you. Dick & Koko his training with no excuses. Along the way, he discovered a passion for running he never knew he had in him. Some might call it an obsession.

Over the years he built up from that first 5K and eventually got into marathons. Really got into them.

Earlier this year Ganley, 55, completed the Celebration Marathon, which was his 100th marathon. He's already up to 101 — or 2,646.2 miles worth of marathons — and still going strong.

"I'm not going to stop running until I can't do it anymore," Ganley said. "I've got a friend who is a wheelchair athlete and his goal is to do 200 marathons. It's amazing to see what people can do when they refuse to give up."

To Ganley, every marathon is about the journey, quite literally. As much as he enjoys the actual races, they are often not the highlight. He's completed marathons in all 50 states and has something good to say about the places he visited for just about every one of them.

"This has really given me my adventure back," Ganley said. "When I was a kid I would go on road trips with my tent and it was an adventure just to go someplace new. This has definitely brought the explorer back out in me. I look at them as weekend getaways once a month. It's a chance to travel and experience it with great friends."

When he got started, Ganley had plenty of help and encouragement. As a salesman back then (he's now semi-retired) his customers would tell him how good he looked as he dropped 55 pounds.

At races he would always strike up conversations with people running at his pace and they would hear his story and tell him how well he was doing.

Now, Ganley makes sure he pays that encouragement forward whenever he's running with someone.

"He talks a lot and he makes friends easily and he's so supportive," said Sandee McKinnon, a friend who has taken part in many marathons with Ganley. "He's just a great guy and tons of fun to run with. He has a huge heart and he really lifts everybody up."

Ganley has stories from every place he has visited, from the races he's run to the exploring he does afterward. He's collected a huge group of friends along the way and he's gotten good at what he does.

When he was first starting out, he was looking for a good picture of himself crossing the finish line. The first time he did that he got hold of the picture, only to find a woman of considerable size finishing right in front of him. The next time there was an 80-year-old man crossing the line ahead of him.

Seeing them just made him even more determined.

"Those photos just made me laugh," Ganley said. "But I went from being in the bottom 10 percent of my age group to being in the top 10 percent in my age group."

One of his most frustrating experiences was running a marathon in Alaska. When he crossed the finish line he knew there was something wrong because he knew how far he had run and it wasn't 26.2 miles.

It turned out a volunteer had been in the wrong place and gave the runners the wrong directions. It meant he had to go back and do another marathon to knock Alaska off his list. When he finally went back, Alaska became his 50th state.

It wasn't the only time he ran one that didn't count. Another marathon he ran turned out to be a tenth of a mile short, meaning he had to do another one for that as well.

At the beginning Ganley was running one or two marathons a year. But eight years into his marathon journey, he joined the Marathon Maniacs. The club has different levels of membership, with the top level being titanium. To qualify for that, you have to complete 30 marathons in 30 different states in 365 days.

Needless to say, Ganley is a titanium member.

"The trips have become more than runs," Ganley said. "I've been able to build up a huge network of running friends so now I can run a marathon anywhere and I'm going to know somebody."

One regret for Ganley is that he hasn't been able to get his two children — 15-year-old Shannon and 17-year-old Stephen — to follow in his running footsteps. He offered both $1,000 to run a marathon, but neither of them has taken him up on the offer. When his daughter asked if she could get $500 for running a half-marathon, Ganley readily agreed.

That almost came to pass when he took Shannon and one of her friends to Hawaii for a marathon. Walking along the street, strangers kept coming up to Ganley because of the 50 states marathon shirt he was wearing.

The girls were so impressed by Ganley's celebrity that they decided they wanted to do a half-marathon right then.

"The kids were blown away by the attention I got from the shirt," Ganley said. "But Honolulu has 33,000 runners and I knew that wouldn't be a good one for their first one. I said OK, but fortunately they didn't have a half-marathon, only the full one."

So what's next for someone who has completed marathons in every state, has topped the century mark and is still hungry for more challenges?

"I've got my eye on running marathons on all the continents," Ganley said. "I've already started looking at one in Australia."

And yes, they do have a marathon in Antarctica. Two of them, in fact.

Medical Research and Discovery

Doctors unlock secrets to fighting disease in ancient Chinese scrolls

Recent research and medical discoveries have revealed the wisdom and scientific validity of the herbal treatments used many centuries ago by Chinese doctors. The advent of modern production techniques have allowed researchers to extract the essential oils from these herbs in a much more potent and pure form. Studies have shown that these treatments work by greatly reducing inflammation in our bodies. Today's doctors have identified chronic inflammation as the silent killer responsible for all kinds of ailments like joint pain, loss of mobility, heart disease, weight gain, aging skin, digestive issues and even the growth of cancerous cells. A leader in all-natural supplements, The Healthy Living Association™, has developed a modern day mixture of potent herbal extracts that have been proven to greatly reduce chronic inflammation. This breakthrough supplement is called Proflexoral™ and it is finally being introduced to the US market. For a limited time, you can get FREE bottles of Proflexoral!

There is an epidemic in America and a hidden killer that is linked to all types of diseases and health problems...Chronic Inflammation! Modern science, until recently, has tackled this problem with pain killers and other dangerous drugs. These treatments have been disastrous by temporarily masking symptoms with terrible side-effects including strokes and addiction.

Breakthrough science by an innovative company called The Healthy Living Association™, has produced a modern miracle called Proflexoral™. Its key herbal extracts are derived from centuries old Chinese medicine. Its key ingredients have been proven in studies to reduce inflammation and treat the causes of many medical problems!

Modern day research is confirming that ancient herbal extracts can greatly reduce inflammation.

Medical researchers prove ancient herbal treatments fight inflammation & disease

Natural pain remedies have been around for centuries, and have proven to be incredibly effective for pain relief. Medical research costs millions of dollars and Big Pharma can't make money from natural remedies, so they have pushed them off the shelves.

Pioneering research funded by the leading nutraceutical companies in herbal science have proven that ancient herbal extracts are extremely effective for treating painful hands, joints, backs, and muscles. And, they solve the root cause of many health issues...Chronic Inflammation.

Asperin, Ibuprofen and all those drugs can kill you!

A recent British Medical Journal Review study including over 100,000 patients showed that those prescription drugs used to treat arthritis doubled the risk of heart attacks and strokes. Another study with over 22,000 patients also confirmed these high risks. The problem is there is so much money to be made for all the big pharmaceutical companies.

In addition, there is now evidence that even common painkillers like aspirin and ibuprofen can cause strokes and heart attacks. The side effects of many of these over the counter and prescription drugs are often life threatening. Worst of all, they are not treating the underlying cause of the pain, stiff joints and other health conditions... Inflammation!

Finally, doctors and researchers are embracing the wisdom of ancient all natural treatments in new pure and potent modern day forms.

Proflexoral is one of these modern day miracle pills based on modern science and the wisdom of the past.

Key herbs proven to be natural anti-inflammatories

One of the key ingredients of Proflexoral is boswellia (commonly known as Frankincense). A recent study by the University of Michigan showed that boswellia "effectively treated pain and stiffness, without the stomach irritation Science suggests the ancient herb of frankincense used for centuries in many religious rites greatly reduces pain, inflammation and can treat cancer.

that is a common side-effect of over-the-counter pain medications." This tree extract acts like a fire hose for burning inflammation in the body, which causes the pain you feel.

Nature's Miracle Anti-Inflammatory

Turmeric Curcumin is nature's anti-inflammatory miracle with research on its many health benefits!

A second key ingredient of Proflexoral is turmeric curcumin proven in research studies to be a powerful anti-inflammatory and antioxidant which offers protection against certain cancers, treats arthritis, benefits those with inflammatory bowel disease, reduces blood sugar and greatly reduces pain. The proprietary formulation in Proflexoral is an all-natural miracle pill to fight inflammation!

Chronic Inflammation Dangers

Diseases & Health Issues

- Joint pain and loss of mobility
- Increased cardiovascular risk
- Loss of muscle tone
- Weight gain
- Memory Loss and cognitive decline
- Premature aging of the skin
- Digestive problems
- Abnormal growth of cells
- Increased blood sugar levels

Many doctors have re-discovered ancient Chinese herbal science. Research studies have proven how herbs can reduce inflammation.

Proflexoral's all-natural miracle is changing lives!

Swelling in feet & hands is greatly reduced!

"I am a type 1 diabetic...I have severe neuropathy damage on both my feet and legs... I also had very high cholesterol and triglycerides... Because of my kidney problems I couldn't take any kind of pain killers...Within a week of taking Proflexoral the swelling in my feet & hands was greatly reduced and my stomach has not acted up in days!"

New Pill Boosts "Sex Chemicals" in the Brain That Increases Drive, Arousal, and Performance in Men

Recent warnings on popular sex drugs leads to a new class of performance pills for men; key ingredients work in the brain and body, enhancing arousal and performance.

Gerry Johnson
Men's Health News

SAN DIEGO, CA - In 1993, it was Viagra. Then Cialis and Levitra in 2003. And now, in 2018, it's a new kind of sex pill that's dominating the male potency market...and users are seeing amazing sexual improvements within days of taking their first dose.

LAST LONGER, ENJOY MORE EXCITING SEX: PEVarx is helping thousands of men overcome PE. The results are improvements in stamina, satisfaction, and sexual performance.

For the first time in years, many adult and senior men are refusing to let premature ejaculation, sexual dysfunction, and low sex drive ruin their sex lives. And without any of the side effects of prescription drugs.

After years of painstaking research, scientists have announced a sexual discovery so radical it could end sexual frustrations within the next 5-years.

And it's this discovery that's led to the creation of PEVarx, a spectacular new potency pill for men that's revolutionizing sex as we get older.

"Men can expect major improvements in sexual performance, duration, endurance, mood, and total satisfaction" explains Dr. Henry Esber of Innovus Pharmaceuticals, the company behind the PEVarx.

"And that's because PEVarx does what no other sex pill or drug has done before...it increases levels of certain chemicals in the brain that are released during sex."

"These natural brain chemicals control your sex drive, arousal, and even how long you last before climax. In fact, the duration of sexual intercourse is 2.5X longer for men taking this pill. They love it."

An Ingenious Approach to Sexual Dysfunction

PEVarx is not another 'sex pill craze' that's in one day and out the other. It's in a new class of pills that supplies the body with exactly what it needs to perform during sex.

PEVarx contains a special combination of ingredients that have never been blended into a pill. It's this special mixture that was tested and is responsible for delivering the incredible results in clinical trials..

"Even more remarkable, many of the men using PEVarx answered "YES" to the following questions after completing the trial.

- More confidence in getting and keeping an erection? - YES
- Were they stronger and harder for penetration? - YES
- Were you better able to keep an erection during penetration? - YES
- Was it less difficult to keep an erection? - YES
- When you attempted intercourse, was it better? - YES

"To our knowledge, it's the only drug free pill available that's proven successful in multiple clinical trials to help men last longer while also improving sexual satisfaction and performance" explains Esber.

Last Longer & Stay Aroused

Ever since the results from PEVarx's most recent clinical went public, the company cannot produce the pill fast enough. Men are eager to get their hands on it and for good reason.

Male participants taking PEVarx were able to last 250% longer during sex. For many, this lead to better satisfaction, arousal and performance.

Unlike drugs with dangerous side effects or sprays and creams that work by reducing feeling in the penis and even pills that try to make you less depressed, PEVarx helps men stay excited by supporting the pathways in the body responsible for peak sexual performance and pleasure.

PEVarx contains a unique and patent pending amino acid blend and two patented absorption enhancers for maximum efficacy and potency. It's both safe and healthy.

This special formulation acts on both the brain and body to delay climax, improve endurance and boost sex drive.

Backed By Real Clinical Trials

The effects of PEVarx were studied in a multi-center, observational study in men with sexual dysfunction. 665 adult men with sexual disorder were given two capsules of PEVarx twice daily for two months and the results were stunning.

The average duration of sexual intercourse in PE patients increased 2.5 times.

Even better, users also reported significant improvements in virtually all areas of the International Index of Erectile Function test including the ability to get and keep a hard, firm erection during sex.

With clinical results like this, it's easy to see why sales for PEVarx are soaring.

The Way It Works Is Remarkable...

PEVarx is taken just once daily. The pills are small and easy to swallow. There are no harmful side effects and it does not require a prescription.

PEVarx contains a unique combination of amino acids that promote syntheses in the hormones responsible for peak sexual performance and stamina in men.

PEVarx works to delay climax by promoting serotonin syntheses, the male hormone responsible for controlling ejaculation and prolonging the duration of sexual intercourse.

Leading to increased sex drive and higher levels of sexual pleasure, duration, and stamina.

When all of the possible benefits of this remarkable new sex pill are considered, it's no wonder thousands of men can't wait to get their hands on PEVarx.

Supported By The Medical Community

"PEVarx has an amazing affect on all men. I would highly recommend PEVarx for biological and physiological issues tied to sexual health."

"The studies show dramatic improvements in sexual performance, sexual duration, and satisfaction in both adults and seniors."

"PEVarx users are more easily aroused and have a much stronger desire and interest in sex. And in addition to sexual endurance, men say they are much happier with their erections when taking the pill."

"It's a truly amazing breakthrough for men. It's easy to use, convenient, safe, and effective." Dr. Henry Esber, Ph.D. San Diego, CA

Where to Find PEVarx

School Board member Bill Mathias has floated the idea of enacting a half-cent sales tax to pay for security upgrades at public schools.
[DAILY COMMERCIAL FILE]

more security cameras and installing bullet-proof glass in all schools. All schools already have electronically locked and monitored doors, but bulletproof glass would prevent an intruder from blasting his way in or at least slow his progress significantly.

The tax would have to be approved by voters.

Mathias pointed to Leesburg High School, which is decades old and is a porous campus with few modern security features.

"It's literally impossible to protect,"

Mathias said. "It needs a total reconstruct."

Mathias said it isn't clear how much money it would take to make safety upgrades to the schools but it would be substantial. He noted that when the district looked at installing bulletproof glass in all schools five years ago, it would have cost an estimated $15 million.

School district administrators are currently conducting an audit of all school facilities to determine what is needed.

Mathias said Florida and Lake County residents should not expect the Florida Legislature to fund those upgrades and noted that the state budget passed this month contains just a small fraction of the funding it would take to put resource officers in schools and make safety upgrades statewide.

"Tallahassee doesn't even properly fund education," he said. "Why would I think they are going to properly fund the safety of our schools?"

He believes a sales tax is the most equitable and least painful way to accomplish this because, unlike a property tax, sales taxes are paid by everyone. And after the school upgrades are finished, the tax can go away.

"About 40 percent of the tax would be paid by people coming through Lake County who don't live here, and that's a source of funding I know we can rely on," he said.

nuclear-tipped missile.

Kim's meeting with Xi offered some reassurance to Washington that "denuclearization" will be up for negotiation if the first summit between American and North Korean leaders in seven decades of animosity takes place.

But while Trump has elevated expectations of what that sit-down would achieve, North Korea has yet to spell out what it wants in return for abandoning a weapons program that Kim likely views as a guarantee for the survival of his totalitarian regime.

The readout of Kim's remarks to Xi as reported by China's state news agency Xinhua strongly indicates Pyongyang is looking for significant American concessions.

"The issue of denuclearization of the Korean Peninsula can be resolved," Kim was quoted as saying, "if South Korea and the United States respond to our efforts with goodwill, create an atmosphere of peace and stability while taking progressive and synchronous measures for the realization of peace."

To many North Korea watchers, that sounds like old wine in a new bottle.

In May 2011, the elder Kim, who was making what would be his final trip to China, told then-president Hu Jintao that the North was "adhering to the goal of denuclearization."

OUR OPINION

Congress fails us yet again

President Donald Trump went to Washington last year promising to “drain the swamp.” It was a popular idea among folks fed up with Washington’s entrenched ways. Yet, after 14 months in office, it’s pretty clear “the swamp” doesn’t want to be drained.

The president proved this Friday when he signed the massive $1.3 trillion spending bill to pay the government’s bills just through the end of September.

The first problem with that is this exercise was another instance in the wearying game of governing by “crisis.” The bill was passed in the 11th hour just before the federal government faced yet another shutdown, generating bogus pressure on recalcitrant lawmakers and Trump to take it or leave it. Facing that situation, some lawmakers complained no one had any time to read the 2,232-page monstrosity. Pfffft.

Why worry?

We heard the same gripe from Republicans when President Barack Obama was in office and Congress, along a party-line vote, passed a 2,000-page bill that overhauled the nation’s entire healthcare system; and again last December, when Congress, again voting along party lines, adopted the 1,100-page measure that provided the most significant changes to the federal tax code in 30 years.

Albeit ridiculous, this is how Congress operates. Aside from the concern that lawmakers take no time to digest the laws they pass, it is outright shameful that Congress cannot do its main job — write and pass the federal budget — on time (by Sept. 30 each year), with open and vigorous debate and sufficient transparency so the American people understand where their money is going.

This bill funds the government for the year that began last Oct. 1, and the people who are supposed to craft it have little to no idea what’s in it. Lawmakers now have six months to fashion a bill to fund the government for 2019. How do you think that will go?

The other overarching problem with this measure is that it piles on the debt.

Earlier this month, the Trump administration added its first trillion dollars to the national debt, raising that obligation to $21 trillion. The national debt did not top $1 trillion until 1982. It was “only” $5.8 trillion when George W. Bush took office in 2001. So, we’ve added $15 trillion in 17 years.

This spending plan is expected to make trillion-dollar annual budget deficits the norm for the foreseeable future.

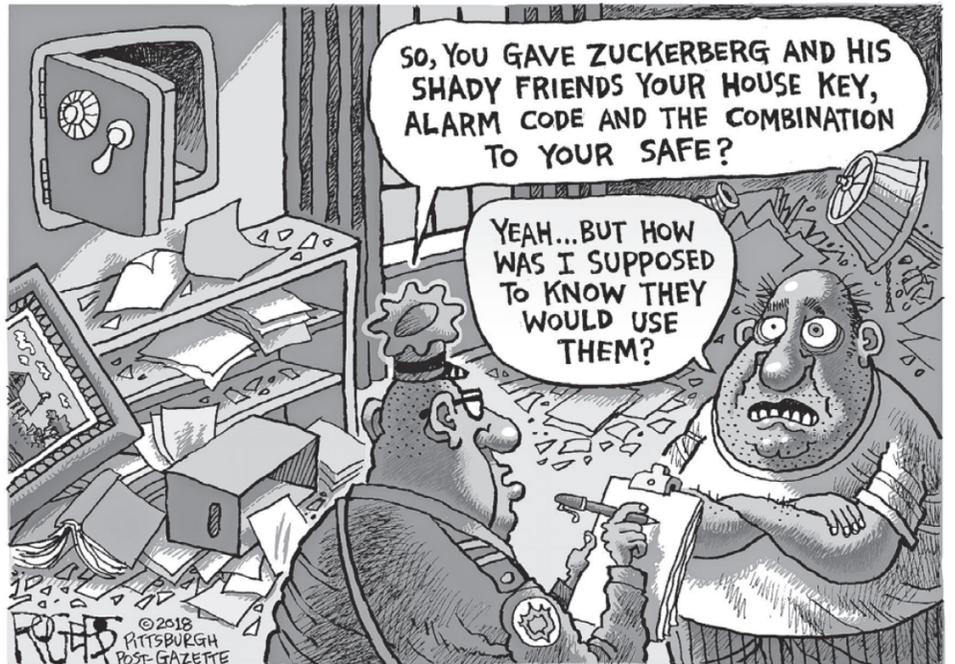

The Republican majority bears the majority of blame for the current catastrophe, but Democrats have no standing to moan about growing the debt.

They have been just as — perhaps more — reckless with their spending. Yet Republicans are supposed to be the party of fiscal conservatism and sanity yet have shown little inclination toward that end since regaining the majority.

President Trump, who also pledged to reduce the debt, had threatened to veto the bill and force Congress to work on it again. Instead, he signed it, observing, “There are a lot of things that I’m unhappy about in this bill. But that’s the way, unfortunately, right now the system works.”

“Unfortunately” doesn’t even begin to capture our mood.

ANOTHER OPINION

ANOTHER OPINION

Budget contributes to national insecurity

Cal Thomas

President Trump wants us to believe that the ridiculous 2,232-page spending bill passed by Congress, but unread by most members, is a matter of “national security,” because it has money to rebuild the military. He said he had to sign the bill for that reason, but promised never to sign one like it again. We’ll see.

Democrats are rejoicing because they got everything they wanted, including a pittance for the border “wall,” which specifies nothing like the prototypes the president recently inspected in San Diego.

Question: If a $21 trillion debt (and counting) and $1.3 trillion budget that requires even more borrowing isn’t enough, what is? Voters expected at least some drainage of “the swamp” by now. Instead it appears more water is being added and the swamp is getting deeper.

In its analysis of the bill, The Washington Free Beacon noted that total salaries for officers and employees of the Senate increased by $12.6 million. Also included is money to prevent “elderly falls,” promote breastfeeding and fight “alcohol use.” Not to be left out of the spending frenzy, the House increased its budget to $1.2 billion, which is, reports the Beacon, $10.9 million above 2017 levels.

No one justifies any of this misspending on constitutional grounds because there is no justification for it. People are getting pay raises for adding to the debt. That’s not promoting national security. Crushing debt — whether in government or in one’s personal life — creates insecurity. History shows that enormous debt has been a contributing factor to the collapse of nations and empires.

Why is there more money in the bill for the Department of Education when Secretary Betsy DeVos wants to cut her spending budget by 5 percent and focus on a $1 billion school choice program instead? How does this department “educate” students and why does it even exist?

In its analysis of the bill, the Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank based in Washington, D.C., got it right: “In addition to the defense increase, the omnibus provides an additional $63 billion in funding above the Budget Control Act caps for domestic spending. This increase is unwarranted. There are numerous wasteful, inefficient and misguided non-defense programs that could be cut or eliminated entirely. Furthermore, agencies will likely rush to spend all this additional money over the next six months, leading to even more waste. Instead of going through the regular order budget process, Congress continues to fund the government by self-created crisis, failing to perform its oversight function and allowing wasteful and inappropriate spending to continue year after year.”

This is not what voters expected from the 2016 election. There is always an excuse for additional spending. And it is almost always based on lies and the failure of too many members to put American citizens first and their own careers second. President Trump asked the Senate to eliminate the filibuster, which would presumably remove the Republican justification for going along with threats by Democrats to “shutdown” the government. That is as likely to happen as ending wasteful and unnecessary spending.

In the musical “Oklahoma,” the character Ado Annie sings “I’m just a girl who can’t say ‘no.’” That should be the theme of Congress. So addicted have people become to government with nearly half the nation receiving a check of some sort and the other half paying for it, it has become a fiscal version of the Opioid crisis.

The stock market reacted to this and other bad monetary news by shedding 1,400 points off the Dow Jones Industrial Average last week. President Trump has been bragging about recent record highs in the market. It appears his bragging days are over for now. There is little in this bill to brag about other than shoring-up the military. All of the other misspending would be shameful, if Washington politicians knew how to feel shame.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Budget, national debt and government shutdown

America’s credit card is soon to be cancelled for insufficient funds. Our actuary (CBO) has warned us that Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security will run out in the next 20 to 30 years, when our grandchildren are grown.

We can either increase the input (taxes) or decrease the output (monthly payments). Congress has to quit putting off changes and risk not being reelected or lead us into bankruptcy.

Procrastination is the mother of mediocrity, which in this case, is our bankruptcy.
Howard Vesser, Lady Lake

Assault weapons ban should go to voters

The Constitutional Revision

Commission is blocking efforts to introduce proposals to ban assault weapons. New proposals are ready to be submitted for an assault weapons ban, but the Commission is blocking them because of calendar deadlines.

They are more concerned about arbitrary rules than with actually accomplishing action on an urgent issue. The Florida House and Senate acted in less than three weeks to put together the School Safety Bill after it seemed it was too late in the 2018 legislative session. They got it done anyway.

Now it’s the CRC’s turn to be heroes, not zeroes. There is ample time to re-open debate and get public comment for a proposal to ban assault weapons and put the initiative on the ballot.

Tell them to waive the deadline and accept new proposals. Pam Bondi’s presence seems like a conflict of interest.

She appears to be acting more like the Attorney General than a member of a 37 person committee.

Contact the commission to give them your opinion at admin@flcra.gov or 850-717-9550.

Flooding on new SR 46 worse than you might think

Permit me to share some information in the hope that it will clear up a misstatement in the March 17 story, “County to FDOT: Raise section of Wekiva Parkway.”

The story is well written and informative, and the reporter is not responsible for the mistake. The sentence, “As it sits, the road is at the 50-year flood elevations, which the FDOT argues is sufficient,” is not accurate. This is what FDOT wants you to believe, but it is simply not true.

FDOT designed the road to be about four feet below FEMA’s 50-year flood, about five feet below FEMA’s 100-year flood.

How did they do that? FDOT disregarded FEMA’s flood study entirely and derived their own 100-year flood elevation at 76.8 feet above sea level. FEMA’s 100-year flood is 81.9 feet NAVD88. FEMA’S 50-year flood level is 80.7 NAVD88.

An examination of the current highway plans, with the information I’ve provided here, will reveal that the deepest submergence of State Road 46 occurs at the point where the new U.S. 441 fly-over ramp discharges two lanes of traffic (45 mph posted speed) onto eastbound State Road 46 into as much as four feet of flood water for the FEMA 100-year flood, as much as three feet of water for the FEMA 50-year flood. And FDOT calls this sufficient?

A graphic drawing that shows a cross section of the new six-lane SR 46 with FEMA’s flood levels plotted in comparison to FDOT’s preferred flood level is available at goo.gl/jk2511.

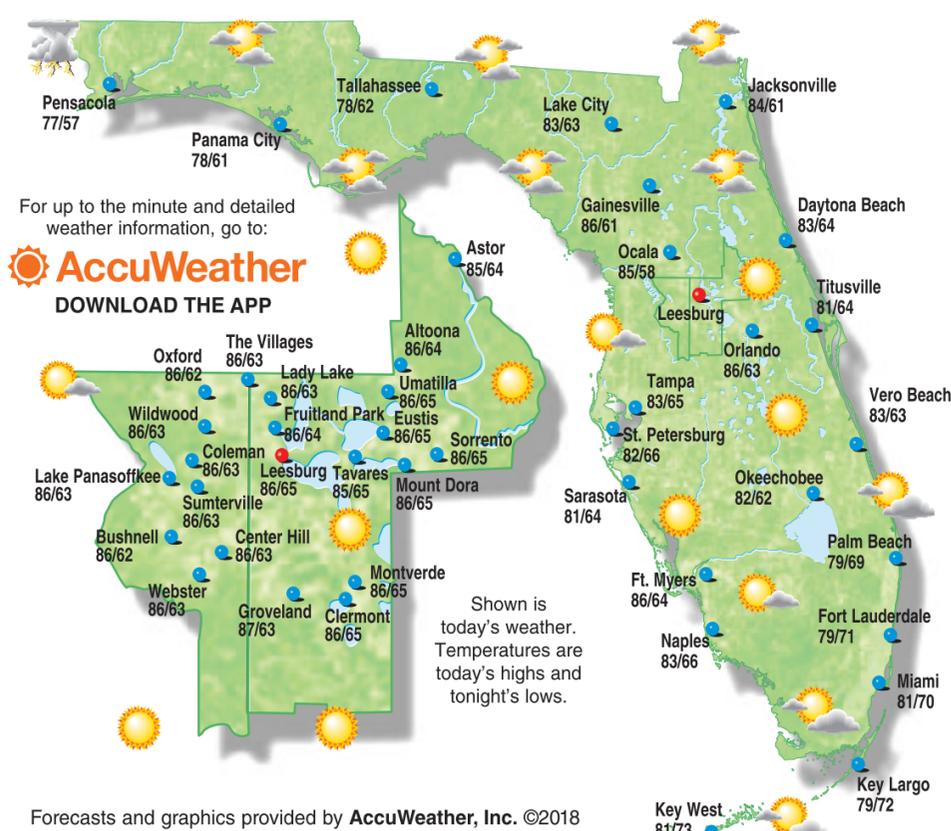

The drawing is typical of the ¾ mile stretch of SR 46 that will be under water during a flood.

By the way, this same section will be flooded during the 25-year flood and to a minor extent during a 10-year flood.

Montverde playing for big prize

Eagles in Geico High School Nationals tournament

By Frank Jolley
frank.jolley@dailycommercial.com

The big dance for the Montverde Academy boys basketball team begins today in New York City.

And the Eagles are favored by many to walk away with the ultimate prize for the fourth time in six years.

Montverde Academy will close out today's quarterfinal round of the Geico High School Nationals at 6 p.m. against Highland (Utah) Lone Peak at Middle Village Christ the King High School. The three-day, eight-team event is considered by many to be the premier prep tournament in the country, with six of the top 10 teams in MaxPreps' Xcellent 25 rankings in the field.

Today's slate of four games, beginning at noon, will be televised nationally on ESPN. Both of Friday's semifinal games will be broadcast on ESPN2 and Saturday's championship game at noon will be carried live on ESPN.

Montverde Academy, which arrived in New York City on Tuesday, enters the tournament as the top-ranked team in the Xcellent 25 with a 31-0 record. The Eagles' last loss was in the title game of last year's tournament, then named the Dick's Sporting Goods High School Nationals, when LaPorte (Indiana) La Lumiere pulled off a 70-52 upset.

The Eagles are led by senior R.J. Barrett, a Duke commit. Barrett is pulling double duty this week. He played Wednesday night in the prestigious McDonald's All-American game at the Philips Arena in Atlanta and then took a late-night flight to New York City to get himself ready for today's game.

Barrett isn't the first Montverde Academy player to pull off the feat.

Jaguars' Coughlin embracing high expectations

By Mark Long
The Associated Press

ORLANDO — Tom Coughlin had one complaint about his first season back with the Jacksonville Jaguars: Watching games from the press box.

"The window in front of me got messed up a few times," Coughlin said this week at the NFL Meetings.

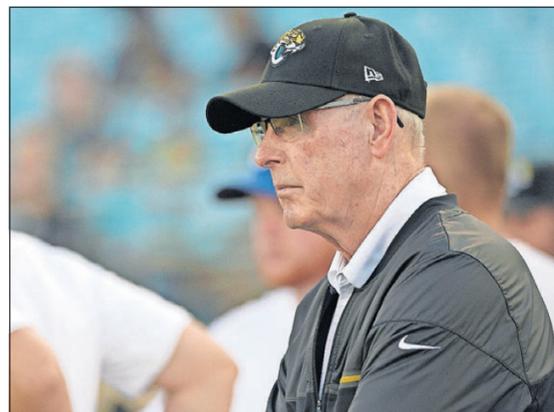

The 71-year-old former coach turned fiery executive might need to find a new seat, especially given the ultrahigh expectations that will follow Jacksonville into the season.

After making the AFC championship game in January — and leading New England by 10 points in the fourth quarter before losing 24-20 — the Jaguars will be a popular pick to win their division and make another run to the Super Bowl.

"Non-negotiable expectations from within," Coughlin said. "That's how we look at it. Our expectations are very high and anybody that comes on board has to understand there's a way to accomplish what we're trying to accomplish. It's through team, it's through individual improvement and it's through a relentless drive through team success."

Villanova joins nation's elite with run

By Dan Gelston
The Associated Press

VILLANOVA, Pa. — The Final Four had been set for decades: Duke, North Carolina, Kansas and Kentucky were crowned as college basketball's royalty.

They are the blue-bloods of basketball — where deep NCAA Tournament runs are the norm, NBA prospects play, hardwood rules the sports landscape and an air of superiority reigns in programs rich in tradition and with alumni rich enough to help fund state-of-the-art practice facilities or arenas.

Grandpa might tell you UCLA or Indiana should still be in the mix. Maybe the kids like Michigan State or Arizona.

But a fifth team has firmly crashed the field: Villanova. Its fans turn up their noses at the Philly schools while the team turns up the heat in the Big East and is positioned for a second national championship in three years.

The road to the best program in hoops may start where the original rules of the game are housed at Kansas, hit Tobacco Road, head to the home of the one-and-done prospect in Lexington but it ends on the Main Line, a wealthy stretch of Philadelphia suburbs home to Villanova.

Top recruits use support systems to avoid NCAA troublemakers

By George Henry
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Cameron Reddish has known since ninth grade, when Penn State offered him a full scholarship, that he was a special basketball talent.

Three years later, Reddish and some of the top prep players in the country played in Wednesday night's McDonald's All-American game. Reddish and some of his Duke-bound teammates in the prestigious game are all aware of the scandal that's rocked college basketball this season with the FBI investigating corruption that led to criminal charges against assistant coaches, agents, apparel company employees and others.

"It's crazy, it's dirty, it's kind of messed up," Reddish told The Associated Press. "That's a lot of grown men trying to get one over on young kids, so it's a really messed up business, but at the end of the day you have to stay trustworthy to who you know."

Reddish, R.J. Barrett, Zion Williamson and Tre Jones are part of the Blue Devils' recruiting class, considered the best in the nation.

They all say strong support systems have helped them steer clear of any unwanted contact.

Williamson, a South Carolina prep sensation with YouTube fan videos that have been viewed millions of times, understands how a teenager could get caught up in the whirlwind of attention. But Williamson said he never was tempted to meet with anyone who could possibly put his career in jeopardy.

He credits his stepfather, former Clemson player Lee Anderson, and his mother, Sharonda Sampson, with keeping unwelcome people from getting close.

"I don't think it's right because they're high school kids," Williamson told The AP. "Some high school kids haven't seen a lot of money at once. They take the bait for it and the next thing you know, they find themselves in a situation where they can't go to a dream school that they've dreamed of going to since they were a kid. They have to go overseas and probably won't enjoy it as much as college."

"I think agents can wait until the kid says he's declaring for the draft."

It was the same way during Coughlin's first stint in Jacksonville. Coughlin essentially built the franchise from the ground up in 1995. He was the head coach and the one voice that made every decision — from who threw the passes to who ran the calculator for the salary cap to what color paint was on the walls.

Anyone who believes he's a figurehead in his return would be mistaken.

He even had his hand in the Jaguars' new uniforms.

The team spent part of last year designing new uniforms. The revamped ones will be unveiled April 19 at the team's annual state of the franchise address. Most notably, the Jags are adding more teal to the jerseys and eliminating the two-tone helmets that had become as much a reason for ridicule in recent years as the team's woeful record. The first version of the helmet was matte black.

Coughlin vetoed that color, instead opting for an old-school, shiny-black look.

"It was just a feeling of who we are, what we represent," Coughlin said. "That's a very good look. It's a solid look. As I said at one point in time, we have some guys that will be in the Hall of Fame and the connection will be very similar as we go forward. We just wanted a little bolder statement, and I think we got it."

The Jaguars made a statement on the field in 2017. They won the AFC South for the first time in franchise history and earned a postseason berth for the first time in a decade.

The success coincided with Coughlin's return, but it was far from a coincidence.

Team owner Shad Khan credited the two-time Super Bowl-winning coach with bringing some much-needed leadership to a franchise that had won 17 of 80 games across the five seasons before his return.

"And with that comes a sense of values and a sense of expectations and ability to deliver results," Khan said.

Even though Coughlin has final say over all football decisions, his role alongside coach Doug Marrone and general manager Dave Caldwell has evolved.

"I was basically on the practice field for every practice and I was in the Saturday night meetings," Coughlin said. "I did everything just like I normally would do (as the coach). I prepared just as if I was in that spot, the coaching spot, and I would do some things. Like Doug might ask me to look at something and prepare a tape for him to look at, and I would do that. I enjoy all of that."

Keuchel and Justin Verlander. The Dodgers and Indians are still poised after coming within one win of that elusive crown. The Nationals hired a new manager to help free agent-to-be Bryce Harper, Max Scherzer, Stephen Strasburg reach the top. And the Red Sox got the bopper they needed.

Where does that leave the Reds, Pirates, Tigers, Rays and A's? Well, better luck next year. Or the year after that.

Major League Baseball is in a hurry these days, with record home runs and strikeouts the new norm. But please, get that last out in under three hours.

A season that will include games in Mexico and Puerto Rico is set to start. And, if all goes as planned, the final game will come in October.

Here's an early look at what to expect:

Welcome

Slugger J.D. Martinez moves to Boston, which hit the fewest homers in the American League. Andrew McCutchen and Evan Longoria go to the retooling Giants, Jake Arrieta joins the rebuilding Phillies, Christian Yelich and Lorenzo Cain become part of the Brewers' outfield, Marcell Ozuna provides pop in St. Louis and Yu Darvish is now pitching for the Cubs. Also, six new managers: Alex Cora (Red Sox), Aaron Boone (Yankees), Dave Martinez (Nationals), Mickey Callaway (Mets) and Gabe Kapler (Phillies) try for the first time, and Ron Gardenhire (Tigers) returns after a four-year absence.

Worth watching

Babe Ruth or bust? We'll see whether newcomer Shohei Ohtani becomes the most successful two-way player in the bigs since the Bambino. The 23-year-old Japanese star struggled at the plate and on the mound this spring, but it's early. Tampa Bay reliever Jonny Venters has been out of the majors since 2012 while having three Tommy John surgeries. Alex Rodriguez, meanwhile, keeps getting more popular in retirement as he moves into the ESPN booth for Sunday night telecasts.

NOTEBOOK

Former Eagles standout Ben Simmons played in the McDonald's game in 2015, when it was played in Chicago, before flying overnight to New York to eventually lead Montverde Academy to its third straight national title.

In addition to Montverde Academy, the Geico field also includes Mouth of Wilson (Virginia) Oak Hill Academy (ranked No. 2 in the Xcellent 25), Fort Lauderdale University (No. 3), which won the FHSAA Class 5A state championship three weeks ago, and Phoenix Shadow Mountain (No. 4). In addition, Henderson (Nevada) Findlay Prep (No. 6), which lost to Montverde Academy in the championship game of the Montverde Academy Invitational Tournament in January, along with La Lumiere (No. 9) and Seattle Garfield (No. 12) give the tournament seven teams from the Xcellent 25.

Lone Peak is ranked No. 28 in MaxPreps' Computer Rankings, meaning every team in the tournament field is ranked in at least one of MaxPreps' two major rankings.

In addition to being the top-ranked team in the Xcellent 25, Montverde Academy is also ranked No. 1 in USA Today's Super 25. The Eagles were ranked No. 3 in MaxPreps' Computer Rankings.

Weightlifting

Lake High School, won the 199-pound weight classification at the Class 2A-Region 3 weightlifting championships on March 21 at Land O' Lakes Sunlake.

Davis will represent South Lake in the Class 2A state finals April 7 at Panama City Beach Arnold High school and will be among a solid contingent of area lifters in the two-day, two-classification event.

Davis set the stage for his gold-medal effort at regionals with a solid second-place finish at the Class 2A-District 5 finals on March 9 at Leesburg. A member of the Eagles' football team, Davis finished second at districts with a combined weight of 565 pounds.

He lifted 315 pounds in the bench press and 250 pounds in the clean and jerk. Davis was five pounds off the pace set by Ocala Vanguard's Tyler Sims, the district champion at 199 pounds.

Softball

Four area softball programs are listed among the state's top teams in the latest Miracle Sports rankings, which were released Tuesday.

Eustis, Mount Dora Christian Academy, East Ridge and The Villages are ranked in three different classifications, while Montverde Academy, which was an honorable mention in Class 4A a week ago, dropped from the rankings.

In Class 5A, Eustis is ranked No. 4, as is MDCA in Class 2A. The Panthers (10-2 record), who played in the state championship game in 2017, fell one spot from where they were ranked a week ago, despite shutting out South Sumter 3-0.

Tuesday's 10-0 win against The Villages (10-2) — ranked 10th in Class 5A — did not figure into the current rankings.

MDCA (12-2) maintained its ranking from last week despite not playing. Like all Lake County public schools, the Bulldogs were on spring break.

In Class 8A, East Ridge (13-1) continued its steady move up the rankings, climbing to No. 7.

Basketball

The honors for the Leesburg High School boys basketball team continue to roll in.

And now, the Yellow Jackets are attracting national attention.

Following a 30-1 season, which concluded with a second straight Class 6A state championship, vaulted into MaxPreps' Computer Rankings. The Yellow Jackets landed at No. 32 in the country in the latest rankings, which were released Tuesday.

Leesburg is ranked one spot ahead of Orlando Oak Ridge, which won the Class 9A state championship. Montverde Academy is ranked No. 3.

MaxPreps' Computer Rankings uses game results stored in the service's database. Generally speaking, the more a team wins the higher its ranking, but the system takes into account quality wins (against other highly ranked opponents) and strength of schedule.

VILLANOVA

a look at the Wildcats' resume by the numbers headed into Saturday's Final Four game against Kansas (31-7):

- 134. Wins (and counting). The most by any program over a four-year span.
- 30. Sweet 16s under coach Jay Wright.
- 3. Final Fours since 2009.
- 1. National championship

under Wright in 2016.

• 420. Wins under Wright, the most in team history.

There's another number worth noting: $60 million. It's the expected cost of the renovation funded by donors of Villanova's on-campus arena when it reopens next season. The Wildcats played this season at the home of the NBA's Philadelphia 76ers, the Wells Fargo Center — where they went a sparkling 11-1.

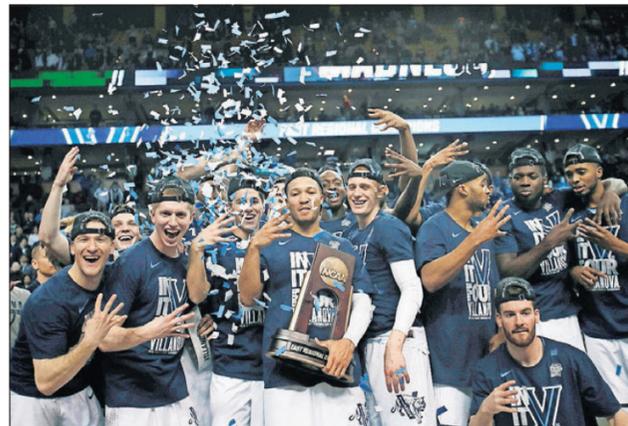

Any way you count it, the Wildcats' decade of dominance has turned their blood as blue as their "V" logo.

"We consistently had very good players," Wright said. "It's a part of guys staying healthy, guys staying in the program, good recruiting, getting lucky in recruiting over a period of time."

The Wildcats soared to the top of the AP Top 25, earned a No. 1 seed in the NCAA Tournament and won another Big East Tournament title without a senior on the roster. Jalen Brunson, named Tuesday to the AP All-America team, Phil Booth, Mikal Bridges and Donte DiVincenzo carried the Wildcats in stretches in tournament wins over Radford, Alabama, West Virginia and Texas Tech.

"We played the two best teams in the Big 12 and now we're getting THE best team in the Big 12," Wright said. "We know it's going to be tougher."

Villanova's Jalen Brunson holds the trophy as he celebrates with teammates after a win over Texas Tech in an NCAA Tournament regional final Sunday in Boston. Villanova won 71-59 to advance to the Final Four. [AP PHOTO / CHARLES KRUPA]

NASCAR THIS WEEK

SPEED FREAKS

A few questions we had to ask ourselves

Six races in and now an off-week. Who's the most pleasant surprise so far?

GODSPEAK: I'm going with Austin Dillon winning the Daytona 500 (and his tattoo story), plus the rise of Aric Almirola, who may join Bowyer in Victory Lane very soon.
KEN'S CALL: I was leaning toward Harvick because three straight wins is surprising for anyone. But gotta go with Bowyer now, because his win came after several weeks of decency.

And, since we're asking, the biggest letdown?

GODSPEAK: It has to be Chase Elliott. He was ready to win in 2017 and now he does not have the car to win in 2018.
KEN'S CALL: Gonna go with Bubba Wallace. He got our hopes up after Daytona, but he hasn't found top gear since.

FEUD OF THE WEEK

JAMIE McMURRAY VS. AUSTIN DILLON: McMurray was minding his own business and Dillon clipped him and spun him into the wall. It was the only yellow flag for an incident all day.
GODWIN KELLY'S TAKE: McMurray is not the vindictive type, but this one might have gotten under his skin. We won't know for sure until Bristol three weeks from now.

GODWIN'S EARLY TEXAS PICKS

WINNER: Kevin Harvick
REST OF TOP 5: Martin Truex Jr., Kyle Busch, Chase Elliott, Jimmie Johnson
FIRST ONE OUT: Ricky Stenhouse Jr.
DARK HORSE: Erik Jones
DON'T BE SURPRISED IF: Harvick emerges from a three-way battle with Truex and Busch to win his fourth Cup race of 2018.

MOTOR MOUTHS PODCAST

We're moving to a Thursday release, which gives us time to thaw from this past weekend.

MARTINSVILLE

THREE THINGS WE LEARNED

1. Streak, broken!

Clint Bowyer was so excited about snapping a nagging 190-race losing streak, he nearly wiped out his No. 14 Ford in Turn 3 of the cool-down lap. "Finally to get the No. 14 in Victory Lane is just a weight off the shoulders," he said. "You start to question if you can get it done or not."

2. Mr. Second Place

For most any driver, three second-place finishes over four consecutive starts would be big news. Not for Kyle Busch. "I wouldn't say it's one particular thing that we can pinpoint, we've just been beat by somebody kind of hitting it a little bit more than we have," Busch said with a shrug.

3. Snow day

The NASCAR Cup Series took a rare snow-day

Few winners in NASCAR's recent history were as happy and relieved as Clint Bowyer was Monday in Martinsville. [NASCAR GETTY IMAGES/JERRY MARKLAND] off Sunday. Martinsville Speedway was full of white powder, making it impossible to race. The last time NASCAR had to postpone a race for snow was all the way back to 1993 when Atlanta was blanketed by spring flakes.

THREE THINGS TO WATCH

1. Chevrolet, ole!

Chevy is seeing red right now. Look for Team Chevrolet and the General Motors Nation to work through the NASCAR Cup Series off-week to get more consistent speed into the new Camaro body. With a few exceptions, Chevrolet's performance has been dreadful. It took seven-time Cup Series champion Jimmie Johnson five starts before scoring his first top-10 finish. "Each week we have been getting a little bit better," he said.

2. No, says Edwards

Every time Carl Edwards gets asked the question "Are you planning to return as a Cup Series driver?" the answer is always the same — "No." During a recent interview on SiriusXM NASCAR Radio Edwards drove a stake through the heart of comeback rumors. "I don't have any plans to come back," he said. Edwards did hint at a possible hard turn into politics. "But there's nothing planned any time soon," he said.

3. No longer with us

OK, the header sounds ominous, but the subject matter is this: race drivers who have won at Texas over the last 10 years but who are no longer racing. So over the last 10 years, dating back to 2008, the drivers who won races at Texas and no longer drive are Carl Edwards, Jeff Gordon, Matt Kenseth, Tony Stewart and Greg Biffle. The next stop for these guys is the NASCAR Hall of Fame, most certainly.

QUESTIONS & ATTITUDE

Compelling questions ... and maybe a few actual answers

Can it be a Clint year?

Let's not get ahead of ourselves, but yes, let's hope we see more of Clint Bowyer among the late-lap leaders and occasionally in Victory Lane. He's a guy who's popular with fellow racers and anyone who misses the days when all the racers were a little gritty and not afraid to let their hair down in public. There's a lot of Jethro Bodine in Clint Bowyer, and that's a good thing for us onlookers.

Who picked Martinsville in March?

Settle down, this was a bit of a fluke. The race was scheduled for March 25. On March 25 the previous year, the Martinsville high was 73 under sunny skies. So don't blame anyone beyond Jack Frost. Also, at least we got plenty of cool pictures of a racetrack under a blanket of snow. Repurpose them for Christmas cards later this year.

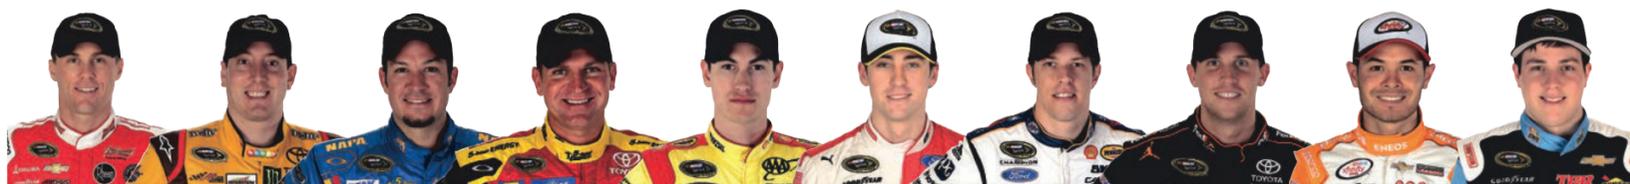

Will the Chevrolets find it?

The polite thing to say is, "of course, the season is young. They'll catch up eventually." But the truth is, they've been mediocre on nearly all manner of track so far, and that's a very bad sign. And I mean "mediocre" compared to your Taurus. Compared to the actual competition, something less than mediocre.

US stock indexes end choppy day of trading slightly lower

By Alex Veiga
AP Business Writer

U.S. stock indexes struggled to find direction Wednesday, ending the choppy day of trading with a loss for the second straight day.

The latest market decline was modest compared with the previous day's steep drop, but both were largely driven by a sell-off in technology stocks. Losses in Amazon, Netflix and other consumer-focused companies also weighed on the market Wednesday. Energy stocks fell in tandem with crude oil prices.

Those losses outweighed gains by drugstore chains, health care companies and other stocks.

Despite a crop of strong company earnings and market-boosting corporate deal news, traders continued to wrestle with the potential implications of negative headlines swirling around several big-name stocks, including Amazon, Facebook and Tesla.

"The news continues to be volatile and the markets are just highly sensitive to it in a way that they weren't sensitive to it last year," said Tom Martin, senior portfolio manager with Global Investments. "We've forgotten that this is more like the way things are, that markets do react to news that comes in."

The benchmark S&P 500 index lost 7.62 points, or 0.3

percent, at 2,605. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 9.29 points, or 0.04 percent, to 23,848.42. The Nasdaq composite slid 59.58 points, or 0.8 percent, to 6,949.23. The Russell 2000 index of smaller-company stocks lost 0.54 points, or 0.04 percent, to 1,513.03. More stocks rose than fell on the New York Stock Exchange.

Bond prices were little changed. The yield on the 10-year Treasury held at 2.78 percent.

The major stock indexes wobbled between gains and losses for much of the day as investors weighed the latest developments with some of the market's biggest names.

Facebook, which has taken a beating in recent days over privacy concerns, reflected the broader movement of the market, dipping into the red at times before eking out a small gain. The social media giant said early Wednesday it would give its privacy tools a make-over. The move is a response to criticisms over its data practices and the prospect of tighter European regulations in the coming months. The stock gained 81 cents, or 0.5 percent, to $153.03.

Software company Red Hat was the technology sector's biggest decliner, sliding $8.22, or 5.3 percent, to $146.20.

"Tech has had such a tremendous run-up and has outperformed some of the other sectors," said Erik Davidson, chief investment officer for Wells Fargo Private Bank. "There may be other areas now that are more attractive, and we've seen some strength recently in some of the more defensive-oriented sectors."

Investors also fretted about Amazon after Axios, citing anonymous sources, reported Wednesday that President Donald Trump has wondered aloud if there was a way to "go after" Amazon with antitrust or competition law.

Amazon has long been a target of Trump, who has tweeted in the past that the online retailer didn't pay enough taxes or needed to pay the U.S. post office more for handling shipments. Amazon CEO Jeff Bezos also personally owns The Washington Post, which Trump has labeled "fake news" when unfavorable stories are written about him or his administration. Shares in the e-commerce giant fell $65.63, or 4.4 percent, to $1,431.42.

Netflix also declined, shedding $14.92, or 5 percent, to $285.77.

BEAUMONT COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT DISTRICT NOTICE OF ORGANIZATIONAL MEETING

Notice is hereby given that an Organizational Meeting of the Beaumont Community Development District will be held on Thursday, April 12, 2018 at 1:00 p.m., at The Villages Public Library at Pinellas Plaza, 7375 Powell Rd., Conference Room 162, Wildwood, Florida 34785.

The purpose of the Organizational Meeting is to organize the District, consider engagement of professionals, discuss initial bond related business and conduct any and all other business coming before the initial Board of Supervisors.

Copies of the agenda may be obtained from the District Manager, WRATHELL, HUNT AND ASSOCIATES, LLC, 2300 Glades Road, Suite 410W, Boca Raton, Florida 33431, (561) 571-0010 during normal business hours.

The meeting is open to the public and will be conducted in accordance with the provisions of Florida law for community development districts. The meeting may be continued to a date, time, and place to be specified on the record at the meeting. There may be occasions when Board Supervisors or District Staff may participate by speaker telephone.

Any person requiring special accommodations at this meeting because of a disability or physical impairment should contact the District Office at (877) 276-0889 at least forty-eight (48) hours prior to the meeting. If you are hearing or speech impaired, please contact the Florida Relay Service by dialing 7-1-1, for aid in contacting the District Office.

Each person who decides to appeal any decision made by the Board with respect to any matter considered at the meeting is advised that person will need a record of proceedings and that accordingly, the person may need to ensure that a verbatim record of the proceedings is made, including the testimony and evidence upon which such appeal is to be based.

ON STAGE

'Sweeney' closes this week at Bay Street

By Linda Florea / Correspondent

It's time to see the musicals "Sweeney Todd, The Demon Barber of Fleet Street" with the Bay Street Players in Eustis and "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" at the Melon Patch in Leesburg before their final performances Sunday.

"On Golden Pond" by the Montana Repertory Theatre plays one show only on Saturday at the Clermont Performing Arts Center.

Here's what's On Stage this week:

'How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying'

The Melon Patch Players in Leesburg holds its last performance of the musical "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" on Sunday. The play follows the rise of J. Pierrepont Finch, who uses a handbook to climb the corporate ladder from window washer to high-powered executive.

"It's a 2 1/2 hour romp though the 60s," said vice president of production Derick Wallman. "It's a little microcosm on how things were back then."

Details: melon-patchplayers.org.

'Sweeney Todd'

The Bay Street Players' dark musical "Sweeney Todd, The Demon Barber of Fleet Street" closes on Sunday.

Set in 19th century England, the musical details the return of barber Sweeney Todd to London after 15 years of exile. He takes revenge on the corrupt judge who banished him by conspiring with a local baker, Mrs. Lovett, who is in desperate need of fresh meat for her pies.

Details: baystreet-players.org.

The Montana Repertory Theatre presents "On Golden Pond" for one show only at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Clermont Performing Arts Center, 3700 S. U.S. Highway 27 in Clermont.

[TERRY CYR]

'On Golden Pond'

For one show only, the Montana Repertory Theatre presents "On Golden Pond" at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Clermont Performing Arts Center, 3700 S. U.S. Highway 27 in Clermont.

The show is the love story of Ethel and Norman Thayer, who are returning to their summer home on Golden Pond for the 48th year. He is a retired professor, nearing 80, with heart palpitations and a failing memory. Ethel, 10 years younger and the perfect foil for Norman, delights in all the small things that enrich their lives. They are visited by their daughter and her fiancé who leave his teenage son behind for the summer to become the "grandchild" the couple have longed for.

Cost: $29.21 to $42.43. Details: clermontperformingarts.com.

Easter egg hunts abound in Lake and Sumter counties this weekend

By Linda Florea / Correspondent

Easter egg hunts are everywhere this weekend, giving area tots an opportunity to collect treats at events across Lake County.

If you're hunting a different kind of treasure, check out the Backstage Bargain Bonanza and lend a hand to the Tavares Community Theatre Company.

Get to know your neighboring Sandhill Crane at Trout Nature Center on Saturday and learn to live around the leggy, trumpeting, feathered fowl.

And retired football coach and analyst Lou Holtz is the speaker Saturday at the Mount Dora Community Building.

Church Easter Egg Hunt

The Welcome Home Christian Church, 335 Tomato Hill Road in Leesburg hosts an Easter egg hunt at 10:30 a.m. Saturday for children in grades 6 and younger. There is also free food, games and a petting zoo.

Montverde's 4th Annual Easter Egg Hunt

Candy, fun, prizes pictures and over 11,000 Easter eggs are on tap for kids age 11 and younger at the fourth annual Easter Egg Hunt at Kirk Park, 17436 Division St. at 10 a.m. Saturday. Festivities follow the hunt.

Kids and parents can enjoy Easter egg hunts in Mount Dora, Montverde, Leesburg and other places this week. [GATEHOUSE MEDIA FILE]

Lake Louisa Nature Fest

The Friends of Lake Louisa State Park are holding a Nature Fest from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday at Lake Louisa State Park, 7305 U.S. Highway 17 in Clermont. The family-friendly nature event is designed to create awareness about outdoor recreation and Florida's environment and ecosystems. Activities include guided nature walks, live music, live animals, kayaking, rock painting, artwork for sale, tram tours, fishing demonstration, gardening for wildlife, an egg decorating event and hunt, guided horse rides and face painting. Free with park admission.

MOVIE REVIEW

Spielberg scores a lot of points with 'Ready Player One'

By Ed Symkus

More Content Now

Before making "Ready Player One," Steven Spielberg had directed 30 feature films. There were ticket-selling triumphs ("Jaws") and box office bombs ("The BFG"). There were somber studies of social issues ("The Color Purple"), haunting historical dramas ("Schindler's List"), and science fiction flights of fancy ("A.I. Artificial Intelligence"). But it's been a long time since Spielberg successfully latched on to the little kid inside of him and made a film that's simply a bunch of fun, I'd say since "1941."

From its opening salvo of music — Van Halen's "Jump" — to its last — "You Make My Dreams" by Hall & Oates — "Ready Player One" is a whirlwind celebration of fantasy versus reality and good versus evil, a salute to competitive spirit, youthful idealism, and pop culture. It's also the best all-round thing Spielberg has done since his 2005 remake of

"War of the Worlds."

You needn't have read the 2011 novel by Ernest Cline (who co-wrote the screenplay), nor do you have to be a gamer or a virtual reality aficionado to be won over by what Spielberg has unleashed here. An open mind that doesn't require that every little thing be explained, a love of visual effects, and a sense of moviegoing adventure are the only prerequisites.

It's Columbus, Ohio, in the year 2045. Something has gone very wrong — socially, monetarily, environmentally — with our world, and by the time our protagonist, 18-year-old Wade (Tye Sheridan) was born, people had stopped trying to fix the countless problems. Wade lives in a massive jumble of a trailer park with his downhearted aunt and her awful boyfriend. Wade, like so many others, has turned away from reality, opting instead to don a special helmet and plug into the Oasis, a virtual reality haven where

Byrne sees world gone wrong on new album

By Michelle R. Smith
The Associated Press

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — David Byrne has some observations about American life these days, and it worries him. The former Talking Heads frontman and prolific artist sees people divided into camps, not talking to one another, with politicians on both sides representing moneyed interests, rather than the people.

Something's gone wrong, he said. Byrne's new album, "American Utopia," is about the longing people have amid fears and frustrations.

"They're all wondering, 'Could things be done in a slightly different way? Is there a better way than the way we've ended up?'" he said in a recent interview with The Associated Press.

The album's lead single, "Everybody's Coming to My House," co-written with Brian Eno, is No. 5 on Billboard's adult alternative songs chart, giving him his first Top 10 hit in 25 years. Last week he launched an international, 90-some city tour, which he calls his most ambitious since the shows filmed for the 1984 Jonathan Demme film "Stop Making Sense," considered among the best concert films of all-time.

And, he has started a website: ReasonsToBeCheerful.world, where he curates hopeful news about some possible paths forward.

"American Utopia," released on March 9, is Byrne's first solo album in 14 years. In between those records his work included albums with St. Vincent, musicals about Imelda Marcos and Joan of Arc, books about urban bicycling and how music works, interactive art based on neuroscience and more projects.

Producer Patrick Dillett, who has collaborated with Byrne for years and works on "American Utopia" — along with Eno and Scottish producer Rodaith McDonald — said Byrne's collaborative nature and openness to try new things is among the qualities that sets him apart.

"He does a lot of things well, but he's not doing them to be known for it. It's a way of becoming a fuller person," Dillett said. "He's as well-formed and well-rounded a person as I've ever known. If I could be someone when I grow up, I would be him."

Byrne, who was born in Scotland but moved to the United States as a child and held a green card for most of his life, became a U.S. citizen in 2012.

Asked why, he laughed, then made a confession.

"I have been voting surreptitiously. I was under possibly the mistaken impression that green card holders could vote for all local candidates," the 65-year-old said. "They just couldn't vote for president. That was the impression I had. And then at some point when I went into my local elementary school to vote, and they said, 'You can't vote!' I hope I'm not getting myself in trouble. But I truly believed that I was allowed to do that, and no one stopped me."

He said he finally decided to gain his citizenship so that he could fully participate in civic society.

"That felt good," he said.

Byrne's new website, named for the Ian Dury and the Blockheads song "Reasons to Be Cheerful, Part 3," includes successful projects from around the world in areas such as sustainable energy and culture that could be adopted by other communities, he said. Byrne is fresh off a short lecture tour talking about the ideas, and said he was pleased by the questions he took at the end of each appearance.

"People were genuinely engaged. They weren't trying to change the subject and ask about a Talking Heads reunion or something like that," he said. Byrne has repeatedly said there won't be one.

The website and album aren't directly connected, but run parallel and "talk to one another in some ways," Byrne said. He imagined people in a refugee camp when he wrote the song "Gasoline and Dirty Sheets," for example.

The album is "describing things the way they are, or the way I see them. Describing myself, and my own confusions and issues," he said, adding that artists "can offer not just a litany of complaints, but some kind of hope and answers and another way of viewing things."

MUSIC REVIEW

White's new album is even weirder

By Mark Kennedy
The Associated Press

For his third solo album, Jack White, the mad scientist of rock, got out of his comfort zone.

Mind you, his comfort zone would make a lot of musicians go insane.

White recorded in New York and Los Angeles for the first time and sought out musicians he hadn't worked with before — some he hadn't even met.

Then he listened to what happened.

"Boarding House Reach" is the result and it's thrilling stuff, but more than a little disorienting.

White's trademark yowl and fuzzy guitar are firmly in place but then, suddenly, there might be a conga drum solo. Or a synth riff. Or a face-melting distorted chorus.

You quickly get the sense that this is what the inside of Jack White's head sounds like.

The 13-track Frankenstein-like album doesn't always work, but when it does, it's like a jolt of electricity, mixing hip-hop, gospel, blues, country and hard rock. "Forgive me and save me from myself," White warns us in one lyric.

The successes include the funky, hard-rocking tunes "Over and Over and Over" and "Corporation." "Ice Station Zebra" is brilliant, but in bizarre way. Many of the album's best moments are drum-led, extended propulsive riffs, like on "Respect Commander."

White's collaborators include drummer Louis Cato, bassists Charlotte Kemp Muhl and Neon Phoenix, and keyboardists Neal Evans and Quincy McCrary.

They've helped him make the weirdest album of his career.

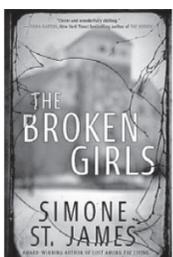

The lyrics are as oddball as the music, going from quoting the baby book "Goodnight Moon" to name-checking Italian luxury carmaker Isotta Fraschini.

BOOK REVIEW

'Broken Girls' is a gripping mystery

By Oline H. Cogdill
The Associated Press

Simone St. James' sixth stand-alone novel mixes a creepy supernatural tale, complete with ghosts and things that go bump in the night, with a gripping mystery.

"The Broken Girls" also works well as a story about unshakeable friendship, parenting issues, obsession and sexism folded into a satisfying plot that straddles two eras of time.

The broken girls are those who end up in Idlewild Hall, the boarding school of last resort, where parents stashed their embarrassments, their failures, and their recalcitrant girls." Four of the girls who are roommates at Idlewild in 1950 — Katie, CeCe, Roberta and Sonia — refuse to be broken by the school's strict rules and the abandonment of their families.

Located in "the backwoods of Vermont," the castlelike fortress is rumored to be haunted by the ghost of Mary Hand, a young woman who once lived there.

In 2014, the now shuttered Idlewild haunts Vermont journalist Fiona Sheridan, whose sister's body was found on the school's grounds 20 years ago. Deb Sheridan's boyfriend was convicted and he is still in prison for her murder. But Fiona is obsessed with the murder and believes the truth didn't come out in court. When a family with no local ties buys Idlewild, Fiona seizes on the chance to do a story on the school — and further investigate her sister's murder.

The story intensifies when the remains of another girl are found buried on the grounds.

"The Broken Girls" smoothly alternates between the two eras.

DIVERSIONS

Household division of labor is source of couple's tension

DEAR ABBY: "Ron" and I have been married 20 years and have two children. Recently, he called me a "freeloader" and described my parenting as "half-assed." It's not the first time I've heard it from him.

JEANNE PHILLIPS

DEAR ABBY

(who don't work), that he does a lot more around the house than the dads he knows and he resents it because he makes so much more money than I do.

How much is fair to expect him to do to help with our kids and home life? How can I get him to see how much hurt his name-calling and disrespect causes? -- NOT A FREELOADER

DEAR NOT A FREELOADER: Every marriage is unique, which is why your husband should not compare himself to other dads and you to their wives. I find it odd that the husband of a working wife -- and mother -- would resort to name-calling and accuse you of freeloading. Of course Ron should participate in his children's lives. That's what being a father is all about. Marriage is supposed to be a partnership. Helping with housework sets a good example for the kids. If the two of you can't work out a compromise without name-calling, you should at least agree to have a licensed marriage counselor mediate the discussion.

DEAR ABBY: I have a relative who has just been released from prison and is living with me and my family. He was incarcerated for more than 20 years for drugs.

It breaks my heart to say that he has relapsed and could be heading back down that same road. My mother doesn't want a drug addict in her house. She told him to make other living arrangements, and he has agreed to stay with other relatives where there are more job opportunities.

I feel guilty and my mother does, too. But she refuses to go through what she experienced during her childhood with this person. Is this the right thing to do? -- RELAPSE IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR RELAPSE: Yes! Your mother has made her feelings clear to this relative. Living with a drug addict is chaotic, and if she doesn't want to repeat the unpleasant and possibly traumatic experience, she shouldn't have to.

By getting him out of the house she is taking care of herself, and for that she shouldn't feel guilty. However, because she does, it might help her -- and you -- to attend some Nar-Anon meetings. The group was founded in 1967 and its mission is to provide emotional support to families and friends of addicts. To locate a meeting nearby, visit nar-anon.org or call toll-free (800) 477-6291.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Contact Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

The bidding:

Opening lead — two of clubs.

Today's hand features excellent play by a defender. It illustrates how foresight can overcome the uncertainties that often accompany defensive play.

West led the deuce of clubs against four spades, and East took the ace as South dropped the nine. It wasn't difficult for East to deduce that West's lead was a singleton — only the four was missing, and West would have led that card rather than the deuce from the doubleton 4-2.

But instead of impulsively returning a club for West to ruff, which would have handed declarer the contract, East paused to consider the bigger picture. The ace of clubs, a club ruff and the trump ace would account for three tricks, but a fourth trick would be needed if the contract was to be defeated.

On the bidding, it was likely that South held exactly five spades. West was therefore a favorite to hold two spades, so the club ruff could be postponed until East regained the lead with the ace of spades.

The setting trick, if there was one, could either be the ace of hearts, ace of diamonds or king of hearts. If West had either red ace, the contract would be set regardless of what East returned at trick two. But if West had the king of hearts, it was essential to return a heart at this point. Otherwise, South would eventually get rid of his hearts on dummy's clubs.

So East shifted to a heart at trick two. Declarer had no choice but to finesse, losing to the king, and West returned a heart to dummy's queen. When the eight of spades was next led, East rose with the ace and returned a club, and West's ruff put the finishing touch on a well-defended hand.

Tomorrow: Test your play.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY FOR THURSDAY, MARCH 29, 2018:

This year you greet change positively and with determination to make the most of a sudden opportunity. Much goes on behind the scenes. Your instincts take you down an interesting path. You will differentiate your feelings from your fears. If you are single, you could meet someone who makes you smile from ear to ear. This person could mosey into your life after the summer. If you are attached, you enter a rather intense period this fall, where you love being together. A natural warmth draws you and your sweetie closer together. VIRGO understands you well.

ARIES (MARCH 21-APRIL 19) You focus intensely on getting the job done. Your dedication and serious attitude make you a star in the work arena. You could be confused about a situation that surrounds a co-worker or your role in that matter.

TAURUS (APRIL 20-MAY 20) You hear news that could have you taking another look at a situation happening around you.

Someone from a distance could be involved. Why you think you are upset might have nothing to do with why you actually are upset.

GEMINI (MAY 21-JUNE 20) If you can, stay close to home. There might be an issue that rears its ugly head and demands your attention. A partner seems to be unwilling to deal with the matter at hand. You might have to handle the situation by yourself.

CANCER (JUNE 21-JULY 22) You will want to step back before making any calls. Follow your sixth sense when it comes to the timing of discussions. You could find that you are not speaking the same language as a partner or loved one. Revise your thinking about this person.

LEO (JULY 23-AUG. 22) You could be busy handling a financial matter. You keep hitting an obstacle as you try to move on an issue that affects your daily life. Your frustration could build and build. Imagine what it would take to get your points across. Give that idea a shot.

VIRGO (AUG. 23-SEPT. 22) You are on top of your game, but a loved one could be hindering your progress. Any attempt to move this person will need to be done with hard, concrete facts. A loved one whom you have put on a pedestal appears once more.

JACQUELINE BIGAR

LIBRA (SEPT. 23-OCT. 22) Your playful mood delights many people, except for a key individual in your personal life. This person has been cold, withdrawn and overly serious as of late. You might not be able to get the approval you want from him or her. Avoid a power play at all costs!

SCORPIO (OCT. 23-NOV. 21) You feel more upbeat than you have in many years. However, trying to communicate those feelings might be difficult. Be more aware of what others want, and try to address their needs more completely. Do that, and you'll sail to success.

SAGITTARIUS (NOV. 22-DEC. 21) Your finances could play a significant role in your decision-making process. You might be eyeing a purchase for your home. Be as direct as possible when getting quotes and estimates. This expenditure could considerably increase your investment.

CAPRICORN (DEC. 22-JAN. 19) If you pull back and see the big picture, you might make a decision. Sometimes you are too focused on your goals and not as grounded in reality as you should be. Don't let yourself obsess over a desire that might not ever materialize.

AQUARIUS (JAN. 20-FEB. 18) A low-level depression might be stopping you from putting your best foot forward. If you never make the effort, you won't know what could have been possible. One-on-one relating is highlighted. Coming to an understanding about money will be critical.

PISCES (FEB. 19-MARCH 20) You feel drawn to a situation that you would like to know more about. You might want to back out of plans, especially if they revolve around a very controlling individual. You could be sorry that you have ignored a key person in your life.

Yesterday's Cryptoquote: IT'S NOT AN EASY JOURNEY, TO GET TO A PLACE WHERE YOU FORGIVE PEOPLE. BUT IT IS SUCH A POWERFUL PLACE, BECAUSE IT FREES YOU. — TYLER PERRY

» TODAY IN HISTORY

TODAY IS THURSDAY, MARCH 29, the 88th day of 2018. There are 277 days left in the year.

TODAY'S HIGHLIGHT IN HISTORY:
 On March 29, 1943, World War II rationing of meat, fats and cheese began, limiting consumers to store purchases of an average of about two pounds a week for beef, pork, lamb and mutton using a coupon system. (The Associated Press noted, "From the customer viewpoint, the unrationed oasis of food will be the restaurant or other public eating place.")

ON THIS DATE:
 In 1962, Jack Paar hosted NBC's "Tonight" show for the final time. (Johnny Carson debuted as host the following October.)

In 1971, a jury in Los Angeles recommended the death penalty for Charles Manson and three female followers for the 1969 Tate-La Bianca murders. (The sentences were later commuted.)

In 1973, the last United States combat troops left South Vietnam, ending America's direct military involvement in the Vietnam War.

In 1984, under cover of early morning darkness, the Baltimore Colts football team left its home city of three decades and moved to Indianapolis.

In 1992, Democratic presidential front-runner Bill Clinton acknowledged experimenting with marijuana "a time or two" while attending Oxford University, adding, "I didn't inhale and I didn't try it again."

REVIEW

you choose an avatar and are able to go anywhere, do anything. Within the Oasis, there are no laws of physics or gravity or morality.

The brainchild of the brilliant and eccentric game designer James Halliday (Mark Rylance), who died a few years earlier, the Oasis has now become the setting of a contest, one in which players vie to compete against each other in solving puzzles and finding clues. The winner will gain control of the Oasis, which is the largest company in the world.

Wade, who considers himself a loser, but knows he's a sharp player, wants to win to prove that he's better than the cards life has dealt him. Within that virtual world, where he's known by the gamertag Parzival, he meets Art3mis (Olivia Cooke), whose real name is Samantha, and who is playing for purposes of revenge. The elegantly dressed adult who's playing is Nolan Sorrento (Ben Mendelsohn), the sneering villain of the piece, who's a honcho at Innovative Online Industries (IOI) — the second largest company in the world. He wants to win the game out of pure greed, and doesn't bother with a gamertag.

The terrifically structured script offers multiple levels of storytelling, and keeps to the spirit of the novel, but continually veers off into different directions, so purists might complain, as they always will about adaptations. But everything sure works as a movie. Big, crash-filled road races through New York City lead to pop culture references ranging from King Kong to "Saturday Night Fever" to the DeLorean from "Back to the Future." There are insightful back stories for Halliday and his former business partner Ogden Morrow (Simon Pegg), as well as for Samantha and Sorrento.

Those stories are in the film's real-world segments. But about half of it is spent in the Oasis, where Parzival has a massive cyber crush on Art3mis, and Sorrento's henchman I-Rok (T.J. Miller) gets the funniest lines of dialogue.

This is an enormous technology-fantasy film. Others like it, from "Tron" to "Speed Racer," have failed to catch enough viewers' fancies. But Spielberg is such a kid at heart, it's a perfect movie for him and from him. Big hit.
