Education's revolving door

Administrators look to address alarming teacher turnover rates at 7 schools

By Payne Ray
pray@dailycommercial.com

TAVARES — Seven Lake schools are struggling with high teacher turnover, including two that lost more than half the faculty in 2017-18, school district data show.

A report presented to the Lake County School Board on Jan. 7 showed that the overall turnover rate at Lake schools is about 24 percent, significantly higher than the national average of 16 percent but within the normal range in Florida.

But at Beverly Shores Elementary, Carver Middle, Oak Park Middle, Eustis Middle, Eustis Heights Elementary, Umatilla Middle and Sawgrass Bay Elementary, more than 40 percent of the faculty left.

At Oak Park and Beverly Shores, the problem was even more acute. About 52 percent of Oak Park teachers left by the end of the 2017-18 year and at Beverly Shores 57 percent did.

The seven high-turnover schools in Lake share some characteristics that experts say are common in such schools: low grades and high populations of poor or minority students.

Researchers say such high turnover has a high cost for students: It disrupts a school's ability to develop good workplace culture and hurts student performance.

Top Lake School District administrators say the report in January provided their first in-depth look at the problem, and while they are working to address the issue, they didn't identify specific plans for attacking the problem.

Meanwhile, the head of Lake County's teachers union theorizes that the root problem at those high-turnover schools is poor leadership.

Poverty drives turnover

Chris Redding, a teacher turnover researcher and assistant professor at the University of Florida, said that high turnover is usually driven by other issues.

Trump formula would cost US allies big

Countries would pay the full price of stationing US troops on their territory, plus 50 percent more

By John Hudson, Anne Gearan, Philip Rucker and Dan Lamothe
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In private discussions with his aides, President Donald Trump has devised an eye-popping formula to address one of his long-standing complaints: that allies hosting U.S. forces don't pay Washington enough money.

Under the formula, countries would pay the full cost of stationing American troops on their territory, plus 50 percent more, said U.S. and foreign officials familiar with the idea, which could have allies contributing five times what they provide.

As budget deficit swells, Washington mostly shrugs

By Andrew Taylor
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The federal budget deficit is ballooning on President Donald Trump's watch and few in Washington seem to care.

And even if they did, the political dynamics that enabled bipartisan deficit-cutting deals decades ago has disappeared, replaced by bitter partisanship and chronic dysfunction.

That's the reality that will greet Trump's latest budget, which will promptly be shelved after landing with a thud on Monday. Like previous spending blueprints, Trump's plan for the 2020 budget year will propose cuts to many domestic programs favored by lawmakers in both parties but leave alone politically popular retirement programs such as Medicare and Social Security.

Forecasters warn of possible tornadoes in South

The National Weather Service has issued tornado watches for parts of Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Arkansas and says those states face an “enhanced risk” for severe weather.

The watches come just a week after powerful twisters swept through Alabama and killed 23 people.

A tornado watch means conditions are favorable for tornadoes and severe thunderstorms in and close to the watch area. The watches issued Saturday for Tennessee and Mississippi were in effect until 6 p.m. EST; for Arkansas and Louisiana, 4 p.m. EST.

The weather service’s Storm Prediction Center also warned of damaging winds and large hail and said via Twitter that cities at risk include Memphis and Nashville in Tennessee; Southaven, Mississippi; and Louisville, Kentucky.

Child among 3 killed in crash involving school bus

The Oklahoma Highway Patrol says a child was among three people killed in a head-on crash involving a school bus.

A patrol report says the crash occurred just after 7:15 p.m. Friday on U.S. 377 near Bowlegs, about 50 miles (80 kilometers) southeast of Oklahoma City. A girl on the bus was killed, along with two people in an SUV.

The Konawa school district’s website says the girl was one of six Junior High softball players returning home from a game. Five other girls on the bus and the bus driver were treated and released from area hospitals.

Italian envoy confirms deaths of 2 climbers in Pakistan

Two European mountain climbers who went missing on the Pakistani mountain Nanga Parbat, the world’s ninth-tallest, were confirmed dead Saturday by Italy’s ambassador to Pakistan.

Ambassador Stefano Pontecorvo tweeted that the search for Italian Daniele Nardi and Briton Tom Ballard ended after a team confirmed that silhouettes spotted at a height of about 19,356 feet were the bodies of the two climbers missing since Feb. 24. Karrar Haidri, secretary of the Pakistan Alpine Club, said Pakistani authorities had done all they could to find the climbers.

Israel debate reaches flash point

Omar furor reflects intensifying national rift over Israel

By David Crary

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — For Congress, the allegations of anti-Semitism directed toward Rep. Ilhan Omar have no precedent. Yet on college campuses, in state legislatures and in many other venues nationwide, the polarized debate about Israel is a familiar conflict and likely to intensify in the months and years ahead.

Fueled by a wave of youthful activists, including many Jews aligning with Muslims, criticism of Israel’s policies toward the Palestinians has grown in volume and scope, with persistent calls for boycotts and disinvestment. Pro-Israel organizations and politicians have countered with tough responses, and efforts to reconcile the differences have gained little traction.

Among those fearing escalation is Deborah Lipstadt, a history professor at Emory University and author of a new book, “Antisemitism: Here and Now,” about the recent resurgence of anti-Semitism in the United States and Europe. She calls herself an optimist, but she says it’s hard to be hopeful in the current political climate.

“Leaders on the left and the right are using this phenomenon as a way of drumming up support, claiming they’re victims,” she said. “I fear it will get far worse before it gets better.”

Congress has never experienced this kind of furor involving a Muslim member accused of anti-Semitism.

Omar, a freshman congresswoman from Minnesota, sparked turmoil within the Democratic caucus with her criticisms of Israel and suggestions that Israel’s supporters wanted lawmakers to pledge “allegiance” to a foreign country. Divided Democrats eventually drafted a resolution that condemned a wide range of bigotry and did not mention Omar by name.

One of the first two Muslim women in Congress, Omar supports a contentious part of the overall dispute — the Boycott, Divestment, Sanctions movement, or BDS, which promotes various forms of boycotts against Israel.

Some celebrities — including actress Natalie Portman and singer Lana Del Rey — have withdrawn from appearances in Israel in recent months out of concern over Israeli policies. Several scholarly associations, including the American Studies Association and the Association for Asian American Studies, have supported an academic boycott, even as other associations and academic leaders have opposed that campaign.

One of the bitterest cases in academe involved Steven Salaita, whose offer of a tenured faculty position at the University of Illinois was revoked in 2014 after he posted a series of tweets harshly critical of Israel. He sued the university and won a financial settlement, but he was unable to find a permanent academic position elsewhere. He posted a blog piece in February mentioning his current job as a school bus driver near Washington.

In response to the BDS movement, 26 states have passed laws seeking to deter businesses and individuals from participating in it. For example, a Texas law requires contractors who work for or do business with the state to certify that they do not boycott Israel or Israeli-occupied territories.

The American Civil Liberties Union has filed lawsuits challenging the Texas law and similar laws in three other states, saying they violate the right to free speech. A separate lawsuit was filed in Texas by a speech language pathologist, Bahia Amawi, who said she lost her contract with the state because she would not sign the certification.

Among the companies entangled in the conflict is Airbnb, which announced in November that it would stop listing properties in the West Bank. Texas officials say the state will halt business with Airbnb because its move ran afoul of the anti-BDS law. Airbnb says it opposes the BDS campaign and was simply implementing a policy to de-list residences in disputed territories around the world.

One of the groups supporting BDS is Jewish Voice for Peace, which was founded in 1996 and endorsed the boycott campaign in 2015. Rabbi Alissa Wise, the group’s deputy director, says the boycott campaign has been effective, even in the face of state laws seeking to curtail it.

“These laws are meant to silence and repress,” she said. “But they can’t change people’s hearts and minds.”

The Anti-Defamation League, whose mission is to combat anti-Semitism, denounces Jewish Voice for Peace as “a radical anti-Israel activist group” that advocates a total boycott.

The ADL’s CEO and national director, Jonathan Greenblatt, says not all people engaged in the BDS campaign are anti-Semitic, but he contends the movement itself “is anti-Semitic in its origins.”

“It is not focused on resolving the conflict in the best interest of all parties,” Greenblatt said.

CLERMONT Cops: Fleeing man aims car at deputy

A man attempting to run from police Thursday nearly ran one officer down, but met with a tree instead, police say.

Shawn Strickland, 47, was charged with domestic battery, fleeing the police, battery against law enforcement and driving under the influence.

Lake County Sheriff's deputies were called to 16617 Sunshine Ave. around 1 a.m. for a report of domestic battery, but during the call they were told the man was attempting to flee in a gray sedan.

One deputy spotted the car and attempted to approach on foot while ordering the driver, Strickland, to get out.

Instead, Strickland allegedly wheeled the car around to face the deputy and hit the gas, striking the deputies knee as he got out of the way.

According to the report, Strickland then struck the car of another deputy before running into a tree.

Strickland had two children in the car with him, which deputies safely removed before taking Strickland into custody.

TAVARES Lunch box of drugs brings two arrests

Police arrested two men Thursday morning when "I just stole this" didn't serve as a solid alibi for owning a lunch box full of drugs, according to a police report.

Shane Taylor, 34, and Ryan Kreisler, 30, were arrested near Tavares Recreational Park after officers discovered a lunch box in their car containing seven different drugs, an electronic scale, several plastic bags and a handwritten ledger book in their car.

Taylor was charged with intent to sell the drugs, but he reportedly told officers he hadn't known they were in the lunch box. He had stolen it thinking there was just marijuana inside, he allegedly told police.

According to the arrest affidavit, the box contained several pills, marijuana, cocaine, methamphetamine, MDMA, what officers suspected was LSD, and a $25 check made out to Taylor.

Kreisler was only charged with possession of methamphetamine, as a pipe and bag of the drug were found with his wallet in the passenger door.

EDGEWATER Deputies find missing infant with parents

Two parents wanted for disappearing with their 4-month-old daughter against a court order were arrested at a central Florida shopping mall.

The Volusia County Sheriff's Office says Chloe Wall and Elliot Singleton were found on Saturday with their daughter, Skylah Singleton, at an Orlando mall, more than 60 miles from where they had disappeared.

The sheriff's office says the parents had warrants charging them with concealing the location of a child contrary to a court order.

Deputies say Wall was arrested Tuesday on drug possession charges and Singleton also was arrested for resisting arrest without violence.

Child welfare officials conducted an investigation and concluded that Skylah should be taken into custody.

Deputies say the family didn't cooperate, and when the parents were released from jail, they disappeared with Skylah.

LEGISLATURE NOTEBOOK

Local lawmakers busy in 1st week

By Katie Sartoris
ksartoris@dailyccommercial.com

TALLAHASSEE — Florida's 2019 legislative session started last week.

The 60-day time clock began ticking Tuesday for the state's lawmakers to get their bills onto the statute books. Perhaps their biggest job, however, is to pass a constitutionally required balanced budget.

A bit about the process: When a bill is filed, it's referred to committees. To advance, each committee must find the bill favorable. After clearing those hurdles and making it to the chamber floors, a majority vote in both the House and the Senate will send it to the governor's desk for approval.

Here are a few things local legislators did this week.

Rep. Anthony Sabatini, R-Howey-in-the-Hills

A big bill filed by Sabatini aimed to deregulate some alcohol sales and is scheduled to be heard in the Business & Professions Subcommittee on Tuesday. The multi-faceted measure would allow craft distillers to produce up to 250,000 gallons of liquor annually — the current cap is 75,000 gallons; eliminate the six-bottle sales limit at craft distilleries; eliminate wine bottle and container size limitations; allow cider to be sold in growlers; eliminate a law that required restaurants to sell a full meal for consumers to buy wine to-go; legalize 2-liter sized beers and ciders; allow consumers to order goods from a craft distillery to be shipped to their homes; and let breweries allow dogs on their premises.

Though there are modern statutes, many of the state's alcohol laws call back to the prohibition era, Sabatini said.

Florida county deals with spate of dog attacks

By Cindy Swirko

GAINESVILLE — Dog bites are fairly common in Alachua County, but the severity of the attacks in a series of recent maulings, including the death of a toddler Friday, is unprecedented — at least in recent decades.

Starting with Swinburn and her owner Linda Bell in September, the attacks have killed one person, injured four people, and killed three dogs and a cat.

The attacking dogs in all of the cases have or will be euthanized by Alachua County Animal Services. Until Friday's case, all of the recent attacks have occurred when dogs got loose from their property.

Some procedures were changed after Bella's case to provide improved response and investigation of dog attacks but the Feb. 26 mauling at Palmetto Villas that left Lorraine Anderson with a severed ear, among other wounds, and her chihuahua Tico dead, shows that gaps exist.

R. Kelly: 'We're going to straighten all this ... out'

By Don Babwin and Teresa Crawford
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — R. Kelly walked out of a Chicago jail on Saturday after someone who officials say did not want to be publicly identified paid $161,633 that the R&B singer owed in back child support.

Kelly, who was ordered taken into custody on Wednesday by a judge after Kelly said he didn't have the entire amount he owed, briefly spoke with reporters, telling them: "I promise you, we're going to straighten all this stuff out." He said that was all he could say, a stark contrast to a nationally televised broadcast that aired earlier in the week in which he cried and ranted about being "assassinated" by allegations of sexual abuse that led to criminal charges last month.

Cara Smith., the chief policy officer for the Cook County sheriff's office, which runs the jail, said a person who wished to remain anonymous handed a check on Saturday morning to the county clerk's office for the full amount of Kelly's back child support. A bond slip where people putting up money to secure an inmate's release write their names and relationship to the inmate was left blank, Smith said.

Kelly's attorney, Steve Greenberg, said he could not discuss the child support payment because of a judge's gag order in that case.

As is done with other high-profile inmates, Kelly, 52, was held in a solo cell under round-the-clock observation.

It was his second trip to jail in a matter of weeks and the second time a person has stepped up with money to get Kelly out of jail.

Last month, after he was charged with 10 counts of aggravated sexual abuse pertaining to three girls and a woman, he was taken to the same jail. Kelly, whose attorney said at the time that the singer's finances were in disarray, then spent a weekend in jail before a 47-year-old suburban Chicago business owner posted his $100,000 bail.

His attorney and publicist told a similar story this week before and after the hearing in which the judge ordered Kelly into custody, with the publicist telling reporters that Kelly was prepared to pay $50,000 to $60,000 on Wednesday but was not able to pay the entire amount.

Kelly has denied any wrongdoing and has pleaded not guilty to the sexual abuse charges. He has also very publicly proclaimed his innocence, telling Gayle King in an interview that aired Wednesday on "CBS This Morning" that all his accusers were lying about him.

passed its first hurdle. A subcommittee found it favorable, and it moves on now to another one.

Rep. Jennifer Sullivan, R-Mt. Dora

Sullivan, who is the chairwoman of the House Education Committee, has filed mostly local appropriations bills.

Among them: Requests for $1.5 million for a new education complex at Trout Lake Nature Center, $825,000 for stormwater upgrades in Tavares, and $7 million to realign County Road 427 from Central Avenue to State Road 46 in Sorrento.

All were deemed favorable in their respective subcommittees, and will move on to other committees.

Sen. Dennis Baxley, R-Ocala

If Joint Resolution 274 passes this session, voters may see an amendment about term limits for school board members on the 2020 ballot. The resolution, sponsored by Baxley, made it on the calendar for the Ethics and Elections Committee's Tuesday meeting. Resolutions are somewhat different than bills, though. After a resolution clears committees, three-fifths votes from both legislative houses gets it on the ballot. Gubernatorial approval isn't required in this case. Sabatini has sponsored an identical resolution in the House.

A bill that would require sexual misconduct reporting in health care will be heard in a Criminal Justice Committee meeting next week. Under this proposal, all entities licensed by the Agency for Health Care Administration would have to adopt a sexual misconduct policy

A Gainesville Police officer went to the house, saw that a table was covering a hole in the wooden fence and left without reporting the incident to Alachua County Animal Services.

"What could be different is the way we train people to think about pets. This officer who had gone to the house ... the (owner) needs to know that a 100-pound dog could move that little card table," Anderson said. "To think that (the attack) could have been prevented, God, I am a mess. I am going to have a lot of problems in the future because of this."

Meanwhile, Swinburn said she plans to push the adoption of a version of "Fabian's Law," legislation in Arizona named in honor of a mauled dog that carries greater penalties for owners whose dogs get loose and attack other animals or people.

For instance, the owner of a dog that has a history of biting or is likely to endanger others faces a felony if an attack happens while the dog is at large. A person who does not take reasonable care to keep a dog from escaping faces a misdemeanor charge.

Nathaniel Pettiford, the owner of the dogs that attacked Swinburn and Bella, has been charged with animal cruelty and culpable negligence. Animal cruelty is a third-degree felony and culpable negligence is a first-degree misdemeanor.

"I want to have the same law passed for Bella," Swinburn said in an email. "There are too many attacks in Gainesville and surrounding cities (that) nobody is taking responsibility for.

"The owners are getting away with this and the laws need to be more strict. I will take this to the legislature and state capitol for Justice For BELLA and the others who have suffered these devastating attacks!"

Alachua County commissioners and Animal Services have made changes since the Bella case to improve responses by animal officers to aggressive dog calls on weekends.

Now, GPD is considering a protocol in which the Combined Communications Center, which dispatches for the county and for GPD, would automatically notify an on-call animal services officer when it notifies GPD of an aggressive dog case, said GPD Inspector Jorge Campos.

Under current procedures, the telecommunicator asks a series of questions of people reporting aggressive dogs.

The first is whether the dog is actively aggressive and endangering people.

If the dog is actively aggressive or endangering, the call is graded as a Priority 2 on the scale of 1 to 7 and law enforcement will respond quickly. If the dog is not actively aggressive or endangering, the call goes to Animal Services without law enforcement responding.

Campos said if Animal Services officers are notified for Priority 2 calls along with law enforcement, the response can be more effective.

"Right now the on-call person doesn't come out unless we call them and say 'You need to come out,'" Campos said. "I believe we are going to ask the communications center that if someone reports an aggressive dog, that animal control gets notified at the same time or shortly thereafter. Then animal control can at least start tracking those calls."

Dogbites are not unusual in Alachua County — hundreds are reported to the Alachua County Health Department every year. The reports are compiled by year, but details of the circumstances of each case are not put into a database that could be queried for specifics about the case.

However, a sampling of individual reports show that many of the bites occur in the dog owner's home or property. The victims are typically a family member or guest, and a number of the reports explain that the bite happened during play. Dog aggression is complex and can be found in canines of all breeds, ages and genders, said Terry Curtis, a clinical behaviorist with the University of Florida College of Veterinary Medicine.

Whether a dog with aggressive tendencies acts on them depends on the circumstances.

"If a dog has been inside the house or in the yard for a period of time, watching people going by, that can be very threatening to the dog. So the dog gets out and it is ready to go after what it perceives as a threat," Curtis said. "Most dogs are not attacking out of the blue. There is either a threat component to it ... or a predatory component to it. It is not going to be a dominance thing — there is no dominance from dogs to people."

Predatory action — chasing everything that goes by — is different than acting on a perceived threat. Curtis said some dogs are hard-wired toward predatory behavior.

Pepe Peruyero is a former GPD dog handler who created J&K Canine Academy after seeing stacks of euthanized dogs on the Animal Services shelter loading dock. Many of the dogs had been relinquished because of bad behavior.

Euthanasia has since dropped dramatically at Animal Services because of increased adoptions in coordination with local rescue organizations.

A direct correlation exists between a dog's environment and how it perceives behavior that is either acceptable, situational or impulsive, Peruyero said.

"If I encourage my dog to bark at dogs when they go by, if my dog lives in a yard that is constantly taunted by kids, if my dog is tied up on a chain or a line and is lunging all day long — the likelihood of that dog building up that aggression is greater," Peruyero said. "If you want to have a dog, whether it's a two-pound Yorkie or a bull mastiff, you need to care for that dog. There is a responsibility. Shade, shelter, food and water is not enough. The dog should live in an environment that is conducive to its well-being."

Don't stop the music: Campaign songs tell candidates' story

By Elana Schor
The Associated Press

When Elizabeth Warren took the stage to launch her presidential run to the strains of Dolly Parton's "9 to 5," the song seemed to sum up the spirit of a candidacy built on giving workers a fairer shake.

Only days earlier, fellow Democrat Kamala Harris had exited her own campaign kickoff rally with an equally fitting musical choice of "My Shot," an anthem of ambition for political change from the hit musical "Hamilton." The song's chorus, delivered by a young Alexander Hamilton, underscored Harris' confident emergence as a top-tier White House contender: "I'm just like my country, I'm young, scrappy and hungry, and I'm not throwing away my shot."

Presidential candidates have used thematic songs to great effect in recent decades.

Bill Clinton's upstart victory remains linked in the popular imagination with Fleetwood Mac's "Don't Stop (Thinking About Tomorrow)." Barack Obama showed off his musical fluency by picking multiple go-to songs in genres from hip-hop to rock to Motown.

But using campaign songs to help connect with voters can cause trouble for presidential hopefuls if musicians object to the use of their works, as Warren could be finding out.

"We did not approve the request, and we do not approve requests like this of (a) political nature," Parton's manager, Danny Nozell, told The Associated Press by email when asked about the Massachusetts senator's use of "9 to 5."

Nozell, CEO of CTK Management, did not respond to a question about whether Parton's team might register any formal complaint about Warren's use of the song, which she played during a Friday town hall meeting in New York City.

If Parton escalates the matter, there's no shortage of precedent: The late Tom Petty reportedly sent a cease-and-desist letter to Rep. Michele Bachmann, R-Minn., over the use of his song "American Girl" in her 2011 campaign, and former President George W. Bush got a similar letter from Petty over his choice of the singer's "I Won't Back Down" during the 2000 campaign.

President Donald Trump has faced his own rejection from popular artists after taking office, most recently from Rihanna.

She tweeted in November that "not for much longer" would her music be permitted to play at Trump rallies, and soon after her representatives reportedly sent their own cease-and-desist request.

The Warren campaign declined to comment on Nozell's response regarding its use of "9 to 5."

Guidelines for the use of campaign songs from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers state that "it may be easier for" campaigns to be licensed through performing rights organizations such as ASCAP, BMI, or SESAC to ensure that the use of songs at multiple large venues fully adheres to copyright statutes.

"Because licenses for venues such as convention centers and hotels generally exclude rights to perform music at events organized by a third party, political campaigns need their own ASCAP license to use the works in its repertory," the organization states.

The Recording Industry Association of America, however, notes in its own guidance that licensing to use a specific song "can be obtained by either the campaign or the venue."

When campaign songs catch on, the relationship between candidates and their favorite tunes can prove fruitful.

One of Obama's favorites, Stevie Wonder's "Signed Sealed Delivered I'm Yours," was performed live at the 2008 Democratic National Convention as well as during one of Obama's inaugural balls.

He said poverty levels in a student population generally go hand in hand with high turnover, and that can be seen in a school's minority population, which is more likely to be in the lower economic strata, and also in the number of students who qualify for free or reduced lunches.

The only school among the seven without a large minority population is Umatilla Middle, but like the other six, Umatilla is considered economically disadvantaged by the Florida Department of Economic Opportunity.

Students from low-income families tend to shoulder more burdens for their families, come to school less prepared and have difficulty paying fees for certain classes or extracurriculars.

Betsy Farner teaches at Tavares High School. And while Tavares High isn't among the district's high-turnover schools, 40 percent of its students come from minority populations and 60 percent of its students qualify for free or reduced lunch, so she has a view of the academic challenges that face poorer families.

Farner plans to retire after this year, not because she doesn't like working with those students but because serving low-income students is emotionally and financially stressful.

Students from low-income families often have an extra set of responsibilities, she said. Some of her students have had jobs that required them to miss school time or that interfere with their ability to do homework. Others have had to take care of sick family members or have had to pick up slack for families that can't or won't support them.

They're also more likely to come to class without basic materials, like pencils, paper, folders or bags. Sometimes, she said, a teacher has to make up for that and provide for the students from their own supplies. And if a class has a lab fee, a teacher will probably end up paying that for the student as well, leaving them with less money in their classroom budget.

Farner also said many poor students struggle emotionally. Two of her students were suicidal in 2018, she said, and she had trouble setting that aside at the end of the day.

In some cases, a large minority population also means a larger number of people who are still learning to speak English, especially at younger ages.

A former teacher at Sawgrass Bay, who asked to remain anonymous for fear of reprisals, agreed. Sawgrass Bay has a large population of students for whom English is a second language.

Teachers said that can be difficult to deal with when ESE specialists are so few, a problem that district Chief of Transformation Emily Weiskopf said is common across the county.

Redding, the UF researcher, said the turnover problem is self-perpetuating. Schools with high turnover will most likely continue to have high turnover.

Recent history bears that out in Lake.

Between 2015 and 2018, the school district as a whole saw a steady increase in turnover, from around 18 percent to 24 percent. During that time, each of the seven high-turnover schools maintained a relatively high turnover rate.

In 2015-16, the county average was 19.5 percent. Three of the schools were hovering around 35 percent, and Beverly Shores had 52 percent turnover that year.

Eustis Middle and Sawgrass Bay sat around 27 percent, but at Carver turnover was a very modest 18.75 percent.

In 2016-17, the county average went to 20.6 percent. Carver was the highest that year, about 39 percent, with Oak Park coming in at 38.

Eustis Middle and Sawgrass Bay settled down around 22 percent as the rest

Superintendent Diane Kornegay says the district is watching with interest seven schools that are experiencing high teacher turnover rates.

[DAILY COMMERCIAL FILE]

approached or surpassed 30 percent.

Then last year, the numbers shot back up, and each of the seven schools exceeded 40 percent turnover.

Lake County Education Association President Stuart Klatte said entry-level teachers often flock to schools with high turnover because that's where the jobs are, stay for a year or two and then leave for either less stressful or higher-paid positions. And with so many entry-level teachers, those schools often don't have enough experienced teachers to mentor the younger ones.

Turnover is also higher when teachers have to teach out of their field. Schools with high turnover often have to fill positions with whoever is capable of teaching a class rather than certified instructors.

At five of the seven high-turnover schools in Lake, 10 percent of the faculty is teaching out of their field of expertise, according to the Florida Department of Education. At the seven schools in the district with the lowest turnover, that number is traditionally below 5 percent, and three of those schools have every teacher working in-field.

Redding said teaching out of field is so impactful because it generates a sense of stress.

"It's difficult to learn how to teach. There's a lot that goes into it," Redding said. "If you don't feel as prepared in the first place it might make it easier for you to make that decision to leave."

He said a school needs to be able to invest more in teachers outside their field to negate that tension.

"It also places more demands on the school to really bring you up to speed in the first place," he said.

All of those problems can be influenced significantly by a school's administration.

A good administration can make the workplace less daunting even when working conditions are otherwise difficult, Redding said, but the average administrator might be caught up in the same challenges the teachers are. If a school doesn't have the materials or money to face its challenges head on, the typical administrator might struggle to work around that, he said.

Leadership to blame?

Klatte believes poor management may be at least partly to blame for turnover at those schools.

With the exception of Carver, he admits the teachers union doesn't have evidence to suggest the administrators weren't doing the job, but past experience tells him it should at least be investigated. But at Carver, he said teachers have complained that administrators weren't helping them manage discipline effectively.

One Carver teacher, who asked to remain anonymous, agreed, saying that in some cases, students sent to the office end up right back in the classroom and that the lack of effective discipline at the school only made disruptive students bolder.

Klatte also said that, more generally, a shift in teachers' perspectives since annual contracts were mandated by the state in 2011 has led to higher turnover everywhere.

"The teacher now sees themselves as a self-employed contractor," Klatte said. "That aggravates the turnover issues because teachers are not loyal to the schools anymore."

Lake County Schools Superintendent Diane Kornegay and Weiskopf wouldn't speculate on the specific causes of turnover at the seven schools, but they did say that 20 percent of the teachers lost in 2017-18 had failed to recertify and district Chief of Staff Chad Farnsworth said that 30 percent of those who left cited "personal reasons" in exit surveys. He said that covered a broad range of possibilities, from spouses getting new jobs elsewhere to a desire to move to a new area, medical troubles or deciding to stay home with kids. It could also include anyone who simply didn't care to say why they left.

The impacts of turnover

Regardless of a teacher's reason for leaving, their absence can create problems both for the students and the school at large.

Redding said when a teacher leaves mid-year, a student's education can be interrupted for up to half a year as a replacement is found.

There's also the chance the quality of education is lower after a replacement is found.

"The new teacher coming in might not necessarily be as qualified as the old one," Redding said.

Sometimes that's because the teacher isn't as experienced as the old one or they have a lower effectiveness rating, but it's also possible the teacher isn't well versed in the subject they are pulled in to teach.

Whatever the case, the impact usually shows up in lower test scores, according to Redding's research.

Students that experience teacher turnover during the course of the academic year typically score 7.5 percent worse on tests than students whose teachers stayed the same. According to the Florida Department of Education, test scores in Florida Standards math at all seven schools are lower than the state average.

For example, the average score of an eighth-grader last year in the Florida Standards geometry test was a five. That average was only achieved once at Lake's high turnover schools, at Umatilla Middle. The rest scored a four.

At the elementary level, fourth-graders across the state scored an average of nine out of 14 in fractions. Eustis Heights performed the best with an average of eight, while Beverly Shores fell to an average of six points.

The problem also extends to school culture, which teachers and principals at Lake's most successful schools have credited with transforming teacher working conditions and student performance. While administrators are often credited with shaping the school culture, Redding said teacher turnover has a major impact on it as well.

Schools with high turnover have difficulty forming a solid culture, he said, because teachers don't stick around long enough to reinforce it. And turnover can become a culture too, he added.

Few solutions

There is no clear consensus on how best to attack the problem.

Redding, who studied the causes and impacts of turnover for years, said any school district could improve by moving effective teachers and administrators to the high-turnover schools.

He added, however, that he didn't know enough about Florida's systems to speculate on the impact of that solution or how contracts could influence that approach.

Lake administrators said they have implemented broad strategies to alleviate some complaints they've heard, including those voiced during a focus group at Sawgrass Bay. One resounding request they heard at the meeting was for increased support for the school's massive ELL population.

Weiskopf said the district has allocated more specialists to the school and plans to continue doing so going forward.

They have also begun training sessions across the district on topics like the best practices for teaching ESE and ELL students. They aren't targeting specific schools with those, but Weiskopf said they were keeping an eye on those seven schools with interest.

Educators are also keeping a close eye on neighboring Orange County, which recently announced a broad community-wide approach to tackling child poverty — an effort launched in part to improve academic performance in economically disadvantaged areas.

Orange is investing $20 million in children's services in nine ZIP codes, based on a report by Forefront Consulting that suggested children in those areas accounted for most of the school district's low third-grade reading scores and juvenile arrests.

The money is a significant addition to the $64 million the city of Orlando already puts into children's services, and by addressing the poverty problem in such a targeted way, it's possible they'll see those grades go up, according to Forefront's report.

That should, in theory, lessen the county's teacher turnover as well.

Klatte said the solution he favors is a simple and free way to make teachers feel more appreciated even when working conditions aren't desirable: give teachers the reins at schools.

"Teachers know how to teach," he said. "Let teachers teach."

Opinions mixed on Trump signing Bibles

While some religious leaders are upset, others say he was just trying to lift the spirits of tornado survivors

By Jennifer McDermott
The Associated Press

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — President Donald Trump was just doing what he could to raise spirits when he signed Bibles at an Alabama church for survivors of a deadly tornado outbreak, many religious leaders say, though some are offended and others say he could have handled it differently.

Hershael York, dean of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary School of Theology in Louisville, Kentucky, said he didn't have a problem with Trump signing Bibles, like former presidents have, because he was asked and because it was important to the people who were asking.

"Though we don't have a national faith, there is faith in our nation, and so it's not at all surprising that people would have politicians sign their Bibles," he said. "Those Bibles are meaningful to them and apparently these politicians are, too."

But the Rev. Donnie Anderson, executive minister of the Rhode Island State Council of Churches, said she was offended by the way Trump scrawled his signature Friday as he autographed Bibles and other things, including hats, and posed for photos. She viewed it, she said, as a "calculated political move" by the Republican president to court his evangelical voting base.

Presidents have a long history of signing Bibles, though earlier presidents typically signed them as gifts to send with a spiritual message. President Ronald Reagan signed a Bible that was sent secretly to Iranian officials in 1986. President Franklin Roosevelt signed the family Bible his attorney general used to take the oath of office in 1939.

It would have been different, Anderson said, if Trump had signed a Bible out of the limelight for someone with whom he had a close connection.

"For me, the Bible is a very important part of my faith, and I don't think it should be used as a political ploy," she said. "I saw it being used just as something out there to symbolize his support for the evangelical community, and it shouldn't be used in that way. People should have more respect for Scripture."

York said that he, personally, would not ask a politician to sign a Bible, but that he has been asked to sign Bibles after he preaches. It feels awkward, he said, but he doesn't refuse.

"If it's meaningful to them to have signatures in their Bible, I'm willing to do that," he said.

Trump visited Alabama on Friday to survey the devastation and pay respects to tornado victims. The tornado carved a path of destruction nearly a mile wide, killing 23 people, including four children and a couple in their 80s, with 10 victims belonging to a single extended family.

At the Providence Baptist Church in Smiths Station, Alabama, the Rev. Rusty Sowell said, the president's visit was uplifting and will help bring attention to a community that will need a long time to recover.

Before leaving the church, Trump posed for a photograph with a fifth-grade volunteer and signed the child's Bible, said Ada Ingram, a local volunteer. The president also signed her sister's Bible, Ingram said. In photos from the visit, Trump is shown signing the cover of a Bible.

Trump should have at least signed inside in a less ostentatious way, said the Rev. Dr. Kevin Cassidy-Maloney.

"It just felt like hubris," said Cassidy-Maloney, pastor at the First Congregational United Church of Christ in Fargo, North Dakota. "It almost felt like a desecration of the holy book to put his signature on the front writ large, literally."

He doesn't think politicians should sign Bibles, he said, because it could be seen as a blurring of church and state and an endorsement of Christianity over other religions.

It would have been out of line if Trump had brought Bibles and given them out, but that wasn't the case, said James Coffin, executive director of the Interfaith Council of Central Florida.

"Too much is being made out of something that doesn't deserve that kind of attention," he said.

Bill Leonard, the founding dean and professor of divinity emeritus at the Wake Forest University School of Divinity in Winston-Salem, North Carolina, woke up to Facebook posts Saturday morning by former students who were upset about Trump signing the Bibles because they don't view him as an appropriate example of spiritual guidance.

UK official: EU playing games over Brexit

By Gregory Katz
The Associated Press

LONDON — With tensions escalating, Britain's House of Commons leader said Saturday that European Union officials need to take seriously British proposals for ending the Brexit impasse before a crucial vote in Parliament.

Andrea Leadsom said EU leaders are wrongly accusing Britain of failing to put forward detailed proposals, while offering proposed solutions that Britain had rejected months ago because they would threaten ties to Northern Ireland.

She told BBC she finds it "extraordinary" that EU leaders are being so intransigent and said she is asking herself what "games" the bloc is playing.

Leadsom said the EU is pushing Britain toward a "no-deal" Brexit that would, paradoxically, make it much harder to avoid a hard border between Ireland and Northern Ireland that both sides say they are trying to prevent.

Her harsh words and Britain's immediate rejection of a proposal offered Friday by top EU negotiator Michel Barnier signal exasperation as the days dwindle before a make or break vote Tuesday in Britain's Parliament on a deeply unpopular withdrawal plan.

The long promised "meaningful vote" on the 585-page withdrawal agreement will signal whether Prime Minister Theresa May has managed to win over Parliament after a shocking loss by a 230-vote margin on the same proposal in January.

May needs something substantive to show from ongoing crisis talks with the EU taking place this weekend if she is to have any hope of victory for her signature legislation.

The chairman of Britain's Conservative Party Saturday urged Parliament to back the bill or risk seeing the entire Brexit process reversed.

Brandon Lewis warned recalcitrant lawmakers, including many in his own party, that if the government's withdrawal plan is voted down it is possible Britain will end up staying in the EU despite the 2016 referendum in favor of severing ties to the EU.

"We need to win that vote," he told BBC, stating that a defeat for the withdrawal plan agreed after two years of negotiations would lead to a totally unpredictable situation.

"Nobody quite knows where we will end up — whether we end up with a hard Brexit with no deal... but there is also a risk with Parliament that we end up with no Brexit at all," he said.

If Parliament rejects the deal again, lawmakers will vote on whether to leave the EU without an agreement on March 29 — a prospect with little evident support in Parliament — or to ask the EU to delay Brexit beyond the scheduled departure date.

May has also warned that a second defeat to her bill could thwart the Brexit process altogether.

But there is no sign of progress in the crisis talks. If anything, the tone in recent days has hardened. EU leaders are adamant in their refusal to make alterations to the legal document that would govern Britain's withdrawal from the 28-nation bloc.

EU leaders have rejected May's effort to cast them as inflexible, with Barnier saying he isn't interested in playing the "blame game."

NEW YORK — U.S. regulators on Friday gave the green light to salmon genetically modified to grow about twice as fast as normal, but the company behind it may face legal challenges before the fish can be sold domestically.

The Food and Drug Administration said it lifted an alert that had prevented AquaBounty from importing its salmon eggs to its Indiana facility, where they would be grown before being sold as food. The agency noted the salmon has already undergone safety reviews, and that it lifted its alert because the fish would be subject to a new regulation that will require companies to disclose when a food is bioengineered.

The move comes despite a pending lawsuit filed by a coalition of consumer, environmental and fishing groups that challenged the FDA's approval of the fish.

"We think a remedy in our case would stop sale of the fish before they're allowed to be sold," said George Kimbrell, legal director for the Center for Food Safety, one of the groups suing the FDA.

AquaBounty was founded in 1991, and it has been working through years of safety reviews and regulatory hurdles to sell its fish in the United States. In 2015, its salmon became the first genetically modified animal approved by the FDA for human consumption. But the agency subsequently issued an alert that stopped the Maynard, Massachusetts-based company from importing its fish eggs until disclosure guidelines for genetically modified foods were resolved.

Called AquAdvantage, the fish is Atlantic salmon modified with DNA from other fish species to grow faster, which the company says will help feed growing demand for animal protein while reducing costs.

AquaBounty CEO Sylvia Wulf said the company expects to get a final certification for its Albany, Indiana, growing facility in the coming weeks. Salmon eggs could then be sent from the company's research and development facility in Canada, and would be harvested after about 18 months when they reach 10 pounds, she said.

Wulf said it's been difficult to engage companies in sales discussions because AquaBounty didn't know when it could start growing the fish in the United States. She said the salmon already has been sold in limited quantities in Canada, where it doesn't have to be labeled as genetically modified. Wulf said she doesn't expect the pending lawsuit to affect the company's U.S. plans.

The genetically modified salmon are raised in tanks and bred to be female and sterile, measures designed to address any fears that they might get into the environment and breed with wild fish. But Kimbrell, of the Center for Food Safety, said the company's own tests have shown it's not 100 percent certain the fish would be sterile, and that concerns about it getting in the environment would grow if the company's operations were to expand.

He also noted the disclosure regulation uses the term "bioengineered," even though most people are more familiar with the term genetically modified. And he pointed out that companies can provide disclosure through codes that have to be scanned.

Implementation of that regulation starts in 2020, though people may start seeing disclosures on packages sooner. The genetic modification for AquaBounty's fish is different from gene-editing technology, which lets scientists snip out specific genes to bring about traits without introducing foreign DNA. Companies are also working to develop a variety of gene-edited crops and animals.

BUDGET

Washington probably will devote months to wrestling over erasing the last remnants of a failed 2011 budget deal that would otherwise cut core Pentagon operations by $71 billion and domestic agencies and foreign aid by $55 billion. Top lawmakers are pushing for a reprise of three prior deals to use spending cuts or new revenues and prop up additional spending rather than defray deficits that are again approaching $1 trillion.

It's put deficit hawks in a gloomy mood.

"The president doesn't care. The leadership of the Democratic Party doesn't care," said former Sen. Judd Gregg, R-N.H. "And social media is in stampede mode."

Trump's budget arrives as the latest Treasury Department figures show a 77 percent spike in the deficit over the first four months of the budget year, driven by falling revenues and steady growth in spending.

Trump's 2017 tax cut bears much of the blame, along with sharp increases in spending for both the Pentagon and domestic agencies and the growing federal retirement costs of the baby boom generation. Promises that the tax cut would stir so much economic growth that it would mostly pay for itself have been proved woefully wrong.

Trump's upcoming budget, however, won't address any of the main factors behind the growing, intractable deficits that have driven the U.S. debt above $22 trillion. Its most striking proposed cuts — to domestic agency operations — were rejected when tea party Republicans controlled the House, and they face equally grim prospects now that Democrats are in the majority.

Trump has given no indication he's much interested in the deficit and he's rejected any idea of curbing Medicare or Social Security, the massive federal retirement programs whose imbalances are the chief deficit drivers.

An administration official said Friday that the president's plan promises to balance the budget in 15 years. The official was not authorized to publicly discuss specifics about the budget before the document's official release and spoke on condition of anonymity.

Democrats have witnessed the retirement of a generation of lawmakers who came up in the 1980s and 1990s and negotiated deficit-cutting deals in 1990 and 1993. But those agreements came at significant political cost to both President George H.W. Bush, who lost re-election, and President Bill Clinton, whose party lost control of Congress in 1995.

But the moderate wing of the Democratic Party has withered with the electoral wipeout of "Blue Dog" Democrats at the hands of tea party forces over recent election cycles.

"Concern about the deficit is so woefully out of fashion that it's hard to even imagine it coming back into fashion," said

Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., one of his party's few remaining deficit hawks. "This is as out of fashion as bell bottoms."

While in control of the House, Republicans used to generate nonbinding budget blueprints that promised to balance the federal ledger by relying on a controversial plan to eventually transform Medicare into a voucher-like program. But they never pursued follow-up legislation that would actually do it.

Republicans, who seized Congress more than two decades ago promising and ultimately achieving balanced budgets during the Clinton administration, have instead focused on two major rounds of tax cuts during the Trump era and the administration of President George W. Bush in 2001.

Nor are Republicans willing to consider tough deficit-cutting steps such as higher taxes or Pentagon budget cuts. Leading Democratic presidential contenders talk of "Medicare for All" and increasing Social Security benefits instead of curbing them.

"You have to get pretty damn serious about revenue as well as defense spending, and those are two things the Republicans don't want to bring into the conversation," said Sen. Dick Durbin, D-Ill. "My Democratic friends who talk about expansion of benefits. I've told them to 'get real.'"

Trump has never gone to the mat for his plan to slash domestic spending such as renewable energy programs.

"If Trump can be criticized I think the perception has been that he has not fought for the spending cuts that he's proposed," said former Sen. Jim DeMint, R-S.C. "There's no upside to trying to cut anything. There's no political reward. But if you cut something there's a lot of political downside."

Neither is there any reservoir of the political will and bipartisan trust required to take the political heat for the tough steps it would take to rein in deficits. And it's not like voters are clamoring for action.

"There's been very little dialogue in the last several years about debt and deficit and how to really be able to address it," said Sen. James Lankford, R-Okla. "It just never came up" in the 2016 election. "It still doesn't come up."

The deficit registered $714 billion during Trump's first year in office but is projected to hit about $900 billion this year, according to the Congressional Budget Office, which says Trump's tax cut will add $1.5 trillion to the deficit over 10 years.

ALLIES

Trump calls the formula "cost plus 50," and it has struck fear in the hearts of U.S. allies who view it as extortionate.

Rumors that the formula could become a global standard have especially rattled Germany, Japan and South Korea, which host thousands of forces, and U.S. officials have mentioned the demand to at least one country in a formal negotiation setting, said people familiar with the matter.

National Security Council spokesman Garrett Marquis said the Trump administration "is committed to getting the best deal for the American people" but would not comment "on any ongoing deliberations regarding specific ideas."

Trump has long complained that U.S. and NATO allies freeload on U.S. military protection, but the cost-plus-50 formula has only gained traction in recent months, said current and former U.S. officials, who like others spoke on the condition of anonymity to discuss sensitive negotiations.

It is not a formal proposal or policy but serves as a kind of "maximum billing" option designed in part to draw attention to an issue that speaks to Trump's demand that allies shoulder more of the burden of their own defense, a senior administration official said.

One of the first U.S. allies to confront the Trump administration's hardball tactics was South Korea, which last month agreed to pay $925 million for hosting 28,500 American troops. That was an 8.2 percent increase from the previous year's payment and about half the total costs. South Korean officials preferred a five-year agreement, but the deal covers only one, meaning they could face pressure to meet Trump's cost-plus-50 demand next year.

A U.S. military official said U.S. Forces Korea had been "sweating" the signing of a new agreement for months.

There are numerous burden-sharing ideas floating around, and Trump has not settled on any one, officials said.

Although it may be a red herring, the phrase "cost plus 50" has appeared on informal lists of options, one official said. But it is not clear what Trump advisers mean by "cost," whether it's the entire budget to run a base and pay U.S. armed forces or some part of that.

U.S. allies hosting permanent American military installations pay for a portion of costs in various ways. Japan and South Korea make cash contributions, while Germany supports the U.S. troop presence through in-kind contributions such as land, infrastructure and construction, in addition to foregone customs duties and taxes.

Trump has called that "in-kind" contribution insufficient, a senior U.S. diplomat said.

For decades, leading foreign policy figures in both parties have urged U.S. allies to take on greater responsibility for their security, but even staunch advocates of burden-sharing have questioned Trump's approach.

"Trump is correct in wanting U.S. allies to bear more responsibility for collective defense, but demanding protection money from them is the wrong way to do it," said Stephen Walt, a scholar of international relations at Harvard University. "Our armed forces are not mercenaries, and we shouldn't send U.S. troops into harm's way just because another country is paying us."

The cost-plus-50 idea would probably not be presented as a blanket demand to all allies, even if Trump ended up signing off on it, several people familiar with elements of the discussion said. Many of his top aides oppose the formula and have succeeded in the past in bringing him down from the maximalist approach, the people said.

The existence of Trump's formula was first reported by Bloomberg News.

Critics of U.S. bases around the world say the bases are costly, stoke tensions with adversaries and have unintended consequences. The Pentagon counters that its 54,000 troops in Japan and presence in South Korea allow it to project power and deter North Korea and China.

In Germany, where the Pentagon has more than 33,000 troops, the U.S. Army announced last year that it could add 1,500 more by 2020 in "a display of our continued commitment to NATO and our collective resolve to support European security."

OUR OPINION

Webster on the wrong side of declaration

Reasonable people may disagree — and do — about the seriousness of the illegal immigration problem at the southern border. It is indisputable that tens of thousands of immigrants attempt annually to cross illegally into the United States and that many succeed. It is also indisputable that there is some criminal element among them and that there is a robust flow of drugs from Mexico into the U.S.

What is disputed, however, is how serious these problems are and whether they pose a grave threat to national security.

President Trump — in an effort to make good on a campaign promise to his base to build a wall “from sea to shining sea,” and having failed to make Mexico pay for it — has characterized illegal immigration as grave, indeed, and used his presidential powers to declare a national emergency to make the American taxpayer pay for the wall. It is a declaration that is largely free of evidence, however, given that the conditions we now see at the border with Mexico are no worse than they’ve been in the last 10 or 20 years.

In fact, they’re probably better.

Data from U.S. Customs and Border Protection show that fewer immigrants are being apprehended along the southern border than at any time in recent memory. Overall, apprehensions have declined 75 percent since 2000.

And while President Trump decries the flow of drugs through the border, Drug Enforcement Administration data reflects that the vast majority of illicit cargo being smuggled across the border is coming through legal ports of entry. So no, building a couple of thousand miles of additional wall won’t help.

Our congressman, Daniel Webster, sides with the president on this issue. In late February, he voted against a measure in the House to quash President Trump’s emergency declaration. The resolution passed, however, and now goes to the Senate, which is also likely to overturn Trump’s declaration. It matters little: the president will certainly veto the measure and proceed to build his wall, if the emergency declaration survives a challenge in court.

We are sorely disappointed in Webster’s stance, but not because he supports the wall. Whether a wall should be erected along the southern border is a matter for reasonable people to debate.

No, we are disappointed in Webster for supporting the emergency declaration, which is a gross overreach of presidential powers.

Remember, Congress’ opposition to funding the wall is not a recent position adopted by the new Democratic House, as the president would have us believe. Trump failed to sell even a conservative, Republican Congress on funding a wall during his first two years in office. It is hard, then, to imagine how illegal immigration along the southern border qualifies as a national emergency when Congress itself — and the majority of Americans, as seen in numerous polls — doesn’t consider it so.

Rather, it appears that President Trump declared this national “emergency” simply to push through one of his policy priorities over the opposition of the legislative branch. It is a direct and dangerous attack on the separation of powers enshrined in our Constitution, and Webster has become a willing accomplice in this assault.

We are reminded that Webster was at times indignant over President Obama’s use of executive orders to bypass Congress during his eight years in office. Yet, our congressman has been noticeably silent as President Trump has rolled up an impressive catalog of executive orders of his own, and is in fact an unabashed cheerleader of the emergency declaration, which is a bold

Politics stifling real immigration solutions

Frank Stanfield

Politics is the art of looking for trouble, finding it everywhere, diagnosing it incorrectly and applying the wrong remedies.”

The quote is from Marx, not Karl Marx, founder of communism, but Groucho, the 1930s movie star who never met a cigar or a wisecrack he didn’t like.

No doubt Groucho and his comic brothers, who skewered politicians in “Duck Soup,” would have been amazed at the childish behavior of Washington politicians in the bickering battle of the border wall, but one partial government shutdown and the threat of another is no laughing matter for those who don’t get paid.

The White House announced Thursday that President Donald Trump will sign a compromise measure, giving him $1.4 billion for the wall, but said he will be declaring a national emergency so he can take money appropriated for other uses.

That sent up howls of protests from the Democrats, and even some Republicans, like Sen. Marco Rubio, R-Florida, and threats of lawsuits.

Democrats have accused President Donald Trump of “manufacturing a crisis.” Trump says the southern border is a “pipeline” for drugs and criminals and a deadly risk for those who hire smugglers to sneak them into the U.S.

Both sides whip out statistics, but whether the number is high or low, courts and cops in Lake and Sumter counties continue to deal with illegals involved in violent crimes and drugs.

In the past several months, one man allegedly hacked his neighbor to death with a machete, a vehicular homicide suspect slipped back into Mexico, and two illegal aliens were caught operating a marijuana grow house in Sumter. In Lake, a jury had to weigh a possible death sentence for a Cuban man on a “hold” from Customs and Immigrations Enforcement.

The Florida Department of Corrections has no ready record of how many of its prisoners could be deported one day, but it’s bound to be a high number. Every person who enters a guilty plea is informed that their decision could result in deportation.

Both sides in the controversy claim that logic is on their side. They are wrong.

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-California, says a wall is “immoral.”

Sen. Chuck Schumer said, “The symbol of America should be the Statue of Liberty, not a 30-foot wall.”

Candidate Trump promised voters in 2016 that there would be a wall, “and Mexico will pay for it.”

It’s partly semantics. Trump, who demanded more than $5 billion, sometimes calls it a “a steel barrier.”

The latest bill includes more border patrol agents, immigration judges, electronic gear and money for humanitarian concerns. The $1 billion-plus for a wall would seem to be a victory for Trump, since Democrats originally vowed not to spend $1.

Dems say they don’t want to waste money on something that is not going to solve the problem, yet they voted for it when Barack Obama was president.

As for wasting money, Congress has no trouble doing that, and on that score, you can’t tell the difference between Republicans and Democrats.

Most Democrats deny the charge that want open borders. Yet, in recent negotiations, they talked of limiting the number of detention beds, which would have force ICE to release thousands of immigrants.

Some of the party’s leftist newcomers, like Congresswoman Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez of New York, says she wants to abolish ICE. Others say they want fundamental changes in the agency.

At one point, Trump offered a three-year extension for the so-called “Dreamers” who were brought to this country by their illegal immigrant parents. Pelosi says it is “non-starter” because it is a “separate issue. Maybe it is a separate issue.

Comprehensive reform efforts have failed. Maybe it’s too big of an issue for Congress and the

The necessity to impeach Trump

Gary Clark

The impeachment of any political leader is a major disruption to the functioning of a government, but it is to be taken when there are actions or crimes that are so serious that they jeopardize the functioning of our government. However, it is the responsibility of Congress to take the necessary steps when actions of politicians require them to do so.

As spelled out in our Constitution, Article 1, Section 2, Clause 5, “the House of Representatives shall have the sole Power of Impeachment.”

For them to not do their job would be a dereliction of duty. Impeachment proceedings to remove an American president have only been carried out twice since the inception of our Constitution.

In 1868, Andrew Johnson was impeached for high crimes and misdemeanors. The primary charge was Johnson’s violation of the Tenure of Office Act, when he removed the Secretary of War from office and 10 more articles, including “bringing disgrace and ridicule to the presidency.”

Simply put, it was Johnson’s “abuse of power” that led to his impeachment.

In 1998, William Jefferson Clinton was impeached “on grounds of perjury to a grand jury and obstruction of justice.” The case against Clinton was primarily due to lying about a sexual relationship with an intern.

There are several reasons impeachment proceedings must begin for Trump:

1. Violation of our Constitution — As he announced his run for president, Trump stated that “Mexicans

Democrats trying to replace Santa Claus in 2020

Russ Sloan

As the Democrat presidential candidates grow in numbers, one will likely emerge as the most generous replacement for Santa Claus in the 2020 campaign. Thus far, it appears that there are no “freebies” that one or more of the candidates will not promise while ignoring the cost to the taxpayers.

The race to replace Santa Claus seems to be driven by a non-presidential candidate, freshly elected 29-year-old Congresswoman Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez, D-NY. Her Green New Deal, other proposals and comments are so far to the left and unrealistic that you would think that no one could possibly support her political agenda.

Yet, a recent poll among Democrats showed that 74 percent would vote for her as president if she was old enough to serve. Check her ideas to do away with planes, cows, fossil fuels, nuclear energy and her proposal to rebuild all existing buildings to become more energy efficient.

Her sheer lunacy is supported by several of the declared Democrat presidential candidates. How did we arrive in our political environment when a 29-year-old congresswoman who does not even know our three branches of government and has no grasp of economics is driving the platforms of several of the declared Democrat candidates for president?

George H.W. Bush did it. So did Jimmy Carter, Gerald Ford and Herbert Hoover. It probably wasn't easy, yet they knew this was what the moment demanded and democracy required. So each of them took that ceremonial ride to the Capitol with the man who had defeated them, and then sat there politely as he took power that had been theirs.

Which brings us to Donald Trump. Can anyone, even in their most fanciful imaginings, see him doing that? Michael Cohen can't. "Given my experience working for Mr. Trump," Trump's former fixer, lawyer and toady told the House Oversight Committee Wednesday, "I fear that if he loses the election in 2020, there will never be a peaceful transition of power."

Let that marinate a moment. And ask yourself: What happens if this guy whose self-definition, whose entire psychological structure, is founded upon a self-image as a man who always wins, loses? Can you see him quietly accepting it with dignity and grace?

One can more readily imagine Mitch McConnell twerking in Times Square.

And if Trump does refuse to accept the verdict of the electorate, what do the people who have followed him slavishly, renouncing common sense, simple decency and the evidence of their own eyes, do then? Will they reject the legitimacy of the new president? Will violence follow?

You may think the entire scenario far-fetched. But in the Trump age, that term hardly has meaning anymore. Indeed, it is a measure of how extraordinary this era is that this fear, expressed by a man who knows Trump better than almost anyone, was not the top take-away from the hearing.

No, most of the chatter has had to do with whether Trump is, as Cohen painted him, a racist, a liar, a con man, and a crook — all important things to know. But surely it is just as important to ponder whether the racist, liar, con man and crook is also a threat.

One wonders if, in largely failing to grapple that question, news media and the electorate are not, yet again, failing to appreciate what an outlier Trump is. It's worth remembering how some of us spent the first six months of his term waiting for him to turn some metaphorical corner and "become presidential." That never happened, and the people who thought it would seem silly in retrospect. They underestimated his willingness and capacity to explode our every expectation and sacred norm.

And they may once again be making that same mistake. John Dean, you will recall, famously warned Richard Nixon of a "cancer" on the presidency. But in 2019, the cancer is the presidency. So there is a need for us to be clear-eyed and sober about what we face. I don't know that we're there yet.

In the impassioned soliloquy with which he closed the hearing, committee chair Elijah Cummings spoke of the need for America to get "back to normal." In those words, there was a probably unintended echo of Lincoln, early in the Civil War, yearning to restore the Union. But what Lincoln later came to realize is that the Union had been so profoundly sundered it could never be returned to what it had been.

The same seems true of us now. "Normal" is gone. If America is to survive this cancer intact, it will have to embrace what Lincoln famously called "a new birth of freedom." In other words, we will have to cobble together a different America — one hopes, a better America — from the broken shards of what used to be.

As the election of 2020 bears down, our ability and willingness to do that is the one great hope this country still has.

FROM THE RIGHT*Bryce Harper and loyaltyCal Thomas

President Harry Truman once said, "If you want a friend in Washington, get a dog." That truism can now be applied to baseball players, notably Bryce Harper.

Harper, a former Washington National and now new member of their National League East rival, the Philadelphia Phillies, recently completed an off-season auction of his talents, signing a 13-year contract worth $330 million to play the rest of his career in Philadelphia.

I have never been one to begrudge a professional athlete, or anyone else, from making as much money as they can. Is he worth it? He is worth whatever the Phillies pay him. This is about loyalty.

There was a time when baseball players were loyal to the team that signed them, except in rare instances when some were traded. The greatest — Ted Williams, Stan Musial, Mickey Mantle, Cal Ripken Jr., and many others — stuck with one team.

Since free agency, players have become like interchangeable parts. One year they are in the local uniform, the next they are wearing different colors and playing for a rival team. Owners partially pay for their large salaries by sticking fans with higher prices for tickets, parking, beverages and food. The last time I attended a Nationals game, a roast beef sandwich cost $12 and domestic beer was $9. Closed-in parking cost $50. The price tag on a player's jersey was $225 (plus tax). Water, peanuts and hot dogs are similarly and ridiculously priced. One can buy a pack of hot dogs at the supermarket for the price of a single one at the ballpark.

The Nationals offered Harper roughly the same money Philadelphia is paying him, but much of it would have been deferred, which apparently caused Harper's agent, Scott Boras, to convince him to go to the Phillies.

In politics, if a Republican is loyal to the president, or his or her principles, that person is regarded by opponents as a sycophant, or rigid and unwilling to compromise. If one is a Democrat and displays such loyalty to a president of that party, and their own beliefs, that politician's motives are regarded as principled. It's not that different in sports, where the individual, not the team, or the paying fans, has become supreme. In politics, it is increasingly about one's re-election prospects; it's not about country first.

Nationals General Manager Mike Rizzo lured Harper to the team seven years ago when he was 19. They groomed him, gave him a platform that allowed him to become an all-star, a most valuable player and a fan favorite. Harper provided great entertainment and the hope — subsequently dashed — that a Washington baseball team, the first since the old Washington Senators in 1924, might just win the World Series. Fans had faith they could overcome what baseball writer Charles Dryden said about an earlier team in 1904: "Washington — first in war, first in peace, and last in the American League."

Harper is not alone in winning big paydays. Manny Machado just signed a $300 million deal with the San Diego Padres. That record amount was eclipsed by Harper's deal by a small amount. So Harper will have bragging rights until someone signs an even bigger contract.

What about fan loyalty? Major League Baseball can look at the problems the NFL had with its fan base when politics invaded the sport. So far, baseball has been free of politics, but how long fans will put up with "here today, gone tomorrow" players is anyone's guess.

It would be a shame if America's pastime went to the dogs.

and Muslims" were coming into our country, killing and raping our women, and if elected, he would keep them out. Once he became president, he implemented a policy to keep people of color from coming into the country. Executive action was taken to put a travel ban in place based solely on Muslim countries. Even though the courts blocked the ban, Trump signed an unconstitutional order. Justice Kennedy stated, "An executive order or law displays unconstitutional animus." In addition to the unconstitutional illegality, Trump's remarks in describing these groups were hateful, racist and degrading to the office of the president.

2. Abuse of power — Abuse of power was illustrated by the firing of James Comey — because he would not stop an investigation involving Michael Flynn, Trump's NSA Director — and by his declaration of a "National Emergency" to override the decision of Congress to not fund the wall. These abuses of power are disrespectful to our system of checks and balances.

3. Conspiring with a foreign adversary — During the 2016 election, investigations have shown that several of Trump's staff were involved with the Russians to help him get elected. In addition to lying by saying no one was involved with the Russians, he helped to write a letter stating it was about adoptions. Several have admitted guilt.

4. Violations of the Emoluments Clause — Since being in office Trump has profited from doing business in his hotels and other businesses by both foreign and domestic entities. Even though he pledged to give up control of his business once elected, he never has. This is a violation of Article 2, Section 2, Clause 7.

5. Obstruction of justice — Examples include the firing of Comey, attempts to prevent Mueller from completing his investigation, helping to write a false report, urging potential witnesses not to cooperate and comments via tweets for Stone to "stay strong." In addition, there is a disregard for law and political norms, threats to freedom of speech and the undermining of our political institutions.

It is necessary to impeach Trump because to continue to allow him to trample over our Constitution with no repercussions can lead to tyranny.

Our system of government requires each branch to do its job. The 2018 election was about electing politicians that would uphold "the rule of law." It is their responsibility to investigate and carry out their duty. Johnson and Clinton were impeached for far lesser crimes than the current president. Congress must step up and do the job required of them by our Constitution.

We also pose these questions to Congressman Webster: Will you be as supportive of an emergency declaration by some future Democratic president to sidestep Congress and funnel tens or hundreds of billions into the looming disaster that is climate change? Will you be as resolute in defense of a president who decrees that gun violence constitutes a national "emergency," giving himself or herself the absolute power to enact what they consider "reasonable" federal restrictions on firearms ownership as permitted by the U.S. Supreme Court?

We didn't think so. But when that time comes, how will you rationalize opposing presidential attempts to address those very real threats to life and property?

Democrat candidate field and how they plan to replace Santa Claus in 2020.

Among the various freebies thus far promised are:

Medicare for all is being championed by Democrat Senators Kamala Harris, D-CA, Bernie Sanders, I-V, Cory Booker, D-NJ, Elizabeth Warren, D-MA and Julian Castro, former Obama Cabinet member. The estimated annual cost is projected to be over $3 trillion, which approaches our nation's current annual income for everything.

A recent poll showed that American's favored Medicare for all by a margin of 56 to 42 percent — until they heard the cost, and then support dropped to 37 percent. Apparently, no lesson was learned about the shortcomings of Obamacare. Democrats want to take Obamacare failures and force them on all Americans.

Free college tuition is also a promise made by Senators Sanders, Booker, Warren and Harris. I am perplexed at the tremendous increase in the cost of tuition, fees and books. Tuition and fees from my college days to the present day have risen 86 fold. Few things in our society, other than medical costs, have risen as dramatically as attending college. Promising free college to everyone is not a solution to the more basic problem: What has caused the staggering increase in college expenses?

But the Democrats have a bigger goody bag than Santa and it can even stretch to accommodate free college tuition.

Recently added to the Democrat promises are reparations to be paid to black Americans for the days of slavery over 150 years ago. This idea is championed by Senators Harris and Warren, along with Julian Castro and Marianne Williamson.

Sen. Warren would like Native Americans included as she desires to make up for her longtime deception of claiming to be Native American. Warren has also promised free child care as an added freebie in an attempt to take the lead in replacing Santa Claus. I'm sure she will soon be joined by other candidates as no Democrat wants to be out-promised.

Then, we come to the $15 minimum wage. This position is supported by most Democrats, including Senators Warren, Sanders, Booker, Gillibrand and Harris. I find this position to be both outrageous and anti-free enterprise.

Most minimum wage jobs are entry-level positions. The minimum wage was never intended to become a living wage encompassing entry-level positions. I was so green in my first full-time job at 14, working in a grocery store, that the butchers behind the meat counter sent me to the hardware store for a left-handed monkey wrench. I dutifully went, much to the amusement of the butchers. Business owners are greatly outnumbered by non-business owners and their entry-level salaries should not be dictated by voters or the government.

As the Democrats veer sharply toward socialism, their presidential candidates are in a tight race to replace Santa Claus in 2020 by offering a huge menu of free stuff while ignoring the staggering costs!

White House in this grid-locked government of ours.

Maybe the citizens of this nation should be the ones asking the tough questions, including:

- Who should be allowed to come, and why?
- Schumer may have forgotten that immigrants used to be stopped at Ellis Island before they could pass the Statue of Liberty. They were screened by doctors, to make sure they could work. They were also questioned to make sure they were not anarchists or people with criminal records.

- Are they willing to assimilate?

Europeans have been shocked by thousands of Mideast refugees who refuse to accept and adapt to the European culture.

- Is it fair? People coming to the U.S. legally sometimes must wait for years to become American citizens.

- How many unskilled workers are needed for the jobs that Americans no longer want? Robots and machines are steadily replacing people in the workforce. Check out the self-checkout lines at Walmart and Home Depot.

- How far will the social services safety net stretch before it breaks? What effect does it have on schools and health care?

The issue is complex, but it is about time for government leaders to come up with some solutions.

Surely it will be easier than it was for Rufus T. Firefly, Groucho's character in "Duck Soup."

"Clear? Huh! Why a 4-year-old child could understand this report. Run out and find me a four-year-old child. I can't make heads or tails out of it."

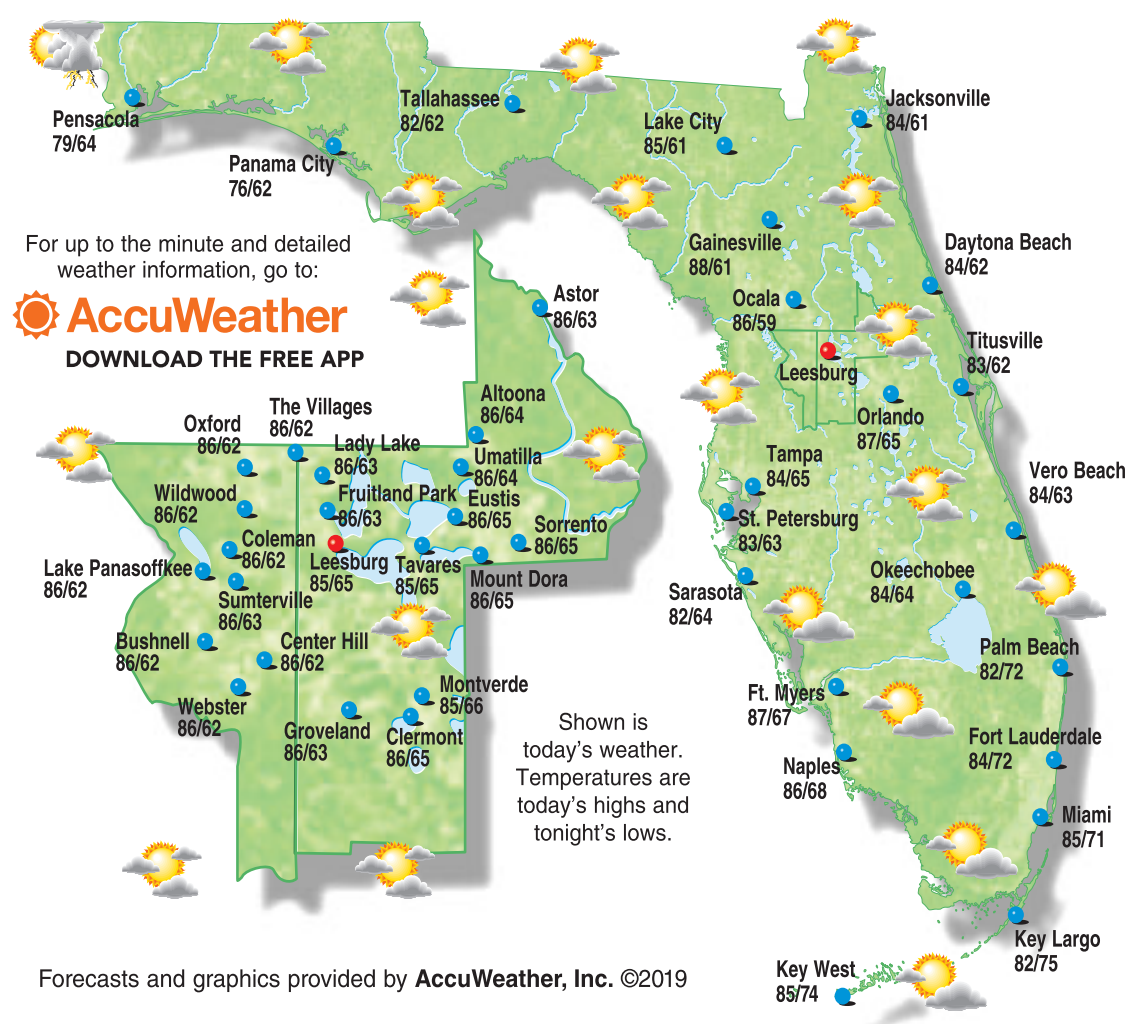

Frank Stanfield is a journalist and published author who lives in Leesburg.

South Lake wrestler takes 3rd

Travis Pawlowski caps senior season at state championships

By Paul Jenkins
paul.jenkins@dailycommercial.com

Travis Pawlowski had already secured a place in South Lake High School history.

The senior wrestler had done that on the first day of the state championships, winning two matches to assure himself of a top-six finish.

That meant no matter what the second day held, Pawlowski would go down as the first in school history to place in the boys state championships.

But Pawlowski wasn't finished. Not by a long shot.

Shrugging off a loss to the top-ranked wrestler in the state to start the day, Pawlowski won his next two matches to take third place in the championships on Saturday at Silver Spurs Arena in Kissimmee.

"It's pretty exciting," Pawlowski said. "To be honest, coming into the championships I thought I could be first or second. Losing that first match (Saturday) brought me down a little bit, but I knew I had to put it behind me."

Will Power continues Penske domination

By Jenna Fryer
AP Auto Racing Writer

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Roger Penske's teams are off to such a strong start to the motorsports season that his IndyCar group arrived at the season-opening event under pressure to match the performance.

No problem at all.

Will Power and Josef Newgarden swept the front row in qualifying to put a pair of Penske's Chevrolets out front for Sunday's race through the downtown streets of St. Petersburg. Not long after the IndyCar race concludes, Penske driver Ryan Blaney will start from the pole in the NASCAR race in Phoenix as the organization seeks its third consecutive Cup victory.

Last weekend, reigning Supercars champion Scott McLaughlin swept the season-opening pair of races in Australia for Penske.

"I think when (Roger) refers to V8 Supercar races, and the last two NASCAR races, the teams are firing on all cylinders," Power said. "The pressure is on us for us to follow the lead."

The pole for Power is his eighth in the last 10 years at St. Pete and 55th of his career, second on the all-time list behind Mario Andretti.

Knocking on the door

Fitzpatrick takes 1-shot lead over McIlroy at Bay Hill

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

ORLANDO — Rory McIlroy seems to have everything going his way at Bay Hill except for recent history.

With three birdies over the last four holes, McIlroy had a 6-under 66 on Saturday that left him one shot behind Matt Fitzpatrick and in the final group of a PGA Tour event for the third time in five starts this year, and the ninth time dating to the start of 2018.

That's a sign of consistently good play.

There's also some frustration from not having won from the final group since the Irish Open in 2016.

And by the look of Bay Hill in the warm, late afternoon — greens that looked yellow, fairways feeling tighter in such firm conditions — it won't be any easier.

"Just what I needed," McIlroy said. "I did everything I needed to do today to get myself back in the golf tournament, and excited to have another chance tomorrow."

Fitzpatrick managed to avoid bogeys on a Bay Hill course so firm he could barely find any pitch marks on the greens Saturday. It led to a 5-under 67 and a one-shot lead as he goes for his first PGA Tour title.

He was at 9-under 207, which spoke to the difficulty of a fast, fiery course that would have made Arnie proud. It was the highest 54-hole score to lead at Bay Hill since Ben Crenshaw was at 210 in 1993.

That would have surprised no one who had to play it, especially late in the warm afternoon.

Fitzpatrick wasn't aware that Keegan Bradley and Tommy Fleetwood, the co-leaders after 36 holes, had quickly gone in reverse. But it didn't take him long to figure it out. He hit a sand wedge from 115 yards to just inside 10 feet, and he couldn't even find where the ball landed.

7-time champ Johnson still searching for answers in Phoenix

Jimmie Johnson makes a pit stop during a NASCAR Monster Energy Cup Series race at Atlanta Motor Speedway, Feb. 24 in Hampton, Ga. [JOHN AMIS/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

The Associated Press

AVONDALE, Ariz. — Jimmie Johnson is fighting a cold.

It's the kind of debilitating, in-your-throat cold that makes it painful to swallow, much less go for a run. The seven-time NASCAR Cup Series champion tried on a cool morning in the desert but quickly bailed, putting off the resumption of his Boston Marathon training for another day.

As if Johnson doesn't have enough to deal with right now. The cold hit him hard last weekend at Las Vegas, when he was in the midst of another ho-hum run in another shaky start to the season for Hendrick Motorsports. But it really whipped Johnson early this week, when the team was turning its attention to Sunday's race at ISM Raceway near Phoenix.

He has four wins at the track, second only to Kevin Harvick, and that's a good omen as he tries to end a winless drought stretching 62 points races to his victory at Dover in June 2017.

"The last couple of years we've just been off a bit," Johnson said, "and you can point fingers in a lot of different directions, and believe me we have. And we've tried to address everything we think is necessary to get back on top and we're trending the right way, but not at the pace we want."

Johnson's winless season a year ago was his first in 17 full-time seasons with Hendrick, and he later acknowledged it "put a strain" on his relationship with crew chief Chad Knaus. So after working together since his rookie season in 2002, the two split heading into this season.

Computer to call balls and strikes in minor league

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Get ready for strikes by robots.

No, overworked machines aren't walking out in a labor protest.

Computers will be used for ball/strike calls starting April 25 in the independent Atlantic League, where the distance between home and first will be shortened by 3 inches. The ground between the mound and home plate will lengthen by 2 feet for the second half of the season beginning July 12.

The 60-foot-6-inch distance between the front of the pitching rubber and the back point of home plate has been standard since 1893, but Major League Baseball reached a three-year deal to experiment in the Atlantic League, an eight-team circuit that occasionally produces big leaguers. Infield defensive shifts will be limited. Pitchers there will have to get used to 62 feet, 2 inches this summer.

"That'll make a bigger difference than the 3 inches at first," New York Yankees first baseman Greg Bird said.

Plate umpires will wear earpieces and be informed of ball/strike calls by a TrackMan computer system that uses Doppler radar. Umps will have the ability to override the computer, which considers a pitch a strike when the ball bounces and then crosses the zone. TrackMan also does not evaluate check swings.

"The beauty of baseball is that it's not foolproof. You've got to hit a round ball with a cylindrical bat square, and then you've got to get it past people," said Joe West, who umpired his first big league game in 1976. "The game is typically American. It's always somebody else's fault when they lose — and usually it's us."

MLB has evaluated its umpires since first starting to install a QuesTec system in 2001 that umpires initially criticized as being inaccurate.

MLB umpire Joe West, right, talks with a player in the ninth inning during a game between the Arizona Diamondbacks and the Washington Nationals, on May 13, 2018, in Phoenix. West, who has umpired more than 5,000 big-league games, said the 2016 TrackMan computer system test was far from perfect. [AP PHOTO/RICK SCUTERI, FILE]

Questec was used at a maximum of 11 ballparks in 2008, its final year.

A PitchF/x system, a partnership of MLB Advanced Media and Sportvision, was the basis of evaluations from 2009-16, and the TrackMan system was tested during the final year of that span. TrackMan has been used to evaluate umpires since 2017.

West, who has umpired more than 5,000 big league games and is on track to break Bill Klem's record in 2020, said the 2016 test was far from perfect.

"It missed 500 pitches in April, and when I say it missed 500 pitches, that didn't mean they called them wrong. They didn't call them at all," he said.

In addition, bases will become 18-inch squares in the Atlantic League, up from the 15-inch squares that have been standard since 1877. That will in effect cut the distance from the front of home plate to the front of first base from 87 feet, 9 inches to 87 feet 6 inches. The 90-foot measurement between bases is from the back of the plate to the back corner of first and third along the foul line.

While the distance between the mound and the plate will be lengthened, the height will remain 10 inches — its level since 1969.

"Changing the distance, that seems a little odd to me," Yankees manager Aaron Boone said. "I know lowering the mound is an interesting one, obviously, something that would favor offense and maybe in some level help with some pitching injuries."

Other changes for the season:

- Infield shifts will be restricted by requiring two infielders to be on each side of second base when a pitcher releases his pitch. Infielders also will be prohibited from setting up on the outfield grass.

- Each pitcher must face at least three batters or complete the half-inning, unless injured.

- Between inning breaks will be cut from 2 minutes, 5 seconds to 1:45.

- Mound visits are banned, except for pitching changes or medical issues.

Atlantic League teams are in Bridgewater, New Jersey; Central Islip, New York; High Point, North Carolina; Lancaster, Pennsylvania; New Britain, Connecticut; Sugar Land, Texas; Waldorf, Maryland; and York, Pennsylvania.

Southern Maryland is at Sugar Land in the opener.

Jerome helps rally No. 2 Virginia past Louisville

The Associated Press

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Ty Jerome scored 24 points, including the go-ahead free throw with 5:34 remaining, and No. 2 Virginia held off Louisville 73-68 on Saturday to clinch the top seed in next week's Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament.

Kyle Guy added 13 points and Jay Huff also made huge contributions at both ends as Virginia (28-2, 16-2) won its eighth in a row.

The Cavaliers will head to Charlotte, North Carolina, as the top seed and with a double-bye for the fourth time in the last six years. No. 3 North Carolina had a chance to tie for the top spot when it faced No. 4 Duke later Saturday, but the Cavaliers hold the tiebreaker by virtue of their 69-61 victory at UNC on Feb. 11.

Jordan Nwora scored 19 and Malik Williams 12 for the Cardinals (19-12, 10-8), who lost their ninth in a row in the series and for the sixth time in the last eight games under first-year coach Chris Mack. The Cardinals missed nine of their last 11 shots.

Louisville used a 20-4 run spanning the half to open a 47-40 lead early in the second half, quieting the sellout crowd at John Paul Jones Arena until Virginia immediately scored seven straight to tie it. The game was tied at 49 when Louisville scored six in a row to go back ahead and the lead flip-flopped until Jerome followed a three-point play by Christen Cunningham by making a pair of free throws.

That put Virginia ahead 63-62 and when Louisville turned the ball over on its next possession, Jerome found Huff free at the top of the key for his second 3-pointer. Huff also had two steals and a block during the rally, and Guy and Braxton Key hit 3-pointers.

AUBURN 84, No. 5 TENNESSEE 80: Jared Harper made four straight free throws over the final 31 seconds to help Auburn beat Tennessee in its regular-season finale. Chuma Okeke led Auburn (22-9, 11-7 Southeastern Conference) with 22 points. Grant Williams had 25 points and nine rebounds for the Vols (27-4, 15-3). They could have clinched at least a share of the SEC regular-season title with a victory but now need No. 10 LSU to lose to Vanderbilt.

No. 6 KENTUCKY 66, FLORIDA 57: Tyler Herro scored 16 points and led a big second-half run that helped Kentucky overcome Florida. The Wildcats (26-5, 15-3 Southeastern Conference) went back and forth with the Gators (17-14, 9-9) early in the second half and trailed 40-39 with 13:46 remaining. Herro had six points during a 15-2 spree, hitting a couple of shots in the lane and adding two free throws, to give Kentucky a 54-42 advantage. The Wildcats capped the seven-minute burst by scoring 10 straight points. PJ Washington added 15 points for Kentucky. Kevarrius Hayes had 19 points for Florida.

No. 8 TEXAS TECH 80, IOWA STATE 73: Jarrett Culver scored a career-high 31 points, Davide Moretti added 20 and Texas Tech beat Iowa State to wrap up its first Big 12 regular-season title. Matt Mooney added 13 points for the Red Raiders (26-5, 14-4 Big 12), winners of nine straight heading into the postseason. Their last league crown came in the defunct Southwestern Conference in 1996. Lindell Wigginton and Marial Shayok each scored 17 points for the Cyclones (20-11, 9-9).

No. 11 PURDUE 70, NORTH-WESTERN 57: Carsen Edwards scored 21 points and Purdue clinched a share of the Big Ten regular-season championship. The Boilermakers (23-8, 16-4) secured the No. 2 seed in the conference tournament in Chicago and a share of their second regular-season title in three years. They came in tied with Michigan State and Michigan, who played each other Saturday night. A.J. Turner scored 14 points for the last-place Wildcats (13-18, 4-16). Vic Law had 13 before getting carried off the court with an apparent leg injury in the second half.

No. 13 KANSAS 78, BAYLOR 70: Dedric Lawson scored 23 points, including 11 of 12 from the free-throw line, to help No. 13 Kansas beat Baylor and stay undefeated at home. Kansas freshmen Devon Dotson, David McCormack and Quentin Grimes had 15, 12 and nine points, respectively. Jared Butler led the way for Baylor (19-12, 10-8), scoring a career-high 31 points in 36 minutes.

No. 14 FLORIDA STATE 65, WAKE FOREST 57: Trent Forrest scored 11 points and Florida State reeled off 18 straight points in the second half. The Seminoles (25-6, 13-5 Atlantic Coast Conference) have won 12 of their last 13 games. Brandon Childress scored 13 points for the Demon Deacons (11-19, 4-14). GEORGETOWN 86, No. 16 MARQUETTE 84: James Akinjo scored 25 points, Mac McClung added 23 and Georgetown beat Marquette, the Golden Eagles' fourth straight loss to close the regular season. Jamorko Pickett and Jessie Govan each added 10 points for the Hoyas (18-13, 9-9 Big East). Markus Howard led Marquette (23-8, 12-6) with 28 points, and Joey Hauser added 16. The Golden Eagles missed a chance to tie Villanova for the conference title.

No. 22 WOFFORD 99, VMI 72: Nathan Hoover scored 17 points and Wofford extended its school-record winning streak to 18 games, beating VMI in the quarterfinals of the Southern Conference Tournament. Fletcher Magee, the Southern Conference Player of the Year, was limited to 11 points on 4-of-11 shooting for Wofford (27-4). He made two 3-pointers, moving within 13 of breaking the NCAA Division I record of 504 career 3s held by Travis Bader of Oakland. Wofford will face ETSU in semifinals. Bubba Parham led the Keydets (11-21) with 22 points.

SETON HALL 79, No. 23 VILLANOVA 75: Myles Powell scored 20 points, Myles Cale added 19 and Seton Hall upset Villanova, three days after knocking off No. 16 Marquette to revive its chances of getting into the NCAA Tournament. Seton Hall (18-12, 9-9), picked to finish eighth in the 10-team conference in the preseason poll, has exceeded all expectations playing with lone senior Michael Nzei. Jared Rhoden had a career-high 15 points. Villanova (22-9, 13-5) came into the game needing a win to clinch its fifth outright title in six years. Despite the loss, the Wildcats won the crown and the No. 1 seed in next week's tournament when Georgetown beat Marquette. Collin Gillespie had 22 points for Villanova.

TEMPLE 67, No. 25 CENTRAL FLORIDA 62: Shizz Alston Jr. scored 21 points, Justyn Hamilton tied a career high with 13 and Temple beat Central Florida in Owls coach Fran Dunphy's final home game before he steps down at the end of the season. Quinton Rose broke a 52-all tie with a highlight-reel slam over Dayon Griffin with 4:12 remaining. Rose scored nine of his 11 points in the second half for the Owls (23-8, 13-5 American Athletic Conference). Aubrey Dawkins led UCF (23-7, 13-5) with a career-high 36 points.

NFL's QB market features several big names

By Mark Maske
The Washington Post

The not-yet-official trades that will put Joe Flacco in Denver and Case Keenum in Washington and the expected signing of free agent Nick Foles by Jacksonville are the first moves in the quarterback reshuffling during this NFL offseason.

But more maneuvers are coming in a quarterback market that has big names, hefty contracts and the requisite intrigue but, in truth, revolves around players who, with the notable exception of Foles, have worn out their welcomes or lost starting jobs and no longer are regarded as franchise centerpieces.

"You're not buying at the top of the market with this group," a front office executive with one NFL team said last week in Indianapolis at the scouting combine.

The quarterback shopping being done by NFL teams this offseason is not exactly coming from the bargain bin. Flacco and Foles are former Super Bowl MVPs. Keenum is one disappointing season with the Broncos removed from taking the Minnesota Vikings to the NFC title game.

But this is not like last offseason, when Kirk Cousins hit the unrestricted free agent market coming off three straight 4,000-yard passing seasons with the Redskins and landed a fully guaranteed three-year, $84 million contract with the Vikings. This is about quarterback-needy teams hoping for the best with less-than-ideal solutions that amount to the best available options.

In the Broncos' case, that means hoping that Flacco has some more good football left in him at age 34. He lost his starting job in Baltimore this past season when he suffered a hip injury and the Ravens thrived with rookie Lamar Jackson as his replacement. The Broncos are inheriting the three years and $63 million remaining on Flacco's contract in a trade that, when it becomes official Wednesday, will send a fourth-round draft pick to the Ravens.

Even in nice weather, spring training can be a grind

By Noah Trister
Associated Press

LAKELAND — Earlier this week, Detroit manager Ron Gardenhire left several of his top players out of the starting lineup. It was a rainy morning, but that wasn't the only reason. Gardenhire said some were dealing with aches and pains.

"I talked to a number of our guys," Gardenhire said Tuesday. "Because of these hard fields in spring training, they get little hips and groin soreness, and I just said — weather, hips and groin, that's not good. So I just changed the whole lineup."

It may look like a few weeks of relaxed fun in the sun, but make no mistake: Spring training can be a grind. Pitchers need to build up their arms slowly, and position players face their own challenges. At this time of year, Florida and Arizona climates obviously are better for baseball than many others, but the warm, sunny weather does have a few drawbacks.

Spring training is halfway over now, and Kansas City infielder Whit Merrifield already feels like he's had enough.

"I wish spring training would be done, right about now — but I understand pitchers need to build their arms up and all that," Merrifield said. "It should be three

The Flacco trade represents the latest attempt by Broncos executive John Elway to resolve a quarterback dilemma that he failed to fix with Brock Osweiler, Trevor Siemian, Paxton Lynch or, most recently, with Keenum, who was signed last offseason to a two-year, $36 million contract in free agency. So Keenum loses his job in Denver to Flacco a year after being displaced by Cousins in Minnesota, and the Redskins will hope that Keenum can recapture the magic of a 2017 season in which he played at a near-MVP level for the Vikings.

Foles is the closest thing in this market to a big-ticket quarterback. He led the Philadelphia Eagles to a Super Bowl title in the 2017 season and got them back into the NFC playoffs last season, both times while filling in for an injured Carson Wentz. He probably will land a contract worth more than $20 million per season from the Jaguars after buying his way out of a $20 million mutual option for next season in his deal with the Eagles, who remain committed to Wentz as their No. 1 quarterback and opted against franchise-tagging Foles.

But even Foles comes with question marks. He was a perfect fit for the Eagles, who played better the past two seasons with Foles at quarterback than with Wentz. But before reviving his career in Philadelphia, Foles was regarded as a journeyman who'd had inglorious stints with the St. Louis Rams and Kansas City Chiefs.

With Foles reportedly headed to Jacksonville, the Jaguars probably will release Blake Bortles. The Miami Dolphins likewise appear prepared to release their starter, Ryan Tannehill. They become options for teams searching for quarterbacks.

Bortles and Tannehill might not be the only prominent veterans available. There has been speculation that the Cincinnati Bengals might be willing to trade Andy Dalton. There has been talk of the Oakland Raiders' willingness to part with Derek Carr.

Sharks beat Blues in OT to take Western Conference lead

The Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Kevin Labanc scored at 3:21 of overtime, Timo Meier had two goals and the San Jose Sharks beat the St. Louis Blues 3-2 on Saturday to take the Western Conference lead.

Labanc scored his 12th goal off assists from Logan Couture and Tomas Hertl.

Meier extended his goals streak to four games with his 25th and 26th to help San Jose win its fourth straight and move a point ahead of the idle Calgary Flames. The Sharks are 13-3-1 in their last 17 games.

Brayden Schenn and Pat Maroon scored for the Blues. St. Louis lost for the third time in five games after going 13-1-1 in its previous 15.

AVALANCHE 3, SABRES 0:

Nathan MacKinnon had a goal and two assists, Philipp

Grubauer stopped 18 shots for his second shutout of the season and playoff-chasing Colorado beat Buffalo. Mikko Rantanen scored on the power play and Gabriel Bourque added a full-length, empty-net goal for the Avalanche. They were missing captain Gabriel Landeskog with the All-Star forward sidelined four-to-six weeks due to an upper-body injury. The Sabres dropped their fourth straight on coach Phil Housley's 55th birthday.

NCAA can still claim victory after losing federal antitrust case

By Ralph D. Russo
The Associated Press

The NCAA was able to claim victory Friday night after a judge ruled against the governing body for college sports in a federal antitrust lawsuit.

U.S. District Judge Claudia Wilken in Oakland, California, said college football and men's and women's basketball players competing at the NCAA's highest level should be permitted to receive compensation from schools beyond the current athletic scholarship, but only if the benefits are tied to education.

The NCAA cannot "limit compensation or benefits related to education," Wilken wrote. That opens the door to athletes receiving more scholarship money to pursue postgraduate degrees, finish undergraduate degrees or study abroad. The NCAA could not, under the court's injunction, limit schools if they choose to provide athletes items that could be considered school supplies such as computers, science equipment or musical instruments.

"Technically the plaintiffs won the case and the NCAA will not be happy that they were found to be in violation of antitrust law, but ultimately this allows the NCAA to keep the bulk of their amateurism rules in place," said Gabe Feldman director of the Tulane University sports law program.

The plaintiffs in the so-called Alston cases were seeking much more.

Plaintiffs had asked the judge to lift all NCAA caps on compensation and strike down all rules prohibiting schools from giving athletes in revenue-generating sports more financial incentives for competing. The goal was to create a free market, where conferences set rules for compensating athletes, but this ruling still allows the NCAA to prohibit cash compensation untethered to education-related expenses.

The claim against the NCAA and the 11 conferences that have participated in the Football Bowl Subdivision was originally brought by former West Virginia football player Shawne Alston.

It was later merged with similar lawsuits, including a notable case brought by former Clemson football player Martin Jenkins.

Plaintiffs argued the NCAA illegally restricts schools from compensating football and men's and women's basketball players beyond what is traditionally covered by a scholarship. That includes tuition, room and board and books, plus a cost-of-attendance stipend to cover incidentals such as travel.

Plaintiffs touted the ruling as "monumental."

"We have proven to the court that the NCAA's weak justifications for this unfair system are based on a self-serving mythology that does not match the facts," said Steve Berman, the Seattle-based lead attorney for the plaintiffs. "Today's ruling will change college sports as we know it, forever."

Feldman, though, said: "The remedy is relatively narrow and this is certainly not the sea change that the plaintiffs were looking for in college sports."

The NCAA argued altering amateurism rules would lead to pay-for-play, fundamentally damaging college sports and harming academic integration of athletes.

"The court's decision recognizes that college sports should be played by student-athletes, not by paid professionals," NCAA chief legal counsel Donald Remy said in a statement. "The decision acknowledges that the popularity of college sports stems in part from the fact that these athletes are indeed students, who must not be paid unlimited cash sums unrelated to education. NCAA rules actively provide a pathway for tens of thousands of student-athletes each year to receive a college education debt-free.

AREA FISHING REPORT

Tip of the week: According to fishingtipsdepot.com, when fishing in rivers, try to do so near islands. Good-sized fish often can be found in those areas.

1. Yankeetown/Waccasassa: Jim Zaloga of Captains Cove Outfitters writes that trout fishing has picked up and the redfish are leaving the creeks. There were even a couple of sharks caught last week. A good spot for trout would be long point and short point by the intake canal. You might even catch a pompano or permit there also. Shrimp have been good size lately and they have been readily available.

2. Crystal River/Homosassa: Capt. William Toney writes that with this week's burst of cold air, expect the cooler water to bunch the trout back up. Again, rocky points and knee-deep rock flats will hold the fish. D.O.A. glow jerk baits and MirrOlure MirrOdines will get the bite. The snook bite has been good on the incoming tide. They seem to be laying more away from the keys in sandy holes or deep pockets. Toney said he will fish his way in from about 100 yards away from the intended spot so as not to "run" the snook over. Toney expects that any time now will bring some mixed fish action to start out on the inshore rock piles. Trout, Spanish mackerel, flounder, sea bass and bluefish will feed on shrimp near the bottom and sometimes will create a mud. Soft plastic lures in dark colors will get the bite. Remember, if you are lucky enough to come across one of these muds, fish the up tide end of it to stay with the fish. Tripletail have made an appearance on the stone crab trap buoys. The waters west of Crystal River seem to have more of them. When a tripletail is spotted do a wide circle around it and set up a drift to let the boat quietly drift to within casting distance with a live shrimp. High incoming tide will be early morning or late evening this weekend.

3. Withlacoochee: No update.

4. Orange Lake/Lochloosa: Anglers have been busy catching specks near the pads of late. Minnows and jigs have been the baits of choice. Others have caught specks while trolling on the edge, close to the cypress trees. Several specks in the 2-pound range have been caught. Some bass also has been caught. Everything will be ideal once the water temperature rises a little bit.

5. Ocklawaha River: Liz at Fat Daddy's reports that specks are hitting in abundance. Most anglers are trolling, and the specks have started to move toward the pads and will be there once the full moon occurs. Minnows and/or jigs have been the primary baits of choice.

6. Salt Springs: According to Liz at Fat Daddy's, just like everywhere else, specks have been biting on the St. Johns River. She said anglers have had success using minnows or jigs or a combination of both. Roger Robbins of Buck 'N Bass SportsCenter reports that Rodman Reservoir has produced some nice bass with a few weighing more than 10 pounds and with many topping eight pounds. Wild shiners and green steno stick baits have been caught in the stumps below the dam using minnows and jigs. Gill Reaper has a feather-type jig in an electric chicken color that has produced well below the dam. Catfish weighing more than 15 pounds have been caught on night crawler worms and Magic Bait chicken livers.

7. Forest Lakes: Liz at Fat Daddy's reports that specks have been caught recently with frequency. Fishermen have had success trolling, and specks are starting to come in towards the pads. Minnows and/or jigs have been the baits of choice. A few big bass (the largest at 10.4 pounds) also have been caught using shiners. She said this has been the best winter for fishing in the last seven or eight years.

8. Lake Weir: Liz at Fat Daddy's reports that specks have been caught of late with minnows and/or jigs the usual bait of choice.

9. Harris Chain: According to BassOnline.com, bass often can be found here in the open water. The canals have them at times, too. Many catches often weigh in between nine and 11 pounds. Specks also have been found here since the weather cooled the water.

10. Panasoffkee/Tsala: No update.

11. Astor Park: Roger Robbins of Buck 'N Bass SportsCenter reports that bass have been caught in the St. Johns River below Lake George and down to and including Astor. Wild shiners and Zoom Red Bug Speed worms have been effective.

12. Ponce Inlet: According to www.floridasightfishing.com, loads of speckled trout, some redfish, as well as tarpon and snook have been caught here of late. Fishing for speckled trout in Mosquito Lagoon and the backwaters around New Smyrna Beach continues to put the most fish in the boat every day.

Santa Anita's dirt track to reopen for limited training

By Beth Harris
The Associated Press

ARCADIA, Calif. — Santa Anita will reopen its main dirt track for limited training Monday nearly a week after the historic racetrack was closed to training and racing in the wake of 21 horses dying since Dec. 26.

Horses can only jog or gallop on the dirt; no timed workouts will be allowed. "This track is in outstanding condition and it's ready for training," veteran track superintendent Dennis Moore said Saturday.

The racetrack remains closed indefinitely for racing.

Moore, along with Mick Peterson of the University of Kentucky's Agricultural Equine Program, has spent the last few days visually inspecting the one-mile oval, as well as analyzing soil samples and test data.

"It's been very helpful that we have not had any significant rain since this past Wednesday," Moore said.

That's allowed the dirt to be roto-tilled and aerated repeatedly in order to get a uniform consistency on the track's top cushion, which is six inches deep.

Peterson has done testing that simulates the force and speed generated by the leading leg of a thoroughbred running at full speed. He's gathered data that shows firmness, cushioning, grip and consistency from locations around the oval.

"It clearly indicates our cushion is right where it needs to be," Moore said.

Santa Anita announced new rules to scrutinize horses training on its racetrack and add a director of equine welfare in an effort to mitigate the series of catastrophic breakdowns.

The inner training track, which has not had any breakdowns, was open for horses to jog and gallop only on Saturday.

It was supposed to be a huge day of racing Saturday at the historic track.

But the San Felipe Stakes for 3-year-old Kentucky Derby hopefuls and the Santa Anita Handicap for older horses were scuttled when the track was closed on Tuesday.

Tim Ritvo, chief operating officer of The Stronach Group, said the new safety and welfare measures will take effect when racing resumes in the coming weeks.

"What they're trying to do is the right thing," said Jim Cassidy, president of the California Thoroughbred Trainers. "Just make sure everybody is accountable for their actions."

The new rules announced by Santa Anita's owner TSG include requiring trainers to apply to hold timed workouts for their horses at least 24 hours in advance. Officials believe that will give track veterinarians time to identify potential at-risk horses through their past performances, workout date and physical inspection.

Lake-Sumter raps 19 hits in 13-9 win over Daytona

Staff Report

Lake-Sumter State College unleashed a 19-hit attack and scored seven runs in the final three innings to take a 13-9 win over Daytona State College on Saturday in Daytona Beach.

Every player in the Lake-hawks' lineup had a hit in the game with Robbie Scott and Steven Beach leading the way with three hits apiece.

Brody Rubenstein, Jarrett Backus, Mickey Skole, Johziel Serrano, Collin Teegarden and Kobie Leonard all contributed two hits for Lake-Sumter.

Devin Blair (1-0) picked up the win, giving up two runs in two innings of work with a walk and two strikeouts. Bryant Heston earned his second save of the season, holding Daytona scoreless over the final 2.2 innings while allowing three hits with no walks and a strikeout.

Lake-Sumter improved to 13-12-1 overall and evened its record in Mid-Florida Conference play at 2-2. Daytona fell to 14-9 overall and 3-2 in conference play.

Lake-Sumter, which has won seven of its last 10 games, hosts Daytona in the final game of the three-game series on Monday at 3 p.m.

HIGH SCHOOL BASEBALL

Lake Minneola 16, Tavares 5

Randy Ricon allowed one run over 3.1 innings, allowing one hit with a walk and a strikeout while also going 2 for 3 at the plate to lead Lake Minneola to the win over Tavares on Friday.

Zach Arnold and Luis Morales had two hits apiece for the Hawks.

Austin Walker had a double for Tavares.

Lake Minneola improved to 5-0 and hosts Gainesville Buchholz on Tuesday at 6 p.m. Tavares fell to 2-2 and plays at East Ridge on Tuesday at 7 p.m.

First Academy-Leesburg 7, Peniel Baptist 3

Bryan Burtoft earned the win for First Academy of Leesburg in Palatka on Friday, going 5.2 innings and allowing three runs while striking out nine and walking two.

Sebastian Ponce De Leon earned the save, going 1.1 shutout innings with two strikeouts and two walks.

Treavon Cummings went 3 for 4 with a run and an RBI and Andon Gray went 2 for 3 with a walk and a run scored for the Eagles.

First Academy improved to 3-1 overall and 2-0 in district play. The Eagles host Warner Christian Academy at 4 p.m. Tuesday.

Umatilla 13, Leesburg 8

Umatilla banged out 11 hits and scored five runs to break a tie game in the eighth inning to pull out a win over Leesburg on Thursday.

For Leesburg, Harrison Fernandez went 2 for 5 with two runs, an RBI and two stolen bases, Jack Musgrave went 2 for 4 with a run and an RBI and Joe Peterkin went 2 for 4 with a run and two RBIs.

Umatilla is now 2-3 on the season while Leesburg is 1-4. The Yellow Jackets host Mount Dora on Monday at 6 p.m.

“So when you see that, you know it’s going to be in for tough, fiery greens,” Fitzpatrick said. “But the condition of the greens is fantastic and they have been all week, so I think that that’s what make it so great. You can still hit to 30 feet, 40 feet and just have a perfectly great putt, just because they’re so good.”

McIlroy started quickly and was just hanging around until his big finish. He hit pitching wedge that settled a foot away for a tap-in on the 15th, hit a pitch over the bunker from right of the green on the par-5 16th for a 4-foot birdie, and then finished with another pitching wedge to 10 feet for one last birdie.

Those birdies were big. The pars weren’t bad, either.

“I felt for part of the round today that I was hanging on,” McIlroy said. “You hit it up to 25, 30 feet, you take your two-putts, you move on and know you’re not going to lose any ground on the field.”

That finish put him where he wanted — the final group.

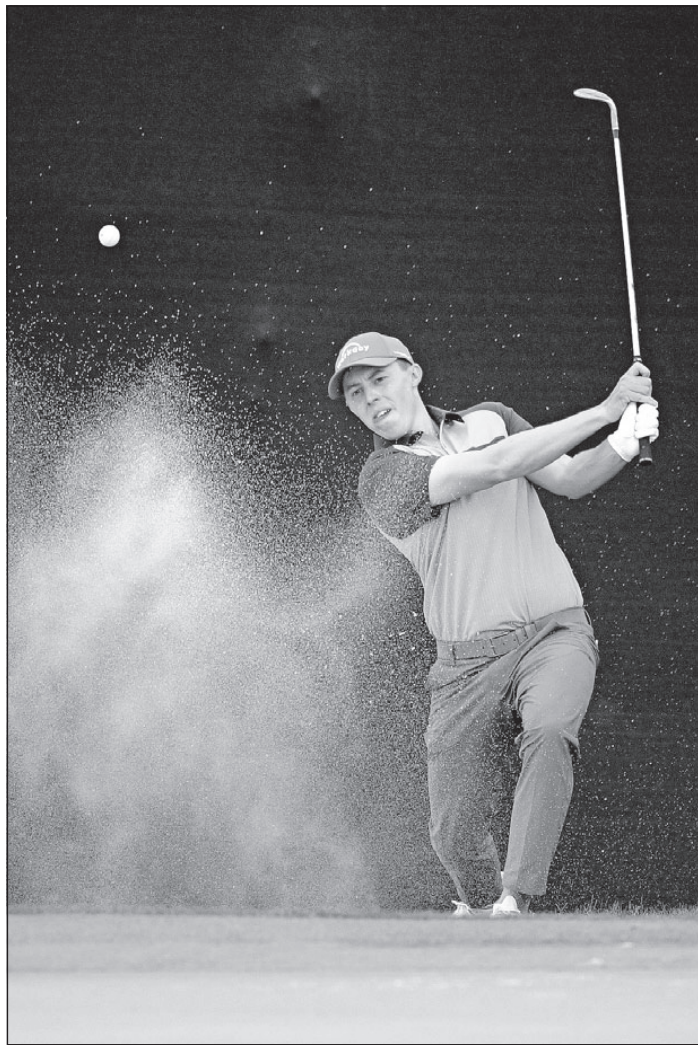

McIlroy also was in the final group at Kapalua to start the year, three shots behind Gary Woodland. He was in the final group in Mexico City two weeks ago, four shots behind Dustin Johnson. This presents a better opportunity against Fitzpatrick, a five-time winner on the European Tour over the last four years.

But there are plenty of others still in the mix.

Fitzpatrick looked at the electronic leaderboard next to him and figured every name had a chance.

Fifteen players were within five shots of the lead.

“There’s water around here, the greens are firm, the rough’s thick,” Fitzpatrick said. “Today someone was saying it’s a bit like a U.S. Open, which I could totally see. It only takes a couple of water balls from the top five guys, a few dropped shots early and all of a sudden you sort of are not looking like you’re in a great position.”

The list included Fleetwood, who made a 6-foot putt on the 18th hole for his first birdie of the day and a 76. He also was five back.

Bradley didn’t have a par until the sixth hole, and only one of those was a birdie. He missed the fairway on No. 1 (bogey), hit into a bunker on No. 2 (bogey), three-putted for bogey on No. 3 and had another bogey from the bunker on No. 5.

He rolled in a 35-foot birdie putt on the 18th for a 75, and while that big fist pump seemed out of place for someone who endured such a tough day, he had reason to cheer. After all that, Bradley was just three shots behind.

Aaron Baddeley and Matt Wallace each had a 69, while Kevin Kisner had a 70. They were at 7-under 209, still very much in the game.

“The golf course is playing brutal, and just nowhere to get it close to the pin,” Kisner said. “Greens are firm, hitting a lot of long irons, and it’s a true test.”

McIlroy sees some similarities to his victory last year at Bay Hill. He started slowly and began to hit his stride, playing a little bit better each day. He also went to one of the Disney parks after finishing early Friday, just like last year when he was at Magic Kingdom and rode Space Mountain.

This year’s ride?

“Tower of Terror,” he said, and that might be appropriate if the conditions at Bay Hill stay this way.

drivers were like, ‘It’s up to us now,’” said Cindric. “In a healthy way it spurs them on. They can’t get too comfortable.”

Newgarden, disappointed to be nipped by teammate Power, said the expectation inside the Penske organization is to put in maximum effort at every turn to achieve results.

“That’s what you feel when you join Penske,” Newgarden said. “I don’t know that it’s pressure but I just think Roger expects you to understand and appreciate the history, and you feel the need to get the most out of yourself. You just push yourself to be the best you can be, and generally Roger puts the best people together.”

The second row Sunday belongs to Chip Ganassi Racing. Felix Rosenqvist will start third in his IndyCar debut alongside reigning series champion Scott Dixon. Both Rosenqvist and Dixon advanced through qualifying because of penalties to two other drivers. Dixon made it out of the first round when Takuma Sato’s time was disallowed, and Rosenqvist made it into the Fast Six when Colton Herta’s times were disqualified for interference in the second qualifying session.

Herta thought he was a contender for the pole in his debut for Harding Steinbrenner Racing, but the 18-year-old rookie was instead eliminated. “I blocked him, simple as that,” Herta said. “I’m pretty mad, but rules are rules and we broke them.”

The final two slots in the Fast Six went to Andretti Autosport as the top three teams in IndyCar all showed why they dominate the series with strong qualifying runs. Ryan Hunter-Reay and Alexander Rossi were fifth and sixth. Herta, who drives for a team that receives support from the Andretti organization, had been locked into the Fast Six until IndyCar said he interfered with Charlie Kimball.

Pawlowski, competing in the Class 2A 152-pound division, had opened the championships on Friday looking strong, knocking off his first two opponents with relative ease.

“In the first match the other guy had a good record, so I just wrestled super hard,” Pawlowski said. “For the second match I wanted to wrestle even harder.”

The two wins set up a match Saturday morning against Charlotte’s Lucas Willis, the top-ranked wrestler in the state. After Willis took a lead through the first two periods, Pawlowski was trying to play catch up and Willis — who went on to win the state title — made him pay.

But Pawlowski bounced back in style, knocking off Riley Hackworth of Fort Myers to set up a showdown for third place in the meet.

After qualifying for the state championships the previous two years, this one meant a lot to Pawlowski.

“I’m going to Lake Tech next year, so this is it for my wrestling career,” Pawlowski said.

Not only was third place on the line, but it offered Pawlowski a chance to walk away from the mat as a winner in his final match.

“I felt confident I would get third because it was a kid I had beaten at districts,” Pawlowski said.

That confidence was justified as Pawlowski easily dispatched Chris Morales of Springstead to claim the third-place medal and earn the 198th win of his high school career.

“I didn’t have to cut as much weight this year and I had great coaches in my corner,” Pawlowski said. “They really helped me train hard for this season. This feels great.”

Johnson’s new crew chief, Kevin Meendering, had worked his way up through the organization, and earned the opportunity to take charge of the No. 48 team. It was no small change: The quirky, sometimes volatile but nevertheless brilliant Knaus had formed a sort of ESP with Johnson where they could often communicate without words, while the more reserved Meendering is temperamentally opposite.

It was an adjustment — a big one — but one that Johnson found rather refreshing.

“They’re definitely different guys,” Johnson said. “Kevin is a quiet guy. He really likes to absorb everything. He doesn’t say a lot but when he does, he’s ready to talk. So there’s maybe less conversation, less being told, but I can see the wheels turning in his brain.”

The new partnership certainly started out with splash.

Well, a crash. Then a splash.

With rain on the horizon and Paul Menard ahead of him in the season-opening Clash exhibition at Daytona, Johnson tried to pass and the two made contact. Menard went spinning to cause a massive wreck, and Johnson led at the finish line to win the weather-shortened race.

The No. 48 team backed up the performance with a top-10 run in the Daytona 500, but that has so far turned out to be their high point of the season. Johnson was 24th at Atlanta, when none of the four Hendrick drivers finished in the top 15, and he was 19th a week ago at Las Vegas.

That’s when the cold bug piled onto the misery.

After the race, teammate Chase Elliott — the best of the Hendrick boys at Vegas — reminded all the critics and naysayers that “this is a war, not a battle.”

“So we have to think about getting better for 38 weeks,” Elliott said, “and we’ve got 35 left, so better keep pushing and hopefully take another chunk like we did this week next week.”

“I agree with what he’s saying,” Johnson said, sitting in a Cup Series hauler in the infield of ISM Raceway on Friday. “I feel like we’ve all made that mental decision this year that we’re going to war, and small little battles, finding little chunks of speed, is only going to move you up from 10th to fifth. I mean, we need to really find what we’ve been missing.”

Johnson considers himself patient. It’s a byproduct of experience, of nearly two decades spent at the pinnacle of his sport. But it’s also a natural, easygoing attitude that he developed while growing up in Southern California, where the series heads next for its race at Fontana.

The problem is not everybody has the same reserve.

“I find that probably our fans aren’t as patient as we’d like them to be,” Johnson said, “and the haters, they’re not going to show any patience. They’re going to try to kick us while we’re down. So there’s that element that exists, but you know, this deal isn’t easy. And because Hendrick Motorsports has all these championships does not mean that we’re going to get another one.”

There have been some positive signs this weekend, though.

Elliott qualified on the outside of the front row for Sunday’s race. Alex Bowman qualified sixth and William Byron seventh, with Knaus now on the pit box for his No. 24 team.

Johnson just missed the cutoff for the final round of qualifying and will start 15th. And while it still represents a long way to go, it left Johnson feeling as he’s already come a long way.

“We’re all heavily involved in trying to offer up what we can,” he said. “What helps me to be patient is I look around and see my teammates digging so deep to get our cars back to where they need to be. I wish we had an ‘easy’ button to push, but we don’t.”

Roger Penske was on Power’s radio when he shot to the top of the board and the 82-year-old team owner gave a hearty “Woooo!” in celebration.

Power was stunned to learn he’d moved to P1 in his Chevrolet.

“I was over the moon, I really didn’t think I’d get pole,” Power said.

But Penske and team President Tim Cindric knew the three-car IndyCar lineup would be strong this weekend, in part fueled by the success of the rest of the organization. The sports car program opened the year with a podium finish in the Rolex 24 at Daytona and races next week in the Twelve Hours of Sebring.

“The IndyCar guys showed up this weekend and our Seated like a jewel in the foothills of the Appalachian Mountains, Dahlonega, Georgia, offers a pretty picture to visitors coming from any direction. Just an hour north of Atlanta, it is home to the University of North Georgia and some of the most popular and scenic waterfalls in the state.

Visitors come to enjoy the magnificent outdoors, attend a variety of lively festivals, shop, dine and experience wine. Dahlonega has more wine-tasting rooms than any other town in Georgia, according to the Dahlonega-Lumpkin County Chamber & Visitors Bureau, making it easy to sample wines from the six vineyards and wineries here: Cavender Creek, Frogtown, Montaluce, Three Sisters, Wolf Mountain and Kaya. Together they've made Dahlonega the heart of Georgia wine country. Recently the federal Alcohol and Tobacco Tax and Trade Bureau designated the "Dahlonega Plateau" as the newest viticultural area in the United States.

On the historic downtown square, be sure to stop in at Accent Cellars, Canvas and Cork, Dahlonega Tasting Room and Bleu Gallery, where you can watch artists at work while you sip wine and enjoy being surrounded by beautiful pieces of art.

Artists of all kinds — including painters, potters, musicians and writers — abound here. Enjoying music on the square is a popular way to spend an evening. The Historic Holly Theater offers a full schedule of stage performances. Live, multi-genre music and concerts are featured at The Crimson Moon, a charming listening venue, restaurant and coffee house.

Surf's up for your pup in San Diego

By Tails & Toys

The second-largest city in California, San Diego is well known for its mild year-round climate, natural deep-water harbor and extensive beaches. With an environment that has the ocean, mountains and city life, it's the perfect getaway for you and your pup. Some ideas from BringFido.com:

Places to stay

Bring Fido to the Surfer Beach Hotel for a great value stay on Pacific Beach, which allows leashed dogs before 9 a.m. and after 4 p.m. from early November to the beginning of April. From the hotel, you can walk to several restaurants with dog-friendly patios along the boardwalk. The pet fee won't break the bank, either: Surfer Beach Hotel welcomes two dogs up to 50 pounds for an additional $50 per stay.

If you're looking to stay downtown in the lively, historic heart of San Diego, the Westin Gaslamp Quarter offers amazing dog-friendly accommodations. Two dogs up to 40 pounds are welcome for no additional fee, and the hotel offers loaner pet beds and bowls to help keep your packing light.

Across the bay from downtown San Diego, the town of Coronado is home to Coronado Beach and Dog Park, one of Southern California's finest, and the luxurious Loews Coronado Bay Resort. At check-in, your dog will be greeted with a gift bag complete with pet tags, bowls and special treats. biscuit and a fresh bowl of water. The restaurant's open-air patio attracts lots of dogs, so reservations are recommended.

Another dog-friendly option in the area is the Pacific Beach Fish Shop, popular for grilled fish tacos available in your choice of marinade. Pups are welcome on the patio and will be greeted with a bowl of water.

Activities

Spend a day on Mission Bay with your dog by renting a kayak or stand-up paddleboard from Aqua Adventures in San Diego. If your pup is a novice at paddlesports, Aqua Adventures offers free clinics.

In Coronado, you can also sign up for a dog surfing lesson from Coronado Surfing Academy.

FROM THE PORCH STEPS

World's best politician

Nina Gilfert

Remember in Sunday School when you were given a little lesson pamphlet with the picture of a severe-looking gentleman the teacher called Solomon.

"Solomon was very wise," the teacher told you, "because he asked God for wisdom instead of worldly goods."

Solomon, it seems, was in God's favor. He could have asked and been granted anything his heart desired, but he didn't choose wealth. He chose a much more elusive gift. One that would gain him the ability to govern wisely for Solomon was a great king who loved his people. It would seem that Solomon was already pretty smart for he really knew the value of a ruler with wisdom.

If you asked them most of our politicians today would claim to read the Bible but most of them must have skipped the book of Proverbs.

When our forefathers drafted the Constitution, they must have been aware of this major flaw in most politicians because they gave us a government with checks and balances and three branches of government with each dependent on the other. This way the most popular opinions would prevail — fingers crossed — because the best opinions were the most popular.

Solomon was very much in favor of raising children with discipline. He was also in favor of folks staying married to their spouse and being faithful to one another. (You've come a long way, Baby!)

Washington, Jefferson, Adams and all those other guys must have thought that there was safety in numbers, that if you had enough Senators and Representatives and Judges, right would prevail. Unfortunately, other values seem to have gotten in the way. Wisdom seems to be a vanishing quality. Perhaps the electorate is just doing a very poor job of voting for the best candidates. Solomon asked God for wisdom and received it, maybe we should do the same thing when we go to the polls to vote.

AdventHealth Waterman Foundation raises $106K for ER expansion

Staff Report

TAVARES — Nearly 200 guests joined the AdventHealth Waterman Foundation on Feb. 23 for the 10th annual Celebration of Life Gala.

The evening at the Orlando Science Center raised more than $106,000 to support the hospital's emergency services expansion, and included a gourmet dinner, silent auction, entertainment by SAK Comedy Lab and a drawing for a pair of garnet and diamond earrings.

"Originally built to accommodate 50,000 patients a year, our AdventHealth Waterman emergency department cared for nearly 66,500 patients in 2018. These consistently high volumes show a clear community need to expand our ER to care for patients who turn to us during their greatest time of need," said April Kauffman, AdventHealth Waterman Foundation president. "Through the generosity of our donors, we can help ensure patients continue to receive the very best care in a safe and compassionate environment."

The AdventHealth Waterman Foundation is currently engaged in a $5 million capital campaign to support the hospital's ongoing construction project to

"I like the competition and I like good health and I like racing. I'm a four-time Iron Man."

John Halstead

"Some people golf and the other people ride their bikes. I was too old to learn golf. It was too complicated, and riding a bike was so easy. There's so many nice bike trails in Lake County."

Alan McLaughlin

"Bicycling is my zen. I ride for the pure joy of being outside and feeling the wind on my face. I just feel so good. It's good for my mind and for my body."

Zahra Nasser

"I come from a family of sports. My dad was really into endurance sports like running and cycling and I just got into it. I've loved doing it ever since."

Annie is a sweet 4-year-old female black mouth cur. She has the cutest little nub tail that she likes to wiggle up and down. Annie is dog friendly and would do well with kids too. Annie will need a home with a tall, solid fence or to be on a leash when outside. Annie is waiting for her forever home at our shelter. Meet her today.

Jazz is a sweet and friendly 5-month-old female kitten. She loves to play and be petted. She is great with other cats and kids, and would probably do well with dogs. Stop by our shelter to meet Jazz.

Rusty is a playful 2-year-old retriever/Lab mix. Rusty is very friendly and gets along well with other dogs and kids, and didn't seem to mind cats. Rusty walks great on a leash. This boy loves to play fetch and will make a great companion. Meet Rusty at our shelter. You won't regret it.

Motley is a friendly 1 1/2-year-old tuxedo cat. He loves attention and will make a wonderful housemate for a loving person or family. He does great with other animals. Motley is waiting for his forever home at our shelter. Meet him today.

LAKE COUNTY HISTORY DID YOU KNOW?

By Rick Reed
Correspondent

A pair of episodes from the American science fiction television series seaQuest DSV were filmed in Lake County. The series originally aired on NBC between 1993 and 1996. In its final season, it was renamed seaQuest 2032.

Steven Spielberg served as one of the show's executive producers during the first two seasons.

The cast included stars Roy Scheider as Nathan Bridger, captain of the high-tech submarine seaQuest DSV 4600; Jonathan Brandis as Lucas Wolenczak, a teenage computer genius; and Stephanie Beacham as Kristin Westphalen, the chief medical officer and head of the seaQuest science department.

The first episode in 1994 utilized Lake County's then-new judicial center with its futuristic glass-panels.

Hollywood stars included Peter DeLuise (Dagwood), Edward Kerr (Lt. James Brody), Don Franklin (Cmdr. Jonathan Ford) and Roy Scheider (Capt. Nathan Bridger) from the crew of the fictional 1,000-foot submarine. The script was about a courtroom drama set in the year 2021.

The show's officials must have liked Lake County because they came back in October 1995 and transformed an old Howey orange grove into a domed underwater world of the future.

Hattie Daggett Millholland was a special lady. Hattie had her brother build the famous and historic Log House that was located in south Lake County.

More specifically, the unique wooden structure was located at Monte Vista, another of Hattie's tireless projects.

Half the town visited Hattie during her first night at the Hotel Clermont, later the Lakeview Hotel. The year was 1888 and a throng of curious townfolk wanted to learn who had arrived in the city that day.

There were even folks that she'd known from the North, such as her attorney friend, William House.

A launch party for a little steamboat was arranged in her honor. The captain and engineer was Sam Sheppard. The party included House and his daughter Libbie, as well as J.C. Parson and his daughter.

This adventure and more was recorded by Hattie for a story in the Clermont Press in 1930. The trip began in Lake Winona.

"The first mill which was built there was still standing though unused," continued the story in the Clermont Press. "A new one had been built on Lake Minneola.

DIVERSIONS

Dad insists boy stop seeing mom's ex following divorce

DEAR ABBY: My ex-husband raised my son as his own from the time he was an infant. Now my son's biological father is saying he wants our son to stay away from my ex-husband. However, my ex-husband and my son have a very strong bond. I believe the bond is even stronger than what he has with his biological father.

They are both good dads, but my ex-husband devotes more one-on-one time to my son than his biological father. I am confused. Must I distance him from my ex since we are no longer married? My son is now 6. -- AT ODDS IN IOWA

DEAR AT ODDS: The boy's father may sense that his son isn't as bonded to him as he is to his former stepdad, which is why he is saying this. I have always believed that more love and positive reinforcement is better than less. By that, I mean I see no reason why you cannot expose your child to anyone you wish, including your former husband. Because you are confused about what your rights are as a mother, discuss this with an attorney.

JEANNE PHILLIPS

DEAR ABBY: We have some new neighbors, and recently the wife has developed the habit of "dropping by." It is becoming apparent that she'd like to develop a social relationship -- lunches, etc. -- but this is NOT something I want to encourage.

My husband and I are extremely private people. What socializing we do is with family. We are willing to be good neighbors but are not interested in further involvement. In fact, we are beginning to view her visits as intrusive.

I am unsure how to approach this without offending her and appearing to be rude. Abby, you have a way of phrasing things in a positive manner, and I'd appreciate your insight as to how I can let her know her visits are not welcomed and we prefer not to establish anything beyond a cordial neighbor relationship. -- PRIVATE IN THE SOUTHEAST

DEAR PRIVATE: Phrase it this way: "We realize you are new in town and are reaching out, but my husband and I are very private people and we socialize only with family." Then suggest some options available in your community that will provide her an opportunity to get involved and meet new people.

DEAR ABBY: I have a suggestion for "Still Grieving in Montana" (Jan. 5), who found out only after the death of her brother that he was homeless. She was grieving with the thought that she had been unable to help him.

I would suggest from now on she make it a point to help other homeless men. A way to do that would be by visiting a local homeless center and doing whatever she can to lend a hand. Rather than spend more money on therapists, assisting people who need it may not only make her feel better, but also benefit the community in an important and meaningful way. -- EAST WINDSOR, N.J., READER

DEAR READER: Channeling grief into an activity can be therapeutic and can lessen depression. Thank you for writing. I'm glad you suggested it.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Contact Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

tournament, where extra tricks are very important. West led a spade, and South could see 10 sure tricks. He could also feel confident of scoring an 11th trick by taking a heart finesse. This was virtually certain to win because only 12 high-card points were missing, marking East with the heart queen for his opening bid.

South took East's king of spades with the ace, crossed to the queen of clubs and led a low heart to his jack. He then cashed five more clubs, producing this position:

The squeeze is frequently thought of by many as a play reserved exclusively for experts. It is a dramatic play, no doubt, but its difficulty has been greatly exaggerated.

The squeeze actually functions all by itself, though it does require a helmsman at the wheel. All declarer has to do is to cash his tricks in the right order and at the right time. If the setup is right, nature follows its course and the squeeze succeeds.

This deal occurred in a duplicate

When declarer next cashed the spade queen, discarding a diamond from dummy, East was squeezed. He couldn't spare a heart, so he discarded the diamond king. South thereupon led the queen of diamonds, and East scored his one and only trick of the deal.

Declarer did nothing sensational during the play. The heart finesse was almost certain to succeed, and after that South merely cashed his winners. Nature took care of the rest.

» HOROSCOPES

HAPPY BIRTHDAY FOR SUNDAY, MARCH 10, 2019:

This year, you often act as though you're the most confident person in the world. This stature is natural for you. Your intuition guides you. If single, you have many potential suitors from whom to choose; however, remember to have a concept of the type of relationship and person you desire. If attached, you seem to enjoy conversation and company with your sweetie. At times, you could find that squabbles break out. Let them go; accept your differences. You could move or remodel your home. In that situation, your relationship will renew. GEMINI knows how to trigger you -- and does!

ARIES (MARCH 21-APRIL 19) Use care with finances. Don't allow your spending to get out of control. You might not even realize that you've gone overboard until after the fact. You will tend to follow your instincts.

TAURUS (APRIL 20-MAY 20) You perk up and finally feel more like yourself. You could surprise someone with your demands or requests. You might be out of sync with an older friend or relative. Express your friendship.

GEMINI (MAY 21-JUNE 20) You suddenly might opt to make today a lazy day. Unfortunately, your immediate circle might not know of this plan and could be reaching out for you. Screen calls. Follow your instincts with an older person.

CANCER (JUNE 21-JULY 22) Zero in on a friend who might like to spend some one-on-one time with you. When you call, you might even surprise him or her, but this person will be touched and delighted by your invitation. News from a distance could confuse you.

LEO (JULY 23-AUG. 22) You could receive a surprising call from an older friend or relative. You opt to accept this person's invitation; however, on some level, you will be on new ground. A partner might not get the essence of what you're doing.

VIRGO (AUG. 23-SEPT. 22) Be willing to look beyond the obvious. Some of you might need to totally escape the here and now by going to the movies or taking a day trip -- whatever clears your mind and allows you to think.

JACQUELINE BIGAR

BIGAR'S STARS

22) Be willing to look beyond the obvious. Some of you might need to totally escape the here and now by going to the movies or taking a day trip -- whatever clears your mind and allows you to think.

LIBRA (SEPT. 23-OCT. 22) One-on-one relating could help you be more in touch with your values as well as a partner's. You might gain through a sudden realization. You may want to do some thinking. Pace yourself. Relax. Go to a relaxing happening.

SCORPIO (OCT. 23-NOV. 21) Defer to a loved one or close friend. He or she will be delighted and surprised to call the shots for one day. Your imagination delights a child or a new friend. A partner might become jealous. Be careful.

SAGITTARIUS (NOV. 22-DEC. 21) You might be more imaginative and creative than you think you are. You could be upset about a slow realization involving your family or a domestic situation. Don't take this insight as a final statement.

CAPRICORN (DEC. 22-JAN. 19) When questioning what needs to happen, refer to basics. You know what makes you comfortable. A child or a loved one delights in spending extra time with you. Your instincts will guide you.

AQUARIUS (JAN. 20-FEB. 18) Be aware of what a family member wants and needs. You could be very tired and not content with news that's coming forward. Resist totally cocooning, and invite a pal to join you. Not every weekend has to be wild and exciting.

PISCES (FEB. 19-MARCH 20) Your instincts carry you through any hassle that might head your way. You could hear unexpected news or have an unanticipated problem with your vehicle, your cellphone or another form of communication.

» TODAY IN HISTORY

TODAY IS SUNDAY, MARCH 10, the 69th day of 2019. There are 296 days left in the year.

TODAY'S HIGHLIGHT IN HISTORY: On March 10, 1969, James Earl Ray pleaded guilty in Memphis, Tennessee (on his 41st birthday) to assassinating civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. (Ray later repudiated that plea, maintaining his innocence until his death.)

ON THIS DATE: In 1913, former slave, abolitionist and Underground Railroad "conductor" Harriet Tubman died in Auburn, New York; she was in her 90s. In 1933, a magnitude 6.4

earthquake centered off Long Beach, California, resulted in 120 deaths.

In 1965, Neil Simon's play "The Odd Couple," starring Walter Matthau and Art Carney, opened on Broadway.

In 1980, "Scarsdale Diet" author Dr. Herman Tarnower was shot to death at his home in Purchase, New York.

(Tarnower's former lover, Jean Harris, was convicted of his murder; she served nearly 12 years in prison before being released in January 1993.)

In 1993, Dr. David Gunn was shot to death outside a Pensacola, Florida, abortion clinic. (Shooter Michael Griffin is serving a life sentence.)

in this country are the middle class. With that being the case one would think we would vote for representatives that had our best interest at heart. When our Congress votes themselves raises and large pensions, are they thinking of the welfare of their constituents?

Maybe it is time to limit the time they spend in Congress. At the present time, there are no laws setting limits but the voters certainly can limit them to two or three terms, especially if they are not doing a good job for us.

I wonder what Solomon with his God-given wisdom would say to us about global warming. There is no doubt that our climate is changing and there is also no doubt that humans are causing some of the changes. Where do we start?

The United Nations is probably the most natural place to discuss this problem but national pride and financial conditions are slowing the progress. Progressive countries who have their slice of the pie don't want to bare the largest part of the solution, and poor developing countries see the unfairness of their bearing the responsibility because they have a right to progress just as their richer neighbors have.

Most of us feel the responsibility in small things. We keep our thermostats at a more reasonable temperature. We recycle plastics and paper. We reuse what we can. Water our lawns as little as possible. Save water in other small ways. Some of us have experimented with solar power to heat our bath water and heat our homes, but it isn't enough.

As we see the ocean creeping into our coastal towns, violent weather patterns disrupting our ordered lives, wild animals becoming extinct because of civilization's encroachment, we become anxious. We see the need to do something more drastic, but who wants to do without their personal cars, their airline trips or their comfortable homes.

Countries, like people, don't want to be the ones to go first in cutting the emissions from fossil fuels. We are all like children on the playground who don't want to give up their swing or teeter-totter.

Surely, Solomon's wisdom came from God. Perhaps we should look to God for the wisdom we need to combat this very real threat to life on our beautiful planet. At some point, we should become alarmed as our beautiful polar bears lose their environment, as snow-capped mountain ranges lose their snow, as low-lying cities become uninhabitable, as coral reefs die and our critters in our forests and oceans become extinct and as islands of plastic become more common on our oceans.

As I see it we have two choices: clean up the mess we have made with all seriousness or find another earth somewhere in God's great universe to sustain our human and animal populations.

Can we do that?

'Project Runway' returns to walk its walk on Bravo again

By Jay Bobbin

For any changes of its makers or network, "Project Runway" remains a valuable television brand.

That's why, after 11 rounds on Lifetime, the fashion-competition series returns to its original home — Bravo — as it begins its 17th season Thursday, March 14. A couple of its most familiar faces are missing, since Heidi Klum and Tim Gunn are developing their own show with Amazon, but judge Nina Garcia is staying. She's joined on the panel by designer Brandon Maxwell and journalist Elaine Welteroth. Supermodel and entrepreneur Karlie Kloss hosts (and is an executive producer), and Season 4 winner Christian Siriano mentors the contestants.

"I'm very close with Tim and very close with Heidi, and they're amazing and so talented," Siriano says, "but I think what's really great about this new season is that for the first time, the mentor for the designers gets to be a real designer. Tim was never a designer. He never worked in the business; he was a teacher. So, when the designers have a red carpet challenge, I can actually give them real fashion-industry feedback. And I think that it can, hopefully, only help them.

"The fashion business is hard," adds Siriano, "so if anyone can give them advice, I would think it would be me ... someone who won the show and then built something afterwards. It's really (a matter of) what you do after the show as well, to build a brand, and you have to do that for yourself."

The Weinstein Company was a producer of "Project Runway" for most of its run, but the program got new owners after that firm declared bankruptcy."

SUNDAY'S BEST BETS

Smokey Robinson

3:30 p.m. on 13 35 51 NASCAR Monster Energy Series

Kevin Harvick will be looking for his sixth win at Phoenix International Raceway in Avondale, Arizona when NASCAR's Monster Energy Series Ticket-Guardian 500 goes down. They've only been racing here since 2005 and Harvick has dominated. One interesting factoid about this race is that it's measured in kilometers, rather than miles. The distance is just over 502 kilometers, which is 312 miles. Harvick's win here last year was his third straight of the season.

9 p.m. on 6 10

Aretha! A Grammy Celebration for the Queen of Soul

Iconic Grammy winner and Motown legend Smokey Robinson pays affectionate tribute to the childhood friend who likewise became a towering figure on the American music scene during her long career in this new two-hour special, which was taped in January at the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles. Actor and filmmaker Tyler Perry serves as host for the festivities. The glittering talent roster also includes Celine Dion, Alessia Cara, Common, Kelly Clarkson, Jennifer Hudson, Alicia Keys, John Legend, Patti LaBelle, Janelle Monae and BeBe Winans, among many others.

OF 'ARETHA! A GRAMMY CELEBRATION FOR THE QUEEN OF SOUL' ON CBS

Being one of the performers on the special "Aretha! A Grammy Celebration for the Queen of Soul," what are your own memories of Aretha Franklin?

Literally the greatest compliment I probably will ever receive was from her mouth. I've always been a fan of hers, since I was a kid – but a lot of times, people you like and love get threatened as artists, and they're incapable of complimenting someone else.

I'm really into reading about artists' lives, honestly because I don't want to repeat the same mistakes but learn from them. I've read a lot on (Franklin), and you could see that she was really supportive. She was such a phenomenal talent, she was never threatened by anyone or anything. She just loved what she did and said how she felt, and though I love her as a singer, I love her for her honesty as well.

How do you think Aretha Franklin was when you watched her in actual performance?

I feel like she was very real – and also with the support she gave to civil rights and things like that, she was more than a singer. It was an incredible thing, since I was a kid, to listen to this woman who molded and changed me into the singer I am. She was one of the greats who did that for me, and this song I'm singing (on the special) is my favorite Aretha song ever.

I thought they'd ask me to sing "Respect" or something like that, but they said, "We'd love you to do 'I Never Loved a Man (The Way I Love You).'" Apparently, someone had seen me sing it; I had done it on a whole tour, so I'm pretty stoked to be able to do it, especially (among) artists that I love. When I was growing up, I played sports and it was like, "You're only as strong as your weakest link." And there are no weak links here.

OF 'THIS IS US' ON NBC

Has the giant success of "This Is Us" generated any creative pressure for you?

We've always felt like we've always come from this place of we really enjoy what we're doing. We are really huge fans of this story and try to champion for each of our characters, and our sense was we hope that people feel the same way that we do. The attention that we've gotten has validated what we were feeling, and so I don't feel necessarily the pressure, but it feels very communal.

The show is just about us, all of us ... what it means to be human and sort of live day-to-day, and the nuances of that, and how important what we perceive as the small things in life are. It connects us in a way that feels very personal, so rather than pressure, you get people who come up to you in a very personal way and talk about how it touched their lives. And then, you feel like this thing that we are all champions of feeling so connected with everyone. It's less about pressure, but more about this very universal feeling that we get from it.

What is it that keeps you relating so strongly to your "This Is Us" character Beth?

I have the good fortune of learning more about Beth as I go. She wasn't everything right up-front, and I think for many of us, it's like that because this happens over a span of time.

And we jump time. It goes backward, it goes forward – so at any moment, you can learn about a huge chunk of (a character's) life, and it shifts some of the dynamic of how you play the character. It just keeps you on your toes and it's fun, and it doesn't get mundane in the least. It's something that always is keeping you active.

And then, I work with some really extraordinary people, one of whom is Sterling K. Brown. I feel like every time we get on set and I look in his eyes, it's like, "OK. (He's) Randall and I'm Beth." And then we go.

OF 'THE OATH' ON SONY CRACKLE

When did you finish filming Season 2 of "The Oath" in Puerto Rico?

We finished end of July of last year. We sort of squeezed it in, I say, sort of in between the hurricane periods but obviously we got it done. In the first season, there was both Irma and Maria that sort of shut us down but we went back even after Maria, obviously sort of four or five weeks after. But it's still a wonderful place to shoot. I don't know if you've ever been down there but Puerto Rico, they're such a vivacious, spirited people, the Puerto Ricans.

Were you there for either of the storms?

No, one of the castmates had his family there for Irma. But no, we very luckily sort of got flights out in the ... days before. But yeah, that's sort of what bonded the series in a brutal but kind of beautiful way in the fact that we were so worried about our crew because it really was such a tough shoot. ... There were at least a couple of weeks with no kind of communication from them, and I know it took six, seven, eight months before a lot of these places got electricity back.

And that was because there was no electricity?

Yeah. For the most part, film crews would run on generators, but it was more just having the resources on the ground. You know, just making sure and not wanting to go back until the people were kind of somewhat ready. I mean, a little bit of the saving grace was that I felt like it gave them a little bit of a sense of purpose when we came back. It was like some money in their pockets, which in those trying times was extremely necessary, but also it gave them a little bit of an escape from that kind of hell that they were living in.

'The Good Fight' continues in CBS All Access drama's Season 3

Michael Sheen joins the cast of "The Good Fight" as it starts its third season Thursday on CBS All Access.

By Jay Bobbin

As "The Good Wife's" spinoff moves into its third season, its title "The Good Fight" has more meaning than ever.

Not only does the current political climate in America test attorney Diane Lockhart (Christine Baranski) and her colleagues, so does another lawyer (new cast addition, and "Masters of Sex" alum, Michael Sheen) who is very much his own person — for better or worse — as the streaming CBS All Access drama resumes Thursday, March 14. Cush Jumbo, Rose Leslie, Audra McDonald, Delroy Lindo, Sarah Steele, Michael Boatman and Nyambi Nyambi also continue their roles.

Baranski gives credit to executive producers Robert and Michelle King for "how exciting it is to be in a show where we portray characters that are living in this moment in time, in history. It's a brave move for writers to be in the belly of the beast at this time. And I think Rob and Michelle are always breathlessly reading the newspaper, thinking, 'Oh, my gosh, what fresh hell is this I'm writing about?' So, it's exciting for us."

Still, in frequently referencing political situations as they develop, Robert King allows that "We have a few backup plans if the world runs ahead of us, involving two or three pivotal scenes that we would have to reshoot. What you try to do is stay as close to the zeitgeist as possible, but it's very difficult when you're writing ahead. I think what we're planning to do is find a way to use certain scenes that help update the audience to the way things are right now."

Michelle King notes that "The Good Fight" is "far more political than we anticipated, because the world changed." Indeed, Baranski explains, "The pilot was written on the assumption that Hillary Clinton would be president, and that Diane gives up her law practice saying, 'There are no more glass ceilings.' Well, you know, that was rewritten."

As for the new actor on the "Good Fight" block, Sheen is enjoying portraying intended provocateur Roland Blum. "It's nice to play a character where I don't have to go through hair and makeup in the morning," the actor muses.

"I just turn up, and that's what I look like. I feel a bit like I'm expressing the id of the show, in a way, and there's something incredibly freeing and liberating about that."

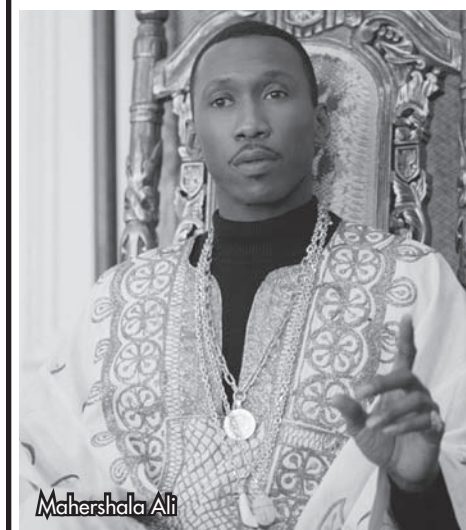

With the challenge posed to other characters by the fiercely independent and unconventional Blum, six-time Tony Award winner McDonald reports, "They have to question, or start to put aside, some of what they thought their morals were in order to achieve what they need to achieve. And that's an interesting sort of trajectory to play, to grapple with."

Mahershala Ali

"GREEN BOOK"

A major factor in this year's film-award season — thanks in part to its five Oscar nominations, including best picture, which it won — this fact-inspired comedy-drama's title item helps two traveling companions navigate racially sensitive territory, quite literally, in the early 1960s. Celebrated classical and jazz pianist Don Shirley (Mahershala Ali, who earned his second Oscar here) gets a chauffeur and more in bouncer "Tony Lip" (Viggo Mortensen), hired to drive him to performances through the American South ... at a time when "tolerance" wasn't necessarily the operative word. Both stars are superb, and Linda

Cardellini also is in director and co-writer Peter Farrelly's cast. The real Tony's son, Nick Vallelonga, also was one of the writers who gained an Oscar for best original screenplay. DVD extras: three "making-of" documentaries. * (PG-13: AS, P, V) (Also on Blu-ray and On Demand)

"FANTASTIC BEASTS: THE CRIMES OF GRINDELWALD"

Author J.K. Rowling's saga continues with this fantasy, returning Eddie Redmayne to the role of Newt Scamander, who tries to get his Ministry of Magic rights restored by protecting Hogwarts teacher Dumbledore (Jude Law) from an enemy of equal power. Others become involved, with romantic complications factoring in as the pursuit continues. The cast also includes Katherine Waterston, Dan Fogler, Alison Sudol, Ezra

Miller, Zoe Kravitz and (reprising the role of Grindelwald) Johnny Depp ... and, as always in such ventures, the members of the special-effects and visual-design teams also are stars here. "Harry Potter" veteran David Yates returns from the preceding chapter as the director. DVD extras: nine "making-of" documentaries; deleted scenes.  (PG-13: AS) (Also on Blu-ray and On Demand)

"MORTAL ENGINES"

Talk about mobility ... entire cities are movable in this fantasy-drama that counts Peter Jackson ("The Lord of the Rings") among its producers and screenwriters. Adapted from a novel by Philip Reeve, the tale unfolds in the aftermath of an apocalypse as a teenager and a would-be killer (Robert Sheehan, Hira Hilmar) are forced to work together to prevent an incredibly powerful weapon from wiping out the cities-on-the-go. Given its creation of what effectively is a different universe, there's a lot to digest here, but such visuals as a city in the sky keep the film involving. Hugo Weaving, Stephen Lang, Patrick Malahide and Colin Salmon also appear.  (PG-13: AS, P) (Also on Blu-ray and On Demand)

"THE LAST SHIP: THE COMPLETE FIFTH SEASON"

A favorite of many naval personnel, who gave it some significant honors during its run, the TNT adventure-drama series — with filmmaker Michael Bay among its executive producers — wrapped up with this set of episodes. Though the threat of a global pandemic has passed, veterans of the U.S.S. Nathan Jensen are held responsible for an attack on Panama's leader, putting America on the brink of another possible world war. Eric Dane, Bridget Regan, Adam Baldwin, Travis Van Winkle and Bren Foster are among the cast members who put codas on their roles; actor Peter Weller ("RoboCop") directed several of the stories. A "Complete Series" collection also is newly available.  (Not rated: AS, P, V) (Also on Blu-ray)

"DIVIDE AND CONQUER: THE STORY OF ROGER AILES"

Both legendary and controversial for his rule of Fox News when it came into its own, and for many years thereafter, the late Ailes is recalled in Alexis Bloom's warts-and-all documentary that amply notes the sizable influence in the political spectrum that Ailes had. It also traces situations that ultimately added up to Ailes' ouster from Fox ... not long before his death, as it turned out. His ties to "The O'Reilly Factor's" Bill O'Reilly get particular attention, and among those offering reflective comments are Glenn Beck and actor Austin Pendleton ("What's Up, Doc?"), an Ailes friend from childhood.  (Not rated: AS, P)

"The Lego Movie 2:
The Second Part"

'The Lego Movie 2' keeps building the series

movie review

BY JAY BOBBIN

In movie terms, Legos have been building blocks of another kind.

In a way, it was surprising that the first animated "Lego Movie" took so long to happen. Look at how long that toy not only has been around, but at how popular it's been for generations. "The Lego Movie" was expectedly successful enough to yield some spinoffs – one centered around a Lego version of Batman – but now there's an official sequel, rather logically titled "The Lego Movie 2: The Second Part."

Original writers Chris Miller and Phil Lord are back, so it's to be expected that this edition will have a very familiar feel. The gaming rivalry between two real-world siblings sets up the premise, with Chris Pratt back as the voice of construction guy Emmett – and also as a new hero named Rex Dangervest, whose skills come in very handy when the regular Lego gang faces off against a planet overseen by a queen voiced by Tiffany Haddish.

Batman (voiced once more by Will Arnett) comes into play again here, as do the Lego takes on other legendary heroes, and the film eventually takes on the feel of everything being thrown at the wall to see what sticks.

That's not to say the picture doesn't have its fun moments, with a voice cast that also includes such other returnees as Elizabeth Banks, Channing Tatum (as Superman), Jonah Hill (as Green Lantern), Cobie Smulders (as Wonder Woman) and Will Ferrell. And, having also inherited another iconic role as the current M to Daniel Craig's James Bond, Ralph Fiennes is back from "The Lego Batman Movie" as manservant Alfred.

The fortunate thing for the Lego movie series is that it can make its own rules. After all, it's generating a world of its own, no matter how many links it has into other established areas such as the DC Comics universe. At the same time, with each film it puts forth, the Lego franchise has to stay true to its own world as fans become that much more familiar with it.

"The Lego Movie 2" advances that reasonably well, while also including "Easter eggs" that reference situations from the preceding pictures. Sure, it helps to have seen those films ... but these are Legos that we're talking about, after all, so you won't exactly be left at sea if you don't have those earlier movies as reference points.

In the end, "The Lego Movie 2" doesn't fall apart – but at the same time, it's not unfair to say that it's a bit overconstructed.

CHRIS PRATT'S TOP 10 MOVIES

BY JAY BOBBIN

"Passengers" (2016): Pratt and Jennifer Lawrence make an involving duo as (just about) the only two humans awake on a space station that's making a very long voyage.

"The Magnificent Seven" (2016): Though this Western remake doesn't displace the classic original, it's fun to watch Pratt hold his own against the likes of Denzel Washington as the village-saving gunslingers.

"Jurassic World" (2015): The fun spirit Pratt brings to his role as a "raptor whisperer" brings fresh energy to the franchise.

"Guardians of the Galaxy" (2014): A star was born with Pratt's hugely likable portrayal of Peter Quill, the leader of an offbeat band of Marvel superheroes.

"Her" (2013): Though the picture really belongs to Joaquin Phoenix and the voice of Scarlett Johansson, Pratt offers reliable supporting work.

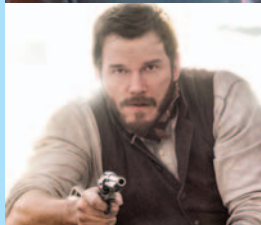

"The Five-Year Engagement" (2012): Again cast as the best pal, Pratt solidly supports top-billed stars Jason Segal and Emily Blunt.

"Moneyball" (2011): Pratt gets to show off his athleticism as one of the Oakland Athletics players assessed for success by the team's general manager and a consultant (Brad Pitt, Jonah Hill).

"Bride Wars" (2009): Pratt was still trading on his goofy-funny television image ("Everwood," "The O.C.") in playing the fiance of Anne Hathaway's character.

"Wanted" (2008): Pratt's future in action fare was foreshadowed by his part opposite Angelina Jolie and James McAvoy in this furiously paced espionage tale.

"Strangers With Candy" (2005): While it isn't a huge role for him, Pratt makes his mark – in a script co-written by star Amy Sedaris and Stephen Colbert – as a suitor of a middle-aged ex-con (Sedaris) who tries to resume her high-school life.

MONDAY'S BEST BETS

Freddie Highmore

9 p.m. on (FOOD) Kids Baking Championship

The Season 6 finale, "Desserts Doing Good," finds Valerie Bertinelli and Duff Goldman hosting the ultimate bake sale as they challenge the three remaining young bakers to incorporate such familiar items as toffee, rice-cereal treats or chocolate-covered pretzels into their creations. There's an added twist: Each cake also has to illustrate a common bake sale theme like Drama Club, Dance Club or Chess Club. The winning baker takes home $25,000, plus a featured spot in Food Network magazine and also the title of Kids Baking Champion.

10 p.m. on 20 23 The Good Doctor

Season 2 of this acclaimed medical drama closes up for now with a finale called "Trampoline," which finds Dr. Shaun Murphy (Freddie Highmore) seeking treatment at St. Bonaventure for the unlikely reasons: injuries from a bar brawl. Elsewhere, as Dr. Melendez and Dr. Lim (Nicholas Gonzalez, Christina Chang) go public with their personal relationship, she clashes with Dr. Park (Will Yun Lee) over the post-surgical symptoms an elderly patient is exhibiting. Sheila Kelley and June Squibb guest star; Richard Schiff also stars.

MasterChef

A delightful new round of the kids' edition of this cooking competition show gets under way in "Junior Edition: New Kids on the Block; Junior Edition: Going Bananas," a two-hour season premiere that sees the arrival of 24 new home cooks whose talent belies their tender years. Among their first challenges are assignments to elevate some classic breakfast and lunch dishes, then later to make as many perfect banana splits as possible. Host Gordon Ramsay is joined on the judging panel by Aaron Sánchez and Christina Tosi.

10 p.m. on (COM)
Corporate

The sardonic yet critically acclaimed workplace comedy wraps up Season 2 with two new back-to-back episodes, starting with "Vacation," which finds Matt (Matt Ingebretson) away on vacation. Unfortunately for his work buddy, that leaves Jake (Jake Weisman) forced to share their office with a deeply unnerving new deskmate. Then, the season finale, "The Fall," sees Hampton DeVille pulling out all the stops in their marketing aimed at doomsday preppers. That turn of events leads Matt to quit and Jake to take on a secret project.

WEDNESDAY'S BEST BETS

John Weisbarth

9 p.m. on (A&E) Zombie House Flipping

Millennial house flipper Justin Stamper has found a way to reclaim many of the rundown and abandoned structures widely found across his home state of Florida. This new home renovation series follows Justin and his Orlando-based team as they acquire some of these empty residences, which include poorly plumbed "McMansions" and a few other abodes that were jeopardized by an approaching sinkhole. Fixing up these zombie homes can pose a major challenge, but the "reanimated" results can fetch a handsome price.

10:01 p.m. on (A&E) Tiny House Nation

Host John Weisbarth and renovation expert and tiny-home designer Zack Griffin return with Season 5, which follows the pair across America to showcase ingeniously constructed small spaces and the people who live in them. Along the way, they also help like-minded families design and construct their own dream mini-homes, each 500 square feet or less. The season premiere, "Tiny Forever After," finds John and Zack in Atlanta to help altar-bound couple Peter and Elizabeth, who are struggling to complete their home and move it to Maine.

THURSDAY'S BEST BETS

Christian Siriano

8 p.m. on (BRAVO)
Project Runway

Host and head judge Heidi Klum and avuncular mentor Tim Gunn have moved on to other ventures, but the show they helped guide to Peabody Award-winning success returns to its original network home for Season 17 with a mix of new and familiar faces. Among the latter, Season 4 winner Christian Siriano has inherited Gunn's mentoring mantle, while Elle editor-in-chief Nina Garcia returns to her seat on the judges panel, joined by fashion designer Brandon Maxwell and journalist Elaine Welteroth. Supermodel Karlie Kloss, the new host, welcomes 16 new designers in tonight's 90-minute premiere.

FRIDAY'S BEST BETS

Richard Pryor

8 p.m. on 6 10
MacGyver

When ruthless assassin Nicholas Helman (Michael Des Barres, returning in a guest role) resurfaces, intent on carrying out another sick killing spree, Mac (Lucas Till) and the rest of the Phoenix Foundation team have little recourse than to turn for help to the one person who knows Helman better than anyone else: his former protege, Murdoc (recurring guest star David Dastmalchian). If fans of the original "MacGyver" experience some mild disorientation while watching this new episode "Murdoc + Helman + Hit," it's probably because Des Barres played Murdoc on that earlier series.

10 p.m. on (PARMT);
11:30 p.m. on (COM)
I Am Richard Pryor

This new documentary from filmmaker Jesse James Miller both examines and celebrates the life and career of the brilliant yet troubled comic and actor who escaped poverty and achieved major success around the world. Filling in details of that life are Pryor's widow, Jennifer, and such friends, fans and colleagues as Sandra Bernhard, Ron De Blasio, Michael Epps, Howie Mandel, Lily Tomlin, Jimmie Walker and Tiffany Haddish, among others.

COVER STORY

A young Angeleno pursues sex, love and a possible alien conspiracy

By George Dickie

Ulysses is a man adrift. As played by Avan Jogia in the trippy coming-of-age comedy series "Now Apocalypse," created and executive produced by Greg Araki ("Kaboom," "Mysterious Skin") and premiering Sunday, March 10, on Starz, he's a Millennial gay man searching for himself and fame in Los Angeles — when he's not hooking up with lovers and indulging his love of marijuana.

Alongside him on their own quests are pals Carly (Kelli Berglund, "Lab Rats"), a struggling actress stuck in a dead-end relationship with a self-absorbed boyfriend; Ford (Beau Mirchoff, "Awkward"), a pretty boy aspiring screenwriter and Uly's best friend from college; and Ford's girlfriend Severine (Roxane Mesquida, "Gossip Girl"), a dedicated NASA scientist and French transplant.

All are in search of goals common to young adults, namely life, love and lots of sex. But what Uly's friends don't have in common with him are his disturbing visions of impending apocalypse and an alien conspiracy — which he suspects may be a product of his THC-saturated brain.

"I think that paranoia is such a theme in this show," says Jogia, "and what I like about this show is that you're not sure whether this is really happening or not, like whether these alien visions are real."

While he may be questioning his own sanity, there is no doubt about Uly's sex drive.

"I kind of explain him as sort of a sexual astronaut," Jogia says. "He's exploring the reaches of the world around him and he's excited about it and it's something he takes a lot of joy and passion in. And he's trying to find love, on Grindr, on apps. That's sort of a hard thing in this day and age. And I think that he's kind of like the most traditional, funnily enough, of all the characters because he just wants to be loved and to love someone. And the other characters, I think, are going through more of an exploration even in a way than he is."

Indeed, while Carly combats boredom/earns an extra buck doing sexy webcam performances and Severine questions her relationship with Ford, Uly drifts along from hook-up to hook-up, until one night while walking home he stumbles upon what appears to be a man having sex with a lizard-like alien.

Freaked, he confides in Carly what he saw. She's skeptical.

"She loves him to death but just thinks he's so high that he's seeing things," Berglund says. "Doesn't believe it, is like, 'OK, maybe you stop smoking so much weed.' And I don't know if there's a moment where she sees the whole alien thing for herself. ... Like is it a metaphor or is it real? It could be both."

"She keeps me tethered to like some sort of reality," Jogia adds.

KELSEY
GRAMMER

Allen Kelsey Grammer was born on Feb. 21, 1955, in Charlotte Amalie, Saint Thomas. He has known his share of tragedy: His father was murdered, he had a younger sister who was assaulted and killed, and his two half-brothers died while scuba diving.

While attending a private school in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Grammer took up performing — and he earned a scholarship to the renowned Juilliard School, though he was expelled for not going to classes.

An internship with San Diego's Old Globe Theatre led Grammer to Minneapolis' esteemed Guthrie Theatre, then he went to Broadway with productions of "Macbeth" and "Othello." Later Great White Way shows in which he's appeared have included "La Cage aux Folles" and "Finding Neverland." He also has starred theatrically in "My Fair Lady" and "Sweeney Todd: The Demon Barber of Fleet Street," and has produced a staging of "The Color Purple."

Grammer's television career began with a role in the miniseries "Kennedy," but his ticket to wide fame clearly was the part of Dr. Frasier Crane, which he originated on "Cheers" and then carried into his own spinoff, "Frasier."

Movies in which Grammer has appeared have included "Down Periscope," "15 Minutes," "Swing Vote," the remake of "Fame," "I Don't Know How She Does It," "Think Like a Man Too" and a couple of the "X-Men" adventures.

Grammer now is a star of Fox's new Friday drama "Proven Innocent," in which he plays an attorney who's still determined to see justice done in the case of an ex-convict (Rachelle Lefevre) who has maintained her innocence and has become a lawyer herself.

SATURDAY'S BEST BETS

8 p.m. on (HBO)

Movie: The First Purge

The fourth film in the "Purge" horror movie series, this 2018 thriller actually is a prequel to the original trilogy, once again written by franchise creator James DeMonaco, who turned the directorial reins over to Gerard McMurray. The movie opens in the 21st century after the U.S. government has been overthrown by the New Founding Fathers of America and chronicles the origins of the first Purge. Y'lan Noel, Lex Scott Davis, Joivan Wade, Luna Velez and Kristen Solis star.

9 p.m. on (HGTV) (TLC)
While You Were Out

Ananda Lewis hosts this reboot of a "Trading Spaces" spinoff that previously aired on TLC more than 15 years ago and will now air on both TLC and sister channel HGTV. Designers from both networks participate, each team designing a room in two neighboring houses while the occupant has been sent on a weekend getaway. The make-over budget for each room is $10,000 per room, with the big reveal taking place upon the absent party's return. Participants include Carter Oosterhouse, Sabrina Soto, Vern Yip, Vanilla Ice and Ty Pennington.
