Prosecutor says journalist killed on entering consulate

By Mehmet Guzel and Suzan Fraser
The Associated Press

ISTANBUL — Saudi journalist Jamal Khashoggi was strangled as soon as he entered the Saudi Consulate in Istanbul as part of a premeditated killing, and his body was dismembered before it was removed, a top Turkish prosecutor said Wednesday.

Chief Istanbul prosecutor Irfan Fidan's office also said in a statement that discussions with Saudi chief prosecutor Saud al-Mojeb over the killing yielded "no concrete result" despite Turkey's "good-intentioned efforts to reveal the truth."

The statement was the first public confirmation by a Turkish official that Khashoggi was strangled and mutilated after he entered the Saudi Consulate on Oct. 2. It also pointed to a lack of cooperation from Saudi officials in the investigation of the slaying.

"In accordance with plans made in advance, the victim, Jamal Khashoggi, was strangled and killed immediately after entering the Consulate General of Saudi Arabia," the prosecutor's office said.

"The victim Jamal

Khashoggi's body was dismembered and destroyed following his death by suffocation, again in line with the advance plans," the two-page statement read.

Trump, Dems kick off final campaign blitz

By Ken Thomas
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump launched an eight-state campaign blitz on Wednesday, seeking to shore up Senate Republicans and GOP gubernatorial candidates against an onslaught of Democratic surrogates, including entertainment icon Oprah Winfrey.

Trump will crisscross the nation, landing him in Senate battlefields such as Indiana, Missouri and Florida along with nail-biter contests for governor in Georgia and Ohio.

Winfrey, who offered crucial support to President Barack Obama during his 2008 rise, will campaign Thursday for Georgia Democratic gubernatorial candidate Stacey Abrams, who is attempting to become the

Synagogue suspect indicted on 2nd day of funerals

By Maryclaire Dale
The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The suspect in the Pittsburgh synagogue massacre was indicted by a federal grand jury Wednesday, and members of a grief-stricken Jewish community endured another round of funerals for victims of the worst anti-Semitic attack in American history.

Robert Bowers, a 46-year-old truck driver who authorities say raged against Jews as he gunned down 11 and wounded six, was charged in a 44-count indictment with murder, hate crimes and other offenses that could bring the death penalty. The indictment, which was expected, was announced on the second day of a weeklong series of funerals for congregants who perished in the mass shooting at Tree of Life synagogue.

Trump rebukes Ryan over birthright citizenship

By John Wagner and Felicia Sonmez
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump lashed out Wednesday at House Speaker Paul Ryan, R-Wis., over Ryan's comments on birthright citizenship, saying he "should be focusing on holding the Majority."

The extraordinary rebuke from Trump came one day after Ryan pushed back on the president's remarks on the issue, saying "you cannot end birthright citizenship with an executive order."

"Paul Ryan should be focusing on holding the Majority rather than giving his opinions on Birthright Citizenship, something he knows nothing about!" Trump tweeted Wednesday afternoon. "Our new Republican Majority will work on this, Closing the Immigration Loopholes and Securing our Border!"

Earlier Wednesday, Trump vowed to push forward with his call to end birthright citizenship, despite a backlash from legal scholars and some prominent members of his own party against his pledge a day earlier to take executive action on the matter.

In morning tweets, Trump said he would end the 150-year-old practice "one way or the other," seeming to leave the door open to either congressional action or a constitutional amendment, which many legal scholars say would be necessary to achieve his aims.

Trump also said the issue would ultimately be decided by the Supreme Court.

Trump is seeking to end the long-standing right to U.S. citizenship for children born to noncitizens in the United States, a policy that he said in his tweets "costs our Country billions of dollars and is very unfair to our citizens."

On Tuesday, leading Democrats and immigrants rights activists blasted Trump's pledge to issue an executive order, and Ryan dismissed the idea during a radio interview, saying it is not consistent with the 14th Amendment of the Constitution.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, meanwhile, said the issue is one on which Congress, rather than the president, should take the lead.

Online rants create dilemma for police

By Lisa Marie Pane
The Associated Press

BOISE, Idaho — Their anger is all over social media for the whole world to see, with rants about minorities, relationships gone bad or paranoid delusions about perceived slights.

The perpetrators of mass shootings often provide a treasure trove of insight into their violent tendencies, but the information is not always seen by law enforcement until after the violence is carried out. Rants and hate speech rarely factor into whether someone passes a background check to buy guns.

The massacre at a Pittsburgh synagogue, the pipe bombing attempts from last week and the Florida high school shooting this year have underscored the dilemma of law enforcement around the country in assessing the risk of people making online rants at a time when social media has become so ubiquitous.

Robert Bowers, the man accused of opening fire at a synagogue in Pittsburgh, expressed virulently anti-Semitic views on a social media site called Gab, according to an Associated Press review. The cover photo for his account featured a neo-Nazi symbol. Other posts referenced false conspiracy theories suggesting the Holocaust was a hoax.

It was only just before the shooting that the poster believed to be Bowers seemed to cross the line, posting: "I can't sit by and watch my people get slaughtered. Screw your optics, I'm going in."

Keeping tabs on social media posts has been used

As more mainstream sites have cracked down on hate speech and threats of violence, critics say Gab has become a breeding ground for white nationalists, neo-Nazis and other extremists. The social media site was used by the Pittsburgh synagogue shooting suspect. [AP PHOTO] for years by law enforcement to try to identify potential threats. The task is enormous and it's an inexact science. The volume of posts is significant and the question arises: Is something a true threat or free speech?

They are mindful of the fact that the First Amendment protects Americans' right to express even speech that many in society find abhorrent — and have to make often-subjective decisions about what crosses the line.

Among more than 550 police departments across the country surveyed several years ago by the International Association of Chiefs of Police, about three-quarters said they regularly searched social media for potential threats.

Lt. Chris Cook, spokesman for the Arlington, Texas, Police Department, said the searches are often done manually, using keywords to try to identify troubling posts.

"It's very time consuming, it's very staff and resource intensive and you have humans involved in the process so there is the potential that law enforcement can miss something," Cook said.

In one case where vigilance paid off, authorities say a black woman received troubling racist, harassing messages on Facebook from a man she didn't know, prompting her to call police. The tip from the New Jersey woman led Kentucky police to a home where they found Dylan Jarrell with a firearm, more than 200 rounds of ammunition, a bulletproof vest, a 100-round high-capacity magazine and a "detailed plan of attack." He was arrested just as he was leaving his driveway.

Bowers is not alone among alleged mass shooters in making racist or bigoted comments online.

Dylann Roof, convicted of the 2015 slaying of nine black churchgoers in South Carolina, had posted a 2,000-word racist rant and posed in photos with firearms and the Confederate flag. Nikolas Cruz, the teenager charged in the slaying of 17 students and adults at a high school in Parkland, hurled online slurs against blacks and Muslims, and went so far as to state he wanted to be a "professional school shooter."

The rants did not affect their ability to buy guns. When purchasing a firearm, criminal background checks only look for any records showing a criminal past or mental health problems that led to an involuntary commitment.

DOJ: Bomb suspect searched targets online

By Curt Anderson
The Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE — Pipe bomb suspect Cesar Sayoc searched for addresses of his targets online and had photos of many of them on his cellphone, federal prosecutors said in a letter outlining more evidence against him.

The letter sent by Justice Department prosecutors in New York to a Miami federal judge also says Sayoc began plotting the "domestic terror attack" in July while living in his van. T he old white vehicle was plastered with photos praising Donald Trump and targeting his critics, depicting some of Sayoc's alleged opponents with red cross-hairs on their faces.

The 56-year-old Sayoc faces five federal charges in Manhattan carrying a combined maximum sentence of 48 years behind bars, prosecutors said.

Prosecutors said in the letter to U.S. Magistrate Judge Edwin Torres that Sayoc should remain jailed without bail. A detention hearing is set for Friday in Miami. Additional charges are likely, they said.

Sayoc's cellphone contains photos of some of his alleged intended victims, including the driver's license belonging to Michelle Obama.

The laptop computer found in the van also has a file with the address of the office of U.S. Rep. Debbie Wasserman Schultz that was used as the return address on the packages containing the pipe bombs, according to the FBI. The computer file was labeled "Debbie W.docx".

In addition, prosecutors

said the FBI so far has found DNA evidence linked to Sayoc from 10 of the improvised explosive devices and fingerprints on two of the mailing envelopes.

LEESBURG Chamber hosts Brown-Sabatini debate today

The Leesburg Area Chamber of Commerce will host a debate today between candidates for Florida House District 32 Cynthia Brown and Anthony Sabatini.

The debate will be a question and answer format touching on education, taxes, gun control and other subjects. Moderated by Leesburg Daily Commercial Editor Tom McNiff, the debate will be from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. at the Rogers Park Pavilion in Venetian Gardens on Dixie Avenue in Leesburg. The event is free and open to the public.

Brown, a Democrat making her first bid for public office, has laid out a platform that includes achieving affordable health care, increasing the minimum wage, cutting taxes, strengthening public schools and protecting the environment.

Sabatini, who served two years on the Eustis City Commission, has prioritized protecting gun ownership rights, cutting "burdensome" taxes, furthering accountability and transparency and "fighting for American values by being pro-life and protecting religious liberty and free speech."

MASCOTTE Sheriff's Office busts up drug operation, arrests 5

Lake County Sheriff's investigators raided a Mascotte home late last week and broke up what appears to be a significant drug operation.

According to sheriff's officials, members of the Lake County Sheriff's Office Special Investigation Unit and SWAT served a search warrant located at 119 Putnam St. Detectives searched the residence and the vehicles there and discovered about a quarter kilo of cocaine, several pounds of marijuana, over 100 Xanax pills and a large quantity of drug paraphernalia. Detectives also located prepackaged cocaine for sale and seized approximately $4,500.

- Amando Mendoza, 32, was charged with trafficking cocaine, possession of a schedule 2 narcotic without a prescription, possession of ammunition by a convicted felon, possession of drug paraphernalia, and possession of marijuana more than 20 grams with intent to distribute.

- Derek Hart, 25, was charged with possession of methamphetamine.

- Nicodemus Quintas, 74, was charged with possession of cocaine.

- Tony Nunez, 36, was charged with trafficking in cocaine.

- Raul Deleon III, 28, was charged with possession of cocaine.

CLERMONT Motorcyclist killed in Tuesday crash

Clermont police Tuesday investigated a fatal, single-motorcycle crash in the 500 block of Pitt Street. Police and fire rescue were dispatched to the scene at 8 a.m. The bike had run off the road and struck a concrete structure.

Zachary Austin Taylor, of Clermont, was taken to South Lake Hospital where he died.

LEESBURG Ministry for singles opens Friday

A new ministry, called Leesburg Christian Singles, gets underway Friday. It will have separate functions for seniors and for singles ages 25 to 50.

Depending upon the activity, the groups will meet in various places. Because it is a ministry of First Baptist Church of Leesburg, sometimes events will be held at the church. There will be concerts, potluck dinners and movie nights. Sometimes the groups will meet at restaurants.

On Friday, there will be an "Old Fashioned Hymn Sing" from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. at the south campus of First Baptist, at 25900 S. U.S. Highway 27.

On Nov. 13, seniors can bowl at ViaPort Entertainment at Lake Square Mall.

On Thanksgiving Day, there will be a meal for anyone who is alone on that day. To register, email karengardiner@fbcleesburg.org.

Acupuncturist charged with assault

Police say Clermont practitioner violated girl during procedure

By Frank Stanfield

Johnson

CLERMONT — Clermont police on Wednesday charged an acupuncturist with sexually assaulting a teenage girl during a treatment.

Matthew Johnson, 49, who rented space One Yoga and Fitness at 1214 Bowman Street in Clermont, was arrested after a 16-year-old girl said he

The victim has been a patient of Johnson's for a "few weeks," but this was the first time he had violated her, she said. Police said he violated her with both his hand and his mouth.

Johnson was arrested at his home in Groveland and charged with sexual battery. He was turned over to the Lake County Jail. The investigation is ongoing, investigators say.

"I'm devastated by this and very disappointed," said One Yoga owner Gina Keefe.

She said she rented space to Johnson. "That's all I know."

Johnson has an acupuncturist license through the state and there is no disciplinary action on his record.

The Clermont Police encourages anyone to come forward and file a police report if they feel they have been a victim of a crime.

If anyone has any additional information concerning this case, they should reach out to Detective Melissa France at 352-536-8421.

MOUNT DORA — Waterman Village, a retirement community in Mount Dora, announced this week that it is expanding by 162 new residences.

The $100 million expansion project, dubbed Lakeside at Waterman Village, on 37 acres surrounding Lake Margaret, across from the existing Waterman Village community on North Donnelly Street.

It will consist of 138 independent living units and 24 memory support units ranging in size from 850 square feet to 1,500 square feet.

The residences will be spread among several buildings and will include condo-style homes and single-story villas. The new homes at Lakeside at Waterman Village will start at 850 square feet. A new clubhouse will serve as the expansion's hub, featuring new dining venues and fitness areas.

The expansion will add to the existing 259 independent living units, 77 assisted living units and 120 licensed skilled nursing beds at Waterman Village.

"We are excited to build Lakeside at Waterman Village to meet the growing demand and need for active retirement living in Mount Dora," said Andrew Dujon, Waterman Village's CEO and President. "This project will be the keystone leading us into our fourth decade of operation, and will provide a vibrant and contemporary lifestyle for today's and tomorrow's active retirees."

To aid in the project, the city has agreed to a tax abatement that will save the company roughly $304,000 over five years.

New area code coming to parts of Lake

By C. A. Bridges
Gatehouse Media

Starting in June, someone calling a number in Lake County might have to begin with 689.

The Florida Public Service Commission announced on their website Tuesday morning that the new area code, unanimously approved in July, will go into use on June 4, 2019, in areas currently covered by 407 and 321.

The commission said it plans to spend the next seven months preparing its networks and educating customers.

Why the change? They're running out of numbers.

Unique 407 numbers are currently expected to run out by the third quarter of 2019, according to the North American Numbering Administrator. The new area code would add 792 usable prefixes — containing 10,000 numbers each — to the Central Florida region.

The 407 numbers lasted longer than expected. When the new area code was proposed back in 2001, the 407/321 "numbering plan area" was expected to run out in 8.77 years. The commission was able to conserve numbers and delay the change for almost twice that long but in July the commission's Public Utilities Supervisor Greg Fogleman said there has been an uptick in large companies entering the market and acquiring numbers.

"This is a process that is used nationwide to determine when a new area code is implemented," Fogleman said then. "We're running out in this area code. We've done everything we can. And now is the time to do this and have a smooth transition."

The 407 area code serves Orange, Osceola, Seminole, and parts of Lake and Volusia counties in Central Florida. Calls within this area will continue to require 10-digit dialing despite the new area code.

Leesburg Commission candidates differ on city spending

By Frank Stanfield
frankstanfield@dailycommercial.com

LEESBURG — The two candidates facing off against each other in Tuesday's City Commission election agree that the biggest issue is growth and finding ways to keep costs down. But after that, Dan Robuck III and Don Lukich find plenty of room for disagreement.

"Leesburg has had a lot of growth and we need to manage it responsibly," Dan Robuck, 34, told the Daily Commercial this week.

"We also need to invest in opportunities and be fiscally responsible," the mayor said.

The way to do that, he said, is to keep taxes low and continue to reduce electric rates.

Lukich said the reason he

"Susan Street is one of the most blighted areas in the city. People are not going to go there. I wouldn't send a child there...."

Robuck was also in favor of renovating the old community building, but when the rest of the commissioners decided to build a new facility, he joined the consensus.

"Hypocrite," Lukich charges.

Robuck is the chief financial officer of his family's business, Ro-Mac Lumber and Supply.

"This is my first term, and if elected to a new term, it will be my last. We have term limits," Robuck said.

Robuck is married. He graduated with a finance degree from Florida State University and has a master's degree in business from Vanderbilt University.

Lukich, who is also married, has been on the city's Planning and Zoning Board for 15 years and has been showing up to ask pointed questions at City Commission meetings for the same period of time.

Lukich was general manager of Key Scales Ford for 29 years. He earned a business degree from Detroit Business University.

Commissioner Bob Bone is stepping down from his post when his term expires in January. Mike Pederson, a commercial real estate agent who is running unopposed, will take his spot.

Commissioner John Christian also was unopposed.

The election is Tuesday.

Dolores Ann Galicke Stephany (Doe) 3/12/34-10/6/18 of Mt. Dora. Wife of Edward G. Stephany, Jr. Daughter of Thadeusz and Helen Galicke. Mother of Edward G. Stephany III (Ted, RIP), Pamela, and Kurt (wife, Elizabeth Groaton Stephany). Grandmother to Jenna and Danny. Doe was an only child born in New York City, but she was surrounded in the neighborhood by her loving cousins with whom she maintained close relations her entire life. Doe was active in politics as a committee woman in the 1960s. In the 1970s, her real love was her favorite charity Junior Welfare Society, where she eventually became President and had such a positive impact in the Fort Lauderdale area. She loved her church, 1st Presbyterian, where she attended bible studies. Her 3 closest friends came from bible class, grew their deep friendship to a regular bridge game, and wine was served. They became known as the BBBs (Bible, Bridge, and Booze). In the 1980s after her 3 kids were college educated, it was her turn. She graduated FAU in 1984 with a degree in accounting. She pursued a career in retail banking where she excelled and earned commendations for her work. In the 1990s Doe and Ed retired to Mount Dora, FL where she continued her involvement with the 1st Presbyterian Church, and vigorously and artfully pursued her sewing hobby – quilting with the Lake County Quilters Guild. Her skill with design and stitching allowed for awards and recognition. Doe's ready smile, zany sense of humor, love for all mankind especially finding the good in every person; will be missed by all. Whenever you heard her name in conversation, it was because she was doing something for someone else. Giving, laughing, loving her family, neighbors and friends were her finest attributes. Doe moved through life with such beauty, charm, grace, humor, intelligence, and humility; the angels wanted her for themselves. You may honor the sweet memory of Doe with a gift to the 1st Presbyterian Church of Mt. Dora, 222 W. 6th Ave, Mt. Dora, FL 32757. Memorial services will be at a later date.

Appendix removal linked to lower Parkinson's risk

By Lauren Neergaard
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Scientists have found a new clue that Parkinson's disease may get its start not in the brain but in the gut — maybe in the appendix.

People who had their appendix removed early in life had a lower risk of getting the tremor-inducing brain disease decades later, researchers reported Wednesday.

Why? A peek at surgically removed appendix tissue shows this tiny organ, often considered useless, seems to be a storage depot for an abnormal protein — one that, if it somehow makes its way into the brain, becomes a hallmark of Parkinson's.

The big surprise, according to studies published in the journal Science Translational Medicine: Lots of people may harbor clumps of that worrisome protein in their appendix — young and old, people with healthy brains and those with Parkinson's.

But don't look for a surgeon just yet.

"We're not saying to go out and get an appendectomy," stressed Viviane Labrie of Michigan's Van Andel Research Institute, a neuroscientist and geneticist who led the research team.

After all, there are plenty of people who have no appendix yet still develop Parkinson's. And plenty of others harbor the culprit protein but never get sick, according to her research.

The gut connection

Doctors and patients have long known there's some connection between the gastrointestinal tract and Parkinson's. Constipation and other GI troubles are very common years before patients experience tremors and movement difficulty that lead to a Parkinson's diagnosis.

Wednesday's research promises to re-energize work to find out why, and learn who's really at risk.

"This is a great piece of the puzzle. It's a fundamental clue," said Dr. Allison Willis, a Parkinson's specialist at the University of Pennsylvania who wasn't involved in the new studies but says her patients regularly ask about the gut link.

Parkinson's Foundation chief scientific officer James Beck, who also wasn't involved, agreed that "there's a lot of tantalizing potential connections."

He noted that despite its reputation, the appendix appears to play a role in immunity that may influence gut inflammation. The type of bacteria that live in the gut also may affect Parkinson's.

But if it really is common to harbor that Parkinson's-linked protein, "what we don't know is what starts it, what gets this whole ball rolling," Beck said.

For years, scientists have hypothesized about what might cause the gut-Parkinson's connection. One main theory: Maybe bad "alpha-synuclein" protein can travel from nerve fibers in the GI tract up the vagus nerve, which connects the body's major organs to the brain. Abnormal alpha-synuclein is toxic to brain cells involved with movement.

There have been prior clues. People who decades ago had the vagus nerve cut as part of a now-abandoned therapy had a reduced risk of Parkinson's. Some smaller studies have suggested appendectomies, too, might be protective — but the results were conflicting.

Official: Mafia hit man suspected in Whitey Bulger's slaying

By Alanna Durkin Richer and Denise Lavoie
The Associated Press

BOSTON — A Mafia hit man who is said to hate "rats" is under suspicion in the slaying of former Boston crime boss and longtime FBI informant James "Whitey" Bulger, who was found dead hours after he was transferred to a West Virginia prison, an ex-investigator briefed on the case said Wednesday.

The former official said that Fotios "Freddy" Geas and at least one other inmate are believed to have been involved in Bulger's killing. The long-time investigator was not authorized to discuss the matter and spoke on condition of anonymity.

Authorities have not disclosed the cause of death.

Among the many unanswered questions after Bulger was found dead on Tuesday: Why was he moved to the prison? And why was a frail 89-year-old like Bulger — a known "snitch" — placed in the general population instead of more protective housing?

Geas, 51, and his brother were sentenced to life in prison in 2011 for their roles in several violent crimes, including the 2003 killing of Adolfo "Big Al" Bruno, a Genovese crime family boss who was gunned down in a Springfield, Massachusetts, parking lot.

Private investigator Ted

Fotios "Freddy" Geas appears for a court proceeding in his defense in the Al Bruno murder case in 2009 in Springfield, Mass. Geas and at least one other inmate are being investigated as suspects in the slaying of former Boston crime boss James "Whitey" Bulger, according to a former investigator briefed on the matter. [DON TREGGER / THE REPUBLICAN VIA AP]

McDonough, who knew Geas, told The Boston Globe: "Freddy hated rats."

"Freddy hated guys who abused women. Whitey was a rat who killed women. It's probably that simple," McDonough told the newspaper, which first reported that Geas was under suspicion.

It was not clear whether Geas has an attorney. Several other lawyers who represented him over the years didn't immediately respond to a request for comment.

An FBI spokeswoman in Pittsburgh declined to comment on Geas. Federal officials said only that they are investigating the death as a homicide.

"What I don't understand is why the Federal Bureau of Prisons would transfer a super high-publicity inmate, who is a known snitch, to general population of a high-security prison," said Cameron Lindsay, a former federal prison warden who now works as a jail security consultant. "You've got to be smarter than that."

He added: "If I was the warden of Hazelton, I would have never, ever allowed him to be put within my general population. It is just too risky."

Bulger's death was the third killing in the past six months at the prison, where union officials have raised concerns about dozens of vacant jobs. Two inmates were killed in fights with other prisoners in September and April.

Five members of Congress wrote to Attorney General Sessions last week about what they saw as chronic understaffing at USP Hazelton and other federal prisons.

Bulger led South Boston's Irish mob for decades and became an FBI informant who supplied information on the New England Mafia, his gang's main rival, in an era when bringing down the Italian mob was a top national priority for the bureau.

Tipped off that he was about to be indicted, Bulger became a fugitive and eluded authorities for 16 years before being captured in 2011. He was convicted in 2013 in 11 underworld slayings and a long list of other crimes and was sentenced to spend the rest of his life behind bars.

He had just arrived Monday at USP Hazelton, a high-security prison in Bruceton Mills, West Virginia. He had previously been in a prison in Florida, with a stopover at a transfer facility in Oklahoma City. Federal Bureau of Prisons officials and his attorney declined to comment on why he was being moved.

second year, 30 percent the third year, 20 percent the fourth year and 10 percent the fifth year.

Mount Dora spokeswoman Lisa McDonald said the Economic Development Tax Abatement

Program was authorized by the Florida Legislature in 2010 as a tool to incentivize the creation of high-wage jobs in Florida. It was adopted via city ordinance on January 3, 2012 after it was approved by voters during the 2010 election.

The expansion is expected to create 59 permanent jobs and more than 400 temporary jobs.

So far, Mount Dora has processed only two tax abatement requests since the program's inception — one from Lakeside at Waterman Village and the other from Steamroller Studios LLC, a game development and animation company that moved into town last month.

"This program has had numerous success stories around the state since it was enacted," McDonald said.

Waterman Village officials said they plan to ask for another tax abatement from the county in the near future.

Lakeside at Waterman Village will feature green initiatives to minimize environmental impact to Lake Margaret and the surrounding areas.

with a report by pro-government newspaper Yeni Safak earlier this month, which cited what it described as an audio recording of Khashoggi being tortured before being killed. The newspaper claimed that his fingers were cut off and that he was killed by being beheaded.

Turkey is seeking the extradition of 18 suspects in the journalist's slaying who were detained in Saudi Arabia. It also is pressing Saudi Arabia for information about who ordered Khashoggi's killing and the location of his remains.

Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan has called on Riyadh to disclose the identity of an alleged local collaborator said to have been involved in getting rid of Khashoggi's body.

Saudi chief prosecutor al-Mojeb met with Fidan twice and also visited the Turkish intelligence agency's Istanbul headquarters this week before leaving for Riyadh on a private jet Wednesday.

Saudi Arabia has not commented directly on the prosecutor's visit and al-Mojeb did not respond to journalists' questions at the airport as he departed. Fidan's office said the Saudi delegation submitted a written statement and invited the Turkish delegation to come to Saudi Arabia bringing "evidence obtained during the course of the investigation."

The Saudi representatives said the whereabouts of Khashoggi's remains and whether the killing was premeditated or not would only come to light through a joint interrogation by Turkish and Saudi investigators, according to the statement.

The statement said Turkey renewed its request for the 18 suspects to be extradited. It did not say if Turkish officials would travel to Saudi Arabia.

On Wednesday, a lawmaker and spokesman for Turkey's ruling party again called on Saudi Arabia to reveal where Khashoggi's body is, who gave the orders for the killing and who the alleged Turkish collaborator is.

"Instead of trying to find out what (evidence) Turkey has, Saudi authorities should give the answers to these questions," Omer Celik told reporters. "This is not an incident that could have taken place without a high-level order."

Celik added: "We are not blaming anyone in advance but we will not allow anything to be covered up."

Khashoggi, a 59-year-old columnist for The Washington Post, vanished after entering the consulate in Istanbul to pick up paperwork he needed for his upcoming marriage. His Turkish fiancée was waiting for him outside. A critic of the Saudi crown prince, Khashoggi had been living in exile in the United States.

Turkey alleges a hit squad from Saudi Arabia — including a member of Saudi Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman's entourage during a trip to the United States — went to Istanbul to kill the journalist and then tried to cover it up.

Under mounting pressure, Saudi Arabia changed its narrative about Khashoggi's killing several times, eventually admitting Khashoggi died inside the consulate. Saudi Arabia only recently acknowledged Turkish evidence showed the slaying was premeditated.

Hurriyet newspaper columnist Abdulkadir Selvi,

Saudi Arabia's top prosecutor, Saud al-Mojeb, leaves his country's consulate in Istanbul. who is known to be close to the Turkish government, said the Saudi prosecutor revealed nothing new to Turkish investigators during his three-day visit and left with several questions unanswered.

"Rather than share the information he has, the Saudi prosecutor tried to learn what information and evidence Turkey has in its hands," Selvi wrote Wednesday.

He added: "The chief prosecutor is not trying to shed light on the murder, he is trying to save the crown prince."

Scott Brady said in a statement. "Our office will spare no resource, and will work with professionalism, integrity and diligence, in a way that honors the memories of the victims."

One after another, services were held for three more victims of the rampage: Joyce Fienberg, 75; Melvin Wax, who was in his late 80s; and Irving Younger, 69.

"It can't be fixed," Robert Libman said at his sister's funeral, clutching his chest as he described the pain of losing her. "My sister is dead. My sister was murdered. There was no one I know like her. Pure goodness. ... She was the most tolerant and gentle person that I've ever known."

Fienberg's sons, Anthony, of Paris, and Howard, of Vienna, Virginia, said she spent five years caring for their father as he battled cancer, then, after his death a few years ago, devoted more of her time and energy to Tree of Life. She was a retired researcher at the University of Pittsburgh.

"My mom would be very angry that her funeral wasn't able to be at Tree of Life, and that her friends lost Saturday couldn't be here," Howard Fienberg said.

Younger had a small realty office in Squirrel Hill, the heart of Pittsburgh's Jewish community, and coached baseball for more than 20 years. He loved to talk, and would gladly share his life story or stop strangers on the street to show them pictures of his grandson in California. One friend called him "a kibbitzing, people-loving man."

Widowed a decade ago, Younger had a son and daughter in California, who waited all day Saturday to learn if he had survived. "That waiting stage was just unbearable," said his son, Jared, of Los Angeles. "Saturday was the most lonely day of my life."

Jared Younger said that when his sister contacted him, he had a feeling it was about his father. Irving Younger hadn't been in great health, undergoing bypass surgery last year. Jared Younger said his dad drank Diet Coke for 40 years, quipping he was "anti-water."

The day's other funeral was held for Wax, a retired accountant who was regarded as a core member of the congregation at New Light, which rented space in the lower level of Tree of Life.

A drained-looking Tree of Life Rabbi Jeffrey Myers, a survivor of the weekend shooting, hurried from service to service. "I can't imagine the stress he's under," said his predecessor, Rabbi Charles "Chuck" Diamond.

As Younger's service was wrapping up, Myers momentarily forgot to read a letter to her family that another rabbi had sent.

"After preparing for five funerals, you get a little verklempt," Myers said.

Bowers remained jailed without bail ahead of an arraignment scheduled for Thursday.

Re-Elect Doug Bryant Lake County Water Authority

Growth in Lake County is putting enormous pressure on our natural resources that we rely on today and count on for tomorrow. Our quality of life, and our economic well-being, go hand in hand.

Lake County Water Authority was created by the Florida Legislature to conserve and improve freshwater resources, to improve fish and aquatic wildlife and to assist local governments in treating storm water runoff.

Our water is the lifeblood of Lake County. Our families, our neighbors, our visitors-- We all depend on fresh, clean water. TOGETHER, we can keep our lakes and streams healthy.

Lion Air crash search finds debris, belongings on seafloor

By Niniek Karmini and Stephen Wright
The Associated Press

JAKARTA, Indonesia — The search for the crashed Lion Air plane has found aircraft debris and passenger belongings on the seafloor but the object thought to be the fuselage is still eluding it, an Indonesian official said Wednesday, as chilling video of passengers boarding the fatal flight emerged.

Search and Rescue Agency chief Muhammad Syaugi said the seafloor findings give the search team confidence they will find the body of the aircraft. The location of the airplane's "black box" flight data recorder has been identified, he said, but strong currents prevented it from being recovered.

"We saw belongings such as life jackets, pants, clothes scattered on the seabed," Syaugi said. "We believe the fuselage will be around there, we hope that our target can be found."

The 2-month-old Boeing 737 MAX 8 jet plunged into the Java Sea early Monday just minutes after taking off from Jakarta, killing all 189 people on board.

The disaster has reignited concerns about safety in Indonesia's fast-growing aviation industry, which was recently removed from European Union and U.S. blacklists, and also raised doubts about the safety of Boeing's new generation 737 MAX 8 plane.

Syaugi said one of the ships with high-tech equipment being used in the search dispatched a remote-operated vehicle that recorded parts of the aircraft on the seafloor but not the 72-foot-long object detected at a depth of 105 feet that is believed to be the fuselage. He said the area is about 1,300 feet from the coordinates where the airplane lost contact.

Three other objects in separate locations were reached by divers but turned out to be two sunken boats and a fish trap. A remote-operated vehicle was sent to the black box location "but the currents on the seabed were very strong, the ROV was carried away," Syaugi said.

Searchers have sent 57 body bags containing human remains to police identification experts who on Wednesday said they'd identified their first victim, a 24-year-old woman, from a ring and a right hand.

Anguished family members have been providing samples for DNA tests and police say results are expected within 4-8 days. Musyafak, the head of Said Sukanto Police Hospital, said nearly 150 samples for DNA testing have been collected but more are still needed, especially from parents and children of victims.

Boeing Co. experts were traveling to Indonesia and Lion Air has said an "intense" internal investigation is underway in addition to the probe by safety regulators.

Data from flight-tracking sites show the plane had erratic speed and altitude in the early minutes of a flight on Sunday and on its fatal flight Monday. Safety experts caution, however, that the data must be checked for accuracy against the plane's black boxes.

Air jets visible on the tarmac.

At one point, the passenger who shot the video, Paul Ferdinand Ayorbaba, zoomed in on the flight number on his boarding pass. A part of the video shows passengers walking up the boarding stairs to a Lion jet.

"My husband sent that video to me via WhatsApp. It was his last contact with me, his last message to me," said Inchy Ayorbaba, interviewed at the Jakarta police hospital where she had taken their three children for DNA tests.

The messaging app's timestamp showed the video was sent about 35 minutes before the plane took off, said Ayorbaba, who first saw the message at 6:30 a.m., some 10 minutes after the plane departed, and then went back to sleep.

Lion Air's technical director was removed from duty Wednesday at the order of the Transport Ministry. It also has ordered all Boeing 737 MAX 8 planes operated by Lion Air and national carrier Garuda to be inspected. Lion has ordered 50 of the jets, worth an estimated $6.2 billion, and currently operates nine.

nation's first black female governor.

Obama plans to campaign Friday for Abrams in Atlanta and in Miami to boost Florida Sen. Bill Nelson and Tallahassee mayor Andrew Gillum, who is running for governor. On Sunday, the former president will be in Gary, Indiana, for Sen. Joe Donnelly, who is among the most endangered Senate Democrats, and in his hometown of Chicago for J.B. Pritzker, who is the favorite in Illinois' race for governor.

Democrats are defending several Senate incumbents in Republican-leaning states in their quest to narrow the GOP's 51-49 majority. The terrain is more favorable in the House, where Democrats need a net pickup of 23 seats to recapture the majority, and in several states with vulnerable Republican governors.

A look at midterm campaign activities Wednesday:

Montana Senate

The Libertarian candidate in Montana's Senate race threw his support behind Republican Matt Rosendale in response to an election mailer from an unknown group that appears aimed at undermining Rosendale's support among conservatives.

Rick Breckenridge said Wednesday that he doesn't know the source of the mailer promoting him as a "true conservative" and claiming that Rosendale supports using drones to spy on private citizens.

Breckenridge said it was an attempt by so-called dark money groups to influence Montana's election. He said he has decided to back Rosendale, who is in a tight race against two-term Democratic Sen. Jon Tester.

The mailer is reminiscent of tactics used by Democratic-friendly groups in Tester's 2012 race to promote the Libertarian candidate and peel away Republican voters.

Pelosi predicts

House Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi declared late Tuesday that Democrats will win the House majority, predicting a "great night for America."

Pelosi said in an interview with Stephen Colbert on "The Late Show" that "up until today, I would have said, 'If the election were held today, we would win.'" Asked what had changed, Pelosi said, "What now I'm saying is we will win. We will win. We will win."

Pelosi, who was the nation's first female House speaker, could be in a position to reclaim the gavel in House leadership elections after the midterms.

Florida votes

More than 3.4 million people in Florida have already voted, surpassing the number who voted early or by mail four years ago.

New statistics released Wednesday by the state Division of Elections show registered Republicans still have the edge, casting 1.43 million ballots compared to nearly 1.37 million by registered Democrats. More than 592,000 voters with no party affiliation have voted.

More than 1.48 million people have voted early, and more than 1.9 million people have voted by mail.

During the last midterm election, nearly 3.19 million Floridians cast their ballots before Election Day. More than 6.6 million voted early or voted by mail in the 2016 presidential election.

Florida has more than 13 million registered voters.

NATIONWIDE - The phone lines are ringing off the hook. That's because U.S. State Silver Bars sealed away in State Vault Bricks are being handed over to FL, AL and GA residents at just the state minimum set by the Federated Mint for the next 2 days.

This is not a misprint. For the next 2 days residents who find their state on the Distribution List above in bold are getting individual State Silver Bars at just the state minimum of $59 set by the Federated Mint. That's why everyone should be taking full Vault Bricks loaded with five U.S. State Silver Bars before the deadline ends.

And here's the best part. Every FL, AL and GA resident who gets at least two Vault Bricks is also getting free shipping and free handling. That's a real steal because all other state residents must pay over six hundred dollars for each State Vault Brick.

Not long ago, nobody knew that the only U.S. State Silver Bars locked away in the private vaults of the Federated Mint would be allocated for a limited release to residents in 3 states. Every single one of the 50 U.S. State Silver Bars are date numbered in the order they ratified the Constitution and were admitted into the Union beginning in the late 1700s.

"As Executive Advisor to the Federated Mint I get paid to deliver breaking news. So, for anyone who hasn't heard yet, highly collectable U.S. State Silver Bars are now being handed over at just the state minimum set by the Federated Mint to residents in 3 states who beat the offer deadline, which is why I pushed for this announcement to be widely advertised," said Mary Ellen Withrow, the emeritus 40th Treasurer of the United States of America.

"These bars are solid .999 pure fine silver and will always be a valuable precious metal which is why everyone is snapping up as many as they can before they're all gone," Withrow said.

There's one thing Withrow wants to make very clear. State residents only have two days to call the Toll Free Order Hotlines to get the U.S. State Silver Bars.

U.S. Mint. In fact, they're only being handed over at state minimum set by the Federated Mint to FL, AL and GA residents who call the Toll Free Hotline before the deadline ends two days from today's publication date", said Timothy J. Shissler, Executive Director of Vault Operations at the private Federated Mint.

To make it fair, special Toll Free Overflow Hotlines have been set up to ensure all residents have an equal chance to get them.

Rapid shipments to state residents are scheduled to begin with the first calls being accepted at precisely 8:30am today.

"We're bracing for all the calls and doing everything we can to make sure no one gets left out, but the U.S. State Silver Bars are only being handed over at just the state resident minimum set by the Federated Mint for the next two days. For now, residents can get the U.S. State Silver Bars at just the state minimum set by the Federated Mint as long as they call before the order deadline ends," confirmed Shissler.

"With so many state residents trying to get these U.S. State Silver Bars, lines are busy so keep trying. All calls will be answered," Shissler said. ■

US stocks rally again, but finish month with losses

By Marley Jay
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stocks climbed for the second day in a row Wednesday at the end of a brutal month for the global market. Investors applauded strong quarterly results from companies including Facebook and General Motors, but U.S. stocks still finished with their worst monthly loss in seven years.

Markets in Europe, Asia and the U.S. rallied following better-than-expected results from various companies and continued hiring by U.S. businesses. Many of the biggest gains Wednesday came from technology and internet companies and retailers, which plunged early in October as investors worried about rising interest rates and the U.S.-China trade dispute.

The S&P 500 hadn't risen for two consecutive days since late September. It finished October with a loss of 6.9 percent, its worst since September 2011. The third quarter of this year was the best in five years for U.S. stocks, but those gains were wiped out this month. The S&P 500 is now up 1.4 percent for the year.

Stocks began sinking on Oct. 3 as interest rates rocketed higher. After that, investors kept selling stocks as they worried about the trade dispute and other factors that could also hurt economic growth and company profits.

Investors are that much more nervous because corporate profit growth is already expected to slow in 2019 after it jumped this year, a big portion of which stemmed from the one-time corporate tax cut.

Schroders Investment Strategist Marina Severinovsky said several different factors could help stocks over the next few weeks: corporate stock purchases are expected to increase, and U.S. President Donald Trump and China's Xi Jinping could meet next month, an opportunity for progress in U.S.-China trade talks.

"If there's any kind of movement, even a stay of execution (on tariff hikes), could be a positive for the market," she said. Severinovsky added that whatever the outcome of next week's midterm elections, stocks will probably rise once they are over.

"Markets tend to rally on certainty," she said.

The S&P 500 index rose 29.11 points, or 1.1 percent, to 2,711.74. The Dow Jones Industrial Average gained 241.12 points, or 1 percent, to 25,115.76. The Nasdaq composite jumped 144.25 points, or 2 percent, to 7,305.90.

The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies edged up 4.78 points, or 0.3 percent, to 1,511.41. Smaller and more U.S.-focused companies did even worse than the rest of the stock market in October.

Facebook had a mixed third quarter, with better-than-expected earnings and disappointing revenue. But after the company's recent losses, even that was a relief to Wall Street. After a 2.9 percent gain Tuesday, the stock rose 3.8 percent to $151.79.

Other high-flying internet and tech stocks did better. Netflix jumped 5.6 percent to $301.78 and Amazon soared 4.4 percent to $1,598.01. Apple, which held up much better than the broader stock market this month, gained 2.6 percent to $218.86.

Facebook has plummeted 30 percent since reaching a record high in late July. That same month, the social network reported weaker-than-expected user growth and said it's spending more on security, moderation and product development.

Investors worry that companies like Facebook will be subject to more regulation following several data privacy scandals as well as online election meddling from outside the U.S. Facebook is also facing harsh criticism that its platform is being used to inflame ethnic and religious conflict in Myanmar. On top of all that, high-tech stocks like Facebook have stumbled this month as investors looked for safer, steadier options.

Amazon fell 20 percent for the month, wiping out around $200 billion in market value. The tech-heavy Nasdaq skidded 9.2 percent, its biggest one-month loss since November 2008.

General Motors also did far better than expected in the third quarter as it raised prices in North America and its China division held up well. The company also moved to cut costs by offering buyouts to about 18,000 white-collar employees in North America. The stock jumped 9.1 percent to $36.59.

Bond prices dropped. The yield on the 10-year Treasury note rose to 3.14 percent from 3.11 percent.

OUR OPINION

Fight back against hate

Another senseless slaughter. More lives were cut short by a brutal burst of hatred. The 11 people slaughtered as they worshiped Saturday at Pittsburgh's Tree of Life Synagogue were not chosen because of who they were — Bernice and Sylvan Simon, married 60 years and still holding hands in public; David and Cecil Rosenthal, brothers who stood by the synagogue's door every service to greet people with a "Good Shabbos;" Daniel Stein, a 71-year-old man thrilled to be a grandfather for the first time; Irving Younger, whose neat brick house was just a few miles from where he was born; Richard Gottfried, a dentist who often provided no-cost services to those who couldn't afford them; Joyce Fienberg, the warm, elegant woman who was at the synagogue every day to pray for her deceased husband; Melvin Wax, the diehard Pittsburgh Pirates fan who took up any odd job that needed doing at Tree of Life; Jerry Rabinowitz, the physician who made house calls and said he'd never retire because he loved his work; Rose Mallinger, the 97-year-old who, as a young woman, watched the Holocaust unfold.

These 11 people died because a twisted soul fomented a delusional fantasy that cast them as faceless villains.

It changes from massacre to massacre. On one June evening in 2015, they were African-American congregants at a Charleston prayer service. A year later, patrons attending Latin-music night at the Pulse nightclub, an Orlando gay bar. Sometimes there was a tenuous personal connection — the man who murdered five employees of The Capital in Annapolis, Maryland nursed a long-standing grudge over a story published eight years prior. Others were targeted seemingly at random — people at a concert on a Las Vegas night, or children attending high school in Parkland, Florida, or elementary school in Newtown, Connecticut.

American Jews, in particular, know what it feels like to be irrational targets of sick, dehumanizing hatred. Throughout history, they have been the identified targets of bizarre conspiracy theories, the scapegoats of paranoia. This could be the deadliest mass shooting in the nation's history of people targeted because of their Jewish faith, but it is not the first, or the third, or the fifth. The New York Times reports that the Anti-Defamation League documented a 57 percent rise in anti-Semitic incidents in the United States in 2017.

Yet free speech — even hateful speech — is not the enemy. Nor is the hotly debated right to bear arms.

Hatred is most likely to flourish when average Americans look aside, rather than confront it. Many Americans seem more concerned about being tagged with derision as "politically correct" than they are about contradicting bias and bigotry. This must change. Most of us have no problem living in harmony with — even befriending, or loving — those with whom we disagree on matters of politics, lifestyle or faith. And the vast majority of Americans reject the idea that hate could ever be a national value.

Stand up, and say so. Keep saying it even after the news of this latest tragedy fades, before the next one happens, or the next. Confront it wherever it crops up. Make it clear that Americans themselves reject hatred and will not tolerate scapegoating.

We are better than this, and we must re-commit to showing it.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A note of appreciation and clarification

As the Daily Commercial's regular readers know, Marvin Jacobson and I rarely agree. However, I do appreciate his letter of support for my column regarding how flawed our process is in amending the Florida Constitution.

I also want to take this opportunity to shed some light and clarification on his Oct. 27 letter titled "A number of clear choices on Nov. 6 ballot". Among Mr. Jacobson's observations was the fact that the Equal Rights Amendment was three states short of passing and he viewed that as a big negative. Let me add an important clarification to the impact of ERA. Should it pass, it would destroy Title IX and women's athletic programs at every scholastic level. The reason: ERA would do away with "separate but equal athletic programs based on gender." Just as the Supreme Court did away with separate but equal schools based on race, the same would hold true on separate but equal athletic programs based on gender. There are many laudable aspirations in the concept of the ERA Amendment, but the one huge negative is the destruction of Title IX.

As a male athletic director at two universities in the late 70s and early 80s, I was a huge champion of Title

IX. The growth of women's athletics has been extraordinary and one of the best laws passed to open thousands of athletic doors to talented female athletes and coaches.

Passage of ERA would mean that you would have one soccer team, basketball team, track team, etc., and both men and women would have an equal opportunity to make the team. Separate but equal disappears, and so would women's athletics.

Use your vote wisely

When Rick Scott ran for governor, I knew his background and decided not to support him. However, he has been fortunate because during the last two years, Florida was threatened by one hurricane each year. So, Scott dons his Navy hat (he spent a total of 29 months in the service) to act like the governor for the people. Admirable, but obviously contrived.

Sadly, Scott considers climate change a hoax and refuses to allow the words "climate change" in any government documents, even though scientists all over the world disagree with his position. We know Florida is especially sensitive to climate change and many low-lying areas are subject to flooding at any time. Further, he gutted the state's water management districts, cut funding and appointed development friendly individuals (friends) to the boards (nary an environmentalist in sight)! Thus the increase in red tide and algae blooms.

Scott maligns his opponent for voting with his party 89 percent of the time. This means his opponent actually considered and voted with the opposition 11 percent of the time. It's too bad Scott did not do that when the federal government under Democratic leadership offered to fund Medicaid, which would have covered more than 800,000 Florida residents — even though the funding would be initially provided by, and thereafter supplemented by, the federal government. He refused to take it from a Democratic administration.

He also refused $2.4 billion in federal money for a high-speed rail line between Tampa and Orlando. Now he considers a rail line to be a great idea. Why? It turns out the governor and his wife invested at least $3 million in a credit fund for the parent company of the company building the rail line, just one of many conflicts of interest during this governor's tenure.

Use your vote wisely. Determine who will best serve the needs of Florida and its residents.

ANOTHER OPINION

The sickness spreads

Cal Thomas

Just in time for Halloween comes a former male stripper, who drove a van with Trump stickers plastered all over it, being charged with sending pipe bombs to top Democratic leaders, a journalist and at least one celebrity, all of whom have been vocal critics of President Trump.

The New York Post headline was the cleverest: "Caught Red Hatted: Steroid-abusing Florida stripper driving Trump van is charged with Dem bomb spree."

The Post reported that the accused, Cesar Sayoc Jr., was said to be lost and a "sick individual" who is estranged from his family, but eventually "found a father" in President Trump. He also hates his mother, according to Ronald Lowy, his Miami attorney.

Well, yes, you wouldn't expect a stable individual who loves his mother to do what Sayoc is accused of doing.

Predictably, many of those who were targets of Sayoc's pipe bombs, some of which were incapable of exploding, are blaming President Trump for inciting people like Sayoc to go beyond verbal attacks and engage in dangerous, unlawful behavior.

Some on the right point to language used by Rep. Maxine Waters (D-CA), former Attorney General Eric Holder, former President Barack Obama and others (the New York Times published a review of a novel, the plot of which revolves around the assassination of President Trump with the aid of a rogue Secret Service agent). Those conservatives claim that left-wing rhetoric is mostly responsible for widening the political divide and polluting civil debate.

How about each side taking responsibility for its own language and behavior? People attending Trump rallies dislike big media, but their rants haven't changed what conservatives believe is biased reporting. Why don't some in the Trump crowd invite a reporter to lunch and calmly explain their feelings and political points of view?

On the left, why don't some of those people confronting Republicans out for a quiet dinner with family and friends respectfully ask for an appointment to explain why they oppose Republican and conservative ideas and offer their own proposals for making America better? Whose mind is changed when their dinner is interrupted by people accusing them of treason?

As a conservative, I understand the anger felt by many on my side about the way our political positions, faith and worldview are portrayed by the media and wider culture, but behaving as conservatives sometimes do only reinforces long-held stereotypes in the minds of secular progressives who think of us as uneducated Bible-thumpers, intolerant, judgmental and a "basket of deplorables."

While many in mainstream media deplore everything for which the right stands, I think they secretly enjoy the conflict because it boosts ratings and sells newspapers. Conflict always attracts a larger audience than comity, but that is no excuse for contributing to the conflict.

Our anger at government and politicians solves nothing. The country is divided. It has always been that way. The focus should be not on winning a war of words, which is impossible so long as the name-calling continues; the focus should be on winning the battle of ideas and what works best in promoting the welfare of most Americans.

If that sounds naive in our polarized environment, what would you suggest? Clearly, what we are engaged in now isn't working. As the late Glen Campbell sang, "Try a little kindness." It's better than sending bombs through the mail. It's also better than behaving rudely in restaurants.

Trevathan's 'best surprise ever'

Former Leesburg star floored by visit from grandma

By Colleen Kane
Tribune News Service

Danny Trevathan stood behind a crowd of teammates on a blustery Saturday and listened as Bears coach Matt Nagy told his team a post-practice story.

One player had a grandmother who had battled cancer, Nagy said, and she had never seen her grandson play at Soldier Field.

"OK, I get to meet somebody's grandma," Trevathan thought to himself.

Then Nagy told No. 59 to come forward.

As Trevathan — a former Leesburg High star — stepped past his parted teammates to hug Nagy, the inside linebacker didn't see the golf cart driving across the practice field. When Nagy pointed to the bundled-up woman sitting in the cart and wearing a gray and pink Bears ballcap, Trevathan doubled over with joy and let out a yell.

"Grandma!" he said,

rushing to hug Dorothy McElroy.

"She asked me if I was mad at her for surprising me because I don't like surprises," Trevathan said. "But that was the best surprise I've ever had."

'A no-brainer'

Trevathan calls McElroy the "centerpiece" of a big family, a woman who hosts all the gatherings, speaks her mind, shares her energy and love and

Center of attention

Wildwood's Niblack makes college debut at center

By Frank Jolley
frank.jolley@daily-commercial.com

Kari Niblack is used to being the center of attention on the basketball court after leading Wildwood to three state championship game appearances in four years and back-to-back Class 1A state titles.

So it seemed only fitting that West Virginia University women's basketball coach Mike Carey decided to give her playing time at center.

And Niblack showed

she was up to challenge on Tuesday, nearly recording a double-double in her college debut, an 88-53 win against West Liberty in an exhibition game in Morgantown, West Virginia. Niblack didn't start, but played 22 minutes off the bench, and had nine points and 11 rebounds in the win.

The 6-foot-1 freshman was 4 of 5 from the field and 1 of 4 from the free-throw line. Nine of her team-high 11 rebounds were off the defensive glass.

Niblack also blocked two shots and had two steals.

The Daily Commercial All-Area Player of the Year in 2017 and 2018, Niblack average 18.6 points, 11.9 rebounds and four blocks per game for the Wildcats in 2018. She scored 28 points and pulled down 12 rebounds in her final high school game, a 54-45 win against Port St. Joe in the Class 1A state championship game.

Next up for the Mountaineers is their season opener at home on Tuesday against Coppin State.

Book details history of playoffs

By John Patton
Gatehouse Media

OCALA — When it comes to football, Richard Burton is very much old school.

He isn't shy about expressing his disdain for what he calls softer play (and players) nowadays while harkening back via photos and videos on social media to days when violent hits were considered part of the game and not automatic 15-yard penalties.

But, shhhhh... Here's a secret. There is a little bit of new school to Burton, too.

In a time when more and more sports franchises are using analytics to build rosters and create game plans, Burton is a numbers guy. Want to know how many receptions the No. 2 receiver on a 2-5 local high school team had in his eighth game in 1985? Burton probably can find that for you.

"People always want to know how teams and players stack up against one another," Burton said. "I've pretty much always been that way, too."

Now, Burton has found a way to share much of his well-researched information to the masses with his recently released book "Seeds of Greatness: A History of Florida High School Championships from 1963 to 2017," which is available for $69.95 through various booksellers, including Amazon.

In 700 pages (cut from a whopping 2,300) culled from seven years of painstaking effort, Burton provides statistical data from all 4,163 high school football playoff games in the state over a 55-year stretch.

In short, Burton has created the ultimate postseason guide for media, historians and fans

UF turns to Nembhard to replace Chiozza

By Mark Long
Associated Press

GAINESVILLE — Florida coach Mike White already considers Andrew Nembhard one of the best passers in college basketball, extremely high praise for a freshman.

It might be warranted. The 6-foot-5 point guard led his high school team, Montverde Academy, to a national championship and carried Canada to a silver medal at the FIBA U18 Americas.

Naturally, the Gators have high expectations for the first five-star recruit in White's coaching tenure. Not only do they believe he can lead them to the NCAA Tournament for a third consecutive season, they also are counting on him to replace the school's all-time assists leader, Chris Chiozza.

"Definitely some big shoes to fill," Nembhard said. "I'm just going to try to come in and do as much as I can to help the team win."

Nembhard should have enough talent around him to get it done.

Florida returns three starters, including leading scorer Jalen Hudson, from a team that earned a No. 6 seed in the NCAA Tournament and ended the season with a three-point loss to Texas Tech in the second round. The Gators also have four holdovers from an Elite Eight appearance in 2017.

"We've got to finish," White said. "We were very close, of course, a couple years ago. Last year, we had some highlights and some deficiencies and some lulls."

"The way we look at it is just the growth mindset, just enjoying the process and getting better every day."

Nembhard won't have the luxury of watching and waiting.

He's going to play and might even start when Florida opens the season Nov. 6 at rival and 17th-ranked Florida State. Coaches, teammates and Gators fans eagerly await his debut.

"He'll have a chance to be one of the better passers in college basketball," White said. "Who knows how many assists that means, how many highlights he produces, how many minutes he'll play. I'm not sure. But that is his gift.

"He sees the game at a high level. He's a split-second thinker. He's very intelligent. Not only is he an elite passer, he's an elite passer with size, which makes it even a little bit easier for him to deliver some passes that other guys with equal vision can't deliver."

Andrew Nembhard, left, drives to the basket during the Jordan Brand Classic high school basketball game on April 8 in New York. Florida has high expectations for the first five-star recruit in coach Mike White's coaching tenure.

Chiozza left campus with a school-record 571 assists, including 208 as a senior. He also averaged 11.1 points and 4.3 rebounds last season, and finished with 38 3-pointers and 65 steals.

Hudson and shooting guard KeVaughn Allen will be asked to fill the void, although some of it will fall to Nembhard.

"We play slightly different, but I feel like I can come in and help the team in a different way," Nembhard said. "I need to be more vocal as a leader on the court and just kind of talk to my guys. That's probably the biggest challenge for me."

Here are some other things to know about Florida:

Freshman class

Shooting guard Noah

Locke and forward Keyontae Johnson also are part of Florida's freshman class. White expects both to have bench roles immediately.

"I think we could be deep," White said. "If we get everybody healthy, we could have really healthy competition out there in practice, which helps you become a better team. ... I'm not saying we're going to be a great team by any stretch, but I can't tell you one of the 13 (players) that I just know is not going to play. That's a good problem to have."

Frontcourt help

Florida struggled down the stretch last season, partly because opponents took advantage of the team's frontcourt woes.

Center John Egbunu (knee) and forward Isaiah Stokes (knee) missed the entire year. Chase Johnson (concussion) missed most of the season. And center Gorjok Gak played limited minutes because of knee soreness and swelling.

Stokes, Johnson and Gak are healthy now, giving the Gators plenty of depth behind Kevarrius Hayes and Keith Stone.

"I do expect to be deeper," White said. "'Got a chance to be deep in the frontcourt."

Tough slate

Florida faces another tough schedule, with non-conference games against the Seminoles, No. 13 West Virginia, No. 10 Michigan State and No. 20 TCU. The SEC slate includes No. 2 Kentucky twice, No. 6 Tennessee twice, No. 11 Auburn, No. 18 Mississippi State and No. 23 LSU.

"Ridiculous. It's just ridiculous," White said. "The state of the SEC in terms of basketball is off the charts right now. Our non-conference is a bear, and it gets even more difficult as we move into league play."

Richard Burton provides statistical data from all 4,163 high school football playoff games in the state over a 55-year stretch in his recently released book "Seeds of Greatness: A History of Florida High School Championships from 1963 to 2017."

of high school football in Florida, which has more players on current NFL rosters than any other state.

"There were times I never thought I'd get it done," Burton said. "It was a full-time job which left me very little free time (in addition to writing for the Ocala Star-Banner, Burton also is a teacher).

"But I'm lucky in that I had my mom and my stepdad, who both are retired and did a fantastic job of laying out the book. And I can't say enough about my son, Michael, who spent a lot of his free time working and traveling with me when he probably would rather have been watching Spongebob (Squarepants).

"I couldn't have done it without them." And according to Paul Kardasz, the sports editor of the Ocala Star-Banner (which has used Burton as one of its primary prep writers since 1994), no one else could have written "Seeds of Greatness."

"Richard knows everything you need to know about high school football in the state of Florida," Kardasz said of Burton. "He knows more about Florida prep football than anyone I've ever met.

"This book, as well as any added editions, will be the go-to archive for many years to come."

SURPRISE

appreciates the little things.

She's the mother of five children, whom she stayed home to care for when they were younger. Her husband, Walter, worked in a steel mill in Youngstown, Ohio. Trevathan thinks now about the attitude they instilled, not to expect anything to be given to him.

"I don't really get a lot of surprises, a lot of things my way," Trevathan said. "I don't really need that. I just put my head down and work. That's what my grandmother told us."

Walter, who shared the middle name Eugene with his grandson, was a big football fan, but he died of lung cancer when Trevathan was a kid, before he could see his grandson play, McElroy said.

"I hated so bad he didn't get a chance to see him play," she said.

She was not an enthusiast originally, but "she's a big fan of me," Trevathan said, "which converted her to be a big football fan." She loves watching her grandson play, but doing that in person has been difficult.

In 2015, McElroy was diagnosed with breast cancer and had a mastectomy. In the three years since, she has battled a number of health problems, including a hospital stay for pneumonia, going through dialysis and being put on oxygen.

She had seen Trevathan play for the Bears but at an away game that was a shorter trip from Akron, Ohio. Trevathan always wanted to get her to a game in Chicago and was hoping to do it soon.

That's what he told Bears Care director Marge Hamm when she asked about his grandma. She was doing a promotion with Trevathan for the Bears charitable arm's "Real Bears Fans Wear Pink" T-shirt sales the first week of October.

Trevathan had been active in the Bears' breast cancer fundraising and support efforts, twice attending their annual September luncheon for survivors.

"He came in and was amazing," Hamm said of his first luncheon. "He hugged every single one. I mean, this is 50-plus women. He listened to their stories, and he came back again this year."

One small part of a charitable effort that the Bears say raises hundreds of thousands of dollars each year for women's cancer research and support is that the team hosts survivors for game-day experiences at Soldier Field.

Upon hearing Trevathan talk about his grandma, Hamm thought about how he had spent time to talk to and inspire a Chicago Public Schools teacher who was overcoming cancer. So why not do something for McElroy and Trevathan?

"It was a no-brainer," Hamm said.

'Biggest thing that ever happened'

The toughest part of arranging the trip was keeping it secret from Trevathan.

McElroy's daughters didn't tell her the news until the night before she was to leave for Illinois, a shock to McElroy because "they usually can't keep anything away from me." After they told her, they had to go to extreme measures to keep her from sharing the secret.

"When she found out, she was so loud," said Michelle Hicks, Trevathan's mother. "We were like, 'Mom, you've got to be quiet. Nobody else can know.' She said, 'OK, OK.' We had to take her iPad because she's known for trying to get on it and call Danny. She was so excited. Oh, my goodness."

Keeping McElroy warm and calm as they waited for the Bears to wrap up their Saturday walk-through was another challenge. She peppered her four daughters, who all attended the surprise, with questions, including, "How do I look?"

"I put some lip gloss on her lips, and it had glitter in it," Hicks said with a laugh. "I didn't know it had glitter in it. So everybody got a laugh out of that."

Hicks described the moment as "overwhelming." The family watched with tears in their eyes as McElroy and Trevathan hugged. McElroy said she and her grandson both started crying.

"To see him happy was just a great moment," Bears linebacker Nick Kwiatkoski said. "He had no idea. ... Once he saw her, he was all smiles. It was a good moment for him and the team."

And that was just the beginning of a weekend Trevathan called "the highlight of her life."

Trevathan's family watched the Bears play the Patriots in a Soldier Field suite. McElroy went out on the field at one point, and as Hicks was wheeling her out, fans who apparently had seen a Bears video of the surprise noted she is "Danny's grandma."

"She's like, 'Who's calling me?'" Hicks said. "She really got a kick out of that. She thought that was awesome."

Trevathan said his teammates greeted her, a moment he thought showed the "family vibes" of the team. She also offered them advice: "Go out there and knock some heads and take the ball off them each play."

"To go out on the field, that was the biggest thing that ever happened in my life because I had never been on a field," McElroy said. "It was amazing."

Trevathan had 10 tackles in the Bears' 38-31 loss to the Patriots, and while he wasn't happy with the outcome, he thought she appreciated his effort.

"I was thinking about her each play," Trevathan said. "Win this play for her. I kind of felt like I didn't perform like I wanted to, but I still gave it my all. So I feel like she was happy with that."

She was.

"I know this much: When Danny's on that field, Danny's going to do his best," McElroy said. "I was hurt because they didn't win the game. But I know he did his best."

After the game, the family gathered at Trevathan's house to talk, eat and play with the kids. McElroy had to return home early in the week to undergo more tests to see if she would again need treatment for cancer.

As Trevathan and his family waited for that news, it made the weekend that much more special.

"To have her here, it made me feel good," Trevathan said. "I don't know what's going on with (the cancer). I just know I have to appreciate the days I have with her right now."

Tavares and East Ridge for the girls, finished among the top 18 teams at the Florida Youth Running Association state finals at Holloway Park in Lakeland.

In addition, Tavares' Riley Novack and Matthew Raucci finished second and third among boys and Mount Dora's Noelle Vu was sixth among girls in the individual competition.

More than 400 boys and 300 girls took part in the 3 kilometer race. Forty-seven boys teams and 37 girls teams competed in the event, making it the largest field ever.

The Tavares boys team finished fourth and was the highest finishing public-school program. The Bulldogs finished with 238 points, trailing only Jacksonville Bolles (155 points), Miami Belen Jesuit Prep (185), and Winter Park Circle Christian (232).

In cross country, lower team point totals represent higher finishes.

East Ridge was fifth among boys with 242 points and Montverde Academy was 18th with 526 points.

In the individual competition, Novack stopped the clock in 9 minutes, 55 seconds to finish second overall and was the top public-school performer. According to Kevin Von Maxey, Tavares Middle School coach, Novack's time was the fifth fastest ever recorded at the state finals. Raucci was about four seconds behind Novack with a time of 9:59.86. Von Maxey said Raucci's time was the 10th best of all time.

Tavares' Noah Musselwhite was 10th with a time of 10:19.64.

Among the girls, Mount Dora finished eighth with 272 points. Tavares was 13th with 381 points and East Ridge was 18th with 456 points.

Jacksonville Bolles won the girls team title with 67 points.

Vu's sixth place finish was the best for a girls runner from Lake County. The eighth-grader stopped the clock in 11:12.68, about 23 seconds off the pace set by eventual winner Ella Porcher of Tallahassee McClay, who finished in 10:49.58.

Jasmine Williams from Gray Middle School finished 21st in 11:45.19.

The top 25 finishers in the individual competition earned medals.

Bowling

Two boys and two girls teams, along with four individuals, qualified for the state bowling finals on Tuesday at the District 4 championships at Break Point Alley in Tavares.

The Villages and Tavares advanced among the boys teams, while Eustis and Lake Minneola advanced for the girls. Individual qualifiers for the boys were South Lake's Ryan Ward and East Ridge's Shane Reynolds; Rebecca Sargent from Tavares and Jerianne Todd from Mount Dora Christian Academy were the individual qualifiers for the girls.

The Villages won the boys team competition, with senior Kamden Buzzell recording a three-game score of 628. Joseph Foran (493 score), Reese Chavis (215) and Austin Rottermond (215) rounded out the Buffalo's team scoring. Zach Rohan, whose score did not factor into the final team score, also advanced.

For Tavares, Brandon Vierra (566) led the way, followed by Charles Hoy (556), Caleb Urban (543) and Blake Cooper (318). Calvin White also advanced for the Bulldogs.

Among the girls team competition, Delaney Cole paced Eustis with a 534 score. Sky McDaniel (306), Olivia Tucker (167) and Caroline Carlson also factor into the Panthers team total, with Brenna Boylan qualifying as the team's fifth bowler.

Lake Minneola was led by Kayla Hand, who had a 417 score, followed by Sofiya Zhukotanslea (373), Brianna Richards (352), and Brianna Melees (318). Lauren Brososki advanced as the Hawks' fifth bowler.

The state finals will be held Nov. 7-8 at Boardwalk Bowl Entertainment Center in Orlando.

Weightlifting

The Iron Jungle weightlifting club took two lifters to the Florida Weightlifting Federation last weekend in Vero Beach and both returned with top-three finishes.

Taylor Woods earned a silver medal at 64 kilograms (about 141 pounds) with a total weight of 150 kilograms (330 pounds) in the snatch and clean-and-jerk.

Hailey Zakos picked up a bronze at 71 kilograms (156 pounds) with total weight of 137 kilograms (302 pounds).

According to Iron Jungle and Leesburg High School girls weightlifting coach

Josh Boyer, Woods and Zakos are expected to be among the leaders for the Yellow Jackets in the upcoming weightlifting season, which began Monday and concludes with the state finals in February.

NASCAR THIS WEEK

The Daytona Beach News-Journal's Godwin Kelly & Ken Willis have covered NASCAR for nearly 60 years combined. godwin.kelly@news-jrnl.com ken.willis@news-jrnl.com

SPEED FREAKS

A few questions we had to ask ourselves

More or less respect for Joey Logano after Martinsville?

GODSPEAK: Anything goes at the end of a NASCAR Cup Series race. Logano better make sure his mirrors are nice and clean the next three races. KEN'S CALL: Are you kidding? Definitely more. He might have a baby face, but he looked like an old pirate stealing that one. Good for him.

Should Truex be mad?

GODSPEAK: He has every right to be mad, but if he doesn't make the Championship Four, watch out, Logano. KEN'S CALL: This ain't a Cub Scout bake sale. Yes, he should be mad, briefly, but knowing Martin Truex Jr., he'll get over it by later in the week.

FEUD OF THE WEEK

MARTIN TRUEX JR. VS. JOEY LOGANO:

Truex passed Logano clean for the lead at Martinsville, then Logano pushed Truex out of the way on the last lap for the win and a ticket to the playoff final. GODWIN KELLY'S TAKE: This is not over. "They won the battle, but he didn't win the damn war," Truex said. "He just knocked me out of the way ... what goes around comes around."

GODWIN'S PICKS FOR TEXAS

WINNER: Kevin Harvick
REST OF TOP 5: Martin Truex Jr., Denny Hamlin, Kyle Busch, Alex Bowman
FIRST ONE OUT: William Byron
DARK HORSE: Kyle Larson
DON'T BE SURPRISED IF: Harvick wins at Texas because he called this shot after a disappointing Martinsville run.

MOTOR MOUTHS PODCAST

Joey Logano is the man! Maybe. We'll hug it out in the pod.

Tune in online at www.news-journalonline.com/daytonamotormouths

TEXAS

THREE THINGS TO WATCH

1. Logano's leisure

Austin Dillon was the first driver to qualify for the NASCAR Cup Series playoffs by winning the season-opening Daytona 500. Joey Logano is the first driver who won't have to race for points — well, for the next two weeks. Since Logano scored a hard-fought (the fighting may not be over) victory over Martin Truex Jr. at Martinsville, he does not have to race for points at Texas or Phoenix.

2. Harvick/Truex bubble

With the first race of the Round of 8 done, Kevin Harvick and Martin Truex Jr. moved from second and third in the standings into a tie for third place, putting both on the playoff points bubble. They are 25 points ahead of fifth-place Kurt Busch, and 31 points in front of sixth-place Chase Elliott. At least one of the drivers in the Championship Round will get in on points. The points leader is Kyle Busch, 21 up on the bubble boys.

Joey Logano is finished racing for points for the next two NASCAR Cup Series races after winning at Martinsville and locking in a starting position for the Championship Round. [AP/STEVE HELBER]

3. Silly Season positive

You could hear the collective sigh of relief from the hilltops around Martinsville Speedway on Sunday when car owner Rick Hendrick announced Jimmie Johnson will have a full sponsorship package, covering two years, from Ally Financial. Johnson is losing Lowe's at the end of this season. "It's massive," Johnson said. "To have a primary sponsor for all the races for two years, hasn't happened for a long time."

— Godwin Kelly, godwin.kelly@news-jrnl.com

MARTINSVILLE

THREE THINGS WE LEARNED

1. Penske disagrees

Car owner Roger Penske bristled when he was told Martin Truex Jr. called Joey Logano's race-winning bump and run a cheap shot. "He's a racer and should know better than to say that," he said. "That's as clean a shot as you can have — in a race like this."

2. All is fair

As the saying goes, "all is fair in love and war." And that applies to the closing laps of a Cup Series race where you can knock the guy ahead of you out of the way for the win. "It was a lot of bumper banging towards the end and a hard race," Martinsville winner Logano said.

Joey Logano (22) and Martin Truex Jr. (78) make contact as they race to the checkered flag at Martinsville. [AP/STEVE HELBER]

3. Losing streaks

Jimmie Johnson and Denny Hamlin have three chances to keep their year-to-year winning streaks intact.

Johnson has won at least one race every year since 2002. Hamlin's streak started in '06. "We've got three good tracks ahead of us; we'll see if we can get it done," Hamlin said.

— Godwin Kelly, godwin.kelly@news-jrnl.com

QUESTIONS & ATTITUDE

Compelling questions ... and maybe a few actual answers

Who's right?

Not so sure you have to choose sides in Sunday's Truex-Logano dust-up in Martinsville. It looks like one of those situations where both guys are right. Martin Truex Jr., who was bulldozed away from victory a few weeks ago on Charlotte's Roval, was given the bum's rush by Joey Logano, whose car happens to be fitted with bumpers. Truex is in the final weeks with his No. 78 team and rightfully emotional about it all.

And Joey?

Everyone seems to enjoy the beating and banging until a guy they don't like is doing the beating or a guy they do like is taking the bangs. If you're a team owner or financier, and your driver isn't willing to do what Logano did at Martinsville, you're asking some questions. This ain't open-wheel racing. And by the way, you'll see that final sprint to the checkers on a lot of future promo commercials.

'Edwin Drood' musical mystery at Melon Patch

By Linda Florea
Correspondent

This weekend, theater includes interactive mystery with "The Mystery of Edwin Drood," comedy with "Aliens with Extraordinary Skills" and a pivotal Bach recording that can change a student's future in "Analog: A New Play by Darryl Pickett."

Musical acts this weekend include country artist David Ball and a John Denver tribute in Bushnell and Broadway songs in Clermont.

Be sure to get your tickets early for "Disney and Cameron Mackintosh's Mary Poppins the Broadway Musical" at the IceHouse in Mount Dora and check out upcoming auditions.

"The Mystery of Edwin Drood" is now playing at the Melon Patch Theatre in Leesburg and continues until Nov. 11. The play is based on an unfinished Charles Dickens novel where the audience gets to determine the ending.
[SUBMITTED]

'The Mystery of Edwin Drood'

The Melon Patch Theatre in Leesburg performs "The Mystery of Edwin Drood," a comedy, a musical and an interactive mystery for the audience to solve playing until Nov. 11. An adaptation of Charles Dickens' uncompleted novel, the Tony and Drama Desk award-winning musical comedy portrays a riotous and rollicking band of Victorian music hall performers. The audience is invited to participate and choose the ending with a different outcome at every performance.

"Rupert Holmes, who wrote the piece, was able to play upon the time frame and immerse the audience in the Victorian music hall, a full riotous atmosphere of slapstick humor, bad punchlines and lovely ladies in corsets and bustles," said director Beau Mahurin. "There is a lot of direct audience interaction both pre-show and during the voting process itself. The fact that the audience does literally have a stake in the outcome of every performance is what makes it special."

Rated PG for some suggestive humor, brief mild language and drug use.

Tickets: $0 to $18

LOCAL ENTERTAINMENT SCENE

On Tap this weekend

First Friday festivities and history lessons

By Linda Florea
Correspondent

Step into the past with a variety of events this weekend, from the Renaissance Faire to the Vietnam Traveling Memorial Wall and the Leesburg Chili Cook-off. Clermont's Historic Village will bring back the days of Florida's first settlers at the Heritage Day Festival on Saturday.

Or enjoy one of the other events Clermont is hosting, including the annual Taste of South Lake today, the Clermont Art Festival all weekend and America's Mighty Warriors Military Race on Sunday.

Here's what's On Tap this weekend:

Lady of the Lakes Renaissance Faire

Gunpowder, treason and plot are some of the drama at the fictional town of Shrewsbury during the Lady of the Lakes Renaissance Faire. The Faire kicks off this Friday to Sunday and continues Nov. 10 and 11 near Lake Idamere Park, 12835 County Landfill Road in Tavares. Reenactors bring the Renaissance to life with a village, events, a feast of favorite faire food and unique vendors.

Over 100 Renaissance style performers on seven stages will keep the entertainment interesting from sword fights and jousting to music and comedy. Family entertainment includes Fairies are Alive!, the Myth of the Lady of the Lake and Mystical Unicorns.

Discount days with discounted tickets at the gate only are Education Day on Friday with $5 student tickets and teachers are free. Senior Day is $8 for 62 and older on Nov. 11 along with veterans and active military with military identification.

Tickets are $7 to $45 at lakerenaire.com

Leesburg Chili Cook-off

The Downtown Leesburg Business Association's annual Chili Cook-Off is Saturday. Gates open at 4:30 p.m. and chili is served from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday at Towne Square. The best local chefs will be serving samples of their chili as they vie to be voted the best of the best. There's a cash bar and live entertainment by The Accuzed.

Tickets are $10 and available at the gate.
Details: leesburgpartnership.com/chili

Downtown Clermont Art Festival

The 12th annual

Downtown Clermont Art Festival juried art show is on Montrose Street from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday. In addition to over 30 talented artists vying for prizes, there will be crafters, a chalk art contest for children, food trucks and more. On Sunday, the festival merges with the farmer's market for even more vendors.

Vietnam Traveling Memorial Wall

The Vietnam Traveling Memorial Wall will be at the Lady Lake Soccer field on Rolling Acres Road today through Sunday. Viewing will start at 3 p.m. today and continue 24 hours a day until closing. Opening ceremonies are Friday from 9 to 11:10 a.m. Saturday opening ceremonies are 9 to 9:35 a.m. The closing ceremony is 4 p.m. Sunday with viewing until the wall

MOVIE REVIEW

Playing a little known author lets Melissa McCarthy show off her acting chops in 'Can You Ever Forgive Me?'

By Ed Symkus
More Content Now

Until I saw "Can You Ever Forgive Me?," I'd never heard of the protagonist, Lee Israel. So, I looked her up. Herself a biographer, back in the '70s and '80s, she wrote three books, about cosmetics businesswoman Estée Lauder, actress Tallulah Bankhead, and journalist Dorothy Kilgallen. The books all had some success, but seemed to mark the end of her writing career. Until, as noted in Israel's 2015 obituary in the New York Times, she turned to crime.

That part of her life is the subject of her fourth and final book in 2008, "Can You Ever Forgive Me?: Memoirs of a Literary Forger." The film stars Melissa McCarthy, in a role that's pretty much as far against type as she could get. McCarthy became a star due to her string of broad comic roles ("Bridesmaids," "Tammy," "Ghostbusters"), but it's too bad that even her fans have forgotten her fine dramatic acting opposite Bill Murray in "St. Vincent," and some viewers didn't even realize she was the low-key romantic interest for Zach Galifianakis in "The Hangover Part III."

No one will be expecting the corner she turns in this one. For her introductory scene as Lee Israel, set in 1991, she gives us a foul-mouthed, short-tempered woman who's down on her luck. She can't hold an office job, her agent won't return her calls, and she spends a great deal of time staring at her typewriter and the blank piece of paper in it. Her only idea is to write another biography about another woman who, she's told, would be of interest to no one. That's probably right. Would you read a book about Fanny Brice?

So, what's a woman who can't pay the rent for her dump apartment, and whose cat is sick, to do? By happenstance, while researching Brice, she comes across a brief letter, signed by Brice, inside a library book. She pockets it, takes it

Bittersweet journey

A broken heart reignites Steve Perry's love for music

By Gary Gerald Hamilton
The Associated Press

In the years after Steve Perry left Journey, he didn't sing for anyone — not even for himself.

No songs in the shower, humming tunes on the radio, or private concerts for family or friends. He was that burnt out, despite owning one of the most powerful voices in rock 'n' roll.

But a misstep in a relationship forced him to give an impromptu performance, albeit for one, while hiking in the mountains.

Perry recalled in a recent interview with The Associated Press that he was in the doghouse with his girlfriend and was begging for forgiveness when she gave him an ultimatum — sing for her.

That same girlfriend, Kellie Nash, is the reason why he released his first album almost 25 years, "Traces," which debuted in the top 10 of the Billboard Top 200 albums this week. Nash, who had breast cancer, made him promise that if anything ever happened to her, he would not go further into his shell.

AP: When you left the music scene, was it a matter of a loss of love for music or performing and the "work" of it?

Perry: Both. It really was. I loved performing but it was wearing me out. I loved writing music and recording music and arranging music and coming up with these melody ideas that I thought were memorable, but they weren't coming anymore. And the ones that were coming, I didn't feel good about.

AP: And you didn't miss it?

Perry: I did not (laughs). I didn't miss it because it was more uncomfortable to realize when I was doing it or trying to do it or even singing in the car by myself, I wasn't feeling it. So if I'm not feeling it, I don't miss it.

AP: Who is Kellie Nash to you and how did she inspire this return?

Perry: Kellie was a girl I met that was fighting for her life with stage 4 cancer. But I really met her on a screen when I was hanging out with (director) Patty Jenkins because Patty Jenkins was doing a TV show called "Five" for Lifetime Network. And she was in one of the scenes, and I asked Patty, "Who is this?" and she said "That's Kellie Nash, she's a Ph.D. psychologist... you need to know one thing ... she's fighting for her life." So in that moment, I decided well, maybe this is a bad idea. Then my heart said, "you need to go ahead and send that

Some people make playlists of their favorite songs, some folks' closets are full of mixtapes and some still make compilations on CD for themselves or their friends.

But not the prolific Ty Segall, who takes a much more hands-on approach and has used his music collection as inspiration to record "Fudge Sandwich," gathering a handful of tracks from the late '60s to early '70s that have influenced him over the years.

It all starts with a menacing version of "Low Rider," War's hot-rod anthem, sounding straight out of a post-apocalyptic car movie, followed by an accurate though not reverential take on the Spencer Davis Group's "I'm a Man."

On John Lennon's "Isolation," one of his soul-baring "us vs. them" songs, Segall substitutes rancid-sounding guitars for the original's piano parts and makes full use of his vocal similarities with the Liverpoolian.

That same Lennon-like vocal, added to even more distorted guitars, makes Funkadelic's "Hit It and Quit It" even more agonizing.

Segall's guitar tones get much praise and there's a whole catalog of them on hand, but it's his drumming that really stands out here, expertly shifting from rock to prog to punk and back again.

Rudimentary Peni's "Rotten to the Core" from 1983 is the "newest" song on the album, the London band's diatribe against Johnny Rotten and Joe Strummer and a warning to fans that "rock stars deal in money not truth," while Segall turns The Dils' frantic "Class War" into passionate power-pop.

Segall says "Fudge Sandwich" was made just for fun and that's exactly what you'll have listening to it.

Abbott uses skills as master storyteller

'The Three Beths'

By Jeff Abbott
(Grand Central Publishing)

By Jeff Ayers
The Associated Press

In "The Three Beths" by Jeff Abbott, Mariah Dunning has wondered about her mother's disappearance for six months. Mariah's father is suspected of killing Beth Dunning and hiding her body, but swears he's innocent.

One day at the mall, Mariah sees her mother wearing dark sunglasses, and when Mariah confronts her, she flees.

Why would Beth run from her daughter?

This incident causes suspicion, but instead of searching for answers, the police accuse her father again of killing Beth, even though a body hasn't been found.

Mariah decides to search for answers, whatever the cost.

The first thing Mariah learns is that her mother isn't the only woman named Beth to have vanished under mysterious circumstances.

Are the three women somehow related — or is it a fantastic coincidence?

Abbott uses his skills as a master storyteller to convey a complicated and ambitious tale that seems straightforward but is full of twists and red herrings.

He also keeps the story moving without falling into clichés or over-the-top revelations.

The mystery because of the terrific characters and the beautiful road map he unveils while navigating the reader through a complex landscape.

Those who enjoy unpredictable stories can never go wrong diving into the world of Jeff Abbott.

to a local used bookshop, where the owner, Anna (Dolly Wells), buys it, then wishes aloud that Israel had more of them and that the content had a bit more spark than this relatively drab one.

But before Anna's thoughts begin to percolate in Israel's mind, she bumps into an old acquaintance, Jack Hock (Richard E. Grant), when each has stopped at a local bar for an afternoon drink. She's misanthropic and angry at the world. He's a mischievous troublemaker. Both are lonely. They're going to get along together fine. And it's at this early point in the film that something becomes clear: Viewers are in for a pair of extraordinary performances. There's a very good story there, but this film is really about the acting.

At least that's what I was thinking until the story started to take shape. From then on, it and the performances telling it shared equal grounds of excellence. Getting back to that obit's mention of Israel turning to crime, McCarthy convinces us that her character never thought what she was doing was overtly criminal, or, at least no one was getting hurt.

A vague explanation of that (I don't want to give too much away) is that the dreamy thoughts of the bookshop owner caused a bulb to go off over Israel's head. A juicier letter from a literary figure is of more value than the one I sold her. I'm a good writer. I know different authors' styles. I could write my own "authentic" letters from, let's say, Dorothy Parker, fake her signature, and earn some big bucks, maybe even be able to afford a vet for my cat.

Israel goes to extraordinary lengths to make convincing forgeries, and they sell. At the same time, the film balances the story of her strained and intriguing drinking-and-chatting relationship with Jack, who becomes more incorrigible (and entertaining to watch), as she becomes more serious about her new career. After receiving a large handful of cash — she only accepts cash — from another bookdealer for a "letter from Dorothy Parker," written in the author's snarky style, she proudly tells Jack, "I'm a better Dorothy Parker than Dorothy Parker."

Things, of course, go wrong. That's not a surprise. Looking back on my notes, I had written, "How long can she keep up this charade?" What a pleasant surprise when, over the end credits, the song that welled up was Blossom Dearie's splendid version of "Charade."

Concern over woman's health grows to the point of action

DEAR ABBY: I have a co-worker I work closely with. Almost every day I hear her throwing up in the bathroom. It happens like clockwork. It's gotten to the point where I'm extremely concerned. Although it has been going on for years, it seems to have gotten worse.

I don't feel comfortable enough to bring this up to her, but something has to happen. I'm afraid I'll embarrass her, make her quit, etc., but her life is more important than that. We are both in management positions, but I am not her superior (in case that changes your advice about what to do or who to tell). Do I mention this to HR? Our boss runs his mouth a lot, and I don't know if I can say anything without it getting around. -- WORRIED FOR HER

DEAR WORRIED: I wonder if anyone else you work with has noticed what you have. Talk to someone in HR

JEANNE PHILLIPS

DEAR ABBY

and explain that you're concerned that a fellow employee (unnamed) may suffer from a life-threatening illness and need help. Point out the time the person goes into the bathroom "like clockwork," and let HR try to get her the medical intervention she so desperately appears to need. Throwing up repeatedly can result in damage to the digestive tract.

DEAR ABBY: I am a young teenage dancer. My friends in dance class are wonderful except for one thing. Four of them hide in our dressing rooms, bathroom and anywhere else they won't be seen to smoke e-cigarettes.

My one close friend asked me once if I wanted to try it. When I said no, she knew better than to press further. Other friends keep telling me it's fun. I know if I did it and my parents found out, they would kill me. Plus, I don't want to get caught up in that deadly cycle.

What should I do? Tell my teacher and risk losing friends or leave it alone? After all, it's only hurting them, right? -- BAFFLED AT BALLET

DEAR BAFFLED: You are an intelligent young lady to recognize that "sampling" tobacco products can lead to addiction. Good for you!

When the government, in its wisdom, finally clamped down on the tobacco companies in an attempt to prevent yet another generation from becoming addicted, I thought that would be the end of it. Imagine my consternation when they came out with flavored vaping fluids to seduce more young people. It's shameless!

Rather than tell the teacher, talk to your parents about what's going on so they can quietly mention it to the parents of the other girls.

DEAR ABBY: Why has the word "veggies" replaced "vegetables"? When people say "veggies," to me it sounds like they are talking to a child. -- GROWNUP EATER IN GEORGIA

DEAR EATER: It's probably because "vegetables" has at least three syllables and people have a tendency to shorten words that have more than one syllable. It may also be because parents think it's a way of making them appear more palatable to small children.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Contact Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

Opening lead — king of diamonds.

A cursory glance at today's deal might lead one to conclude that South is certain to make four spades. With the opposing trumps divided 3-2, it appears he cannot lose more than the ace of spades and two diamonds.

Yet, when the deal occurred, declarer failed to make the contract. And, what's more, there was absolutely nothing he could do about it!

West began by cashing the K-A of diamonds, then stopped to consider where his side might pick up another trick in addition to his ace of spades. It was obvious that East could not hold the ace of hearts, king of clubs or any high spade, since South had to have all of those cards for his opening bid.

West therefore decided that his only hope was to try to promote an extra trick in the trump suit. And so, at trick three he continued with the nine of diamonds, knowing full well that he was presenting declarer with the opportunity for a ruff-and-discard, normally the bane of all defenders.

Dummy trumped, and East did his part by ruffing with the ten, forcing South to overruff with the jack. Declarer then crossed to dummy with a club and led a spade to the queen, losing to the ace.

West thereupon returned another diamond, ruffed by East with the eight. Declarer could now choose his own poison, as either East's eight or West's nine would score the setting trick.

Of course, had West adopted a more passive approach by returning anything but a diamond at trick three, declarer would have made his game easily. But West worked out what was needed to defeat the contract and then put his plan into action, even though this meant defying the old ruff-and-discard bugaboo.

Tomorrow: Bidding quiz.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY FOR THURSDAY, NOV. 1, 2018:

This year you have too much energy at times to contain. Sometimes you find that you get annoyed or angry with those who are less enthusiastic than you are. Your ability to get down to the basics remains high. If you are single, you could stumble into a passionate relationship that has many highs and lows. It's possible that you might choose not to be involved because of the intensity. If you are attached, you might fight more with your sweetie. Nevertheless, you will kiss and make up more often. LEO often gives you helpful advice.

ARIES (MARCH 21-APRIL 19) You might not intend to hit the extremes you could reach today. Perhaps you have been holding in your feelings for too long. You will find that your irritation builds. Try to discharge negative energy before the problem becomes bigger.

TAURUS (APRIL 20-MAY 20) You could be in a situation where you must deal with several difficult people, and might feel as if you have no other option. Someone close to you has been extraordinarily difficult for several months. Deal with this issue now.

GEMINI (MAY 21-JUNE 20) You could feel overwhelmed, as someone insists on approaching you and clearing the air. You might have difficulty staying calm when dealing with this person, as he or she knows how to get under your skin. Try to work through your intense feelings.

CANCER (JUNE 21-JULY 22) You might have your hands full dealing with a loved one over an issue that involves both of you. Try not to get triggered. If you do, recognize what in you gets charged that way and why. You will find one-on-one relating to be more successful at present.

LEO (JULY 23-AUG. 22) You might hit a disagreement and find that you are a lot angrier than you had thought. Try to tame your tone and your words, because the other party has similar feelings. Later in the day, you are more likely to have a reasonable conversation to resolve a problem.

VIRGO (AUG. 23-SEPT. 22)

JACQUELINE BIGAR

BIGAR'S STARS

22) Your nerves could be fried from having too much to do. More and more to-dos are dumped on your plate. Be willing to say "no" to the next few requests. Consider canceling some appointments or engagements.

LIBRA (SEPT. 23-OCT. 22) Your friends surround you. You are likely to join them whenever your pace slows down, perhaps after several meetings. You have a lot on your mind. Relaxing with a friend seems to help you let go of recent stress.

SCORPIO (OCT. 23-NOV. 21) You have a way and a style about you that draws many people toward you. Today, however -- whether intentionally or not -- you could trigger quite a disagreement, especially if someone you are supposed to respect becomes difficult.

SAGITTARIUS (NOV. 22-DEC. 21) You could feel unusually drained and exhausted because of a recent heavy conversation that started out as an argument. You certainly will have a lot to think about over the next few days. You see yourself and someone else quite differently as a result.

CAPRICORN (DEC. 22-JAN. 19) Connect with someone you have a lot of dealings with, especially those involving money. You might want to divulge some private information about a financial matter. You appreciate the diversity of opinions that surround you.

AQUARIUS (JAN. 20-FEB. 18) You need to take charge of your mood. The tension between you and a close friend could be very strong, if you are not careful. Try to detach and not get triggered. You will find the other parties involved to be more responsive if you do that.

PISCES (FEB. 19-MARCH 20) Reach out to someone at a distance or an expert who is always full of great ideas. Decide to brainstorm with this person as long as you both deem necessary. The less you discuss your anger or resentment for the moment, the better.
