Lake considers incentives for teachers in neediest schools

By Payne Ray

pray@dailycommercial.com

TAVARES - Lake County School Superintendent Diane Kornegay said Monday that the district is considering offering financial incentives to retain its best teachers in its neediest schools in this year's bargaining sessions with the Lake County Education Association.

"Having the best teachers in our high-need schools is extremely important," Kornegay told School Board members at a meeting Monday night. "That's why I recently had a conversation with LCEA leadership about prioritizing a plan to incentivize great teachers to teach and stay in our highest-need schools."

Asked to clarify on Tuesday, Kornegay, who was traveling, issued a statement saying that talks with the union have just begun and there's still a great deal of concern about what next year's budget will support.

"We want to recruit and retain those teachers where they are needed most," Kornegay said. "We are in the early stages of discussions about how to do that. Once we know more about our funding, it will be easier for us to determine more specifics."

The effort is designed to address teacher turnover, which is on the rise nationally but heavily impacted Lake schools in 2018.

Seven of Lake's schools lost close to or more than half of their faculty last school year. Those schools' populations are largely low-income and from marginalized populations, and students on average underachieve compared to students elsewhere.

High turnover in those schools usually leads to more high turnover, which means fewer experienced teachers to teach the students and to mentor one another, according to UF Assistant Professor Christopher Redding, who has studied turnover throughout his career. Having highly effective teachers enter those schools is one way to combat the problem, Redding said.

Administrators hope an incentive program will slow turnover considerably at those schools.

But there is much uncertainty over whether the money will be there to support such an effort.

LONDON – With just 17 days to go, Britain's departure from the European Union was thrown into chaos and doubt Tuesday as Parliament delivered a crushing double blow to Prime Minister Theresa May's Brexit divorce deal and to her authority as leader.

Recognized for bravery

Eight deputies honored for life-saving efforts, drawing praise from governor

By Cindy Sharp Correspondent

TAVARES - Eight officers from the Lake County Sheriff's Office were recognized on Tuesday for their courage while facing dangerous situations, one of whom was personally thanked by Governor Ron DeSantis.

"Sometimes this is a thankless job, but today we want to honor them for what they've done," Sheriff Peyton Grinnell said. "I am blessed to get to work with 740 members in Florida who have a vested interest to make sure this county remains great."

Among those awarded was Master Deputy Adam Tytler, who received the Meritorious Service Medal. Tytler was the school resource deputy at Eustis High School when a woman tried to bring a gun on campus to settle a fight between a friend and another student. Tytler reportedly saw her retrieve the gun from her car, confronted her at gunpoint and ordered her to the ground. The woman was a convicted felon and the firearm was stolen.

Two days ago, Tytler received a phone call from DeSantis thanking him for his bravery and congratulating him on his award.

"I was shocked," Tytler

Master Deputy Robert Casaburi received the Medal of Valor - one of the highest awards given - for his response to a domestic violence call. As he approached, shots were fired from a semiautomatic rifle. He took immediate action to stop the threat and protected the safety of others.

FALLS CHURCH, VA. A wealthy county in court over sexual misconduct at schools

Virginia's largest school district is defending itself against three separate federal lawsuits filed by students who say the school system botched sexual misconduct investigations.

Two involve boys who say Fairfax County Public Schools wrongly punished them based on false accusations. A third accuses the same school system of ignoring a girl's complaints that she was groped on a band trip.

All three say the nation's 10th largest school system mishandled their cases, with serious consequences for students on the wrong side of its rulings.

DOHA, QATAR Longest US-Taliban peace talks see 'progress' in Qatar

The longest peace talks between the U.S. and the Taliban to end America's 17-year war in Afghanistan concluded Tuesday night in Qatar, with both sides saying progress had been made.

The nearly two weeks of talks produced two draft agreements between the militants and the U.S. government on a "withdrawal timeline and effective counterterrorism measures," American envoy Zalmay Khalilzad wrote on Twitter.

The diplomat said he'd go to Washington and meet with other concerned parties, likely including the Afghan government, which did not take part in the 13 days of face-to-face talks in Doha, the Qatari capital.

Besieged in their last foothold in eastern Syria, Islamic State militants issued a defiant message calling on supporters around the world to carry out attacks in their defense. The once mighty group tried to enshrine an image for the future after defeat, depicting its crumbling domain as the one place ruled by "God's law" and promising it would one day be victorious.

The messaging came in an audio recording and video released online by militants said to be inside the village of Baghouz, where they have been besieged for weeks and, in the past few days, under stepped up assault and bombardment by the U.S.-backed Syrian Democratic Forces.

College scam links TV celebs, coaches

By Alanna Durkin Richer and Collin Binkley

The Associated Press

BOSTON - Fifty people, including Hollywood stars Felicity Huffman and Lori Loughlin, were charged Tuesday in a scheme in which wealthy parents allegedly bribed college coaches and other insiders to get their children into some of the nation's most selective schools.

Federal authorities called it the biggest college admissions scam ever prosecuted by the U.S. Justice Department, with the parents accused of paying an estimated $25 million in bribes.

At least nine athletic coaches and 33 parents, many of them prominent in law, finance, fashion, the food and beverage industry and other fields, were charged. Dozens, including Huffman, the Emmy-winning star of ABC's "Desperate Housewives," were arrested by midday.

"These parents are a catalog of wealth and privilege," U.S. Attorney Andrew Lelling said in announcing the results of a fraud and conspiracy investigation code-named Operation Varsity Blues.

The coaches worked at such schools as Yale, Stanford, Georgetown, Wake Forest, the University of Texas, the University of Southern California and the University of California at Los Angeles. A former Yale soccer coach pleaded guilty and helped build the case against others.

Two more of those charged - Stanford's sailing coach and the college-admissions consultant at the very center of the scheme - pleaded guilty Tuesday in Boston. Others appeared in court and were released on bail.

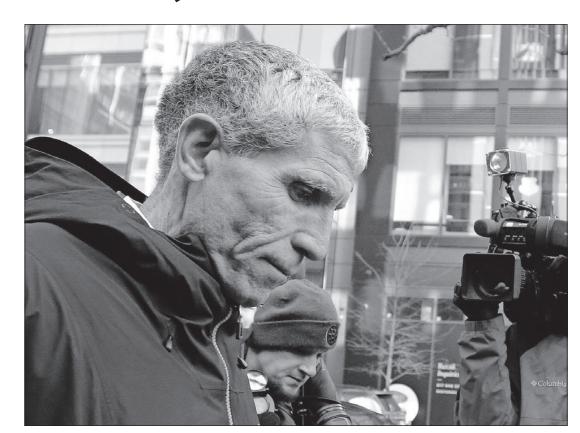

No students were charged, with authorities saying that in many cases the teenagers were unaware of what was going on. Several of the colleges involved made no mention of taking any action against the students.

The scandal is certain to inflame longstanding complaints that children of the wealthy and well-connected have the inside track in college admissions — sometimes through big, timely donations from their parents — and that privilege begets privilege.

College consultants were not exactly shocked by the allegations.

"This story is the proof that there will always be a market for parents who have the resources and are desperate to get their kid one more success," said Mark Sklarow, CEO of the Independent Educational Consultants Association. "This was shopping for name-brand product and being willing to spend whatever it took."

The central figure in the scheme was identified as admissions consultant William "Rick" Singer, founder of the Edge College & Career Network of Newport Beach, California. He pleaded guilty, as did Stanford's John Vandemoer.

Singer's lawyer, Donald Heller, said his client intends to cooperate fully with prosecutors and is "remorseful and contrite and wants to move on with his life."

Prosecutors said that parents paid Singer big money from 2011 through last month to bribe coaches and administrators to falsely make their children look like star athletes to boost their chances of getting accepted. The consultant also hired ringers to take college entrance exams for students, and paid off insiders at testing centers to correct students' answers.

Some parents spent hundreds of thousands of dollars and some as much as $6.5 million to guarantee their children's admission, officials

"For every student admitted through fraud, an honest and genuinely talented student was rejected," Lelling said.

Several defendants, including Huffman, were charged with conspiracy to commit fraud, punishable by up to 20 years in prison.

Lelling said the investigation is continuing and authorities believe other parents were involved. The IRS is also investigating, since some parents allegedly disguised the bribes as charitable donations. The colleges themselves are not targets, the prosecutor said.

The investigation began when authorities received a tip about the scheme from someone they were interviewing in a separate case, Lelling said. He did not elaborate.

Authorities said coaches in such sports as soccer, sailing, tennis, water polo and volleyball took payoffs to put students on lists of recruited athletes, regardless of their ability or experience. Once they were accepted, many of these students didn't play the sports in which they supposedly excelled.

The applicants' athletic credentials were falsified with the help of staged photographs of them playing sports, or doctored photos in which their faces were pasted onto the bodies of genuine athletes, authorities said.

Prosecutors said parents were also instructed to claim their children had learning disabilities so that they could take the ACT or SAT by themselves and get extra time. That made it easier to pull off the tampering, prosecutors said.

Among the parents charged was Gordon Caplan of Greenwich, Connecticut, co-chairman of the international law firm Willkie Farr & Gallagher, based in New York. He and other parents did not immediately return telephone or email messages for comment.

Caplan was accused of paying $75,000 to get a test supervisor to correct the answers on his daughter's ACT exam after she took it. In a conversation last June with a cooperating witness, he was told his daughter needed to "be stupid" when a psychologist evaluated her for learning disabilities that would entitle her to more time to take the test, according to court papers.

The witness described the scheme as "the home run of home runs."

"And it works?" Caplan asked.

"Every time," the witness responded, prompting laughter from both.

A number of colleges moved quickly to fire or suspend the coaches and distance themselves from the scandal, portraying themselves as victims. Stanford fired the sailing coach, and USC dropped of its water polo coach and an athletic administrator. UCLA suspended its soccer coach, and Wake Forest did the same with its volleyball coach.

Loughlin, who was charged along with her husband, fashion designer Mossimo Giannulli, appeared in the ABC sitcom "Full House" in the 1980s and '90s. Huffman was nominated for an Oscar for playing a transgender woman in the 2005 movie "Transamerica." She also starred in the TV show "Sports Night" and appeared in such films as "Reversal of Fortune," "Magnolia" and "The Spanish Prisoner."

Loughlin and her husband allegedly gave $500,000 to have their two daughters labeled as recruits to the USC crew team, even though neither participated in the sport. Their 19-year-old daughter Olivia Jade Giannulli, a social media star with a popular You-Tube channel, is now at USC.

Court documents said Huffman paid $15,000 that she disguised as a charitable donation so that her daughter could take part in the entrance-exam cheating

Court papers said a cooperating witness met with Huffman and her husband, actor William H. Macy, at their Los Angeles home and explained to them that he "controlled" a testing center and could have somebody secretly change her daughter's answers. The person told investigators the couple agreed to the plan.

Macy was not charged; authorities did not say why.

The couple's daughter, Sofia, is an aspiring actress who attends Los Angeles High School of the Arts.

Messages seeking comment from Huffman's representative were not immediately returned. A spokeswoman for Loughlin had no comment.

In another case, a young woman got into Yale in exchange for $1.2 million from the family, prosecutors said. A false athletic profile created for the student said she had been on China's junior national development soccer team.

The deputy recognized Hill from previous encounters with him. Hill had been trespassed in the shopping center, but merchants said he continued to return almost daily and harass customers.

He was arrested on charges of trespassing and disorderly intoxication.

Hill is well known to local law enforcement, having been arrested 17 times since 2009 on a variety of charges, including assault, battery, disorderly intoxication, brawling and trespassing.

MOUNT DORA - City Manager Robin Hayes will remain at the helm in Mount Dora after being passed over for the city manager's position in Palm Coast.

The Palm Coast City Council chose Matthew Morton, from Duvall, Washington, as its next city manager in a tight 3-2 vote over their interim City Manager Beau Falgout, Hayes and one other candidate.

During discussion prior to the vote, a member of the audience expressed concern that Hayes would not stick with the city for long because of something she said when she was interviewed earlier. She had indicated she wanted a place she could grow for two to five years. It wasn't clear if that was a consideration for the council, however.

Meanwhile, in Mount Dora, Mayor Nick Girone said he was relieved that Nursing home staffing changes considered

By Christine Sexton

News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE - Florida's nursing homes may be allowed to pare the amount of nursing care they are required to provide elderly residents under legislation that started moving forward Monday in the Senate.

Despite opposition from AARP Florida and others, members of the Senate Health Policy Committee approved a bill that would eliminate a mandate that nursing homes provide each patient an average daily minimum of 3.6 hours of direct patient care, 2.5 hours of which must be provided by a certified nursing assistant.

Instead, the measure (SB 1088) would require nursing facilities to provide each resident one hour of direct nursing care per day and 3.9 hours of what is called "direct care staffing."

The changes are being sought by the Florida Health Care Association, a group that represents many of the state's largest for-profit nursing homes. If ultimately passed, the bill, filed by Sen. Ben Albritton, R-Wauchula, would take effect July 1.

A House version (HB 897) has been filed by Rep. Rick Roth, R-Loxahatchee, though It has not been heard in committees.

With time running short at Monday's committee meeting, Senate Health Policy Chairwoman Gayle Harrell, R-Stuart, limited public testimony on Albritton's bill.

But AARP Florida lobbyist Iack McRay told The News Service of Florida that the bill would give nursing homes the opportunity to reduce the amount of care provided by certified nursing assistants, something his group cannot support.

Lake County moves toward new logo

By Katie Sartoris ksartoris@dailycommercial.com

TAVARES – Lake County

is one step closer to getting a new logo.

The county's office of communications on Tuesday unveiled an inhouse designed logo at the commission meeting. Commissioners voted unanimously to move forward with a public hearing on the logo at their next meeting. Elisha Pappacoda, communications director for the county, presented the new logo to applause at the meeting.

The proposed logo incorporates design elements similar to the current logo - a sunset, vistas, lakes, wildlife and flora and fauna. This one, however, is simplified. It also includes the county's slogan, "Real Florida. Real Close."

Colors used in the logo were named coreopsis yellow, after the Florida state wildflower, cypress green, palmetto green, heron blue and Dora blue.

Pappacoda told the commission the redesign would simplify printing and embroidering and create cohesive signage throughout the county.

She also showed the commission examples of what the logo will look like on county shirts, business cards, vehicles, street signs and gateway signs. If adopted at the March 26

Trump to Farmers: 'LOVE YOU!' But still want to cut subsidies

By Mario Parker and Alexandra Semenova Bloomberg

President Donald Trump's "I LOVE YOU!" tweet to farmers is facing another challenge: budget cuts that will slash subsidies for crop insurance and small growers.

Trump's 2020 budget, released Monday, calls for a 15 percent funding drop for the Department of Agriculture, citing "overly generous" subsidies. The president is seeking one of the largest-ever cuts to domestic discretionary spending in a $4.7 trillion fiscal 2020 boosts defense spending building a border wall.

The plan would trim the USDA budget by $3.6 billion to $20.8 billion, lowering subsidies for crop insurance premiums to 48 percent from 62 percent, and limiting subsidies for growers who make less than $500,000 annually.

In December, the president tweeted, "Farmers, I LOVE YOU!" On Monday, the National Farmers Union criticized the White House budget proposal, saying, "It's time the president's policy proposals and rhetoric acknowledge the financial pain in farm country."

The budget blueprint, which forecasts annual deficits extending beyond the next decade and rising national debt, represents a wish list for the president's priorities that is budget proposal that also certain to be ignored by Congress. "The Trump and adds $8.6 billion for budget has no chance of garnering the necessary bipartisan support to become law," said Nita Lowey, the top Democrat on the House Appropriations Committee.

The bill defines "direct care staff" as people who "through interpersonal contact with residents or resident care management, provide care and services that allow residents to attain or maintain their highest practicable physical, mental, and psychosocial states of well-being."

The U.S Bureau of Labor Statistics recognizes three types of "direct care staff," including certified nursing assistants, home health aides and personal care aides. CNAs assist residents with activities of daily living and perform clinical tasks such as range-of motion exercises and blood pressure readings.

Home health aides provide essentially the same care and services as nursing assistants, but they assist people in their homes or in community settings under the supervision of nurse or therapists. They may also perform light housekeeping tasks such as preparing food or changing linens.

Personal care aides work in private or group homes. In addition to providing assistance with activities of daily living, they often help with housekeeping chores, meal preparation and medication management.

The Florida Health Care Association said the changes would allow long-term care providers to offer additional services that are outside the parameters of what CNAs do.

Emmett Reed, executive director of the association, said the proposal offers nursing homes greater flexibility to staff their centers with specialists in mental health, activities, respiratory therapy, specialized feeding and other direct-care services.

"Florida has always been a leader in nursing tremendous gains we've seen in quality care are a result," Reed said in a prepared statement. "This good bill makes sense and will keep Florida in the forefront of caring for our state's aging baby boomers."

But Steve Bahmer, president and chief executive of the organization Leading Age Florida, disagreed. His group also represents nursing homes, but his members want to keep the minimum 2.5 hour CNA requirement.

"CNAs are the people who deliver care in the nursing home. So grooming, bathing, feeding, toileting, the work that goes on to care for a senior in a nursing home is done by CNAs," Bahmer said.

The bill cleared the Senate Health Policy Committee unanimously. But Sen. Lori Berman, D-Lantana, said some Democrats were concerned with the bill and that the initial support could wane if changes aren't made.

"We may change our votes because we do have very serious concerns about that," Berman said.

dining and entertainment complex across the street from Daytona International Speedway, has been well-received, Kersey said.

"Visitors continue to come by the new welcome center location with quite a few pinning locations on the world map from all around the world, which is truly remarkable to see," Kersey said. "Posters are a hot commodity, with inventory now very limited."

More bikers are visiting One Daytona this year than last, said Gentry Baumline-Robinson, One Daytona spokeswoman.

"We look forward to our Bike Week events this week beginning with American Flat Track's Bike Night on Tuesday from 6-8 p.m. and then our free live music Wednesday and Thursday from 4-7 p.m. on the Victory Circle stage," she said.

Likewise, vendors relocated from Riverfront Park to a new home at the Boot Hill Outpost on U.S. Highway 1 in Ormond Beach reported a robust opening weekend, said Brian Holt, organizer of the vendor showcase for Ormond Beach-based Official Gear Promotions.

"We were happy with our traffic that we had at Boot Hill Outpost up there," Holt said. "The vendors we had on the property seemed to be very happy and excited about the future at that location. I also talked to several other vendors on Main Street and they told me they had a really good weekend. Business for the vendors at Destination Daytona (at U.S. 1 and Interstate 95) also was very good."

HAYES

Hayes is staying. "I'm extremely happy with the choice they (Palm Coast council members) made because we still have Robin here, and I think the employees are excited and breathing a sigh of relief too," Girone said. "But it does open up questions naturally and that's understandable. It should also serve as an exercise for our council as far as not taking things for granted."

Girone believes that Hayes' decision to apply for the city manager job in Palm Coast, a bigger city with a larger budget and more employees, was not a matter of her testing the waters but rather a way for her to gauge her career options.

He noted that when he worked as a business administrator years ago, he applied for an open school superintendent position to see where he stood.

"Although I was a good business administrator, I found out through the interview process that I was not cut out for the superintendent position. That's how people grow," Girone said. "She was mainly trying to get an idea of her own performance by seeing how other cities perceive her talent."

Girone said he is looking forward to future council discussion on the matter.

"In the near future, I think we need to have a serious discussion of where we want the city to go, about the leadership and if we want Robin to be part of that leadership, which I think we do, and about how we will maintain that," he said. "We need to look at some of the reasons and the way things like this come up. And now that we are in the middle of a charter review, we should talk about making this a better place for our employees to work and feel they have the most stability. Hayes started with Mount Dorain September, 2016 after serving as Oveido's director of management services and communications for more than three years.

In Hayes' last performance evaluation in the fall of 2018, after more than two years as Mount Dora's city manager, the council rated her highly and granted her a 4 percent raise, bumping her salary from $151,368 to $157,422.

"I'm happy Robin is staying in Mount Dora and I hope she feels the same joy," Girone said.

Hayes did not respond to a request for comment Tuesday.

 $outcome\,than\,the\,historic$ 230-vote margin of defeat for the agreement in January, before May secured changes from the bloc but not by much.

Top EU officials warned that the defeat had increased the chances of a chaotic "no-deal" British exit, which could mean major disruption for businesses and people in the U.K. and many of the 27 remaining EU countries.

The stinging 149-vote defeat stripped away May's control over the course of Brexit and handed it to Parliament, which is divided about what to do next.

A drawn and hoarse May admitted defeat again – and confirmed that Parliament will vote Wednesday on whether to leave the EU on March 29 without an agreement. If that is defeated — the likely outcome – lawmakers will vote Thursday on whether to delay Brexit, something that needs to be approved by the EU nations too.

May warned lawmakers that "voting against leaving without a deal and for an extension does not solve the problems we face."

"The EU will want to know what use we mean to make of such an extension. This House will have to answer that question. Does it wish to revoke (Brexit-triggering) Article 50? Does it want to hold a second referendum? Or does it want to leave with a deal but not this deal?

"These are unenviable choices," she said.

The EU, which had warned there would be no more changes or negotiations if Parliament threw out the deal, expressed exasperation at yet another Brexit crisis.

In a statement, the European Commission said the member states "have done all that is possible to reach an agreement."

"If there is a solution to the current impasse, it can only be found in London," it said, adding that "today's vote has significantly increased the likelihood of a 'nodeal' Brexit."

of Education revealed their budget proposals, both of which recommended stripping funds from a notable asset for Lake, the compression adjustment fund, which is designed to pad the coffers of districts funded below the state average.

The fund is flexible in what a district can use it for, and Lake benefited from it - to the tune of $3 million. There governor's budget also cut the state's Digital Classroom's fund, which Lake is using to fund its Chromebook rollout over the next four vears.

District officials pointed out that even those two budget proposals, which officials called "bestcase scenarios," couldn't best teachers in its neediest schools in this year's bargaining sessions with the Lake County Education Association. [CINDY SHARP/CORRE-SPONDENT] be used to predict what legislators will actually approve.

With the realities of the budget up in the air, it isn't possible for the district to make long-term financial plans that aren't already covered.

More information will likely become available after the budget has been determined and after an agreement is reached in bargaining sessions with the LCEA.

overwhelming and bipartisan support for doing so. Her comments to The Washington Post riled some liberals, including new lawmakers who helped flip the chamber to Democratic control.

Together, Pelosi and Schiff's remarks are designed to signal to outspoken Democrats in the House that senior lawmakers in the Democrat-controlled House aren't behind any drive to impeach Trump. The delicate issue returned to the surface after a week of ugly dispute in Pelosi's ranks over how to word a resolution condemning anti-Semitism and anti-Muslim discrimination. Schiff, whose committee has been investigating Russian interference in the 2016 election, told reporters an impeachment effort seen as partisan would be doomed. "A bipartisan process would have to be extra clear and compelling," Schiff told reporters. "I think the speaker is absolutely right. In its absence, an impeachment partisan becomes a partisan exercise doomed for failure. And I see little to be gained by putting the country through that kind of wrenching experience." In remarks published

Monday by The Washington Post, Pelosi made clear that she thinks Trump is not fit for office. But she said based on what's known now and the fact that the country is not behind any effort to remove him, "I'm not for impeachment," she said.

"Unless there's something so compelling and overwhelming and bipartisan, I don't think we should go down that path, because it divides the country," Pelosi said. It's a departure from her previous comments that Democrats are waiting on special counsel Robert Mueller to lay out findings from his Russia investigation before considering impeachment.

"We're just starting the investigation. And it's not going to stop," said Rep. Pramila Jayapal, D-Wash, a member of the House Judiciary Committee. "We're going to make sure we don't provide sort of an open playbook for people to just continue to sit in the Oval Office and not uphold the Constitution."

Florida lawmakers look to toughen anti-hazing laws

By Ana Ceballos News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE -More than a year after a Florida State University fraternity pledge died, lawmakers are considering expanding the state's anti-hazing laws to include the prosecution of people involved in planning acts of hazing.

One of those proposals (SB 1080) was approved by its first Senate committee Monday. The Senate Criminal Justice Committee advanced the bill, which would also provide immunity to the first person who calls 911 when a hazing victim is in need of medical care.

Sen. Lauren Book, D-Plantation, is spearheading the effort in the Senate with the backing of the parents of Andrew Coffey, who died after drinking a bottle of Wild Turkey bourbon that had been taped to his hand at a Phi Kappa Phi party.

Andrew's parents, Tom and Sandy Coffey, on Monday pleaded with senators to hold leaders and members of organizations accountable by strengthening the state's hazing criminal statutes.

"Put people on notice so that they can't just do whatever they want to do without any type of consequence," Tom Coffey said while holding back tears. "We are doing this for all the other kids. We never, ever, ever, ever want to see this repeated again."

Under current law, a person who intentionally hazes someone, resulting in serious bodily injury or death, faces a thirddegree felony charge. The proposal would add a permanent injury to the list.

Hazing includes forcing someone to drink alcohol or take drugs, sleep deprivation, whipping, branding or forcing someone to go through what could result from "extreme embarrassment."

If Book's measure is approved, prosecutors would be able to charge people who knew about hazing plans or recruited people to participate in the hazing. Under the proposal, a person would need to cooperate with authorities after calling 911 to receive immunity from hazing charges.

Sen. Jeff Brandes, R-St. Petersburg, supported the proposal and asked Book to match the provision in her anti-hazing law with the Good Samaritan law, which gives legal protection to people who assist someone who is in danger.

"The goal here is to save lives," Brandes said.

Coffey's death led FSU to suspend Greek life and consider reforms to combat dangerous drinking at the university.

Browning Brooks issued a statement Monday that said the university backs tougher laws to address

"Florida State fully supports strengthening anti-hazing laws, and this is consistent with the university's many efforts to prevent such tragedies in the future," the statement

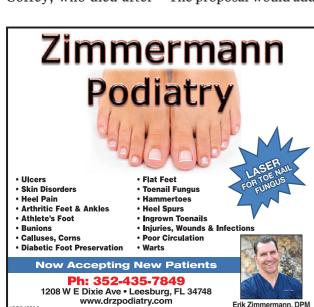

David Bianchi, an

the Coffey family, told senators that more needs to be done to expand the state's anti-hazing laws, which he said have not been changed in 17 years.

"We know we need to make this good law even better," Bianchi said.

Bianchi also shared the story of another FSU fraternity pledge, Nicholas Mauricio, who suffered a brain injury after being punched in the face during a "Scumbag of the Week" event. The 20-year-old sued Alpha Epsilon Pi for negligence.

The Senate measure needs approval from the Education and Appropriations committees before it could get a full vote on the Senate floor. A similar proposal (HB 727) will be considered for the first time Tuesday morning in the House Criminal Justice Subcommittee.

Much of world bans Boeing jet involved in Ethiopia crash

By Elias Meseret and Yidnek Kirubel

The Associated Press

HEJERE, Ethiopia Much of the world, including the entire European Union, grounded the Boeing jetliner involved in the Ethiopian Airlines crash or banned it from their airspace, leaving the United States on Tuesday as one of the few remaining operators of the plane involved in two deadly accidents in just five months.

The European Aviation Safety Agency took steps to keep the Boeing 737 Max 8 out of the air, joining Asian and Middle Eastern governments and carriers that also gave in to safety concerns in the aftermath of Sunday's crash, which killed all 157 people on board.

Referring to the Lion Air crash in Indonesia that killed 189 people last year, European regulators said

A Turkish Airlines official said two Britainbound planes returned to Istanbul after British airspace was closed to the aircraft. The official spoke on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to speak publicly.

Some U.S. airlines expressed support for the Boeing model, and American Airlines and Southwest continued flying them. A vice president for American, the world's biggest carrier, which has 24 Max 8s, said they had "full confidence in the aircraft."

DeSantis drug import plan gets support

By Christine Sexton News Service Florida

TALLAHASSEE -Gov. Ron DeSantis was criticized last year for not having a health care platform while he campaigned for the state's top job.

But DeSantis' recent announcement that he wants the state to begin importing drugs from Canada is getting praise from Florida lawmakers.

Members of the House Health Quality Subcommittee on Tuesday voted 15-2 to approve a bill (HB 19) that would help carry out DeSantis' plan.

"I just have to say, out loud, that I am stunned that this proposal is here. So thank you," Rep. Carlos Guillermo Smith, D-Orlando, told bill sponsor Tom Leek, R-Ormond Beach. "I say that in a good way."

The United States spends $3.5 trillion on health care, or $10,739 per person, each year. One-tenth of that, approximately $333.4 billion, is spent on retail prescription drugs, with 14 percent, or $46.7 billion, paid out-of-pocket by consumers.

A staff analysis of the House bill said the United States overall spends 30 percent to 190 percent more on prescription drugs than other developed countries and pays up to 174 percent more for the same prescription drugs.

Leek's bill aims to lower those costs by establishing two drug importation programs. One program, for example, would allow the state to import drugs from Canada for Medicaid and prison health care. That part of the proposal is dubbed the Canadian Drug Importation Program and would be run by the state Agency for Health Care Administration.

The other program would be known as the International Drug Importation Program. It would be run by the Florida Department of Business and Professional Regulation and would be available to individual residents.

Both programs would need approval from the federal government before they could be implemented.

But DeSantis, who was endorsed by President Donald Trump in the Republican primary, said he had spoken to the president personally and that Trump was "enthused" about the idea.

While he supports the bill, Smith worried that the proposal didn't go far enough to ensure that the costs of drugs aren't inflated before reaching consumers.

"I didn't see anything clear on price controls and guaranteed outcomes," Smith said to Leek. "What mechanisms are in the bill that would guarantee that the consumer is going to see price savings at the end of the day?"

Leek replied: "There are no price controls and no guarantees. What's built into this bill that works is the free-market principle."

Lobbyists filled the room Tuesday during debate on the proposal.

John Clark, a vice president and chief security officer for Pfizer, told lawmakers that the bill isn't a panacea for lowering drug costs.

Clark, who worked for federal law enforcement for 28 years before joining the pharmaceutical giant, said the proposed programs could increase the amounts of counterfeit drugs that are coming into the country.

In 2008 there were 30 counterfeit versions of drugs that Pfizer manufactured. But with the proliferation of people ordering drugs off the internet, there are now 98 knock-off Pfizer drugs in the United States.

Clark told the committee that "tens of thousands of citizens are dying every day because of counterfeit drugs." The general public, though, isn't aware of the problem because of an assumption that people are dying from underlying diseases, not from the counterfeit drugs.

While Clark warned of counterfeit drugs, fraud and dying patients, Zephyrhills businessman Bill Hepshire told lawmakers the bill would help people who cannot afford prescription drugs.

Hepshire, founder of the Zephyrhills-based Canadian Med Store, said that for 16 years he's helped people who cannot afford the costs of their prescriptions obtain drugs from Canada.

"The people we typically help are senior citizens living on fixed incomes, small-business owners on high-deductible health plans and young parents who have children who suffer from serious allergies to peanuts or bee stings and require an EpiPen," he said. "The one thing all of these people have in common is that they struggle every day to afford their life-saving medication.

DeSantis announced his drug importation plan last month at The Villages, a massive Central Florida retirement community. DeSantis was joined by House Speaker Jose Oliva, a Miami Lakes Republican who has made lowering health-care costs a top priority. Within hours of DeSantis' announcement, Leek had filed the bill for consideration during the 2019 legislative session. But the bill faces a more uncertain future in the Senate.

While a companion measure (SB 1452) has been filed, Senate President Bill Galvano said he is worried the state is overstepping its authority with the proposed regulatory structure of the program for individual residents.

A Republican attorney from Bradenton, Galvano said Florida doesn't have the authority to regulate the movement of medicine from state to state or from other countries to Florida because of interstate-commerce laws.

Margaret McDowell

"If we're dead we can't do much. But as long as we're alive, we can still tap dance, we can still crack a joke, we can still sing a song, we can still tell a story.'

Mel Brooks

arl Reiner knows a few nonagenarians (people ages 90 to 99). At 96, he's one himself.

It's not unusual for people aged 90 to know others their own age. But the ones Reiner associates with are witty, active and engaged. I learned this watching a documentary Reiner hosts entitled "If You're Not in the Obit. Eat Breakfast." Reiner interviews Mel Brooks, now age 92; Betty White, age 97; Dick Van Dyke, age 93; and Norman Lear, age 96.

Reiner also interviews Ida Keeling, now 103, who began running at age 67 to combat depression after two of her children were killed.

Watching Dick Van Dyke dance and listening to Reiner, Brooks and Lear harmonize through an old show tune is inspiring.

Ida Keeling's workout regimen is uplifting - and even includes push-ups. "You've got to body," she says. Not all of us can enjoy the health and vitality that these folks do. Chronic pain, dementia, strokes, heart attacks and physical limitations are only too real. That said, there's life out there for all of us, at any age. To embrace it, we need the right mindset.

Ninety-three-yearold portrait artist Raymond Olivere, interviewed in the film, painted in his studio virtually all day, every day, until his recent passing. Olivere credited his longevity to his mental curiosity.

Reiner and Brooks convene several times weekly to watch movies. Lear is remaking the television show

"One Day at a Time." Brooks was preparing for his one-man, stand-up comedy appearance in Las Vegas and working on a remake of "Young Frankenstein" for the theatre.

Reiner said, "If I didn't have my computer to go to in the morning, I'd be lost." He looks forward to working.

One of the messages of the documentary is that our lives are not necessarily segmented into working years and retirement years. For many of us, work will always continue - so will gardening, exercising and socializing. If we can think clearly, we can stay engaged at any age.

Most economic columns on aging focus on the need to take more money into our later years since we're all living longer, and certainly that's important. But it's really only part of the equation.

Another vital component of successful aging is maintaining a mindset of engagement. By the time you and I are the age of Carl Reiner and company, it will be commonplace to see nonagenarians in a myriad of professions laboring happily each day in our chosen fields.

ANOTHER OPINION

Celebrating the sunshine

n January, Gov. Ron DeSantis issued an executive order calling for the repeal and replacement of the dreaded Common Core K-12 curriculum. DeSantis directed Education Secretary Richard Corcoran to "identify opportunities to equip high school graduates with sufficient knowledge of America's civics, particularly the principles reflected in the United States Constitution, so as to be capable of discharging the responsibilities associated with American citizenship."

We've been at this for a while now, with some success. The Florida Department of Education implemented an end-of-course civics exam as part of its statewide standardized testing regimen in 2014. Between then and 2018, the ratio of students who achieved proficiency on that test increased from 61 percent to 71 percent.

Yet we can do better. So, we encourage DeSantis and state lawmakers, who already have a bill in the works to bolster civics education among middle-schoolers, to keep harping on this issue.

We also remind them of Thomas Jefferson's thinking on what actually makes civics education work: knowledge.

"Our new Constitution," Jefferson wrote in 1789, "has succeeded beyond what I apprehended it would have done." He expressed surprise that the states had come together to support the new national government. But Jefferson noted their delegates came to understand that "consolidation" was necessary in order to have "a federal government which could walk upon its own legs, without leaning for support on the State legislatures."

"A sense of necessity, and a submission to it, is to me a new and consolatory proof that, whenever the people are well-informed, they can be trusted with their own government; that, whenever things get so far wrong as to attract their notice, they may be relied on to set them to rights."

In other words, when the people know what their government is doing, they can support and manage its affairs correctly.

Along those lines, the news media and associated groups and open-government advocates in Florida and across the country this week will celebrate Sunshine Week, the annual commemoration of the value of accessible and transparent government.

Florida news media first marked Sunshine Week in 2002. By 2005, it had become a national event, always observed in mid-March to coincide with the birthday of James Madison, father of the Bill of Rights.

It's fitting that Florida is the birthplace of Sunshine Week. We have protected our tradition of open government by enshrining it in our state constitution for decades.

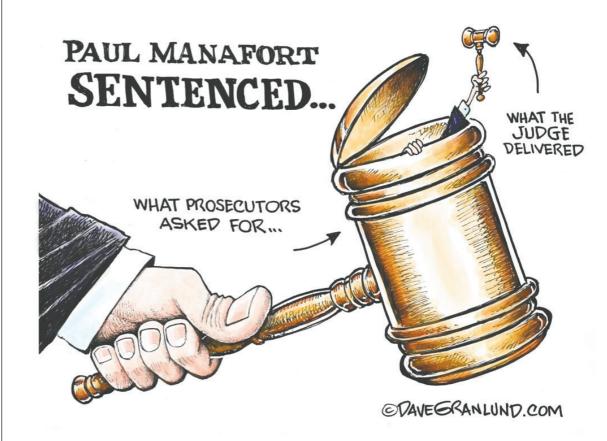

Yet if we don't jealously guard our right to open government, the government will always explore ways to erect shade. The Tallahassee-based First Amendment Foundation reports that 1,122 exemptions to Sunshine Laws are now on the books. Heading into the current legislative session, the group noted, lawmakers had proposed more than 50 additional bills affecting open government, mostly to limit further.

In the end, vigilance is necessary to ensure the public's right to know is not further encroached upon. The death of transparency will be one of a thousand cuts, not one fell swoop.

Per Gov. DeSantis, improving civics education and understanding of our laws and practices cannot be overemphasized. But unless we actually put our knowledge into practice, effective citizenship, like an unused muscle, will atrophy, likely never to be recovered. Sunshine Week helps remind us how important it is to exercise our rights.

ANOTHER OPINION

It's time to interview Kelly, other former Trump officials

he New York Times reports on the appearance at Duke University by former White House chief of staff John Kelly.

"Mr. Kelly defended the utility of the NATO alliance, which Mr. Trump has often criticized as an unfair financial drain on the United States," the Times reports. "On a wall at the border with Mexico, Mr. Kelly said that there were specific areas where it could be effective but constructing one 'from sea to shining sea' was a 'waste of money.'" Kelly let on that the "zero tolerance" policy for those crossing the border was a "surprise" to him and other officials. And finally, he debunks the need for an emergency by correctly identifying the migrants:

"Of people crossing the border who are apprehended, Mr. Kelly contradicted the president. "They're overwhelmingly not criminals - they're people coming up here for economic" purposes. Mr. Trump has regularly portrayed immigrants crossing at the southern border as dangerous lawbreakers."

Kelly, it would seem, should be called as an expert witness in oversight hearings on the president's immigration policies, as well as on hearings examining Trump's multifaceted corruption, obstruction, abuse of power and other scandals.

On immigration, Kelly should be asked:

Did anyone present data to the president showing his allegations about criminals, terrorists, etc. were false? Is he able to process such material?

Has he been shown information confirming border crossings are down?

Does he understand that a wall would have zero effect on the asylum seekers who present themselves at the border?

Is there an emergency at the border? As a retired general, what is your view of raiding the military constructio budget to pay for a wall? Likewise, the House

Foreign Affairs Committee and/or Intelligence Committee should call Kelly up to ask: How often does Trump read his intelligence briefing?

Will Trump read materials longer than five pages? Longer than 10?

Has he been warned not to take the word of dictators from enemy countries? Why did you not want

Ivanka and Jared Kushner to get security clearances? Did you ever observe Trump or family members using meetings with foreign leaders to advance their private business interests?

Why does he continue to misstate basic facts about trade?

Why did Trump confiscate notes from meetings with Russian President Vladimir Putin?

Does Secretary of State Mike Pompeo misstate facts (e.g. progress on denuclearization, involvement of Saudis in the murder of journalist Jamal Khashoggi) to satisfy the president?

Does Trump pose a threat to U.S. national security?

Trump illustrates again and again that he operates in a fact-free environment. Former officials, not just Kelly, but also H.R. McMaster, Jim Mattis and Rex Tillerson, have an obligation to explain how this White House operates, give their expert opinion as to the ramifications of Trump's governmentby-ignorance and let the American people assess just how preposterous is the author of the anonymous New York Times commentary in claiming last year that aides are protecting us from Trump. I suspect we will find out it is far worse than we imagined.

ANOTHER OPINION

Will Trump go quietly if he's not re-elected?

John Crisp

¬ he rhetoric of American exceptionalism usually makes me a little uncomfortable. Bragging is unseemly, and generally boasters have trouble getting along with others. President Ronald Reagan called America a "shining city upon a hill," but a cynic might note that there are other cities on other hills and that the world might not accept that America is the absolute high-water mark of civilization. And it's only a short walk from a little too much national pride to hubris.

But, really, Reagan was right in significant ways. I've been reading biographies of the founders lately - Franklin, Washington, Adams, Jefferson, Madison and so on - and I recommend them as a reminder of what a remarkable country we have.

The founders had their flaws. Many were slaveholders and Indian killers, and they set up a nation focused on the privileges of white men of property. After more than two centuries of bloodshed and suffering, we've arrived at the current work in progress. Our nation isn't perfect, but it's very, very remarkable. And the democratic norms that define us are essential to our survival.

The presidency of Donald Trump is putting those norms to the test. It should make all of us a little queasy when Trump talks casually about "retribution" for "Saturday Night Live" because he doesn't like their skits. It should make us nervous when he pushes away allies who share American values - freedom, rule of law, tolerance – and embraces oppressive autocrats who rule with fear and, sometimes, murder. Trump's most avid supporters contend that he's not an ordinary politician, that he does things his way. Indeed. But the extent to which he can deviate from the bedrock norms of our democracy is limited. Often he pushes up hard against them, and sometimes he goes over the line.

Here's what concerns me most: Nothing is more characteristically American than the systematic, peaceful transfer of power in response to the will of the people. No matter what you thought of President Barack Obama, it's worth noting that he did nothing more presidential - or more American - during his eight years in office than gracefully relinquishing his power to Trump.

It must have been difficult. Trump achieved considerable political mileage by suggesting that Obama wasn't even an American. Obama knew that Trump would do his best to subvert his legacy, and that Trump would continue to criticize and blame him long after he left the White House. Further, Obama already knew that Russians had been involved in an effort to help elect Trump.

But I can't think of a more emblematic image of American democracy than the scene on Jan. 20, 2017, when a limousine delivered Donald and Melania Trump to the doors of the White House, and Barack and Michelle Obama graciously welcomed them inside.

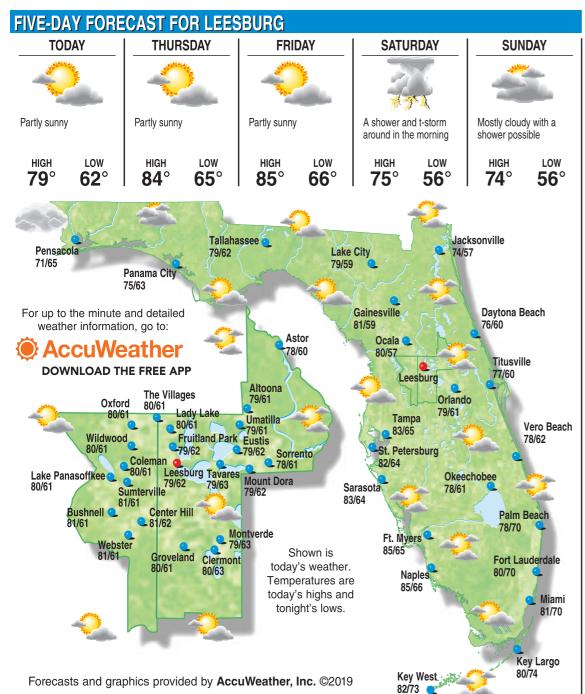

It's difficult to imagine President Trump being equally gracious. Well, we can live with rudeness. But Trump has already taken steps to undermine the 2020 election by saying last week that the Democrats "cannot legitimately win." Trump gets a lot of praise from his supporters for saying what he means and doing what he says. Does this mean that he's going to contend that a Democratic win in 2020 is illegitimate?

I give comedian Bill Maher credit for being the first to suggest, at least a year ago, that if Trump isn't re-elected, he will not leave office peacefully. As recently as his last show, he was having trouble getting his guests — from the left and the right — to take that concern seriously.

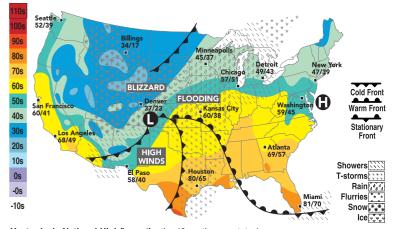

Not give up power peacefully? Outrageous.

Gators look for year 2 bounce

Competition for playing roles wide open, Mullen

By Robbie Andreu GateHouse Media

GAINESVILLE - Dan Mullen knows a thing or two about second-year bounces in college football.

He's experienced one everywhere he's been, starting at Bowling Green, moving on to Utah, then to Florida and again at Mississippi State.

So, will another one be coming in his second year as the head football coach at Florida?

"I don't know, we'll see," Mullen said Monday. "I think our guys are probably better understanding what's going out on the field. It should be a lot easier going out to practice than it was this time last year when nobody really knew what to expect.

"I think they know what to expect. I don't know about the jump from one year to the next. We'll take a jump if we work harder. If we do what we did last year, then we can't expect to be better than we were last

SEC has plenty of drama

By Teresa M. Walker Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. - While a tougher Southeastern Conference Tournament field might lead to drama-filled games, the annual question of whether anyone can knock off Kentucky still looms.

The tournament is back in Music City after a year away with the Wildcats looking for a fifth straight SEC tournament title and 32nd all-time. A No. 1 seed in the NCAA Tournament possibly awaits the SEC champion.

Then there's the offcourt mystery with the cloud looming over the league's regular-season champion.

No. 9 LSU is the SEC's hottest team, but may play without its head coach and a star freshman.

While the Tigers have won a league-best five straight and own the SEC's best road record at 9-1, LSU coach Will Wade remains suspended indefinitely after reports that an FBI wire-tap captured Wade's telephone conversations with a person convicted last year of funneling money to the families of basketball recruits. LSU is deciding whether freshman Javonte Smart will play after holding the guard out of the last game. "I haven't been told otherwise that I'm not going to be," interim LSU coach Tony Benford said of coaching the Tigers during the SEC Tournament.

LSU, whose lone SEC Tournament title came back in 1980, has an easier path to the championship game with both No. 4 Kentucky and No. 8 Tennessee poised for a semifinal clash in the bottom half of the bracket. Kentucky coach John Calipari is more focused on playing either Alabama or Mississippi on Friday night.

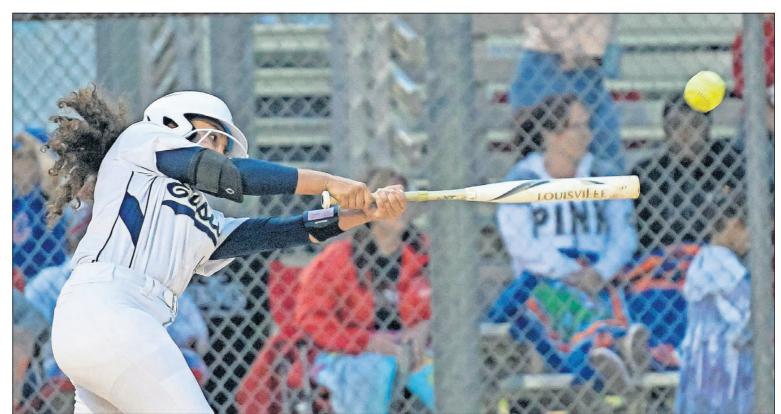

"If we can get by the first, I'm probably not even worried that we're playing the second game," Calipari said.

Tennessee, which lost the final to Kentucky last year, hasn't won the SEC tournament since 1979. The Vols are 4-3 over their past seven games and have dropped to their lowest ranking of the season.

Coach Rick Barnes said he didn't know enough about the LSU situation

OVERPOWERING

Eustis' Paris Key (5) gets a hit at a game between Eustis High School and Tavares High School at Fred Stover Sports Complex in Tavares on Tueday, March 12, 2019. [PAUL RYAN / CORRESPONDENT]

Eustis' Delaney Heaberlin strikes out 14 in no-hitter

By Frank Jolley

frank.jolley@dailycommercial.com

TAVARES - Delaney Heaberlin was in the zone.

Heaberlin tossed a no-hitter and struck out 14 on Tuesday to lead the Eustis High School softball team to a 10-0 win against Tavares at the Fred Stover Sports Complex.

The game was stopped after six innings due to the 10-run mercy rule.

"I worked really hard in the bullpen on Monday with Kayla Betts, our other pitcher, and my catcher, Katie Johnson, always has my back behind the plate," said Heaberlin. "She did a great job setting up back there and our coaches called a great game. My rise ball and curveball were really working well for me.

"I felt really good and I was able to keep them off-balance with the rise ball and go to the curve for the strike out."

Cassidy Ross scored on an RBI triple by Leea Hanks in the first inning, and that was more than enough for Heaberlin. The senior hit the first batter she faced in the bottom of the first and then retired the next eight Bulldogs on strikeouts.

Heaberlin was so overpowering, in fact, that she threw an "immaculate inning" in the second, striking out the side on nine pitches. Only two runners reached base against the Marshall commit – both were hit when Heaberlin tried to go inside. Just one Bulldog - Breanna Falcone extended Heaberlin to a threeball count.

"Delaney was amazing tonight," said Eustis coach Brittany Beall. "She got ahead of the hitters and put every pitch where she wanted. She really attacked the strike zone."

Heaberlin picked up her strikeouts in bunches. In addition to retiring eight straight via strikeouts early in the game, she set the last five hitters she faced in a similar fashion.

The Panthers (8-0) struggled some at the plate. Eustis pounded out 13 hits, but needed five runs in the sixth inning to end the game early.

After a run in the first, Eustis scored three in the third, one in the fourth and five more in the sixth.

Hanks and Bre Bennett scored two runs apiece, and Hanks finished with a single, double and a triple and had three RBIs. Bennett and Heaberlin had two hits apiece.

Ross, Betts, Johnson, Paris Key, Natalie Rembert and Alex Torres also scored.

In the sixth, the Panthers got production from three nonstarters - Torres, Rembert and Aubrey Ruby — to put the game away. Rembert reached on catcher's interference and scored. Torres laced a double down the right-field line that scored two. "I was really happy with the production we got from our bench," said Beall.

Tavares' starting pitcher, Amaya Schreiber, went 5 1/3 innings and allowed 11 hits and nine runs. Maddy Krain tossed 2/₃ of an inning and allowed a run on two hits.

Woods not feeling pain in the neck at Players

Tiger Woods prepares to catch a ball tossed by his caddied at the WGC-Mexico Championship on Feb. 22 in Mexico City. Woods says a sore neck that kept him out of Bay Hill last week is no longer painful.

PONTE VEDRA BEACH -Tiger Woods no longer has a pain in the neck.

The trick going forward for Woods is to make sure the soreness that caused him to withdraw from the Arnold Palmer Invitational doesn't keep him from missing more tournaments the rest of his injury-filled career. "I'm 43 with four back surgeries so must manage what I have and understand that I'm going to have good weeks and bad weeks and try and manage as best I possibly can and not push it," Woods said Tuesday after a nine-hole practice round at The Players Championship.

"There are times when over the years I pushed it, pushed through a few things, and I've won a few tournaments doing it that way," he said. "But also, I've cost myself a few years here and there because of it."

Woods chose not to push it last week by skipping Bay Hill, where he has won eight times.

He had fusion surgery on his lower spine in April 2017 — his fourth surgery on his back in four years - and it allowed him to return to a level that saw him win last year at the Tour Championship, play in another Ryder Cup and return to the top 15 in the world

Woods said his neck first bothered him last summer at

Lake-Sumter downs Daytona 9-8

Staff Report

Alan Alonso scored on a throwing error with two outs in the bottom of the 10th inning to give Lake-Sumter State College a 9-8 win over Daytona State College on Monday at Hawk's Nest.

Alonso singled to open the bottom of the 10th, moved to second on a sacrifice bunt, went to third on a wild pitch and then came home on a throwing error by Daytona pitcher Austin Dreher..

The win gave Lake-Sumter two victories in the three-game series against Daytona as the Lakehawks improved to 14-12-1 overall and 3-2 in Mid-Florida Conference play. Daytona fell to 14-10 overall and 3-3 in the conference.

Connor Andrews led LSSC with three hits while Alonso, Robbie Scott, Steven Beach and Kobie Leonard all added two hits. Jarrett Backus hit a three-run home run in the seventh Bryant Heston (3-1) picked up the win with a scoreless 10th inning, allowing one hit while striking out two.

Lake-Sumter returns to action today with a game at Florida State College at Jacksonville.

IN BRIEF

NEW YORK Gonzalez, Ream back with US national team

Omar Gonzalez and Tim Ream, a pair of 30-plus defenders, are on U.S. coach Gregg Berhalter's first roster with his full player pool. Teen forwards Tim Weah and Josh Sargent are not.

"I value veteran leadership," Berhalter said Tuesday after announcing his 24-man group. "I value the culture of what it means to play for the men's national team and I think it's important to have players that have been through it."

Berhalter's picks for exhibitions against Ecuador on March 21 at Orlando, Florida, and Chile five days later at Houston offered insight into his evaluation of a player pool that turned over after the November loss at Trinidad in Tobago, ending a streak of seven straight World Cup appearances.

Interim coach Dave Sarachan gave debuts to 23 players in 12 matches and Berhalter to seven more during his first two games this year, when he used a roster entirely from Major League Soccer.

the British Open, where he was seen wearing kinesiology tape, and at times during a big stretch of tournaments during the FedEx Cup playoffs.

It flared up again at the Genesis Open last month, and then got worse in Mexico City the following week.

"It was getting to the point where it was affecting my setup, my backswing, my through swing," Woods said. "It was just gradually getting worse. That's just because my lower back is fused, and so the stress has to go somewhere if I don't have movement, and so it's very important for me going forward since the surgery to keep pliable or else the stress is going to go somewhere else."

Woods did not want to commit to a pre-Masters schedule until after The Players was over.

The Valspar Championship next week is where he was runner-up last year. That's followed by the Dell Technologies Match Play, a World Golf Championship for which he had not been eligible since 2014.

Asked specifically about Match Play, Woods said, "If nothing flares up, then I'll play."

Either way, he was not concerned about being prepared for the Masters, which starts April 11, as he tries to end 10 years without winning a major. Assuming this week goes well and he goes to Texas for the Match Play, that would give him five tournaments before the Masters.

Woods played between five and six times before the Masters during younger and healthier times over the last 15

"I've played three this year so far, and that's about right," he said. "I was going to play three or four. If I would have gotten my rounds in last week, it would have been four tournaments, so I'm right there where I need to be. My finishes are getting a little bit better each and every time I've gone out so far this year, and I've gotten a little bit more consistent with my play. And I think that everything is headed on track toward April."

As for his health, Woods does not consider that a major concern.

Long before the back surgeries, he had four surgeries on his left knee, the worst of them in 2008 a week after he won the U.S. Open at Torrey Pines. He also has dealt with an Achilles' heel problem and what he described as a left arm issue at the 2013 U.S. Open.

"It's more just my lower back," Woods said. "I've got to keep that moving, even though it's fixed. I've got to keep all the other structures pliable, and that's one of the issues of having a procedure like I did, that the forces have to go somewhere. I've got to stay fit, I've got to stay on it, and have to stay as loose as I possibly can for as long as I play out here."

For now, Woods is trying to keep his game moving in the right direction as the Masters draws near. He has not finished out of the top 20 in his three starts this year, though he not finished closer than eight shots of the winner.

The Players Championship has returned to its March date, and Woods is the only player in the 144-man field to have won it in March (2001) and May (2013).

but would like to think the right thing will be done.

"What I mean by that, the No. 1 thing in the spirit of competition is everybody plays on a level field," Barnes said.

Some other things to know about the SEC Tournament starting tonight at Bridgestone Arena:

BATTLE FOR NO. 1 SEED

The SEC has three teams in the Top 10 in Kentucky, Tennessee and LSU. Beating Tennessee in the regular season finale moved Auburn back into the rankings at No. 22. Kentucky (26-5) currently is projected as a No. 1 seed in the NCAA Tournament, though Tennessee could make its case by advancing to Sunday's final.

Match Play, a World Golf Championship for which younger and healthier

"I've been saying it all year," South Carolina coach Frank Martin said. "There are three teams that are national championship good. They're not good, they're national championship good."

BUBBLE REPORT

The SEC sent a league-record eight teams to the NCAA Tournament a year ago and hopes to match that this season. First, the SEC needs Florida (17-14, 9-9) to beat Arkansas (17-14, 8-10) on Thursday after the Gators lost their last three games. Alabama's hopes also have thinned after a threegame skid.

"If we weren't able to have success, I'd feel very uneasy for a lot of reasons, probably the biggest being we're coming off a loss," Florida coach Mike White said. "I'm not going to worry about bracketology."

DON'T FORGET SOUTH CAROLINA

The Gamecocks earned the No. 4 seed, and Barnes argued South Carolina absolutely is an tion committee looks at how Martin took South Carolina to Wyoming and Michigan rather than staying home for easy nonconference wins.

INJURY REPORT

Benford expects LSU will have freshman forward Naz Reid available after sitting out the regular season finale against Vanderbilt. Reid took an elbow to the head, which drew blood, in last week's overtime win at Florida. Benford said Reid was visiting a doctor again Monday and hoped the forward will be ready to

South Carolina, which doesn't play until Friday, won't decide until later this week when freshman guard A.J. Lawson returns from a sprained left ankle that cost him the last three games. Auburn is bringing center Austin Wiley to Nashville after missing the last six games with a lower right leg injury. Wiley has played only 27 minutes over the past 25 games, and coach Avery Johnson said they want to make sure Wiley is painfree before he plays again.

SKIDDING VANDERBILT

The Commodores are mired in the worst drought in SEC play in 65 years and have yet to win in 2019, having lost all 18 league games in a skid that's at 19 counting a nonconference loss in late January. They play the late game Wednesday night against Texas A&M, and coach Bryce Drew is pitching this as a fresh start.

"If that's all we've done, then we can't expect to be any better than we were last year. That's the minimum. So it's really what everybody does above and beyond that. That is going to determine your success."

Mullen's teams have a trackrecord of second-year

In his first stint at UF as Urban Meyer's offensive coordinator, the Gators went from 9-3 in 2005 to winning the national championship in 2006. Before that, there were big jumps at Bowling Green and Utah in year two.

At Mississippi State, the Bulldogs went 9-4 in his second year as the head coach after going 5-7 in his first

Mullen and his staff will start finding out if the trend has a chance to continue over the next month, as the Gators go through spring drills, that started Tuesday and conclude with the spring game April 13.

"Hopefully, we've made some good physical gains, a little bigger, a little faster, a little stronger during the offseason program," Mullen said. "Get back out and get back to work.

"I know we had a good year last year. But, obviously, we want to be better. If we want to be better, we've got to work harder, we've got to practice a little bit harder, we've got to practice better, we've got to perform at a little bit higher level, and that's everybody. We had unbelievable fan support last year from the Gator Nation. We need even more this

"You're either getting better or you're getting worse. Never stay the same. We're always striving to push ourselves to improve in every aspect of the program and in everything we do. That's our challenge."

Mullen is stressing that the competition is going to be wide open at every position this spring, including quarterback, where junior Feleipe Franks is going to have to fend off Emory Jones, Kyle Trask and true freshman Jalon Jones to retain his starting role.

"I would hope a guy like (Franks) expects to be the starter," Mullen said. "But he better know he's got to compete to make sure he keeps that job because there's other guys that want to compete to go take that job from him.

"Nothing gets handed to you. I think guys understand that. I think they want it (that way). I wouldn't want a quarterback that wouldn't want it that way, that doesn't want to be pushed every day to compete to be his best."

Mullen said now that he has an experienced quarterback and skill players, it should allow him to open up the playbook more in the second year. How much will be determined over the course of the spring and in preseason camp.

"There's more you can do," Mullen said. "But we're going to do what our guys do well. It's a brand new team this year. We've still got to learn what this team is going to be about.

"There better be a lot more carryover. They know how to practice, they know what we expect from them. They also have an idea within the scheme. There will be a lot of young faces out there, guys in new roles that maybe haven't been in that part of a lead role before."

Mullen said this spring is going to be important for the young players, especially the members of last year's recruiting class who are being counted on to have bigger roles in 2019.

"This is a huge time for guys that are entering their second season," Mullen said. "You should see huge jumps for players going into their second season. They've been through it a little bit. They know what to expect, they've adjusted a little bit to the speed of the college game.

"You're not a rookie anymore. You know what the practice tempo's like. You know what the speed of the college game is like. You should know our offensive and defensive scheme. Now let's go see what you can do."

Pear Park tennis court becomes 4 new pickleball courts

By Paul Jenkins

paul.jenkins@dailycommercial.com

When Dean McCoy retired three years ago, he wasn't sure how he was going to fill his days.

Then he found pickleball. Now he fills his days with the sport, playing six days a week for three hours at a time. Some days he plays twice.

"The only day I don't play is when there is a family thing or a service guy coming to the house, something like that," McCoy said.

McCoy, who lives in Fruitland Park, was out at Pear Park on Tuesday morning getting in his daily workout. Only now, he has a few more options.

Lake County has opened four new pickleball courts at the park and there is a definite message in those new courts.

While the county is acknowledging the explosive growth in pickleball with the addition of four new courts, it is also recognizing the diminishing demand for tennis courts.

In order to make the four new pickleball courts, the county repurposed one of the two tennis courts at the park. So now there are 10 pickleball courts and one tennis court.

"The saying is that pickleball is making tennis courts great again," McCoy said. "If you come out here on a Saturday you might see two people playing tennis and 50 people playing pickleball. With six courts, you might have had 20 to 30 people waiting to play."

Turning one tennis court into four pickleball courts cost the county approximately $35,000 and there are plans to eventually add two more courts for a total of 12 at the park.

The hope is that with a dozen courts, the county will be able to attract tournaments to the park along with filling the swelling demand from residents and visitors.

The new courts are individual cages, giving the park six of those along with four courts the are of the wide-open variety with nothing between each court.

The players at the park on Tuesday morning were in the new cages and they have some obvious benefits.

"Most people prefer the cages," McCoy said. "For one thing you don't have the distraction of people playing next to you and you don't have to stop every minute or so because of balls or people coming onto your court."

The county says it went with the cages because they allow for flexibility for various skill levels for practice, play and tournaments.

The only real downside to the cages is the short space between the net and the fence.

"When you have a shot around the post and you have to run 5 feet wide to play it, you can't do that in the cages," McCoy said. "Everyone tries to hit the angle shots, but it's really only maybe 1 percent of the shots that you can't get to in cages."

With the new courts now in play at Pear Park, McCoy had just one more request for the county.

"I'd love for the county to convert some more tennis courts into pickleball courts," he said.

MOUNT DORA - After the unexpected death of her mother, Terese Rothre-evaluated her life as an emergency room physician at AdventHealth Orlando.

Roth decided life was too short to not do what she loved, so she quit her career of 13 years and started her baking business.

"It was one of those moments in life where you realize you aren't doing what you truly love," Roth said. "They say if you do, you won't work a day in your life. My mom and I used to bake together all the time and it's something I've always been passionate about."

Roth has always involved baking in her life. Even as a doctor, she was known for bringing treats for her coworkers. However, she felt it was time for a change.

Armed with her mom's rolling pin, Roth began Allyson A Bake Shop — named in honor of her mother. She began online in 2016 and opened her first storefront in October 2018 in downtown Mount Dora.

The bakery offers everything from cupcakes, scones, brownies, muffins, cheesecakes, cake slices, cookies and candies.

According to Roth, she aims to provide a premium homemade

Guinness adds unique flavor on St. Patrick's Day

Ze Carter

🥄 t. Patrick's Day is Sunday and some would say there's no better way to celebrate than with green beer and corned beef. They both fit the mood, but I'd also like to add any dish made with Guinness to the list.

Although I am not a beer drinker, I don't mind the flavor in my food from time to time - especially for certain dishes like beer-battered fried fish. I have also learned that every beer is not appropriate for every dish — just like wine.

In my cooking class at the

For a brighter outlook, find your food on the dark side

uring my childhood, my brothers and I consumed carrots with considerable enthusiasm because some grown up convinced us that bunny rabbits could see in the dark because of all the carrots they ate. Of course, it was during the same era that well-meaning grown ups also told little girls that eating bread crusts would give them lovely, curly hair.

My mother said it wasn't true about the bread crusts. I ate them anyway, not with the expectation of waking up some morning with a head full of corkscrew curls, but because active, growing children are always either starving or stuffed, and sandwiches made with untrimmed bread are better at filling up the empty spaces. It was only when I endured my first permanent that I began to harbor a hidden resentment against bread crusts. Life would have been so much easier for girls if only the myth were true.

And, being hopelessly optimistic, I continued to devour carrots with the expectation that some day — or some night − I would be able to navigate through the dark without a flashlight. The fact that it hadn't happened yet didn't mean it never would. Of course, decades later, it still hasn't. However, in the case of the carrots, those wellmeaning grownups of long, long ago were not completely wrong. It's just a matter of degree.

Carrots contain the pro-vitamin A, beta carotene, which is essential for good night vision. Also, other orange and yellow foods, such as corn, eggs, sweet potatoes, citrus, papaya, pineapple and mango are good for the eyes. And if you happen to be a senior, you can feel doubly virtuous whenever you eat orange fruits and vegetables. According to Australian scientists, the vitamin A in these foods is not only beneficial to the vision, it also helps protect against age-related hearing loss.

Oranges are a great source of vitamin C, which is on the American Optometry Association's list of vision-protecting nutrients. Starting the day with a cup of orange juice provides more than 80 percent of the daily requirement of vitamin C, which helps defend against cataracts. Other good sources include strawberries, grapefruit, papaya, mango, green peppers and tomatoes.

Spinach is another thing those well-meaning grownups liked to push at us defenseless, gullible kids. "Eat your spinach," they would say. "It's good for you." If we seemed dubious, they would encourage us by promising, "If you eat your spinach, you'll grow up to be big and strong like Popeye."

That promise hasn't materialized, either. But even though I can't knock a two-hundredpound bully into the middle of next weeks, I feel virtuous whenever I tuck into spinach or one of the other dark, leafy green vegetables. They contain large amounts of the antioxidants Lutein and Zeaxanthin, two more nutritional keys to good vision. For those who cannot find it in their hearts to love the dark green leafies, you might consider cultivating an affection for broccoli, corn, green beans, peas, oranges and tangerines.

And by the way, the first rule when you're hunting down those antioxidants is: come over to the dark side. The more intense the color of fruits or vegetables, the more abundant the nutrients they supply.

To be sure you're getting enough vitamin E, use vegetable oils such as corn or safflower oil in your salad dressings; nibble on almonds, pecans and sunflower seeds; and indulge occasionally in sweet potatoes.

For the essential fatty acids, eat tuna, salmon, or herring, whole grain foods, chicken and eggs. And although we don't usually think of plants as containing fat, avocados are rich in beneficial fats.

Down at the very end of the alphabet for nutrients that promote food vision, there's zinc. Good sources are extra-lean red meat, poultry and shellfish. You'll also find it in liver, milk, baked beans and whole grains.

Need something to drink along with all these healthy foods? Reach for a glass of green tea. According to a report in the Journal of Agricultural and Food Chemistry, the antioxidants in green tea, absorbed by tissue in the eyes, help protect against glaucoma and other diseases.

nothing like a good, dark stout in your beef stew.

This month, I focused on a St. Patrick's Day favorite: Guinness.

Guinness has a unique flavor. When added to a dish properly, it cannot be ignored. As I shared in class, dark brews or heavier ales, like Guinness, pair best with beef, pork and mutton. Guinness and root beer are also great for dessert.

Another benefit of stout is its lower alcohol content, which makes it perfect to drink and enjoy throughout a meal service. In class, I shared a few recipes.

All of them are unique, compliment Guinness and are great for any St. Patrick's Day shindig. This cheese dip is really easy and great to take to a party as an appetizer.

If you bring this as a potluck dish, you can alternatively heat it in a Crock Pot on low an hour before the festivities.

Popular keepers collection covers many timeless topics

DEAR ABBY: I am writing about your Keepers booklet, the collection of your most popular essays, poems and letters. I would like to purchase a copy, but first, I have a question. Is there a particular favorite of yours in there? -- BIG FAN IN FORT WAYNE, IND.

DEAR FAN: My Keepers booklet contains 72 column items that readers have told me they had read and reread until they were yellowed with age and falling apart. This booklet was created because of the high volume of requests from my readers for a collection of these items in one easy-to-use booklet. The subjects are diverse, covering a variety of topics, including parenting, children, aging, animals, forgiveness, etc. One poem in particular has always resonated with me. It is titled "The Time Is Now," and I find its message both poignant and meaningful. I hope you will agree. THE TIME IS NOW (Author Unknown) If you are ever going to love me.

Love me now, while I can know

The sweet and tender feelings

Which from true affection flow.

And I won't hear you

So, if you love me, even a little bit,

Let me know it while I am living So I can treasure it.

Filled with clever observations, my Keepers booklet is both witty and philosophical. It can be ordered by sending your name and mailing address, plus check or money order for $8 (U.S. funds) to Dear Abby Keepers Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. DEAR A.W.E.: And you are only writing to me about this NOW? Having tolerated this kind of ill treatment for 40 years, I think the time has come to tune him out, don't you? Opening lead — king of diamonds. When Sylvia first learned to finesse, a brand-new world opened up for her. She didn't actually fully comprehend what constituted a finesse, but that didn't stop her from exploring this new resource with all the enthusiasm of a child playing with a new toy.

Sylvia was playing in the club duplicate one night soon after her introduction to the finesse and held the South hand in today's deal. At most tables, South arrived at four hearts, and West led the king of diamonds, taken by the ace. Declarer then led the ace and another trump, East following with the nine and ten.

At this point, the various declarers pondered painfully whether to play the queen or low. But whatever they played, they went down one. West won with the king and led three rounds of diamonds to put declarer out of his misery.

But Sylvia, also in four hearts, made the contract in her own inimitable fashion. She won the diamond lead, crossed to her hand with a spade and led the queen of hearts! In so doing, she was simply putting into practice her latest discovery, the finesse!

West covered the queen with the king, won by dummy's ace, and Sylvia played another trump. East won with the ten but was helpless. He did as well as he could when he cashed the jack of trumps and returned a spade, but the rest of the play was routine. After trumping the spade in dummy, Sylvia disposed of two diamonds on dummy's clubs and was the only one in the field to make four
