Eustis strangling victim dies

State Attorney will consider upgrading charges in death of pregnant Sue Ellen Anselmo

By Payne Ray

EUSTIS — Sue Ellen Anselmo, the woman who police say was strangled by her stepson at a Eustis cemetery last week, died Monday, according to the State Attorney's Office and Eustis Police Department.

Anselmo, 39, was declared dead at 2:04 p.m. by physicians at Orlando Regional Medical Center. Authorities say she was pregnant.

As a result of Anselmo's death, the State Attorney's Office will consider upgrading the second-degree attempted murder charge against Ian Magnus Anselmo, Sue Ellen's stepson.

"We'll evaluate the case and make the appropriate filing decision," said Assistant State Attorney Emily Curington, the prosecutor on the case. She added that the options range between murder and manslaughter, but the final decision will be made once she has seen all of the information.

The arraignment date and the deadline for charges is April 8, she said.

Ian, 20, was arrested Wednesday after he called Eustis police and told them he had killed his stepmother at Greenwood Cemetery in Eustis.

According to police reports, officers found Sue Ellen slumped over in a car, unresponsive and bleeding from the nose and mouth with a cord wrapped around her neck. Ian was covered in blood.

New buses for Lake

Lake County Schools purchases 27 new buses with technology, safety upgrades

By Payne Ray
pray@dailycommercial.com

TAVARES — Lake County Schools purchased 27 new buses for its fleet last week, adding 24 standard buses and three that are outfitted for special-needs students.

The buses will replace older ones, mostly purchased in 2004 and 2005. Those older models will be moved into the spare fleet, made up of about 50 buses, according to Scott Pfender, the district's transportation director.

Bus purchases are made each year, Pfender said, with a goal to keep every bus within a reasonable lifespan.

"If we purchase 24 buses per school year, it would allow us to keep a bus on route for 12 years and then rotate it to our spare fleet for three years," he said.

In total, the buses cost around $2.9 million, at $107,550 per standard bus, and $113,993 for buses

Justice Dept. probing development of Boeing jets

By Hope Yen and Tom Krisher
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. prosecutors are looking into the development of Boeing's 737 Max jets, a person briefed on the matter revealed Monday, the same day French aviation investigators concluded there were "clear similarities" in the crash of an Ethiopian Airlines Max 8 last week and a Lion Air jet in October.

The Justice Department probe will examine the way Boeing was regulated by the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration, said the person, who asked not to be identified because the inquiry is not public.

A federal grand jury in Washington, D.C., sent a subpoena to someone involved in the plane's development seeking emails, messages and other communications, the source told The Associated Press.

The Wall Street Journal reported on the probe on Sunday and also said the Transportation Department's inspector general is looking into the plane's anti-stall system. It quotes unidentified people familiar with both cases.

The anti-stall system may have been involved in the Oct. 29 crash of a Lion Air jet off of Indonesia that killed 189 people. It's also under scrutiny in the March 10 crash of an Ethiopian Airlines jet that killed 157.

KINSHASA, CONGO
Congo president suspends installing senators

Congo’s interior minister says the president has suspended installing newly elected senators after weekend protests led to violence that killed at least one person. Interior Minister Basile Olongo said Monday that President Felix Tshisekedi has also postponed governor elections set for March 27. He made the decision after meeting with the chief of the National Assembly, the president of the outgoing senate, the prime minister and foreign and interior ministers. Tshisekedi said the suspension is meant to give prosecutors time to investigate allegations that local deputies were corrupted by candidates for senate seats.

Putin signs bill punishing those who insult the state

Russian President Vladimir Putin has signed bills restricting online media and making a criminal of anyone who insults the state — laws that critics see as part of Kremlin efforts to stifle criticism and tighten media control. A bill passed by the Russian parliament earlier this month introduces fines for publishing materials showing disrespect to the state, its symbols or government organs. Repeat offenders could face a 15-day jail sentence. Another bill envisages blocking anyone who publishes “fake news” online that is perceived to threaten public health and security. It gives those who publish such information a day to correct or remove it. If they fail to do so, prosecutors will move to block them.

DC-area sniper shootings case to have Supreme Court hearing

The Supreme Court on Monday agreed to consider Virginia’s plea to reinstate the life-without-parole sentence of a man who as a teenager participated in sniper shootings that terrorized the Washington, D.C., region in 2002. The justices said they will take up the state’s appeal in the case of Lee Boyd Malvo, who was 17 when he and John Allen Muhammad fatally shot 10 people in Maryland, Virginia and Washington. Malvo was sentenced to life-without-parole terms in Virginia and in Maryland. Muhammad, who was 41 at the time of the shootings, was sentenced to death and was executed in 2009.

Gunman kills 3 on Dutch tram

By Aleksandar Furtula , Mike Corder and Raf Casert
The Associated Press

UTRECHT, Netherlands — A gunman killed three people and wounded five during a mid-morning tram ride Monday in the Dutch city of Utrecht, raising the specter of another extremist attack only days after the murderous rampage in New Zealand. Authorities seized a Turkish-born suspect after a manhunt that convulsed the historic city of nearly 350,000 people for most of the day. As night set in, three victims lay in critical condition, and the motive for the bloodshed remained under investigation. Prime Minister Mark Rutte said authorities were trying to determine whether the attack had “terror motives.” Justice Minister Ferd Grapperhaus said the suspect, identified as Gokmen Tanis, 37, was known to justice authorities and had a criminal record, but would not elaborate. Police said they also detained another man on suspicion of involvement but released no details. The shooting came three days after 50 people were killed when an immigrant-hating white supremacist opened fire at two mosques in Christchurch, New Zealand, during Friday prayers. There was no immediate indication of any link between the two events. The Utrecht attack took place at a busy intersection in a residential neighborhood. The gunman was alleged to have had an automatic weapon, Grapperhaus said. “We assume a terror motive,” Mayor Jan van Zanen said as police searched for the killer, though he added that other motives could not be ruled out. In the aftermath of the shooting, Dutch authorities put the Netherlands’ fourth-largest city on lockdown, raised the threat level in the area to the maximum of 5 and tightened security at airports and key buildings in the country. Police issued a photo of a bearded Tanis aboard a tram in a blue hooded top. “If it is a terror attack,” the prime minister declared, “then we have only one answer: Our nation, democracy, must be stronger than fanaticism and violence.” Heavily armed officers with dogs searched for the killer, gathering at one point in front of an apartment building close to the scene. However, the suspect was later arrested at another location in the city. The threat level soon returned to 4. Police said a red Renault compact car was carjacked shortly before the shooting and later found across town. Local media said Tanis had been charged several times over the past years with offenses ranging from attempted manslaughter to petty crime in and around Utrecht. Two weeks ago he was in court on charges of raping of woman in 2017, news reports said. The identities of the shooting victims were not immediately released, and Grapperhaus would not say if any were known to the gunman. Political parties halted campaigning ahead of provincial elections scheduled for Wednesday that will also determine the makeup of Parliament’s upper house. A televised debate also was canceled. It was not clear if campaigning would resume Tuesday.

Family suing LifeStream Behavioral Center over man's death

The family of a man who died at LifeStream Behavioral Center is suing the mental health center and a physician, claiming that medical malpractice led to the man's death.

John Wesley Dowell III was admitted to the hospital on Oct. 1, 2016, according to the suit filed on behalf of his widow, Audria Faleiro-Dowell and the couple's two minor children. Nine days later he was "found slumped over the edge of his bed vomiting coffee ground emesis..." according to the suit.

He was taken to Leesburg Regional Medical Center where he was pronounced dead.

The wrongful death suit also names Dr. Abid B. Darr. It claims inadequate record-keeping, monitoring, the lack of a proper plan and "inappropriate administration of Clozapine and lack of appropriate psychotropic medication."

Among the damages sought are the loss of past and future earnings, funeral expenses and loss of companionship."

A LifeStream spokesperson said the hospital and its physicians do not comment on pending litigation.

A man holed up up in his Sumter County home fired several rounds at deputies before finally turning the gun on himself Sunday night.

According to the Sumter County Sheriff's Office, deputies went to the home about 10:30 p.m. Sunday because of what they termed a domestic dispute. They tried to make contact with the 61-year-old man, but he refused to cooperate and at one point fired a shot out the front door. The Sumter County Sheriff's Office SWAT team responded with hostage negotiators, who again tried to contact with man without success.

According to deputies, the man then fired several rounds at the SWAT team, striking the SWAT vehicle multiple times. He then turned the gun on himself and was pronounced dead at the scene from a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

The board added Lake County Commissioner Sean Parks, who will bring representation from the South Lake area, and Ed Wolf, long-time mayor of Wildwood, where USB is opening their newest branch later this spring.

"We try to choose directors who will add value to our institution over a long period of time," President Greg Nelson said in a press release.

CLERMONT – The Lake County Sheriff's Office has identified the man who was shot and killed by a deputy during a domestic violence call Sunday as Jorge Luis Rivera-Melendez, 33.

Deputies responded to the call at about 1:45 p.m. at 16450 Macon St. in Clermont. Rivera-Melendez's girlfriend told police he had thrown her down and attacked her with a vase, then fled before they arrived. She pointed them to a nearby apartment complex where he was located by deputies.

Sgt. Jim Vachon with the Lake County Sheriff's Office said deputies chased Rivera-Melendez for some time and told him to put down the gun, which they later confirmed was a loaded 9 mm pistol. At some point during the chase, Vachon said, a deputy shot him. He was taken to an area hospital, where he died. No deputies were injured.

As is standard procedure in an officer-involved shooting, Florida Department of Law Enforcement is investigating.

Rivera-Melendez had one prior arrest, according to Lake County Jail and court records. He was charged with fleeing and eluding an officer and resisting or obstructing an officer without violence. He pleaded no contest in 2016, was placed on probation and adjudication was withheld by the courts.

Vachon said he also had three prior domestic violence complaints which didn't result in arrests.

PANAMA CITY — Five months after Hurricane Michael tore a 40-mile-wide hole through the community, many in Bay County still need help.

Instead of grass returning with the spring rains, RV's are springing up in yards as homeowners close in on half a year of being unable to live in their homes, half a year waiting for contractors or fighting with insurance. FEMA trailer parks have taken root in city and county-owned spaces, including the Bay County Fairgrounds, where families are crammed into travel trailers and packed together like sardines.

Some families are closing in on half a year of being unable to get electricity to their homes. Big box stores like TJ Maxx, Homegoods and Kohl's are still closed, representing hundreds of jobs in limbo. The State of Emergency was recently

Felons' voting rights plan spurs questions

By Dara Kam
News Service Florida

TALLAHASSEE — Hookers who've been convicted of prostitution three times, cyberstalkers and inmates who expose themselves to prison workers wouldn't be eligible to have their voting rights automatically restored, under a House proposal aimed at carrying out a constitutional amendment approved in November.

The constitutional amendment, which appeared on the ballot as Amendment 4, granted "automatic" restoration of voting rights to felons "who have completed all terms of their sentence, including parole or probation." The amendment excluded people "convicted of murder or a felony sexual offense."

But state and local elections officials, as well as clerks of court and prosecutors, are relying on the Legislature to provide guidance about the exceptions. They also want to know what conditions must be met for sentences to be considered complete.

The House Criminal Justice Subcommittee is scheduled Tuesday to take up a proposal (PCB CRJ 19-03) that would define "murder" as first-degree and second-degree murder, but does not include attempted murder or manslaughter, offenses that backers of the amendment maintain were not intended to be considered exceptions to the automatic rights restoration.

But the House plan captures dozens of sex-related offenses, such as human trafficking and locating an adult entertainment store within 2,500 feet of a school.

TALLAHASSEE — Seeking changes in the wake of a high-profile financial scandal at the University of Central Florida, the House is expected Tuesday to start moving forward with a plan that would revamp spending rules for the higher education system, including on construction projects.

The proposal, backed by House Speaker Jose Oliva, would broaden how universities and colleges can spend unused state dollars, known as "carry forward funds," to pay for repairs and remodeling of existing state-funded construction projects. With additional spending flexibility, the proposal would require the institutions to publicly determine their spending priorities.

The bill (PCB HEA 19-01), which will be heard Tuesday by the House Higher Education Appropriations Subcommittee, would also prohibit colleges and universities from transferring state money to other funds within the institutions without prior approval from the Legislature.

The proposed changes come after the House Public Integrity & Ethics Committee wrapped up an investigation into the University of Central Florida that found $85 million in improper transfers were made by the university for building projects. The with special-needs accommodations. Special-needs buses will be configured in a variety of ways depending on the needs of riders, such as wheelchair access. All the new buses will have major technology upgrades compared to the older models. They'll have an electronic stability control to help drivers keep control in case of emergency maneuvers or misjudged curves, and they'll come equipped with a GPS. They'll also have front and rear air conditioning and HD camera systems. Each bus will be tagged, titled and fitted with the district's new radio system before it's placed into service. Service areas are based on need and drivers are then assigned by seniority. According to Pfender, the buses will be expected to deliver a great deal of work over the next 12 years. "An average school bus will travel approximately 300,000 miles over the life of the bus," he said.

There are 250 bus routes in the district, and often those buses will travel those routes a few times a day in order to pick up every student. The new buses have capacity for around 77 elementary students or 50 middle or high school students per trip. "On an average day, our buses will travel over 30,000 miles," Pfender said.

Department's FAA regulates Chicago-based Boeing and is responsible for certifying that planes can fly safely. The grand jury issued its subpoena on March 11, one day after the Ethiopian Airlines crash, according to the person who spoke to The Associated Press. Spokesmen for the Justice Department and the Inspector General said Monday they could neither confirm nor deny the existence of any inquiries. The FAA would not comment. "Boeing does not respond to or comment on questions concerning legal matters, whether internal, litigation, or governmental inquiries," Boeing spokesman Charles Bickers said in an email. The French civil aviation investigation bureau BEA said Monday that black box data from the Ethiopian Airlines flight showed the links with the Lion Air crash and will be used for further study. Ethiopian authorities asked BEA for help in extracting and interpreting the crashed plane's black boxes because Ethiopia does not have the necessary expertise and technology. The Ethiopian Accident Investigation Bureau intends to release a preliminary report within 30 days. The United States and many other countries have grounded the Max 8s and larger Max 9s as Boeing faces the challenge of proving the jets are safe to fly amid suspicions that faulty sensors and software contributed to the two crashes in less than five months. Both planes flew with erratic altitude changes that could indicate the pilots struggled to control the aircraft. Shortly after their takeoffs, both crews tried to return to the airports but crashed. Boeing has said it has "full confidence" in the planes' safety. Engineers are making changes to the system designed to prevent an aerodynamic stall if sensors detect that the jet's nose is pointed too high and its speed is too slow. Investigators looking into the Indonesian crash are examining whether the software automatically pushed the plane's nose down repeatedly, and whether the Lion Air pilots knew how to solve that problem. Ethiopian Airlines says its pilots received special training on the software. Dennis Tajer, an American Airlines pilot and a spokesman for their union, said Boeing held a discussion with airlines last Thursday but did not invite pilots at American or Southwest, the two U.S. carriers that use the same version of the Max that crashed in Indonesia and Ethiopia. Tajer said airline officials told the unions that Boeing intends to offer pilots about a 15-minute iPad course to train them on the new flight-control software on Max jets that is suspected of playing a role in the crashes. He called that amount of training unacceptable. "Our sense is it's a rush to comply — 'let's go, let's go, let's go,'" Tajer said. "I'm in a rush to protect my passengers." A spokesman for the pilots' union at Southwest Airlines also said Boeing representatives told that union they expected the upgrade to be ready the end of January. The spokesman, Mike Trevino, said Boeing never followed up to explain why that deadline passed without an upgrade. Boeing was expected to submit a proposed fix to the FAA in early January.

BABY HEALTH

SAVE MONEY ON FORMULA

According to a Perrigo Nutrition survey, 20 percent of mothers worry about what formula to purchase in the first few months of their baby’s life.

One way to stretch budgets without sacrificing quality is to use store-brand formulas that meet the same strict FDA standards as nationally advertised brands.

“Store-brand formula will provide complete nutrition for baby just like any brand-name formula,” says Dr. Jennifer Gardner. “All infant formulas are required to meet the same FDA standards, which means store-brand formula has the same quality as other brand names, but costs less. More importantly, there’s no need for parents to take unnecessary risks such as diluting formula to save money.”

Researchers at the Iowa State University College of Human Sciences said the study shows the importance of both muscle strength and cardiorespiratory fitness for having a lower risk of diabetes.

Meal kits make healthy, balanced dinners less daunting

By Julia Oller

Nic Dyer has a secret to share. “Use olive oil for everything,” the 29-year-old confided. The advice comes after a year of using meal-preparation kits, nearly all of which call for copious amounts of olive oil to coat vegetables and meats.

Dyer and his wife, Lauren, have tried five different services — Sun Basket, Gobble, Blue Apron, HelloFresh and Home Chef — and declared HelloFresh their favorite.

Once a week, a box is delivered to their home containing three recipes and nearly every ingredient needed to prepare them (pantry staples such as salt, pepper and the aforementioned olive oil are not included).

Lauren chooses the meals each week — all of which arrive in a cardboard box stuffed with ice packs — while Nic cooks each meal. (HelloFresh meals must be ordered five days in advance.)

Within an hour, he and Lauren sit down to a sizzling meal packed with vegetables and pungent flavors.

The recipe for cherry balsamic pork chops turned out

Nic Dyer says he’s felt more at home in the kitchen since he started using meal kits. He’s been able to replicate some dishes they’ve ordered and pick up some cooking tips.

9 percent

Nielsen found that 9 percent of U.S. households had used a meal kit in a six-month period so well, in fact, that the Dyers now cook the dish using their own ingredients.

A 2017 study by consumer-survey group Nielsen found that 9 percent of U.S. households had used a meal kit in a six-month period.

Consumers have more than 150 meal-kit companies to choose from, all of which are based on the idea of creating quick-and-healthy meals from ingredients delivered to the home.

The largest of the companies, HelloFresh and Blue Apron, were founded in 2011 and 2012. The cost for each of the services is about $60 a week for three meals of two servings, the most common order. Through the first nine months of 2018, HelloFresh processed 11.1 million orders, and Blue Apron handled 9.2 million nationwide.

David Jennings ordered from Blue Apron for the first time in January.

A New Year’s resolution to be more mindful of his eating led him to the service, with its portioned serving size and clear nutrition facts on every dish.

His first box included scallops, a food Jennings said “always freaked me out,” but thanks to the instruction sheet — dry them before cooking! — he prepared a flawless meal. (Blue Apron has a flexible-ordering date.)

“I think the best thing about them is you get restaurant-quality food that you get to make,” Jennings, 34, said. “It’s something to be proud of.”

At HelloFresh, some credit for restaurant-quality food goes to Claudia Sidoti, a long-time chef who oversaw the test kitchen at Food Network for eight years before jumping to the meal-prep company in 2017 as the head of recipe development.

The goal of Sidoti and her staff is to create classic meals with a twist — Mexican meat-loaf, cauliflower mac-and-cheese — accessible to anyone, from novice cooks to seasoned culinary veterans.

They aim for the sweet spot somewhere between freezer burrito and four-course dinner.

Like going to the gym, Sidoti said learning to cook takes a few weeks of frustration before gaining muscle memory.

Once the skill develops, though, a new world of taste and smell is available to home chefs.

“The experience of cooking, and that satisfaction, everything from the aromas (to) that confidence piece, there’s a significant difference from live cooking as opposed to reheating (where) you don’t feel like you have any control over it,” she said.

Leg pulse targets your glutes

By Marlo Alleva
More Content Now

Do you ever feel like squats and lunges aren’t targeting that one little hard-to-reach spot? Maybe your knees are bothering you or just maybe you zone specific exercises.

Well, you’re in luck. That one little spot is our glutes.

Our move today is an arabesque leg pulse, similar to single leg yoga poses, but with slight movement.

This pulsing move will focus on the glutes, a little deeper than squatting and lunging. You may want to use a wall, chair or broomstick for balance.

Begin by standing tall, holding your chest up and engaging your core. Shift your weight onto one foot and proceed to lift your free leg back behind you, keeping it straight. Holding your chest tall, continue to lift your leg as high as you can while being able to hold it there for an extended period of time. Flex your foot, aiming your heel toward the ceiling, to get a deeper contraction in your backside.

Marlo Alleva demonstrates arabesque leg pulses.

[SCOTT WHEELER/THE LEDGER]

Once you have your position, begin to pulse the leg up and down in tiny pulsing movements, using your glutes to lift and lower and control the move.

Give yourself at least a count of 16 pulses on each side. Alternating from side to side, for at least three to five times. If your balance is off, hold on to something and you will be able to execute the move more efficiently.

This exercise can be done on its own, but is a great addition to any lower-body routine.

Marlo Alleva, an instructor at Gold’s Gym and group fitness coordinator at Fontaine-Gills YMCA in Florida, can be reached at faluvzpa@msn.

A massacre impelled by bigotry

The unspeakable carnage in New Zealand must be called out by its proper name: a terrorist attack by a white-nationalist bigot consumed by Islamophobia and impelled by the fervid extremism that suffuses the Internet's darkest crevices.

The alleged gunman's garden-variety racism — his rantings about the peril posed to whites faced with "replacement" by Muslims — is of a piece with other hatreds espoused by other racist killers in other places and times. That he spent his days slinking through online cesspools and communing with like-minded social networks gives his crime a postmodern gloss.

But the forces that animated him, as evidenced by his inflamed manifesto — ignorance, intolerance, blood-thirsty tribalism — are ancient. The Internet and social media did not invent or refine evil; they just made it accessible on demand, in all its banal and lurid manifestations. As for the suspect's evident wish to instigate discord and sow divisions — he wrote that he wanted to "incite violence, retaliation and further divide" and hoped that by carrying out his massacre with a firearm he would add fuel to the United States' gun debate — he's a little late.

Still, it's critical that world leaders clearly and precisely denounce this ghoulish act. An attack on mosques, as on any place of worship, is especially sinister and dangerous. Online racists lionized the murderer as a hero and cheered his killing spree as he streamed it live. In fact, he is a monster who slaughtered innocent people — parents and children, the old and the young.

President Donald Trump is not to blame for the tragedy, despite his own history of Islamophobic statements and a travel ban that targets predominantly Muslim nations. Still, he should go further than he has; for starters, by condemning the alleged killer, whose nativist rhetoric — he called immigrants "invaders," attacked "mass immigration" and wrote that he hoped to "directly reduce immigration rates" — overlaps with the president's own. On Friday, Trump cited an "invasion" of immigrants to justify his national emergency declaration to build a wall along the U.S.-Mexico border.

And Trump, who could not bring himself to criticize the white nationalists in Charlottesville who chanted that minorities (Jews, in that case) would "not replace us," on Friday said he doesn't regard white nationalism as a problem. That's the wrong message. Instead, he ought to state unambiguously that the New Zealand suspect's "replacement" ideology is an unacceptable trope in civilized discourse.

New Zealand's gun laws are more lax than those in his native country, Australia, and the massacre at the mosques in Christchurch has already inspired calls for tighter regulation. That debate should be paid heed by Americans, many of whom are by now, sadly, inured to mass killings.

Our hearts ache for the victims and their families; for a community of Muslim refugees and migrants who were welcomed with open arms in a new home that may now look threatening; and for New Zealand, a U.S. ally where the hideous tableau of firearms violence has not been prevalent before now.

The US needs more from the Taliban than cease-fire, talks

The Trump administration has now conducted five rounds of negotiations with the Taliban, including a grueling 16-day round that ended last Tuesday in Qatar. Both sides are claiming progress, but details have been scant — including, it turns out, for the Afghan government, which has been excluded from the talks. That prompted an undiplomatic outburst Thursday by the national security adviser to President Ashraf Ghani, who told reporters in Washington that the U.S. administration is "ostracizing and alienating a very trusted ally."

A negotiated peace in Afghanistan is much to be wished for. But judging from what has been reported from Qatar, the Afghan government is right to be concerned — as are Americans who don't favor throwing away all that the U.S. Afghan mission has accomplished since 2001, at enormous cost. According to administration envoy Zalmay Khalilzad, the talks are focusing on two issues: preventing al-Qaida and other terrorist groups from using Afghanistan as a base for attacks, and a withdrawal timeline for U.S. troops.

Khalilzad tweeted that an accord would need to include two other elements: "intra-Afghan dialogue and a comprehensive ceasefire." But he said talks including the Taliban and Afghan government would begin only after the "agreement in draft" on the U.S. withdrawal and terrorism "is finalized." That suggests that the United States would commit itself to a pullout timetable before an Afghan peace process even starts up, and that there might be no link between the U.S. drawdown and a final settlement.

If so, that would be a dangerous yielding of U.S. leverage that could all but doom the Afghan government — and the millions of Afghans, especially women, who prize the civil society that lives under its umbrella. Though it may have softened its oppression in some areas it controls, the Taliban has given no indication it is prepared to accept a democratic political system, share power with the Ghani government or respect basic human rights. On the contrary, its leaders have portrayed themselves in recent public statements as victors in the war who are preparing to reap their rewards.

Khalilzad's negotiating strategy may suit the priorities of Trump, who has made it clear he wishes to withdraw U.S. troops as quickly as possible and has little interest in the consequences for Afghans. But the notion that, in the absence of a peace settlement, the Taliban could be relied on to prevent terrorism looks naive. As former CIA deputy director Michael Morell and former defense undersecretary Mike Vickers bluntly concluded in a Post op-ed, "the most likely outcome" of a U.S. withdrawal is "the Taliban will take over, and it will offer haven to al-Qaida, which will again target the U.S. homeland."

Khalilzad's efforts should continue. But the administration ought to insist that the Taliban accept a U.S. timeline for withdrawal measured in years rather than months; and it should be clear that the last forces will not depart until there is an Afghan peace accord — not just a cease-fire and talks. In the meantime, it should keep Ghani's government fully briefed.

A new miracle drug for depression? Not so fast

This month, the FDA approved Janssen's new drug Spravato, or esketamine in nasal spray form, for "treatment-resistant" depression. A Washington Post headline declared it the "biggest advance for depression in years."

A quick explanation is in order here. Many drugs come in two molecular forms, called optical isomers, which are mirror-images of each other. Often, only one of the two isomers is active. Esketamine is one of the two isomers of the club drug ketamine, known colloquially as "Special K." Separating this isomer and dispensing it in pure form enables Janssen to patent a drug that has already been available for decades, and to market it at premium prices.

All this raises some questions.

A large and growing body of evidence indicates that most of the benefits of these drugs called "antidepressants" are due to the placebo effect. When we say a person is "resistant" to "treatments" that may be barely distinguishable from sugar pills, have we really said anything at all? Nevertheless, let's take a look at the evidence that led the FDA to approve Spravato.

Normally, before a drug can be approved, the FDA requires the manufacturer to submit the results of two trials showing that the drug performed significantly better than placebo. That sounds pretty good, until you realize that there can be any number of trials that do not show a significant effect. That's like you and I betting on the outcome of a coin toss, with this stipulation: I get to toss the coin as many times I wish until it comes up the way I want it to.

Another point to keep in mind is that when a scientist talks about a "significant" difference, all that means is the difference is unlikely to have arisen by chance. The difference can be tiny, as long as the probability of it arising by chance is below some arbitrarily selected level — usually 5 percent.

In the case of Spravato, a single four-week placebo-controlled trial showed a 4-point improvement on the 60-point Montgomery-Åsberg Rating Scale for Depression. While this met the criteria for statistical significance, a 4-point difference is likely too paltry to be noticeable in a face-to-face assessment of global functioning by a trained clinician.

The results of the two other placebo-controlled trials of Spravato were negative. The only way to satisfy the FDA requirement for two positive trials was to count the results of a relapse study, which essentially showed that patients who did well on the drug, did well on the drug.

The recommended course of treatment for this drug, which is to be administered only in a doctor's office, is twice-weekly for one month, followed by weekly or biweekly treatments thereafter. It comes with a price tag of $4,720 to $6,785 for the first month of treatment and $2,360 to $3,450 per month thereafter, which means the cost of a year's treatment could be as high as $44,735. This is the same stuff (admittedly in purer form) that you can buy in a nightclub bathroom for a good deal less.

Disturbingly, there were three suicides in the trials, all in the treatment arm. This finding becomes even more ominous in light of the fact that actively suicidal patients were excluded from these trials.

By the way, Janssen is no stranger to controversy. On Nov. 4, 2013, the United States Department of Justice announced that Janssen's parent corporation, Johnson and Johnson, agreed to pay $2.2 billion to settle claims of illegal marketing of its products, including allegations that Janssen had illegally marketed the antipsychotic drug Risperdal for children.

Three years ago, a jury awarded a young boy $70 million after Risperdal caused him to grow breasts. What will the long-term effects be of Janssen's latest miracle drug? We don't know, but if this is the "biggest advance for depression in years," maybe it is time to consider the possibility that this is not the sort of problem amenable to chemical solutions.

McIlroy hits his stride

By Doug Ferguson
The Associated Press

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. — Rory McIlroy managed to block out all the noise, all the distractions, and this was long before he even reached the pivotal three-hole finish at the TPC Sawgrass to win The Players Championship. McIlroy, more than any other player, has been looked upon as golf’s next big thing in the decade since age and injuries began to slow Tiger Woods. Jack Nicklaus took to Twitter on Sunday night for memories of the time McIlroy first came to meet with him ahead of the 2010 Masters, and a few months later the precocious 20-year-old from Northern Ireland shot 62 on the final day at Quail Hollow for his first PGA Tour victory. McIlroy set the U.S. Open scoring record a year later with an eight-shot victory. He had four majors — missing only a green jacket — at age 25. So with McIlroy approaching his 30th birthday, and with only one victory over his previous 50 tournaments worldwide, the critics took notice. When he played in the final group nine times without winning — never mind that he was at least three shots back on five of those occasions — questions about his ability to close became louder.

His patience was tested when he began this year by playing in the final group in three out of his five tournaments, finishing no worse than a tie for sixth. But he never showed any hint on panic. His reaction when he tapped in for par Sunday to win The Players was not much different from when he finished with a par at Bay Hill, a bogey at Riviera, a birdie at Torrey Pines. All of them were good weeks when he looked back over 72 holes. One of them was better than the other because he won a trophy. “I feel like I’ve managed the first six tournaments of the year very well, even with some noise around me, whether ‘he can’t close, he can’t play on Sundays,’ blah, blah, blah,” McIlroy said. “I’ve just got to do my thing. And if I go concentrate on me, control what I can do, good golf and good attitude takes

Nembhard sparks UF's return to NCAA tourney

By Frank Jolley
frank.jolley@dailycommercial.com

Andrew Nembhard might end up as one of the most impactful basketball players from the class of 2018. The former Montverde Academy standout has thrust himself into the forefront for the University of Florida in just his freshman season. Nembhard, a point guard, lifted the Gators past top-seeded Louisiana State last week in the quarterfinals of the SEC tournament. He also had an opportunity to send Saturday’s semifinal game against Auburn into overtime, but a controversial no call in the closing seconds ended

Florida’s hopes of pulling off a second-straight upset. Regardless, Nembhard’s game-winner against LSU likely played a big factor in earning Florida a spot in the upcoming NCAA Division I Men’s Basketball Tournament, aka, The Big Dance. Against LSU, Nembhard scored a season-high 20 points and handed out six assists. He hit 50 percent of his shots, including 3 of 7 from behind the three-point line. Heading into Florida’s NCAA Tournament opener against Nevada on Thursday in Des Moines, Iowa, Nembhard is averaging 8.1

CLERMONT — It’s not easy to wake up, brush your teeth and head out to play a baseball game. Especially on the first day of spring break. But, that’s exactly what Lake Minneola High School and Real Life Christian Academy did on Monday when the two squared off in a brunch-time game at Bishop Field. The teams

By Jenna Fryer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Kyle Busch has 200 NASCAR national series wins, the same number as Richard Petty, and the totals will never stack up equally into a pair of neat columns that make for an easy debate between the two. The wins can never be compared because they were in different eras, under different NASCAR rules and against dramatically different levels of competition. Petty and Busch were born 48 years apart, and Busch didn’t even meet the minimum age

Costly mistakes result in Apollos’ first loss, 22-17 to Arizona

Wire Report

ORLANDO — There are no longer any undefeated teams in The Alliance of American Football.

The Orlando Apollos lost to the Arizona Hotshots 22-17 late Saturday at Spectrum Stadium.

Orlando was 5-0 heading into the game, and still has the best record in the league.

Apollos quarterback Garrett Gilbert completed 23 of his 48 passes for 268 yards, two touchdowns and one interception. Until Saturday, Gilbert had not completed fewer than 50 percent of his passes or thrown an interception.

Orlando took the lead, 17-14, with less than 10 minutes to go in the fourth quarter when Gilbert connected with Jalin Marshall for a 17-yard score, followed by a successful two-point conversion.

Arizona responded with a touchdown and two-point conversion of its own. The Apollos seemed to be driving down to take the lead again when Gilbert fumbled the ball just after the two-minute warning.

The Apollos managed to stop Arizona on the ensuing drive, and drove down to the Hotshots' 8-yard line with less than 10 seconds remaining and no timeouts left. That's when the final mistake sealed Orlando's fate.

Orlando committed a false start penalty while setting up to spike the ball and stop the clock. The penalty resulted in a 10-second clock runoff to end the game.

Orlando hits the road next Saturday to face the Atlanta Legends.

points and 5.3 assists per game for the Gators, who sport a 19-15 record. He's shooting 41 percent from the field and 34 percent (34 of 99) from distance. As a senior at Montverde, Nembhard helped to lead the Eagles to their fourth mythical national championship in six seasons. Against Fort Lauderdale University in the championship game, he handed out 13 assists. Nembhard also led Canada — his hometown is Aurora, Ontario — to a silver medal in the FIBA U18 Americas. He averaged 15.7 points and 8.8 assists in six games.

Jordan Caroline, Nevada

Jordan Caroline has been a force to reckoned

Nevada forward Jordan Caroline drives past San Diego State guard Jordan Schakel on Saturday in a Big West Conference Tournament game on Saturday in Reno, Nevada. with for much of his career at Nevada — much like he was in high school at Montverde. A 6-foot-7 senior forward, Caroline is averaging 17.3 points and 9.6 rebounds per game this season for the Wolf Pack, who sport a 29-4 record heading into their NCAA Tournament opener on Thursday against Florida. Caroline is hitting 46 percent of his shots, including 38 percent from behind the three-point line. His high-point game this season was 40 points in a 100-60 win against Colorado State. In that game, Caroline was 11 of 19 from the field — 6 of 8 from distance — and grabbed seven rebounds in 31 points. Caroline scored in double figures in all 32 games that he has played in this season, and surpassed 20 points eight times. After helping to lead Montverde to back-to-back mythical national titles in 2013 and 2014, Caroline spent his freshman season at Southern Illinois. With the Salukis, he averaged 9.2 points and 6.2 rebounds. He transferred to

Nevada before his sophomore season and averaged 17.7 points and 8.6 rebounds as a junior. Caroline's father is Simeon Rice, who spent 12 seasons in the National Football League with Arizona, Tampa Bay, Denver and Indianapolis. His grandfather, J.C. Caroline played for the Chicago Bears and is a member of the College Football Hall of Fame. Tamesha Glover, UCF Tamesha Glover has gotten off to a big start this season with the University of Central Florida softball team. And while it's still early, her play might spark the Knights to a postseason appearance. A redshirt junior infielder from Eustis, Glover is hitting .372 for the Knights — tops on the team for all players with at least 20 at bats. She has three homers and 11 RBIs and sports a team-best .462 on-base percentage. Glover enjoyed considerable success in her first two seasons at UCF. She blasted her first career grand slam against Santa Clara as a sophomore after hitting .271 with two homers as a freshman. Playing for Brittany Beall at Eustis, Glover hit .513 with 12 homers in her senior season with the Panthers. She also hit .513 as a junior with six home runs and 31 RBIs. Next up for UCF, which has a 19-9 record this season, is Princeton at 6 p.m. Wednesday at the UCF Softball Complex.

BRUNCH

you would expect for a Monday morning spring break game," said Lake Minneola coach Kerry Whetro. "We kicked the ball around a little at the start but put together some good at-bats and played pretty solid defense after the first inning. I thought we got a good effort on the mound from Donovan Martens, our starter, and Parker Fenton, who closed it out for us. "We definitely ended the game much better than we began." After Real Life bounced back from an early 2-0 deficit to tie the game in the home half of the fourth inning, Lake Minneola responded with a pair of runs in the fifth. Luis Morales led off the inning with a single to left and moved to second on a sacrifice by Alec Johnson. Josh Scragg walked and Josh Astrocio reached on an error to load the bases. Zach Arnold then singled home Morales with the eventual winning run and Scragg added an insurance run on a wild pitch. In the sixth, Kelvin Abreu, courtesy running for Fenton after he drew a two-out walk, stole second and scored on a single to right-center by Johnson. That was more than enough for Fenton, who pitched the final three innings for Lake Minneola and picked up the save. The sophomore southpaw did not allow a hit and struck out three. "Parker has done a really nice job for us over the last three or four games," said Whetro. "And today was no exception. He threw strikes and in the long run, that's all that matters. When our pitchers throw strikes, our defense usually does a nice job behind them." Scragg and Hudson Welch staked Lake Minneola to a 2-0 lead in the first. In the frame, the Hawks capitalized on three Real Life errors to score with just one hit off Korbin Kurtz, the Raptors' starting pitcher. But, Real Life (4-2) bounced back in the bottom of the inning when Ian Thornton scored an unearned run off the Hawks' second error of the inning. Real Life managed just two hits in the game, both off Martens, who pitched the first four innings for the Hawks. Drew Clymer had a single to open the second and Gabe Schlabbach had a single and scored a run in the fourth that briefly tied the game and set the table for Lake Minneola's fifth-inning heroics. Kurtz went the distance for the Raptors. He allowed six hits and struck out five. Only two of the five runs charged to him were earned. Offensively for Lake Minneola, Arnold led the way with three hits. Martens, Johnson and Abreu also had hits. Next up for Real Life is First Academy of Leesburg on March 26 at Bishop Field. Lake Minneola will play Eustis at 10 a.m. today at the Lake-Sumter State College baseball complex.

requirement to compete in NASCAR until 11 years after Petty's retirement. So what is with the obsessive hand-wringing in comparing the statistics? Busch on Sunday collected his 200th checkered flag with a victory at Auto Club Speedway in California. Petty won all 200 of his races at the Cup level. Busch's win at Fontana was the 53rd of his Cup career, but accompanies 53 Truck Series victories and 94 in the Xfinity Series — both records for NASCAR's minor league national series. Win No. 200 came a day after he finished second in the Xfinity race and capped a three-week West Coast road trip in which Busch never finished lower than third in seven races. His stops in hometown Las Vegas, Phoenix and finally California netted back-to-back Cup wins, two Xfinity Series victories and a runner-up finish and a Truck Series win at Vegas. For those keeping score at home, his average finish was 1.42 in seven events spanning three series. His older brother, the 2004 series champion, succinctly summarized just how improbable Busch's accomplishments are on a weekly basis. "When you are running Trucks, Xfinity and Cup, you are wearing your body out every day going after it," Kurt Busch said after visiting his little brother in victory lane. "Anytime I've run Xfinity and then have to go back it up (the next day) with a Cup race, it puts a toll on your body.

care of the rest." Attitude has been key for McIlroy. It was important not to get down on himself if he didn't win, even if everyone expected him to at Wentworth last year and Dubai two months ago. McIlroy says he has been reading books and working with people to remind himself that golf is a joy to play and provides a comfortable lifestyle — he went over $45 million in career PGA Tour earnings alone — but that it doesn't define him as a person. "Who I am as a person isn't who I am as a golfer," he said. "And it took me a while to get to that point where I realized who those two people were. So that has been a big thing. And I think that's been the big difference between the highs and lows of the last few years and the more consistent play. I've had two wins in the last 12 months, but even the play in between that has been pretty good." Not since 2012 has McIlroy started a year so well. He won the Honda Classic to reach No. 1 in the world for the first time, had runner-up finishes in Abu Dhabi and the Match Play, was third at a World Golf Championship at Doral, and tied for fifth in Dubai. In those five events, he was never more than four shots out of the lead.

NCAA TOURNAMENT

BREAKING DOWN THE REGIONALS

From wire reports

EAST REGIONAL

Duke's Zion Williamson
 [CHUCK BURTON/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

The matchups

THURSDAY
At Jacksonville Veterans Memorial Arena, Jacksonville, Fla.
 LSU (26-6) vs. Yale (22-7)
 Maryland (22-10) vs. Belmont-Temple winner
At Wells Fargo Arena, Des Moines, Iowa
 Michigan State (28-6) vs. Bradley (20-14)
 Louisville (20-13) vs. Minnesota (21-13)

FRIDAY
At Colonial Life Arena, Columbia, S.C.
 Duke (29-5) vs. N.C. Central-North Dakota State winner
 VCU (25-7) vs. UCF (23-8)
At SAP Center, San Jose, Calif.
 Virginia Tech (24-8) vs. Saint Louis (23-12)
 Mississippi State (23-10) vs. Liberty (28-6)

Key storylines

- The Blue Devils (29-5) haven't lost since Zion Williamson returned, rolling through the ACC tourney by beating Syracuse, North Carolina and Florida State. Krzyzewski hopes center Marques Bolden returns at some point in the tournament, which would give his team even more post depth to handle the likes of Michigan State if it came to that in the Elite Eight.
- Michigan State held off rival Michigan to win the Big Ten Tournament and rolls into a matchup with 15th-seeded Bradley unsure of Ahrens' status. Guard Joshua Langford is already lost for the season, but the Spartans can still lean on Cassius Winston and strong rebounding. Michigan State has won 10 of its past 11 games and is one of the hottest teams in the country.
- Virginia Tech's Justin Robinson tweeted Sunday he's ready to return after missing the past 12 games with a left foot injury. Virginia Tech opens the tournament against Saint Louis, which won the Atlantic 10 Tournament to secure an automatic bid.

One to watch

LSU Tigers vs. Yale Bulldogs: Yale scored 97 points against the Harvard Crimson in the Ivy League championship and has a legitimately talented team. Shooting guard Miye Oni could be a second-round pick in June. In a normal scenario, it would still be tough to envision the Bulldogs knocking off the Southeastern Conference regular-season champions, but coach Will Wade is embroiled in an FBI investigation, which could make things difficult for LSU. Star center Naz Reid will have to dominate.

WEST REGIONAL

Gonzaga's Rui Hachimura
 [JOHN LOCHER/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

The matchups

THURSDAY
 At The XL Center, Hartford, Conn.
 Florida State (27-7) vs. Vermont (27-6)
 Marquette (24-9) vs. Murray State (27-4)
At Wells Fargo Arena, Des Moines, Iowa
 Michigan (28-6) vs. Montana (26-8)
 Nevada (29-4) vs. Florida (19-15)
At Vivint Smart Home Arena, Salt Lake City
 Gonzaga (30-3) vs. Fairleigh Dickinson-Prairie View A&M winner
 Syracuse (20-13) vs. Baylor (19-13)

FRIDAY
At BOK Center, Tulsa, Okla.
 Texas Tech (26-6) vs. Northern Kentucky (26-8)
 Buffalo (31-3) vs. Arizona State-St. John's winner

Key storylines

- The Zags will open the NCAA Tournament in Salt Lake City, where they don't have the fondest of memories. Gonzaga was a No. 1 seed for the first time six years ago and flopped in Salt Lake City, losing to eventual Final Four team Wichita State. Should the Zags get past the First Four winner, they could face a tough matchup in the winner of the game between Syracuse and Baylor.
- Teams in the West Region could make an argument they're playing in the bracket's toughest region. Gonzaga may have more talent than the team that went to the national title game two years ago. Michigan opened its season with 17 straight wins after playing for a national championship last season and made it to the Big Ten title game.
- Arizona State and St. John's had some anxious moments on Selection Sunday. Both were considered bubble teams and both had to wait until near the end of the reveal show to find out if they were in.

One to watch

Marquette Golden Eagles vs. Murray State Racers: The two best point guards in the country square off in Hartford, Conn., as Murray State's Ja Morant matches up with fellow All-American Markus Howard for Marquette. Morant is this tournament's man of mystery, most people only aware of his exploits through quick Twitter videos, SportsCenter highlights and his placement in mock NBA drafts, but he did lead the nation in assists. Howard, on the other hand, is a dynamic scorer, a skill which could make him a first-round draft choice.

SOUTH REGIONAL

Virginia's Kyle Guy
 [CHUCK BURTON/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

The matchups

THURSDAY
At The XL Center, Hartford, Conn.
 Purdue (23-9) vs. Old Dominion (26-8)
 Villanova (25-9) vs. Saint Mary's (22-11)

FRIDAY
At Colonial Life Arena, Columbia, S.C.
 Virginia (29-3) vs. Gardner-Webb (23-11)
 Mississippi (20-12) vs. Oklahoma (19-13)
At Nationwide Arena, Columbus, Ohio
 Tennessee (29-5) vs. Colgate (24-10)
 Cincinnati (28-6) vs. Iowa (22-11)
At SAP Center, San Jose, Calif.
 Kansas State (25-8) vs. UC Irvine (30-5)
 Wisconsin (23-10) vs. Oregon (23-12)

Key storylines

- The Cavaliers are the second overall No. 1 seed and back in the South Region bracket after losing to the University of Maryland-Baltimore County better known as UMBC a year ago. This is the seventh time Virginia has been a No. 1 seed and the fourth time in six seasons, though the Cavaliers still are looking to reach their first Final Four with coach Tony Bennett.
- The No. 19 Badgers made it to the Big Ten Tournament semifinals before losing 67-55 to No. 6 Michigan State. Nine of Wisconsin's 10 losses this season were by single digits. The Badgers missed the NCAA Tournament last season for the first time since 1998.
- The co-Big 12 regular season champion is clearly of the mind it can duplicate last year's run to the Elite Eight, which included a 50-43 win over No. 16-seed darling UMBC in the second round. More conversation in the state, and nationally, centers more around what their high profile, in-state rival hasn't done this year than what the Wildcats have done.

One to watch

Ole Miss Rebels vs. Oklahoma Sooners: The matchups between the Nos. 8 and 9 seeds are supposed to be good and Ole Miss-Oklahoma fits the bill. The Sooners boast a top-25 defense in the Pomeroy College Basketball rankings, while the Rebels feature the No. 33 offense in the country. As for an individual matchup, Ole Miss guard Breein Tyree averages 18.2 points per game and Oklahoma guard Christian James averages 14.4. They could find themselves trading buckets in the second half of this one with a likely meeting with Virginia on the line.

MIDWEST REGIONAL

North Carolina coach Roy Williams
 [NELL REDMOND/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

The matchups

THURSDAY
At Jacksonville Veterans Memorial Arena, Jacksonville, Fla.
 Kentucky (27-6) vs. Abilene Christian (27-6)
 Wofford (29-4) vs. Seton Hall (20-13)
At Vivint Smart Home Arena, Salt Lake City
 Kansas (25-9) vs. Northeastern (23-10)
 Auburn (26-9) vs. New Mexico State (30-4)

FRIDAY
At Nationwide Arena, Columbus, Ohio
 North Carolina (27-6) vs. Iona (17-15)
 Utah State (28-6) vs. Washington (26-8)
At BOK Center, Tulsa, Okla.
 Houston (31-3) vs. Georgia State (24-9)
 Iowa State (23-11) vs. Ohio State (19-14)

Key storylines

- UNC coach Roy Williams has faced the Jayhawks in the NCAA Tournament before, so that's nothing new. But the prospect of facing them in an arena packed with Kansas fans is intriguing. The Jayhawks should be favored against the Colonial champs, but they could be in for a tough second-round matchup. SEC Tournament champion Auburn, fresh off a romp over Tennessee, is the fifth seed and will face No. 12 seed New Mexico State in the other matchup in Salt Lake City.
- Kentucky spent much of the season in the discussion for a No. 1 seed, particularly after a win over then-No. 1 Tennessee during conference play. But a narrow loss to the Vols in the SEC Tournament may have dropped the Wildcats a line and into a matchup with Abilene Christian.
- Only in a place like Lawrence is a 25-win season, a top 20-ranking and an 8-3 record against Top 25 opponents considered a less than ideal season. Such are expectations are appearing in the Final Four a year ago. But don't dismiss the Jayhawks.

One to watch

Utah State Aggies vs. Washington Huskies: The Aggies won their first Mountain West Conference title, beating San Diego State in the title game, under first-year coach Craig Smith to return to the NCAA Tournament for the first time since 2011. The Huskies, who are making their first appearance in the NCAA Tournament since 2011, are hobbling into the postseason. They scored a season-low 47 points in a loss to Oregon in the regular-season finale and shot 33 percent from the field in a 68-48 loss to the Ducks in the Pac-12 title game.

Trio of top seeds puts ACC in the spotlight

By Noah Trister
 The Associated Press

The Atlantic Coast Conference comes into the NCAA Tournament with three No. 1 seeds. Putting three teams in the Final Four is a different matter. The last time one league had three teams in the national semifinals was 1985, the year the field expanded to 64 teams. Georgetown and St. John's arrived as Big East behemoths, only to be upstaged when conference rival Villanova took the title. The ACC's top-seeded trio this year is Duke, North Carolina and Virginia. The last time three No. 1 seeds won their regionals was in 2015, when Kentucky, Duke and Wisconsin did it.

Only one other time has a league gotten three No. 1 seeds. In 2009, Louisville, Connecticut and Pittsburgh did it for the Big East. Connecticut lost in the national semifinals, while Louisville and Pittsburgh went out in the Elite Eight. None of those teams are in the Big East anymore. Here are a few more things to watch in the NCAA

REGIONAL OF CHAMPIONS

If the seeds hold, the Sweet 16 in the Midwest Regional could be quite a spectacle. Top-seeded North Carolina, second-seeded Kentucky and fourth-seeded Kansas would all end up in Kansas City. Even third-seeded Houston has some history to offer, having made the national title game twice during the 1980s. With UCLA out of the picture this year, Kentucky's eight titles are the most by any team in the field. North Carolina is second with six. Those teams have met in the regional finals twice in the past eight years, with Kentucky winning in 2011 and North Carolina in 2017.

Online relationship stalls over meeting in person

DEAR ABBY: I met a really great guy online eight months ago. He lives in another country and we have been in a long-distance relationship for the last six months. We talk all the time, video chat frequently and have grown very close. I have never clicked with anyone like I have with him, and I know he feels the same.

We are having a significant disagreement about meeting in person. I'm willing to travel to his country. The expense, while not negligible, is within my means. However, he says he has some serious ongoing health issues and he wants to wait until they are resolved to meet. He has had them for much of his life, although they have gotten worse during the time I have known him. So far, there has been no diagnosis or treatment plan.

When I have asked, he says I should be patient and he doesn't want our relationship to be about waiting to do things because of his condition. Meanwhile, I know how much pain he is in. I see it every time we chat, and I know how much it affects him. It's not going to scare me away. I just want to be there with him, to see if we work as well in person as we seem to online.

JEANNE PHILLIPS

DEAR ABBY

I don't want to add to his stress by insisting we meet, but I also don't want to spend months or years with my life on hold, waiting for a perfect time to meet. What should I do?

-- GAMER GIRL IN INDIANA
DEAR GAMER GIRL:

When someone you meet online is reluctant to meet in person and interact with you fully, there is usually a reason. Having had these "health problems" all his life, one would think there would be a NAME for the illness and a treatment plan. Because he has neither, I question whether his health is the reason he doesn't want you to visit him. He may be in a relationship or not as he has represented himself in some other way. What you need to do is move on.

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law has the means to buy almost anything she wants. She's a shopper, a borderline hoarder, yet very generous to her children. She buys expensive and unwanted gifts for all her kids -- satisfying her shopping urges by getting us doubles of her latest cooking gadget, vacuum cleaner or 10-pound box of chocolate we shouldn't be eating in the first place.

While we're not poor, we sure could use the money she's wasting on these silly gifts. How do we tell her that it's awkward for us to receive an expensive vacuum when we need help with school tuition for our kids? Is it wrong for us to look a gift horse in the mouth, or insensitive of her to flaunt her purchasing power while we're struggling?-- REGRETFULLY UNGRATEFUL

DEAR REGRETFULLY: I'm not going to label your mother-in-law as insensitive or you as ungrateful. I do think the time has come for you and her son to have a frank talk with her and explain that, while you are grateful for the gifts, you could better use the money she's spending on them for help with her grandchildren's school tuition. If that offends her, so be it, but if she loves her grandchildren, I don't think it should.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♦	Pass	1 ♥
Pass	1 NT	Pass	3 NT

Opening lead — queen of clubs.

Today's deal features a card combination that is frequently misplayed. Let's say declarer wins the club lead with the king and plays the king and another heart. When West shows out, South is in serious trouble. Assuming reasonable defense, the best he can do is score two spades, three hearts, a diamond and two clubs.

But declarer has a lock on the contract if he plays more carefully. He should recognize that three notrump is ice cold if he can score four heart tricks, and all his thoughts should be focused on that one goal.

Since there is no danger of going down if the hearts are divided 3-2, South should ask himself how he can protect against a 4-1 division. If he addresses himself to that one possibility, he should come to the realization that there is a way to play the hearts so as to overcome a holding of four to the Q-10 in either opponent's hand.

As we have seen, leading the king and another heart fails if East has Q-10-x-x. However, the proper way to initiate the suit is to lead a low heart to the ace! If both defenders follow low, South continues with a low heart from dummy, and:

1. If East shows out, South takes the king and leads the nine toward the jack to assure four heart tricks.

2. If East follows low, South plays the nine to guarantee four heart tricks whether the nine wins or loses.

3. If East produces the ten or queen, South wins with the king and returns the nine to assure four heart tricks.

A player who optimistically proceeds on the assumption that a suit will be favorably divided is guilty of negligence, and will occasionally have to pay the piper for his carelessness.

» HOROSCOPES

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, March 19, 2019:

This year, you'll express an idealistic perspective. You'll often put someone on a pedestal. Be aware that this person is human and could easily fall off. Try to be more realistic. If single, you could be disappointed in a newfound attachment because the person wasn't as he or she appeared. Be aware that you put him or her on that pedestal. You see people as you want them to be. If attached, you can inspire your sweetie to open up to new ideas. He or she will see you in a new light. VIRGO might be unusually critical.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
A vagueness permeates your day. You might not be getting the information that you need, or the information you get could be partial or distorted. When dealing with a work- or health-related matter, follow your instincts. Tonight: Off to the gym.

TÁURUS (April 20-May 20)
Your creativity emerges; others simply feel confused. You should use your ingenuity to not only make your day better but also to make suggestions in a meeting. Opt for simplification. Tonight: Tap into your imagination; add some zest to plans.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Tension revolves around an innate conflict between work and home. How you deal with this tension reflects your priorities. Don't push a key person too far. Your senses of humor and fun allow you to effectively handle a boss or higher-up. Tonight: Let the party begin.

CÁNCER (June 21-July 22)
Speak your mind; ask for more support from a partner. You view a situation as confusing, at best, and seem to be digging for more information. The feedback you get today might not be accurate. Don't remain silent. Tonight: Where you can hear great music.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
Compared with the majority of people, you might be more aware of your financial liabilities. You sense that a partner might be misrepresenting a situation. Whether this distorted or incomplete information is intentional is key. Tonight: Stop to visit with a friend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Beam in more of what you want. People will naturally gravitate toward you because of your clarity and ability to be precise. Know that you might not have the complete story. Before sharing any information, confirm facts and figures. Tonight: The world is your oyster.

JACQUELINE BIGAR

BIGAR'S STARS

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
Pace yourself; know that you'd be better off doing research or snoozing rather than running around or being proactive. Use the moment for yourself and your quiet pursuits. Today, how you feel will change rapidly. Tonight: Question what's happening behind the scenes.

SCÓRPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
Zero in on what you want and desire. When dealing with a certain person, you clearly sense a lack of commitment or clarity. You cannot force this person to be any other way. Accept others as they are. Tonight: Where your friends can be found.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
Tension builds around your work or public image. Be more direct in how you handle a loved one or roommate. This person also needs some of your time. You could easily feel like saltwater taffy as it's being made -- pulled in two different directions at once. Tonight: A must show.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
You might need to give someone an explanation. This person could be a trusted advisor or someone who you deal with at a distance. You value this person. You have wonderful ideas; this person helps you manifest them. Tonight: As you like.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
Take a hard look at your financial situation, which could be out of control. You might want to do something very different than your norm. Be careful; a risk today won't be favored. You need more information. Tonight: Be a duo.

PÍSCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
You might not be sure about what to do and which way to go. Understand what's needed to encourage better flow and handle a personal issue more gracefully. Your sensitivity soars, as does your magnetism. Tonight: Someone might promise something on which he or she cannot follow through.

» TODAY IN HISTORY

TODAY IS TUESDAY, MARCH 19, the 78th day of 2019. There are 287 days left in the year.

TODAY'S HIGHLIGHTS IN HISTORY:

On March 19, 1945, during World War II, 724 people were killed when a Japanese dive bomber attacked the carrier USS Franklin off Japan (the ship was saved). Adolf Hitler ordered the destruction of German facilities that could fall into Allied hands in his so-called "Nero Decree," which was largely disregarded.

ON THIS DATE:
In 1953, the Academy Awards ceremony was televised for the first time; "The Greatest Show on Earth" was named best picture of 1952.
In 1987, televangelist Jim

Bakker resigned as chairman of his PTL ministry organization amid a sex and money scandal involving Jessica Hahn, a former church secretary.

In 1993, Supreme Court Justice Byron R. White announced plans to retire. (White's departure paved the way for Ruth Bader Ginsburg to become the court's second female justice.)
In 2003, President George W.

Bush ordered the start of war against Iraq. (Because of the time difference, it was early March 20 in Iraq.)

In 2013, Pope Francis officially began his ministry as the 266th pope, receiving the ring symbolizing the papacy and a wool stole exempting his role as shepherd of his 1.2-billion strong flock during a Mass at the Vatican.
