Husfelt calls for armed guards

Superintendent: 'Clearly our children deserve the additional security'

PANAMA CITY — As the state and nation still are grappling with the tragedy of the Parkland school shooting, Superintendent Bill Husfelt has made putting an armed officer at every school a priority.

"We must have armed officers in each school," he said in a lengthy statement released Monday. "I don't want our schools to feel like prisons, with armed guards in every hallway, but clearly our children deserve the additional security of at least one armed officer on each campus." Husfelt said the school district is on track to construct new, secure entryways for all of its schools by 2020, as well as improve fencing and security systems. His final push, he said, will be for immediate access to mental health services for students.

"Our children are the ones in the background "suffering in silence" and living in deplorable conditions, but that silence will turn into rage and it will not end well for anyone," he said.

The superintendent expressed his frustration with the inaction he has seen as school shooting after school shooting rolls through the news. School Board Chairwoman Ginger Littleton referred to the shooting as "another tragic verse in a song that already has too many verses."

Bay Medical CEO resigns

By Katie Landeck

PANAMA CITY — Steve Grubbs, the chief executive officer (CEO) of Bay Medical Sacred Heart, resigned Monday effective immediately.

When reached by phone, Grubbs said he had "no comment" on the abrupt departure. The hospital would not comment on the reason for the departure, simply saying he resigned.

Bay Medical will be conducting a national search for a new CEO, according to a news release. Heath Evans, chief operating officer, will step up to serve as the interim CEO.

Grubbs started at Bay Medical in August 2015, bringing more than 28 years of hospital management experience. He began his career with Humana, serving as a financial specialist in Chattanooga, Tennessee.

Since that time, he has worked with several major health systems as a chief financial officer and then transitioned to the position of CEO in 2005.

During his almost three years as CEO, Grubbs helped lead the organization through many successes, according to a press release, including the opening of The Bay Medical Center Beach ER.

PANAMA CITY BEACH — An eastward extension of Bay Parkway to Nautilus Street is expected to reduce traffic on Back Beach Road and could be ready for motorists in 2019, Beach Mayor Mike Thomas said Monday.

The project, which would give drivers an alternative east-west route instead of traveling congested Back Beach Road (U.S. 98) in front of Pier Park, is on the fast-track and coming together quickly, officials said. Agreements have been drawn up between Bay County and the city and the city and the St. Joe Co. to make the road come to fruition in the near future.

"This is a big move," Beach Mayor Mike Thomas said Monday.

The project calls for an eastward extension of Bay Parkway, formerly known as the "Loop Road," which currently curls around in a northwesterly direction from Pier Park North Drive to State 79. Bay Parkway would be extended from Pier Park North Drive to Nautilus Street, where there is a traffic light at Back Beach Road.

READER FEEDBACK

Donald Trump's proposal to throw a massive military parade in Washington has drawn a mixed reaction from Bay County veterans. We asked our reader if they were for or against and why.

Dennis Redding: "We Americans don't do Military Parades with Tanks, Rocket Launchers, Missiles, and all the crazy equipment of war, that's what Trump wants, that figures from a 6 time Draft Dodger. Maybe he'll fly his best buddy Putin over with all the Communist weapons."

Mike Dwyer: "As a former soldier, I am very much in favor of the idea."

Jacob Walker: "Goose stepping gear flaunting parades for no apparent reason are not hallmarks of a volunteer, highly skilled, professional fighting force in recent history. I think it's an insult to our service members, and a waste of your tax dollars. Semper Fidelis, United States Marine Corps Retired"

Bobbie Cayce: "Against! I look at my fathers photo of him in uniform and the large medal he received for the great battle of the bulge. What Trump is advocating is a communist type parade, something America has fought against for as long as I can remember. My father is turning in his grave. I can tell you soldiers at Fort Bragg are not in favor of a parade to pacify this presidents ego. I urge our local Veterans to rethink this idea."

Teresa Nester Hamilton: "The World already knows our Military is Superior to everyone else... why waste the money and resources on something so absolutely 'mine is bigger than yours?'"

Zac Thomas: "The only reason he wants a parade is so he can feel like a strong, big, huge, tough, man. It has nothing to do with honoring troops."

Mike Cee: "Sure, but only if we bring them all home and stay out of foreign affairs that are none of our concern."

James Walker: "TAKE CARE OF OUR VETS!!! HOUSING FOR HOMELESS VETS. ADDITIONAL BENEFITS FOR VETS. A PARADE IS A FRIVOLOUS WASTE OF MONEY."

Shooting puts pressure on Fla. lawmakers

By Terry Spencer, Curt Anderson and Brendan Farrington
The Associated Press

PARKLAND, Fla. — The deadly shooting at a Florida high school has put pressure on the state's Republican-controlled Legislature to consider a sweeping package of gun-control laws in a state that has resisted restrictions on firearms for decades, lawmakers said Monday.

The legislative effort coalesced as 100 students from Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School prepared to ride buses more than 400 miles to the state capital Tuesday to urge lawmakers to act to prevent a repeat of the massacre that killed 17 students and faculty last week.

The suspect, 19-year-old former student Nikolas Cruz, made his first appearance in court Monday. Wearing a prison jumpsuit, he kept his head down and didn't appear to make eye contact with the judge or others in the courtroom, though he responded briefly to someone on the defense team. A previous appearance was by a video connection from jail.

His lawyers have said he will plead guilty if prosecutors agree not to pursue the death penalty. No decision has been made on that.

Soon after the shooting, several legislative leaders were taken on a tour of the school to see the damage firsthand and appeared shaken afterward.

The attack seemed to overcome the resistance of some in the state's leadership, which has rebuffed gun restrictions since Republicans took control of both the governor's office and the Legislature in 1999. However, there is still strong resistance by many in the party to any gun-control measures, leaving the fate of new restrictions unclear.

Sen. Bill Galvano, a Republican and the incoming state Senate president, said the Senate was preparing a package that would include raising the age to purchase any firearm to 21, creating a waiting period for purchasing any type of firearm, banning bump stocks that can allow semi-automatic guns to spray bullets quickly and creating gun-violence restraining orders.

Authorities said Cruz had a string of run-ins with school authorities that ended with his expulsion. Police were also repeatedly called to his house throughout his childhood. Cruz's lawyers said there were repeated warning signs that he was mentally unstable and potentially violent. Yet he legally purchased a semi-automatic rifle.

"We need to make sure everything is working and to learn from the experience," said Galvano, who was among those who visited the school.

The Senate is also considering boosting spending on mental health programs for schools and giving law enforcement greater power to involuntarily hold someone else at school so they are authorized to have a gun.

Galvano said senators want to examine ways to protect schools that do not have resource officers — often armed law enforcement officers — on site.

State House leaders and Gov. Rick Scott also are considering possible changes to firearms rules but have not given any details. Scott planned meetings Tuesday on school safety, and said he would announce proposals on mental health issues later in the week.

Still, some Republicans questioned whether additional gun restrictions are the answer.

"I really don't want to see this politicized into a gun debate," Republican Sen. Dennis Baxley.

Referring to gun-control advocates, he said: "Sometimes I wish they were right, that this would fix it, but it won't ... We have a terrible problem with obesity, but we're not banning forks and spoons."

Democrats believe raising the age limit and creating a waiting period to buy rifles isn't enough.

"That's unacceptable. That's a joke," said Democratic Sen. Gary Farmer of Broward County. "I don't see that as a restriction. It never should have been that an 18-year-old could buy an assault weapon. No Floridians should be able to buy an assault weapon."

Since the attack, students from the school have become increasingly vocal in their demands for gun-control measures.

The Bay County Commission is slated to vote Tuesday on a resolution authorizing the county to submit an application with the Florida Department of Transportation (FDOT) for a "county incentive grant program." The application proposes FDOT fund $4 million toward the $9.3 million project. The portion of the project not funded by the state would be split between Bay County and Panama City Beach.

The county and Beach plan to fund the road extension with the half-cent sales tax voters approved for road projects in November 2016.

Bay County Manager Bob Majka said Monday that Bay County plans to pitch in $1.7 million toward the project in fiscal year 2020 and another

Beach Mayor Mike Thomas

$1.75 million in fiscal year 2021. Panama City Beach would front the local government share and receive the county's funds in the next few years.

"There will be a funding agreement," Majka said. "There is a draft of an agreement that we've already sent to the Beach and they will have that on their agenda."

Majka said Bay Parkway will have limited access to improve traffic flow.

"I'm sure there will be commercial development off of it at some point, but it won't be like Back Beach Road where you have traffic lights and stop-and-go" traffic, Majka said.

The eventual plan is to extend Bay Parkway farther eastward beyond Nautilus Street — perhaps to a point near the Hathaway Bridge — as a new "Back Back Beach Road" — an alternative east-west corridor.

"The need for it has been something that has been talked about since I first got in business out here, and we're still pushing in that direction," Thomas said.

Thomas said an agreement has been proposed in which the St. Joe Co., which owns all the land for the parkway extension to Nautilus, would be given a credit on development fees for donating the land for the extension.

"We'll give them breaks on their concurrency (fees) for the same value as the (land) for the road," Thomas said.

The fact that the city won't have to buy right of way or deal with more than one landowner is speeding up the project by several years, Thomas said.

The Bay Parkway extension could be all the more important as officials look for ways to reduce traffic on Back Beach Road, but a proposed widening is not in the immediate future.

FDOT recently completed a study of widening Back Beach Road from Mandy Lane to Thomas Drive, but there is no funding for construction of the extra lanes in the five-year work program, FDOT spokesman Ian Satter said Monday.

The extension of Bay Parkway to Nautilus Street would allow Colony Club residents to leave their community from a new exit and travel all the way to State 79 without driving on Back Beach Road.

"It would (allow drivers) to be able to bypass Pier Park and all that traffic," said Beach Councilman Phil Chester, who lives in Colony Club. "It would be phenomenal for the Beach, not just Colony Club, but everybody."

my thoughts and prayers are with the community of Parkland but, even in the words of the children of Parkland, the time for thoughts and prayers is over because it's past time for action," Husfelt said. "I truly thought that after the massacre of 20 kindergartners in Newtown (Connecticut) that our country would come together and realize that more needs to be done to protect our children. That was in 2012, and obviously I was wrong."

Husfelt and Littleton called for Republicans and Democrats to come together to pass legislation to make it more difficult for "average citizens" to buy military-style weaponry.

"This is not an issue of gun 'control,'" Littleton said. "This is an issue of common sense. We now hear our own youngsters begging us adults to do something before more of their peers die."

Husfelt said he has been working with local legislators on what steps need to be taken, adding that funding will be a large factor in what can be accomplished.

"I have confidence and faith that our local leaders and state officials have the ability to come together to make our schools safer and to help us do everything we can to help prevent yet another tragedy," he said.

Communities should make own rental rules

State lawmakers still are looking for ways to kneecap local communities' ability to determine what goes on in residential neighborhoods. There is no one-size-fits-all solution, and Tallahassee should stop trying to micromanage what should be a local decision.

Both the House and Senate versions of the legislation would undercut local control through a sneaky dodge: Cities and counties would be allowed to regulate short-term rentals only if they applied the same rules to every private residence in the county, whether or not it had ever been offered as a rental. That obviously would make enforcement impossible. The only exception would be cities that adopted ordinances before June 1, 2011.

Granted, the practice of renting out private homes on a daily, weekly or even monthly basis is growing by significant leaps. Last week, one of the biggest platforms for short-term rentals, Airbnb, said it collected over $45.7 million in state and local taxes in 2017. That's more than double the $20 million the company collected in 2016 — and that's just one company. There are others, as well as people who list their properties themselves on sites like Craigslist. These vacation homes give Florida visitors a much wider range of options, from ultra-budget offerings (such as local college students renting their rooms when they return home) to multimillion-dollar waterfront mansions suitable for a Kardashians family reunion. For many, the emerging industry is giving visitors their first glimpse of Florida life outside the regimented theme-park corridor.

It's also true that, thus far, many Florida county and city officials have struggled when it comes to maintaining good oversight of vacation properties. Recently, New Smyrna Beach residents attended a contentious hearing in which vacation-rental owners who operate outside the areas zoned for short-term occupancy complained the city was "harassing" them after a long period of inaction on zoning laws.

That's unfortunate. Cities that want to regulate short-term rentals owe it to property owners to be consistent and fair. It's not as if short-term rental properties are hard to find. And in areas where rentals aren't closely regulated, they can be disruptive.

It also should be obvious that different communities have different needs. In the sections of Orange and Osceola counties adjacent to the theme parks, there are some subdivisions where the majority of homes seem to be in use as short-term rentals. It doesn't make much sense to expect the same rules that govern those areas to work in a city like DeLand.

And if voters don't like how their local officials are handling short-term rentals, they can easily address that — at the ballot box. They don't need the heavy hand of the state restricting their options.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thompson has 'honest, no nonsense approach'

I can't think of one reason why anyone would not want to vote for Burnie Thompson! Burnie has an honest, no nonsense approach and he is real. He tells it like it is and admits it when he is wrong. Sheriff Nick Finch would probably be in jail today if it weren't for Burnie's desire for liberty and truth!

If Burnie wasn't posting on social media, I would never have known what our elected officials were up to on the Beach.

I am grateful to Burnie for spending all the time he does, keeping us updated as to what is going on in our community. If elected, he will be our voice, he will be transparent and not just say he will be to get elected!

Nobody likes everything about everybody they know. You may agree or not agree with Burnie or may dislike something about him or just think he is OK. But, at the end of the day, he will be there looking out for us and our rights. And after all, isn't that what this is all about?

It's time to act on shootings

Ginger Littleton

More of our young people, tucked into a school that everyone thought was safe, have been lost. This is another tragic verse in the song that already contains way too many verses. As chair of the Bay District School Board, I am compelled to weigh in on this tragic event and to provide my perspective on what we are doing and what we ALL could do.

While some issues may be partisan or of particular interest to one group or another, the safety of our youngsters supersedes all other issues. Raising our children in safe, wholesome environments is the primary adult responsibility we all share, whether those children are ours or belong to another.

Our schools are simply smaller, more condensed versions of the world we adults inhabit. They are no better nor no worse than what we adults provide. If our adult world is drug-laden, our schools probably have drugs. If our adult world believes that discipline is unnecessary, we have undisciplined youngsters in our schools. If our adult sense of responsibility, of punctuality or respect is not present, our children have no sense of responsibility, punctuality or respect.

While we all share a great sense of sadness and loss, please understand that Marjorie Stoneman Douglas High School had done absolutely everything it could to maintain the focus on education by expelling this student, Nikolas Cruz. Your own School Board functions in the same manner. After a student has proven him/herself a constant, disruptive factor and over time has not only accumulated many discipline referrals, but also has shown a steady escalation in the severity and disruptiveness of these transgressions, or the initial transgression is so egregious that swift and decisive action is required, response is elevated to your School Board to possibly expel the student. In the past your Board tried to find other avenues for students to try to "get it together." Now those options are provided, if possible, to students before they get to the Board. Today by the time students get to us, the options are few. Once a student is expelled, he/she is no longer allowed on any school campus and would be considered trespassing should he/she decide to return.

Nikolas Cruz was expelled. Nikolas Cruz was prohibited from stepping foot on that campus. Educators had done absolutely everything they could do to ensure the learning environment at that school was not disrupted.

And yet...look what happened!

I have listened carefully; I have logged in as many suggestions as possible, and I expect some of your ideas will become reality in BDS. Thanks to all for trying to help us navigate what seems unnavigable.

From the lone gunman who entered our Board Room intent on killing in 2010 to what followed: Sandy Hook, Las Vegas, Orlando and now to Parkland, evil has been redefined in ways none of us could have ever imagined.

The trend here is terrifying. Daily BDS seats about twenty-seven thousand students in some schools with SRD's and some without. Some amazing retirees volunteer in our schools to try to keep them safe.

The School Board can only add more security, build more walls and fences, employ more technology to try to be as safe as possible. I hear the comments about guns don't kill people, people do. We have now developed the capability for one to kill many ... fast. Can't we find some way to start the conversation that moves us toward common sense rules and regulations that provide our youngsters at least some assurance that when they come to school in the morning they will return home safely in the afternoon?

Ginger Littleton is Bay District Schools Chair.

SQUALL LINE

There was an armed guard at the Parkland School. He never got close to the shooting.

I'm not afraid of guns. I'm afraid of nuts WITH guns!

Waiting for the other shoe to drop.

Live as if your prayers are already answered.

Why must everything be located at PCB? Those on the other side of the bridge are ignored! Why should they have to drive all the way down there all the time? Let's have the same stuff for them!

China built islands. Seeing as things made in China are cheaper than here, I may buy one. Wonder how much they are asking for them?

Not only did Russia meddle in our election, we are adopting their policies of dictatorship! Young people banned from the beach. Only families are welcome. You don't see that at popular tourist spots in Europe! Beaches are for everyone!

Not just those who some locals approve of!

When a terrorist kills innocent people, we blame the terrorist. When someone uses a bomb to kill people, we blame the bomber. When someone uses a gun to kill, we blame the gun.

Teens are milking the shooting tragedy. When they become voters, then they get to make decisions regarding gun control. Until then, ignore them.

Banker: 'Nightmare' dodging extortion attempts in Latvia

By Carlo Piovano
The Associated Press

LONDON — Latvia's top banking official, a key member of the European Central Bank, has been accused by local bank Norvik of seeking kickbacks, trying to launder Russian money and retaliating against the bank when it refused to play by the "rules of the game."

In a high-stakes drama for the tiny Baltic country, Ilmars Rimsevics was detained Saturday by Latvian anti-corruption authorities and questioned for hours into the night. State TV showed him walking free on Monday, without charges, though he is still being investigated for suspected bribery.

Norvik bank has filed an international legal complaint against Latvia in which it alleges that a "Senior Latvian Official" repeatedly sought "to extort monetary bribes," and threatened the bank when its owner and chairman, Grigory Guselnikov, refused to pay up.

"The high-level official mentioned in our request for arbitration is Rimsevics," Norvik's CEO, Oliver Bramwell, told The Associated Press. Guselnikov confirmed that it was Rimsevics.

Rimsevics' lawyer told Latvian TV that he promises to provide more information about the case on Tuesday. The ECB declined to comment on Rimsevics' status.

The threat of criminal charges against the man who has been at the top of the country's banking sector since 1992, in the wake of the Soviet collapse, has plunged the small Baltic nation into turmoil.

Rimsevics' detention is particularly sensitive as he sits on the top policy-making council of the ECB, Europe's most powerful financial institution, and is privy to the state secrets of Latvia, NATO and the European Union.

Any connections to money laundering would raise concerns of the risk of blackmail from Russia's secret services or organized crime, and come at a time when Latvian security services warn that Russia is actively trying to obtain state secrets from Latvian officials to weaken the European Union and United States.

Guselnikov said he first met Rimsevics in 2015 after he was introduced to a man called Renars Kokins, who was said to know the country's legal and political landscape well. Kokins invited Guselnikov to a meeting in a large villa in the suburbs of the capital. Soon after Guselnikov got there, another man arrived, on foot, and entered without knocking: it was Rimsevics.

He was brief and to the point. He told Guselnikov he could help him because the nation's financial regulator was loyal to him personally. All he had to do was "cooperate" with Kokins, Guselnikov recalled.

Rimsevics left 10 minutes later and Kokins sat Guselnikov down at a table. He pulled a pen out and wrote on a piece of paper: "100,000 per month."

Kokins did not use the word "payment." He explained to the banker that all Latvian banks "cooperate" in this manner, Guselnikov says.

In the following weeks, Guselnikov tried to stall but found that every time he refused to pay, his bank would get hit with new regulatory measures.

Kokins did not relent, finding Guselnikov repeatedly after that.

Guselnikov says he met with Kokins and Rimsevics a few more times to try to clarify his position.

Rimsevics took great care to not be seen at these meetings, Guselnikov says.

On one occasion, Kokins drove Guselnikov around the capital, Riga, for almost two hours before parking in front of a Chinese restaurant in the city outskirts. Kokins left the car and minutes later, Rimsevics entered it and sat behind Guselnikov, in the back seat, to speak, Guselnikov said. Another time they met in the restaurant itself, when it was completely empty.

"It was a nightmare for me for years," said Guselnikov, who is 41. "You can't understand how to get out of this dirty environment without reputation damage. That is why I decided to go out publicly and legally with my case. I can lose the bank, my money, but I will never become part of it."

Report: Winn-Dixie owner set to file for bankruptcy

Staff and wire reports

Bi-Lo, the company that owns supermarket chain Winn-Dixie, reportedly is preparing for a potential bankruptcy, with the filing coming as soon as next month.

Citing sources close to the matter, Bloomberg said the chain will close almost 200 stores as part of the restructuring. The locations that will be closed have not been announced.

The Jacksonville-based Bi-Lo has more than $1 billion in debt after its 2005 buyout of Lone Star Funds, according to Bloomberg. Neither Bi-Lo, or its parent company Southeastern Grocers, commented on the reports.

Bi-Lo purchased Winn Dixie in 2012 and operates locations in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana and Mississippi. The chain has eight stores in Bay County.

Google eyes software sees heart attack risk

The Washington Post

By looking at the human eye, Google's algorithms were able to predict whether someone had high blood pressure or was at risk of a heart attack or stroke, Google researchers said Monday, opening a new opportunity for artificial intelligence in the vast and lucrative global health industry.

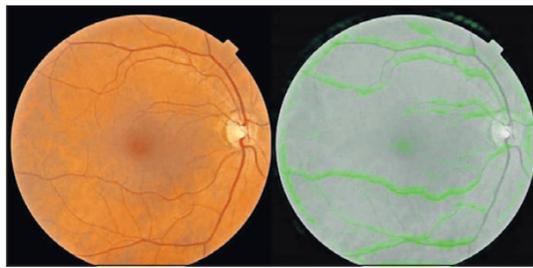

The algorithms didn't outperform existing medical approaches such as blood tests, according to a study of the finding published in the journal Nature Biomedical Engineering. The work needs to be validated and repeated on more people before it gains broader acceptance, several outside physicians said.

But the new approach could build on doctors' current abilities by providing a tool that people could one day use to quickly and easily screen themselves for health risks that can contribute to heart disease, the leading cause of death worldwide.

"This may be a rapid way for people to screen for risk," Harlan Krumholz, a cardiologist at Yale University who was not involved in the study, wrote in an email. "Diagnosis is about to get turbo-charged by technology. And one avenue is to empower people with rapid ways to get useful information about their health."

Google researchers fed images scanned from the retinas of more than 280,000 patients across the United States and United Kingdom into its intricate pattern-recognition algorithms, known as neural networks. Those scans helped train the networks on which telltale signs tended to indicate long-term health dangers.

Medical professionals today can look for similar signs by using a device to inspect the retina, drawing the patient's blood or assessing risk factors such as their age, gender, weight and whether they smoke. But no one taught the algorithms what to look for: Instead, the systems taught themselves, by reviewing enough data to learn the patterns often found in the eyes of people at risk.

A scan of the back of the human eye, left, and how Google's algorithm sees it. The green highlights are the parts the algorithm found most helpful in predicting blood pressure. [UK BIOBANK/GOOGLE]

The true power of this kind of technological solution is that it could flag risk with a fast, cheap and non-invasive test that could be administered in a range of settings, letting people know if they should come in for follow-up.

The research, one of an increasing number of conceptual health-technology studies, was conducted by Google and Verily Life Sciences, a subsidiary of Google's parent Alphabet.

The idea that people's eyes might reveal signs of underlying cardiovascular disease isn't as outlandish as it might seem. Diabetes and high blood pressure, for example, can cause changes in the retina.

Krumholz cautioned that an eye scan isn't ready to replace more conventional approaches. Maulik Majumdar, associate director of the Healthcare Transformation Lab at Massachusetts General Hospital, called the model "impressive" but noted that the results show how difficult it is to make significant improvements in cardiovascular risk prediction. Age and gender are powerful predictors of risk, without the need for additional testing.

Google's algorithms approached the accuracy of current methods but were far from perfect. When presented images of the eyes of two different people — one who suffered a major adverse cardiac event such as a heart attack or stroke within five years of the photo and the other who did not — the algorithms could correctly pick the patient who fell ill 70 percent of the time.

Similar deep-learning technologies have exploded in the past five years and are widely used today in systems such as Google's image search and Facebook's facial recognition. They also are showing promise in other arenas of health, including by looking for signs of cancer in the X-ray scans reviewed by radiologists.

The Google researchers used similar machine-learning methods in 2016 to look for diabetic retinopathy, an eye disease that is a major cause of blindness. This time, they also used a machine-learning technique, known as "soft attention," to help pinpoint which parts of the image were most instrumental in driving the algorithms' prediction. One vulnerability of many neural networks today is that it's often unclear how or why they reached that conclusion — a "black box" problem that could undermine doctors' or patients' trust in the results.

Former teacher pleads no contest to keeping drug house

PANAMA CITY — A former first-grade teacher charged with allegedly keeping a drug house has pleaded no contest and will receive 18 months of probation.

Williams
Kenya Williams, 43, signed the plea agreement Feb. 14, which would see adjudication withheld on charges of keeping a public nuisance for drug activity, according to court documents. The agreement comes as part of a pre-trial intervention program for first-time drug offenders, which also requires Williams to attend two Narcotics Anonymous meetings weekly. She will be back in court March 5 for a pretrial hearing.

Williams was arrested in September after the Bay County Sheriff's Office served a search warrant on her Barton Avenue home and found controlled substances and seven people who did not live at the residence. During the search,

News Herald reports

Fishing trip proves painful

A deputy arrives on the scene of a disturbance to discover a man who, while not hitting a brick wall in his dealings with his wife, had been hit in the head by a brick or something much like one.

The man tells the deputy "that his wife had hit him with something, possibly a brick, while they were in a verbal altercation. He had just returned from an all day fishing trip and his wife came out of the house. He got into a verbal argument with his wife because she was angry with him for being gone all day. He stated that while they were arguing she picked up a brick and hit him in the head with it while he was still near his vehicle."

The man tells the deputy he asked his wife to call him an ambulance and she would not, so he attempted to drive himself to a hospital, which is when deputies arrived.

The deputy then speaks with the wife, who is the one who called authorities, she says she was inside when she heard a vehicle pull in. She went outside "and saw that the padlock on the back gate was broken and noticed her husband's vehicle parked by the pole barn. She became angry that he had broken the lock and went to speak with him."

That also did not turn out well, and the pole barn discussion "escalated," with the wife saying her husband grabbed her, though "she could not remember how he grabbed her but he took her to the ground and held her there in a choke hold until she felt like she would pass out."

The wife says she didn't pass out, but her husband let her up and "began cussing at her, and walked towards his vehicle. She stated that she picked up something, she believes it to be a block of wood, then threw it at her husband."

The deputy notes that initially the woman had said she used the block of wood to hit her husband so he would let go of her.

As is often the case, the deputy wrote that, "Further investigation of the scene and their positioning resulted in the wife admitting the truth. She hit her husband on the right side of his head causing a laceration through the hat that he was wearing."

The wife is charged with aggravated battery.

But as the deputy continues to look around, taking pictures, he noticed a trail of what appeared to be blood on the cement of the pole barn starting at the middle of the room and continuing to the dirt.

PANAMA CITY — It was all smiles Monday at Bayview Veterinary Hospital, as local Girl Scouts watched a dog named Cody get its teeth cleaned.

The scouts weren't just there to learn about the procedure. They were there for a higher purpose: badges.

Girl Scout Senior Abigail Leep's favorite badge is the criminology badge, but crime wasn't on her mind when she watched Cody undergo anesthesia before the procedure.

Holt woman with cancer finds homes for most of her goats

By Annie Blanks

ablanks@nwfdailynews.com

HOLT — A 72-year-old woman with terminal cancer who was looking to find homes for her more than 70 goats said she's found new families for almost all of them.

Brooke Broderick, owner and sole proprietor of Draggin' Acres Goats in Holt, said the response to a Northwest Florida Daily News story Jan. 21 about her search for homes for the goats has been "overwhelming."

"I've literally gotten hundreds of phone calls and messages, and I couldn't even get back to everybody," Broderick said at her farm Thursday morning as one of her goats, Precious, nudged at her legs. "It was not what I expected."

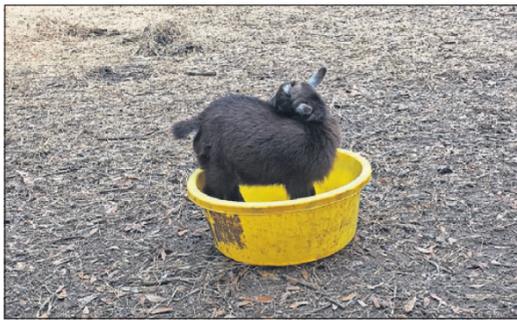

Broderick was diagnosed with advanced-stage lung cancer in November 2016, and was told by doctors shortly thereafter that the cancer had metastasized and she didn't have too long to live. Broderick's primary concern since getting the news has been to find homes for her goats, which live with her on the 12-acre property.

Broderick has bred and sold goats to people across the Southeast for 20 years. She said the goats are like her children, and though she's glad she's found homes for most of them, she's sad to see them go.

"I'm just praying that I've picked the right homes for them, for the personalities of the animals and the people," she said. "It's been hard, I'm not going to lie. But it has to be done."

Her property, which once was bustling with the sounds and movements of Nigerian dwarf and pygmy goats, now sits almost empty save for Broderick and her remaining 15 goats. Empty goat pens, toys and food bowls still are staggered around the property, and the remaining goats roam free in Broderick's front yard.

Most of the remaining goats, including three kids (baby goat) still are for sale. But about five of them, which Broderick has nicknamed "Posie's Posse" after one of her beloved goats, will remain with Broderick until the end.

"I've decided to keep a few of them as long as I can, until I either have to be put in a hospital or something. They'll be here as long as I live here," she said. "Of course, my hope is one night, I'll just go to sleep and not wake up."

Broderick said that in the weeks since the Daily News story appeared, she's met many people from far and wide who have expressed interest in owning the goats. She's been touched by the response and was surprised at the kindness of so many people.

"I don't think I've gotten one negative remark out of the hundreds of messages and calls," she said. "I'm just amazed at the kindness of people I've never met. I've been humbled, I've been overwhelmed and I've been so grateful."

AREA & STATE BRIEFS

PANAMA CITY BEACH PCB police identify body found in surf

Panama City Beach police have identified the body that washed up on Panama City Beach as Nevio Visovich, an 83-year-old Canadian citizen.

About 5:10 p.m. Sunday, Panama City Beach Police and Fire Rescue personnel responded to a call of an unresponsive man in the surf behind AquaVista Condominiums, 17155 Front Beach Road.

According to PCBPD officials, Visovich was identified by family members who already had notified police he was missing and started a search.

The official cause of death is under investigation and will be determined by the Medical Examiner's Office, but police referred to Visovich's death as a drowning in their press release.

Surf conditions were light Sunday evening and yellow flags were flying.

DAYTONA BEACH Woman arrested in meat thermometer stabbing

A Port Orange woman was arrested on allegations she stabbed another woman with a meat thermometer.

Susan Ferris, 39, was arrested Sunday near her home on charges of aggravated battery with a deadly weapon and child neglect. She was being held Monday without bail at the Volusia County Branch Jail.

Ormond Beach police said they responded shortly before 3 p.m. and found Patricia Leo, 37, bleeding and crying. She said, "Susan did this," to first-responders who arrived at the scene, police said.

A meat thermometer covered in blood was found near the scene, according to an arrest report.

Witnesses told police they heard Leo say she had been stabbed and then saw another woman run from the yard, get into a vehicle and flee the area, the report stated.

One of Leo's relatives reported he saw Leo standing in the doorway bleeding and saw Ferris holding a sharp object, police said.

During a disagreement a Leo's home, Ferris made an obscene gesture toward Leo at which time Leo told her to leave. That's when Ferris attacked her, according to the report. Details of what led up to the stabbing were not in the report.

"The victim fought back during the attack," said Ormond Beach Officer Keith Walker.

Leo was hospitalized for a stab wound to her left chest, a puncture wound to the back of her left arm, a cut on her right inside elbow and a cut on her head, the report stated.

Jail and court records show Ferris has a history of domestic abuse-related arrests.

SCOUTS

"I didn't know (anesthesia) was pretty much the same as a human," she said.

The Cadette Girl Scouts, who range in age from sixth to eighth grade, earned their Animal Helper Badges, and the Senior Girl Scouts (ninth and 10th grades) received their Voice for Animals Badges.

"It is our hope that the girls will leave with a deeper understanding of pets and the roles they play in our lives and in our world," said April Strupp, a program specialist with Girl Scout Council of the Florida Panhandle.

Dr. Susie McKnight, hospital owner, gave the girls a tour of the facility, which included X-ray, exam rooms, boarding areas and more.

The tour was only part of the experience. McKnight sat down to speak with the scouts about the importance of spaying and neutering pets, veterinarian colleges and more. The veterinarian also expressed the importance of the human-animal bond. "As human beings, we all have that desire to care for other creatures," she told the scouts.

Leep, who has four dogs and five fish, realized people should invest more time into the care of their pets.

Like Leep, Channing Abernathy said she didn't realize pets undergo the same anesthesia process as humans. After McKnight's lesson and advice, she was familiar with the process.

"It was really interesting," the Girl Scout Senior said. "It taught me about dogs, how procedures go, and how to care for them."

The girls seemed to enjoy the experience, and Strupp said she is grateful McKnight hosted the scouts for the first time. She said she looks forward to working with McKnight in the future.

"We would like to thank Dr. McKnight and her staff for their willingness to share their knowledge and this experience with our girls," Strupp said. "Dr. McKnight has been so wonderful during this whole process of helping to ensure the girls will have everything they need to complete their badge."

Williams admitted using methamphetamine "normally once a day," according to her arrest report, and post-Miranda allegedly said it was a "common occurrence" for people she might or might not know to "hang out" at the residence, including people with narcotics-related arrest histories and warrants out for their arrest.

Working with Bay District Schools since the 2000-2001 school year, Williams taught various elementary grades, first at Cedar Grove Elementary, then at Breakfast Point Academy. A review of her personnel file by The News Herald found she was a model employee, with no prior disciplinary actions against her, and she consistently was given good reviews by her supervisors, performing at or above average. She has been rated as "highly effective" by the state every school year since the 2012-2013.

After her arrest, she was suspended with pay by the district but resigned her position several days later, citing "personal reasons."

The wife "noticed that I was taking pictures and walked over stating that the blood was from a deer that they hit on the road last night. She stated that the blood trail was from where her husband moved the deer to a tree out by the yard. She insisted that I walk over and see the tree to prove that the blood did not belong to her husband." The deputy is not impressed and the charge stands.

PANAMA CITY
Stranger danger?
Texts tell the tale

Some strange texts left a Bay County woman scratching her head.

The woman visited the Bay County Sheriff's Office after her father, who lives in another county, started getting texts from a stranger. At first, the texts asked the man to "guess who" was texting. But when he would not guess, "they called and somehow gained his daughter's first name," according to a BCSO report. The man ended the call but later texted back, asking, "So who is this?"

But the texter never revealed their identity and the texts have stopped for now.

CALLAWAY
Drugs, syringe land
man back in jail

If you have an active drug warrant, you probably should make sure you aren't traveling around with drugs and a syringe.

While conducting a traffic stop on Tyndall Parkway, a Bay County sheriff's deputy found the passenger of the stopped car had an active warrant for violating probation on a heroin charge. The deputy then searched the car and found a syringe with a "clear liquid" under the passenger's seat and another syringe with a "clear liquid" in the passenger's back seat. The deputy also found two gum wrappers with "an unknown burnt substance on both wrappers."

The substance turned out to be meth, and the passenger turned out to be a future Bay County jail occupant.

Man outruns deputy,
can't outrun warrant

A deputy responding to a report of suspicious individuals finds two men walking in the middle of the road and asks one, "to stop due to the fact he was holding a liquor bottle in the right of way and he fit the description of the person who was seen loitering in a residential area."

The man has other ideas and runs away with a second deputy in hot pursuit.

The first deputy speaks with the second man, a teen, and "it was determined this individual was intoxicated and under the age of 21." That man is taken into protective custody "due to his high level of intoxication."

The deputy's sergeant arrives and "while I was explaining to him about the circumstances of this case, the first suspect returned from a wooded area and began shouting profanities to myself and other Deputies on scene. I told him to come to me because he was suspected of Loitering & Prowling. He replied, "(Expletive deleted) you, you want to chase me (expletive deleted)?"

The suspect again "took flight and I gave chase yelling for him to stop several times. He fled to his grandmother's home and he was found barricaded in a bathroom. Consent was given to us by his grandmother who is the homeowner to enter the residence. Due to the above only being misdemeanor offenses I explained to the homeowner we were not going to break her interior door down and I would just apply for an arrest warrant. Her grandson has a history of not cooperating with law enforcement and most likely would not respond to a summons."

The deputy charges the man, via warrants, with two misdemeanors, including resisting an officer without violence.

Walton continues to grapple with 30A congestion

By Deborah Wheeler

dwheeler@waltonsun.com

SANTA ROSA BEACH — Walton County commissioners voted unanimously last week to study ways to relieve traffic on County 30A.

According to officials, the Florida Department of Transportation project development and environment study will try to measure social, economic and environmental impacts that may come with a traffic improvement project for 30A, which runs through popular tourist areas in South Walton.

"In general, they want to look at any and all options that would be the least impactful to the environment," county Public Information Manager Louis Svehla said.

Last Tuesday's vote came in the wake of an update by county engineer Chance Powell on the study to look at traffic concerns, most recently at the intersection of 30A and County 395.

Several alternate north-south routes and an east-west route were explored that would help get drivers off 30A and back out to U.S. 98.

A study by Atkins Engineering identified two routes that would provide maximum benefit.

Alternative 4 is one of those that would be a new east-west road to County 395 to 30A east of Eastern Lake Road. The benefits of that route would be improved access to County 395 and improved emergency response times. It also would have the least environmental impact.

Alternative 1 would be a new north-south road, east of Seagrove Beach to connecting 30A and U.S. 98. Its benefits would be improved access to U.S. 98 and points of interest such as the Walton County Sports Complex, improved emergency response times and improved hurricane evacuation.

Atkins recommended further evaluation of alternatives 1 and 4, but considered Alternative 4 as the most viable.

There are some drawbacks, however. The route would not provide as good hurricane evacuation and would have to cross wetlands and flood plains.

Alternative 1's biggest drawback is that it would stray into the Point Washington State Forest. That was the main reason Atkins recommended Alternative 4.

"State forests are a natural resource that DEP (Florida Department of Environmental Protection) protects," said John Fielding of Atkins. "The state demands that you analyze alternative lands. Alternate 4 fits within the guidelines, although Alternate 1 follows power lines as much as possible. The next step is an environmental study."

County Commissioner Sara Comander noted that commissioners have been working on the problem since before she was elected to the board in 2006, and had been discussing it since 2003.

"It's not getting any better. We don't have roads for all the people who move down here. We are not going to make everybody happy," Comander said. "The road next to the power lines is the only plausible solution. It is a direct route. It is the obvious. I studied this for a very long time. The power lines are already there. It can be made a road that no one can veer off into state lands."

Fielding said his goal is to look at the least impactful solution. He acknowledged that Atkins focused on Alternate 4 and did not concentrate on Alternate 1 for much for that reason.

Commissioners Tony Anderson and Cecilia Jones said they want to consider more options.

Mexico Beach approves assessment; fee to fund fire service

MEXICO BEACH — Mexico Beach residents will see a new fee on their property tax bills this year, a fee aimed at funding the expansion of fire service.

The City Council last Tuesday approved a final resolution putting in place for the coming year a fire assessment to fund an expansion of the city's fire department, including a half-dozen paid firefighters.

The ultimate goal is to bring down the city's ISO rating, which affects the fire portion of property and homeowners insurance, which is set to double within the year.

The final assessment rates adopted represent 79 percent of those cited in the initial fire assessment resolution taken up by the council earlier this year.

The city will collect $642,254 under the final resolution, down from $812,987, according to documents provided as part of the resolution.

Residential property owners will pay an annual assessment of $281 (originally $350); commercial property owners 40 cents per square foot (originally 50 cents); and owners of vacant land will pay $43 per year.

The fire assessment fees will be attached as part of ad valorem tax bills sent each year to property owners based on land values of Jan. 1.

The fire assessment was retroactive to the beginning of the current fiscal year.

The city started down the path to Tuesday's meeting in September, when the ISO (Insurance Service Office) fire insurance rating agency, a for-profit agency which sells its calculations of risk to insurance companies, notified officials the city's ISO would double from 5 to 10.

The higher the number the more, in theory, insurance rates could climb, though use and application of ISO ratings vary across the country.

One issue noted by the ISO, an issue almost all volunteer fire departments in the area struggle with, was the lack of certified firefighters.

On any structure fire, four certified firefighters must be present.

The city, like many other areas locally, might have sufficient numbers on any given call, but having sufficient certified firefighters is the struggle, with completing training hours the major hiccup.

According to information provided at workshops, the city hopes to hire six full-time firefighters.

In recent years, Mexico Beach has averaged less than a structure fire per month.

There were 10 in 2017, 11 the prior year, 10 in 2015 and four in 2014, according to information provided by the city.

And, the department as a whole fielded less than a call per day last year.

The city's Emergency Services Director (fire chief), Daniel Simmons, arrived in September at the same time the ISO service was notifying the city of the anticipated rise in rating.

Simmons is qualified to instruct the Firefighter I training course.

The process leading to Tuesday's final resolution included the adoption of an assessment roll, or those properties benefiting from fire service, as well as an ordinance, first and second reading, and a public workshop earlier this month.

The city is embarking into territory which is foreign to most communities its size.

According to the National Fire Academy under the U.S. Fire Service, a division of FEMA, nationwide fewer than 1 percent of the firefighters in communities with a population of 2,500 people or less are paid.

In that respect, Mexico Beach, which currently has one paid employee, Simmons, it is on track with national demographics, according to the NFA website.

Nationwide, according to the NFA, of the 1.6 million firefighters nationwide, more than 345,600 are career firefighters while more than 814,850 are volunteers.

Among fire stations across the country, 67 percent are all volunteer; 6 percent are a mix of paid and volunteer and just 9 percent are paid departments.

Pills May Replace Diapers And Padded Underwear At Stores

Clinical studies show new pill may be effective enough to replace adult diapers for bladder control; initial users show dramatic reduction in trips to the bathroom, embarrassing leaking, and nighttime urgency.

Robert Ward,
Associated Health Press

AHP— Adult diaper sales are expected to plummet as results from a clinical trial on a new, patented bladder control pill have finally been released.

Sold under the brand name UriVarx™, the new pill contains key ingredients that keeps the bladder from releasing voluntarily, which reduces accidents and frequent bathroom trips.

Perhaps more impressive, it also targets the tiny muscles around the bladder, which helps the bladder to create a tighter seal.

This would explain why the average UriVarx™ user in clinical trials experiences a 66% reduction in urinary incontinence symptoms, such as day and night leaking and sudden urges to urinate.

NEW DISCOVERY IN BLADDER CONTROL

Until now, doctors believed it was impossible to strengthen the muscles that control the bladder. They are amazed to see that it can now be done with the non-prescription UriVarx™ pill.

"As you get older, and the involuntary muscles around your bladder weaken, you lose urinary control. With your bladder wall unable to properly seal, you constantly leak and feel pressure to urinate" explains Dr. Bassam Damaj of Innovus Pharmaceuticals.

"UriVarx™ targets the bladder muscles and help restores vital kidney health, reducing urgency and frequency. It also helps you "hold it" for hours so you never have to worry about embarrassing accidents ever again!"

FREEDOM FROM SUDDEN URGES AND LEAKS

Since hitting the market, sales for the patented UriVarx™ pill have soared and there are some very good reasons why.

To begin with, the double blind large clinical studies published in the clinicaltrials.gov have been impressive. Participants taking UriVarx™ saw a stunning reduction in urinary frequency, which resulted in fewer bathroom trips both day and night.

They also experienced a dramatic decrease in incontinence episodes, such as leaking and bed wetting.

The active ingredients in UriVarx™ comes from a patented formula. It is both safe and healthy. There are also no known serious side effects in its history of use.

Scientists believe that the ingredients target the muscles of the bladder to grow stronger. These muscles are responsible for keeping the bladder tightly sealed. They also help the bladder to completely empty, allowing bacteria to be flushed from the urinary tract.

Research has shown that as you get older, certain hormonal changes in the body cause these muscles to shrink and become lose. This is what causes the bladder to be over active and the resulting urine accidents and why UriVarx™ seems to be so effective in the published clinical trials.

NEW PILL MAY REPLACE DIAPERS FOR BLADDER CONTROL: This new patented clinically proven pill solution is now available nationwide

EXCITING RESULTS FROM URIVARX USERS

Many UriVarx™ users say their bladders have never been stronger. For the first time in years, they are confident and in complete control. Adult pads and diapers are no longer a big worry.

"After my third child, I couldn't control my bladder. I was running to the bathroom all the time! And once I hit my 60s it became so unpredictable I needed to wear adult pads every day" explained Marie L. of Danbury, CT.

"I was embarrassed so before going to my doctor I decided to try UriVarx and I'm so glad I did! The urgency is gone and I no longer feel like my bladder is about to explode. I can also "hold it" when I need to so I'm no longer living in constant fear of finding a bathroom."

IMPRESSIVE CLINICAL RESULTS

The exciting clinical results published on the government clinical website clinicaltrials.gov show that UriVarx™ can strengthen your bladder fast, significantly reducing the urine urgency and leaks.

In a new double-blind, placebo-controlled clinical study, 142 men and women with bladder control issues were separated into two groups. The first group was given a placebo while the other received UriVarx™.

The results were incredible. The participants who received UriVarx™ saw major improvements in leaking, pressure, and the urgency to go – all without the usual side effects seen in prescription drugs! They also reported fewer trips to the bathroom both day and night.

Overall, the UriVarx™ group experienced:

- 56% Reduction in Urge Incontinence
- 66% Reduction in Stress Incontinence
- 61% Reduction in Urgency
- 33% Reduction in Frequency
- 46% Reduction in Nighttime Bathroom Trips

Additionally, at the end of clinical trial and after seeing the results, 84% of the participants taking UriVarx™ said it significantly improved their quality of life.

"The clinical findings are incredible, but people still wonder if it will really work" explains Dr. Bassam Damaj. "It's normal to be skeptical, but we've seen thousands of UriVarx™ users get results exactly like the participants in the study. It's an amazing product."

HOW IT WORKS

UriVarx™ is a pill that's taken just once daily. It does not require a prescription.

The active ingredients are patented natural extracts.

Research shows that as we get older, the muscles which surround the bladder weaken. This is caused by hormonal changes in the body that causes the muscles to atrophy and weaken.

When they become too small and weak, they cannot seal your bladder shut, which causes leaking, accidents, among other incontinence symptoms.

It also prevents your bladder from fully emptying, which can result in persistent bacterial infections and UTIs.

UriVarx's™ active ingredient targets the muscles around the bladder, making them stronger. Supporting ingredients in UriVarx™ support kidney function and overall urinary health.

BLADDER PROBLEMS GONE

With daily use, UriVarx™ can restore strong bladder control and help users overcome leakage without the negative side effects or interactions associated with drugs.

Leakage sufferers can now put an end to the uncontrollable urges, the embarrassing accidents, and enjoy an entirely new level of comfort and confidence.

HOW TO GET URIVARX IN FLORIDA

This is the official release of UriVarx™ in Florida. As such, the company is offering a special discounted supply to anyone suffering from bladder issues who calls within the next 48 hours.

Group devoted to rescuing abandoned chickens

By Jennie McKeon

NAVARRE — It's not every day that Mariah Wilder gets a call about a chicken stuck in a tree or begging for food on the beach.

But when she does, she and a group of other local chicken experts are on hand to help the defenseless birds. But she would rather people re-home chickens than dump them.

This past weekend, Facebook users alerted the community about some chickens and at least one rooster spotted at the boat launch on Highway 87 in Navarre. Wilder said she tried to go out and rescue the chicken, but was unable to get very far.

"We went out in our snake chaps, but the brush was too thick," Wilder said. "One man waded through the swampy area."

Wilder has been a backyard chicken owner for five years and helps run the popular Facebook group, We Be Chickens Navarre, an online resource for backyard poultry owners. Among the calls she might get for proper chicken maintenance, Wilder sometimes finds herself chasing after chickens — mostly roosters — who have been abandoned.

"It's maybe three or four times a year, but it is sad when it happens," she said. "Every one I have rescued was starving. Chickens are blind at night and they become prey for anything that goes bump in the night."

Chickens have been rescued all over Navarre. Last winter, a chicken was found begging for food by the beach outside Juana's Pagodas, it was later caught in a opossum trap. Wilder is currently fostering a rooster that was found in a wooded area in Holley by the Sea. At Santa Rosa County Animal Services, director Dale Hamilton said they don't often get calls on lost or found chickens, but they do take them in.

And for anyone wondering, "how do you catch a chicken?" Well it's not easy, Wilder said.

"It's really, really hard," she said with a laugh. "When we were catching the chicken in Holley by the Sea we had about four adults chasing him. He went up into a tree and someone had to climb up there after him. They run faster than people."

The rooster is now at home with Wilder. His name is Bubba.

Wilder said the group members work hard to find homes for the chickens. Wilder has driven as far as lower Alabama to re-home a chicken. Some chicken farmers will give a $2 credit toward chicks for roosters. Sometimes, they are humanely butchered for food.

"They may end up on someone's table, but it's still more humane than letting them get attacked," she said. "Some are very pretty roosters. The normal, meat chickens are dumped the most."

Admittedly, Wilder can get attached to some chickens. To her, they're like any other pets.

"They all have different personalities ... some of them will sit on your lap," Wilder said.

Wilder said she believes the problem starts with newbie chicken owners, which is why she encourages them to seek out We Be Chickens or similar groups.

"They start to panic, 'what do I do with this chicken?'" Wilder explained. "They can join our page and get in touch with us."

Conundrum of a fire alarm with gunfire: Flee, or lock down?

By Kantele Franko

from district to district around the country.

That includes everything from consistent drills to strategies for teachers to fight back with baseball bats and soup cans if confronted by an armed intruder.

Safety experts say it's unusual for schools to encounter situations where drills contribute to confusion or are exploited to inflict more harm, though they concede the unsolvable reality of that possibility.

"We might be training the suspect in our drills," said Mac Hardy, operations director from the National Association of School Resource Officers. "I mean, we understand that, we know that, but we have to also do the best we can in the situations we're in to try to keep as many students as safe as possible."

Drills should encourage people to think on their feet, said consultant Kenneth Trump of National School Safety and Security Services in Ohio. That might mean starting a drill when students are in hallways or lunchrooms instead of class, or telling a teacher in the midst of a drill to pretend a particular route is blocked, Trump said.

Various organizations offer guidance about dealing with an active shooter. The National Fire Protection Association is working on a proposed accredited standard for responders at the request of an Orlando-area fire chief who, after the 2016 Pulse nightclub shooting that killed 49, thought it was time to have some minimum criteria that communities and facilities could consider adopting for how to prepare for and responds to such events.

In Westside Consolidated School District, where the 1998 shooting occurred, a given classroom won't always use the same exit when the district does monthly fire drills required by the state, Superintendent Scott Gauntt said.

Those drills are announced to teachers in advance, and no one evacuates for an unannounced fire alarm until a staff member checks where it originated from and confirms a real fire threat, he said. If one of the three buildings on the campus does evacuate, those students are moved away from areas where an attacker could hide in nearby hills, and the other two buildings lock their doors, Gauntt said.

"We're trying to do the best we can," Gauntt said. "It's amazing that this continues to happen, but at the same time, it's almost impossible to keep it from happening."

In Washington state, one district has equipped each classroom with T-ball bats, the type that young children use as an introduction to baseball.

The bats are one of several tactics that teachers are taught as part of training for emergency intruder situations, said Tim Payne, superintendent of College Place School District. The measure was put in place last year and incorporated into staff training for fire drills, lockdowns, shelter-in-place orders and other emergency scenarios.

ACES ON BRIDGE: BOBBY WOLFF

"Twixt the optimist and pessimist
The difference is droll:
The optimist sees the doughnut,
The pessimist the hole."
— McLandburgh Wilson

Today's deal cropped up in a teams game, where one declarer came back in triumph with what he was sure was a good result and was somewhat deflated at the comparison of scores.

Our first declarer had played four hearts on the lead of the diamond nine. He took East's jack in his hand and led a heart to the jack and ace. East could have defeated the game by returning a diamond, but instead he exited passively with a spade. Declarer could regain the lead to draw trumps, eventually losing one trick in spades and diamonds, to come back with 10 tricks.

When it came to the score comparison, his teammates read out minus 420. Our hero was somewhat crestfallen and made his next mistake when he asked his teammates what had gone wrong.

"What do you mean?" came the answer in a surprised tone of voice. "I also led the diamond nine, which went to the jack and ace. Our declarer suspected the lead to be a singleton, so he made the essential play of eliminating clubs before touching trumps.

"Then declarer played on hearts, and my partner won and accurately gave me a ruff. But what could I do now? I was out of red cards, so I had to lead the spade ace and another spade. Declarer could now discard dummy's losing diamond on the spade king. If I had played a club, giving a ruff-and-discard, the losing diamond would again have disappeared. I assume you played it the same way?"

"Almost exactly," came the response.

ANSWER: Your partner has shown game-forcing values with a singleton club. Your hand could hardly fit better, despite having only 8 HCP. Use Blackwood, and be prepared to consider a grand slam if your partner comes through with the appropriate number of key-cards. After all, partner must have at least two key-cards, so where are your losers?

DEAR ABBY

Longtime employee is irked by colleagues' work ethics

Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I am almost 62 and struggling to get through the day at work. It's not because of the work itself, but I am extremely unhappy in the work environment.

I have been here more than 20 years, and I have a real problem with the work ethic of the younger employees. They come in to work anywhere from a half-hour to two hours late. One of them takes hourlong breaks, two-hour lunches and then leaves early. Another comes to work and complains nonstop about her drive, her ex and all her aches and pains. (She just turned 40.) I go home every night frustrated and so stressed out I snap at my poor husband.

I really want to retire. It wouldn't be a financial burden, although we would have to cut back on a little spending. My husband won't offer an opinion, but I know I'd be much happier and healthier if I did. Any advice? — STRESSED AND TIRED

DEAR STRESSED: You might be happier and healthier if, rather than retire early, you talked to a licensed mental health professional about how to manage your stress. You can't control the behavior (or misbehavior) of your younger co-workers. That's your boss's responsibility. If their lack of punctuality and poor attendance doesn't bother your employer, you should not be letting it affect you.

And as to the woman who complains about her aches, her pains and her ex — why are you listening to that garbage? You have only a few more years until you reach an age at which you can retire with all the benefits you have earned — and without having to cut back. Please consider what I have said and ride it out.

HOROSCOPES BY HOLIDAY MATHIS

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — New ventures always come with a beat or two of bedlam. The confusion and chaos only add to the fun! So take a breath and head in, expecting that it won't be perfect but it will be an experience.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Obstacles are necessary. Otherwise, there's no game. Catapult over them and you'll build up your strength. Push against them and you'll build stamina. Rub them out and you'll wind up polishing your work to the brilliance of a jewel.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21) — There are those who reach adulthood unscathed; they are the exception, not the rule. Time usually makes its marks. You'll connect with someone over the scars (either inside or outside) that show what you've survived.

CANCER (June 22-July 22) — Avoid people and situations that test your knowledge. It's better to gravitate toward those who like how you think instead. To know is to close your mind to learning. So don't know. Stay curious. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — It's risky to talk to strangers, but you're fearless today, so you'll reach out and expand your circle with an introduction or two. You're a magnet for interesting people.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — You embrace life's lopsided nature. You'll be intrigued by people, ideas and places that seem a little off. Also, you crave novelty these days, so if it doesn't look like anything you've experienced, you'll want to sign up.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Magicians know that children can often figure out tricks that adults don't. Why? They make fewer assumptions. They're more open to randomness. They notice more details. Today you'll be like a child whom no one can trick.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21) — We operate on what we've seen to be true. But sometimes what we've seen is only part of the truth or is actually more of an anomaly. Leave room for doubt. Being wrong happens. Defending wrong — now that's just wrong!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Go mingle in a new place. At the very least, you'll have a fresh experience and story to report. But you're even likelier to find love, friendship, adventure, work or all of the above.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Anyone can give others the benefit of the doubt, but you'll take it into radically generous territory, giving total trust without hesitation. If they have ill intent, they'll go elsewhere; your kindness takes the fun out of the swindle.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Your attention actually makes the other person fascinating. The person was interesting to begin with, but his or her story becomes great because of your unique brand of curiosity.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — You dislike social situations in which you're expected to network, schmooze and sell. You see life as a creative process, not as a series of trophies. Don't worry; many will find your approach appealing. Show up and just be you.

Mosley seeking halfcourt pace

Mosley's Ja'mya Broglen dribbles upcourt against pressure from a Godby defender in the Dolphins' region quarterfinal win. [JOSHUA BOUCHER/THE NEWS HERALD]

By Pat McCann
The News Herald

LYNN HAVEN — The girls basketball programs at Mosley and Rickards provide an intriguing matchup tonight at 6 p.m. in the Jim Redfern Gymnasium.

The visiting Raiders are 22-6 and accustomed to playing into late February with a frenetic style that uses all 86 feet baseline to baseline.

Host Mosley comes in 19-5 and can embrace that same fullcourt pressure philosophy, depending on the opponent.

Against Rickards, which can go much deeper into its bench than the Dolphins, coach Jon Mason said Mosley must pick its spots.

Tipoff is 6 p.m., the winner advancing to meet the Bishop Kenny-Ribault winner for the Region 1-6A title on Friday. Area 1A schools Port St. Joe and Holmes County both will be playing on the road tonight for region championships.

"With them playing as many people as they play, we have to make it a halfcourt game," Mason said of Rickards. "We cannot run for the entire 32 minutes.

"When we played Choctaw early on and were able to beat them we pressed in certain spots and made it a halfcourt game at times. These teams are very similar."

While the Dolphins are a guard-oriented team with Ladaizha Taylor the main inside threat, Rickards offers some balanced size, and Mason said power forward Trimiria Riles has a good mid-range jumpshot.

Guard Tamia Riles, however, is the Raiders' catalyst and guard Denia Love a 3-point threat, the pair combining to shoot 40 percent from 3-point range.

US women back in gold medal game

By Teresa M. Walker
The Associated Press

GANGNEUNG, South Korea — The Americans played their way back into the only women's hockey game that matters: a showdown with Canada for the Olympic gold medal.

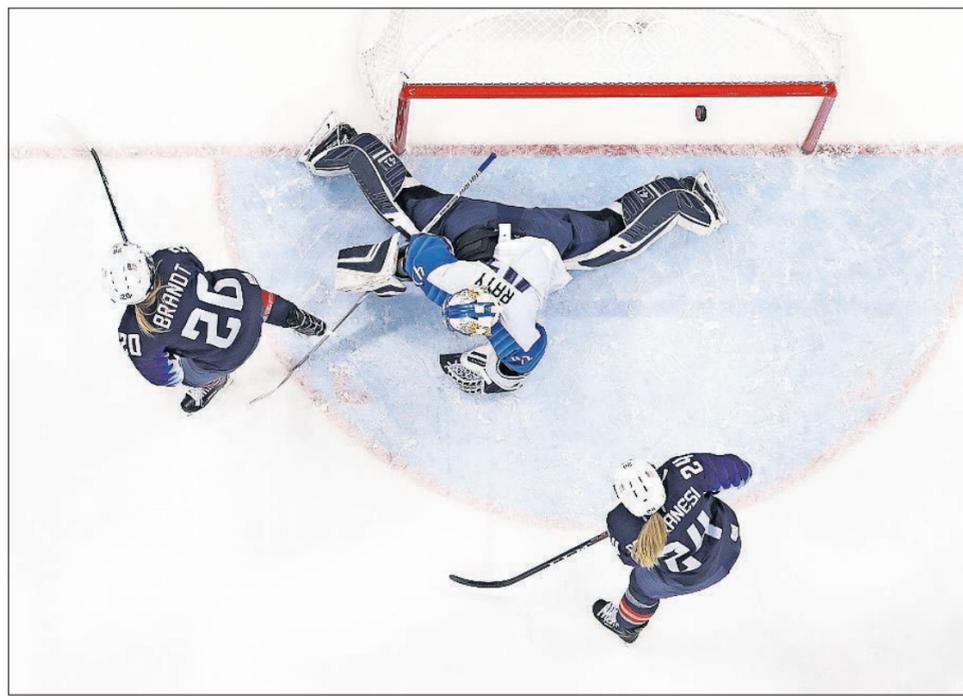

The Americans are back in the title game for a third straight Olympics after shutting out Finland 5-0 on Monday in the semifinals. They will face their archrival on Thursday, and the Americans will be trying to win their first gold since 1998 when women's hockey made its debut in the Olympics.

And yes, the Americans understand the United States-Canada playing for gold is what everyone expects to see.

"Definitely the rivalry has been there since I think I was born, so everyone's looking forward to that," said 22-year-old Dani Cameranesi.

This will be the third opportunity at gold for six Americans: captain Meghan Duggan, Hilary Knight, Gigi Marvin, Kacey Bellamy and twin sisters Monique Lamoureux-Morando and Jocelyne Lamoureux-Davidson.

"It's honestly a dream come true," Knight said. "This is the world's biggest stage. This is the game that you want. This is the game we've been dreaming of and to have another opportunity to get back here, it's huge."

The puck shot by Jocelyne Lamoureux-Davidson, of the United States, sails past goalie Noora Raty (41), of Finland, for a goal during the second period of Monday's game at the 2018 Winter Olympics in Gangneung, South Korea. [MATT SLOCUM/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Canada is the four-time Olympic champion and has won the last five games against the U.S. The Canadians know a battle is likely.

"You never know what you're going to get," said Jennifer Wakefield, who scored twice in Canada's 5-0 semifinal win over the Russian team. "It's going to be heated. You're going to see a lot of good skill working. It's best on best and that's what the Olympics are for."

Olympic newcomer Cameranesi scored two goals and added an assist to lead the Americans past Finland. Marvin started the scoring, and Lamoureux-Davidson and Knight both scored during a 5-on-3 34 seconds apart in the second period. Maddie Rooney made 14 saves for the shutout.

Finland remains winless in eight games against the Americans at the Olympics. The Finns, ranked third in the world last year, will try to take home the bronze medal for the first time since 2010.

"We're got one thing on our mind, and that's to get a medal," said goaltender Noora Raty, who made 33 saves. "They're the best in the world (U.S. and Canada). We just need to get more girls involved so we have more to choose from."

NASCAR's youth movement might be good for business

By Jenna Fryer
The Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH — Daytona Day was nothing short of a rousing success for NASCAR, which was able to celebrate both its storied past and youthful future on its biggest stage.

The Daytona 500 is the most important event of the year for NASCAR. With Austin Dillon's victory in the famed No. 3 and Bubba Wallace's history-making, second-place finish, NASCAR got perhaps its most promising glimpse to date of the next generation.

Dillon wrecked Aric Almirola on the final lap in overtime at Daytona International Speedway to drive the car owned by his grandfather, Richard Childress, back into victory lane 17 years to the day that Dale Earnhardt was killed in an accident on the final lap of the season opener. It came 20 years after Earnhardt's only Daytona 500 victory, and in just the fifth appearance for the No. 3 in "The Great American Race" since Earnhardt's death.

MOSLEY

"She's what makes them go," Mason said of Tamia Riles. "From what I hear, she's committed to TCC. She can shoot it, handle it, make plays for other people."

"She paces the game for them. You can't really speed her up."

Tamia Riles averages 20.4 points per game and 5-foot junior guard Ivania Woodfaulk produces 10.4 with Love adding 8.5.

Mosley is led in scoring by senior guard J'Tayvia Holley.

Otherwise, the Dolphins have a very young roster with just one senior and only two juniors getting extensive playing time in Taylor and Jayde Johnson.

Despite his team's youth, Mason said the Dolphins can play varied styles and play them effectively.

"Our top six, seven players have a good IQ for the game," Mason said. "They take things I throw at them and can adapt to changing game plans."

"When it's beneficial they can play fast, but I think we can slow down the game as well."

With his team's No. 1 virtue possibly its ability to adjust on the fly, Mason is confident the Dolphins will be prepared.

"I just think it's about taking good shots and having good possessions," Mason said. "Against Godby (region quarterfinal) we turned the ball over quite a few times. We can't do that against a team as dangerous as this one."

"More than anything, we have to pick our spots when we're going to press, when we're going to push the ball. If we can handle pressure early on we can make it a halfcourt game. We have to be disciplined, and we can't afford foul trouble."

Region 1-1A

Holmes County is 27-1, with two of those wins coming in competitive games — 54-51 and 59-51 — against Paxton, 22-6. The outcome of the third meeting in Paxton decides which team gets a trip to Lakeland.

The Blue Devils are led by senior guard Laura Jones, who tops the area with a 21.3 scoring average. Holmes County averages just a shade under 60 points as a team, however, and has other capable scoring options.

Kinzie Nelson, a 5-11 sophomore, averages 9.8 points and 7.6 rebounds. Akiela Farrow, a 5-10 freshman, adds 8.6 ppg and 7.2 rpg, junior Rhianna Goodwin is at 7.8, 6.4 and 6-foot sophomore Cheyenne Glass 6.8, 5.2

Region 2-1A

Port St. Joe, 26-2, has yet to have an outcome closer than 32 points since it hosted its district tournament. The Tiger Sharks resultantly have advanced within one triumph of returning to the final four after a one-year absence.

Their unquestioned leader is senior guard Teiyahna Hutchinson, who has signed with Gulf Coast. Hutchinson averages 17.3 points, 7.2 rebounds, 4-7 assists and 5.2 steals.

There are two team statistics that make even those numbers pale. The Tiger Sharks average 20.3 steals per game, and have held 12 opponents under 20 points while yielding only 23.9 per game.

Baker, 17-4, counters with balanced size and an experienced roster boasting six seniors.

Schedule

Region 1-6A semifinals: Rickards at Mosley 6 p.m., Ribault at Bishop Kenny 6 p.m.

Region 1-1A final: Holmes County at Paxton 7 p.m.

Region 2-1A final: Port St. Joe at Baker 7 p.m.

Dillon and much of his Richard Childress Racing crew celebrated into the wee hours Monday by getting tattoos, permanent ones, on their buttocks.

Wallace, driving the iconic No. 43 for Richard Petty, was the first black driver in the Daytona 500 field since 1969. His finish was the highest of any black driver ever in the 500. Wendell Scott was 13th in 1966.

Wallace has rocketed to fame in the past month and won new fans following an emotional, post-race scene that included a long, tearful embrace with his mother that symbolized the struggles Wallace has faced on the road to NASCAR's top series.

Baseball Hall of Famer Hank Aaron called him before the Daytona 500, and Lewis Hamilton tweeted he would be cheering for Wallace.

MLB imposes stricter mound limits

By Ronald Blum
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Major League Baseball has imposed stricter limits on mound visits by players in an effort to speed games but decided against 20-second pitch clocks for 2018.

After more than a year of negotiations, the Major League Baseball Players Association refused to agree to the changes but also signed an agreement that it will not oppose the rules.

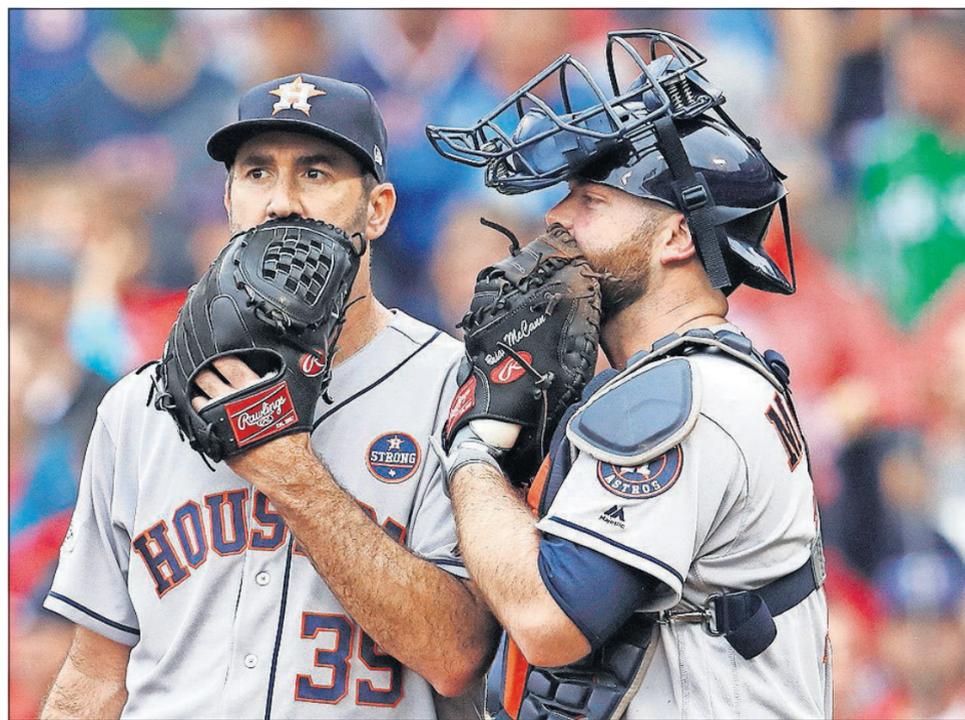

The amendments to the playing rules announced Monday include a general limit of six mound visits per nine-inning game without a pitching change, whether by a manager, coach or player.

“We’ll have to just figure out a more non-verbal method of communication,” Chicago Cubs manager Joe Maddon said. “We’re not going to be texting, I promise you that, even if we could.”

Detroit catcher James McCann objected.

“Some people may say that a catcher visiting with the pitcher isn’t a big deal,” he said, “but what if you’ve already had five mound visits and you got your closer on the mound in the ninth inning, and you’re facing the three and four hitters with guys on second and third, bases loaded? You can’t go out and talk to him?”

To assuage players’ concerns about sign stealing, MLB will install new telephone lines from dugouts to video replay rooms. MLB said the lines will be monitored, and a person familiar with the decision told The Associated Press all conversations on the lines will be recorded. The person spoke on condition of anonymity because that detail was not announced.

“If you’re really like stealing signs from up top with the video and transmitting them somehow in that nanosecond you’d be more concerned,” Maddon said. “Otherwise, it’ll just be entertaining. You don’t even have to do that, you could run up and down the tunnel.”

MLB has the right to make playing rules changes absent an agreement with one year notice and made proposals during the 2016-17 off-season for a pitch clock and more restrictions on mound visits.

“My strong preference is to continue to have ongoing dialogue with players on this topic to find mutually acceptable solutions,” Commissioner Rob Manfred said in a statement.

Union head Tony Clark noted the sides technically did not reach a deal.

“The focus on mound visits and/or the level of commitment on the other pieces simply didn’t focus enough attention on the areas the players wanted to address — so no agreement was reached,” he said in an email to the AP.

“While a number of pitchers will acknowledge that some mound visits are unnecessary, a limitation combined with what the experience has been of late in regard to technologically enhanced sign stealing means that there are concerns about how this will work ... or not work.”

Until now, the only restriction on mound visits was a second visit to the same pitcher during an inning by a manager or coach resulted in an automatic pitching change. The number of visits by catchers during games has increased in recent years, contributing to the average time of a nine-inning game stretching to a record 3 hours, 5 minutes last season, up from 2:46 in 2005.

Under the new rule, each team would get an additional mound visit without a pitching change for each extra inning. Trips will not count against the limit following an offensive substitution, to check on potential injuries or to clean spikes on wet fields. If a team is out of visits, the plate umpire may give permission for additional trips by the catcher in the event of a cross-up on pitch signals.

MLB is eliminating the rules guaranteeing eight warmup pitches before a half-inning in an effort to keep between-inning breaks to 2:05 for most games, 2:25 for regular-season games on national television and 2:55 for tiebreaker and postseason games. There are exceptions relating to injury and if the pitcher or catcher finishes the previous half inning on base, at bat or on deck.

Last year, a system of fines was not enforced until a player was 20 seconds over the inning-break limit. Players have been fined for pace violations in each of the last three seasons, but individual names have not been made public.

Poll: Virginia stays at No. 1; Duke in fifth

By Aaron Beard
The Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — Virginia strengthened its hold on No. 1 in the AP Top 25 as it coasts to an Atlantic Coast Conference regular-season title, while Duke made a big jump after a pair of impressive wins without its top freshman.

The Cavaliers earned 42 of 65 first-place votes in the poll released Monday. That’s 12 more than last week, when they reached No. 1 for the first time since the Ralph Sampson era.

The top four remained unchanged, with No. 2 Michigan State earning 19 first-place votes after rallying from 27 down to beat Northwestern. Third-ranked Villanova got the other four first-place votes after winning at No. 4 Xavier. And Duke jumped seven spots to No. 5 after beating Virginia Tech and Clemson despite playing without Marvin Bagley, the ACC’s scoring and rebounding leader who is recovering from a knee sprain.

Virginia (24-2, 13-1 ACC) long ago took the drama out of the ACC race with a 12-0 start and hasn’t played since winning at Miami last Tuesday. The Cavaliers lead second-place Duke by three games in the loss column and own the head-to-head tiebreaker from their win at Cameron Indoor Stadium on Jan. 27, so they can clinch at least a share of the regular-season title and the No. 1 seed for the ACC Tournament in Brooklyn by beating Georgia Tech on Wednesday.

Win that one, and they travel to Pittsburgh — now 0-15 in the league — to claim the regular-season race outright.

“You always start the year and you’re trying to obviously be about the moment, but you want to have a chance to try to win and be a part of ACC regular-season championships,” Virginia coach Tony Bennett said Monday. “With this league and the depth and the amount of games, that would be a tremendous thing to do, so to have that opportunity at this stage with some games left is really good.”

Top 10 changes

It was a tough week at the top of last week’s poll, with seven of the top 10 teams losing at least once, so there was a shuffle Monday.

Texas Tech and Gonzaga were tied for No. 6, with the Red Raiders inching up a spot and the Bulldogs moving up three. Kansas jumped five spots to No. 8 after beating West Virginia, followed by Purdue (which slid three spots) and North Carolina — which has won five straight and climbed four spots to No. 10.

Milestone

Middle Tennessee checked in at No. 24, marking the first AP Top 25 poll appearance in program history.

Top risers

While Duke had the biggest jump of the week, No. 13 Wichita State moved up six spots after beating Virginia and then-No. 5 Cincinnati. No. 17 Michigan joined Kansas in making a five-spot move after wins against Iowa and then-No. 8 Ohio State.

Bubba Watson trending in right direction

By Doug Ferguson
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Bubba Watson says he was contemplating retirement.

The two-time Masters champion had gone two years without winning. He fell out of the top 100 in the world ranking for the first time in 10 years. He was losing power and losing confidence, and didn’t matter which color golf ball he was using. Worst of all, he was losing weight from an illness he still doesn’t want to talk about.

About all he had were options.

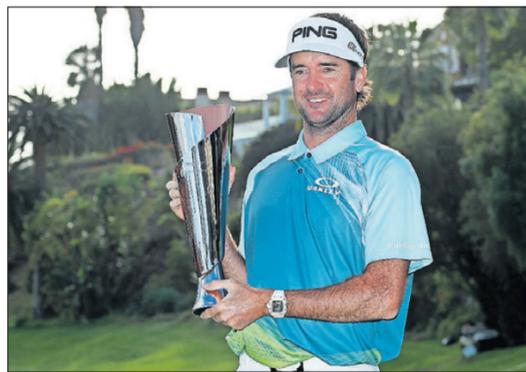

“I have a car dealership, a candy store and a baseball team,” Watson said. “We had something to do.”

He wound up sticking to golf, as if that was never an option. One week at Riviera was a reminder that “Bubba Golf” remains a best seller.

Watson ended his longest drought of the decade — it was two full years since he last won a tournament — with a game perfectly suited for the classic layout off Sunset Boulevard. He shaped shots to the right and to the left, figured out how to make the right putts, holed a bunker shot and closed with a 2-under 69 for a two-shot victory in the Genesis Open that changes his outlook.

“The last year-and-a-half, almost two years give or take, it’s been a struggle because I want to be at the top,” Watson said. “I was top 10 in the world for a few years, and so not being there, you feel like, ‘Is this it? Is this my old man moment where I can’t play golf again?’”

When he won at Riviera for the second time in 2016, Watson was at No. 4 in the world. The following week, he finished one shot behind at the World Golf Championships event at Doral. Over his next 36 starts on the PGA Tour in stroke play, he had two top 10s.

Among the low points was the end of 2016, when he was No. 7 in the world and still didn’t make or was picked for the Ryder Cup team at Hazeltine. Watson still joined the American team as an assistant captain, and loved it so much that he has asked U.S. captain Jim Furyk for the same job in France this year.

He was pestering Furyk about it at Riviera and said the captain told him: “No. You’re too good. You need to be on the team playing.”

Next up for Watson is to see how far this goes.

He spoke Saturday evening, when he had a one-shot lead, about trending in the right direction even if he didn’t win the Genesis Open. The victory is sure to be a jolt of confidence, especially the way he won.

Eight players either had a share of the lead or were within one shot over the final round Sunday. Watson was one shot behind Patrick Cantlay heading to the back nine, which starts with his least favorite hole in golf: No. 10, regarded as one of the best short par 4s in the world. Watson is so befuddled by it that he considers it a par 5 and suggested his 4 felt like a birdie on Sunday.

He was just warming up.

Watson effectively won the tournament over the next four holes. He got up-and-down from a bunker by making a 10-foot birdie putt on the par-5 11th, which was critical because Cantlay had a 20-foot eagle putt. Cantlay missed, Watson made, keeping the deficit at one shot.

WINTER OLYMPICS

A ROUNDUP OF MONDAY'S HIGHLIGHTS /// LOOKING AHEAD TO TUESDAY

What to watch for today

FIGURE SKATING

Women's short program. National champion Bradie Tennell, 2010 Olympian Mirai Nagasu and Karen Chen (fourth at 2017 Worlds) represent the U.S., which last earned a medal in 2006 (Sasha Cohen's silver) and isn't likely to make the podium in PyeongChang.

ALPINE SKIING

Women's downhill. This is what Lindsey Vonn has been waiting for. The U.S. star won it at the 2010 Olympics but wasn't able to defend her title in Sochi because of knee injuries. She captured the last three World Cup downhills heading into the PyeongChang Games.

MONDAY'S SPOTLIGHT

Sharpe soars to gold

Canadian takes top spot in women's freestyle halfpipe; defending champion Bowman falls on each of her three runs

By Will Graves
The Associated Press

PYEONGCHANG, South Korea — Cassie Sharpe put on a show in the women's freestyle halfpipe final on Tuesday, soaring to a 95.80 during her second run to give Canada its first Olympic medal in the event pioneered by the late Canadian star Sarah Burke.

Sharpe topped qualifying on Monday with a pair of big runs and went even higher in the finals. Her winning run included a 1080-degree spin and the kind of air the rest of the 12-woman field simply couldn't match.

France's Marie Martinod added a second silver to go with the one she captured in Sochi four years ago when the sport made its Olympic debut. Martinod scored 92.60 on her second run but fell during her third to assure Sharpe of the gold.

American Brita Sigourney edged teammate Annalisa Drew for bronze. Drew scored 90.80 on her final run to slip past Sigourney only to have Sigourney, the next skier down, put up a 91.80.

Defending Olympic champion Maddie Bowman of the United States fell on the final hit during each of her three runs in the finals.

Burke helped pave the way for halfpipe to reach the Olympics, winning four X Games in the event. She died in 2012 following complications from a training fall in Park City, Utah.

Sharpe is among a group of skiers carrying on Burke's legacy. The group includes Martinod, who was considering retirement before the sport became part of the Olympic program. Burke talked her out of it, saying Martinod needed to help show the world what freestyle halfpipe skiing was all about.

a pair of stylish runs to put pressure on Sharpe. When she bailed midway through her final run, assuring Sharpe of gold, she laughed and raised her hands. She celebrated her second Olympic medal with her 8-year-old daughter.

Sharpe, who raps to herself before each run and wears a mouth guard with a gold tooth

Painted in the middle, talked openly after qualifying about the chance to have a "victory lap" if she knew she had gold in hand before her final run. It happened just as envisioned, though her last trip didn't go down quite like she planned. The 25-year-old washed out halfway through her run, though it hardly mattered.

ROUNDUP

SKI JUMPING

The red handlebar mustache finally has a golden accoutrement. After winning two bronze medals at the Pyeongchang Olympics, Robert Johansson helped Norway win the large hill team ski jumping title. Johansson leapt 136 meters with the final jump as Norway relied on its depth to accrue 1,098.5 points and overwhelm 2014 champion Germany, which finished 22.8 points behind for silver.

SPEEDSKATING

Traditional speedskating

power Norway is back on the top step of the podium at the Pyeongchang Olympics. Havard Lorentzen won the 500-meter gold medal at the Gangneung Oval in an Olympic record time of 34.41 seconds. He beat Cha Min-Kyu of South Korea by 0.01 seconds. Cha, who had equaled the Olympic mark earlier in the final, took silver ahead of 20-year-old Gao Tingyu of China, who finished in 34.65 seconds.

CURLING

A doping charge against curling bronze medalist Alexander Krushelnitsky could keep Russia from being reinstated before the end of the Winter Olympics. IOC spokesman Mark Adams confirmed the positive test and said it could have "consequences" in evaluating the behavior of the Russian team. Russian athletes are participating as "Olympic Athletes from Russia." The IOC suspended the Russian Olympic Committee last year in connection with a massive doping scheme at the 2014 Sochi Olympics but allowed 168 athletes to compete under neutral uniforms and without the national flag.

BIG AIR DEBUTS

The high-flying world of big air snowboarding made its Olympics debut to rave reviews. Competitors took advantage of good weather to put on quite a show. It was a sharp contrast to the games' previous slope-style competition, which was held in treacherous conditions. "Everyone showed their absolute best," said Anna Gasser of Austria, who won the qualifying round and will jump last of the 12 riders in Friday's finals. "And that's what we all needed after slopestyle."

GAMES FACES

US coach: No fear of suspension for women's hockey final

U.S. women's hockey coach Robb Stauber said he doesn't expect captain Meghan Duggan to face disciplinary action that would keep her out of the Olympic gold medal game after a collision in the semifinals that required two people to virtually carry Finland's Ronja Savolainen off the ice. Duggan and the Finnish defenseman banged legs in the faceoff circle near the Finland bench, and Savolainen went crashing face-first into the boards. A couple of teammates gathered around her, the medical staff came out to tend to her and for several minutes the Gangneung Hockey Center remained quiet awaiting a positive sign. Savolainen was eventually helped off, with one person under each arm, her legs dangling almost uselessly beneath her. But she returned in the second period and said after that she had no symptoms more serious than cold legs from being on the ice so long. "I'm OK, so it's good," she said after the Americans won 5-0 to advance to the gold medal game. "I play all the time, no matter what happens." Women's hockey doesn't allow checking like the sport familiar to NHL fans. Duggan was not penalized for the hit, and Stauber said the referee told him it was an unavoidable collision. "She came over right away, the ref came over and said, 'Hey, it's a collision,'" said Stauber, who was unable to see the hit from the bench. "Based on everything they said, it looked like a collision. Two players going hard at a puck. It happens."

THE COVERAGE

Highlights from media coverage of the Pyeongchang Olympics: WARDROBE MALFUNCTION: The Pyeongchang Olympics have had more wardrobe malfunctions than a Super Bowl halftime show, the latest on live television Sunday night when French ice dancer Gabriella Papadakis' costume became unhooked, briefly exposing her left breast. It was obvious to NBC announcers Terry Papand and Tanitha White that Papadakis and partner Guillaume Cizeron directed much of the energy during their routine at trying to keep her costume from flying open. "I'm just heartbroken that this had to be part of their Olympic program," White said. NBC's subsequent online and television replays blurred out portions of the dance where the malfunction was evident. Earlier in the Olympics, South Korean figure skater Yura Min had a similar issue.

NO RIPPON: American figure skater Adam Rippon agreed to become an NBC correspondent for the duration of the Olympics, but then changed his mind overnight. He told NBCSN on Sunday he was flattered by the offer,

"but if I took this opportunity, I would have to leave the Olympic team and I would have to leave the (Olympic) Village." He said his friends on the Olympic team were there for him during his events and he wanted to return the favor. Rippon later echoed those sentiments on Twitter, which is where he said he initially found out about the opportunity. Rippon attracted attention for his colorful and candid interviews, and apparent ease with the medium.

SEALED WITH A KISS: It was a small moment with a big impact. Kudos to NBC for showing American skier Gus Kenworthy getting a kiss from his boyfriend Matt Wilkas. Kenworthy knows what it meant. "I never saw a gay athlete kissing their boyfriend at the Olympics," he said. "I think if I had, it would've made it easier for me."

TRAINING RUN: Devoting extended prime-time coverage to downhill skiing training runs was a miscalculation. Even worse, people involved told you it was meaningless. When NBC's Dan Hicks prompted partner Bode Miller to discuss how the runs give a glimpse into race strategy, Miller said that wasn't necessarily so. Shortly after, NBC's Mike Tirico showed a brief clip of the biathlon photo finish between France's Martin Fourcade and Germany's Simon Schempp, noting it was a 9.3-mile race decided by 5 inches.

TWIZZLE STICKS: Pro move by Gannon, early in his ice dancing work with White. When White said that twizzle elements would be crucial to the routines, Gannon instantly recognized that 95 percent of the audience wouldn't have a clue what that was and asked her to explain.
