Early Spring Break crowds draw ire

Sheriff emphasizes a zero-tolerance policy for law breaking

ST. GEORGE ISLAND — The annual Spring Break crowds have started early at St. George Island and Alligator Point and some residents — including Franklin County Sheriff AJ Smith — are not happy with what they’ve seen.

“It’s just terrible how our visitors have treated our beaches,” Smith said.

Out patrolling Saturday, Smith said he found beaches littered with beer cans and other trash, and heard reports from locals about profanity and unruly behavior. So, ahead of their usual Spring Break time, Smith is getting the message out — visitors should treat the beaches like their home or face the consequences.

“If you come over here and you’re doing any of those things — underage drinking, drinking and driving, speeding, littering, public urination

— there will be no warnings,” Smith said. “There’s going to be citations, notice-to-appears, and arrests.”

Though they normally have a pretty healthy crowd of Spring Break day-trippers, Smith said they normally consider their chili cookoff next weekend as the official kickoff to Spring Break. And while Spring Break behavior has been a hot topic in surrounding counties, Franklin County had usually escaped that debauchery — until now.

“We love crowds,” Smith

SHERIFF DEFENDS LEADERSHIP

The Florida sheriff whose department responded to this month’s high school massacre defended his leadership while insisting that only one of his deputies was on the scene as the gunman killed 14 students and three staff members.

Chronic pain sufferers call for nuanced approach to opioids

By Justine Griffin
 Tampa Bay Times

TAMPA — Will Michele Jacobovitz get out of bed today?

That depends on how many painkillers she has left in her monthly prescription, which sometimes she’s forced to ration. Some mornings are harder than others.

Jacobovitz, 56, has suffered from chronic pain since a 1987 car accident. The Pasco County resident has had 73 surgeries since, from her neck to her ankles, and she has the scars to prove it. In December, she was diagnosed with breast cancer.

She says it’s impossible to function without popping a highly addictive painkiller with Acetaminophen and Oxycodone components, in the morning. Without it, she says, there are days she can’t get up at all. Or get to the bathroom in time. It can be humiliating.

Jacobovitz says she’s not addicted to painkillers, just absolutely dependent on them.

“It comes down to quality of life,” she said. “I’m not using these drugs to get high. I’m using them so I can have some kind of life. So I can get out of bed. They don’t take my pain away. But they mask it so I can function.”

She is one of many Floridians who suffer from chronic pain and are worried about a government crackdown that would make it even harder to get the prescription drugs they need

PC Commission to consider Sonnenblick proposal Tuesday

By Katie Landeck

 klandeck@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY — The Panama City Commission is set to offer their first public comments Tuesday on the proposal Sonnenblick Development delivered on Feb. 15.

The much anticipated Feb. 15 submittal was expected to deliver detailed studies outlining if the shopping center, movie theater, apartments and other elements proposed to revitalize the Downtown Panama City Marina would be able viable.

Instead, the studies were brief, with developer Bob Sonnenblick offering only a few paragraphs on his own analysis of twelve of the components. The studies made no mention of severally hotly contested issues, including the impact of increased traffic and the boat ramp relocation.

As City Attorney Nevin Zimmerman put it Tuesday evening, “There was an expectation of more paperwork.”

Commissioner Jenna Haligas has expressed her dissatisfaction with the studies on Facebook, saying they are not a complete feasibility study. Mayor Greg Brudnicki has also quietly expressed frustration, but for the most part officials have been quiet.

On Friday, the city’s consultants on the project, Owen Beitsch and Laura Smith of Community Solutions Group, submitted a “ cursory” analysis of the proposal for the city to consider.

In their “more conservative” review, the say “it would be fair to say the project as outlined would return substantial receipts to the city over an extended period of time.”

However, the letter, which was sent to City Attorney Nevin Zimmerman as well as Sonnenblick, also says because of the brevity

READER FEEDBACK

The Crestview Police Department thought it would be a great idea to reward safe drivers with free pizza. Many citizens didn't, saying the "Food from the Fuzz" program could become a ruse for police to try to catch people performing illegal activities without reasonable suspicion.

Jacob Walker: "Retired Marine with PTSD. You pull me over and I don't know what I've done wrong... I'm probably going to have a meltdown right there in the car. Keep your pizza and keep the peace, I'll keep my 4th amendment rights thanks. And no I'm not doing anything illegal so you can all keep that "probably guilty" fallacy for yourself."

Cheri Szczekot Bruckner: "Fun!! Please pull me over on Friday afternoons. This is one tired teacher at the end of the week."

Blake Corley: "I find it amazing how many of you are willing to allow this department to violate the 4th amendment to get free pizza."

The designation of U.S. 98 through Bay County as a Strategic Intermodal System corridor means work on the highway can be funded from additional pools of money.

Pat Kern Spruell: "That would be wonderful. Back Beach Rd. needed widening years ago before it became a disaster. I have spoken to locals who no longer go to Pier Park because of the congestion. I, myself, go over the bridge to town when there is a parade or festival at Pier Park. This summer I may be doing the same. Yeah, first us PCB residents complain about going over the bridge because there is nothing here and now that something is here we are complaining about traffic. But as soon as I saw those condos being built I knew we needed a lot more roads. Too bad DOT doesn't act until roads are overcrowded and people are getting killed in wrecks. It takes us about 20 years of proving there is a need with many traffic studies. All it really takes is: there are more residences being built so therefore more people utilizing roads, therefore we need more roads. DUH! Doesn't cost a dime to use common sense."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Feb. 26, the 57th day of 2018. There are 308 days left in the year.

Highlight in History: On Feb. 26, 1993, a truck bomb built by Islamic extremists exploded in the parking garage of the North Tower of New York's World Trade Center, killing six people and injuring more than 1,000 others. (The bomb failed to topple the North Tower into the South Tower, as the terrorists had hoped; both structures were destroyed in the 9/11 attack eight years later.)

On this date: In 1616, astronomer Galileo Galilei met with a Roman Inquisition official, Cardinal Robert Bellarmine, who ordered him to abandon the "heretical" concept of heliocentrism, which held that the Earth revolved around the sun, instead of the other way around.

In 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte escaped from exile on the Island of Elba and headed back to France in a bid to regain power.

In 1904, the United States and Panama proclaimed a treaty under which the U.S. agreed to undertake efforts to build a ship canal across the Panama isthmus.

In 1917, President Woodrow Wilson signed a congressional act establishing Mount McKinley National Park (now Denali National Park) in the Alaska Territory.

In 1919, President Woodrow Wilson signed a congressional act establishing Grand Canyon National Park in Arizona.

In 1929, President Calvin Coolidge signed a measure establishing Grand Teton National Park in Wyoming.

In 1945, authorities ordered a midnight curfew at nightclubs, bars and other places of entertainment across the nation.

In 1952, Prime Minister Winston Churchill announced that Britain had developed its own atomic bomb.

of the submittal it's hard to comment on the "actual integrity" of many of the figures that indicate the project would be successful.

"Absent more detailed studies, we can't really comment on the actual integrity or validity of all the inputs that are the basis for the receipts we calculated," wrote. "For a number of figures we felt were overly optimistic or in error, we made downward adjustments to create a more realistic picture."

But even after adjusting the numbers downward — which included cutting the taxable value of the property in half — they still believed the project had the ability to make money. They also called the receipts Sonnenblick is asking for "fair and reasonable given the nature of what has been described."

Sonnenblick called the review an "excellent analysis" only taking issue with an assessment he thought undervalued the hotel and one that did not fully take into account how the project would share ad valorem taxes generated.

Sonnenblick is asking for a 75 year ground lease, with a sliding scale that allows tenants to pay less in the beginning and more over time. He has also asked for 90 percent of the merchant tax generated by the property for the first 30 years, 95 percent of the ad valorem tax generated by the property for the first 30 years and the ability to leverage his own 1 percent merchant tax in the project's footprint.

He is also asking the city to potentially pay for the parking garages.

The meeting will be at 8 a.m. at 9 Harrison Avenue.

every day.

Gov. Rick Scott has proposed legislation that aims to put a dent in the opioid epidemic by prohibiting doctors from prescribing more than three days' worth of opioids — or seven days if doctors can explain why that's medically necessary.

Under the measure, Florida would share a database of opioid prescriptions with other states and require doctors to routinely check it. Doctors also would be trained on proper prescribing techniques.

"When people think of opioids, they think of addicts and criminals," Jacobovitz said. "That's not us."

She and others fear they're being lumped into that group unfairly. They're part of a chronic pain community that also encompasses many of Florida's seniors, who rely daily on pain medication.

Scott's legislation delves into acute, or short-term, pain. But there's no mention of those who suffer from chronic conditions and rely on daily, long-term use of prescription painkillers.

Bills in the House and Senate are progressing steadily. And despite concern from doctors and chronic pain patients, the three- and seven-day limits on acute pain prescribing are unlikely to change, legislators say.

"I have been set on the three to seven," state Sen. Lizbeth Benacquisto, R-Fort Myers, the Senate sponsor of the bill, said. "That was a very strong position on behalf of the governor."

Federal officials are like their home."

Smith said the Franklin County Sheriff's Office will have a pronounced presence throughout Spring Break and the summer season and that he'll be working his force, made up of about chiming in too.

During an appearance in Tampa, U.S. Attorney General Jeff Sessions touted the Trump administration's efforts to combat the overdose problem, and said doctors prescribe too many opioids.

More people should try aspirin, Sessions said.

"What we're seeing across the country is a reaction to opioid-related deaths, and a myopic focus to decrease access because of those deaths," said Dr. Sarah Wakeman, a physician at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston.

Wakeman is the medical director of the substance use disorders initiative at the hospital and was part of a Massachusetts task force to examine the opioid epidemic.

"What we need is a balanced and nuanced approach," she said. "More people are buying drugs on the illicit market right now because they can't find the opioids they were used to getting, and there's no treatment facilities in their communities. This is different than the people who have reasonable diagnoses."

Policymakers and the public often confuse dependence on a daily medication with addiction, Wakeman said. "We should be ensuring access to the people who are benefiting from opioids because they have a disease that requires treatment."

Jacobovitz has seen countless doctors over the years to help repair her broken body. She moved to Florida to take care of her aging parents a decade ago at a time when her home state of Kentucky was pushing stricter limits on prescription drugs. Similar to Scott's proposal, Kentucky has a limit of 30 sworn law enforcement, overtime to act as a deterrent. And anyone breaking the law faces the possibility of being pulled over by Smith himself, who was putting in extra work stopping cars and writing tickets around three days for opioid prescriptions.

"The number of pain management doctors in the entire state dropped to five," Jacobovitz said. "It was impossible to get help."

She fears she'll have to leave Florida if the current legislation passes. "I don't know what I'll do," she said.

What's clear is that politicians and advocates feel the need to do something about the pain pill addiction that's sweeping the country. It's led to spiking use of cocaine, heroin, drugs illegally laced with fentanyl, and ultimately more overdose deaths. The opioid epidemic killed nearly 15 people a day in Florida in 2016 and even more in 2017.

Jacobovitz knows this. She's had her own prescriptions stolen and seen family members suffer with addiction.

"There's no clear answer here how to handle it," she says. "I know there are addicts out there. I've tried to help some of them, like my niece."

Jacobovitz is one of three local residents interviewed recently by the Tampa Bay Times who suffer from chronic pain and fear that new laws will create barriers to the treatment they need. Here are their stories:

the beaches.

"When the public sees us out there it has an impact," he said.

Also acting as a deterrent Smith said he will be using the department's Facebook page to publicize Spring Break arrests

Meiselman spent the holidays alone in her Port Richey condominium suffering withdrawal from painkillers. Her prescription fentanyl patches are meant to be placed on skin, but she chews the used ones before tossing them in the trash, to get the remaining traces into her system.

Meiselman, 74, has suffered from chronic pain for more than a decade. Intense back pain led to other diagnosed ailments, like narcolepsy and persistent migraines. It's the painkillers — fentanyl and an Oxycodone prescription — that help her stay mobile enough to walk her service dog, Lucy, three times a day or get in the car to drive to her doctors' appointments.

Framed portraits and canvases in Meiselman's living room showcase her artistic abilities from years ago, before the pain crippled her ability to paint.

Increasing tolerance to her medications led to higher dosages. But a new pain management doctor she sees in Tampa recently prescribed a much lower dose of fentanyl patches, which was part of what sent her body into withdrawal.

"My last prescription for Oxycodone ran out Dec. 16, and I've been dealing with this ever since."

Meiselman's previous pain management physician dismissed her from the hopes of getting the zero-tolerance message out there.

"If you don't want to see your picture on our Facebook or on our blog, don't come out here and commit any crimes," Smith said.

his practice in October after she pleaded with him to try options other than the strong opiates she was taking, she said. She started seeing a new pain physician in December.

Meiselman is also being treated for an immune disorder, and recently discovered a lump in her pelvis which is being examined by an oncologist.

She says someone suffering from terminal cancer can find an oncologist who is willing to prescribe the appropriate, strong medications to make "day-to-day living somewhat tolerable, (but) if you are suffering from something undiagnosed but still extremely painful, the whole story concerning the opioid epidemic is your worst nightmare coming true."

She recently bought marijuana CBD oil and a natural supplement called Kratom online to kick the withdrawal symptoms. Meiselman says they help, but don't take all the dizziness or nausea away. She's not registered as a medical marijuana patient in the state because of the hassle it would take to see yet another doctor to get it.

"It's expensive, too," said Meiselman, whose medical bills have been paid on and off by Medicare and Medicaid. Her insurance doesn't cover any cost of the supplements, but helps with the pain prescriptions.

Trade center bomb echoes after 25 years

By Jennifer Peltz
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — In a room in the 9/11 museum, there are a police captain's poignant notes and a flashlight that illuminated the way to safety. Nearby, a letter from a trapped man tells his family, "I love you very much.... Do wonderful things in your life."

The artifacts aren't from Sept. 11, 2001. They are reminders of a terror attack that foreshadowed it: the deadly World Trade Center bombing, 25 years ago Monday.

That shadow fell personally on Lolita Jackson. As a young finance worker, she picked her way down 72 flights of blacked-out stairs on Feb. 26, 1993, and fled the trade center's south tower again in 2001.

The bombing "tends to be forgotten because 9/11 was such a cataclysmic event," she says, but the blast has its own place in the lives and memories of an estimated 50,000 people who were in the twin towers that snowy afternoon.

The explosion killed six people, injured over 1,000, manifested the growing terror threat from Islamic extremism and led to safety improvements credited with helping some people survive Sept. 11.

It "was, in many respects, a precursor to 9/11," says museum President Alice Greenwald.

The names of the six people who died in the Feb. 26, 1993 truck bomb attack at the World Trade Center are inscribed in the bronze border of the north reflecting pool of the National September 11 Memorial in New York. It was a terror attack that foreshadowed Sept. 11: the deadly World Trade Center bombing that happened 25 years ago Monday. (RICHARD DREW/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)

A bomb exploded in a rented van in a basement parking garage shortly after noon, causing a crater several stories deep and a boom felt many floors above.

The blast killed visitor John DiGiovanni and five people who worked at the trade center — Robert Kirkpatrick, Stephen Knapp, William Macko, Wilfredo Mercado and Monica Rodriguez Smith. Smith was pregnant.

Power was knocked out and pipes were severed, flooding backup generators. Elevators got stuck. A group of kindergartners was stranded for hours on an observation deck. Other people were trapped in the debris-filled garage. Police helicopters plucked nearly two dozen people, some disabled, from rooftops.

Some office workers broke out windows to try to clear smoke while awaiting help. Others made their way down, emerging coated in soot.

Jackson didn't feel fearful at first. What was terrifying was the 2 1/2-hour trek down the pitch-dark, crowded, smoky stairs, wondering what she would see at the bottom.

"You didn't know what was going to happen," recalls Jackson, who now works in city government.

Alone in a stalled elevator with smoke wafting in and no idea why, trade center worker Carl Selinger began to think he might not get out alive. So Selinger wrote a letter to his wife and children and waited. He was rescued after 5 1/2 hours.

"I dealt with what I had to deal with," Selinger said at a recent discussion at the Sept. 11 museum.

Within days, a fragment of the rented van began leading investigators to Muslim extremists who sought to punish the United States for its Middle East policies, especially its aid to Israel, according to prosecutors.

As they pursued that case and learned about another plot to bomb New York City landmarks, then-Manhattan U.S. Attorney Mary Jo White "saw red lights blinking everywhere about how serious I thought this threat was from international terrorists," she told an audience Thursday at the museum.

Indeed, a letter found on an accused bombing conspirator's laptop made it chillingly clear the threat wasn't over.

"Unfortunately, our calculations were not very accurate this time. However, we promise you that next time it will be very precise and the World Trade Center will continue to be one of our targets," it said.

Six bombing suspects were convicted and sentenced, including accused mastermind Ramzi Yousef — a nephew of Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, who would later become the self-professed architect of 9/11. A seventh bombing suspect, Abdul Rahman Yasin, remains at large and is on the FBI's list of most wanted terrorists.

After the bombing, the government-run trade center banned underground parking, installed battery-operated lights in stairwells and added security cameras, among other safety upgrades.

Powerful quake rattles homes, gold mine in Papua New Guinea

A powerful earthquake rattled forest villages and a large gold mine in central Papua New Guinea early Monday, but there were no immediate reports of injuries.

Officials were waiting for more information about damage from the magnitude-7.5 quake that hit about 89 kilometers (55 miles) southwest of Porgera in the Pacific Island nation.

Chris McKee, acting director of geohazards management for the Papua New Guinea government, said tens of thousands of people live in the forested highlands region affected by the quake.

"There seem to be quite a few reports of the quake being felt strongly," he said.

Louisiana rapper YoungBoy arrested in Florida as fugitive

A 19-year-old Louisiana rapper has been arrested in Florida on a fugitive warrant from Georgia.

Leon County Sheriff's Office records show Kentrell DeSean Gauden known by his fans for his artist name YoungBoy Never Broke Again was booked into custody Sunday in Tallahassee. The report says Gauden fled from justice in Waycross, Georgia, near the Florida state line. A spokesman for the sheriff's office did not immediately respond to inquiries about the charges he faces.

YoungBoy has lately seen success with singles such as "Outside Today" and "No Smoke," which have appeared on the Billboard Hot 100 singles chart.

Man linked to art heist faces sentencing in weapons case

A reputed mobster who authorities believe is the last surviving person of interest in the largest art heist in history is facing sentencing in an unrelated weapons case.

Eighty-one-year-old Robert Gentile is set to be sentenced Tuesday in federal court in Hartford, Connecticut.

Federal prosecutors have said they believe the Manchester resident has information about the still-unsolved 1990 heist at the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum in Boston. Thieves stole an estimated $500 million worth of artwork, including works by Rembrandt and Johannes Vermeer.

Gentile has denied knowing anything about the caper.

Ohio moves to add Wright flyer to state seal amid dispute

Ohio is staking another public claim to the Wright brothers' legacy amid a dispute with Connecticut over an aviator that state says flew first.

The Ohio Senate took up legislation Tuesday that would add the Wright flyer to Ohio's state seal and coat of arms. The bill cleared the Ohio House Feb. 14.

Republican Rep. Rick Perales earlier spearheaded a resolution rejecting Connecticut's claim that aviator Gustave Whitehead flew the "first manned, controlled flight of a powered, heavier-than-air aircraft" on Aug. 14, 1901. That's two years before the Wrights' historic 1903 flight at Kitty Hawk, North Carolina.

George Harrison remembered by fellow Beatle on birthday

Paul McCartney and George Harrison's widow and son have publicly remembered the late Beatle on what would have been his 75th birthday.

"Happy Birthday George. Wonderful memories," McCartney tweeted Sunday along with a black and white photograph of the two of them taken during the Beatlemania days.

Harrison died of cancer in 2001 at age 58.

McCartney and Ringo Starr are the only surviving members of the English band that rocketed to global fame in the 1960s.

John Lennon was shot to death in 1980.

Students return to Florida school where 17 were killed

By Terry Spencer
The Associated Press

PARKLAND, Fla. — Students at a Florida high school where 17 of their classmates and staff members were killed returned Sunday to gather their belongings thrown down in panic during the school shooting nearly two weeks ago.

Thousands of students joined their parents in walking past the three-story building at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School where the Feb. 14 massacre took place. It is now cordoned off by a chain link fence that was covered with banners from other schools showing their support.

"Just seeing the building was scary," freshman Francesca Lozano said as she exited the school with her mom. Still, she was happy to see her friends. "That made it a lot better."

Seventeen people dressed in white costumes as angels stood by a makeshift memorial outside the school. Organizer Terry Decarlo said they try to go to every mass shooting and disaster so the survivors "know angels are looking over them and protecting them."

The school reopens Wednesday and administrators said families would get phone calls about details later. Sunday was a day to ease into the return.

"Two of my best friends aren't here anymore," said freshman Sammy Cooper, who picked up the book bag he had dropped as he saw the accused gunman, 19-year-old Nikolas Cruz, begin shooting. "But I'm definitely going to school Wednesday. I will handle it."

Junior Sebastian Pena said the gathering was a chance to see friends and his teachers, and to "come together as a family."

Earlier Sunday, Florida Gov. Rick Scott's office said he had asked Florida Department of Law Enforcement Commissioner Rick Swearingen to investigate the law enforcement response to the shooting. The agency confirmed it would start the investigation immediately.

Broward County Sheriff Scott Israel has come under withering scrutiny after the revelation last week that deputy Scot Peterson who was on the scene did not go in to confront Cruz during the attack. It is also facing backlash for apparently mishandling some of the 18 tipster calls related to the suspected shooter.

The tips were among a series of what authorities now describe as the clearest missed warning signs that Cruz, who had a history of disturbing behavior, posed a serious threat.

Israel defended his leadership Sunday and said investigators were looking into claims that three other deputies were on the scene but failed to enter the school when the chance to save lives still existed. To date, the investigation has pointed to only one deputy being on campus while the killer was present, he told CNN.

Israel also labeled as "absolutely untrue" reports that the deputies waited outside even though children were inside the building needing urgent medical treatment.

State Rep. Bill Hager, a Republican lawmaker from Boca Raton, has called on Scott to remove Israel from office because of the missed red flags.

Israel vowed not to resign, saying Hager's letter "was full of misinformation" and "shameful, politically motivated."

House Speaker Richard Corcoran stepped up the pressure Sunday, calling on Scott to suspend the sheriff.

"In the years leading up to this unspeakable tragedy, Sheriff Israel, his deputies, and staff ignored repeated warning signs about the violent, erratic, threatening and antisocial behavior of Nikolas Jacob Cruz," Corcoran said in a letter signed by more than 70 lawmakers.

Israel insisted that lapses were being investigated. He told CNN that a deputy who responded to a Nov. 30 call referring to Cruz as a "school shooter in the making" was being investigated by internal affairs for not filing a report and had been placed on restrictive duty.

"There needed to be a report. And that's what we are looking into—that a report needed to be completed, it needed to be forwarded to either Homeland Security or a violent crimes unit," Israel said.

The FBI has acknowledged that it failed to investigate the tip about Cruz that the agency received on Jan. 5.

Congress has ideas on gun violence, but no consensus

By Lisa Mascaro
and Matthew Daly
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — After a 10-day break, members of Congress are returning to work under hefty pressure to respond to the outcry over gun violence. But no plan appears ready to take off despite a long list of proposals, including many from President Donald Trump.

Republican leaders have kept quiet for days as Trump tossed out ideas, including raising the minimum age to purchase assault-style weapons and arming teachers, though on Saturday the president tweeted that the latter was "Up to states."

Their silence has left little indication whether they are ready to rally their ranks behind any one of the president's ideas, dust off another proposal or do nothing. The most likely legislative option is bolstering the federal background check system for gun purchases, but it's bogged down after being linked with a less popular measure to expand gun rights.

The halting start reflects firm GOP opposition to any bill that would curb access to guns and risk antagonizing gun advocates in their party. Before the Feb. 14 shooting at a high school in Parkland, Florida, that killed 17 people, Republicans had no intention of reviving the polarizing and politically risky gun debate during an already difficult election year that could endanger their congressional majority.

"There's no magic bill that's going to stop the next thing from happening when so many laws are already on the books that weren't being enforced, that were broken," said Rep. Steve Scalise, R-La., the third-ranking House GOP leader, when asked about solutions. "The breakdowns that happen, this is what drives people nuts," said Scalise, who suffered life-threatening injuries when a gunman opened fire on lawmakers' baseball team practice last year.

Under tough public questioning from shooting survivors, Trump has set high expectations for action.

"I think we're going to have a great bill put forward very soon having to do with background checks, having to do with getting rid of certain things and keeping other things, and perhaps we'll do something on age," Trump said in a Fox News Channel interview Saturday night. He added: "We are drawing up strong legislation right now having to do with background checks, mental illness. I think you will have tremendous support. It's time. It's time."

Trump's early ideas were met with mixed reactions from his party. His talk of allowing teachers to carry concealed weapons into classrooms was rejected by at least one Republican, Florida Sen. Marco Rubio. House Speaker Paul Ryan, R-Wis., and Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., both spoke to Trump on Friday. Their offices declined comment on the conversations or legislative strategy.

Some Republicans backed up Trump's apparent endorsement of raising the age minimum for buying some weapons.

Sen. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., said he would support raising the age limit to buy a semi-automatic weapon like the one used in Florida. Rubio also supports lifting the age for rifle purchases. Rep. Brian Mast, R-Fla., a longtime NRA member, wrote in The New York Times that he now supports an assault-weapons ban.

Bezos chosen but never joined Defense Innovation Board

Christian Davenport and Dan Lamothe
The Washington Post

The list of luminaries selected for the Defense Innovation Board, an advisory council designed to help the Defense Department become more technologically adept and efficient, included some of the country's most distinguished entrepreneurs, thinkers and innovators.

There was Eric Schmidt, the executive chairman of Alphabet, Neil deGrasse Tyson, the celebrated astrophysicist and Marne Levine, the chief operating officer of Instagram. There was also Jeff Bezos, the billionaire founder of Amazon.com and owner of The Washington Post. But Bezos never officially joined the board, the Pentagon has acknowledged for the first time in response to questions from The Post. An occasional target of President Donald Trump's tweets, the Amazon chief executive faced questions about his company's business ties to the government and his need to apply for a security clearance.

"Due to the Board's travel schedule and unique approach to its work, and the variety of security, legal, and ethical obligations of serving on a federal advisory committee, both parties mutually agreed to have Mr. Bezos provide individual advice to the Secretary of Defense, rather than continue to pursue his formal nomination to the board," Pentagon spokesman Navy Cmdr. Patrick Evans said in a statement. Bezos, through a spokesman, declined to comment.

Bezos was invited to join the board during the latter stages of the Obama administration by then-Defense Secretary Ashton Carter, who expressed little concern about whether Bezos received a security clearance, according to a Pentagon official, who spoke on the condition of anonymity to discuss internal deliberations. Bezos' participation without a clearance would have limited what he could see, but Carter at the time saw the innovation board as focusing in part on issues that would not necessarily require one, such as improving the Pentagon's business processes. Carter declined comment through a former Pentagon associate.

But when Jim Mattis became defense secretary in the Trump administration, those selected for the board were asked to submit paperwork to gain a security clearance. Given Bezos' wealth, business interests and holdings, getting a clearance likely would have been an arduous process. Also complicating the matter were concerns over the appearance of a conflict of interest.

School threats no joking matter

There are times teenagers astonish us with their dignity, grace and intelligence. And then there are times they leave us shaking our heads.

Over the last two weeks, there have been plenty of examples in both categories. A student in Port Orange commemorated Valentine's Day with more than 3,000 hand-written, heart-shaped notes taped to the lockers of her fellow students.

But that same day, a horrific shooting at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland sparked behavior too disturbing — and puzzling — to ignore.

As of Friday, four Bay District Schools students had been arrested in as many days for making threats. Three went to local high schools — Rosenwald, Bay and Arnold High schools — and one went to Jinks Middle School. One student even had "several" firearms in their possession, according to law enforcement.

Officials must take these statements seriously, and schools and parents must work overtime to make sure the message is clear: School violence is not a joking matter, nor is this a time for crass, thoughtless attention-seeking. But in some cases, arrests seem like an overreaction. A knee-jerk zero-tolerance crackdown is likely to catch a lot of stupid hey-look-at-me behavior but it's unlikely to make schools safer. Schools and law enforcement can catch dozens of students cracking jokes about shooting up their schools, and still miss the warning signs of students who are seriously suffering — or actually contemplating violence. Even worse, those disturbed teens who are really considering self-harm, or bringing a gun to school, will be far less likely to do anything to tip authorities off about their plans.

Some might consider the trade-off worth it. And they'd have a valid argument — if decades of zero tolerance since the 1999 shootings at Columbine High School in Colorado had produced measurably safer schools. Instead, school shootings (virtually unheard of before Columbine) have become familiar — though no less terrifying and heartbreaking.

That doesn't mean school officials and law enforcement should laugh off potential threats as "kids being kids." It does mean each potentially disturbing statement should be looked at in context. It may be challenging, at times, to sort the truly dangerous behavior from teenaged braggadocio, but school officials and law enforcement can check to see if students have ready access to firearms, or a history of erratic behavior that goes beyond a propensity for ill-timed jokes.

In the meantime, State Attorney R.J. Larizza and local juvenile-justice authorities should view any potential criminal charges with a stern eye, ensuring that the powerful and life-altering consequences of a criminal history don't spoil the futures of students who are only guilty of running their mouths. And Larizza should work with local law enforcement and school officials on better criteria to evaluate potentially threatening behavior.

Trump delivers a 'nasty' budget

Jim Hightower

From the start of his White House tenure, the Trumpsters have plotted, stalked and serially killed vibrant genre of satire.

This powerful noun embodied the use of sarcasm and ridicule to expose the vanity and vice of public figures, but Trump himself killed satire by starving it of any meaning. How can anyone satirize a presidency that is, in reality, nothing but a fully-staged satire of vanity and vice? Satire involves exaggerating the flaws, mannerisms, oddities, etc. of various characters to convey how corrupt and contemptible they are — but it's impossible to exaggerate the awfulness of an administration that gleefully flaunts its awfulness every day.

Take Trump's proposed budget... it's a nasty piece of work. For example, it would intentionally increase poverty and hunger across our country. It would slash programs providing essential food, housing, and even heating assistance for about 50 million Americans — mostly children, old folks, poverty-wage worker, and disabled people. Then there are the vital Medicare and Medicaid programs that most working class Americans count on. Candidate Trump promised us that "there will be no cuts" in funding for these programs. But now he has sent his budget to us, featuring — guess what? — hundreds of billions of dollars in cuts to Medicare and Medicaid. Not only has his cynicism killed satire, but his cynical health care cuts could kill you.

Presidential budgets aren't just numbers, they're statements of a president's moral principles. No work of satire could ridicule Trump's morality as effectively as his own budget does.

Even Charles Dickens, the masterful satirist of Victorian English elites, couldn't have imagined using a box of food to take a gratuitous, heavy-handed slap at poor people. But Donald Trump and two of his slap-happy cabinet officials did imagine it — and then did it.

They slipped a malicious, punish-the-poor provision into the food stamp budget Trump sent to Congress. Instead of getting a small monthly allowance to spend on foods of their choice, the Trump provision would take away half of the poor people's allowance and substitute a monthly box of peanut butter, canned goods, and other packaged food items chosen for them by their friendly Federal government.

It's bureaucratic, patronizing, demeaning... and stupid, but Trump ag secretary, Sunny Perdue, hailed the Big Brother's Dinner Box as a "bold, innovative" idea. Besides, Sonny disdainfully said of food stamp recipients, they are hooked on a culture of dependency — so maybe a diet of peanut butter will cure them of that.

Then came Trump budget director, Mick Mulvaney, a tea party extremist who demonizes impoverished Americans as moochers, bizarrely putting a luxury spin on the "Harvest Box," as the Trumpeters have dubbed their miserly scheme. Mulvaney compares the government issued box of grub to Blue Apron, an upscale grocery delivery system. But, Mick — get a clue — Blue Apron patrons get to choose what's in their box — and it ain't peanut butter!

As the leading Democrat opposing Trump's food stamp gut job says in dismay, "My god, these people are awful... really just not nice people."

Less nice is their real intention to kill the food stamp program entirely. Trump's budget calls for slashing 30 percent of the funding this year. As watchdogs at the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities put it, "That's the real battle." The food-box silliness is a distraction to let them pull off the big theft.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

'Gun control' means people control

The phrase "gun control" is a thinly veiled euphemism for "people control". I am amazed at the willingness of the general public to embrace the pell mell rush towards such a slippery slope. There is nothing about the "gun control" efforts currently proposed that is likely to enhance real "gun control" since guns are inanimate objects incapable of independent action. Instead, the efforts are focused on controlling a person's choice of a firearm to purchase, or to control the process whereby one can legally purchase a firearm.

There are those who have adopted the position that semi-automatic center fire firearms, such as the AR-15, have no sporting, hunting or competition uses; they would be wrong. But any discussion along such lines is spurious; it is not the firearm but the person using the firearm that matters. Those supporting opposition to the AR-15 promote the popular myth that restricting or eliminating sales will reduce firearms-related deaths. A similar myth led to eliminating the sale of alcohol to reduce the devastating effects of alcohol consumption.

There are numerous laws at the state and federal levels regarding firearms purchases. The most recent incident in Parkland, Florida, demonstrated the consequences of a failure to abide by existing law. The FBI has admitted to not taking action in response to tips regarding the potential violence the alleged suspect might be capable of perpetrating. For those who believe "there ought to be a law" there are several on the books, but the value and strength of any law resides in its enforcement practices. We do not need to enact any more laws regarding firearms; we need more aggressive enforcement of existing laws.

The most comprehensive enforcement efforts will ultimately be unsuccessful. The salient point often ignored by those who seek to control firearms and firearms purchases is the reality that no one can reliably predict future behavior. Simply owning a firearm does not indicate a pre-ordained killing spree is likely, even if one owns an AR-15. Laws are to serve the public; restrictions on individual rights through laws, creates a true slippery slope.

SQUALL LINE

When ALL parents assume the responsibilities of being a parent, the current turmoil will settle down.

Best argument ever for the 2nd Amendment: Parkland School Resource Office who failed to act, along with FBI and Broward sheriff who failed to investigate. These are the people you trust to protect you?

CNN's Town Hall was a scripted leftist attack on the NRA and Republicans. A student who wanted to ask a good question was told he could only ask the printed question handed him by the CNN staff. Fake protest to create fake news.

Put your trust in government employees at your own peril. Parkland SRO, Broward sheriff's office and FBI are three shining examples why.

Love that Hertz, other car companies and banks have cut discounts and ties with the NRA. Bravo.

Only a government employee would think a crayfish habitat is more important than a human habitat.

The solution to school shooting is obvious: Shut down the schools. They are too expensive and have been obsolete since the internet and online courses were made available.

The NRA should have no say in our government or law making.

What to do if the new tax law changes your paycheck

By Tina Orem | NerdWallet.com

The amount of tax withheld from your paycheck probably changed at some point in February, part of the tax law that took effect (mostly) Jan. 1. The good news is, the Treasury Department estimates 90 percent of wage earners will see an increase in take-home pay due to the change.

"I think that on average, people will see their paychecks go up by about 1 percent to 2 percent," says Mike Sylvester, a certified public accountant at Small Business Services CPA Group in Fort Wayne, Indiana.

Why it's happening

Taxes are a pay-as-you-go arrangement in the United States. When you earn money, the IRS wants its cut as soon as possible. That's why employers withhold taxes from employee paychecks.

Form W-4, which you probably filled out when you started your job, gives you some control over how much is withheld. What you put on your W-4 gets funneled through withholding tables, which your company's payroll department uses to calculate exactly how much federal and state tax to hold back. The amount is largely based on your wages, marital status and the number of withholding allowances you claim on your W-4.

The recent tax overhaul changed a ton of rules, including shifting the tax brackets, increasing the standard deduction and eliminating personal exemptions. That meant the withholding tables had to change, so the IRS reissued them Jan. 11. It wanted employers to start using the new withholding tables no later than Feb. 15.

What to do about it

• Stay chill: If you see more money in your check, don't start spending it, not even in your mind. After all, your payroll taxes probably aren't your whole tax picture, Sylvester warns. A new $10,000 limit on the deduction for state and local taxes means that people in high-tax states, for example, might be better off setting that extra money aside until they see where the chips fall when they do their 2018 taxes, he says. Under the new tax rules, you might lose some deductions — but you also might move to a lower tax bracket.

• Think ahead: Last April, did you get hit with a giant tax bill or, conversely, score an enormous refund? If so, now may be a good time to make a better plan for your withholdings. If you don't withhold enough throughout the year, you might owe again when you file your return in April 2019. If you withhold too much, you might get another refund — but you'll live on less of your paycheck in the meantime.

• Gather information: Check your withholdings after the changes take effect in February and finish your 2017 tax return so you can see what you have to work with, says Chris Whalen, a CPA in Red Bank, New Jersey. If you want to change your withholdings at that point, fill out a new W-4 and give it to your employer; you can get the form at IRS.gov or from your payroll people. You don't have to fill out a new W-4 just because the tax rules changed. But you can change your W-4 anytime you want.

Lock or freeze?

Pros and cons of placing barriers on your credit

By Bev O'Shea
NerdWallet.com

Equifax has made good on its promise of free, lifelong credit locks after last year's massive data breach. The reception to its new "Lock & Alert" feature — which lets users click or swipe to lock and unlock their credit reports — has been mixed, with seamless sign-ups for some but glitches or repeated messages of "we are experiencing technical issues" for others since its Jan. 31 launch.

Spokeswoman Nancy Bistriz-Balkan acknowledges its bumpy debut. "As with any new service, yes, we had some initial issues shortly after launch," she says. "Our team has been working around the clock to address these issues."

All three major credit bureaus now offer credit lock products, but a credit freeze may still be the better option for consumers.

Does using Equifax's free credit lock service or a competitor's product make sense for you? The choice may depend on cost, effort required and your willingness to try a new product or agree to terms set by credit bureaus.

Locking your credit vs. freezing

Locks and freezes both make your credit reports inaccessible to most people, with the goal of blocking anyone who might try to open fraudulent credit accounts in your name. If you want to apply for any sort of credit — say, a new credit card or auto loan — you'll have to unlock or unfreeze your reports during the application process.

With a lock, the process of blocking and restoring access is simpler. A freeze, the strongest level of protection, requires a PIN and, in some cases, payment to lift or reinstate a freeze online, by phone or via mail. With a lock, you do not need extra security like a personal identification number, and you can lock or unlock your credit online or via each bureau's app.

Equifax and TransUnion offer free credit locks, while Experian's lock is available as part of a paid bundled service.

Freezes and locks do not affect your score.

Some things are the same with either a freeze or lock: You need to set it up at each credit bureau individually; you can still monitor your own credit report and score; and freezes and locks do not affect your score.

Credit lock: There may be a catch

There is one important difference between a lock and a freeze, says Chi Chi Wu, a staff attorney for the National Consumer Law Center. Credit freezes are governed by state law. That means if something goes wrong — if a requested freeze wasn't placed or it was mistakenly lifted — a consumer may have legal recourse.

Locks would not fall under state law, Wu says. And such products may fail. Service agreements for each bureau make it clear that the companies don't guarantee error-free operation or uninterrupted service.

The inconvenience and cost associated with "thawing" a credit freeze are often cited as a disadvantage. But lifting a freeze may not be as difficult as it sounds. If you know your PIN, it can take less than five minutes.

Unfreezing generally costs less than $10 per bureau, and is free for some consumers. If you are applying for credit, you may be able to ask which bureau's credit report will be checked and unfreeze just that one to save on fees.

Equifax lock vs. competitors

Each major bureau handles credit locks differently.

• Equifax: Equifax's lock is part of its attempt to regain trust with consumers after a data breach affecting at least 145 million consumers — more than half the adult population in the U.S. Equifax has said its service will always be free, and that the service agreement will never contain an arbitration clause or class-action waiver. That means you do not give up your right to sue the company or join a lawsuit if the lock fails. Equifax freezes and lifts are also free until June 30.

• TransUnion: TransUnion's lock is also free, but it requires that users agree to receive targeted marketing materials. Its service agreement contains an arbitration clause and class-action waiver, which are widely considered not to be in consumers' best interests.

• Experian: Experian only offers credit locks bundled with its identity theft or credit monitoring packages. Its IdentityWorks Plus membership option, the cheapest package at $9.99 per month, includes a credit lock. A 30-day free period means the first year would cost $109.89. Experian's service agreement, like TransUnion's, contains an arbitration clause and a class-action waiver.

Why couples need their own slush funds

By Liz Weston
NerdWallet.com

My husband likes designer clothes. Half of my wardrobe is from Ross Dress For Less.

That's just one example of how different our spending habits are. Thanks to a system we implemented 20 years ago, though, we've avoided a lot of squabbling over who spent what.

Every month, we each get a certain amount of "no questions asked" spending money. His is transferred from our joint account to his separate account. I take mine out in cash.

"It seems more common now for couples to decide that a combination of both separate and together works best for them," says Megan Ford, past president of the Financial Therapy Association and a couples and financial therapist at the University of Georgia's ASPIRE Clinic.

Most people in committed relationships combine some, if not all, of their finances, but 4 out of 10 couples with joint bank accounts told a TD Bank survey in 2014 that they also had separate accounts.

Separate slush funds work best when people trust each other, agree on their big financial goals and together determine amounts they can spend that won't crater the family budget, says Willa Williams, an accredited financial counselor with Trinity Financial Coaching in Grosse Pointe, Michigan.

Williams also recommends setting a limit for how much can be spent out of joint funds without consulting the other.

Like "no questions asked" money, the amount can be adjusted up or down depending on the couple's situation.

What separate money shouldn't be is secret money.

People who are supposed to be on the same financial team shouldn't hide money, or debts, from each other.

"There absolutely must be agreement on how much privacy is OK, and with that, a level of transparency and willingness to share that account information with one another," Ford says.

Juvenile detention center seeks volunteers

Mentors sought to share stories, teach skills, offer support

PANAMA CITY — Those at the Bay Regional Juvenile Detention Center are trying to close the doors of crime and open the windows of encouragement for youth by asking those in the community to volunteer at the center.

Ryann Ellingsworth, facility training coordinator, said the center is always seeking people to be more involved with the youth.

"I don't think a lot of people in the community know we allow people to volunteer here, and help the youth," she said. "We want some people in our community to share with our youth, and come share their stories."

The center serves youth who are awaiting a judgment, legal reasoning or placement in a commitment facility. The children receive, mental health care, substance abuse treatment, education and health care, according to the detention center's website. Medical and mental services are contracted.

"Some of the youth in our custody were homeless, and might not have received the right care," Ellingsworth said. "A lot of the youth experienced trauma in their lives."

The center is full of opportunities and children who want to grow, she said. The center has a garden, for example, and just initiated a pet care program called "Leash on Life," which allows the youth to foster and prepare animals for adoption. An officer who works at the center is a trained mechanic and currently is searching for a scooter, in order to teach the children how to fix the vehicles.

In addition, Ellingsworth said the center sees several volunteers from churches and different organizations.

"We're looking for anyone who would like to volunteer time," she said. "Art is big here. We would like an artist to come through and do scenery in the cells. We actually try to soften their experience here."

Volunteers don't have to have any work credentials, but if they want to speak or visit on a weekly basis, a background check will be required, Ellingsworth said.

"These kids just want some guidance," she said. "They're more than willing to take it. We have a lot of youth who come in, and they become repeat offenders because they don't have anyone to come in and help them."

To sign up, call Ellingsworth at 850-872-4706.

Fond farewell as snowbird returns home

PANAMA CITY BEACH — There is something about the last one.

You know, like the last Krispy Kreme doughnut or cold one in the fridge, or the last Canadian in Panama column.

It doesn't seem that long ago we were saying bonjour.

It has been interesting, and an eyeopener. Hopefully the column has spread some good will, shared some information and put positive spins on good people: Canadians and Americans.

We don't leave for another few days but BAYOU GEORGE — A new boat ramp and floating dock has been completed and more amenities are on the way at one of the latest county parks under development in the Bayou George area.

Last year, the Bay County Commission spent $145,000 to purchase a 1.2-acre site at County 2301 and Bear Creek Bridge to develop David W. Hutchinson Park, formerly known as "Cherokee Landing."

The waterfront property offers access to all of Deer

Point Lake, Bear Creek, Econfina Creek, Bayou George and Cedar Creek.

Progress at the park, which previously was considered a hot spot for crime and had a number of derelict structures on it, has been well received by neighbors. Hal Graf, who lives on the other side of the creek from the park, said he's happy the county has cleaned up the site and is developing a park.

"It gets well used," he said. "You come on weekends it is lined up, trucks and trailers all the way across here."

Lynn Haven invites public to Black History Month event

LYNN HAVEN - The City of Lynn Haven invites the public to celebrate Black History Month during a special program Tuesday at the start of a regularly scheduled City Commission meeting.

The celebration will start at 6 p.m. at the Lynn Haven City Chambers, 108 East 9th Street, and feature guest speakers and musical performances. Mayor Margo Anderson and the Lynn Haven City Commission will also be there to celebrate African-American contributions to the city and Bay County.

Anderson said the City "received an overwhelming response" after contacting various people and organizations in Lynn Haven about participating, and added the event should be "well received" since the community is excited about it.

Leon Miller, the first African-American elected City

Commissioner in Lynn Haven and one of the guest speakers, suggested to Anderson the city have a proclamation or recognition of Black History Month last summer.

"I give him complete credit for the idea," Anderson said. "Here in Lynn the property, the county has deepened the boat launch, added fencing, constructed the boat trailer and visitor parking area, and added picnic tables with grills. They currently are constructing a fishing pier with handicap access that stretches the length of the property.

County employees have completed 90 percent of the work on the park, saving a significant amount of money, said Don Murray, Bay County

General Services director. He said the county has spent about $75,000 on materials, such as wood that is being used to put up a new fishing dock and gazebo or covered overhang on the dock.

The county previously had a boat launch by the bridge, but it was inadequate for larger vessels, particularly during the drawdown period of Deer Point Lake when water levels were low, Murray said. County employees went ahead and dug out the creek bottom by the launch area and repaired the boat ramp so vessels can be launched at all times.

"Before they were still launching boats but there was metal down there [under the water], so we literally had to dig it out," Murray said. "They couldn't (launch boats) during the drawdown. We designed it so that they could."

He said big boats, like pontoons, can now be launched there. County employees have also removed dangerous structures on the property, including buildings, sheds and trailers. They have cleaned up the property and surrounding wetlands and installed a post and rail fencing for a secure area.

"The first thing we had to do was clear the property," said County Commissioner Guy Tunnell, whose district includes the new park. "We had so much junk out here and we had some outbuildings, a bunch of trash, so that took a while (to clear). But most of the work has been done in house."

Tunnell said the effort to transform the spot has been worth it. Before it was a county park, the spot had become known by sheriff's deputies for being a crime hot spot.

"The sheriff's office for years has had problem with vagrants and drug dealings and all kinds of stuff going on in this area because it was so run down and not well lit," Tunnell said. "Fixing it up will make it more of a focal point for the community and (attract) better clientele."

Murray said the county wants it to be a dusk until dawn park as much as possible to keep people from sleeping overnight there.

"But we'll have some boat traffic at night," Murray said.

GOP committeewoman apologizes for Parkland 'crisis actors' post

Okaloosa woman: 'I got fooled'

By Tom McLaughlin

tmclaughlin
@nwfddailynews.com

Okaloosa County's elected Republican State Committeewoman has apologized after publishing a Facebook post referring to Parkland school shooting survivors as "crisis actors."

Sandra Atkinson said Friday she recognizes now the post to her personal page helped perpetrate a cruel fiction about students of Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School who have chosen to speak out against gun violence in the wake of a Valentine's Day shooting that took 17 lives.

"The posts I've seen were so convincing. Even the president's son, Donald Trump Jr., liked a similar post. I, unfortunately, got fooled," Atkinson said. "Maybe I was too quick to jump to conclusions."

Atkinson

Atkinson's post, which showed a photo of Marjory Stoneman Douglas students with a group of smiling people, read, "Crisis actors and production team take a group selfie just before they have to go out and tell their heartwrenching stories on TV."

Atkinson added her own statement: "Crisis actors hired who didn't even go to Broward County school."

A Pensacola publication picked up on the post and wrote a lengthy story about it, complete with a photo of Atkinson on stage singing the national anthem at a Donald Trump political rally. Atkinson said she's been contacted by several people since then who have criticized her for putting up the post.

Atkinson said, although she's been asked to do so, she has declined to take the post down. She said she wants people to see the mistake she made and know she is accepting blame.

"I'm not afraid to admit when I am wrong, and 'eating crow' never tastes good, but I still believe the students are being used: as Rush Limbaugh said, 'Everything they're doing is right out of the Democrat Party's various playbooks. It has the same enemies: the NRA and guns,'" the post said. "I never meant to imply in any way that lives were not affected, people were killed. It was a horrific (event) in our history in Florida and as a nation. I am sorry for this misinformation that I posted."

Mark Franks, the chairman of the Okaloosa County Republican Party, said he was aware of Atkinson's post, as is the Republican Party of Florida (RPOF). Franks said because the post was to Atkinson's personal Facebook page — she also has a committeewoman page — he has no control over it, as he would if she had posted to the Okaloosa County Republican Executive Committee page.

The state Republican Party could file a grievance against Atkinson, Franks said. Party officials did not return a phone call or email Friday.

"I tell people, 'You are your own person, but you have a title. You need to hold yourself accountable to that title,'" Franks said.

City files complaint against former City Clerk

By Jacqueline Bostick
630-6167 | @JBostick
jbostick@chipleypaper.com

VERNON — City of Vernon has initiated a complaint with the state to investigate former City

Cook

Clerk's payroll discrepancies and unauthorized usage of City credit cards.

City of Vernon has initiated a complaint with Florida Department of Law Enforcement, but have not received a response, according to officials.

Pay stubs of former Vernon City Clerk Michelle Cook from Oct. 1, 2014 to Dec. 18, 2017 show a missing hourly rate at the start of her time with City of Vernon to $12.50 an hour starting Feb. 6, 2015, ending at $16.87. However, throughout her tenure, her hourly rate fluctuated — as high as $17.50 during some pay cycles.

City officials say the City-approved hourly rate for the City Clerk position at the time of Cook's resignation was $15.87.

It was not immediately clear how Cook misused the City's credit cards.

Cook's attorney, Lisa Anderson of Lisa Anderson Law in Panama City, states allegations against Cook are false.

"As is standard in these matters, I cannot allow my client to make any comments while there is an ongoing investigation," said Anderson. "Michelle Cook has committed no criminal wrongdoing. She has been a faithful community servant for many years and any allegations of criminal wrongdoing by her are patently false. We look forward to the conclusion of the investigation, which we are confident will exonerate her."

The move to investigate came after Cook filed for unemployment benefits after resigning from the City on Dec. 6, with city council approval on Dec. 7 at a special meeting.

According to Mayor Tina Sloan, the Florida Department of Economic Opportunity (DEO) accepted Cook's request for benefits because she resigned with "knowledge of fact that she was getting another job." The City voted to appeal DEO's decision and to pursue an investigation, claiming she was asked to resign because of suspicion of embezzlement.

"This was not an easy decision for the council to make," Sloan said following a council meeting earlier this month at which the council moved to request the state investigation. "The council has really struggled in how to proceed in the best light for our City."

STATE BRIEFS

PARKLAND Stoneman Douglas students pick up belongings

Students at a Florida high school where 17 of their classmates and staff members were fatally gunned down have gotten their first chance to return to the school.

Sunday, thousands of Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School students and their parents were able to pick up book bags and other belonging left behind after the Feb. 14 shooting. They were able to see their friends again Sunday as they continue to seek recovery from the shooting.

The students had to walk past the three-story building where the massacre took place. It is now cordoned off by a chain link fence that is covered with banners from other schools showing their support.

Freshman Francesca Lozano says seeing the building where the shooting happened was scary, but seeing her friends made her feel better.

The school is scheduled to reopen to students on Wednesday.

ORLANDO Pediatrician arrested for using partial vaccine doses

A Florida pediatrician has been arrested for giving partial doses of vaccines to children.

The Florida Department of Health says in a statement that about 500 patients of Dr. Ishrat Sohail may have been affected. The agency is working to notify those families to consider revaccinating their children.

Sohail is suspected of Medicaid fraud.

In 2016, the health department suspended her for two months from a federal vaccination program for administering on children with private insurance vaccines meant for Medicaid and uninsured patients. State health officials discovered the partially-used doses in a follow-up visit in late January.

It is also possible Sohail's vaccines may not have been sterilized.

Sohail's license to practice medicine in Florida has been suspended by the state surgeon general.

RIVIERA BEACH Man killed, 3 injured in 2 related shootings

Police in Florida say a man was killed and three others were injured in two shootings that are apparently related.

Riviera Beach Police told news media that one man was shot and wounded before he was driven to a nearby hospital in a private car.

Thirty minutes later, police say a suspect linked to the first shooting pulled up to a home in the same neighborhood, got out of his car and shot a man sitting in another car, killing him. Two people who were inside the garage were also shot and injured.

Bay District School Board meets this week to discuss safety

News Herald Staff Report

PANAMA CITY — The Bay District School Board will meet for their regularly scheduled meeting Tuesday at 1 p.m. at 1311 Balboa Avenue, but the workshop before the meeting could be the most interesting considering recent events.

After the 10:30 a.m. expulsion hearing, the board will convene for a special workshop on school safety and security. Superintendent Bill Husfelt has said publicly several times he believes every school must have an armed officer, and that topic will likely be brought up in this workshop, though agendas were not provided. The board will also likely discuss plans to create Closed Access Points (CAPS) at several area schools — Everitt and Jinks Middle Schools, Rutherford High School, Tyndall Elementary School. Plans for those CAPs will be available 30 minutes prior to the school board meeting and will be voted on during the meeting, though they appear as part of the consent agenda.

Other items of interest include a charter renewal for Palm Bay Prep Academy Schools and a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) with PanCare of Florida, Inc.

have had fun in Panama City Beach and Panama City; that, and friendships, no snow and warmer weather, are what keep us coming back. Lower prices used to but now we really have to shop to get the deals. Everything from groceries to clothing are similar to our prices which means sometimes costing us more because of our dollar exchange. It's a big bump when it comes to rent.

The happy hours help attract Canadian Snowbirds, but most importantly it is the weather, cleanliness, friendliness of the people and reasonable pricing that keep us coming back.

We hope to return again if our health and pocketbooks stay stable.

Shopping is not my forte but there are those among us who could do it every day, without even buying. Some have seen the inside of every Ross, Marshall, T.J. Maxx, Sam's, Target, J.C. Penney, and Walmart, from here to Destin. Many have found outstanding deals and like the guy digging for oil, all it takes is one well to keep the machinery going.

We have enjoyed our visit on both sides of the bridge, St. Andrews, Panama City, and the Beach.

Here are some random observations:

- When dolphins dance it is a dazzling display. This year we saw them from the beach twice in the Gulf putting on quite a show doing full body flips out of the water. And how about those sunsets on the gulf? The beach is an attraction on its own. Not much better then when nature chooses to entertain our senses.

- It takes awhile to get used to seeing car drivers talking while holding their cell phones. At home the use of car phones by drivers is banned. Drivers get hefty fines if caught with them in their hands while driving or stopped at lights. Cell phone distraction is one of the highest reasons for road accidents in Ontario.

- Motorcycle helmets are mandatory in Ontario so it startles some of us to see helmet less drivers. It's like watching old time hockey before players wore helmets.

- We saw four prisoners in their black and white striped outfits cleaning the ditches of litter. They were followed by a jail truck pulling a trailer with a Johnny on the spot (outhouse). Our inmates don't have striped outfits nor does our system put them on clean up detail. Not that there is anything wrong with that.

- From most golfing experiences our courses are in better shape and more challenging, and the prices match yours. Visit us this upcoming season.

Hats off to fellow Canadian and long time Panama City Beach visitor Rick Willshaw, Bay Point Golf Club, Ms. Newby's, Patches, another Canadian Jim Debenham and all sponsors, other volunteers for a wonderful golf tournament in memory of another fellow Canadian Terry Faulkner. Terry had organized the annual tournament before his death last year so it was decided to continue in his memory. Everyone involved, Americans and Canadians, got together and held this year's in his honour with 140 golfers participating. Excellent day and job by all involved.

- We love public walking paths, but don't see many here.

- Gasoline prices jump here more often than frogs at a fly convention.

- We notice some people complain about Snowbirds being here like uninvited guests. Snowbirds bring money into your economy and when we spend we are usually paying taxes in some form whether it is through rent, gasoline, clothing, food, alcohol or various forms of entertainment. Those of you who don't like us being among you, we hope we haven't given you any reason and that it's only a few because we love being here.

- Come to Canada, we love to see American visitors sharing our country and culture, and your money and driving habits.

- We are first cousins with many similar likes and dislikes. We have been raised in different households with far different rules for such things as Medicare which all Canadians share and our gun laws which are as different from yours as a butterfly and hornet.

- You have a great country and so do we, but Florida winters are a lot easier to take.

- Your state is looking at marijuana laws while our entire country is legalizing it this year.

Yesterday is gone, today is a new day and a future tomorrow which will soon be just another yesterday. Justqu'a demain, au devoir mes cousins. (until tomorrow, so long my cousins).

Balto Finishes Strong

Mini Fact:

Gunnar Kaasen, shown with Balto, was an assistant to the fastest musher in Alaska, Leonhard Seppala.

On March 3, about 70 daring mushers, or sled dog racers, and about 1,000 dogs will meet in Anchorage, Alaska, for the official opening of the Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race.

The Iditarod (eye-DIT-uh-rahd) is one of the most challenging races in the world. It starts in Anchorage and crosses more than 1,000 miles of Alaskan wilderness. It ends up in Nome.

This week, The Mini Page learns about a legendary sled dog who was the hero of a journey that inspired the Iditarod.

A race to save lives

In January 1925, a dangerous disease called diphtheria (dif-THIR-ee-uh) threatened the people of Nome. Dr. Curtis Welch treated children who had come down with the contagious disease, but as more kids got sick, he knew he would run out of medicine. Doctors in Anchorage had more doses of the medicine, but the two cities were hundreds of miles apart.

The medicine could be sent by airplane, but cold and windy weather made it too dangerous. The only other option was to send the needed medicine by dogsled.

Gov. Scott Bone decided a relay of dogsled teams would carry the medicine from Nenana, where railroad tracks met the sled trail to Nome, 674 miles away. The relay started on Jan. 27.

Balto gets his chance

During the race, mushers and dogs met dangerous challenges, including sea ice and snowdrifts that could lead them off the trail.

When it was Gunnar Kaasen's turn, he chose his favorite husky, Balto, and put him at the front of his sled for the next-to-last leg of the relay. They set out on Feb. 1 into a blizzard, running toward a town called Port Safety, where the last musher was waiting.

However, the musher in Port Safety had received instructions to wait for better weather and was asleep when they arrived! So Kaasen made a quick decision: He would finish the last 20 miles of the journey, with Balto in the lead.

Thanks to Kaasen and Balto, the medicine arrived in Nome on Feb. 2, just 5 1/2 days after leaving Nenana. The previous record for the trip had been nine days.

A hero

The 1925 Serum Run was famous all over the country, and Balto became a national hero and symbol of the journey. In New York City's Central Park, a statue of him honors his service.

In 1973, Dorothy G. Page and Joe Redington Sr. started the Iditarod race. They wanted to celebrate the many things sled dogs have done for Alaskans. The sled dogs' life-saving trip was just one of the services such dogs have provided.

Balto

Balto's statue in Central Park.

The Iditarod race

"Iditarod" is the name of a ghost town along the trails. Many experts believe it means "distant place."

The Iditarod begins in Anchorage with a ceremonial start. The race truly begins the next day from Willow.

The Iditarod Trail runs for about 1,049 miles. It varies year by year because obstacles may arise, forcing mushers to break new trail.

The race keeps going until the last team comes in. The fastest winning time was eight days, three hours, 40 minutes and 13 seconds, set in 2017. The last racers can take nearly three weeks to come in.

Mushers begin training dogs in August, with the dogs pulling four-wheelers. In the spring and early summer, when the snow thaws, the dogs get a vacation.

Teams must stop at checkpoints throughout the trail. These stopping points are often villages where mushers and their dogs might get a chance to eat and drink.

At each checkpoint, veterinarians look over the dogs. Mushers rub salve, or ointment, on a dog's paws. If a dog is injured or too tired, it might leave the race and be flown home from a checkpoint.

Cook's Corner

Oven-Baked Chicken Bites

You'll need:

- 3 boneless chicken breasts, cut into 1-inch cubes
- 1/3 cup Italian dressing
- 1/2 cup Italian bread crumbs

- 1/4 cup grated parmesan cheese
- 3/4 teaspoon dried basil
- cooking spray

What to do:

1. Place chicken cubes in bowl with Italian dressing.
2. Mix bread crumbs, parmesan cheese and basil in a separate shallow bowl.
3. Coat chicken pieces with bread-crumbs mixture.
4. Spray a medium-size baking pan with cooking spray. Place chicken pieces in one layer in the pan.
5. Bake for 30 minutes until chicken is done. Makes 4 servings.

* You'll need an adult's help with this recipe.

Eco Note

Animals called keystone species play a vital role in their environment. One example is the wolf, a top predator. Wolves affect many links in the food chains below them. They keep down numbers of plant-eaters that might otherwise graze habitats bare. In this way, they help nature to stay in balance. They also prey on weak and sickly individuals, which helps to keep prey populations at numbers the habitat can support. Can you think of other keystone species?

Harvick dominant in Atlanta

Driver claims Cup victory after winning Saturday's Xfinity Series race

By Charles Odum

HAMPTON, Ga. — Kevin Harvick completed his weekend mastery of Atlanta Motor Speedway by holding off Brad Keselowski on Sunday in the rain-delayed NASCAR Monster Energy Cup race.

Harvick, who was dominant Saturday in winning the second-tier Xfinity event, started fourth in the Cup race and quickly proved he had the car to beat.

Harvick was comfortably in the lead when Trevor Bayne's engine blew with 28 laps to go. The restart gave contenders a chance to grab the lead, but Harvick beat Keselowski to remain in control.

"What a relief," Harvick told his crew after crossing the finish line. He led 292 laps in Atlanta last year before finishing ninth following a pit road speeding penalty.

The start was delayed 2 hours, 30 minutes by rain. The threat of more rain added urgency in the late battle for the lead. There were reports of drops of rain with more than 130 laps remaining, leading to increased concerns the race could end early.

Clint Bowyer was third, followed by Denny Hamlin.

Harvick quickly moved from 19th back to the lead following a green flag pit stop early in the race and again quickly moved back to the lead following a pit stop on lap 252.

He took the lead following a competition caution on lap 30 and stayed in front to take the first stage win. Harvick's crew had difficulty during his pit stop following the first stage, and he had lost ground when he returned to the pit.

Harvick was 19th following the unscheduled pit stop and returned to the lead on lap 131 before Brad Keselowski won stage 2.

Harvick's No. 4 Ford has become a familiar figure in the lead at Atlanta. He led 141 of 163 laps Saturday for his Xfinity win after his strong performance in last year's Cup race.

Closing ceremony brings end to Winter Olympics

Star Tribune (Minneapolis)

PYEONGCHANG, South Korea — One of the major concerns before the Pyeongchang Olympics was that the weather would be too cold for anyone to feel comfortable. It was frigid, with windchills dropping to the double digits below zero in the small South Korean towns tucked between the mountains and the sea.

The weather, as it turned out, was no match for the hosts. Pyeongchang closed one of the more gracious, efficient and warmhearted Olympics in recent memory Sunday, ending South Korea's first Winter Games with a joyous celebration of a job well done.

Unlike recent Olympics overshadowed by dirty air and water, unfinished venues, broken budgets and corruption, Pyeongchang ran the world's largest sporting event in remarkably efficient fashion. An Olympics that began with a hint of a thaw in relations between South and North Korea ended with a promise to continue pursuing diplomacy, as the two nations again marched into Pyeongchang Olympic Stadium together.

Jessie Diggins, of Afton, Minn., who won the first-ever gold medal for the United States in cross-country skiing, was among athletes from 92 nations who paraded their flags one last time before saying goodbye. It seemed fitting that the mountain temperature was higher than it had been in days, on a night when thousands of athletes and visitors thanked Pyeongchang for its hospitality.

"Thank you for warming our hearts, even in the coldest temperatures," said International Olympic Committee President Thomas Bach in his closing speech. "To the gracious hosts, the people of Korea, I say thank you."

PADRES-YOUNG

There's some living history in the San Diego Padres' clubhouse this spring. Chris Young, now 38, is back with the Padres and trying to earn a spot on the staff, whether it's in the rotation or in the bullpen. Young is the last Padres pitcher to win a playoff game, 12 years ago.

Thomas comes up clutch to win Honda in playoff

The Associated Press

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. — Justin Thomas nearly holed a wedge that got him into a playoff, and then hit 3-wood over the water and onto the 18th green for a two-putt birdie to beat Luke List on the first extra hole Sunday to win the Honda Classic.

Thomas closed with a 2-under 68 and won for the second time this season. He also won in a playoff at the CJ Cup in South Korea last fall.

Thomas and List matched birdies and tough pars over the final eight holes, and List appeared to have a big advantage on the par-5 18th when he hit a big drive that left him a 4-iron he hit onto the back of the green. Thomas was in the left rough and had to lay up instead of taking on the water.

He hit a wedge from 117 yards that landed a few feet in front of the hole and rolled some 6 inches to the side of the cup, settling 2 feet away. It brought to mind Lanny Wadkins stuffing a wedge on that hole to secure a U.S. victory in the 1983 Ryder Cup.

List, going for his first PGA Tour victory, blinked first in the playoff by missing his drive well to the right amid palm trees. He blasted that out left and against the grandstand, and then he watched Thomas take on the water and hit the green in two.

Olympic Athletes from Russia capture hockey gold with OT win over Germany

By Stephen Whyno
The Associated Press

GANGNEUNG, South Korea — The Olympic anthem was merely background noise, the doping scandal the farthest thing from their minds.

As the white flag with the five Olympic rings rose toward the rafters Sunday following the gold medal game in men's hockey, the champion Russians in their nondescript red-and-white uniforms joined their fans cloaked in red, white and blue and belted out the "State Anthem of the Russian Federation," drowning out the recorded song that was required as part of International Olympic Committee sanctions.

This Olympic title meant so much more to the Russians, no matter that the tournament was missing NHL players and the "Olympic Athletes from Russia" were all here only after months of scandal.

Joyous players tossed coach Oleg Znarok in the air at center ice as fans let out the same "ROSS-I-YA" chants that filled the arena in Sochi four years ago, where home ice meant nothing as the Russians lost in the quarterfinals. There was no such disappointment this time as the Russians triumphed in the tournament they were favored to win, capturing gold with a 4-3 overtime victory over Germany after Kirill Kaprizov's power-play goal capped a classic final and gave the nation a jubilant moment following weeks of disappointment.

"We understood the whole thing from the start so we were calm about it," coach Oleg Znarok said. "Russia is in our hearts."

The win came only a few hours after the IOC decided against allowing the Russians to march under their flag in the closing ceremony Sunday night after a curler and a bobsledder had positive drug tests during the games.

It didn't seem to matter to the Russian players that they couldn't wear the Russian Coat of Arms on their chests or that they won their first hockey gold medal since 1992 under the same circumstances as 26 years ago: playing under a neutral flag with the NHL opting to stay home after participating in the past five Olympics.

"The medal is the same with or without the NHL," said defenseman Slava Voynov, who scored the opening goal with 0.5 seconds left in the first period. "Maybe the tournament was a little different, but the emotions and happiness are the same."

Russian President Vladimir Putin made a telephone call to Znarok after the victory, which gave the country its second gold and 17th overall medal of the Olympics.

Even with Alex Ovechkin, Evgeni Malkin and Sergei Bobrovsky back in North America, this gold medal was particularly sweet because of the backdrop of sanctions and the Russians' almost three-decade drought. After International Ice Hockey Federation President Rene Fasel put the first Russian hockey medals of any color since 2002 around the necks of each player, Russian Hockey Federation President Vladislav Tretiak — a three-time Olympic gold medalist and Soviet Hall of Fame goaltender — gave out handshakes and hugs.

ROUNDUP

CROSS-COUNTRY SKIING

Austrian cross-country skier Teresa Stadlober was well on her way to a silver medal at the Pyeongchang Games. Then came a mental hiccup that cost her a spot on the podium but earned her a place in Olympic history. With 7 kilometers left in Sunday's 30-kilometer race, the 25-year-old Stadlober inexplicably veered right on a downhill slope while the rest of the skiers went left. By the time she had corrected her course, she had fallen from second place to eighth. Her medal hopes had vanished. "I don't know, I really don't know," said an embarrassed Stadlober, who ended up in ninth place. "I took the wrong way — and I did this twice. The second time I wasn't sure anymore. I had a blackout. I don't know why I took the wrong way." Austrian sports director Markus Gandler said he believes Stadlober, trailing far behind eventual champion Marit Bjørgen, simply took her eyes off the track for a moment and lost her orientation.

RUSSIAN DOPING SCANDAL

The massive, state-linked Russian doping scandal didn't stain the Pyeongchang Winter Olympics, IOC President Thomas Bach said Sunday. It was, however, the subject of the vast majority of the questions Bach fielded as the IOC tried to shake the stigma of Russian cheating that has plagued the last three Olympics — Sochi, Rio de Janeiro and now Pyeongchang. The IOC doesn't want it to touch Tokyo's Summer Olympics in 2½ years. Just hours before Sunday's closing ceremony, the IOC ruled that the 160-plus Russian delegation — participating under the neutral "Olympic Athletes from Russia" logo — could not march in the closing ceremony under its own flag. This would have been a signal that Russia was back in the Olympic Family. Russian athletes produced two of the four positive doping tests in Pyeongchang despite IOC guarantees about intense testing before and during the Olympics. "These two doping cases have in fact played the major role when coming to the decision of not lifting the suspension," Bach explained. "This was the key factor." However, the IOC also decided that the Russian Olympic Committee will still have its suspension lifted if there are no more positive tests by Russians at the Pyeongchang Games. Bach gave no timeframe for lifting the suspension, but the testing could be completed in a few days.

Marissa Brandt named honorary ambassador for Korea adoptees

Marissa Brandt isn't quite sure what her new position will require, and she's only had a couple of days to start getting used to the idea of being an honorary ambassador. The Korean-American hockey player is more than happy to do whatever she can. "It's going to be nice to kind of have this platform, and hopefully I can help between Korea and America," Brandt said. Brandt, who played hockey for South Korea's historic combined women's team under her birth name, Park Yoonjung, was named as an honorary ambassador for adoptees searching for their birth families Sunday on the final day of the Pyeongchang Games. Neunghoo Park, the South Korea minister of health and welfare, made the announcement at an intimate luncheon including Brandt, her parents and two other adoptees taking part in the Olympics. Hanna Poeschl, or Young-hye Hwang, is an intern with the Olympic Broadcasting Services, and Isaac Myers, also known as Seung-lee Choi, was an Olympic torchbearer. Park told Brandt and two other Korean-Americans that the government wants to help all adoptees following their adoptions and also with searches for their birth families. "I'm really honored for this position," Brandt said. "My goal coming into the Olympics, it was bigger than hockey for myself and just to be a role model and hopefully inspire others. And now adoptees, hopefully inspire them to find their birth parents and reach out and kind of get to know their culture more." Brandt was about 4½ months old when adopted by the Brandts and grew up in Minnesota, where she played hockey along with her sister, Hannah, who plays on the gold medal-winning U.S. hockey team. Since the Korean War, more than 170,000 Korean children have been adopted by families around the world. More adoptees are visiting South Korea looking for their birth families, but culture and language differences have hindered those searches.

THE COVERAGE

Highlights from media coverage of the Pyeongchang Olympics:

CURLING GOLD: "Two days ago it was unlikely," NBC's Jason Knapp said as the American men's curling team clinched a gold medal. "Now it is undeniable." How unlikely? The team had lost four of its first six games in South Korea but got hot at the right time. NBC replayed the late-night victory Saturday afternoon and team members visited with daytime host Rebecca Lowe in the network studio. John Shuster spoke movingly of overcoming past failures to win with a brilliant late-game throw. "I just decided my story wasn't going to end this way," he said. Bleary-eyed, five team members returned later for a talk with Mike Tirico that ended with an ovation from NBC's backstage crew.

SKATING GALA: Nice touch for NBC to assign Scott Hamilton to the skating gala. He's been nothing but class since losing the top commentator role to Tara Lipinski and Johnny Weir.

MASS START? Mass confusion. The final speedskating competition was a crowded race called the mass start that left us baffled. Tom Hammond and Joey Cheek needed to explain the race's rules before it started. What is a sprint lap and why do you get points for it? What is the strategy involved?

BOBSLED HISTORY: John Morgan

is going to need a few weeks to catch his breath after the bobsled competition. A tie for silver in the four-man race? "We're witnessing history here!" he said. The "house of speed has had us on the edge of our seats for every race," he said. Come to think of it, the "house of speed" should be renamed the "house of excitement." Meanwhile, it will be the last bobsled most of Morgan's viewers see for four years.

BACK IN TIME: As the competition winds down, NBC rolls out some of its prepared features. On Saturday afternoon, a Rob Lowe-narrated film told the story of the men's and women's figure skating competition at the Calgary Olympics in 1988 and, most interestingly, what happened to the participants since then. Serena Williams will narrate a film on 1968 on Sunday afternoon.

YOU ARE GETTING SLEEPY: Was that a tray of cupcakes on the table in front of Tirico, or are we just getting delusional?

Spurs stop slide, upend Cavaliers

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — The Spurs ended their “rodeo” road trip by roping the Cavaliers.

LeBron James thought San Antonio got some help.

LaMarcus Aldridge scored 27 points, Danny Green added 22 and the Spurs ended their annual trip by beating the Cleveland Cavaliers 110-94 on Sunday to snap a four-game losing streak.

Green, who missed Friday’s loss at Denver with food poisoning, came off the bench for the first time in 49 games this season and made five 3-pointers to provide a perfect outside complement to Aldridge’s dynamic inside game. Dejounte Murray added 13 points and nine rebounds for San Antonio, a team not accustomed to any turmoil.

But the super-steady Spurs have not been themselves as they continue to play without injured star Kawhi Leonard, whose timetable to return remains a mystery. They had dropped six of seven and four in a row on a trip (their arena hosts a rodeo every year) that coach Gregg Popovich’s squad typically uses as a spring board into the playoffs.

PELICANS 123, BUCKS 121

OT: Jrue Holiday scored 28 of his season-high 36 points after halftime to lead the New Orleans Pelicans to a 123-121 overtime victory over the Milwaukee Bucks on Sunday. Holiday added nine rebounds and six assists for New Orleans, which held on for its season-high fifth win in a row when Jason Terry’s 3-pointer was ruled after the buzzer.

HORNETS 114, PISTONS 98

Dwight Howard led the Hornets with 17 points and 12 rebounds, while Kemba Walker also recorded 17 points for Charlotte, which earned a season-best fourth straight win. But it was the Hornets’ bench outscoring Detroit’s reserves 51-28 that gave Charlotte the biggest edge. The Hornets improved to 27-33 while making a push toward the No. 8 seed in the Eastern Conference for the playoffs.

WIZARDS 109, 76ERS 94:

Otto Porter scored 24 points, Bradley Beal added 23 and the Washington Wizards had a dominant second quarter in a 109-94 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers on Sunday night. Kelly Oubre scored 16 of his 19 points in the first half to help fourth-place Washington move a half-game ahead of Indiana in the Eastern Conference standings.

ROCKETS 119, NUGGETS 114:

James Harden had 41 points and eight rebounds, Chris Paul scored 23 points and the Houston Rockets beat the Denver Nuggets 119-114 on Sunday night for their 12th straight victory. Harden had 27 in the first half and seven in the fourth quarter, when the Rockets held off a late Denver rally. Harden has scored 40 or more points nine times this season. He finished with seven assists. Nikola Jokic had 21 points and 14 rebounds for Denver, which had its four-game winning streak snapped. Will Barton added 25 points.

No. 2 Michigan State wraps up Big Ten title

The Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. — No. 2 Michigan State arrived at Wisconsin feeling a little discombobulated with so many off-court issues swirling around the program.

The Spartans are returning to East Lansing with the outright Big Ten regular-season title and more clarity about the future of star forward Miles Bridges.

Cassius Winston scored 20 points and went 6 for 6 from the 3-point line, and Bridges hit two late foul shots to hold off the Badgers for a 68-63 win on Sunday.

The Spartans (28-3, 16-2) celebrated in the locker room after clinching the top seed in this week’s Big Ten Tournament in New York. But coach Tom Izzo could sense the weariness among his players, who had some mental lapses against Wisconsin.

No. 9 PURDUE 84, MINNESOTA 60:

final home game as No. 9 Purdue blew out Minnesota 84-60 on Sunday. Carsen Edwards had 18 points for the Boilermakers (26-5, 15-3 Big Ten), who won their third straight after a three-game skid. Minnesota (15-16, 4-14) was led by Nate Mason with 18 points and Jordan Murphy who had 14 points and 10 rebounds.

No. 11 CINCINNATI 82, TULSA 74:

Gary Clark led a 24-4 run that put Cincinnati ahead to stay early in the second half, and Cincinnati held on for an 82-74 victory over Tulsa on Sunday that preserved its one-game lead in the American Athletic Conference heading into the final week. Cincinnati (25-4, 14-2) stayed ahead of No. 13 Wichita State (23-5, 13-3) in the race for the regular-season title.

No. 20 NEVADA 92, COLORADO STATE 83:

Caleb Martin scored 25 points, Jordan Caroline had 21 points and 14 rebounds and No. 20 Nevada clinched the No. 1 seed in the Mountain West Tournament with a 92-83 victory over Colorado

State on Sunday. Cody Martin, Caleb’s twin brother, had 17 points and 10 assists for the Wolf Pack (25-5, 14-2 Mountain West), who clinched at least a share of the regular-season championship for the second consecutive year.

No. 23 HOUSTON 109, EAST CAROLINA 58:

Rob Gray had 19 points and 11 assists, and No. 23 Houston used a huge first half en route to a 109-58 victory over East Carolina on Sunday. Armoni Brooks added 21 points on 7-of-9 shooting from 3-point range for the Cougars (22-6, 12-4 American), who shot 67 percent from the field.

NORTH CAROLINA STATE 92, FLORIDA STATE 72:

Allerik Freeman scored 25 points to help North Carolina State beat Florida State. Torin Dorn added 19 points and Sam Hunt had 14 for the Wolfpack (20-9, 10-6 Atlantic Coast Conference), who opened the game with a 9-2 spurt and never trailed. N.C. State won its fourth consecutive ACC regular-season game in the same season for the first time since 2006.

Sunday’s speeches were heavy on references to sports as a means to peace. The fear that North Korea would disrupt the Games was a significant worry until North Korean leader Kim Jong-Un decided at the last minute to send a delegation of 22 athletes, along with cheerleaders, musicians and government officials.

Many South Koreans were skeptical of Kim’s motives, but they were captivated by the spirit of the unified Korean women’s hockey team, which became one of the most popular story lines of the Games. Women in all sports found more opportunity at these Olympics, constituting 41.5 percent of the athletes — the largest proportion ever.

Norway led all nations with 39 medals, a Winter Games record. The last one came Sunday afternoon in the final competition, the women’s cross-country 30-kilometer mass start classic, and it carried special meaning. Marit Bjørgen won by nearly two minutes to conclude her fifth and final Olympics with her eighth career gold medal, tying the Olympic record.

On her way into the Alpensia stadium, Bjørgen, 37, swapped one of her ski poles for a large Norwegian flag and waved it to the crowd as she reached the finish line. Bjørgen medaled in all five of her events in Pyeongchang and pushed her career total to 15 medals, the most in Olympic history.

Norway and Germany tied for the most gold medals with 14 each. The U.S. finished fourth in both gold medals (nine) and total medals (23), its smallest medal count at a Winter Games since 1998.

Alan Ashley, chief of sport performance for the U.S. Olympic Committee, said he was not dwelling on the numbers. He noted that American athletes finished between fourth and sixth place 35 times.

“We always want to do better,” Ashley said. “But I’m probably more encouraged than I’ve ever been, even though people say, ‘You didn’t hit your medal count.’ I look at this as an opportunity for us. And the way (the U.S. athletes) represented their country, their families and their communities has been truly fantastic.”

second-half lead erased and less than 30 seconds to play, Chiozza found

Hudson cutting to the basket for a big three-point play and Florida made just enough free throws the rest of the way to beat 12th-ranked Auburn 72-66 at Exactech Arena.

An electric crowd of 10,503 finally was able to celebrate a win after three straight losses for Florida, now 18-11 and 9-7 in the SEC.

Despite that recent dominance, this was only Harvick’s second Cup win in Atlanta. He also won in 2001, giving the Richard Childress team a win following the death of Dale Earnhardt in Daytona a few weeks earlier. Harvick was given a new No. 29 in Earnhardt’s car. Following the win, Harvick held three fingers out of the window in tribute to Earnhardt.

Harvick duplicated that three-finger salute after Sunday’s win.

Rookie Darrell “Bubba” Wallace Jr., coming off a second-place finish at last week’s Daytona 500, finished 32nd. Wallace was the first black driver in the Daytona 500 field since 1969, and he became the first black Cup racer in an Atlanta race since Bill Lester finished 38th in 2006.

Martin Truex Jr., the 2017 series champion, started 35th after failing to qualify on Saturday but was up to fourth by the 12th lap before finishing fifth.

Jimmie Johnson, who won in Atlanta in 2015 and 2016, finished 27th. There were no wrecks but there was a caution after Johnson’s spin in turn 2 on lap 160.

With no “open” cars, the 36-car field was NASCAR’s smallest since 1996. There were 40 cars in the Daytona field.

Thomas rapped in a 4-footer for his birdie and the eighth win of his career. It moves him to No. 3 in the world, one spot ahead of longtime friend Jordan Spieth for the first time in their careers.

“It was a hell of a battle out there,” Thomas said. “I stayed very calm all day. It feels awesome to come out on top.”

Alex Noren was tied for the lead playing the 18th and caught an awkward lie from the side of a bunker. He made par for a 67 and finished one shot behind.

Thomas and List finished at 8-under 272. It was the seventh playoff in 15 PGA Tour events this season.

Tiger Woods was briefly within three shots of the lead on the front nine. He closed with a 70 and finished 12th.

Woods made that Sunday red shirt look a little brighter, at least for a while. With an 8-foot birdie putt on the par-4 eighth hole, he momentarily pulled to within three shots of the lead. That only lasted the few minutes that it took Thomas to tap in for birdie on the par-5 third.

Woods made bogey to close out his front nine, and he still was four shots behind until getting swallowed up again by the water-filled closing stretch. He put his tee shot into water and made double bogey for the second straight day, three-putted the 16th for bogey and was out of hope.

“I made a big leap this week because I really hit it well,” Woods said. “I was able to control it, especially in this wind, which is not easy to do.”

Woods led the field in proximity to the hole on his approach shots at just over 29 feet.

Not to be overlooked was Sam Burns of LSU, who last year won the Jack Nicklaus Award as the top college player who received a sponsor exemption. Playing alongside Woods in such a chaotic arena, he was bogey-free for a 68 to tie for eighth. That will get him into the Valspar Championship at Innisbrook in two weeks.

Five players had at least a share of the lead. Only three of them stuck around until the end.

Webb Simpson missed the fairway on the 11th hole and had to lay up instead of taking on the water. That led to the first of three bogeys in a four-hole stretch and sent him to a 72, four shots behind. Tommy Fleetwood was tied for the lead until a three-putt bogey from long range on the 14th, and a bogey from the back bunker on the 15th. A birdie on the final hole for a 69 left him two shots behind.

Noren faded early on the back nine with a three-putt bogey on the 11th and a bad tee shot that led to bogey on the 13th. He rallied, however with birdies on the two of the next three holes and had a chance on the par-5 18th until his second shot got hung up in the thick collar of a bunker. He made par for a 67, and could only watch as List and Thomas finished with birdies.

Thomas made one more that mattered.

“This one is going to sting a little bit,” List said. “But I found a restored passion for what I do out here. I gave it my best effort on every shot.”

LPGA TOUR:

Jessica Korda closed with a 4-under 67 to complete a four-shot victory and set the tournament record in the Honda LPGA Thailand. Korda held off Lexi Thompson and Moriya Jutanugarn on Sunday to finish at 25-under 263, breaking by three shots the 72-hole record on the Pattaya Old Course at Siam Country Club. Korda won for the first time since 2015 in Malaysia. The victory comes two months after she had surgery on an overbite, which delayed the start of her season. “I just came with no expectations after surgery. It’s really hard for me to move. All this stuff is just still really hard, but I’m really, really happy that I chose to come back in this event exactly where I started my rookie year in 2011. I don’t think I could have asked for a better win,” she said. Thompson, who won here in 2016, turned in a bogey-free round that included eight birdies for a 64. Jutanugarn, the sister of former world No. 1 Ariya Jutanugarn, never got closer than two shots of the lead.

Florida suffers first loss

Miami avoids the sweep with 2-0 win

By Walter Villa
Gainesville Sun

CORAL GABLES — Cue Meatloaf.

People of a certain age will remember that the aforementioned burly singer once belted out his classic, "Two Out of Three Ain't Bad," and that message is what the top-ranked Florida Gators baseball team takes away from this weekend.

On Sunday, the host Miami Hurricanes blanked the Gators 2-0, but Florida still won two out of three games in the series.

The Gators (7-1) had won 10 consecutive games dating to last year's national championship run. And, even after Sunday's loss, they have won 10 out of their past 12 games against Miami (3-4).

Even so, the Gators wanted more.

"Yeah, I guess you could say that," Gators shortstop Jonathan India said when asked about taking the series. "We're still disappointed, but, hey, we'll take it. We wanted the sweep."

The sweep didn't come mainly because Gators' batters struck out 13 times and managed just three hits. The only extra-base hit was India's double, which should've been an out. India popped up, but the ball fell near the pitcher's mound.

Austin Langworthy and Keenan Bell had Florida's other hits Sunday, and the Gators drew five walks.

Gators starter Tyler Dyson (1-1) deserved a better fate after allowing just four hits, no walks and one run in six innings. He struck out eight, but got beat in the fifth when he allowed consecutive, two-out doubles to left by nine-hole hitter Willy Escala and leadoff man Michael Burns.

"They found a hole," Dyson said. "They didn't necessarily hit it hard, but they were placed perfectly. ... I could've missed a couple of inches lower."

The 'Canes extended their lead to 2-0 in the seventh, getting to reliever Andrew Baker, a sophomore left-hander. Just like in the fifth, Miami started its rally with two outs and none on, as Miami's Freddy Zamora singled to center and advanced on a walk.

Florida brought in another reliever, freshman Hunter McMullen, who got ahead on Burns 0-2. But Burns, who chokes up slightly, battled back to a 3-2 count before hitting an opposite-field, end-of-his bat ground-ball single past first baseman Bell, who dove to his right.

Miami starter Evan McKendry (1-1) got the win by allowing just two hits and two walks, striking out eight in six innings.

Andrew Cabezas earned his second save of the season by pitching three innings, allowing just one hit and striking out five. But Cabezas walked the bases loaded with two outs in the seventh, escaping when Langworthy flew out to medium center on a 1-0 pitch.

Cabezas needed 30 pitches to finish the seventh and threw 64 pitches in his three innings. But he finished strong.

After Bell's lead-off single in the ninth, Cabezas struck out the side, getting Blake Reese (swinging), Nick Horvath (swinging) and Brady McConnell (looking).

"You always as a coach go positive," Florida coach Kevin O'Sullivan said. "You feel like you will get back in the game. But credit McKendry, and (Cabezas) made pitches when he needed."

Rinne earns shutout, Predators best Blues

The Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Pekka Rinne showed no signs of a letdown following his milestone 300th victory.

Rinne made 27 saves for his sixth shutout of the season and the Nashville Predators earned a 4-0 victory over the St. Louis Blues on Sunday.

The Predators starting goalie moved into 33rd place on the NHL's career win list, passing former Nashville goalie Tomas Vokoun.

The Predators won their fourth straight game and moved into sole possession of first place in the Central Division.

BRANSON, MO. Hamilton, pitcher who hit Conigliaro on eye, dies

Jack Hamilton, whose errant inside pitch damaged the eyesight of Boston's Tony Conigliaro in 1967 and caused a premature end to the career of the Red Sox star, has died. He was 79.

Hamilton died Thursday at the Shepherd of The Hills Living Center in Branson, the Greenlawn Funeral Home said.

Signed by St. Louis ahead of the 1957 season, he was selected by Philadelphia in a minor league draft after the 1960 season. Hamilton pitched in the major leagues from 1962-69 and was 32-40 with a 4.53 ERA in 65 starts and 153 relief appearances for the Phillies, Detroit, the New York Mets, the California Angels, Cleveland and the Chicago White Sox. He went 9-12 as a rookie, leading the National League in walks with 107 and wild pitches with 22.

Hamilton was traded from the Mets to the Angels in June 1967 and had won eight of his first 10 decisions overall that year going into a start at Boston's Fenway Park on Aug. 18, 1967. He threw a pitch in the fourth inning that fractured Conigliaro's left cheekbone, dislocated his jaw and left him with retina damage and blurred vision. An All-Star who at 22 became the youngest American League player to reach 100 home runs, Conigliaro had helped put the Red Sox in position to win their first pennant since 1946.

MINNEAPOLIS Wolves: Butler has successful knee surgery

The Minnesota Timberwolves say All-Star guard Jimmy Butler underwent successful meniscus surgery on his right knee.

The team announced Sunday that the operation was performed by Dr. Diane Dahm at Mayo Clinic in Rochester. Dahm is the team's orthopedic surgeon.

Butler will be sidelined indefinitely. The team says further updates on his progress will be issued as he begins rehabilitation.

MARSEILLE, FRANCE Khachanov beats Pouille to win Open 13 final

Big-serving Karen Khachanov secured the second ATP title of his career after beating Lucas Pouille 7-5, 3-6, 7-5 in the Open 13 final on Sunday.

The ninth-seeded Russian had 16 aces in a closely fought contest, winning on his second match point when the third-seeded Frenchman hit a forehand into the net from the back of the court. The pair hugged at the net in a show of sportsmanship.

"I hope there are many more finals between us in the future," Khachanov said to Pouille. "I felt I was playing good here from the first day. It's nice to play on a full court in the final, and I hope to come back next year."

Most Olympians will never get rich, and that's OK with them

By Kristen Gelineau
The Associated Press

PYEONGCHANG, South Korea — You see them everywhere after the Olympics, the beaming faces and chiseled physiques of superstar athletes on everything from cereal boxes to athletic shoe ads.

Here is what you don't see: The countless other Olympians who will never get a lucrative endorsement deal, who toil in relative obscurity, who struggle to pay their bills and balance work schedules with intense training just for a chance to compete with the best.

The reality for most Olympians couldn't be farther from that of the charmed few who live off endorsements and sponsorships.

"If you're curling because you want to be a millionaire, you're in the wrong sport," Canadian curler Ben Hebert said with a chuckle after a recent game in Pyeongchang.

Most of the athletes competing at the Pyeongchang Games know they will never get rich off their athletic feats. Some barely break even. They are driven not by money, but by a sense of achievement, of pride, of a chance at grabbing a glory that most of us never could.

Still, that glory doesn't come cheap. So to fund their dreams, Olympians set up crowd-funding websites, look for jobs with odd hours that won't interfere with practice, or work overtime to save up money in the offseason so they can cut back when it's time to hit the road.

Hebert works as a sales manager for a land surveying company in Calgary. Because his company is one of the curling team's sponsors, his bosses have given him flexibility with his schedule. But it's still not easy.

His wife has to handle the care for their 4-year-old daughter and 8-month-old son while he's competing. When he's not away, he tries to maximize his time at home by dashing to the curling club for practice on his lunch break. After work, he plays with the kids and then heads to bed.

"There's a lot that goes into the sacrifice of being an amateur athlete at the Olympics, but being here and seeing all the other athletes in the opening ceremonies and competing for medals, that's why you do it," he said. "There's a lot of really, really good Canadian curlers, athletes that sacrifice just as much as we do, and they're not here. So we're the lucky ones."

Hebert's teammate, Kevin Koe, works full time as a surface landman for an oil and gas company, liaising with landowners and farmers. He often finds himself working even while on the road for curling competitions, making calls and answering emails in between matches.

He, too, jams training and gym sessions into his lunch hour. After work, he heads home to spend time with his 10-year-old and 12-year-old daughters.

"They're busy and I miss a lot of it, but when I'm there, I like to see as much as I can," said Koe, whose team finished fourth. "It's a balancing act but it just seems like it's been like that for so long, you just kind of get used to it."

Working as a plumber has provided U.S. snowboard-cross rider Jonathan Cheever with access to ample job opportunities and quick cash. It's also given him links to sponsors in the plumbing industry, some of whom have backed him for 10 years.

"I travel the world in snowboard. My biggest complaint is I run up credit card debt, but like in the grand scheme of things, life is really good," said Cheever, who finished 28th. "If money was my main motivator, I would probably be in (Massachusetts) right now or waking up in the morning to go to a job site, but it's not. I love the lifestyle. I've met my wife through snowboard cross."

The injuries that often accompany athletes' Olympic dreams can amplify their financial woes. French freestyle skier Anais Caradeux showed up to the 2014 Sochi Games on crutches after suffering a serious knee injury three weeks earlier. She was determined to compete in the halfpipe and ended up crashing so hard that it took her years to fully recover.

While she was recuperating, Caradeux's sponsors abandoned her. Between travel, coaching and practice fees, one season alone costs around 35,000 Euros ($43,000), Caradeux says. So she began working in markets as a temporary tattoo artist. She spent the money she made wisely, carefully choosing where and when to train.

"It's been challenging the past few years to have to deal with money issues plus the body issues," she said. "It does bring your spirit down a little bit because you feel like ... asking yourself if you're really, really on the right path, you know? Maybe you're wasting your time."

And yet like many Olympians, she continued to push through the financial and physical pain.

"I couldn't quit my career without coming back to one Olympics, or at least give everything I have to get the chances to go back," said Caradeux, who finished 12th in Pyeongchang.

Tabitha Peterson, a member of the U.S. women's curling team, squeezes in as many hours as she can as a pharmacist when she's not competing. Her work hours vary, so she hits the gym whenever she can and goes to the curling center a few times a week.

"When you're gone, it's lost wages. I mean, you can make some money on tour if you do well, but it's definitely not enough to support yourself," she said. "But to do something like this and get to the Olympics and compete on this stage is kind of the goal."

All the juggling leads up to exhaustion for some of the athletes. Nina Roth, the "skip" or captain of the U.S. women's curling team, begins her shifts as a nurse at 6:30 a.m. That means waking up at 4:30 to jump on the elliptical machine before she heads to the hospital. Some days, after putting in 12 hours at work, she'll head to the curling club for practice. Other times, her legs are so tired from standing all day that she saves her energy and opts to put in one long practice session on her day off.

In the run-up to Pyeongchang, Roth and her husband set aside extra money so she could reduce her hours to part-time. But she still doesn't see her husband as much as she'd like, and the demands can be draining. The U.S. women's team failed to qualify for the medal round.

That said, she wouldn't change it for anything.

"We just love the game so much, so being able to represent USA — I mean, this is worth all of that," she said, and then laughed. "This is worth being poor!"

At 38, Young tries to win spot on Padres' pitching staff

By Bernie Wilson
The Associated Press

PEORIA, Ariz. — There's some living history in the San Diego Padres' clubhouse this spring.

Chris Young is back with the Padres and trying to earn a spot on the staff, whether it's in the rotation or in the bullpen.

"Archaic, maybe, but I don't know about historic," the 38-year-old said with a laugh.

Actually, he is historic. Young is the last Padres pitcher to win a playoff game. On Oct. 7, 2006, the 6-foot-10 right-hander threw 6 2-3 scoreless innings of four-hit ball in the Padres' 3-1 victory at St. Louis in Game 3 of their NL Division Series.

"I don't know if that's known throughout the clubhouse," Young said. "We'll see who figures it out."

That's how long it's been since the Padres won a playoff game.

The guy who got the save that day, Trevor Hoffman, is going into the Hall of Fame this summer. The Padres' catcher in that game, Mike Piazza, went into the Hall of Fame in 2016. The left fielder, Dave Roberts, is going into his third season as manager of the rival Los Angeles Dodgers after spending five seasons on San Diego's staff.

The day after Young's victory, the Padres were eliminated. They haven't been back to the post-season since, although they came close the following season when they lost a wild-card tiebreaker at Colorado. That win remains San Diego's only playoff victory since 1998.

Young is back with the Padres after seven years away, including missing all of 2013 with arm problems. He spent the last three seasons with the Kansas City Royals, earning the victory in Game 1 of the 2015 World Series, a 14-inning epic that sent the Royals on their way to their first title in 30 years.

"I feel good," said Young, who's in camp as a non-roster invitee. "I feel healthy, excited about the way the ball's coming out right now. If I can come in and help this team win and be a veteran presence, San Diego has a very special place in my heart, some unbelievable memories. I was here when this team was good. The last winning season here I was part of, and I want to be part of the next, and the next playoff team as well."

Young's last season in San Diego, 2010, was the Padres' last winning season.

"So I've been there. I remember the good times for this organization. I know how great the fans of San Diego are and how much it would mean to them to get back there. I would love to be part of it."

19298 SECTION 00010
 ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS

NOTICE TO RECEIVE SEALED BIDS

PANAMA CITY BEACH "STREET RESURFACING PROJECT - FY 2018"

This project includes the resurfacing of a portion of Eagle Drive, a portion of Gulf Blvd, a portion of Vestavia St. Lake View Circle, Deluna PL, Moonlight Bay Drive, Gulf Ln, Lake Cir and Emerald Lake Dr. The Contractor shall provide all materials, equipment and labor to complete the project. All Bidders shall be Florida Department of Transportation prequalified and must provide proof of pre-qualification prior to Notice of Award.

Plans and specifications will be available on February 19, 2018 at 2:00 pm and can be obtained at the Public Works office at 116 South Arnold Road, Panama City Beach, Florida 32413 or by e-mail by contacting Sheryl Woodcock at swoodcock@pcbgo.com. The bid must conform to Section 287.133(3) Florida Statutes, with respect to Public Entity Crimes.

A mandatory pre-bid meeting will be held at 2:00 p.m. (CST) on March 5, 2018 at the City of Panama City Beach City Hall Annex, 110 South Arnold Road, Panama City Beach, Florida.

Bids will be received until 2:00 p.m. Central Time, March 21, 2018 at City of Panama City Beach City Hall, 110 South Arnold Road, Panama City Beach, Florida, 32413 and will be opened and read publicly immediately thereafter. All Bids shall be submitted in an envelope clearly marked "Sealed Bid - Panama City Beach - "STREET RESURFACING PROJECT - FY 2018". A Bid Bond in the amount of 5% of the total amount of the Bid shall accompany the Bid. The City of Panama City Beach ("City") reserves the right to reject any and all Bids. All Bids shall be firm (including all labor and material prices) for a period of 30 days after opening.

The City shall award the Contract to the lowest responsive and responsible bidder; provided, however, the City reserves the right to award the Contract to a Bidder who is not the lowest responsive and responsible bidder if the City determines in its reasonable discretion that another Bid offers the City a better value based upon the reliability, quality of service, or product of such other Bidder.
