Gun-seizure laws grow in popularity

By Ryan J. Foley
The Associated Press

In the year since the deadly mass shooting at a Florida high school, more and more states have passed laws making it easier to take guns away from people who may be suicidal or bent on violence against others, and courts are issuing an unprecedented number of seizure orders across the country.

Supporters say these “red flag” laws are among the most promising tools to reduce the nearly 40,000 suicides and homicides by firearm each year in the U.S. Gun advocates, though, say such measures undermine their constitutional rights and can result in people being stripped of their weapons on false or vindictive accusations.

Nine states have passed laws over the past year allowing police or household members to seek court orders requiring people deemed threatening to temporarily surrender their guns, bringing the total to 14. Several more are likely to follow in the months ahead.

More than 1,700 orders allowing guns to be seized for weeks, months or up to a

Lake students playing role in attacking discipline problems with ‘restorative practices’

By Payne Ray
pray@dailycommercial.com

CLERMONT — A number of Lake schools have adopted a new policy for classroom management and discipline this year called restorative practices.

Windy Hill Middle teachers say it has generated a classroom culture that reduces time spent doling out discipline and allows students to stay engaged in lessons.

“This isn’t something just some students can do,” said Patrick Rotton, a sixth-grade teacher at the school.

Tara Hatch, Windy Hill Middle’s assistant principal and restorative practices coordinator, said it simply gives students more say in the classroom and invites students to hold each other accountable.

Hatch said Windy Hill uses the technique to solve disputes between students or faculty members, and in the classroom as a general learning tool.

Trump’s Year 3 aims for dramatic sequels

North Korea, border security talks are in the forefront once again as president heads into his third year in office

By Catherine Lucey and Jonathan Lemire
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As President Donald Trump prepares to meet North Korea’s Kim Jong Un for a second time, he’s out to replicate the suspenseful buildup, make-or-break stakes and far-flung rendezvous of their first encounter. The reality star American president will soon learn if the sequel, on this matter and many others, can compete with the original.

In his third year in office, Trump is starting to air some reruns.

Trump is headed into fresh negotiations with North Korea, is still pushing for his long-promised U.S.-Mexico border wall and is considering a new round of tax cuts. The focus on his greatest hits in part reflects Trump’s desire to fulfill campaign promises and energize voters for his 2020 re-election campaign. But it’s not without risks.

“The danger is the public starts recognizing this is Groundhog Day,” said presidential historian Douglas Brinkley. “You keep thinking there is a win and there is no win. It’s not clear Trump is scoring durable history points.”

With his reality TV background and instinctive sense of how to control a news cycle, Trump has long micromanaged the staging of his image, eager to project power and drama.

Those instincts were on full display during the recent scrap over his second State of the Union address. Trump rejected his aides’ suggestions that he deliver the address from an alternate site after House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., withdrew her invitation for him to speak at the Capitol during the government shutdown. Trump opted to wait for the real deal.

“There is no venue that can compete with the history, tradition and importance of the House Chamber,” he tweeted.

In his dealings with North Korea, both past and future, Trump has been intent on winning up excitement.

After months of trading escalating nuclear threats with the North, Trump memorably popped his head into the White House briefing room last March to hint at big news to come. Not long afterward, officials announced that a Trump-Kim meeting was in the offing.

From there, Trump teased dates and locations, threatened to cancel

ELKHART, IND. Court overturns conviction over hypnosis issue

A federal appeals court has thrown out a 1994 attempted murder conviction, finding that an Indiana prosecutor concealed evidence by not disclosing that the state's sole eyewitness underwent hypnosis to sharpen his memory before testifying at trial.

The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago announced the decision in Mack Sims' case on Feb. 1.

Sims was sentenced to 35 years after he was convicted in Elkhart County in the shooting of security guard Shane Carey. The prosecution's case relied on Carey identifying Sims as the shooter and had no physical evidence linking Sims to the attack.

ALBANY, N.Y. Civil rights group seeks action after strip search claims

A civil rights group representing families of four 12-year-old girls who claim they were strip searched for drugs in school is demanding an apology and other measures from an upstate New York school district.

The NAACP Legal Defense Fund sent a letter to the Binghamton City School District on Thursday. It says actions by a middle school principal and nurse on Jan. 15 violated the constitutional rights of the girls, who are black.

The district has said the girls had a medical evaluation but weren't strip searched. It has hired a law firm to investigate independently.

Gov. Andrew Cuomo has asked the state Education Department for a probe.

BEIRUT US-backed fighters launch final push to defeat IS in Syria

U.S.-backed and Kurdish-led Syrian forces said Saturday they have launched a final push to defeat the Islamic State group in the last tiny pocket the extremists hold in eastern Syria.

Syrian Democratic Forces spokesman Mustafa Bali tweeted that the offensive began Saturday after more than 20,000 civilians were evacuated from the IS-held area in the eastern province of Deir el-Zour. An SDF statement said the offensive was focused on the village of Baghouz.

The SDF, backed by U.S. air power, has driven IS from large swaths of territory it once controlled in northern and eastern Syria, confining the extremists to a small pocket of land near the border with Iraq.

TUNIS, TUNISIA 7 get life in prison for Tunisia's 2015 terror attacks

Tunisian authorities gave seven suspects life in prison and handed out other sentences Saturday in a trial for two 2015 attacks in Tunisia that killed 60 people, mainly tourists.

Samir Ben Amor, the lawyer for one of the 44 defendants, said the verdicts were handed down for the deadly attack against the country's famous Bardo Museum and a massacre at a popular seaside resort.

Other defendants received jail terms ranging from 16 years to six months, while the charges against 27 of the suspects were dismissed, according to Ben Amor.

Warren makes bid official

Senator grounds 2020 campaign in call to build 'an America that works for everyone.'

By Elana Schor
The Associated Press

LAWRENCE, Mass. — Democratic Sen. Elizabeth Warren made her bid for the presidency official on Saturday in this working-class city, grounding her 2020 campaign in a populist call to fight economic inequality and build "an America that works for everyone."

Warren delivered a sharp call for change at her presidential kickoff, decrying a "middle-class squeeze" that has left Americans crunched with "too little accountability for the rich, too little opportunity for everyone else." She and her backers hope that message can distinguish her in a crowded Democratic field and help her move past the controversy surrounding her past claims to Native American heritage.

Weaving specific policy prescriptions into her remarks, from Medicare for All to the elimination of Washington "lobbying as we know it," Warren avoided taking direct jabs at President Donald Trump. She aimed for a broader institutional shift instead, urging supporters to choose "a government that makes different choices, choices that reflect our values."

Trump "is not the cause of what's broken," Warren told an elated crowd without using the president's name. "He's just the latest - and most extreme - symptom of what's gone wrong in America."

In a tweet, Trump referenced the controversy over her Native American identity, once again using the insulting nickname he's given her.

"Today Elizabeth Warren, sometimes referred to by me as Pocahontas, joined the race for President," Trump tweeted. "Will she run as our first Native American presidential candidate, or has she decided that after 32 years, this is not playing so well anymore? See you on the campaign TRAIL, Liz!"

Warren announced her campaign in her home state of Massachusetts at a mill site where factory workers went on strike in the early 20th century, a fitting forum for the longtime consumer advocate to advance her platform.

Supporters turned out in below-freezing temperatures, many hoisting signs — "Win With Warren," one read. A Massachusetts bakery created "Persist" cookies for the event to honor the candidate's slogan, "Nevertheless, She Persisted," words first spoken in the Senate to rebuke her.

Warren's rollout rally was a potent motivator for longtime supporters such as Mo Malekzaly and Carlos Garcia, two longtime backers who attended her rally from Shrewsbury, Massachusetts.

The choice of Lawrence to start her campaign "shows who she's fighting for," Garcia said. Asked if fellow New Englander Sen. Bernie Sanders, a Vermont independent, could pose a serious threat to Warren in New Hampshire's critical primary should he get into the race, Garcia said Warren is "such an effective communicator that I think that people will respond to that very well."

Warren went straight from her kickoff to New Hampshire, home to the nation's first primary, where her campaign projected that 350 people turned out for an event in the city of Dover. She plans to spend Sunday in Iowa, where the leadoff caucuses will be the first test of candidates' viability.

Warren was the first high-profile Democrat to signal interest in running for the White House, forming an exploratory committee on New Year's Eve.

SEBRING Prosecutor seeking death penalty in bank massacre

A prosecutor says he plans to seek the death penalty for a man arrested in the fatal shootings of five women at a Florida bank last month.

State Attorney Brian Haas said at a news conference Friday that he had reached the "unquestionable conclusion" that he should seek the death penalty against 21-year-old Zephen Xaver.

Haas also said a grand jury in Highlands County this week had indicted Xaver on five counts of first-degree murder. Xaver will be arraigned later this month.

Four employees and a customer at the SunTrust bank were killed last month.

Sebring Police officials say the women were shot in an apparently random act of violence.

FORT LAUDERDALE Florida considers restrictions on shark fishing

Florida may crack down on shark fishing from the beach.

The South Florida Sun Sentinel reports the Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission will vote Feb. 20 on a plan to limit the practice and protect swimmers.

The proposal would ban spreading bloody fish parts in the water to attract sharks. Swimmers say the practice endangers them.

It would also require that fisherman get a shark permit, not haul sharks out of the water before being released and restrict the types of hooks used.

Fishermen say the restrictions will make shark fishing more dangerous because they remove the animals to safely take out the hooks before releasing them.

Proponents say the sharks would be better off physically if the hook is left in rather than pulled into the air.

SOUTHWEST RANCHES Police: Mercedes owner fires on repo men

A Mercedes-Benz owner is charged with attempted murder after police say he fired on two repo men who were towing his car.

The South Florida Sun Sentinel reports that the repo men were confronted by 57-year-old Juan Barquero early Thursday outside his suburban Fort Lauderdale home as they prepared to tow his Mercedes-Benz E350 sedan. The men told police Barquero had a gun and ordered them to lower his car.

The repo men jumped inside their truck, but when they started to pull away police say Barquero fired several shots at them, narrowly missing.

OCALA Authorities: Man killed in crash while fleeing police Authorities say a man was killed in a crash while trying to flee from police in a stolen SUV.

An Ocala police statement says 50-year-old Evan Ian Smith died Thursday night after flipping the vehicle on I-75.

Police say the SUV was reported stolen Thursday morning. The owner says Smith helped him move the vehicle last week and believed Smith kept the key.

Police say an officer spotted the SUV Thursday evening and tried to stop it. Officials say Smith kept driving, making his way to a highway with two officers and a supervisor following.

Police say the pursuit ended after several miles when Smith veered onto the shoulder. The SUV overturned, ejecting Smith.

'Sanctuary cities' on agenda

State Republicans want a ban even though there are none in the state

By Ana Ceballos
News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — The long-shot efforts by Florida Republicans to ban so-called sanctuary cities in the state may have a better chance this year, as key GOP lawmakers align to push legislation that Gov. Ron DeSantis has promised to sign into state law.

Gruters

of the Republican Party of Florida, who has made prohibiting local governments from acting as "sanctuaries" for undocumented immigrants a priority this legislative session.

"Not only is this the right thing to do from my party's perspective, but the right thing to do for Florida," Gruters, R-Sarasota, told The News Service of Florida on Friday. "This is my top priority."

Critics of the bill argue efforts to outlaw "sanctuary cities" have more to do with partisanship than with thwarting an existing problem. Currently, there are no counties or cities in Florida that act as "sanctuaries" for undocumented immigrants.

But as immigration policies fuel political division in the nation, Gruters is trying to marshal support in the state Senate, where similar

Citrus recovery money starts to flow

By Jim Turner
News Service Florida

TALLAHASSEE — Florida is starting to distribute federal disaster-relief money that was approved last year to help the citrus industry after Hurricane Irma caused massive damage to groves.

Jared Moskowitz, director of the Florida Division of Emergency Management, said Wednesday that the state recently awarded $14 million from a $343 million federal block grant for the industry and continues to process and accept applications from growers.

The distribution has moved forward after the end of the partial federal government shutdown. Moskowitz said the shutdown affected the ability of the state to process applications for the money.

"As long as the federal government stays open, I anticipate — and we have the applications in and filled out — we're going to turn them around very quickly," Moskowitz said.

He estimated that about 66 percent of applicants still have paperwork to complete.

Irma, which hit in September 2017, uprooted groves and caused flooding that affected citrus growers across the state. Florida's citrus industry accounted for at least $761 million of the more than $2.5 billion in agricultural losses from the storm.

Bundy's charm still polarizes

By Dan Sewell
The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — She kept her eyes on the dapper, wavy-haired man who smiled, winked and exuded self-confidence as the courtroom proceedings moved along.

"I don't know what it is he has, but he's fascinating," the teenage spectator explained to me at the time. "He's impressive. He just has a kind of magnetism."

It was that beguiling magnetism that investigators said helped make the object of her interest — Ted Bundy — one of the nation's most prolific serial killers, with at least 30 women and girls' deaths linked to him across multiple states in the late 1970s.

I reported the teenager's comments for The Associated Press' coverage of Bundy's 1979 murder trial in Miami, the first of two murder trials he would have in Florida. She was just one example of a regular courtroom backdrop of spellbound female spectators who were "attractive, young and single," as I wrote at the time, just like the women Bundy was on trial for bludgeoning and sexually assaulting.

"I haven't lost any sleep about the verdict," a relaxed, self-assured Bundy told me in a jail-cell interview a few days after the jury swiftly convicted him of murdering two Florida State University sorority sisters and assaulting three other young women in Tallahassee.

Nearly 40 years after that trial, and 30 years after his death in Florida's electric chair, Bundy's deadly charm continues to captivate and perplex. Some reactions to a new Netflix documentary series, "Conversations with a Killer: The Ted Bundy Tapes," prompted a Twitter appeal to viewers asking them to chill out about his "alleged hotness," adding there are many other attractive men featured on the streaming service who aren't convicted serial killers. Nearly simultaneously, a movie starring heartthrob Zac Efron as Bundy recently made its debut at the Sundance Film Festival with some criticisms that the film, shot last year in the Cincinnati area, glamorizes the killer. A Vanity Fair reviewer wrote that at times, "the movie feels almost sympathetic to Bundy."

Filmmaker Joe Berlinger, who is the director for both projects, acknowledged in a Salt Lake Tribune interview he had tackled "a very polarizing subject" with Bundy, but insisted there's no glorification. His movie hasn't yet been scheduled for wider release. Efron, by the way, isn't the first hunky actor to play Bundy — Mark Harmon starred in the 1986 TV miniseries "The Deliberate Stranger."

The July 1979 trial I helped cover was for Bundy's rampage on Jan. 15, 1978, in Tallahassee, Florida. Armed with an oak limb, Bundy left two Chi Omega sorority sisters dead and three other women injured. Less than a month later, on Feb. 9, he abducted, sexually assaulted and killed a 12-year-old girl in Lake City, Florida. She was Bundy's final victim in a gruesome series of attacks that claimed the lives of dozens of women in states from Washington to Florida.

During the trial, I interviewed other young women in Miami who talked about Bundy's handsome looks and expressive eyes, and also the chilling testimony about his crimes. A University of Washington psychiatry professor talked in a telephone interview about him giving women "Dracula shivers."

Jurors deliberated less than seven hours on July 24, 1979, before convicting Bundy, then 32, of the Chi Omega murders.

proposals have died in recent years.

Gruters said he intends to push the same language included in a similar House proposal he co-sponsored last year. His current bill (SB 168) is set for a hearing Monday in the Senate Judiciary Committee, the first of three committee stops.

Sen. Jose Javier Rodriguez, a Miami Democrat who serves as the committee's vice-chairman, said the chances of the proposal doing better this year are "obviously high," considering Gruters' prominent position as the head of the statewide GOP party.

"I think everybody understands that this is a campaign promise," Rodriguez said. "They are trying to convince part of their base that they are tough against undocumented immigrants even though there is no such thing as a sanctuary city in Florida."

While Gruters does not set the agenda for the Republican Party, his goal as party chairman is to win races in the future. With 2020 on the horizon, and President Donald Trump making immigration the cornerstone of his campaign, a headline immigration proposal passed by the Republican-controlled Legislature could provide a good selling point to voters.

Senate President Bill Galvano, R-Bradenton, said he believes the "sanctuary city" ban should be vetted but added the proposal is not a personal priority of his.

Under the proposed bill, police would be required to honor all requests made by U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement to hold undocumented immigrants, even though judges have repeatedly ruled such holds violate a person's constitutional rights.

The bill would also allow the governor to remove an elected official from office if they cast a vote in favor of a "sanctuary city" policy.

DeSantis, a Republican who is close to Trump, has been clear that he does not want to allow "sanctuary cities" in the state. During his inauguration speech in January, he told Floridians the state would "stand for the rule of law."

"We will stop incentivizing illegal immigration, which is unfair to our legal immigrants, promotes lawlessness and reduces wages for our blue collar workers," DeSantis said. Gruters, the head of the governor's party, is trying to deliver on DeSantis' pledge.

But it remains to be seen if the controversial bill will again be hard to swallow for some in the Florida Senate who either ideologically opposed the bill or were not in favor of sanctions. Gruters said it is his intention to keep the sanctions in the bill.

Galvano has encouraged Senate Judiciary Chairman David Simmons, R-Altamonte Springs, to work with Gruters to address concerns state senators have had in the past.

Last year, two Miami-Dade County Republicans, Sens. Anitere Flores and René García, voted against the proposal.

Due to term limits, García no longer serves in the Senate. But Flores is a member of the Senate Rules Committee, which could be the last Senate stop for the bill before a full floor vote.

the grant for Florida's citrus industry in February 2018. The plan directed money for new trees, grove rehabilitation, irrigation-system repairs and replacements, covering future economic losses and helping growers meet crop-insurance purchase requirements for the 2022 and 2023 seasons.

But before the federal shutdown began in December, and before Moskowitz, a former House member, began running the Division of Emergency Management last month, the state had only awarded $3 million from the block grant.

Along with the shutdown, a holdup in the distribution has been a state policy requiring project work sheets to first be "100 percent audited," Moskowitz said.

"I anticipate that over the next three to four weeks to have an additional program announcement in which we're going to change the auditing process so we can get more money out quicker," Moskowitz said. "That's not because we're going to have less accountability, it's because we're going to go back to doing what works, what the model is and what FEMA (the Federal Emergency Management Agency) does."

The auditing changes should also help speed money to areas of the eastern Panhandle impacted by Hurricane Michael in October and free up federal dollars tied to Hurricane Hermine, which hit Northwest Florida in 2016, and Hurricane Matthew, which caused damage as it ran along the East Coast.

"No other state in the country was doing that. FEMA doesn't do that," Moskowitz said of the state's auditing requirement. "It was a policy that was put in place for a different time, when we weren't responding to events. That policy no longer works."

Sen. Travis Hutson, R-St. Augustine, said governments in Northeast Florida have been waiting three years for promised federal reimbursements.

"I just want to make sure we're not forgotten in the process," Hutson said.

Northam: Virginia has 'deep wounds'

Embroided in scandal over blackface photo, governor pledges to pursue racial healing

By Alan Suderman
The Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — Virginia's governor pledged to work at healing the state's racial divide Saturday, even as calls mounted for the lieutenant governor to resign — capping an astonishing week that saw all three of the state's top elected officials embroiled in potentially career-ending scandals.

Two women have accused Lt. Gov. Justin Fairfax of sexual assault, and he has emphatically denied both allegations. After the second allegation was made Friday, Fairfax — who stands to become the state's second black governor if Gov. Ralph Northam resigns over a racist photo — was barraged with demands to step down from top Democrats, including a number of presidential hopefuls and most of Virginia's congressional delegation.

Meanwhile, Northam — now a year into his four-year term — announced his intention to stay at a Friday afternoon Cabinet meeting, according to a senior official who was not authorized to discuss the matter publicly and spoke on condition of anonymity.

In so doing, Northam defied practically the entire Democratic Party, which rose up against him after a racist photo on his 1984 medical school yearbook page surfaced and he acknowledged wearing blackface in the 1980s.

In his first interview since the scandal erupted, a chastened Northam told The Washington Post on Saturday that the uproar has pushed him to confront the state's deep and lingering divisions over race, as well as his own insensitivity. But he said that reflection has convinced him that, by remaining in office, he can work to resolve them.

"It's obvious from what happened this week that we still have a lot of work to do," Northam said in the interview, conducted at the governor's mansion. "There are still some very deep wounds in Virginia, and especially in the area of equity."

Northam said he planned to work for the rest of his term to address issues stemming from inequality, including improving access to health care, housing, and transportation. He also repeated his contention that he is not the one pictured on his yearbook page in blackface. But he could not explain how it wound up there, or why he had taken responsibility for it. "I overreacted," he said. "If I had it to do over again, I would step back and take a deep breath."

On Saturday, Northam made his first official public appearance since he denied being in the photo, attending the funeral for a state trooper killed in a shootout. But he made no public comments upon arriving in Chilhowie, four hours west of the tumult in Richmond.

Moments after Northam's Friday meeting with his Cabinet, a second woman went public with accusations against Fairfax. A lawyer for Meredith Watson, 39, said in a statement that Fairfax raped Watson 19 years ago while they were students at Duke University.

The statement said it was a "premeditated and aggressive" assault and that while Watson and Fairfax had been social friends, they were never involved romantically.

The lawyer, Nancy Erika Smith, said her team had statements from ex-classmates who said Watson "immediately" told friends Fairfax raped her. A public relations firm representing Watson provided The Associated Press with a 2016 email exchange with a female friend and 2017 text exchanges in which Watson said Fairfax had raped her.

Watson's representatives declined to provide further documentation and said their client would not talk to journalists.

Fairfax denied the new allegation, as he did the first, leveled earlier by Vanessa Tyson, a California college professor who said Fairfax forced her to perform oral sex on him at a Boston hotel in 2004.

"It is obvious that a vicious and coordinated smear campaign is being orchestrated against me," Fairfax said. "I will not resign."

Duke campus police have no criminal reports naming Fairfax, university spokesman Michael Schoenfeld said. Durham police spokesman Wil Glenn also said he couldn't find a report in the department's system on the 2000 allegation.

Many Democrats who had carefully withheld judgment after the first accusation against Fairfax, saying the matter needed to be investigated, immediately condemned him. A cascade of calls for Fairfax to resign began Friday evening, mirroring the timing of last week's calls for Northam to resign.

Top Democrats running for president in 2020 called for Fairfax's resignation, including Sens. Cory Booker of New Jersey, Kirsten Gillibrand of New York, and Elizabeth Warren of Massachusetts. Virginia's Democratic congressional delegation was split.

Party elders Sen. Mark Warner and Rep. Bobby Scott said Fairfax should resign if the allegations against him were true.

Other congressional Democrats made unqualified calls for Fairfax to resign.

The Virginia Black Legislative Caucus joined calls for Fairfax's departure. And a Democratic member of the state House, Del. Patrick Hope, said he intends to introduce articles of impeachment against Fairfax on Monday if Fairfax hasn't left by then.

On Saturday, Virginia's House of Delegates Speaker Kirk Cox joined the chorus calling for

Virginia Gov. Ralph Northam listens to a question during an interview at the Governor's Mansion, Saturday in Richmond, Va. [KATHERINE FREY/THE WASHINGTON POST VIA THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Fairfax's resignation. Cox — a Republican, and third in line for governor should Northam step down — said in a statement that Fairfax's ability to govern has been "permanently impaired" by the "multiple, serious credible allegations" of sexual assault.

noticeable difference is the semi-circular seating and the unique rules enacted by students to govern those circles.

Hatch said no two classes have the exact same rules, as students make a new set with each circle they join.

If someone breaks those rules, Hatch said, everyone stops to address the issue, either by the teacher switching seats around or the group talking things over.

In effect, it's a social contract between students that everyone agrees to hold one another accountable, she said.

Hatch and the school's principal, William Roberts, said the method has worked well.

Typically, Roberts said, the approach has been credited with reducing disciplinary incidents at schools that use it by around 3 to 6 percent a year.

But between January 2018 and 2019, after opening the school year at Windy Hill with restorative practice, they saw a reduction of 13 percent, he said.

When they do see an incident, they student body and faculty have often been able to resolve it without resorting to suspensions.

"We all know that if you're not here, you can't learn," Roberts said. So the goal has shifted from removing problems to "repairing the harm."

"Repairing the harm is a much greater tool (than suspension)," Hatch said.

She gave an example. "I had a student who was very angry at another student, and was really ready to fight that student," she said.

Apparently one student had made fun of the others' mother for visible scarring. She sat the students down together and had them talk it out in private.

The hurt student explained that his mother had been injured in a bad way, she said, and the aggressor realized then that he had really hit a raw nerve.

The students were able to talk through their differences, she said, and repair their relationship.

"I had two big boys crying in my office," she said of their continued conversation.

In the classroom, Windy Hill's teachers have adapted the trappings of restorative practice or big conversations on abstract topics and for day-to-day teachings.

Sixth-grade teacher Patrick Rotton led a lesson on participatory activism with his circle. Students passed around a toy wolf and talked about different ways to demonstrate their internal values in the external world.

"Community is one of our buzzwords in our class," said Jeff Threlfall, the school's college and career prep teacher. "Part of it is making sure that when you become an adult, you become a responsible adult in your community."

For his eighth-grade students, Threlfall had designed a lesson around respect and empathy, concepts he said are important for kids to come to grips with during their adolescence.

He said that part of his goal was making sure that students could understand each other and take that skill forward.

"We don't always understand what's going on with everyone else," he said.

In another classroom, sixth-grade social studies teacher Brian Williams used his restorative circle to review a lesson they took on Chinese Emperor Qin Shi Huang.

A student, acting in the role as Qin, stood before the class and led the review on both the positives and negatives of Qin's rule.

She passed around a basketball that Williams uses to give the floor to speakers and the students talked back and forth about Qin under Williams' guidance.

He said it was good to let the students take the lead when he could.

"The more involved the students are the more buy-in I'll get," he said.

Rotton used his circle to lead a lesson on participatory activism, which used the circle to talk about the language of activism and the ways in which people can participate in making changes to their community.

Teachers also credited the use of restorative practices with a big difference in how students interact at the school.

Threlfall said that he's seen his English language learners, who largely didn't speak up in previous classroom arrangements, begin to open up more to the class as he's begun using his circle for classroom discussions.

Jimmy Phillips, the school's athletic director, said he's seen the school's athletic teams make large cultural shifts after focusing more on developing a community.

He said he's seen change among the boy's basketball team, in particular, where players are more concerned about the team than their own performance.

At a recent game, he said, the team had a healthy lead, and opted not to run up the score as some teams might.

Instead, the players and the coach opted to let less experienced players get some time on the court.

He said it showed maturity among the team's top players that he hadn't seen from previous teams.

Hopefully, he said, that will transfer to high school and develop those players into better leaders down the line.

Windy Hill is far from the only school implementing the practices.

Tavares Middle has started a youth court with the help of the school resource deputy to hold each other accountable in a student-driven justice system.

It's also in use at Mount Dora High School, where teachers have begun integrating it into regular lessons as well.

Leesburg High School introduced the concept into its faculty meetings, using it to quickly address conflicts between administration and teachers.

Among elementary schools, Beverly Shores and Pine Ridge Elementary have both begun to integrate the practices.

Lake County Schools has also prepared and distributed educational materials on the practices to schools, including a small booklet and a cheat sheet on what the practices are, how to implement them, and how to use them to foster empathy in students.

At a Jan. 28 School Board meeting, it was suggested the practices could be a path toward reducing discipline county-wide.

Since Lake reported high numbers of in- and out-of-school suspensions at multiple schools in 2018, including for more than half the students at Oak Park Middle, it's possible new approaches to discipline and student engagement could make a difference in the future.

it — and did so at one point — before signing off on the plan for the historic meeting in Singapore last June.

Trump was delighted that the first summit received round-the-clock cable TV coverage for days, something he had hoped to repeat last summer when he met with Russia's Vladimir Putin in Helsinki, according to two Republicans close to the White House not authorized to speak publicly about private matters. But Trump saw the Putin coverage take a negative turn after he refused to side with U.S. intelligence agencies over the Russian president in a post-summit news conference.

This time, Trump has again tried to draw out the suspense, teasing the possibility of another meeting with Kim for months and waxing poetic about his relationship with the authoritarian leader. But Trump has glossed over the fact that the first meeting produced little in the way of tangible results toward denuclearization, instead stressing that North Korea's threats have fallen off and suggesting there is an opportunity for further progress.

Aides counseled the president that a second summit would probably not carry the same drama as the first, and needed more concrete results, but Trump urged them to push forward before deciding to announce it during this past week's State of the Union address. He insisted to advisers that the Vietnam summit would still be must-see TV, and told one confidant that the idea of "good vs. evil" would be irresistible.

Brinkley noted there is precedent for requiring more than one summit to make a deal, citing the repeated arms control meetings between the United States and the Soviet Union during the Cold War. But he argued that those were a better investment, given that "Russia is a great power" while "North Korea is a rogue actor."

As for other White House sequels, Trump would be happy to produce Tax Cut 2.0. He oversaw a massive tax cut at the end of 2017 and teased the possibility of another in the runup to the 2018 midterm elections. Economic adviser Larry Kudlow pushed back on the suggestion that it was simply a pre-election ploy as he spoke to reporters at the White House this past week.

"We're kicking it around," said Kudlow. "We're looking at a couple of very interesting things that may wind up surprising folks."

You can also count on Trump to continue the tough immigration rhetoric that defined his campaign and became a central part of his midterm election push. He forced the government into a 35-day partial shutdown over his demand to fund a wall along the U.S.-Mexico border and views his immigration efforts as key to his re-election campaign.

Brinkley said of Trump's repeat performances: "He's a child of the 1970s with boxing matches. It's like the rematch with Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier."

LAWS

year were issued in 2018 by the courts after they determined the individuals were a threat to themselves or others, according to data from several states obtained by The Associated Press. The actual number is probably much higher since the data was incomplete and didn't include California.

The laws gained momentum after it was learned that the young man accused in the Florida attack, Nikolas Cruz, was widely known to be mentally troubled yet had access to weapons, including the assault-style rifle used to kill 17 students and staff members last Valentine's Day at Parkland's Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School.

"Parkland would never have happened if Florida had a red flag law," Linda Beigel Schulman said during a recent news conference with New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo, who is expected to sign his state's new law any day. Her son, Scott Beigel, was a teacher and coach killed during the Parkland attack.

Florida passed a red flag law as part of a gun-control package in the wake of the shooting. Since then, Delaware, Illinois, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Vermont have adopted variations. California, Connecticut, Indiana, Oregon and Washington already had similar laws.

Several states are debating them this year, including New Mexico, where two students were killed in a school shooting in December 2017.

Mike Heal, police chief in the town of Aztec, responded to the shooting at the local high school and testified in support of the red flag proposal, saying, "I know I cannot keep everyone safe, but give me the tools to try."

The laws are being invoked frequently in many of the states that have them.

Authorities in Maryland granted more than 300 petitions to temporarily disarm individuals in the three months after the state's law went into effect Oct. 1. Montgomery County Sheriff Darren Popkin said the cases included four "significant" threats of school shootings, and that a majority of the people who were subjects of the orders were suffering from mental health crises.

"These orders are not only being issued appropriately, they are saving lives," Popkin told lawmakers last month.

In Vermont, a prosecutor obtained an order to strip gun rights from a teenager released from jail after being accused of plotting a school shooting.

Florida courts granted more than 1,000 orders in the first nine months of its new law. Broward County, which includes Parkland, has been at the forefront, accounting for roughly 15 percent of cases statewide.

Among the first people subjected to the law was Cruz's younger brother, who authorities said was showing signs of violence after allegedly trespassing at the high school after the shooting. In another case, Florida authorities took dozens of firearms from a bailiff accused of threatening other courthouse employees.

Connecticut has the nation's longest-standing red flag law, which went into effect in 1999 after a mass shooting at the state lottery office. Authorities there say new awareness of the law contributed to a spike in 2018 in warrants issued to take away weapons — 268, the highest total on record, according to court data.

The rise reflects the more aggressive posture police have adopted since the 2012 mass shooting at Sandy Hook Elementary School in Newtown and other attacks.

One study found that the Connecticut law reduced gun suicides by more than 10 percent in recent years and that a similar law in Indiana led to a 7.5 percent drop.

"It really gives us a unique opportunity as prosecutors to come in before the violence has occurred. Often we are tackling it on the other side," said Kimberly Wyatt, a prosecutor in King County, Washington, who has been seeking one or two such orders per week in and around Seattle.

who has corralled his grief into a mission to remove certain local officials from office, who gets an invite from the former governor to the president's State of the Union address. Today, Pollack's name is synonymous with Parkland.

Home is this camper that sits on a lot across from his temple, Chabad of Coral Springs. He lives here with his wife, Dr. Julie Phillips Pollack, an emergency room physician, and their 2-year-old Belgian Malinois, Sonny. The wheels on the 4-by-4 truck that anchors their Eagle Cap camper home are a symbol of Pollack's every intention to escape Broward County, its "unethical Democrat" politicians and the "sick, demented" people who support them.

The camper is ready to go. "But I can't seem to get anywhere because I'm always back here, fighting these people," says Pollack. "It's a battle. I feel I have this weight on my shoulders."

Yes, today may be different, but it is also the same, says Pollack. While a community struck with the horror of last year's mass shooting at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School will mark the Feb. 14 anniversary with memorials, Pollack says the day will be indistinguishable from any other of the past year. His 18-year-old daughter Meadow, the youngest of Pollack's three children, was one of 17 people massacred that day, killed shortly after accused shooter Nikolas Cruz took an Uber to campus, walked through an unlocked gate with a rifle bag and rampaged through the halls.

"Every day is the same day," says Pollack. "Every day is February 14th. I don't need February 14th to remind me that's the day my daughter was murdered. Every day, I live it."

A photograph of Meadow Pollack, 17, at a candlelight vigil in Parkland the day after the shooting at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School. [GREG LOVETT/GATEHOUSE MEDIA]

At 53, Pollack is the portrait of a man in mourning. He is seated on a camping chair in a somber navy jacket, gray dress slacks and black dress shoes, a reserved look interrupted only by the absence of socks. During a wide-ranging conversation, he doesn't smile once.

"I haven't smiled since my daughter was murdered. I just can't do it. You can't enjoy yourself anymore in life," he says, gazing across the rocky lot. "And it was the most avoidable shooting in the country's history. Everyone has been affected by this and they'll never be the same."

'They killed my daughter; I have to expose these people'

But Pollack is more than a grieving father. He's a grieving father with a plan — and an enemies list.

"I'm a changed guy. They killed my daughter," he says. "I have to expose these people first before I can get any sort of peace in my life. And I'm doing it. One by one, I'm going to finish these people off."

The top spot on Pollack's must-go list: Broward Superintendent Robert Runcie. Pollack accuses the schools chief of lenient policies to the events of Feb. 14, 2018.

It was a culture of leniency that allowed a campus monitor named Andrew Medina to be in charge of the school's gate that afternoon, says Pollack. Four months before the shooting, a schools disciplinary committee had recommended firing the 39-year-old Medina after complaints of sexual harassment from students, but the district's human resources chief gave him a three-day suspension instead.

After the shooting, the campus monitor, who was also an assistant baseball coach, told investigators he had left the gate unlocked and unattended. He said he recognized the gunman who was "beelining" toward a building filled with hundreds of students, but didn't know his name. "Crazy Boy" is how Medina referred to Cruz, a former student expelled a year earlier for threatening behavior.

"I knew who the kid was because we had a meeting about him last year and we said, 'If there's gonna be anybody who's gonna come to this school and shoot this school up, it's gonna be that kid,'" Medina told Broward Sheriff's Office detectives in a videotaped interview.

But the unarmed monitor didn't call a "Code Red," the call that would have alerted teachers and school authorities to lock classroom doors. By the time the first Code Red call came that day, investigators found, the gunman had shot 24 people.

Meadow, a high school senior who planned to attend Lynn University and dreamed of being a lawyer, was shot nine times, four times as she tried to escape into a classroom and five more times as she made a futile attempt to shield another student. It was only later that her father would learn Meadow was one of the students who had accused Medina of harassment. Pollack also would learn a second campus monitor, David Taylor, hid in a janitor's closet during the shooting.

"What kills me is if they would have done their jobs, you might have had someone at the gate with a half a brain," says Pollack. "My dog, Sonny, would have done a better job at the gate, of not letting that kid walk in with a rifle bag. Can you imagine living with that? That they let him work at the gate, after he was found guilty of harassing the girls and one of the girls was my daughter? And I didn't even know? That's something that kills me. The guy shouldn't have been at the gate, and they let that idiot at the gate."

Pollack says he was stunned to learn the campus monitors were allowed to return to their jobs after the massacre. "No one lost their jobs for leaving the gates open. That would have been something. That would have been holding people accountable," he says.

'Not holding people accountable a form of letting evil prosper'

Pollack's rabbi, Avraham Friedman, likens Pollack's quest for justice to a passage in the Book of Deuteronomy that calls for eradicating evil.

"Not holding people or systems accountable is a form of letting evil prosper. By eradicating the system that allows something so tragic to happen, you can bring goodness and kindness in the world," says the rabbi. "Obviously the gunman holds the most responsibility, end of story. But having said that, in (Pollack's) belief, certain people dropped the ball. If the system allows for innocent people to be murdered in such a horrendous way, there's no ambiguity over here — the system is evil."

That said, Pollack had no intention of getting involved in politics, says the rabbi.

What he does endorse is allowing guns at school — in well-trained hands.

"The average shooting takes four minutes. No one can get there in time to save the kids," says Pollack, who favors an extensive, tactical program that would train teachers and other school employees on the use of firearms in an active shooter situation. "Liberals go nuts and say, 'Oh, we're gonna arm teachers.' It's not about arming teachers. It's voluntary."

He believes such a training program should be open to all school personnel, "I don't care if it's the lunch lady," if they can pass the rigorous course.

"I think it's a wonderful idea. Whoever doesn't think it's wonderful, I wish they'd put themselves in my daughter's shoes when she was on that third floor, waiting for someone to save her after she was already shot four times, praying for her life that someone was there to help her. And no one was there," he says. "So if a teacher might have been there — a teacher, a janitor, a lunch lady, a gym teacher — would have been trained and would have been in that building, they could have stopped him and saved my daughter's life."

Doctor urges seniors to carry medical alert device

Seniors snap up new medical alert device that comes with no monthly bills

People don't always do what their doctor says, but when renowned emergency room physician, Dr. Philip B. Howren says every senior should have a medical alert device, you better listen up.

"Seniors are just one fall away from being put in a nursing home," Dr. Howren said. With a medical alert device, seniors are never alone. So it keeps them living independently in their own home. That's why seniors and their family members are snapping up a sleek new medical alert device that comes with no monthly bills ever," he said.

Many seniors refuse to wear old style help buttons because they make them look old. But even worse, those medical alert systems come with monthly bills.

To solve these problems Universal Physicians, a U.S. company went to work to develop a new, modern, state-of-the-art medical alert device. It's called "FastHelp™" and it instantly connects you to free unlimited nationwide help with no contracts, no deposits and no monthly bills ever.

"This slick new little device is designed to look like the pagers doctors wear every day. Seniors love them, because it actually makes them look important, not old," Dr. Howren said.

FastHelp is expected to hit store shelves later this year. But special newspaper promotional giveaways are slated for seniors in select areas. ■

■ NO MONTHLY BILLS: "My wife had an old style help button that came with hefty bills every month and she was embarrassed to wear it because it made her look old," said Frank McDonald, Canton, Ohio. Now, we both have FastHelp™, the sleek new medical alert device that our grandkids say makes us look 'cool' not old," he said. With FastHelp, seniors never have to worry about being alone and the best part is there are no monthly bills ever.

Seniors born before 1956 get new medical alert device with no monthly bills ever

It's just what seniors have been waiting for; a sleek new medical alert device with no contracts, no deposits and no monthly bills that instantly connects you to free unlimited nationwide help with just the push of a button for a one-time $149 price tag that's a real steal after today's one hundred-fifty dollar instant rebate

The phone lines are ringing off the hook.

That's because for seniors born before 1956, it's a deal too good to pass up.

Starting at precisely 8:30am this morning the Pre-Store Release begins for the World's first-ever medical alert device that comes with the exclusive FastHelp™ One-Touch E 911 Button that instantly connects you to free unlimited nationwide help with no contracts, no deposits and no monthly bills ever.

"It's not like old style monitored help buttons that make you talk to a call center and only work when you're at home and come with hefty bills every month. FastHelp comes with state-of-the-art cellular embedded technology. That means it works at home or anywhere, anytime cell service is available whether you're out watering the garden, driving in a car, at church or even hundreds of miles away on a tour or at a casino. You are never alone. With just a single push of the One-Touch E Button you get instantly connected to free unlimited help nationwide with no monthly bills ever," said Jack Lawrence, Executive Director of Product Development for U.S. based Universal Physicians.

"We've never seen anything like it. Consumers absolutely love the sleek new modern design and most of all, the instant rebate that practically pays for it and no monthly bills ever," Lawrence said.

FastHelp is the sleek new medical alert device with the rarest of combinations: a quality, high-tech engineered device that's also an extremely great value because there are no monthly bills ever.

Better still, it comes with no contracts, no deposits and no monthly bills ever – which makes FastHelp a great choice for seniors, students and professionals because it connects to the vast available nationwide network of cellular towers for free.

And here's the best part. All those who already have an old style monitored medical alert button can immediately eliminate those monthly bills, which is why Universal Physicians is widely advertising this announcement nationwide.

"So if you've ever felt a medical alert device was too complicated or expensive, you'll want to get FastHelp, the sleek new medical alert device with no monthly bills," said Lawrence.

The medical alert device slugfest was dominated by two main combatants who both offer old style monitored help buttons that require professional installation of a home telephone land line, expensive base station equipment and a hefty bill every month. But now Universal Physicians, the U.S. based heavyweight, just delivered a knockout blow sending the top rated contenders to the mat with the unveiling of FastHelp. It's the sleek new cellular embedded medical alert device that cuts out the middleman by instantly connecting you directly to highly trained 911 operators all across the U.S. There's absolutely nothing to hook-up or install. You don't need a land line and you don't need a cell phone. Everything is done for you.

"FastHelp is the World's first-ever medical alert device that makes you look important, not old. Old style monitored help buttons you wear around your neck are the equivalent of a horse and buggy," Lawrence says. "It's just outdated."

Nearly 1.8 million seniors fall every year and spend more than 12 hours lying on the floor helpless and all alone with no help.

■ FLYING OUT THE DOOR: Trucks are being loaded with thousands of new medical alert devices called FastHelp. They are now being delivered to lucky seniors who call the National Rebate Center Hotline today. Everyone is calling to get FastHelp, the sleek new medical alert device because it instantly connects you to free unlimited nationwide help with no contracts, no deposits and no monthly bills ever.

But seniors who fall and get immediate help are nine times more likely to avoid getting sent to a nursing home and get to STAY living in their own home independently.

Yet millions of seniors are still risking their safety by not having a medical alert device. That's because seniors just can't afford to pay the monthly bills that come with old style medical alert devices.

That's why seniors born before 1956 are rushing to cash in the whopping $150 instant rebate before the 2 day deadline ends.

So there's no need to wait for FastHelp to hit store shelves later this year because seniors born before 1956 can get it now just by using the $150 instant rebate coupon printed in today's newspaper before the 2-day deadline ends. If lines are busy keep trying, all calls will be answered. ■

HOW TO GET IT:

► IF BORN BEFORE 1956: Use the rebate coupon below and call this Toll-Free Hotline: 1-866-211-7349 EXT. HELP580

► IF BORN AFTER 1956: You cannot use the rebate coupon below and must pay $299 Call: 1-866-330-6586 EXT. HELP580

THE BOTTOM LINE: You don't need to shop around. We've done all the leg work, this deal is too good to pass up. FastHelp with the $150 instant rebate is a real steal at just $149 and shipping and there are no monthly bills ever.

PROS: It's the World's first ever medical alert device that comes with the exclusive FastHelp One-Touch E 911 Button that instantly connects you to free unlimited nationwide help with no contracts, no deposits and no monthly bills ever. It's quickly becoming a top pick with consumers because it saves you a ton of money and instantly connects you to one of the largest cellular networks everywhere cell service is available for free making this deal irresistible. Plus it's the only medical alert device that makes seniors look important, not old.

CONS: Consumers can't get FastHelp in stores until later this year. That's why it's so important for seniors born before 1956 to call the National Rebate Center Hotline within the next 2 days. For those who miss that deadline, the sleek little medical alert device will set you back over three hundred bucks.

Time for Sabatini to grow up

Freshman state Rep. Anthony Sabatini has racked up a number of controversies in his very brief political career, all of his own making and many apparently designed to accomplish little more than to draw attention to himself.

Two years ago, as much of the nation grappled — sometimes violently — with the question of whether Confederate monuments should remain in public places of honor, Sabatini rushed with childish gusto into the fight with a silly Facebook post inviting communities everywhere to send Eustis their unwanted monuments.

He also took a kind of juvenile pleasure in antagonizing his fellow members of the Eustis City Commission with name-calling on social media. He likes to refer to those who disagree with him as “far-left liberals,” whether they are or not, simply because it worked for his political idol, Donald Trump, and it gets a rise of his coterie of friends and supporters. And he once took to Facebook to try to rally citizens to a Sept. 21, 2017, City Commission meeting to oppose “the LARGEST TAX INCREASE (capitals are his, for emphasis) in the city’s history.” Except, the City Commission proposed nothing of the sort. In fact, it didn’t propose raising taxes at all. It was pure political theater by a novice politician who either lacks a fundamental understanding of government and finance, or does understand it but decided to deceive for political gain anyway.

But before his term on the Eustis Commission was even finished, he quit to run for the Florida House, pretending to move to Howey-in-the-Hills so he could run in a bright red district where a Republican couldn’t lose even if he was caught holding hands with Hillary Clinton.

Unrepentant, he carried his antics to Tallahassee. In recent months, he has posted to social media a photo of himself wearing a Donald Trump mask while standing in front of a Mount Dora restaurant where the celebrity chef had declined an invitation to cook at Trump’s Mar a Lago resort. And after he proposed legislation prohibiting Florida communities from banning plastic drinking straws, he posted several photos of himself to his official state Facebook page drinking coffee and wine through straws, showing again that he still embraces the class clown reputation he carried through high school.

That same page features a photo of him and a constituent meeting. On the table in front of them is a mug emblazoned with, “What would Nixon do?”

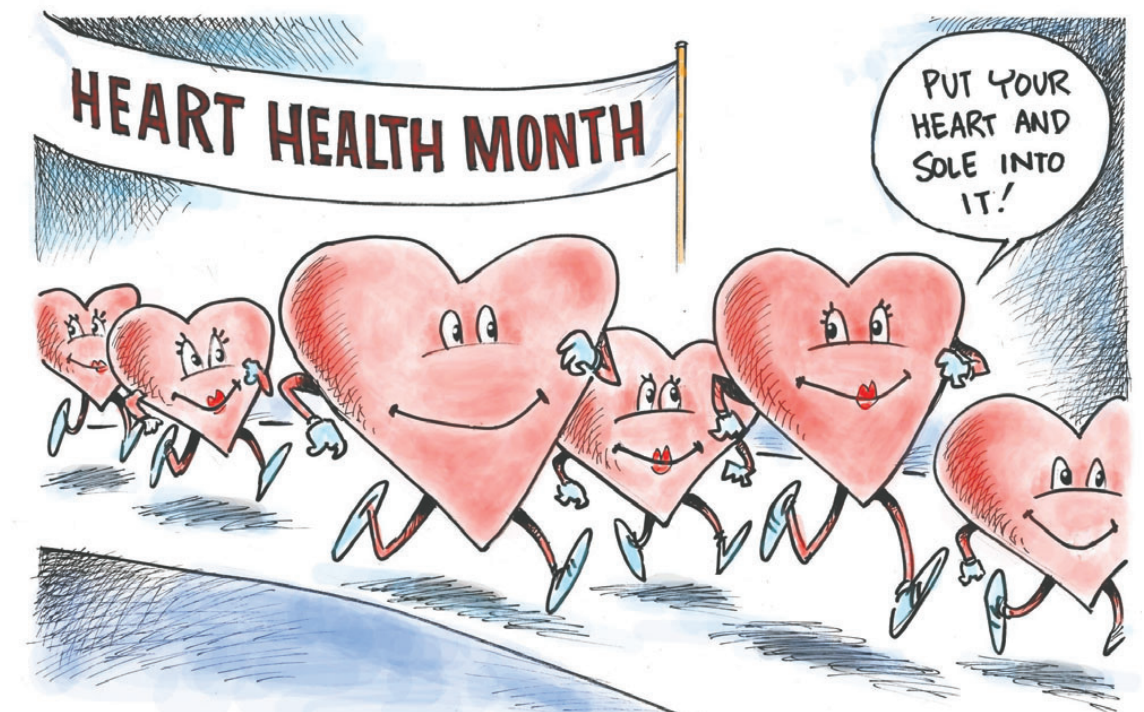

The answer, Anthony, is Nixon would have been impeached by Congress and perhaps even faced criminal prosecution if he hadn’t resigned in disgrace.

Today, Sabatini is shrouded in fresh, new scandal. Two racially insensitive photos have emerged of him from his high school days. In one he’s wearing black face. In the other, he’s dressed as a stereotypical Mexican with a bushy mustache, a unibrow and a straw hat.

Florida Democrats are calling for his resignation. It’s unlikely that will occur. We’re guessing the public will give him a pass on this because he was, after all, 14 and 16 when these two photos were taken, and most people wouldn’t want to be judged as adults for missteps they made as teens.

Commissioners need enlightened on Green Swamp

Semantics! When doctors say a situation is critical, we know it is serious. When state government asserts that an area is of critical concern, county government counters, yes ... but how many Planned Unit Developments can we squeeze into the area to keep developers happy?

In 1979 the Green Swamp was designated as “an area of critical concern” and subject to limits on population density and environmental impact. The swamp is important for hydrology, climate control, ecotourism, quality of life and even salt water intrusion through a trickle down process. Florida issued a statute to protect this area which affected many counties in different ways.

For Lake County Commissioners in 2019, the seriousness of this issue is lost in translation. Their treatment of the Green Swamp runs the gamut from good intentions to laissez faire to incompetence. Just when commissioners seem to get a handle on the situation, an election rolls by and the cycle repeats. Is there anyone who can enlighten Lake County Commissioners on the Green Swamp and the seriousness of the word critical? A review of the last 5 years of county approvals in the swamp could have the state of Florida asking some serious questions.

We, the people of the Green Swamp, are held to standards of 5 and 10 acres per homestead. Developers are not held to the same standards because commissioners factor “conservation areas” (aka unusable swamp) into the equation. How do you define discrimination?

In seeking to protect large landowners’ rights to sell out to development, the County Commission green lights proposals calling into question Florida Administrative Code as well as the spirit of the law.

The situation is indeed critical.

Susan Knapp, Clermont

Ashamed to be an American?

I saw at least two of Ms. McClelland’s letters. I did not see Mr. Beary’s letter but anyone who would say they were ashamed to be an American should not be one.

As a retired member of the U.S. Army, a patriot and a proud American who is aware of the sacrifices family and friends pay to be blessed to live here, I have a very simple solution for her.

The U.S. welcomes those seeking asylum, who respect our laws and enter lawfully.

Considering that “We the People” pay the cost of trying to control the illegal immigrants, we should have a voice and demand that they complete the proper process. Ellis Island was part of that process for more than 60 years where 12 million people entered the country.

Since 2000, more than 37 million legal migrants have entered the U.S. With that many, can we actually afford 20 million illegals?

By the way, the people who were tear-gassed at the border brought that upon themselves. McClelland mentioned treating them with respect and dignity, such as the example the Democrats are showing our president.

Treat people like they treat you.

With all that Trump has accomplished — even with the out-of-control obstruction — he has done it without an apology tour and giving away billions of dollars to make himself feel better and massage his ego.

It is hard for Trump with the fake accusations and unwarranted vile, crude and biased names to stay on his mission.

He works hard to remember when you are up to your butt in alligators, it’s occasionally easy to forget that his objective was to drain the swamp.

Over my lifetime I have stated that I’m both pro-life and pro-choice.

On the pro-choice side, I believe that a woman has the sole choice of having sexual relations, her choice of partners, the time, place and frequency. She should also have the choice of a variety of contraceptives to prevent pregnancy. All of these are decisions which I believe are legitimate choices left to a woman.

Once the baby is born, or about to be born, her choices should end as now there is a viable life that

OPINIONFROM THE LEFTIt's time to reconsider the high cost of not knowingLeonard Pitts

The most dangerous place for black people to live is in white people's imagination.

So says comedian D.L. Hughley. And surely Tamir Rice and Trayvon Martin would concur if they were alive to do so.

But if white people's imagination is the most dangerous place for black people, it is also the most denigrating. Fresh but superfluous evidence of that arrived Friday in the form of a photo on the med school yearbook page of Virginia Gov. Ralph Northam. The image, taken in 1984, the year Northam turned 25, depicts two young men, one wearing a KKK hood, the other painted in blackface.

Northam, a Democrat who attends a black church, has trotted out shifting explanations. First he apologized, though he failed to say which man in the picture was him. Then he said neither man in the picture was him. Then he admitted that he did once darken his skin — to imitate Michael Jackson in a dance contest.

By now it's immaterial whether either man in the picture is Northam. The very fact that he thought it could have been, never mind that he admits to having worn blackface at least once, speaks to how ubiquitous this sort of thing — white people pretending themselves black — must have been in his circle.

Sadly enough, this story broke on the first day of Black History Month. Worse, it broke in the state where, 400 years ago this August, the first African slaves arrived.

Unfortunately slavery — like most every other aspect of black history — is something about which many of us, many white Americans in particular, know precious little. Too bad. If more white people had more than a fleeting grasp of that history, maybe Northam's career would not be in flames. Megyn Kelly might still be a talk show host, Michael Ertel might still be Florida's secretary of state and dozens of other white people might not have found themselves squirming in embarrassment, trying to explain why they would appropriate someone else's denigration as their costume.

Nor is this ignorance accidental. Rather, kids — white kids in particular — have been protected from knowing certain hard and ugly truths about their country. Granted, the teaching of history in general is in decline. But only the history of people of color has faced laws and policies attempting to strip it from classrooms. Only these stories have been bleached in textbooks to the point that people who were kidnapped from home and sold like horses can be referred to as "immigrants."

In banning ethnic studies classes a few years back, Arizona suggested they might "promote resentment toward a race or class of people." Translation: they might make white kids feel guilty about things their forebears did. To which theologian and rabbi Abraham Joshua Heschel provides the best rejoinder: "Few are guilty, but all are responsible."

Rather than accept that responsibility, America seeks to protect white kids from hurt feelings. In the process, it often inculcates in them an arrogant ignorance. From that, you get Ralph Northam, moonwalking with shoe polish on his face. From that, you get Donald Trump as president and a 17 percent spike in hate crimes his first year in office. From that, you get one woman dead in Charlottesville, nine other people slaughtered in Charleston.

So this Black History Month in the quadricentennial year of American slavery would be an excellent time for white people of conscience to reconsider the high cost of not knowing.

Yes, it's hard to live in their imagination. But living in their ignorance is no picnic, either.

Groveland Four — although, for what may be obvious reasons to some, took seventy years of consternation and reflection — we expect him to fight for those policies he has prioritized when the Florida legislature comes to session in March. Tribal and divisive politics should be left aside.

Let's start by reminding ourselves that early childhood education works and should be funded as such. Remember that receiving a living wage rises us all to a level of a better America. And always remember that mother earth gives us an abundance of clean water and that it is by our own hand, through greed, cruelty or ignorance, that it becomes polluted — let's fix that now.

Let's move offensively on commonsense gun safety and background checks. Let's never forget those Floridians who have lost their lives to gun violence and that the deaths at Orlando's Pulse nightclub are no different from any other grievous death, which leave us heartbroken for those lost souls.

We also expect to see less delay and more forward movement on the passage of Amendment 4, the voter restoration initiative which restored the voting rights of up to 1.5 million felons. Once a debt is paid, it's paid.

Let us remind ourselves that affordable healthcare makes for a more productive worker constituency, in mind and body. Let us not forget that pharmaceutical opioid addiction has now been outed as a greed-driven scheme planned with insolent impunity and now justice must be served.

Let's remember that infrastructure appears to be in a perpetual holding pattern.

To truly govern this great state we need a respectful nonpartisan approach that shows sincere across-the-aisle commitment — a pledge to allow Florida to move forward with an understanding to restore and stabilize what we all have in common. Injurious language must fall away. Bad faith policies and bad faith actors that produce those policies must work "in the sunshine." And as constituents, let's not just glance at a headline or a policy title, let's read the article and understand the policy so that advantage may not be taken.

As voters, we should push back on irrationality, push back on efforts to divide and tribalize, and most importantly push back on manufactured outrage to validate hate. Always be a critical voice if the times call for it.

Our Florida elected officials and representatives should understand and consider this; as a many faceted voting constituency, we eagerly accept the challenge.

FROM THE RIGHT*The state of what union?Cal Thomas

Eloquence is not a characteristic associated with President Donald Trump, but in his State of the Union address Tuesday night, the president not only rose to the occasion, he also delivered a message that was beautifully crafted by his speechwriters, a speech devoid of much of the divisive and combative language that has characterized his first two years in office. It was also well-delivered and, well-received, if not by every member of Congress, then by 76 percent of those who watched it, according to a CBS News instant poll.

Unfortunately, the likelihood of anything changing in Congress is less than nil. Democrats mostly sat on their hands, or smirked and shook their heads in response. The partisan divide that characterizes modern Washington is not likely to be bridged by a single speech. Most likely this was an address designed to enhance the president's re-election prospects. If that was the goal, it may have served him well.

Some viewers may have been surprised that the president directly and with conviction addressed the pro-life issue in light of New York's newly passed Reproductive Health Act, which protects a woman's access to abortion if Roe v. Wade is overturned, and Virginia Governor Ralph Northam's defense of a proposed bill that would, writes the Washington Times, "...allow abortion up until the moment of childbirth." Trump called on Congress to prohibit late-term abortions, which is not likely to happen, but kudos for him saying "all children, born and unborn, are made in the holy image of God."

The president listed the economic achievements of his administration, which Democrats will have a hard time rebutting. These include record numbers of people working, low unemployment numbers for minorities and high employment numbers for women, which even the white-clad female congressional Democrats were forced to applaud.

The president also challenged the growing appeal of socialism among young people. He said he was "alarmed" by it and pronounced, "We were born free and we will stay free," adding that we should "renew our resolve that America will never be a socialist country." Even Speaker Nancy Pelosi was forced to stand and applaud that line to the apparent consternation of "democratic" socialists Sen. Bernie Sanders (I-VT) and Rep. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez (D-NY).

The president's use of guests in the balcony was the most effective since Ronald Reagan inaugurated the practice. From a Holocaust survivor, to one of his liberators; from a first-responder hero of Pittsburgh's Tree of Life synagogue shooting, to a former inmate recently released under the new "first step" law, designed to address the disparity in sentencing of non-violent, non-dangerous offenders, the president chose life stories that no one could oppose.

There was his call to "choose greatness" over division and partisanship and to "move forward together," which again is unlikely to happen. If it doesn't and especially if there is another government shutdown mid-February, the president can say he tried and it was the opposition of Democrats that thwarted him. Whether such a charge would stick is anyone's guess. It all depends on whether he can rally, not only his base, which is a given, but that part of the country that is sick of the bickering and wants it to end.

People who tuned into the speech expecting some sort of drama obscuring substance — perhaps a staged walk-out, or protests from the balcony — were disappointed. Such a demonstration would not have served Democrats well. In the end, the dignity of the occasion, however fragile, was preserved.

"Victory is not winning for our party," said the president. "Victory is winning for our country." If only.

in line. It's always about keeping the power in the hands of the self-indulgent worthy few and selling it as "freedom" to the rest of us. And let's face it, billionaires always know what's best for us, right? "Old man wants to be rich, rich man wants to be king, and a king is not satisfied until he rules everything."

Because, you know, it all trickles down.

We should expect newly elected and first-term Gov. Ron DeSantis to serve the state as a complete entity. Having already found himself in the deep end of the pool with one major debacle under his belt — the quick resignation of Seminole County Supervisor of Elections Michael Ertel as Secretary of State.

Voters must ask themselves how confident they feel in DeSantis' ability to swim on his own merit, especially when he gets in over his head. Will he kowtow to billionaire donor dollars and alt right "radio nowhere" gibberish or will he step up to the plate with clear and concise insight and volition to support policies that show consideration for all Floridians.

Since our governor has set in motion 'forward-thinking ideas', such as pardoning the needs to be protected as described in our Declaration of Independence which states: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness."

I love the debate as to when "life" begins. To my knowledge, life exists in order for growth to occur be it inside the womb or after birth. Dead things don't grow. So from the moment of conception, when the cells begin to multiply, life exists.

If you are a Christian, perhaps the Bible — the King James version — furnishes the evidence of when life begins when the Lord spoke to Jeremiah, "Before I formed thee in the belly and knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee, and I ordained thee a prophet unto the nations." Jeremiah 1:5

The Lord made it quite clear that when Jeremiah was in his mother's womb he was a person and had a dedication mission in life after birth. I know of no place referenced in the Bible in which an unborn baby is suddenly given a "soul" after conception.

From conception, that baby has a soul that endures. Souls are not awarded in the 3rd, 5th or 8th month of pregnancy. If you are not a Christian, then this statement has no relevance. But if you are, how do you ignore or dismiss this key aspect of every human having a soul?

An aspect of abortion which has always bothered me is the argument about woman's reproductive rights. If any woman can become pregnant based upon her sole activity, then the reproductive rights argument would have validity. But she doesn't. It takes a man and a woman to produce a baby, it is not a unilateral effort on the woman's part. If a husband and wife jointly build a home, does the wife then have the unilateral right to sell that house without her husband's consent? A mutual decision on "life" is certainly more important than the sale of a home.

The gay community seems to lean heavily towards the Democrat Party. What will prove extremely interesting is what future medical discoveries may reveal in genetics. If in fact, science discovers that there is a gene that determines sexual orientation I would predict we would witness the greatest political shift overnight within the gay community.

If parents were told that their baby was gay what impact do you feel that knowledge would have on parents and the abortion of that child? I'm guessing that the abortion rate of gay babies would jump dramatically — a tragic but likely outcome.

The ardent supporters of abortion want no limitations. In Virginia, their governor talked about abortion options after a baby was born. I also wonder if the N.Y. senators will be in the room cheering as a baby is killed moments before delivery?

But while Sabatini and some of his friends claim Democrat calls for his resignation are just political posturing, a growing body of evidence supports a narrative that Sabatini is, at the least, grotesquely racially insensitive, and perhaps worse.

Consider his full-throated endorsement of Confederate monuments two years ago when he was on the Eustis City Commission, or the fact that he recently proposed a bill in the Legislature that would prohibit Florida cities from removing such monuments. Consider that when the Eustis City Commission voted to rename part of that city's Orange Avenue in honor of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Sabatini alone voted against it — then didn't show up with the other city dignitaries the day they unveiled the new street signs. He also skipped Martin Luther King Day festivities last month in Clermont, where his new district office is located.

It is time for Anthony Sabatini to shed his class clown antics and become an adult. In doing so, we hope he remembers that he represents people of various colors, cultures, faiths and beliefs. Pay attention to them and their needs rather than spending so much time drawing attention to yourself.

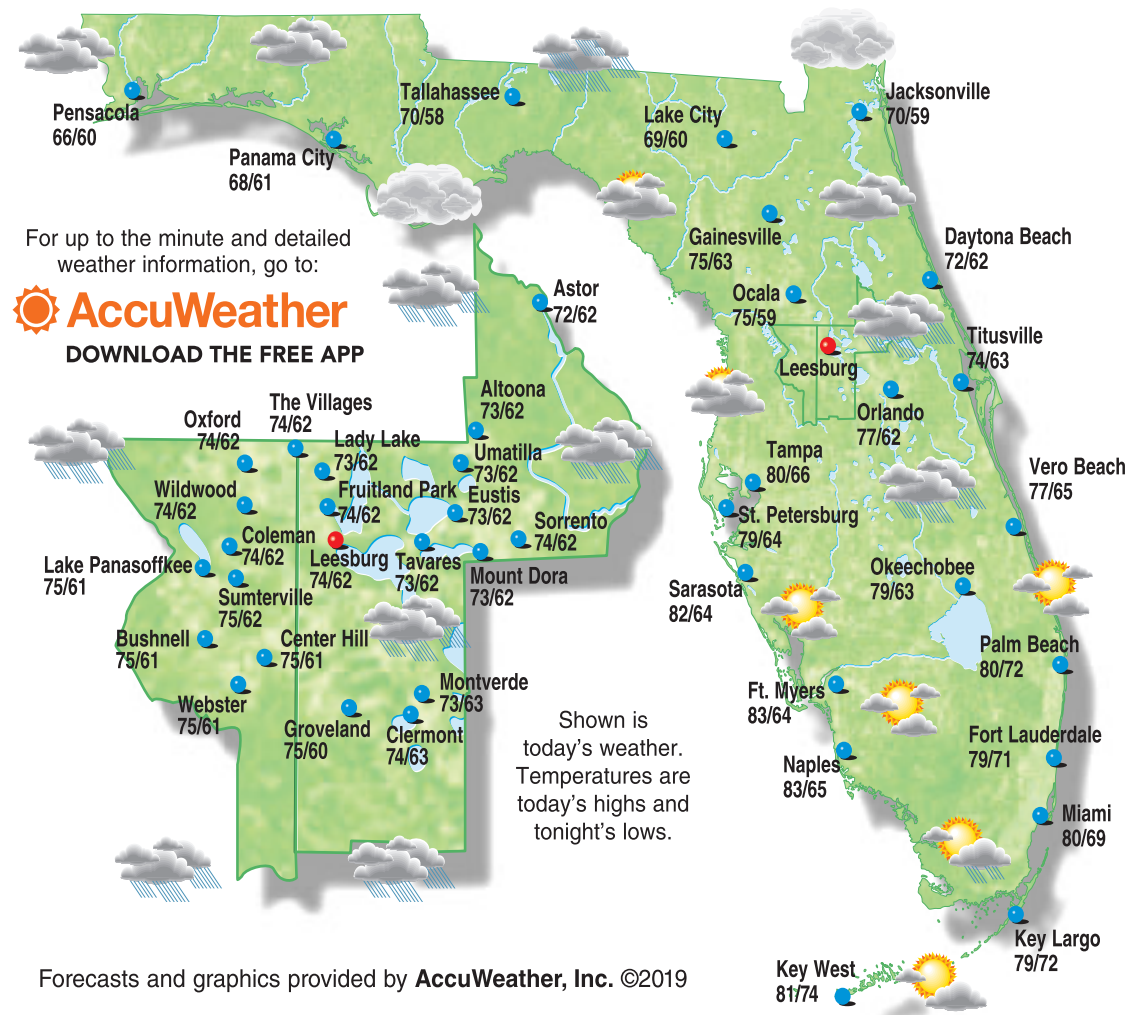

And, please, represent us all with dignity and Tionna took a leap of faith when cancer kept her from the gym.

At UF Health, she found a problem-solver who never gave up.

Dr. William Slayton and his team are expanding treatment options for children facing leukemia. He was able to give Tionna a bone marrow transplant from her sister, despite the girls only being a partial match. After 378 days in the hospital, Tionna is back where she belongs — doing cartwheels. And Dr. Slayton is back to searching for new solutions that move medicine forward.

Leesburg has 2 state champs and places 2nd as team

By Paul Jenkins
paul.jenkins@daily-commercial.com

The Leesburg High girls weightlifting team made plenty of history at the Class 1A state championships on Saturday afternoon at Arnold High School in Panama City Beach.

But the biggest piece of history eluded the Yellow Jackets by an agonizingly close margin.

Leesburg's Yasmine Heflin and Crystal Howison became the first girls from Lake County to earn state weightlifting titles, with Heflin crushing the competition in the 183-pound weight class and Howison taking a razor-thin victory in the 101-pound class.

And yet, there was some measure of disappointment for Leesburg as the Yellow Jackets finished one point behind the host school for the team title. Arnold won the championship with 23 points while Leesburg was second with 22. Clay and defending champion Union County both finished with 16 and Baker had 12 to round out the top five.

"It kind of really stings because we should have been state champions," Leesburg coach Josh Boyer said. "I'm happy and the girls really did a great job, but when you get that close you really want it all."

"While I'm smiling and laughing and joking with the girls, it's eating me up on the inside."

Heflin finished with a 405-pound total after being called for taking too much time while going for a state record in the clean and jerk on her final attempt. It hardly mattered as she finished 60 pounds ahead of runner-up Karissa Brosnan of Fivay.

While Heflin's state title may have been lacking in drama, Howison's had enough for both of them. She finished with the same 250-pound total as Pasco's Prestine Carter, but Howison weighed in at 97.4 pounds while Carter was at 98.0 for the tiebreaker.

Taylor Woods added a second-place individual finish for the Yellow Jackets in the 154-pound division.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Chase Elliott took blame for the first crash of NASCAR's new season on a blustery day at Daytona International Speedway that was shortened by rain.

Martin Truex Jr. topped the speed chart in his debut for Joe Gibbs Racing, and Bubba Wallace jumped to the top of Saturday's second session before weather brought an early end to NASCAR's Cup Series practice.

Rosters were needed to track all the offseason changes and new faces preparing for the season-opening Daytona 500.

ST. PETERSBURG — The Tampa Bay Rays have a knack for defying the odds.

The budget-minded franchise proved it doesn't necessarily have to have the largest payroll in baseball to win by thriving against big spenders in the challenging AL East from 2008 to 2013, earning four playoff berths over six seasons and making it to the World Series once.

Now, last year's surprising 90-72, third-place finish has heightened expectations for closing the gap between themselves and the Boston

Red Sox and New York Yankees again.

Manager Kevin Cash's team was one of the feel-good stories of 2018, improving by 10 victories despite undergoing a massive makeover that purged salary and ignited a youth-driven, second-half turnaround that kept Tampa Bay in contention for a postseason berth until late September.

The Rays used 23 rookies over the course of the season, overcoming a slow start to post their best record since Cash replaced Joe Maddon five years ago. They were PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Paul Casey was far away from all the antics and quietly put together another solid round Saturday for a 5-under 67 that gave him a three-shot lead over Phil Mickelson going into the final day of the AT&T Pebble Beach Pro-Am.

Casey had four birdies over his last 10 holes at Spyglass Hill in a mixture of rain, sunshine and wind. He finished at 15-under 200, the fourth time on the PGA Tour had he had led going into the final round.

"I am having a blast," Casey said.

Surging Blues get 5th straight victory

The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Pat Maroon gave his team a spark the last time it faced Nashville when he fought Austin Watson 2 seconds into the game that snapped the Blues' five-game losing streak to the Predators. Therefore, he didn't hesitate to try and see history repeat itself when Cody McLeod challenged him two minutes into their next meeting.

Vladimir Tarasenko scored his 19th goal of the season after Maroon's fight gave the Blues a lift, rookie Jordan Binnington made 28 saves and St. Louis beat Nashville 3-2 on Saturday, extending their season-best winning streak to five games.

"Always when somebody throws the gloves it's nice," Tarasenko said. "But it's a tough fight and Patty heated us up."

Vince Dunn and Mackenzie MacEachern also scored for the Blues, who have gone 11-4-1 in their last 16 and occupy the second wild-card spot in the Western Conference.

"Every line is chipping in at the right time," Maroon said. "All four lines are rolling and you can see why. Our defense is playing great and we're getting timely saves at the right time and we're scoring and we're going to the net and doing the little things that make this team a good hockey team."

Binnington has started all five games during the streak and improved to 9-1-1 in his NHL career.

"He's playing great," Blues interim coach Craig Berube said. "Every night he gives us a chance to win. I've said that a number of times but that is the truth. He's aggressive and challenges and he's standing tall."

Pekka Rinne stopped 30 of 33 shots for Nashville, which had won five of six. The teams meet again Sunday in Nashville.

"Pekka kept us in that game, but our first 40 minutes were just not good enough," Predators center Ryan Johansen said. "The good thing is we are right back at it tomorrow against the same team, and the work we brought in the third period is what we need tomorrow for the whole game."

Dunn scored his seventh goal of the season 2.5 minutes after Maroon's tilt with McLeod when he roofed a rebound over Rinne 4:37 into the game.

Tarasenko gave St. Louis a 2-0 lead when he one-timed a pass from Brayden Schenn past Rinne with 1:15 left in the first. Tarasenko has registered a point (four goals, five assists) in seven consecutive games.

Mattias Ekholm scored his seventh goal of the season on a power play when his shot bounced off Binnington's glove to cut the St. Louis lead to 2-1. It was just Nashville's second power-play goal in its last twelve games.

MacEachern answered with his second career goal when he poked a rebound past Rinne to restore St. Louis' two-goal lead.

"The guys seem to have some confidence when the opposing team scores," MacEachern said. "I think it kind of fires us up a bit and we kind of go out there and respond, which is huge."

With Rinne pulled for an extra attacker late in the third, Nashville pulled within one when Johansen swatted Filip Forsberg's rebound out of the air for his 11th goal of the season.

FLYERS 6, DUCKS 2: Carter Hart made 30 saves for his eighth straight victory, Sean Couturier had a goal and two assists and the Philadelphia Flyers scored four times in the first period to rout the slumping Anaheim Ducks.

ISLANDERS 4, AVALANCHE 3, OT: Ryan Pulock scored his second goal of the game 2:23 into overtime to lift New York past Colorado. Jordan Eberle had a goal and an assist, Josh Bailey also scored, and Robin Lehner stopped 25 shots.

WILD 4, DEVILS 2: Former Devils star Zach Parise scored the go-ahead goal and Minnesota beat New Jersey to snap a four-game losing streak.

BRUINS 5, KINGS 4, OT: Patrice Bergeron scored a power-play goal at 2:34 of overtime to lift Boston past Los Angeles.

SENATORS 5, JETS 2: Winnipeg native Mark Stone scored twice to help Ottawa beat the Jets.

SABRES 3, RED WINGS 1: Casey Mittelstadt and Kyle Okposo scored power-play goals and Buffalo.

COYOTES 3, STARS 2: Alex Galchenyuk scored twice and assisted on another goal, and Darcy Kuemper stopped 33 shots to help the Arizona Coyotes beat the Dallas Stars.

LOCAL FISHING REPORT

Source: maps4news.com/@HERE

GATEHOUSE MEDIA

Tip of the week: According to saltstrong.com, when fishing for redfish, do so around structures. They are constantly looking for food and often find it, as well as protection, near structures.

1. Yankeetown/Waccasassa: Jim Zaloga of Captains Cove Outfitters reports that sheephead fishing has started near shore with most of the fishermen catching their eight-fish limit. Small to medium live shrimp on a No. 2 hook is the most popular method for catching these fish. Look for rock piles in the 10- to 35-foot range. Redfish are still biting in the back country.

2. Crystal River/Homosassa: Capt. William Toney writes that great weather means great fishing. Earlier this week the members of the Homosassa Guides Association hosted the fifth grade class of Homosassa Elementary School for a fishing and learning trip. The HGA has been working with the local elementary school, doing this trip for the last decade and enjoying every year. One particular trip a few years back saw weather so cold that it looked like the event might be canceled, but the school system let them go. They caught trout, snook and redfish all in sight of the State Wildlife Park. Fish fleeing from the frigid Gulf water were stacked up in the springs, making a memorial year. This week's trip was just as good with warm weather and young people catching their first fish and even a first time in a boat. This coming weekend please come out and enjoy the HGA annual fish fry at MacRae's of Homosassa starting at noon Sunday. A portion of the proceeds will be donated back to the community. The inshore bite has been very good on the outside points in Chassahowitzka with sea trout and also on the spoil banks in Crystal River. Glow jerk baits are best to the south and MirrOlure Lil Johns in bourbon on the banks. The near shore rocks are doing OK with sheepshead using live shrimp. Redfishing has been hit and miss but anglers are getting them in the deep back country. Incoming high tide will be late evening this weekend.

3. Withlacoochee: No update.

4. Orange Lake/Lochloosa: Anglers have had a lot of success here since the weather cooled. Specks have been biting with frequency. Minnows and jigs have proven to be successful baits.

5. Ocklawaha River: Liz at Fat Daddy's reports that specks are hitting in abundance. Most anglers are trolling, and the specks have started to move towards the pads. Minnows and/or jigs have been the primary baits of choice.

6. Salt Springs: Roger Robbins at Buck N Bass SportsCenter reports that Rodman dam is producing specks and bass below the dam. Above the dam by the stumps and the north side of the barge canal has produced some nice specks. Night crawlers and chicken livers have brought in catfish. According to Liz at Fat Daddy's, just like everywhere else, specks have been biting on the St. John's River. She said anglers have had success using minnows or jigs or a combination of both.

7. Forest Lakes: Liz at Fat Daddy's reports that specks have been caught recently with frequency, due primarily to the cooling of the water. Fishermen have had success trolling, and specks are starting to come in towards the pads. Minnows and/or jigs have been the baits of choice.

A few big bass also have been caught using shiners. She said this has been the best winter for fishing in the last seven or eight years, in great part because the water levels are high. Fishermen looking for specks often have found themselves hauling in bass, as well. Roger Robbins of Buck N Bass SportsCenter added that bass fishing has been on Lake Delancey, Lake George and Lake Kerr. Bass are being caught as heavy as nine pounds. Shiners and watermelon worms have been the best baits. He had reports of stripers being caught on Lake George around the mouth of the Silver Glen and outside of Salt Springs Run on the east side of the sandbar. Spro crankbaits and Roosters Tails are working for these along with domestic shiners. Specks are showing up around the mouth of the runs and the old bombing range in Lake George. Minnows and Jiffy jigs are the bait of choice. Lake Kerr has been producing fish with minnows being the baits of choice.

8. Lake Weir: Liz at Fat Daddy's reports that specks have been caught of late with minnows and/or jigs the usual bait of choice.

9. Harris Chain: According to BassOnline.com, bass often can be found here in the open water. The canals have them at times, too. Many catches often weigh in between nine and 11 pounds. Specks also have been found here since the weather cooled the water.

10. Panasoffkee/Tsala: No update.

11. Astor Park: No update.

12. Ponce Inlet: According to www.florida sightfishing.com, loads of speckled trout, some redfish, as well as tarpon and snook have been caught here of late. Look no further when you find them because speckled trout are there feeding. Fishing for redfish in Mosquito Lagoon has been pretty good during the past few weeks. Lower water levels revealed several areas that had small schools of redfish tailing on shallow grass flats. These areas are your best bet to catch redfish on lures and fly in addition to live bait. Fishing for redfish at Ponce Inlet and around New Smyrna Beach has been good in the main channel, at the jetties, and around bridges and docks for big adult bull reds grouping up for their annual spawn.

RIO DE JANEIRO Brazil soccer club where 10 died in fire defends self

Under mounting criticism Saturday, Brazilian soccer club Flamengo defended its management of the training ground where a fire killed 10 of its academy players — all between 14 and 16 years old — at a dormitory that had been registered with the city as a parking lot.

Rio de Janeiro's city hall said in a statement that Flamengo was fined 31 times because of infractions at the Ninho do Urubu training ground, which had to be closed in October 2017. The club did not pay 21 of those fines.

The current permit issued for the grounds is valid until March 8.

Earlier, city hall also said the sleeping quarters where Flamengo's players died was irregularly licensed as a parking lot.

"The lodging area hit by the fire is not included in the last project approved by our licensing," it said. "There are no registers of new licensing requests for that area as a sleeping quarter."

Three teenagers injured in the fire are still in the hospital, including one in serious condition. The incident came just two weeks after a dam collapse in Brazil unleashed a flood of mining waste in Minas Gerais state that killed at least 134 people and left hundreds of others missing.

ARE, SWEDEN Svindal finishes second in final race of his career

If anyone had to beat Aksel Lund Svindal in his final race, he seemed just fine with it being Norwegian teammate Kjetil Jansrud.

Svindal was all smiles despite finishing a close second in the downhill at the world championships on Saturday.

Amid a crowd of thousands of flag-waving Norwegian fans, Svindal playfully pointed at Jansrud after finishing 0.02 seconds behind in a race that was characterized by thick fog and heavy snowfall, which caused an hour's delay.

Vincent Kriechmayr of Austria came third, 0.33 behind, to add to his silver medal from super-G earlier in the week.

The 36-year-old Svindal, the two-time Olympic champion and five-time world champion, announced last month that he would retire after this race.

MONTREAL Canadiens acquire Folin, Weise in deal with Flyers

The Montreal Canadiens acquired forward Dale Weise and defenseman Christian Folin from the Philadelphia Flyers on Saturday for David Schlemko and Byron Froese.

Weise, a former Canadian, has played 42 games in 2018-19 with five goals and six assists.

Folin, a 27-year-old Swede, has been in 26 games with Philadelphia this season, recording two assists.

Balancing act

Pelicans are trying to find right amount of playing time for Davis without putting future trade offers at risk

By Brett Martel
The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Even with one foot out the door, Anthony Davis is showing he can still produce prolific statistics for the New Orleans Pelicans.

He only needed 25 minutes to score 32-points in his first game for New Orleans since requesting a trade nearly two weeks ago. Davis also had nine rebounds and three blocks in a 122-117 win over the Minnesota Timberwolves on Friday night.

Whether his presence in the lineup is sustainable for a club that is trying to move on without him — and protect his trade value by keeping him healthy — remains to be seen. But for now, coach Alvin Gentry and other Pelicans veterans sound inclined to try to make it work.

"He's obviously made it known that he won't sign back, but he still loves the game of basketball. I know that he loves us as players, and he's going to go out there and play as hard as he can," Pelicans point guard Jrue Holiday said. "If Anthony's out there, that's the best chance of us winning."

The Pelicans entered their game at Memphis on Saturday night at 25-31, five games behind the Los Angeles Clippers for the Western Conference's final playoff spot with 26 games left.

When Davis initially made his trade request public through his agent, Rich Paul, Davis' image was largely removed from the Pelicans' website and promotional material. Gentry also started providing more playing time to younger players the club wants to develop.

But after Thursday's trade deadline passed without a deal to move Davis, the Pelicans had to decide if they were willing to defy NBA rules by shelving their healthy six-time All-Star. For now, they've put him back in the starting lineup, albeit on reduced playing time as he works his way back from a sprained left index finger that had sidelined him since Jan. 18.

On Friday night, Davis was kept on the bench in a tense fourth quarter despite the teams being separated by as little as one basket several times in the waning minutes.

Gentry said he limited Davis' minutes because it had been weeks since he played.

"I was not going to have him — first game back — play 38, 40 minutes," Gentry said. "I thought he played well the minutes that he was in there and did a great job. He was typical Anthony."

Gentry is hoping to find a balance that allows Davis to play — and hopefully stay healthy — while allowing other front-court players like the resurgent Jahlil Okafor and third-year pro Cheick Diallo to get meaningful minutes.

"We talked about that a lot. Some kind of way, we have to keep those guys in the rotation and keep them available," Gentry said. "Obviously, they may not play the amount of minutes that they've been playing... but I do think that we have to keep them in the rotation and put them in situations where we can see how their development is going and see how they are against the better players in the league and playing with our better players."

The Pelicans have made Holiday the face of the franchise since Davis' trade demand. The veteran guard, who is in the second year of a five-year, $126 million contract, said he understands the inherent conflict between focusing on players who are committed to the franchise long-term and playing Davis. But he added, "I think we're still trying to win. Having Anthony on the court, in my opinion, is our best chance of winning."

"So I guess maybe there's a little give and take," Holiday continued. "Maybe you don't play him 38 minutes or whatever.... But if you want to develop guys, we can probably find different slots."

'Full throttle'

Vonn plans to hold nothing back in last race of her career

By Andrew Dampf
The Associated Press

ARE, Sweden — Anyone expecting Lindsey Vonn to take it easy in her last race should think again.

Doesn't matter if she's still banged up from a crash with a black eye, a sore rib — not to mention the pain in both of her knees that forced her to move up her retirement.

"Whether I'm ready or not," Vonn said. "I'm just going to go full throttle."

It will be a fitting way to go out for the record-setting skier in Sunday's downhill at the world championships.

Norwegian great Aksel Lund Svindal set the stage for Vonn by winning the silver medal in the men's downhill Saturday in his last race.

"She didn't win 82 World Cups by being lucky," Svindal said. "If she gets a medal, it wouldn't surprise me at all. It just comes down to that one day and it has to happen tomorrow. Good luck!"

Vonn's 82 wins are the most all time by a female skier and trail only the 86 won by Swedish great Ingemar Stenmark.

To honor Stenmark, Vonn will wear a race suit featuring the colors of the Swedish flag, blue and yellow.

"Obviously we're in Sweden but also because of Stenmark and how much he has meant to the sport," Vonn said. "It's obviously something that has motivated me for a long time — his record — so I'm just paying my respects to him and this country."

Along with Vonn's dad, two of her siblings and one of her best friends, Stenmark will also be in attendance.

"I've been texting him and he wasn't planning on being here and I was like, 'Please, please, please,' and so he's coming," Vonn said. "I'm really, really, really excited."

As the 34-year-old Vonn performed interviews following downhill training Friday, a U.S. team member helped keep her muscles from tightening up with a cordless electrical vibration massage device. She's still recovering from her crash in super-G on Tuesday.

"I'm really stiff," she said. "Things are pulling in ways they shouldn't be pulling and sometimes my ribs come out. It's not something that's new to me. Usually I can manage to where it's not a problem."

No. 1 Vols extend winning streak to 18

The Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Tennessee's players resisted the temptation of staging a repeat performance of a postgame "Gator chomp" after their latest victory over Florida.

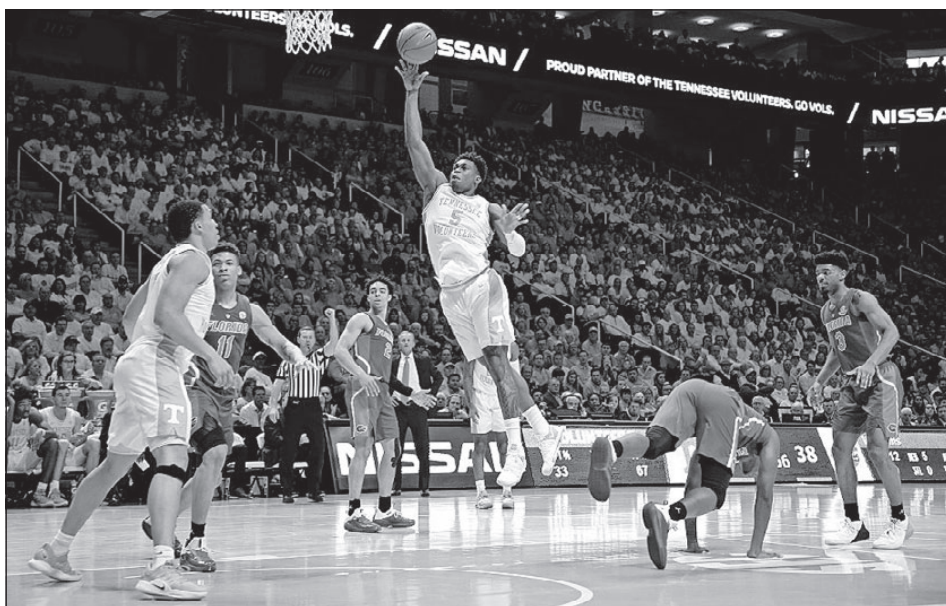

The sellout crowd at Thompson-Boling Arena did it instead.

Grant Williams scored 16 points as the top-ranked Volunteers defeated Florida 73-61 on Saturday to extend their school-record winning streak to 18 games.

Tennessee (22-1, 10-0 SEC) owns the longest active winning streak of any Division I team. This also marks the biggest winning streak of Rick Barnes' 32-year head coaching career, surpassing the 17-game string that started Texas' 2009-10 season.

"I appreciate how hard they've competed," Barnes said. "I appreciate the fact they do want to get better, and we can get better. I think they believe, like our coaching staff, that our best basketball's ahead of us. It's not going to be easy, but they're competitive. Where we are, they deserve the credit."

streak includes a 78-67 victory at Florida on Jan. 12. Immediately after that game ended, all five Tennessee players on the floor performed a "Gator chomp" in a mock version of the cheer favored by Florida fans. Tennessee's Admiral Schofield said at the time the Vols were responding to "disrespectful" and "inhumane" comments Florida fans had made during the game.

This time, Tennessee's players had a more muted celebration but fans started doing the Gator chomp in the final minute and continued it as the final horn sounded.

"Poetic justice," said Schofield, one of four Tennessee players to score in double figures. "At the same time, it's all in good fun. A deep rivalry, but many years of tough, hard-fought football games, tough basketball games. At the end of the day, I think a lot of people just enjoy the intensity of our rivalry with Florida."

Florida (12-11, 4-6) lost its third straight and fourth in its last five games.

"They're the best team in the country," Florida coach Michael White said. "They're equally as good defensively as they are offensively."

No. 5 KENTUCKY 71, MISSISSIPPI STATE 67: PJ Washington scored 23 points, Keldon Johnson added 13 and Kentucky held on to beat Mississippi State. Kentucky (20-3, 9-1 Southeastern Conference) has won 10 straight games since losing to Alabama in its conference opener on Jan. 5.

No. 7 MICHIGAN 61, No. 19 WISCONSIN 52: Jon Teske had 17 points and 12 rebounds, holding his own inside against Ethan Happ, and Charles Matthews scored 16 of his 18 points in the second half to lift Michigan past Wisconsin.

No. 8 NORTH CAROLINA 88, MIAMI 85, OT: Kenny Williams hit the go-ahead 3-pointer with 2:08 left in overtime to help North Carolina hold off Miami. Freshman Coby White matched his season high with 33 points for the Tar Heels (19-4, 9-1 Atlantic Coast Conference), who survived a wild finish filled with big shots by both teams.

No. 9 MICHIGAN STATE 79, MINNESOTA 55: Nick Ward had 22 points and Matt McQuaid scored a season-high 18, leading Michigan State past Minnesota. The Spartans (19-5, 10-3 Big Ten) ended a three-game losing streak, their longest skid in two years.

No. 10 MARQUETTE 66, No. 14 VILLANOVA 65: Markus Howard scored 38 points and Marquette hung on at the buzzer, edging Villanova and handing the Wildcats their first Big East Conference loss. Marquette (20-4, 9-2) led by 15 early in the second half before Villanova rallied.

CLEMSON 59, No. 11 VIRGINIA TECH 51: Shelton Mitchell scored 22 points with a career-best five 3-pointers and Clemson outlasted Virginia Tech for the Tigers' fourth straight victory.

No. 13 KANSAS 84, OKLAHOMA STATE 72: Dedric Lawson scored 25 points, Ochai Agbaji hit five 3s and had 23 points, and Kansas shrugged off a slow start to beat Oklahoma State.

No. 22 FLORIDA STATE 80, No. 16 LOUISVILLE 75, OT: Mfondu Kabengele scored 22 points and Florida State erased a 10-point second-half deficit to force overtime, then knocked off Louisville.

TCU 92, No. 17 IOWA STATE 83: Kendrick Davis scored a season-high 22 points, and TCU stunned Iowa State for its first road win over a Top 25 team in 21 years.

No. 18 TEXAS TECH 66, OKLAHOMA 54: Davide Moretti scored 14 points to help Texas Tech roll past Oklahoma. Jarrett Culver had 13 points and Matt Mooney and Brandone Francis each added 11 for the Red Raiders (19-5, 7-4 Big 12).

No. 21 LSU 83, AUBURN 78: Tremont Waters had 19 points and 10 assists and LSU overcame a sluggish start to beat Auburn.

No. 23 BUFFALO 90, CENTRAL MICHIGAN 76: Jeremy Harris had 19 points, eight rebounds and six assists, and Buffalo rallied to beat Central Michigan.

Decision when to the empty bench not easy

By John Marshall
Associated Press

TEMPE, Ariz. — The score climbs as the clock ticks down. Many fans have started to leave or are already gone. The regulars start to come off the floor, sometimes individually, sometimes as a group after their day's work is done.

At the end of the bench, a group of players sit at the edge of their seats, anticipating an opportunity to enter a game that's long been decided. Those precious seconds at the end of a game are their chance to play after all those long hours of practice.

The wait can seem like an eternity for the walk-ons.

"It's usually around two minutes left when you know, OK, game is out of hand, we might have a shot to get in here," said Arizona State junior walk-on Grant Fogerty. "You see the score, you see the time and you hope coach comes to get you."

The problem for walk-ons: most coaches don't take out their rotation players until there's about a minute left in the game, no matter the score.

Whether it's fear of a massive comeback, wanting starters to finish off a complete game or trying to keep their team's efficiency rating up, coaches find it hard to pull that take-out-your-starters trigger.

Typically, there's no set plan for removing the starters, no specific threshold to reach. It's almost always done by feel, occasionally predicated on what the opposing coach does.

"I kind of play it by ear," Arizona State coach Bobby Hurley said. "Some of it is, has the other coach taken out his top players? If I notice that right away, I'll immediately want to put in some of my reserve players."

Hurley had a chance to pull his starters in the Sun Devils' Jan. 19 game at Oregon.

Tied at halftime, Arizona State went on a 19-0 run to take a 19-point lead with four minutes left. The lead was 13 with two minutes left, 15 with a minute left, yet the walk-ons remained on the bench until the final buzzer of the Sun Devils' 78-64 win.

"We kind of talked about playing 40 minutes and I felt like we were right there to play 40 minutes," Hurley said. "I just wanted the guys who were out there to just finish the game."

Tennessee coach Rick Barnes probably could have pulled his starters right after halftime in a Jan. 5 win over Georgia.

The Vols had a 32-point halftime lead and stretched it to a whopping 49 points with seven minutes left. Even with the score so lopsided, Barnes was reluctant to take out his starters, waiting until the 1:37 mark to fully empty his bench. Tennessee led by 44 at the time and won 96-50.

Barnes mentioned a game the week prior, when UCLA pulled off an epic comeback against Oregon, rallying from eight points down with 45 seconds left in overtime to win 87-84 in overtime.

"I've seen too much in my lifetime," Barnes said. "As a coach, I'm telling you, you never feel good until you know it's over."

The NCAA's new evaluation tool, the NET rankings, also plays a factor in when coaches empty the bench.

The rankings cap victory margin at 10 points, but there is no limit on offensive and defensive efficiency. So while running up the score will do no good for margin of victory component past 10 points, it certainly could help efficiency-wise. That's why coaches have been calling what seem like unusual timeouts late in games that are all but decided and keeping their starters in longer during blowouts.

"Decimal points, maybe it does matter because we don't know the formula," Virginia Tech coach Buzz Williams. "Some of the smart people are hinting that it does matter."

Sometimes it comes down to where to spread those extra minutes.

The starters and key reserves typically get the same minutes every game. The players further down the bench, deeper in the rotation, may not get regular minutes. At times, those players are going to be counted in key situations; an injury to a key player, foul trouble, playing in the grind of the conference tournament. For a player who may get two or three minutes a game regularly, playing an extra four or five, even in a blowout, can make a difference.

"I've told our guys up through 10 or 11, you're going to be in the game at important times for us, so I do feel like I'm going to get them a few more minutes than some other guys do," North Carolina coach Roy Williams said. "At the same time, those walk-on guys, I probably give them a few more minutes than other guys do. It's just about development with the guys I'm going to need."

That leaves walk-ons like Fogerty waiting at the end of the bench for what feels like an eternity. His primary role is to run the scout team in practice, show the starters the upcoming opponents' plays, provide encouragement and enthusiasm.

The reward for all that work is a chance to play in a game and their teammates go wild when they do get in, particularly if they score or make a defensive stop.

"If I get in, if I don't, it's not that big of a deal to me," said Fogerty, who scored his first career basket at Stanford on Jan. 12. "Of course I want to play, but as long as we win, that's all that matters to me."

And their coaches.

Manfred: No DH or draft changes likely for 2019

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

ORLANDO — Don't look for a National League designated hitter this year or for new anti-tanking rules in June's amateur draft.

Baseball Commissioner Rob Manfred said Friday that management is focused on pace-of-game changes for 2019 and bolder ideas proposed by the players' association are too complex to be put in place for this season.

Speaking after an owners' meeting, Manfred felt encouraged the union responded to management's proposal for a pitch clock and a three-batter minimum for a relief pitcher unless an inning ends.

"Some of these items need to be part of broader discussions that certainly will continue after opening day, and I hope we can focus on some of the issues that need to get resolved quickly in the interim," Manfred said.

Baseball is in its third year of a five-year labor deal, one in which the free-agent market has slowed considerably — even with premier players available such as Bryce Harper and Manny Machado. Management would discuss larger changes as part of a deal for a new collective bargaining agreement extending beyond December 2021.

"I hope and I really do believe that there is a common interest between the players' association, the players, the owners and the commissioner's office in changes, whether they're midterm or otherwise, that make our entertainment product the best it could possibly be," Manfred said.

After the 2016 and 2017 seasons, players rebuffed management's proposal for a pitch clock designed to speed the pace of play. Management has the right to implement a clock, but Manfred has been reluctant to make on-field changes without players' agreement.

Management presented its latest proposal Jan. 14, one that included a requirement that pitchers face at least three batters or finish an inning.

Players responded Feb. 1 with a broader plan, renewing their push for the DH in all games, an earlier trade deadline aimed at discouraging teams with losing records from trading stars, increasing service time for top young stars called up early in the season and rewarding and penalizing teams in the draft based on their records.

"Those are significant economic issues. They are different in kind than the type of playing-rule changes that that we have out there," Manfred said. "I think that there are pieces of their response on the on-field proposal that were very encouraging. I think what needs to be sorted out is how closely the two agendas are tied, in other words, the on-field stuff and the economic stuff."

Last offseason, negotiations were hampered by player anger over the slow free-agent market. This offseason's pace of signings has been faster but remains far slower than most previous years.

"We want players signed, particularly star players. I wish they were signed and ready to go," Manfred said. "We got another week before they have to report. I'm really hopeful that it's going to get resolved during that period of time."

MLB's proposal that pitchers face a minimum of three batters in an inning unless it ends was designed both for pace and to slow or reverse the increased use of relievers. The union wants its use at the big league level delayed until 2020.

HISTORIC

result in the division. But she trailed eventual winner Brooke Berger of Clay by 40 pounds in the bench press and couldn't overcome the gap.

Berger finished with a 370 total and Woods was next at 345.

Hailey Zakos accounted for the other points for Leesburg, placing fourth in the 139-pound division.

Leesburg ended the meet with two wins, a second and a fourth, while Arnold had two wins, a second and a third to edge the Yellow Jackets by that single point.

"We were ready and we had four girls medal," Boyer said.

"It was a historical feat for our girls with two state champions and the best finish for a Lake County school ever.

"But this is really going to fuel my fire and we're going to revamp and reload."

Tavares had the only other local scorer in the meet, with Kierra Hill placing third in the 129-pound division and finishing just five pounds out of second. The four points Hill earned were enough to put Tavares in a tie for 19th at the meet.

In the other local results, Tavares' Alissa Alston and Leesburg's Hannah Harris just missed out on medaling in the 199-pound class. Alston finished seventh with a 320 total, just five pounds off the sixth-place finisher, and Harris finished eighth with a 315 total.

Mount Dora's Abigail Piervil was 12th at 183 pounds with a 285 total and Tavares' Tara Urben was 13th with a 280 total.

Eustis' Isabella Andujar was 12th in the 154-pound division with a 295 total.

In the 110-pound class, Eustis' Joi Williams was eighth with a 240 total and Mount Dora's Cassandra Patrick was 13th with a 230 total.

In the 101-pound division, Tavares' Emily Berry, Leesburg's Deilyanne Cruz and Umatilla's Aimee Cruz all finished with a 210 total. In the tiebreaker scoring, Berry was seventh, Cruz was ninth and Cruz was 11th. They all finished five pounds below the fifth and sixth-place finishers.

RAYS

41-25 after the All-Star break, 19-9 in September and 21-11 after June 22 vs. the five AL teams that made the playoffs.

Cash, who has watched coaches Rocco Baldelli and Charlie Montoyo depart this offseason to manage other teams, is confident the Rays can continue the upward trajectory although it doesn't figure to be easy in such a competitive division.

The Red Sox and Yankees won 108 and 100 games, respectively, last year.

"There's still a lot of youth on this team. There's going to be a lot of sophomore years for players, and some will have some struggles. That's OK, we're patient," Cash said. "We're going to continue to be patient, but I'm hoping a lot of the experience we gained in '18 is going to help."

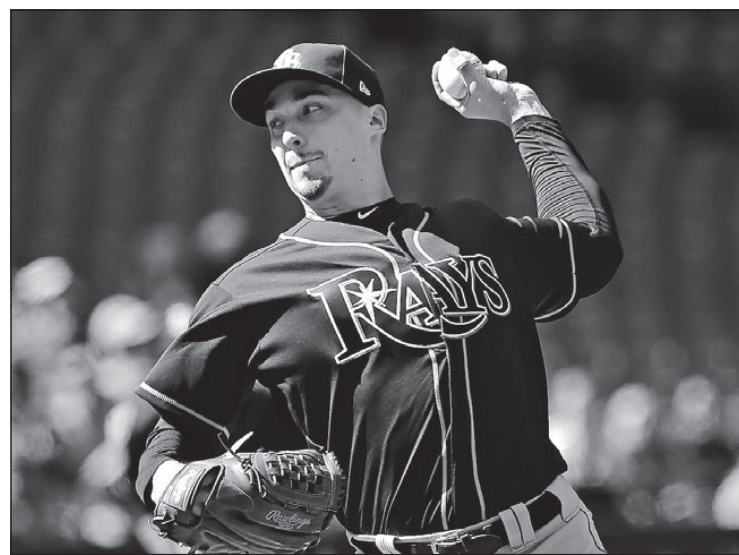

Some things to know about the Rays in 2019:

NEW LOOK

The Rays signed two former All-Stars in free agency, adding right-hander Charlie Morton to a pitching rotation led by 2018 AL Cy Young Award winner Blake Snell and landing outfielder Avisail Garcia, who they are counting on to add some right-handed power to the lineup. Catcher Mike Zunino, infielder Yandy Diaz and outfielder Guillermo Heredia were acquired in trades.

ROOKIES TO WATCH

John surgery that sidelined him all of last season and — barring a setback — could be ready to make his major league debut, possibly as early as June. He watched the team's success from a distance last year and couldn't help but wonder if healthy what he might have been to contribute. "That's just the way that I think. That's the way I go about this game, I want to win games as soon as possible," the 23-year-old said.

Catcher Michael Perez and infielder/outfielder Brandon Lowe gained some valuable experience last year. Reliever Ian Gibaut and first baseman Nate Lowe could contribute at some point.

THEY'RE SET

With Snell, Morton and Tyler Glasnow, obtained in a deal that sent former No. 1 starter Chris Archer to the Pittsburgh Pirates at last year's trade deadline, Cash feels good about his projected rotation. The manager plans to continue using "openers" — relievers who start games and typically face between three and nine batters — to cover other days. The strategy worked well after the Rays introduced it in mid-May last summer.

THEY'RE NOT

Most of the components the fueled the success of Cash's creative use of the bullpen returns, however some of the roles may have to be tweaked a bit after the departure of veteran reliever Sergio Romo.

ON DECK

With fewer questions than usual about what the lineup might look like on opening day, one of the aims will be to prepare a talented nucleus talent to get off to a fast start. The Rays lost 12 of 15 games to begin the season a year ago. This year's journey begins at home March 28 against the Houston Astros.

DAYTONA

Chip Ganassi Racing in Jamie McMurray's old seat. McMurray, the 2010 Daytona 500 winner, will close his career next Sunday with one last appearance in "The Great American Race."

Daniel Suarez got Busch's old seat at Stewart-Haas Racing, and Suarez was only available because Gibbs released him to make room for Truex. Richard Childress Racing hired Daniel Hemric to replace Ryan Newman in a rebranded No. 8.

Newman moved to Roush Fenway Racing, and his first stint in his new ride ended in a multi-car accident less than an hour into opening day. Elliott said he crowded Newman in traffic for Sunday's exhibition race and caused the crash.

He even apologized to rival teams for tearing up equipment.

"It looks like I just messed up. It happens," Elliott said.

The accident caused enough damage to force Elliott and Denny Hamlin into backup cars for Sunday's all-star event.

Hamlin was only on track to test his car in traffic, a move that ended in crumpled sheet metal but one he defended as the right decision.

"I'm a huge advocate of going out there in the pack," Hamlin said. "These things happen ... really no fault of anyone."

Mickelson was part of the celebrity rotation at Pebble Beach and put on a show on the back nine, stuffing a wedge to 3 feet on No. 13, and following with a 4-iron to 4 feet on the par-5 14th hole for eagle. He also made a tough save on the par-3 17th and shot a 2-under 70, giving him a good chance to match Mark O'Meara's record of five AT&T Pebble Beach titles.

Casey and Mickelson have done their best with so many shots to back pins, typically set to the highest point on the three courses to avoid any saturation from the hit-and-miss rain.

"The little half-shots to get back to some of these pins, a lot of guys struggle with and it's been a strength of my game," Mickelson said. "So I've been able to make a few more birdies on some of these holes."

The weather again was hit-and-miss, though the tournament managed to get in 54 holes.

It started under a blue sky with patches of clouds that soon took aim at the Monterey Peninsula, dropped temperatures by some 10 degrees and brought enough rain to make it tougher than usual.

That's not what stopped Jordan Spieth.

He was tied for the lead after a birdie on the par-3 fifth hole and remained in range of Casey until Spieth pulled his tee shot so badly on the 13th hole that he didn't know where it was until it was spotted 140 yards behind where he was looking, under a cluster of trees. He wound

Two Daytona 500 qualifying practices were largely uneventful as teams gauged the speed and handling of their cars before Sunday's time trials. There are six drivers vying for four "open" spots in the Daytona 500 field, raising qualifying stakes.

Ryan Truex is trying to join his brother in the Daytona 500 field, but his Tommy Baldwin Racing team needed to borrow a hauler to get to the track. TBR is easing back into fulltime racing, and an 18-wheeler isn't part of the initial budget.

Ross Chastain is trying to bounce back from a rollercoaster offseason by racing in his first Daytona 500. Although there's a car in the Daytona garage for him, there's a possibility J.J. Yeley could buy the seat from under Chastain because Yeley has sponsorship money and no ride.

Chastain, an eighth-generation Florida watermelon farmer, parceled together a schedule with smaller teams and was in the car Saturday practicing for the Daytona 500. A driver change can be made all the way up until the Feb. 17 race, but Chastain is focused only on what he can control.

"Walking into the cup garage and seeing a racecar with my name on the roof being prepared to run the Daytona 500 is something I'll never forget," Chastain posted on social media.

He later added a picture of his car headed onto the track.

up making double bogey, and then after a three-putt bogey from the wrong side of the 17th green, Spieth pulled his tee shot into the ocean on the 18th hole for another double bogey and a 74. He went from being in the mix to eight shots behind.

"It was going to bite me at some point," Spieth said. "I didn't necessarily deserve to be a couple under par at the time, and so it ended up kind of haunting me there. ... I drove the ball well the last two days, and then today my driver just didn't behave at all. It was a 150-yard spread on either side and that's not good around Pebble Beach."

Lucas Glover had a birdie-bogey finish at Monterey Peninsula for a 1-under 70 and was at 11-under 204, along with Scott Piercy (69 at Spyglass Hill).

Casey was recently in the news for a tournament he didn't play, the Saudi International, a new event on the European Tour that came under scrutiny for Saudi Arabia's human rights record and the recent killing of journalist Jamal Khashoggi.

He was on the original list of commitments without his approval, and said he was never going. Casey is an ambassador for UNICEF and has the logo on his golf bag, which he displayed on an Instagram post to confirm he was not playing.

"I stand firm on what I said," Casey said.

He is more interested in what he can accomplish Sunday at a tournament that, with reasonable weather and an enjoyable amateur partner, he has come to enjoy. Casey is playing with Don Collieran, the chief sales officer for FedEx. They have a four-shot lead in the pro-am.

Party Mardi in Mobile

Alabama home to the original Fat Tuesday fete

By Southern Kitchen

You know all about the beads, parades, masks and mayhem of Mardi Gras in New Orleans.

But did you know that the country's first Mardi Gras celebration was held not in the Crescent City but 125 miles east, in Mobile, Alabama?

In 1703, Mobile was the capital of French Louisiana. French Catholic settlers brought with them their "Carnival" traditions of feasting, revelry and merriment on the days preceding Ash Wednesday, then fasting during the sacrificial season of Lent that immediately follows.

Fifteen years later, the territory's capital moved to the newly founded New Orleans, as did the Mardi Gras tradition. But it's well-documented that Mobile's parade was first held in 1711, when 16 men pushed a cart carrying a large papier-mâché cow's head down the street, kicking off a big outdoor party.

Mobile's parades evolved into elaborate affairs, mostly happening between Saturday and the Shrove Tuesday sendoff before Ash Wednesday, just like in NOLA, with the city's mystic societies and participating parade "krewes" spending the entire year planning their float themes, costumes and "throws" — those coveted trinkets they toss to spectators.

While the city's festivities are less boisterous than those of their western neighbors, they don't lack for community or heart.

"Our Mardi Gras is definitely more intimate than New Orleans', but we think that makes it even more special," said Tara Zieman, marketing and communications manager for Visit Mobile, the official marketing organization for the city. "Plus, it's more family-friendly. I love watching the parades, seeing college kids and families with young children, and older people who've been doing this for 50 years all lined up on the street together. There's spirit and vibe, and an electricity to it all unlike any other time of year in the city."

"Basically, it's a non-stop party downtown," said Mobile native and local caterer Clifton Morrisette. He hosts a large Mardi Gras street party the Sunday before Ash Wednesday, where more than 3,000 people line up for fried oysters, rack of lamb, boiled shrimp and other Southern treats. "The restaurants and street parties go for 18, 20 hours a day. We're all definitely ready for Lent by the time it rolls around. And then we start planning for next year."

If you can get there early enough, visit Mobile's Carnival Museum, which documents the holiday's 300-year history. The museum includes more than a dozen rooms and is filled with historical photographs, elaborate costumes and crowns, parade videos and a life-sized interactive replica float.

The Sunday before Fat Tuesday is also host to another singular Mobile tradition: Joe Cain Day. The holiday's namesake is credited with developing most of the city's Mardi Gras traditions. And unlike the city's other parades, this "people's parade" is open to anyone, though it now requires advance sign-up for safety and permit reasons.

The parade kicks off at 2:30 p.m. March 3 with Joe Cain's Merry Widows, who wear long black gowns and dark veils and lead a procession of more than 100,000 to Cain's gravesite, where they place wreaths on his tombstone and toss black beads into the crowds. The procession continues to Cain's original house on 906 August St. in Oakleigh Historic District.

If you choose to simply spectate Joe Cain and other parades throughout the weekend into Tuesday, Zieman recommends Royal and Government streets for their wide vantage points. The city has six official parade routes, and there are more than 14 parking lots downtown, so there's ample opportunity to watch bands, floats and costumed masses rolling by.

Beads are tossed from a float during Mobile's Mardi Gras parade. [VISIT MOBILE PHOTOS]

The Excelsior Band performs in Mobile's Mardi Gras parade.

The Carnival Museum's eclectic collection celebrates the holiday's 300-year history.

Eat and explore in Huntsville

By Rachel Taylor
Southern Kitchen

Once the capital of the Confederacy, then a bustling agricultural and mill town, Huntsville, Alabama, is today a booming technological epicenter. NASA calls Huntsville home, a technology park that rivals Silicon Valley is continually attracting people from around the world, and an up-and-coming culinary scene has taken off over the past decade. As chef and Huntsville native Steven Bunner explains, "Huntsville's got its feet firmly grounded in history, but we've got our heads squarely in the future."

Bunner didn't want to bring another white tablecloth to the neighborhood. At his restaurant, Bunner created a dining atmosphere where the clientele ranges from businessmen to families out for a nice dinner.

His cooking reflects his dedication to using locally grown and made products. The menu is seasonal and changes as new ingredients arrive in the kitchen.

Cotton Row

With over 20 years in the hotel and restaurant industry, chef James Boyce cooked in New York, Las Vegas and California before heading to Huntsville. After a few culinary trips to the city, one time even cooking for the governor, Boyce decided it would be a good place to raise his family and open a restaurant. Or two. Or three.

In 2008, Cotton Row opened, followed by Pane e Vino pizzeria, then Commerce Kitchen in 2010. Boyce is often credited with helping to kick off the boom in the culinary scene in Huntsville. "We had perfect timing and we got very lucky," he said.

At Cotton Row, Boyce used his 20-plus years of experience to create a menu embodying his strengths, along with touches of Southern influence. He uses as many local products as he can, including meat, vegetables, artisanal cheese, beer, honey and even olive oil.

The Bottle

The Bottle, one of Huntsville's other fine dining gems, is run by chef Chris McDonald. The downtown restaurant is an upscale French eatery with Southern influences.

McDonald, who has been in the restaurant industry for over 30 years, worked in restaurants in New York City and Atlanta before heading to Huntsville in 2002. His restaurant focuses on using local produce and ingredients to create dishes like fried okra and heirloom tomato salad and pan-seared black grouper.

The Bottle is open for dinner only, but its sister restaurant, Humphrey's Bar & Grill, is in the same building and offers diners a more relaxed, casual atmosphere. The bar at Humphrey's also has a liquid nitrogen tank, which allows McDonald to create some unique cocktails.

FROM THE PORCH STEPS

Bring back comedy, please

Nina Gilfert

I don't suppose it is any wonder that I don't particularly like the comedy of today. I usually don't understand what they are laughing about. Now when Jack Benny or Bob Hope told a joke, everybody laughed because the point wasn't so vague that you couldn't understand it.

As far as I am concerned, the days of the stand-up comedian are dead. I don't, for instance, understand the humor in a bawdy comedienne getting up and discussing her sex life. I am far more appalled than I am entertained.

If you remember when Johnny Carson entertained Robin Williams and Jonathan Winters on his "Tonight Show," then you know what funny is. The discussion was sure to be spontaneous and hilarious.

When asked what he thought of the legislation Roe vs. Wade, Jonathon Winters said, "I'd prefer to float."

Did you know that if you need a good laugh, you can find some of this stuff on the internet? Just Google any of these comedians.

Do you remember Tim Conway on the "Carol Burnett Show"? The skits they did on Carol Burnett were so funny the comedians themselves couldn't stop laughing.

I remember when Carol was doing a take-off of the scene in "Gone With the Wind" where the heroine was trying to dress herself up to go to meet Clark Gable who played the part of Rhett Butler, a rogue who still had some money and she needed money for repairing her home and feeding her household? When Carol Burnett came out on stage in a gown obviously made out of drapes with the curtain rod sticking out of it, it stopped the show. The cast

A MAN OF HIS CONVICTIONS

Leesburg Mayor John Christian builds opportunities for the community

John Christian started his church in 2000 and moved it to its current location, formerly a drug-infested area, in 2003. Today, the church has locations in Groveland and Wildwood. [LINDA FLOREA / CORRESPONDENT]

EESBURG — John Christian is a man in motion. Besides being a son, husband and father of four, he serves as the mayor of Leesburg, a founder of Men of Distinction, founder and pastor of Christian Worship Center and a community activist for both the poor and the black community.

Christian, 47, first won a seat on the Leesburg commission in 2004 and since then, has served as mayor four times. Because of term limits, this term on the council will be his last.

He credits his propensity for community involvement to his mother, Florence Smith, who was church-oriented and kept him involved. In turn, he keeps his own children involved in the community.

"I believe God put us on this earth for a particular reason, and that is to serve him," Christian said. "To serve him, that means we have to serve

WORD ON THE STREET

WHAT DOES BLACK HISTORY MONTH MEAN TO YOU?

"To me, it's when we honor how African-American individuals have impacted our society and how they have changed it over time. February is when we pay tribute."

Tatiana Aroyo

"It means everything for me — not just for black people but for everyone — people of all ethnicities. It is time for us to come together and be proud of who we are."

Anthony Imana

"What does it mean? If it means anything for that one month, it should be demonstrated all year."

Edward Shelton

"You have to remember that they didn't teach that much in school. Every year I learn something. I find it enlightening and educational."

Keith Mullins

Bandit is a mellow and gentle soul. He is approximately 5 years old. Unfortunately, we don't know too much about his past, but we know life hasn't been good to him. He arrived at another shelter as a stray. He was very skinny, covered in scars and nervous in new situations. Since arriving to our shelter, he has started putting on weight and becoming more confident. Meet Bandit at our shelter.

Andy is a handsome 10-year-old Siamese looking for a forever home. Unfortunately his owner had to go to an assisted-living facility and he couldn't go with. Andy is very sweet and loves attention. He came in with a wound on his cheek. He is currently on antibiotics for it and will be able to go home with the medication. Meet Andy at our shelter.

Lola is a super sweet 4-year-old black mouth cur mix who will do great in a home. She loves to play with toys and does the best zoomies you will ever see. Lola is dog friendly and does well with kids. Lola knows basic commands and will make a wonderful companion. Lola is currently in a foster home, so contact our shelter to make arrangements to meet her.

Turbo is a handsome 4-year-old male tuxedo. He is very friendly and loves attention from all people. Turbo is dreaming of a home where he can lounge on soft blankets and have a window to look out of. This boy is ready for his forever home. Could you be the one? Meet Turbo at our shelter.

LAKE COUNTY HISTORY DID YOU KNOW?

By Rick Reed
Correspondent

William Kennedy's "History of Lake County," which was published in 1929, states that there were 72 schools when the county was formed in 1887. The South Publishing Company's Florida State Gazetteer and Business Directory of 1886-87, listed 44 communities in Orange (22) and Sumter (22) counties that would soon become part of the newly formed Lake County.

Of the 44 communities listed in the Gazetteer, 11 didn't mention having schools. Some, such as Leesburg, Eustis and Lady Lake, had more than one. One would expect that hamlets such as Parkland, Ponceannah, Sylvia, Gardenia, Indian Springs, Kismet and Messina were too small to have schools, but the Gazetteer said otherwise.

"The first public school building in the vicinity of Clermont was a log structure on a site near the present "Roller Coaster" highway overlooking Jack's Lake," wrote Kennedy. "The teacher was Mr. Tom Hooks of Atlanta. Pupils came from the vicinity of the present locations of Clermont, Minneola, Mohawk, South Clermont and Adjacent territory."

That school district didn't change much for the next 40 or so years, according to Kennedy.

"The present school unit, known as the Clermont-Minneola Schools, consists of two attractive buildings, to which

According to "History of Lake County," students came from Clermont, Minneola, Mohawk and the surrounding areas to attend this early Clermont-Minneola school. [SUBMITTED] the pupils are transported by school buses from approximately the same territory served by the original log building."

Glendale, another of "Lake County's Forgotten

Communities," was two miles south of Altoona and not far from Marion County line. It was settled in 1881 by G. Gordy, among others. It listed three churches, a public school, a steam saw and a planing mill.

Gordy was the postmaster, owned the general store and sawmill. He was also owner of the Glendale house and an orange and vegetable grower. The Gazetteer also lists the Pennington House. J.M. Pennington was mentioned as an owner of a five-acre orange grove.

Rev. A. Enloe was pastor of the Presbyterian Church. Rev. J.C. King was pastor of the Baptist Church and Rev. Taylor was pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Miss A.C. Russell was the teacher of what was apparently a one-room schoolhouse.

Many of Glendale's inhabitants eventually relocated to Umatilla, according to Kennedy. Members of the Methodist Church moved to Umatilla and the church building was sold to J.N. Epps. Material from the building was used in the construction of his home. Most of the other homes were sold and moved to Umatilla.

CHRISTIAN

others. Jesus was a servant, so I believe my role is to serve God's people in every capacity — whether it's the city council, the mayor-ship. You'll see me cutting the grass, you'll see me painting buildings.

"I try to lead by example. I believe my work is to set the bar high, so when I leave, somebody can take that bar and set it a little higher."

Christian started his church in 2000, and moved it to its current location, 929 County Road 468 in Leesburg, in 2003. Today, the church also has locations in Groveland and Wildwood, which recently opened.

When he found that people didn't have access to low-cost childcare, Christian went into the childcare business, building three Kids of Distinction locations.

In 1996, his mother learned of a program called Men of Distinction for African American men and told Christian about it. He had been looking for opportunities to do community service and formed a group in Leesburg.

"It was a new group for black men, getting black men reintroduced to their community, getting them involved with city politics and getting them involved with their family," Christian said.

Before he was elected to the council, he was working to get recreation opportunities for children, affordable housing and bringing in employment opportunities. Christian was pivotal in the getting the Leesburg Recreational Complex on Griffin Road built.

Last year Christian said another piece of the puzzle fell in place with the Leesburg Resource Center on County Road 468 where people can get job skills.

The center has computer classes for adults, resources that help alleviate domestic violence and child abuse and access to the housing department for help finding affordable homes and down payment assistance.

Recently, the first culinary class was held at the facility. Christian added that the culinary classes will give people an opportunity to get a culinary certificate, which will help them get hired in a restaurant as a cook instead of an entry-level position and put more money in their pockets.

"There are so many programs that will help people that are struggling, but they don't know how to access them. That's why the resource center is there," he said.

The city also recently bought a building on Griffin Road to make into a performing arts center for children who don't play sports.

"They can do dance, drama, photography and journalism," he said. "I rounded up a bunch of nonprofits and put them in a room and hashed out an agreement where they can utilize that building and provide opportunities for kids that may not be athletically inclined.

"We changed the minds of the city and how it operates with nonprofits."

He said he would also like the city to open a teen center as a safe place kids can go after school to stimulate their minds, stay out of trouble and get assistance with homework.

"I tell people I'm my bible. You get what you see. You get what you hear," Christian said. "I don't have to quote you scripture, preach a sermon. You should be able to look at my life and say, 'You know what, I don't know all the psalms, all the proverbs, but I think that guy is doing a good job.'" couldn't stop laughing long enough to complete the skit. We need comedy like that to get us through some of the rough times ahead.

COMEDY

When I was still young enough to live at home all we had for entertainment in the evening was the radio.

Jack Benny's show was a favorite. Jack was always portrayed as a miserly penny pincher who kept his money in a vault underground. He would go down to get money out of the vault, and you would hear hinges creaking and chains rattling and some old guy who was supposed to be the vault guard would hold ridiculous conversations with Jack. Mary Livingstone also served the part of one of his fobs on the show, and she would make fun of his miserliness.

George Burns and Gracie Allen were on radio and morphed into television. On their radio show, Gracie had a special girlfriend and she and Gracie were always trying to manipulate their husbands. George Burns show was still on television when he was in his 90s.

Remember Bob Hope? He became especially famous for his Vietnam Christmas Shows, that he took it to the troops in harm's way. There was always a funny skit and also a lot of singing and dancing girls for the boys away from home.

Bob Hope and Bing Crosby did a series of road movies, usually with Dorothy Lamour as the love interest disrupting their friendship. Bob Hope became something of a national hero for his Christmas shows and his selling of war bonds.

Bill Cosby was a comedian and the country's father image in his television show "The Cosby Show." Everyone was impressed with the way Cliff Huxtable and his wife, portrayed by Phylicia Rashad, who was a lawyer, raised their four children, teaching them right from wrong by example and consequences.

Unfortunately, that image was spoiled when it was proven in real life that Cosby was a womanizer.

I will always believe that the image he portrayed on that show was a good example for many families of the day. It was a comedy show as well with many of the incidents showing the funny side of family life.

When I was still a little girl, the radio was the family's entertainment vehicle. We listened to "Amos and Andy," Joe Penner "Ya wanna buy a duck?," "Hattie McDaniels," "Little Orphan Annie," "Jack Armstrong, The All-American Boy," "Tom Mix," "Fibber McGee and Molly" and my personal favorite, "Lights Out."

The radio programs I remember from my childhood are long gone. Radio is listened to for news and music. Television is rapidly declining as the entertainment media of today in favor of handheld devices that provide games, movies, news, commentaries and social media.

As we seniors sit in our recliners more and more, we look to the television for solace, news and entertainment. What we get are commentaries, old movies, religion, cop shows, biased commentaries listed as news programs, sports and a few really funny family shows.

Bring back comedies, please.

FEATURE STORY

A friend depicts Olivia Newton-John's life on Lifetime

By Jay Bobbin

Being a friend of Olivia Newton-John made it more comfortable for another Australia-raised singer-actress to play the superstar on Lifetime.

Delta Goodrem has her own career — extending to headlining concert tours and being a coach on her continent's version of "The Voice" — but her strongest U.S. identification to date may come from her starring role in "Olivia Newton-John: Hopelessly Devoted to You" Saturday, Feb. 16. Familiar songs re-recorded by Goodrem are used to mark chapters of Newton-John's story, encompassing the latter's bouts with cancer and the disappearance of her then-boyfriend Patrick McDermott (played in the film by Anthony Brandon Wong).

"My first interaction with her was when I was about seven years old, by chance," the pleasant Goodrem says of Newton-John. "My family was on holiday, and my mom and I were having a hot chocolate in New York, and she walked in. And I said, 'There's Sandy! There's Delta Goodrem plays the title role in "Olivia Newton-John: Hopelessly Devoted to You" Saturday on Lifetime.

Sandy!' (referencing Newton-John's 'Grease' movie character). She heard my Australian accent and came over and spoke to my mom and I, and I remember how amazing that was."

The women continued to cross paths, and Goodrem recalls that when she received her own Hodgkin's lymphoma diagnosis at age 18, "Olivia sent me a beautiful letter, and she became my mentor as well as my friend. We talk a lot about the kindred nature of our friendship, and we've written songs about it. And it's full-circle to have this moment now. It's very special."

SUNDAY'S BEST BETS

Danai Gurira

8 p.m. on 6 10 The 61st Annual Grammy Awards

Pop and R&B superstar Alicia Keys, a 15-time Grammy Award winner herself, hosts ceremonies recognizing the best recordings, compositions and performers of the past year from Staples Center in Los Angeles. Among the competitive categories, Kendrick Lamar leads this year's field of nominees, with eight nods, closely followed by Drake, who's up for seven awards. Boi-1da and Brandi Carlile both have six nominations. Dolly Parton received the MusiCares Person of the Year honor at an event late last week.

9 p.m. on (AMC) The Walking Dead

The hit horror drama series returns to finish out Season 9, picking up the action in the aftermath of Rick's (Andrew Lincoln) disappearance. In the weeks that followed, Michonne (Danai Gurira) and the rest of the survivors have become strangers to one another, certain of only one thing: They're definitely in danger. Worse, they're becoming increasingly aware that the world beyond their circle doesn't operate as they expected it to. Now they face a new threat, one against whom the old rules and procedures are ineffective.

BY JAY BOBBIN

Melissa Roxburgh

OF 'MANIFEST' ON NBC

The great thing is that a lot of these relationships are so awesome off-camera as well, it's such a safe space to explore the depth of each of them. With Josh (Dallas, who plays her brother Ben), he and I have become like brother and sister, so that dynamic is there. And with J.R. (Martinez, who portrays Jared), we've gotten really close, so for that friendship to translate on-screen as well is great.

And with Victoria (Cartagena), who plays Lourdes (Michaela's former best friend who's now Jared's wife), she's just down-to-earth and game for anything. She's been a blast to play with.

Do you enjoy the range of emotions that "Manifest" gives you to play?

Oh, totally! We all joked when the show first started that if these characters existed in real life, they'd all be in the psych ward. You don't go through something like this and come out normal, so with what Michaela is experiencing on the screen, it's the simplest version of what really and truly happens.

You can't be blubbing your way through every single episode, but these moments get the best of her, for sure. We see that with Ben, too, with his struggle with his family and trying to do the right thing there. Both characters meet their breaking points every once in a while.

At this point of "Manifest," how do you view your character Michaela?

She's a bit of a tragic character because she keeps trying and she keeps messing up, but her relationships are everything to her. I don't know what she would do without her brother or the love that was there with (her ex-fiance) Jared, so it's fun to explore that.

What do you think about Michaela's relationships revealing so many different sides of her?

OF 'PURE' ON WGN AMERICA

In researching your character for "Pure," what surprised you about the Mennonites?

I am very drawn to a lot of the ways in which the kinds of Mennonites we were studying lived their lives with a sense of community and interacting with and taking care of your neighbors and being self-sufficient and making a lot of the things that you use and rely on. That's sort of what drew me. I can't think of anything that surprised me about it.

Reading some of the articles and watching some of the material, specifically about the drug-related instances, that was pretty darn surprising to me ... Before I did the show, I had read an article about it and thought, "That's pretty crazy." And then when I signed onto the show, I did a lot more research and was like, "Oh my - wow. That's nuts."

How did you like filming in Halifax, Nova Scotia?

It's one of my favorite places in the world. I'm very lucky. When we were shooting the first season, one of my best friends lives there and my little sister was at university there so I had family and friends built in and I already knew the city. And there's something really special about the Maritimes. The people on the East Coast of Canada are just the kindest, most welcoming, down-to-earth people. ... It's just the best. I wouldn't recommend going in February just because you'll get blown into the ocean by a winter hurricane. But the people will still be very nice to you when they rescue you.

And it's nice, too, because it's so accessible. You've got the ocean and the really rugged landscape and then for our show, just going out into the Annapolis Valley and having all that beautiful farm landscape, that's just the greatest. It was so nice to be able to be in nature that much.

Pete Holmes

OF 'CRASHING' ON HBO

Some actors who played comics for a TV or movie role say they felt naked when they tried stand-up for real. Do comics?

Maybe at the beginning, I can relate to the feeling of some sort of hyper-exposure. But now, it feels a lot cozier to me than that. I think when a lot of people are starting, they think they're doing comedy at the audience. And then at a certain point your act and your style comes together and you realize you're doing comedy with the audience, and that's not nakedness. Nakedness is the feeling of like I have to manipulate you somehow into laughing. Feeling warm or wrapped in the audience is the feeling of like, "We're doing this together and if you don't like it, that's OK. It's kind of your fault, it's kind of my fault that it doesn't always work. But we're going to do this forever. Whatever happens, we're going to do this forever."

So it's a symbiotic relation?

Absolutely, and it's hard to believe that in your bones but after about 10 years, you really start to get the sense that you're like, "No, I'm not twisting anybody's arm. I'm just offering it up what it is that I think is funny." And I'm not trying to make them laugh, I'm inviting them to laugh at what I find funny. You know, I'm glad they try it. I will say that it's a really, really hard thing to do.

Convicts may be 'Proven Innocent' in new Fox law drama

Kelsey Grammer stars in the Fox drama series "Proven Innocent," premiering Friday.

By Jay Bobbin

Its drama may be enhanced, but a new law series has a very real basis.

Premiering Friday, Feb. 15, Fox's "Proven Innocent" casts Rachelle Lefevre as a defense attorney with a vested interest in overturning wrongful convictions. She was a victim of one herself, sent to prison along with her brother (played by Riley Smith) in a media-sensation murder case. After a decade, she was freed by her current legal partner (Russell Hornsby), but the prosecutor who had her sentenced (multiple Emmy winner Kelsey Grammer) still wants her incarcerated.

Noting the existence of The Innocence Project, which uses DNA evidence to pursue exonerations, executive producer Danny Strong says "Proven Innocent" doesn't depict situations "exactly as they happened in real life, but we'll definitely have cases that are inspired by true-life cases, and then we'll have cases that are also fictionalized. It's an incredible number of wrongful convictions that exist in this country, so there's this massive pool of true-life cases for us to pull from for inspiration."

"Frasier" veteran Grammer was cast after the "Proven Innocent" pilot was filmed. "It seemed like an interesting world for me to play around in," he explains, "and maybe play an active role in starting the show up." Grammer has had his own experiences with the justice system — encompassing the loss of his younger sister — but he maintains, "I didn't really think about anything other than the fact that I think (the series is) playable, and something I would like to play."

Fellow "Proven Innocent" star Lefevre admits to already having been a Grammer fan ("I'm not going to pretend that I'm not") before she worked with him, but she adds, "I have had the good fortune of loving pretty much all of the actors I've worked with. When you are spending 15 hours a day on set, that's not a job ... that's a life, right?"

"We live together, so a lot of the time, I find myself in situations where I'm doing a scene with someone where we're completely at odds. And this is somebody who (in real life) I had dinner with last night, or was holding me while I was crying because I was so tired, or whatever it is. It's just a shift that you make, and I'm prepared to make it whenever the job requires."

"Presumed Innocent" creator and executive producer David Elliot reasons that "innocence is just a fascinating prism" for storytelling in the legal arena, "because whether you're for or against capital punishment, presumably every person in the country is against killing someone who is innocent. I think it's a fascinating place to start the dialogue about other issues."

Rami Malek

"BOHEMIAN RHAPSODY"

Rami Malek's ("Mr. Robot") dynamic, thoroughly committed performance as lead singer Freddie Mercury — recently honored with a Golden Globe Award, as was the overall film — clearly is the strongest suit of this profile of the rock band Queen, now up for five Oscars including best picture and actor. The Anthony McCarten screenplay adds new flavor to the traditional rise-and-fall-and-rise-again premise of dramas about music acts, largely by focusing strongly and logically on Mercury, whose personal life ended up having meaning far beyond his inner circle of friends and associates. Credit goes to Dexter Fletcher, who finished the movie after original director Bryan Singer was removed from it, for holding the result together. The cast also includes Lucy Boynton, Gwilym Lee, Ben Hardy, Joseph Mazzello, Aidan Gillen and (in a smart turn as a record producer) Mike Myers. ★★★ (PG-13: AS, P) (Also on Blu-ray and On Demand)

"THE FRONT RUNNER"

Hugh Jackman followed his success in "The Greatest Showman" by starring in director and co-screenwriter Jason Reitman's profile of Sen. Gary Hart, whose presidential aspirations basically were demolished by the revelation of his extramarital affair with Donna Rice (played by Sara Paxton) — one of the biggest scandals in the history of American politics up to that time. Also in the impressive cast are Reitman's "Up in the Air" alums Vera Farmiga and J.K. Simmons, as well as Alfred Molina, Ari Graynor ("I'm Dying Up Here"), John Bedford Lloyd, Mike Judge, Kevin Pollak and two veterans of the series "Last Man Standing," Kaitlyn Dever and Molly Ephraim. DVD extras: "making-of" documentary; audio commentary by filmmakers including Reitman; deleted scenes. ★★★ (R: AS, P) (Also on Blu-ray and On Demand)

"NOBODY'S FOOL"

With her star generally on the rise in the comedy world in the last couple of years, Tiffany Haddish got a big nod from Tyler Perry by landing the central role in his tale of an ex-convict taken in by her sister (Tika Sumpter) after her release. She then tries to protect her sibling from an online suitor whose actual existence becomes highly suspect. Director Perry's script gives Haddish plentiful chances to play drama as well as humor, and he typically casts very well around her ... with Omari Hardwick, Whoopi Goldberg, Missi Pyle, Mehdad Brooks and Amber Riley also featured. ★★★ (R: AS, P) (Also on Blu-ray and On Demand)

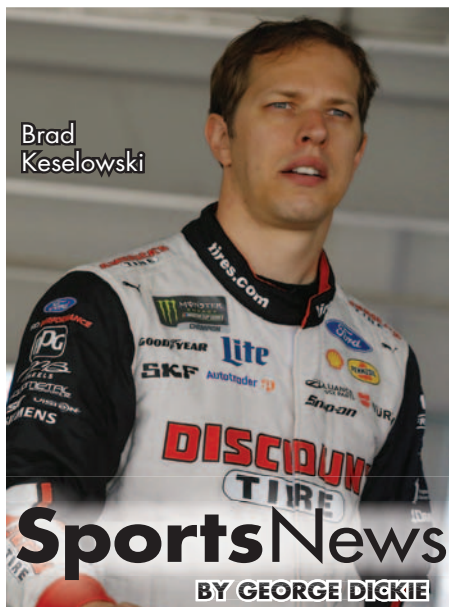

"THE HAPPY PRINCE"

Oscar Wilde's name has long been legendary, but the man behind it comes into very sharp focus as Rupert Everett serves as star, writer and — in his first time in the job — director of this dramatization of the celebrated and controversial author's final days, spent in Paris. With a title borrowed from one of Wilde's stories, the film traces his relationships with various people as he tries to come to terms with them in the fleeting time he has left. Colin Firth, Colin Morgan, Emily Watson and Tom Wilkinson are among the actors working with and for Everett here. DVD extras: "making-of" documentary; deleted scenes; Q&A with Everett. ★★★ (R: AS, N, P)

"AMERICAN VANDAL: SEASON ONE"

With the Funny or Die outlet among its producers, this Netflix series spoofs true-crime shows — such as the streaming service's own "Making a Murderer" — as it investigates a high-school prank. Here, the crime in question is the damage done to faculty members' cars, but some others don't believe the student pegged as the prime suspect actually is responsible. The cast purposely is made up of relative unknowns, though Griffin Gluck has co-starred in such shows as "Back in the Game" and "Red Band Society," and Lifetime viewers may recognize Saxon Sharbino from the oft-repeated movie "Stalker's Prey." This series did get a second season revolving around a different "crime." ★★★ (Not rated: AS, P)

NASCAR ROARS BACK TO LIFE FOR 2019 WITH PRESEASON ACTION

Brad Keselowski

SportsNews
BY GEORGE DICKIE

It's an unmistakable sign of spring when crowds file into Daytona International Speedway and race-car exhaust perfumes the Northern Florida air, thus portending the arrival of another NASCAR season.

Yes, the Monster Energy Cup is back and its preseason reaches a crescendo this week with three races, all of which air on Fox Sports 1.

The schedule kicks off Sunday, Feb. 10, with the Advance Auto Parts Clash, a race made up of 25- and 50-lap segments that awards no championship points but uses a large cash purse to incent drivers to go all out. Daytona pole winners, former Clash winners and former Daytona 500 pole winners who competed full time last year make up the field. Brad Keselowski won this race a year ago.

Then on Thursday, Feb. 14, it's the Duel at Daytona, twin 150-mile races that serve as the qualifying race for the Daytona 500. Ryan Blaney and Chase Elliott came away victorious last year.

Speaking of the Great American Race, the 2019 Daytona 500 kicks off the Cup's regular season Sunday, Feb. 17.

There are a few choice offerings this week in terms of NBA action, which is limited because of the impending All-Star Weekend.

Arguably the highlight of the week comes with the TNT doubleheader on Tuesday, Feb. 12, which kicks off with a clash of East rivals when Joel Embiid and the Philadelphia 76ers play host to Al Horford and the Boston Celtics. The Celts have gotten the best the Sixers so far this season, winning twice in two tries.

Then in the nightcap, it's a clash of West foes when Donovan Mitchell and the Utah Jazz drop in on Kevin Durant and the Golden State Warriors. These teams have split the two games they've played in 2018-19, both in Salt Lake City.

Also noteworthy is the Sunday game, a meeting of two teams that could be seeing each other come June when the Sixers play host to LeBron James and the Los Angeles Lakers in these teams' second meeting of the year.

On the subject of All-Star weekend, that gets going in Charlotte, N.C., Friday, Feb. 15, on ESPN, with the NBA All-Star Celebrity Game, followed on TNT by the Rising Stars Game.

Then Saturday, Feb. 16, on TNT, it's the All-Star Saturday Night, featuring the Skills Challenge, the Three-Point Contest and the Slam Dunk Contest.

At this writing, participants for these events had yet to be determined.

The 68th NBA All-Star Game takes place at Spectrum Center Sunday, Feb. 17.

KEANU REEVES' TOP 10 MOVIES

BY JAY BOBBIN

"Knock Knock" (2015): A real change of pace for Reeves, this drama of an on-his-own family man who makes the mistake of opening his door to strangers is completely harrowing.

"John Wick" (2014): Reeves is effectively moody as a former hit man who dusts off his skills to seek revenge against those who viciously attacked him.

"Something's Gotta Give" (2003): Reeves rises to the occasion opposite some old pros, playing a young doctor who becomes Jack Nicholson's unlikely romantic rival for Diane Keaton.

"The Matrix" (1999): One of the blockbusters in Reeves' career thus far, the filmmaking Wachowskis' hugely original fantasy makes his character the hero of an alternate, high-tech world.

"The Devil's Advocate" (1997): Just for enduring Al Pacino's nonstop home-stretch yelling, Reeves deserves credit for this melodrama about an attorney who discovers his boss' true identity.

"Speed" (1994): Here's the other Reeves blockbuster, a smartly plotted thriller that sets up his L.A. cop against a vengeful bomber (Dennis Hopper) whose device will destroy a passenger-packed bus if it goes slower than 50 mph.

"My Own Private Idaho" (1991): Reeves and River Phoenix are solidly intense as male hustlers.

"Point Break" (1991): Reeves is perfect as an athlete-turned-FBI agent sent to infiltrate the gang of a bank-robbing surfer (Patrick Swayze).

"Bill & Ted's Excellent Adventure" (1989): You may not expect to find this goofy comedy on the list, but Reeves and Alex Winter are downright iconic as the dim-bulb time travelers.

"River's Edge" (1986): Several talents including Reeves, Crispin Glover and Lone Skye were launched by this drama of murder among friends.

MONDAY'S BEST BETS

Matt Czuchy

8 p.m. on 13 35 51

The Resident

Conrad (Matt Czuchy) plans to take Nic (Emily VanCamp) out for a romantic Valentine's Day evening, but when those plans are derailed, he gives the reservation away to someone who could really use it in the new episode "Stupid Things in the Name of Sex." Meanwhile, Devon and Mina (Manish Dayal, Shaunette Renée Wilson) try to figure out why an apparently healthy neighbor inexplicably died, and Kit (Jane Leeves) offers some dating advice to a patient with a sex-related injury.

9 p.m. on (STARZ) Movie: Scotty and the Secret History of Hollywood

Somewhat like the man at its center, Matt Tyrnauer's 2017 documentary has a little something for everyone. Much of its content relates to the Golden Age of Hollywood, but instead of glamour and nostalgia, the film focuses primarily on Scotty Bowers, a little-known "celebrity-adjacent" Tinseltown civilian who made a comfortable living as a procurer to the stars. In short, Bowers catered discreetly to the more personal needs of both actors and actresses. His story may be salacious, but it's not really sordid.

TUESDAY'S BEST BETS

Daniel Radcliffe

9 p.m. on (BRAVO) The Real Housewives of Beverly Hills

New housewife Denise Richards and her friend Camille Grammer join returning housewives Erika Girardi, Dorit Kemsley, Teddi Melencamp Arroyave, Lisa Rinna, Kyle Richards and Lisa Vanderpump as this resilient guilty pleasure opens Season 9. Expect the usual quota of laughs, many of them uncomfortable, accompanied by even more of the franchise's trademark confrontations, some of which threaten to realign the group dynamics permanently.

10:30 p.m. on (TBS) Miracle Workers

Daniel Radcliffe and Steve Buscemi executive produce and star in this seven-episode limited comedy series based on Simon Rich's book, "What in God's Name." Responsible for answering the prayers of humanity, low-level angel Craig (Radcliffe) reports to God (Buscemi), who has lost interest in his high-maintenance creation and is ready to destroy the world again. To prove mankind is worth saving, Craig and angelic colleague Eliza (Geraldine Viswanathan) accept a wager that they can grant a seemingly impossible prayer. Guest stars slated to appear during the season include Tituss Burgess, Margaret Cho, Angela Kinsey and Tim Meadows.

WEDNESDAY'S BEST BETS

Hayley Orrantia

8 p.m. on 20 23 The Goldbergs

Erica and Valley Erica (Hayley Orrantia, Alison Rich) finally manage to find a new band member to replace Lainey in their group, but Geoff (Sam Lerner) starts to regret his assisting them in that quest when Barry (Troy Gentile) convinces him the newcomer has ulterior designs on Erica in the new episode "My Valentine Boy." Meanwhile, Adam and Murray (Sean Giambrone, Jeff Garlin) feverishly compete to find the best gift for Beverly (Wendi McLendon-Covey) so they won't have to go to Valentine's Day dinner with her.

9 p.m. on 6 10 Big Brother: Celebrity Edition

Season 2 of this reality show spinoff may have been much shorter than its higher-profile CBS summertime sibling, but it managed to pack in its share of unexpected surprises almost from the get-go, as viewers saw Houseguest Anthony Scaramucci bail from the cast even before the first elimination episode. With a cast made up mostly of personalities who are — how to put this politely? — a bit past their sell-by dates, the competition for camera time occasionally got a little desperate. Tonight's finale reveals the winner.

THURSDAY'S BEST BETS

Ben McKenzie

8 p.m. on 13 35 51
Gotham

Series star Ben McKenzie directed the new episode "13 Stitches," which finds his TV alter ego, Detective James Gordon, putting together what looks to be an unlikely team to protect the city from Eduardo Dornance (guest star Shane West) and his Delta Force. Elsewhere, even as Lee Thompkins (Morena Baccarin) resurfaces, Barbara (Erin Richards) drops a bombshell on Gordon that could change his life forever. Meanwhile, Selina and Penguin (Camren Bicondova, Robin Lord Taylor) unite to outwit another villain, Maggie (guest star Sarah Schenckan).

FRIDAY'S BEST BETS

Rachelle Lefevre

8:30 p.m. on 20 28
Speechless

JJ's (Micah Fowler) love match with Izzy (guest star Kayla Maisonet) devolves into a cage match with Kenneth (Cedric Yarbrough) in this new holiday-themed episode. Elsewhere, a frustrated Ray (Mason Cook) can't find a viable date for a prepaid romantic evening out, so he's reduced to taking out Dylan (Kyla Kenedy), while Maya and Jimmy's (Minnie Driver, John Ross Bowie) disdain for Valentine's Day disappears when they hit on a scheme to profit from it.

9 p.m. on 13 35 51
Proven Innocent

Danny Strong, who won an Emmy for writing HBO's Sarah Palin docu-drama "Game Change," co-created this new legal drama set inside a scrappy law firm where Madeline Scott (Rachelle Lefevre) and her team work tirelessly on behalf of innocents who were wrongfully convicted. Their work feels unusually personal for Madeline, who along with her brother (Riley Smith) was found guilty as a teenager in a sensational murder trial. Kelsey Grammer and Vincent Kartheiser co-star.

COVER STORY

'Meaning of Life' could mean another Grammy for Kelly Clarkson

By Jay Bobbin

Kelly Clarkson has one Grammy nomination this year, and to her, it's the one that really counts.

Now a coach on "The Voice," the first "American Idol" is up for best pop vocal album for "Meaning of Life" at the 61st Annual Grammy Awards, which someone else with a "Voice" connection — Alicia Keys — will host from Los Angeles' Staples Center in a live-across-the-country CBS broadcast Sunday, Feb. 10.

"When I started making this album, this literally was my goal," friendly three-time Grammy winner Clarkson admits of her current bid. "I love dancing, but I don't do lots of choreography or pyrotechnics, so my (live) show is about musicianship and about the singer. Whenever I make an album, I want it to be really solid vocally, so it's always my favorite thing when I get nominated for it.

"I know most artists want album of the year or record of the year," adds Clarkson, "and those are awesome and really incredible, but it's always amazing to get a vocal nomination when you're really striving for it. So much has been going on, I forgot when it was even being announced, but I'm very excited about it."

Others up for the best pop vocal album Grammy include Camila Cabello (for "Camila"), Ariana Grande ("Sweetener"), Shawn Mendes' (for his eponymous "Shawn Mendes"), Pink ("Beautiful Trauma") and Taylor Swift ("Reputation"). Clarkson is encouraging appreciation of everyone in the category — and, for that matter, the entire event — no matter who wins.

"It's hard to compare me and Shawn Mendes, or me and Kendrick Lamar," she reflects. "I think people get into this competitive thing that says, 'This person's better because they won.' Well ... no. I've been in the same category with the Beatles and Bonnie Raitt before and won, so it has nothing to do with who's best. It just happens to be that the moment is that person's moment, for whatever reason."

Married mom Clarkson is anticipating potentially her busiest year yet: Her Meaning of Life Tour launched recently and continues through March; her third season on NBC's "The Voice" starts later this month; she's in the voice cast of this May's animated movie "UglyDolls"; and her syndicated weekday talk show debuts this fall.

"We took the longest vacation I've taken in a very long time for Christmas and New Year's," Clarkson says, "and my family and I were all talking about how huge 2018 was. Then my husband and I started going over the schedule for 2019, and I was like, 'Wait a minute. I think 2019 might kick 2018's a...!' It's a big year, and a lot of goals are being accomplished, which is really cool."

all about...
 BY JAY BOBBIN
JENNA FISCHER

Regina Marie Fischer was born on March 7, 1974, in Fort Wayne, Ind. She began performing at age six, in an acting workshop conducted by her history-teacher mother. (Her younger sister, Emily, also is a teacher.)

While pursuing a theater degree (with a journalism minor) at Missouri's Truman State University, Fischer was part of a touring murder-mystery dinner theater troupe. She continued stage work upon moving to Los Angeles, but it took three years for her to land her first speaking role on television, in an episode of "Spin City."

At a convention of TV critics last year, Fischer discussed how she lost a job she had — as a transcriber of interview sessions — by crashing an earlier convention's party for "Saturday Night Live," where she met and received acting advice from Molly Shannon.

Fischer's breakthrough came with the role of Pam on NBC's American version of the comedy "The Office," and in playing the part, she drew upon the time she had spent as a receptionist and administrative assistant while pursuing her performing dreams.

TV success on "The Office" translated into movie roles for Fischer, with film credits including "Slither" (written and directed by her then-husband, James Gunn), "Blades of Glory," "Walk Hard: The Dewey Cox Story," "The Promotion" and "Solitary Man."

After "The Office," Fischer returned to series TV work in "You, Me and the Apocalypse," on which she also was an associate producer. She currently stars with Oliver Hudson in the ABC sitcom "Splitting Up Together," which counts Ellen DeGeneres among its executive producers.

Devoted to the cause of animal rescue, Fischer now is married to screenwriter Lee Kirk. They have a son and a daughter.

SATURDAY'S BEST BETS

Delta Goodrem

8 p.m. on (LIFE)

Olivia Newton-John: Hopelessly Devoted to You

Australian singer-actress Delta Goodrem takes the title role — and performs her own vocals — in this 2019 biopic that chronicles the eventful professional and personal journey of the beloved English-Australian songbird and actress, whose five-decade career has included such high points as starring in the blockbuster movie version of “Grease.” Off camera, however, Newton-John has waged multiple harrowing battles with cancer. Hugo Johnstone-Burt, Todd Lasance, Richard Brancatisano, Anthony Brandon Wong and Georgia Flood also star.

9 p.m. on (SHOW)

Movie: Midnight Sun

Adapted from a 2006 Japanese film of the same title, Scott Speer’s 2018 romantic drama stars Bella Thorne as Katie Price, a teenager who suffers from a rare condition that prevents her from going out into the sunlight. Her days are spent housebound, with only her father (Rob Riggle) and best friend (Quinn Shephard) for occasional company. A sensitive hunk (Patrick Schwarzenegger) falls for her after they meet on a series of nighttime dates, but he doesn’t know that Katie faces a grim future.
