‘Big price to pay’ for Syria attack

By Jonathan Lemire
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump on Sunday condemned a “mindless CHEMICAL attack” in Syria that killed women and children, called Syrian President Bashar Assad an “animal” and delivered a rare personal criticism of Russian President Vladimir Putin for supporting the Damascus government.

As Washington worked to verify the claim by Syrian opposition activists and rescuers that poison gas was used, Trump said there would be a “big price to pay” for resorting to outlawed weapons of mass destruction. A top White House aide, asked about the possibility of a U.S. missile strike in response, said, “I wouldn’t take anything off the table.”

Just over a year ago, Trump ordered dozens of cruise missiles to be fired at a Syrian air base after declaring there was no doubt Assad had “choked out the lives of helpless” civilians in an attack that used banned gases. White House advisers said at the time that images of hurt children helped spur the president to launch that air strike, and television new shows on Sunday aired similar depictions of suffering young Syrians.

“Many dead, including women and children, in mindless CHEMICAL attack in Syria,” Trump tweeted. “Area of atrocity is in lockdown and encircled by Syrian Army, making it completely inaccessible to outside world. President Putin, Russia and Iran are responsible for backing Animal Assad. Big price to pay. Open area immediately for medical help and verification. Another humanitarian disaster for no reason whatsoever. SICK!”

Saturday’s attack took place in a rebel-held town near Damascus amid a resumed offensive by Syrian government forces after the

FWC looks to protect West Bay oysters

WEST BAY — After a pilot program showed some success, the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) is looking to formalize protections of an oyster reef and seagrass restoration program in West Bay.

In 2016, FWC started planting oyster reefs in West Bay using oil spill money with the goal of creating a better habitat for seagrass growth, according to project lead Katie Konchar.

Compared to the seagrass documented in the 1960s, roughly 15 percent of seagrass is still intact, according Konchar.

“The intent is to use the structure of the oyster and their function to bring them back,” Konchar said.

The line of oysters, covering about three acres, serves two main purposes, she said. The physical structure creates a barrier from the waves which protects the seagrass and blocks

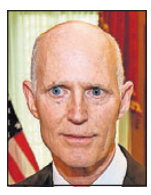
Gov. Rick Scott preps for Senate run vs. Bill Nelson

By John Kennedy
GateHouse Capital Bureau

TALLAHASSEE — As a political outsider and later an unpopular incumbent, Rick Scott beat the odds and got elected — then re-elected — as Florida’s governor, spending $86 million of his family’s money in elections when Republicans did well nationwide.



Scott

Nelson

Fast forward to 2018 and Scott on Monday in Orlando looks ready to roll the dice again.

But this time he is expected to announce his challenge to three-term Democratic U.S. Sen. Bill Nelson at a time Republicans are struggling with the burden of a polarizing President Donald Trump.

“Scott has a record he can run on, his popularity numbers are up, for him, and he’ll have plenty of money to spend,” said Rick Wilson, a Tallahassee Republican consultant and prominent talk show critic of President

READER FEEDBACK

The Bay County Sheriff's Office issued a scam alert last week reminding residents about IRS scams that are common this time of year. One Facebook fan summed it up best.

Jim Gentry: "Scammers in Bay County? I can't imagine." Gentry was similarly amazed with a story about the Kiwanis Club's annual "Bottomless pancake" breakfast, writing, "I've never had a bottomless pancake."

The county is facing an unexpected multimillion-dollar repair or replacement of a leaking water main, but officials said Wednesday that customers' water bills are not expected to increase to fund it.

Dean Walker: "That bridge is poorly engineered and built."

Iris McVann Fiddler This is Insane for a relatively new bridge!!"

Teresa Nester Hamilton: "BP money."

One story last week focused on six Alabama males arrested after a woman was held up at gunpoint in Panama City Beach for her purse.

Jason Maddux: "Sure glad we had those ordinances to keep us safe. Smh.

Sharon Decker Kuehn: "I carry a gun for government tyranny and idiot tourists. JS. They make the rules, not me."

Lee Mcdonald: "Great PR!! I guess we should keep expecting more of the same. Open carry season has begun."

Brian Mourton: "Florida needs a border checkpoint. Start running warrants before they come down."

A story about the state seeking a hold on restoring felon's voting rights drew comments from our Facebook fans.

Suzanne La'Rue "Restore them!!!!"

Jerome Moore: "Only after doing their time and pay all fines and then five years after they do everything."

Stephanie Marshall: "After their time yes, but once you are a civilian, you should not be judged for 5 more years. If you can pay taxes, then you can vote. If they want to withhold rights, we should withhold taxes."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, April 9, the 99th day of 2018. There are 266 days left in the year.

Highlight in History:

On April 9, 1968, funeral services, private and public, were held for Martin Luther King Jr. at Ebenezer Baptist Church and Morehouse College in Atlanta, five days after the civil rights leader was assassinated in Memphis, Tennessee.

On this date:

In 1682, French explorer Robert de La Salle claimed the Mississippi River Basin for France.

In 1865, Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee surrendered his army to Union Lt. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant at Appomattox Court House in Virginia.

In 1939, singer Marian Anderson performed a concert at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C., after being denied the use of Constitution Hall by the Daughters of the American Revolution.

In 1942, during World War II, some 75,000 Philippine and American defenders on Bataan surrendered to Japanese troops, who forced the prisoners into what became known as the Bataan Death March; thousands died or were killed en route.

In 1959, NASA presented its first seven astronauts: Scott Carpenter, Gordon Cooper, John Glenn, Gus Grissom, Wally Schirra, Alan Shepard and Donald Slayton. Architect Frank Lloyd Wright, 91, died in Phoenix, Arizona.

In 1977, Spain's Communist Party was legalized by Prime Minister Adolfo Suarez.

In 1979, officials declared an end to the crisis involving the Three Mile Island Unit 2 nuclear reactor in Pennsylvania, 12 days after a partial core meltdown.

In 1983, the space shuttle Challenger ended its first mission with a safe landing at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

Trump, whose book, "Everything Trump Touches, Dies," is due out in August.

"Scott can win, if he can manage the Trump thing. But I'm not sure anyone can do that," he added.

The governor endorsed Trump and was publicly encouraged last September by the president to run for the Senate seat. Scott also raised money for candidate Trump through the New Republican PAC he chairs that now stands ready to fuel the campaign launching this week.

Both major parties and their allies are certain to pour millions of dollars into Florida's U.S. Senate contest, making it already listed among a half-dozen toss-up campaigns that will help determine whether Republicans maintain control of the chamber next year.

"For 2018, this is the heavyweight bout for both parties," said state Rep. Evan Jenne, D-Dania Beach. "In Florida, it's also going to affect every other race on the ballot, from governor down to legislative races."

As Scott, 65, tries to navigate another candidacy — with his ties to Trump serving as risky ballast — the race against Nelson will put his eight years as Florida's chief executive in sharp focus.

For Nelson, it will prove his toughest campaign since his first election in 2000 against former Orlando-area Congressman Bill McCollum. Since then, he's had easier times defeating former U.S. Rep. Katherine Harris, R-Sarasota, and ex-U.S. Rep. Connie Mack IV, R-Fort Myers.

Nelson, who will turn 76 in the fall, is Florida's only statewide elected Democrat. In Washington, he is considered a centrist Democrat while back home, he has been a fixture on Florida ballots going back to 1972, serving as a Space Coast congressman and state insurance commissioner before winning the U.S. Senate seat.

He has lost one political race in 46 years – the 1990 Democratic primary for governor, to Lawton Chiles.

"Bill Nelson is more liberal than he looks," Wilson said, citing surveys that show Nelson sides with his party on bills about 90 percent of the time. "But he always sells himself as a conservative Democrat."

Still, Nelson regularly proves a strong vote-getter in such Republican strongholds as the Florida Panhandle and suburban Central Florida.

For Scott, that could be trouble. In past squeaker victories — he won each governor's race by margins of one percentage point — he hardly could afford to lose likely Republican voters.

But the self-styled jobs governor can tout an unemployment rate that went from 11.9 percent the month he took office to 3.9 percent in February.

Democrats are trying to chip away at that performance, already using the campaign theme: "Rick's Recession." They cite Florida's wages, which are below the national average, and analysis showing the number of jobs in most of Florida's 67 counties still are below those of pre-recession 2007.

"No one can underestimate Scott," said Steve Schale, a Florida Democratic consultant who helped steer Barack Obama's campaigns in the state in 2008 and 2012.

"It's going to be a close race, with polls probably having them 1 or 2 percent apart into November," he added. "And things outside the control of either candidate could probably decide it."

More controversy from Trump, economic upheaval, or international conflict could tilt what Schale sees as a drum-tight race from start to finish.

Scott's approval ratings among Florida voters reached their highest level ever — 49 percent — in a Quinnipiac University poll released in late February.

It marked the first time in almost three years — and only the third time in his two terms as governor — that more Floridians approved than disapproved of Scott and his performance in the Quinnipiac surveys.

Easing concerns?

Amid trade fight, Trump says China will eventually 'do the right thing' to help end dispute

By Jonathan Lemire
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Amid global fears of an escalating trade dispute between the U.S. and China, President Donald Trump suggested that Beijing will ease trade barriers "because it is the right thing to do" and that the economic superpowers can settle the conflict that has rattled financial markets, consumers and businesses.

But fostering more uncertainty, the president's top economic advisers offered mixed messages Sunday as to the best approach with China, which has threatened to retaliate if Washington follows through with its proposed tariffs, even as Trump emphasized his bond with Chinese President Xi Jinping.

"President Xi and I will always be friends, no matter what happens with our dispute on trade," Trump wrote. "China will take down its Trade Barriers because it is the right thing to do. Taxes will become Reciprocal & a deal will be made on Intellectual Property. Great future for both countries!"

But Trump did not explain why, amid a week of economic saber-rattling between the two countries that shook global markets, he felt confident a deal could be made.

The president made fixing the trade imbalance with China a centerpiece of his presidential campaign, where he frequently used incendiary language to describe how Beijing would "rape" the U.S. economically. But even as Trump cozied up to Xi and pressed China for help with derailing North Korea's nuclear ambitions, he has ratcheted up the economic pressure and threatened tariffs, a move opposed by many fellow Republicans.

The Trump administration has said it is taking action as a crackdown on China's theft of U.S. intellectual property. The U.S. bought more than $500 billion in goods from China last year and now is planning or considering penalties on some $150 billion of those imports. The U.S. sold about $130 billion in goods to China in 2017 and faces a potentially devastating hit to its market there if China responds in kind.

China has pledged to "counterattack with great strength" if Trump decides to follow through on his latest threat to impose tariffs on an additional $100 billion in Chinese goods — after an earlier announcement that targeted $50 billion. Beijing also declared that the current rhetoric made negotiations impossible, even as the White House suggested that the tariff talk was a way to spur China to the bargaining table.

The new White House economic adviser, Larry Kudlow, said Sunday that a "coalition of the willing" — including Canada, much of Europe and Australia — was being formed to pressure China and that the U.S. would demand that the World Trade Organization, an arbiter of trade disputes, be stricter on Beijing. And he said that although the U.S. hoped to avoid taking action, Trump "was not bluffing."

"This is a problem caused by China, not a problem caused by President Trump," Kudlow said on "Fox News Sunday."

But he also downplayed the tariff threat as "part of the process," suggested on CNN that the impact would be "benign" and said he was hopeful that China would enter negotiations. Kudlow, who started his job a week ago after his predecessor, Gary Cohn, quit over the tariff plan, brushed aside the possibility of economic repercussions.

"I don't think there's any trade war in sight," Kudlow told Fox.

Treasury Secretary Steve Mnuchin said on CBS' "Face the Nation" that he didn't expect the tariffs to have a "meaningful impact on the economy" even as he left the door open for disruption. He allowed that there "could be" a trade war but said he didn't anticipate one.

Injuries in human-smuggling crash on California highway

A horse trailer carrying at least 18 people who entered the country illegally overturned on a Southern California highway just north of the border with Mexico, authorities said.

Several people inside the trailer were hurt in the crash Saturday near the town of Campo, with injuries described as moderate and minor.

Six patients were hospitalized, the San Diego Union-Tribune reported.

A witness told the California Highway Patrol that the two-axle trailer being hauled by a pickup truck began to fishtail and eventually tipped onto its right side along northbound Interstate 8.

Family members of sailors killed in the deadliest submarine disaster in U.S. history are grateful for the sense of community surrounding a 55th anniversary commemoration.

The granddaughter of Charles Wiggins, one of the sailors who died on the USS Thresher, said it's hard for others to understand the loss felt by those who were left behind, the Portsmouth Herald reported.

Abbas says he won't return to Gaza until he has control

Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas says that unless he gets full control over the Hamas-ruled Gaza Strip, including the group's weapons, he will "not be responsible for what goes on" there.

Abbas' comments late Sunday dealt another blow to months of U.S.-backed Egyptian efforts to negotiate a deal that would sideline the Islamic militant Hamas and enable Abbas' self-rule government to return to Gaza.

Hamas seized Gaza from forces loyal to Abbas in 2007.

Recent talks between Abbas and his rivals failed, mainly because Hamas refuses to disarm.

This comes as tensions are rising on the Gaza-Israel border, with Hamas leading mass protests to try to break an Israeli-Egyptian border blockade.

26K evacuated in west German town for WWII bomb removal

More than 26,000 people have been evacuated in the western German town of Paderborn so bomb specialists could remove a World War II-era bomb discovered during construction work.

In addition to people leaving their homes, two hospitals, a university and several nursing homes had to be evacuated.

Specialists defused the 1.8 ton heavy British bomb on Sunday, more than a week after it was found by construction workers in a garden, only 31 inches under the ground.

NORRISTOWN, Pa. — Bill Cosby's sexual assault retrial is guaranteed to be anything but a rerun.

With opening statements set for Monday in the first big celebrity trial of the #MeToo era, prosecutors have lined up a parade of accusers to make the case that the man revered as "America's Dad" lived a double life as one of Hollywood's biggest predators.

Cosby, 80, is fighting back with a new, high-profile lawyer and an aggressive strategy: attacking Andrea Constand as a greedy liar and casting the other women testifying as bandwagon accusers looking for a share of the spotlight.

"You've seen previews and coming attractions, but things have changed," said professor Laurie Levenson of Loyola Law School in Los Angeles.

Cosby's first trial last spring ended in a cliffhanger, with jurors unable to reach a unanimous verdict after five days of tense deliberations on charges that the man who made millions of viewers laugh as wise and understanding Dr. Cliff Huxtable on "The Cosby Show" drugged and molested Constand at his suburban Philadelphia home in 2004.

The comedian, who has said the sexual contact was consensual, faces three counts of aggravated indecent assault, each punishable by up to 10 years in prison.

His retrial is taking place in a radically changed and potentially more hostile environment. The #MeToo movement caught fire four months after the first trial, raising awareness of sexual misconduct as it toppled Harvey Weinstein, Sen. Al Franken, Matt Lauer and other powerful men.

Nearly every potential juror questioned for the case this time knew about #MeToo.

Kristen Houser of the National Sexual Violence Resource Center said that could help prosecutors overcome the skepticism some jurors had last time about Constand's yearlong wait to report her allegations to the police.

SYRIA

collapse of a truce. Syrian activists, rescuers and medics said a poison gas attack in Douma killed at least 40 people, with families found suffocated in their houses and shelters. The reports could not immediately be independently verified.

The developments come as Trump has moved to dramatically scale back U.S. goals in Syria, pushing for a quick military withdrawal despite resistance from many of his national security advisers. Trump has given no formal order to pull out the 2,000 U.S. troops in Syria or offered a public timetable other than to say the U.S. will withdraw as soon as the remaining Islamic State fighters can be vanquished.

But Trump has signaled to his advisers that, ideally, he wants all troops out within six months.

Republican Sen. John McCain of Arizona said Assad heard Trump's signal that he wanted to withdraw from Syria and, "emboldened by American inaction," launched the attack. In a statement, McCain said Trump "responded decisively" last year with the air strike and urged Trump to be forceful again to "demonstrate that Assad will pay a price for his war crimes."

Images released by the Syrian Civil Defense White Helmets, a volunteer organization, show children lying on the ground motionless and foaming at the mouth. The Assad government, in a statement posted on the state-run news agency SANA, denied responsibility.

Trump was briefed about the attack by his chief of staff, John Kelly, officials said. Trump's homeland security adviser, Thomas Bossert, noted the timing of the suspected chemical attack — almost a year to the day of the U.S. missile strikes.

some of the sediment creating clearer, better sunlit water to spur growth. Secondly, the oysters themselves are filter feeders, which also improves water quality for both the grasses and other marine species.

Since the program started, FWC researchers have noticed some seagrass recovery — though it is unclear if it because of the reefs or other environmental factors, Konchar said — and documented over 30 species of fish and invertebrates on the reefs, which started as recycled shells and now contain about 20 million oysters.

Those oysters are currently protected from harvest by an executive order, but at the upcoming FWC Commission meeting on April 24 there is an item on the agenda to formalize the protection of West Bay Estuarine Habitat Restoration Project boundaries as a policy.

Discarded oyster shells are piled on a trailer at the Oyster Bash to benefit the Man in the Sea Museum, in February 2014 in Panama City Beach.

The change, Konchar said, will create "no practical difference." FWC spokeswoman Amanda Nalley said it is supported by the Bay County Oystermen's Association.

The rule will be reconsidered in 10 years, according Nalley, to "evaluate the key objectives of the project and closure."

Outside of the project, commercial harvest of oysters is open through June 30. The season is normally closed July 1 through Sept. 30.

During the open season, commercial harvesters are limited to five bags per person or a total of 10 bags of oyster per vessel.

Trump and the elephants

Elephants are majestic beasts that have long fascinated humans. These large mammals with distinctive ears, tusks and trunks are quite industrious and are believed to be among the most highly intelligent in the animal kingdom. Scientists believe they experience strong and complex emotions, including attachment for family members and grief at their passing.

Alas, elephants are also among the most hunted species in the world.

Many are slaughtered via poaching, or illegal hunting. The ivory from their large tusks remains a valuable commodity, reportedly worth more than $20,000 per elephant.

In 2014, the Obama administration imposed a near-total ban on interstate trade in ivory, and banned the importation of African elephant trophies, or body parts, from Zimbabwe and Zambia.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service attempted to loosen this ban last November — but ran into opposition from President Donald Trump. He tweeted that big game hunting was nothing more than a "horror show" and he would be "very hard pressed to change my mind."

But unlike a proverbial elephant, it appears that Trump sometimes — or conveniently — forgets.

On March 1, the Fish and Wildlife Service quietly loosened the ban. According to Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, imports of elephant trophies would be approved or rejected on a "case-by-case basis."

As of last week, Trump hadn't said or tweeted a word about this decision.

Critics harbor suspicions that the president's silence could be family-related. His two eldest sons, Donald Jr. and Eric, are both big game hunters. Photos of them next to animals they killed circulated on social media several years ago — including one of a smiling Donald Jr. with the elephant tail he had just cut off his prey.

It appears the president doesn't share his sons' enthusiasm for hunting. He told celebrity news website TMZ in March 2012, "My sons love hunting. They're hunters and they've become good at it. I am not a believer in hunting and I'm surprised they like it."

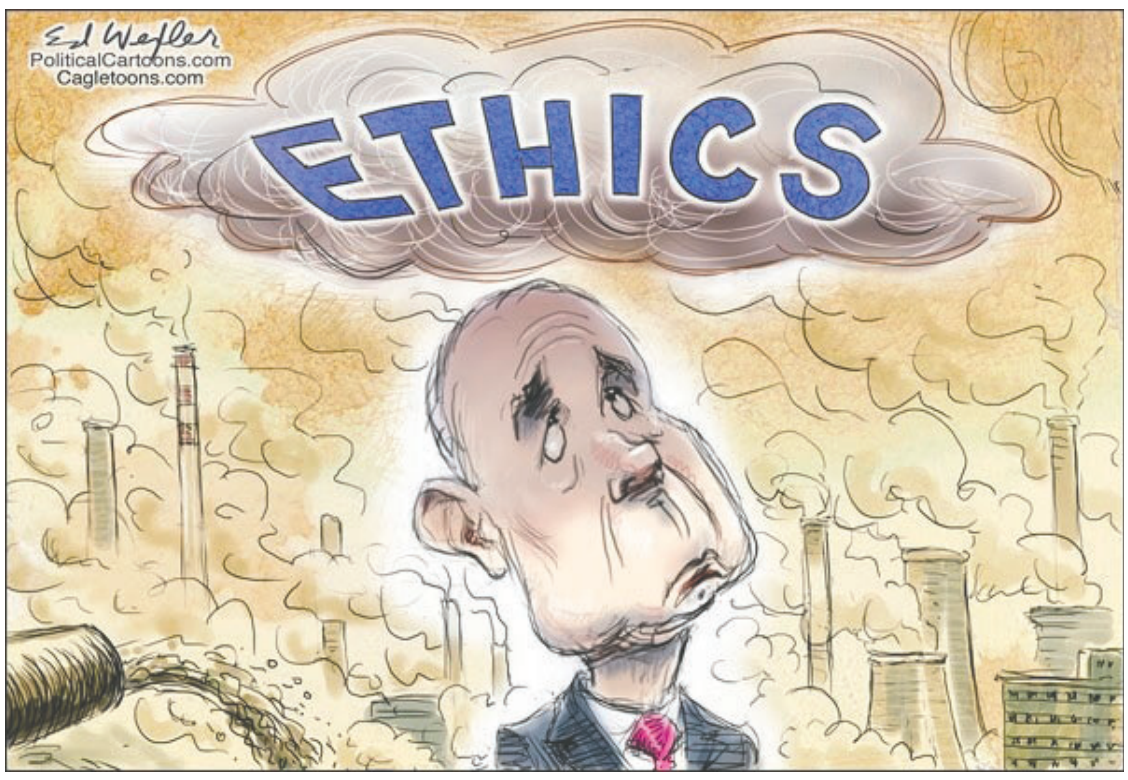
But if Trump has had long-standing issues with hunting, why did he stay silent about poaching African elephants the second time around?

There were reportedly 5 million elephants in Africa about a century ago. There are fewer than 400,000 now. That's why the International Union for Conservation of Nature has classified African elephants as "vulnerable" — and the U.S. Endangered Species Act has used the classification of "threatened" since 1979.

Meanwhile, wealthy people pay more than $50,000 a person to hunt these animals in Africa. These big game hunters assert that the fees aid conservation programs. But that seems a stretch at best.

If Trump views himself as a true friend of the pachyderms, he should reverse course and bring back the Obama-era ban on imports of elephant trophies. It would be the right thing to do, particularly for a man whose party symbol happens to be an elephant.

ANOTHER VIEW



A Regime of Austerity Versus the Common Good

Jim Hightower

Sometimes, it's useful to state the obvious. Here's a fact, for example, that we all know to be true: America's economy is enormous. It's worth saying that out loud and repeating it to ourselves and others, because today's Powers That Be (economic, political and media) are wrongly forcing a regime of austerity on our nation. They're insisting that we hoi polloi must downsize our middle class dreams, claiming that America no longer has the wherewithal to do big things.

Their narrow and pessimistic prescription for our future is not only at odds with the American spirit, but also at odds with the facts. The wealth of this nation is naturally huge and expansive — thanks to such fundamentals as the sheer size and diversity of our land, the breadth and depth of our natural resources and especially the can-do attitude of our enterprising and hardworking people.

In natural terms, our economy is a giant sequoia. Unfortunately, our present corporate and governmental leadership can't seem to grasp one of the basic laws of nature: You can't keep a mighty tree alive (much less have it thrive) by only spritzing the fine leaves at the tippy-top. The fate of the whole tree depends on nurturing the grassroots.

Sadly, in this time of such potential for greatness, we're led by a myopic crew of leaf spritzers. In Washington, on Wall Street and in the corporate suites, the elites have taken exquisite care of themselves, with the top one percent tripling their share of the nation's wealth since 1980. How did they obtain this phenomenal boost? By siphoning up shares of America's wealth that had been going to the rest of us. Blithely oblivious to the dangerous shriveling of the grassroots, they've increased their take by offshoring our middle-class jobs, slashing American wages and benefits in practically every sector, busting the ability of unions to fight back, deregulating their nefarious corporate and financial operations, dodging their tax obligations, privatizing and gutting public services and turning our elections into auctions run by and for billionaires.

This massive redistribution of wealth is not an issue of economics, but of basic morality. Fair and just behavior — especially by the powerful — are requisites for holding so many millions of us together as a free society.

The importance of this founding ethic has been instilled in us by the phrases, stories and symbols of our culture: The golden rule (Bible), the general welfare (Constitution), the common good (kindergarten), the social contract (New Deal), the land of opportunity (ubiquitous slogan), E pluribus unum (coins, the dollar bill, and the Great Seal), "one nation… with liberty and justice for all" (Pledge of Allegiance).

These and others reiterate and confirm our ethical pledge of trust in each other, our commitment to the notion that we're all in this together. That's the moral glue that defines and binds us as Americans. But each one is now being openly mocked.

The super-rich are separating their good fortunes from the well-being of the many. It's not just America's economy they're skewing, but our values. They're destroying the place where egalitarianism, upward mobility and the middle class once had a welcoming home. That's the fight we're in — a historic fight to decide who we Americans really are.

Populist author, public speaker, and radio commentator Jim Hightower writes The Hightower Lowdown, a monthly newsletter chronicling the ongoing fights by America's ordinary people against rule by plutocratic elites.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Why do we do this?

For along time I've ask myself if I was too sensitive or if other people were being bothered by the same things; so I began asking others. To my surprise, each one agreed with me, only they said it was getting worse, I believe it.

Not many years ago, drivers on the highways showed you the courtesy of dimming their headlights when approaching you. In town, we kept our dim (lower beams) on, if we met bright lights, we would flash our lights and the approaching vehicle would dim theirs They understood the danger of causing an accident; like blinding an on-coming driver an causing them to move to the right and maybe killing a pedestrian or cyclist. Drivers knew when they came up behind you with bright lights it would reflect in your rear view mirrors, blinding you; they were careful not to do it.

When I flash my lights now I'm afraid someone will think I'm signaling that the law is in the area. Recently I have seen vehicles after dark in heavy traffic with no lights at all, the driver may be able to see the road but I can't see him if I want to pull into the traffic lane or cross the road. Will it be his life or mine, or both? I wish drivers would remember where that switch is and practice using it. It is a number one (1) safety feature. Some vehicles have extremely bright lights, especially those bluish ones.

I don't mean to criticize anyone about their driving; I've receive some reprimands for some of my driving habits and admit I am guilty I just try not to do the same ones over again.

Turn signals are another conversation. We sometimes forget to use them or make a turn not sharp enough for them to cancel automatically, then we drive with them on making it hard for others to know what we intend to do. I am trying to be more careful about that.

Next, has any one ever wondered why some people park on the left side of the street facing traffic? They must cross the on coming traffic lane to do this, and the same to leave. Vehicles have no reflectors on the front of it, at night, this could be dangerous. Some vehicles park in the street and on the corner of the block, making traffic go around it, and face on-coming traffic turning into that lane. Are there any laws concerning this?

NWS flag warnings don't help

The National Weather Service issues flag warnings for multiple numerical fire weather zones, useless information since most of us have no clue what zone we are in. Red flag warnings should be issued by counties as are severe weather alerts.

Also the NWS routinely reports barometric pressure in inches of mercury until tropical weather occurs then they change to milibars. This forces the public to convert between the two systems at a critical time. This information should be reported in both formats since barometric pressure is a key indicator of how severe a storm is and if it will intensify or weaken. Tell me the pressure is 900 mb and I have no clue what to do. Tell me it's at 28.9 inches and I'll batten down the hatches.

Spring-clean your credit card lineup

By Gregory Karp
NerdWallet.com

Spring is a great time to declutter a closet full of clothes, a garage full of boxes and a wallet full of inferior credit cards.

The average card holder with decent credit has more than four open accounts, and Americans opened 110 million credit card accounts in 2016 alone, according to the latest Consumer Financial Protection Bureau study.

With all that plastic in consumer wallets, not all cards are worthy. At least 1 in 5 credit card customers is carrying the wrong card, usually because fees or rewards are misaligned with their purchasing habits, according to the J.D. Power 2016 U.S. Credit Card Satisfaction Study.

Each credit card should rejustify its place among your payment tools, experts say, for two reasons. First, the credit card business has changed recently, with the curse of higher interest rates and the blessing of fatter rewards.

Secondly, you may have changed — your credit may have improved and you may qualify for better cards.

"In terms of spring cleaning, ask whether that credit card still works for you. Is it a card you're still taking advantage of, or have your needs changed?" says credit card expert Beverly Harzog, author of "The Debt Escape Plan."

Gather your cards and ask three questions about each:

• Does it charge an annual fee?

For cards with annual fees, the bar for keeping them is higher. "An annual fee in itself isn't a red flag, but you need to re-evaluate whether you're getting your money's worth," Harzog says.

• Do I carry a balance?

If you need breathing room to pay debt without incurring high interest charges, you have options. A lower-interest card is one, especially if your credit has improved since you got your current card. Another short-term strategy is transferring the balance to a new card with a long introductory 0 percent interest period — many offer more than a year. That's not a cure, but it allows you to pay debt without incurring more interest.

• Is it a rewards card?

Old cash-back cards pay 1 percent on purchases, but today the better ones are paying 1.5 or 2 percent, potentially doubling your return. And travel rewards cards have become especially lucrative as issuers battle for high-spending customers. Plus, maybe your lifestyle has changed. For example, travel and dining-out cards may have fit your single lifestyle, but a new family life might mean cash back for groceries and gas is a better fit.

Once you've examined each card, use a cleaning checklist represented by the CARDS acronym. You may need to take one or more of these steps:

- Cancel the card.
- Acquire a new one.
- Renegotiate terms on your old card.
- Decommission the card by not using it anymore.
- Save it and make sure you're optimizing it.

Be mindful of your credit scores as you spring-clean credit cards, especially if you're considering canceling them. Scoring formulas reward a lot of open credit lines with unused capacity, along with a long history of on-time payments.

3 signs of unethical financial advice

By James Royal, Ph.D.
NerdWallet.com

Here are three ways financial advisors might act unethically while staying within what the law allows — and how to avoid them.

1. Not disclosing their obligations

Your advisor needs to clearly spell out not just what he'll do for you, but how he'll act. You should know whether he's legally supposed to make decisions that are "suitable" for you or choices that are in your best interest, known as acting as a fiduciary.

"Most individual investors don't know the difference," says Teresa Verges, director of the Investor Rights Clinic at the University of Miami School of Law.

There's a key difference between the suitability standard and the fiduciary standard: Brokers, who may call themselves financial advisors and are often paid by asset-management companies, have only a duty to put clients into a suitable investment, not necessarily the cheapest or best one. Advisors bound by the more rigorous fiduciary standard, however, must put the client's interest first.

What you can do: Find a fiduciary who operates on a fee-only basis. In this case, you — and you only — pay an advisor to work in your best interest.

2. Engaging in 'reverse churning'

In this practice, a broker puts clients into a fee-based account, then charges an ongoing fee for little actual advice.

Fee-based accounts aren't necessarily bad, but they can be a poor fit for many clients. For example, buy-and-hold investors generate few fees for the broker, because they purchase investments infrequently and never sell. So the broker moves them into a fee-based account to charge more.

"We're probably going to see an uptick in this," Verges says. Increasing pressure on brokers due to recent legal changes, notably the Department of Labor Fiduciary Rule, has leveled the industry's commissions structure, making it more difficult for brokers to profit. So some brokers have been pushing fee-based accounts.

What you can do: Know your goals and what you're paying for before hiring the advisor or broker. If you can't get a straight answer, walk away.

3. Pushing complex contracts that are not fully explained

While some products, such as mutual funds, are straightforward, others, such as annuities and various types of insurance, can be unnecessarily complicated. Key questions — when and how you as the client get paid, and when you don't — need to be answered clearly.

However, one important question often isn't asked: How much is the product issuer paying the advisor? The advisor may be taking as much as 10 percent of the investment as a commission, an egregious level. For stock funds, the best advisors can point you to products that have no commissions.

What you can do: Keep asking questions. If a complex financial product is right for you, an ethical advisor will explain it completely.

If you're buying any financial product, ask how the advisor is being paid. But remember, just because a fee is disclosed doesn't make it acceptable.

Did a tax pro botch your return? Here's what to do

By Tina Orem
NerdWallet.com

To err is human, but to err on your tax return is a total dumpster fire. If you think your tax preparer made a mistake on your return, here's what experts say you can do about it.

1. Make sure it's actually the preparer's fault

Be sure you provided all the documentation and information he or she needed to do the return correctly. Also, take a deep breath before going after volunteer tax preparers — they typically bear no legal liability for errors on your federal tax return, according to the IRS.

2. Check your contract

Most reputable tax preparers will have you sign an engagement letter that outlines, among other things, what happens if there's an error on the return, says Cindy Hockenberry, director of tax research and government relations for the National Association of Tax Professionals.

In general, you're on the hook for any tax you discover you owe, but a decent preparer usually will pick up the tab for penalties (and sometimes interest) you incur because of the preparer's error. It's also reasonable to ask the preparer to put together an amended return at no charge if the error is the preparer's fault, she says.

3. Contact the preparer

Alert the preparer in writing and provide all the correspondence you're getting from the IRS or state tax authority. Set up an appointment to talk face to face, Hockenberry says. At the meeting, determine what's incorrect, then steps to fix it. Document what you discussed and what each person will do.

"If the preparer's refusing to want to acknowledge the error, help correct the error or anything like that, you would want to have a paper trail because in the off chance that you might want to take this preparer to court, you would want that documentation," she says. You'll also need it if you hire a different tax preparer.

4. Notify the IRS and professional organizations

Walton ordinance will have 'day in court'

By Tom McLaughlin

Walton County officials are taking an optimistic approach to a new law that, as of July 1, will wipe their Customary Use Ordinance off the books.

"As the Legislature passed and the governor signed HB 631, a clear path was created to determine if the public has the right to recreationally use Florida beaches," county spokesman Louis Svehla said Friday in a news release.

The "path" will be "lengthy and cumbersome," the release noted. But "it provides the county with the opportunity to 'have its day in court' as it presents all evidence and testimony in the appropriate proceeding, anticipating a favorable ruling which will solidify the public's right to use all the beaches of Walton County for recreational purposes."

After spending much time, money and effort, Walton County in early 2016 rolled out its Customary Use Doctrine, the document on which county commissioners later relied to defend their decision to pass an ordinance opening "dry sand areas" of county beaches to the public.

The ordinance angered several of the many county residents who have built beachfront homes along Walton County's 26 miles of coast, and lawsuits were filed. In November of 2017, a federal judge in Pensacola ruled the county had not overstepped its bounds by passing an ordinance, but that beach homeowners were entitled

Walton County Spring break 2018 wraps up

SEAGROVE BEACH — David Starkey stood behind the desk at his bike shop, Butterfly Bike and Kayak, on Walton County Road 30A on Thursday afternoon as a steady stream of people came in to rent bicycles.

Outside, nearly all of his pastel-colored bike collection was gone, having been rented out during one of the busiest weeks yet of spring break.

"I haven't seen all my bikes come out of my warehouse in at least four years," Starkey said. "I'm happy to see this. It's been insane."

Saturday marks the unofficial end to spring break 2018, according to law enforcement, as the last batch of visitors head back home. But with this year's spring break — spanning just five weeks instead of the normal seven or eight — businesses and visitors along the Emerald Coast saw some of its largest crowds yet.

Starkey said the crowds in South Walton County seemed to be a "good mixture" of college kids and families this year, and was the largest he'd seen in years.

"I think maybe the drinking ban in PCB is pushing them out here," he said, referring to Panama City Beach's annual alcohol ban on the beach during March. "Or the kids that have grown up coming to 30A all their lives are now college kids and they want to bring all their friends here."

Thursday's 71-degree high didn't stop beachgoers from flocking to the beach in Seagrove Beach, where chairs and umbrellas were packed like sardines up and down the shore.

Chris Robertson from Greenville, South Carolina, was throwing a foam football with his kids. He said he and his family had spent their

FWC: Tips for living with alligators

Special to The News Herald

The American alligator is a conservation success story. Florida has a healthy and stable alligator population, which is estimated at 1.3 million alligators of every size. They are an important part of Florida's wetlands, but should be regarded with caution and respect.

Alligators become more active and visible during spring when temperatures rise and their metabolism increases. Although serious injuries caused by alligators are rare in Florida, the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) recommends taking precautions when having fun in and around the water. Alligators inhabit all 67 counties in Florida and can be found anywhere there is standing water. Reduce the chances of conflicts with alligators by swimming only in designated swimming areas during daylight hours. Also keep pets on a leash and away from the water.

Because alligators control their body temperature by basking in the sun, they may be easily observed. However, the FWC urges people to keep their distance if they see one. And never feed alligators because it is dangerous and illegal.

The FWC places the highest priority on public safety and administers a Statewide Nuisance Alligator Program to address complaints concerning specific alligators. People concerned about an alligator should call the FWC's toll-free Nuisance Alligator Hotline at 866-FWC-GATOR (392-4286). SNAP uses contracted nuisance alligator trappers throughout the state to remove alligators 4 feet in length or greater that are believed to pose a threat to people, pets or property. The FWC also works diligently to keep Floridians and visitors informed, including providing advice about Living with Alligators.

Man survives bullet grazing head

PANAMA CITY — Police are looking for any witnesses who can help straighten out what happened inside and outside a 15th Street bar Saturday night that included a gunshot fired inside, fireworks set off outside and a Georgia man with a cut from a bullet that grazed his head.

Panama City police Sunday reported that around 11:05 p.m.m Saturday they were called to a report of a shooting at Reminisce night club, 1200 W. 15th St. When officers arrived, the found Dorian Mendoza, 18, from Georgia, "with a laceration to the back of his head which didn't initially appear to be caused from a gunshot. Mendoza was transported to an area hospital with non-life-threatening injuries."

There were also reports of several altercations in the parking lot, as well as fireworks being set off outside, police said.

Police determined there also was a physical altercation inside the club, "followed by one gun shot and then the patrons ran out into the parking lot. It is believed that fireworks were then set off in the parking lot. It is unknown if these incidents were connected or involved the same individuals," the report stated.

The evidence did match statements that at least one shot had been fired inside the club and that Mendoza was grazed by a bullet.

Anyone with information about the incident is asked to call the Panama City Police Department, 850-872-3100, or they can report their tips anonymously to CrimeStoppers 850-785-TIPS.

Chase leads to drug seizure

SPRINGFIELD — An attempted traffic stop turned into a police chase that ended with a man arrested on a multitude of felony drug charges.

Springfield police said investigators attempted, around 7:45 p.m. Saturday to stop a silver 2010 BMC 324i in the 3600 block of E. Second Street.

But the vehicle fled south on Claire Avenue, police said, before crashing while attempting to turn onto Cherry Street and the driver, Mikhail Terrell, 28, was arrested there.

In the vehicle, investigators said, they found 12 ounces of marijuana worth about $5,000, 5.75 ounches of synthetic marijuana worth about $1,100, 9 10mg oxycodones and $645 in cash. Both types of marijuana were packaged for sale, police said.

Several types of drugs and cash were seized by Springfield police. [CONTRIBUTED PHOTO]

Lasley was charged with possession of more than 20 grams of marijuana with intent to distribute, possession of synthetic marijuana with attempt to distribute, possession of a controlled substance, aggravated fleeing and eluding, and three civil traffic infractions.

Creek Indians seek federal, state recognition

By Alicia Adams
623-2120 | @aliciaadams-SRPG | aadams@srpressgazette.com

MILTON — After gaining support from the County Commission in February, the Santa Rosa County Creek Indian Tribe is now trying to gain federal recognition.

"After being silenced for more than 100 years, we have an opportunity for our voices to be heard by the government," Vice Chief Dan Helms said in an email to his tribal members. "But we must take action now."

The Santa Rosa Creek Indian Tribe has been working for the past few months to get recognition from the federal and state government. The tribe strives for recognition to protect and preserve artifacts in their museum and to obtain financial and other resources to help preserve their language, heritage and culture, according to Helms.

"A once in a lifetime opportunity for our tribe to receive both state and federal recognition is within our grasp, but it will take your action for it to happen," Helms told members.

He urged them to contact legislators for support.

The Santa Rosa County Creek Indian Tribe is a nonprofit organization that teaches the community about Native American culture through educational programs, traditional events and a Native American Cultural Center that broke ground Aug. 1, 2017. The tribal grounds, located at 4358 Willard Norris Road in Milton, consist of about 95 acres. Descendants of Creeks that lived in the area founded the organization in 1990. The tribe currently has more than 1,300 members and donates thousands of hours a year teaching and making presentations in the community.

week mostly going to the beach and hanging out in Seaside and at The Hub in Watersound Beach.

"We come here (to 30A) because it seems to be that the kids here are more behaved," he said. "We've had no issues."

For the third year in a row, the Walton County and Okaloosa County sheriff's offices heavily enforced zero-tolerance policies for underage drinking. Walton made 263 underage drinking arrests as of Thursday, a significant decline from last year's 681 total arrests. In Okaloosa County, Sgt. Jason Fulghum said this year's spring break saw some 404 arrests as of Wednesday night, about 100 fewer than last year, with almost all of them being for underage drinking.

Fulghum said he thought the two biggest reasons for the decrease in arrests were cold weather and a shorter spring break.

"We had more bad weather days this year than we did last year, not so much because of rain but because of the cold that was keeping them off the beach and up in their rental houses," Fulghum said. "Plus, last year's spring break was seven weeks and this year's was five weeks, so obviously more time is going to equal more arrests."

Fulghum said he also believed more college students were using ride-share services like Uber and Lyft to get from block to block instead of walking on the streets with open containers.

Overall, he said this year's spring break was on par with what law enforcement had seen previously.

"It's pretty typical for what we've seen the last two years," he said. "The numbers seem to be the same as far as groups, and their behavior seems to be typical of what we've witnessed before."

to "judicial review and a determination of the existence of customary use rights."

This legislative session, a bill was introduced that sought to force county governments such as Walton to defend its doctrine of customary use anytime a private homeowner questioned it. However, a compromise was reached before the bill was passed and signed by Gov. Rick Scott that will allow counties to create a single customary use policy and defend it just once in court.

Walton County commissioners have already instructed their staff to "begin the process laid out in the legislation to substantiate a customary use claim," Friday's news release said. "This will include the gathering of evidence and a public hearing to determine if such a claim is supported by substantial evidence and testimony."

The testimony and evidence gathered will be presented to a judge, the release said.

"If the judge agrees with the county, the Customary Use Ordinance will be validated and take effect," the release said. "If the judge disagrees, the ordinance will be null and void."

Before the judge gets a look at the county's argument, county commissioners will be obligated to provide all property owners with proper notice of all proceedings and allow time for those wishing to do so to insert themselves into the debate.

Walton County resident Don Riley said he worked with state lawmakers to help get the the customary use law passed. As a supporter of private property rights, he said he believes the Walton County Commission overstepped its bounds when it passed its Customary Use Ordinance, and believes the new law will make it more difficult for the county to do so in the future.

"The burden of proof for each parcel requires the county to prove each and every one of the elements of customary use to (a) judge's satisfaction, failing any one of which customary use is denied for the parcel," Riley said. "That was the law before the county's legal action and it remains precisely that now that the law has passed."

The county's 14-page Customary Use Doctrine, produced by attorney David Theriaque, was created to provide the type evidence the county will bring before a judge, such evidence will be built upon as the county builds its customary use argument, Svehla said.

The doctrine's core premise is that for as long as mankind has lived in coastal areas, the shoreline has been open to access by anyone. The doctrine leans heavily on the findings of a judge's ruling in 1974 in the case of City of Daytona Beach v. Tona-Rama Inc.

"No part of Florida is more exclusively hers, nor more properly utilized by her people than her beaches," the ruling states. "And the right of the public of access to, and enjoyment of, Florida oceans and beaches has long been recognized by this court."

accident took place at 9:13 p.m. Saturday on State 71 at Bob Guilford Road, about 3.5 miles north of Blountstown. State 71 begins in Port St. Joe and winds its way north through Blountstown toward Marianna until it reaches the Alabama state line.

The press release said Brincefield lost control of his 1996 Chevrolet Prizm as it was northbound on State 71 near Bob Guilford Road, causing it to cross the center line and go across the west shoulder.

The car "struck a fence and then a tree with the passenger side," the release said, and came to a rest against the tree. Martin was pronounced dead at the scene and Brincefield was pronounced dead later at Bay Medical Center.

The release said seatbelts were not in use at the time of the crash and that it remains under investigation.

ROLL CALL: GUN VOTES

Thomas Voting Reports

This report shows the stands of Florida members of Congress on the seven gun votes conducted during the first 15 months of the 115th Congress, all but one of which occurred before the Parkland school shootings on Feb. 14. Lawmakers backed by the National Rifle Association prevailed on each roll call over those members favoring gun limits.

HOUSE

MENTAL ISSUES, GUN CHECKS: The House on Feb. 2, 2017, voted, 235 for and 180 against, to nullify an Obama Administration rule designed to keep the mentally ill from passing federal background checks on gun purchases. Under the rule, the Social Security Administration was required to notify the FBI's National Instant Criminal Background Check System (NICS) of individuals receiving disability benefits on the basis of mental impairment. Foes said the rule cut against both disability and Second Amendment rights, while backers said it was only common sense to keep guns away from the deranged.

A yes vote was to send HJ Res 40 to the Senate, where it was adopted and sent to President Trump for his signature.

Voting yes: Matt Gaetz, R-1, Neal Dunn, R-2, Ted Yoho, R-3, John Rutherford, R-4, Ron DeSantis, R-6, Bill Posey, R-8, Daniel Webster, R-11, Gus Bilirakis, R-12, Dennis Ross, R-15, Vern Buchanan, R-16, Thomas J. Rooney, R-17, Brian Mast, R-18, Francis Rooney, R-19, Mario Diaz-Balart, R-25, Carlos Curbelo, R-26, Ileana Ros-Lehtinen, R-27

Voting no: Al Lawson, D-5, Stephanie Murphy, D-7, Darren Soto, D-9, Val Demings, D-10, Charlie Crist, D-13, Kathy Castor, D-14, Ted Deutch, D-22, Debbie Wasserman Shultz, D-23, Frederica Wilson, D-24

Not voting: Alcee Hastings, D-20, Lois Frankel, D-21,

GUN PURCHASES, VETERANS' MENTAL HEALTH: Voting 240 for and 175 against, the House on March 16, 2017, passed a bill that would require patient-by-patient judicial review before the Department of Veterans Affairs could submit the names of veterans with serious mental issues to the FBI's National Instant Criminal Background Check System (NICS) on gun purchasers. Such referrals now occur without judicial oversight. Under the bill (HR 1181), a judicial authority must rule the person "mentally defective" before any referral to the FBI. Foes of the existing policy said it violates Second Amendment rights, while backers said it is common sense to keep guns away from a population afflicted by post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) and high rates of suicide.

A yes vote was to send the bill to the Senate, where it awaits action.

Voting yes: Gaetz, Dunn, Yoho, Rutherford, DeSantis, Posey, Webster, Bilirakis, Ross, Buchanan, Rooney, Thomas J., Mast, Rooney, Francis, Diaz-Balart, Curbelo, Ros-Lehtinen

Voting no: Lawson, Murphy, Soto, Demings, Crist, Castor, Hastings, Frankel, Wasserman Schultz, Wilson

Not voting: Deutch

PROPOSED COMMITTEE ON GUN VIOLENCE: The House on Nov. 7, 2017, blocked, 233 for and 182 against, an attempt by Democrats to force floor debate on legislation (H Res 367) that would establish the Select Committee for Gun Violence Prevention comprised of six Republican and six Democratic members. Now in committee, the measure would probe the causes of mass shootings, exploring means of keeping guns out of the hands of domestic abusers and the mentally ill and tightening background checks on firearms purchasers, among other topics. The vote occurred two days after a shooting at First Baptist Church in Sutherland Springs, Texas, that left 26 persons dead and 20 wounded. Had Democrats prevailed on this vote, they would have had an opportunity to bring their legislation to the floor.

A yes vote opposed floor debate on the gun-committee measure.

Voting yes: Gaetz, Dunn, Yoho, Rutherford, DeSantis, Posey, Webster, Bilirakis, Ross, Buchanan, Rooney, Thomas J., Mast, Rooney, Francis, Diaz-Balart, Curbelo, Ros-Lehtinen

Voting no: Lawson, Murphy, Soto, Demings, Crist, Castor, Frankel, Deutch, Wasserman Schultz

Not voting: Hastings, Wilson

CONCEALED CARRY, STATES' RIGHTS: Voting 231 for and 198 against, the House on Dec. 6, 2017, sent the Senate a bill (HR 38) making it easier for travelers to carry concealed, loaded handguns from state to state. The bill would federalize the patchwork of state laws on concealed handguns. It does so by requiring every state to recognize every other state's concealed-carry permit or authority. In part, this would allow residents of the 12 states that do not require permits to legally carry concealed handguns in the many states that deny permits to domestic-abusers, stalkers and convicted felons. The bill also would tighten reporting requirements for the FBI's National Instant Criminal Background Check System.

A yes vote was to send the bill to the Senate, where it awaits action.

Voting yes: Gaetz, Dunn, Yoho, Rutherford, DeSantis, Posey, Webster, Bilirakis, Ross, Buchanan, Rooney, Thomas J., Mast, Rooney, Francis, Diaz-Balart

Voting no: Lawson, Murphy, Soto, Demings, Crist, Castor, Hastings, Frankel, Deutch, Wasserman Schultz, Wilson, Curbelo, Ros-Lehtinen

EXEMPTION FOR VIOLENT CRIMINALS: Voting 190 for and 236 against, the House on Dec. 6, 2017, refused to amend HR 38 (above) so that it would deny protection to concealed-carry permit holders who have been convicted of a violent crime within the preceding three years. Under the amendment, these individuals would be prevented from carrying a concealed, loaded handgun in any state other than their own whose laws would deny a permit based on a conviction for the same crime.

A yes vote was to add an exemption for violent criminals to the bill.

Voting yes: Lawson, Murphy, Soto, Demings, Crist, Castor, Hastings, Frankel, Deutch, Wasserman Schultz, Wilson

Voting no: Gaetz, Dunn, Yoho, Rutherford, DeSantis, Posey, Webster, Bilirakis, Ross, Buchanan, Rooney, Thomas J., Mast, Rooney, Francis, Diaz-Balart, Curbelo, Ros-Lehtinen

POST-PARKLAND DISPUTE OVER GUN BILLS: On a vote of 228 for and 184 against, the House on Feb. 27, 2018, blocked a Democratic resolution calling on the House to debate two gun-safety bills. One (HR 3464) would prevent a firearms dealer from selling a weapon before completion of a federal background check. The second bill (HR 4240) would incentivize reporting to the National Instant Criminal Background System (NICS) and expand criminal and mental-health background checks to cover all firearms transactions except those among family members, friends and hunting partners. The latter provision would eliminate exemptions for certain purchases occurring at gun shows, over the Internet and through classified ads. This vote was conducted after Republican leaders, who control the House agenda, declined to immediately bring gun legislation to the floor following a Feb. 14 mass shooting at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Fla.

The Democratic resolution was quashed by the presiding officer's ruling that it did not qualify under House rules as a "privileged question" entitled to floor action. On the vote reported here, Republicans upheld that ruling after it was appealed by Democrats.

A yes vote was in opposition to allowing floor debate on the two bills.

Voting yes: Gaetz, Dunn, Yoho, Rutherford, DeSantis, Posey, Webster, Bilirakis, Ross, Buchanan, Rooney, Thomas J., Mast, Rooney, Francis, Diaz-Balart, Curbelo, Ros-Lehtinen

Voting no: Lawson, Murphy, Soto, Demings, Crist, Castor, Hastings, Frankel, Deutch, Wasserman Schultz, Wilson

SENATE

MENTAL ISSUES, GUN CHECKS: By a tally of 57 for and 43 against, the Senate on Feb. 15, 2017, joined the House (above) in voting to nullify a rule under which the Social Security Administration was required to notify the FBI's National Instant Criminal Background Check System (NICS) about persons receiving benefits due to serious mental issues, so that they could be prevented from buying firearms.

A yes vote was to adopt a nullification measure (HJ Res 40) that President Trump then signed into law.

Voting yes: Marco Rubio, R

Voting no: Bill Nelson, D

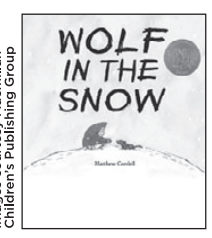
National Library Week is April 8-14. Explore your local library!

Matthew Cordell

The 2018 Randolph Caldecott Medal for the most distinguished American picture book for children was awarded to Matthew Cordell for "Wolf in the Snow."

A little girl in a bright red cloak starts her walk home from school, but a snowstorm turns the landscape white. As she trudges on, she discovers a wolf cub who has been separated from its pack. She carries her new friend until they find the pack. Then the wolves repay the favor by taking care of her.



images courtesy Macmillan Children's Publishing Group

Among watercolor paintings, the book's only words are sound effects. The Mini Page asked Cordell why he didn't use dialogue, or conversation, in the book. Most of the story, he said, "is set in the wilderness and takes place between a girl and a wolf pup. There would be no dialogue. The pictures ... really do the job of telling the story."

Matthew Cordell

Cordell's advice for young artists: "There will always be days when you feel like you aren't very good. As long as you stick with it ... you will only continue to get better with every day. Keep going, and learn as much as you can."

Erin Entrada Kelly

Each year, the John Newbery Medal is awarded to an author for the most distinguished contribution to American literature for children. The 2018 winner of the Newbery Medal is "Hello, Universe" by Erin Entrada Kelly. Isabel Roxas illustrated the book.

images courtesy HarperCollins Children's Books

Four kids who don't fit together and feel like they don't fit in weave their way into each other's lives in this novel. When one of them meets real danger, friendships are formed among them, in spite of their challenges and loneliness.

Kelly said she has worked as a journalist and editor. "I had a short stint at a seafood restaurant. I lasted three months," she said.

The Mini Page asked her how she became a writer. "I've been writing since second grade. I think I was born that way!" Some of her favorite books as a child were "Blubber," "Sideways Stories From Wayside School" and "Halfway Down Paddy Lane."

Erin Entrada Kelly

Kelly has a partner and a daughter, and they have a Chihuahua. Her advice to kids: "Read a lot. Write a lot. Have an open mind. Use your imagination. Be kind. Practice empathy."

Honor books

Three Newbery Honor Books also were named this year. There are four Caldecott Honor Books.

Eco Note

We can all make choices that will help our environment. For example: Using water carefully helps to preserve stocks of fresh water. Try these tips: 1. Take a shower instead of a bath. 2. Don't leave taps dripping, and get leaks fixed quickly. 3. Turn off the tap while you brush your teeth. 4. Use the dishwasher and washing machine only with full loads. 5. Use a watering can instead of a hose to water the yard.

ACES ON BRIDGE: BOBBY WOLFF

"When vain desire at last and vain regret
Go hand in hand to death and all is vain,
What shall assuage the unforgotten pain
And teach the unforgetful to forget?"
— Dante Gabriel Rossetti

All the deals this week come from last year's Gold Coast tournament in Brisbane, Australia. Our first deal features a great rarity, where a director call cost 25 IMPs. Cometh the hour, cometh the hand ...

Good news: You are in a grand slam. Bad news: They lead an ace in the suit where you have a singleton. Good news: The lead is out of turn! Do you call the director or accept the lead?

Before I give you the denouement, when Molly O'Donohue and Philip Thompson were North-South, they also bid to the delicate grand slam, but in clubs, on the auction shown.

Maybe West should have known not to lead spades — but surely the diamond ace was never going to get away! Be that as it may, while a heart lead might have been the killer for one side or the other, a diamond was led, and O'Donohue wrapped up 13 tricks.

Back to our director call, where our players are veiled in the concealing gauze of anonymity that only a willfully forgetful tournament director can provide. He was summoned to another table where (on an auction similar to the one shown) it was North at the helm in seven diamonds, after East had overcalled one spade. However, West led the spade king out of turn.

North was given his options and, rejecting Goldwater's Rule ("If they don't know whose lead it is, they are probably leading the wrong thing"), triumphantly banned the spade lead. So East led the heart ace and continued the suit, to cash out for down two.

ANSWER: I could imagine leading the diamond king, trying to cash two or three tricks in the suit on the go, but dummy rates to be relatively short in diamonds, so I might not accomplish much by this lead. An alternative approach, which I prefer, might be to lead trumps, hoping the hearts will not run for declarer, and that I can stop the cross-ruff.

DEAR ABBY

Girl is tempted to choose a college close to home

Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is graduating from high school and will be starting college. It was always her plan to go to a school away from our small town, and I supported that decision. However, six months ago she started dating her first real boyfriend.

His parents have offered to pay all expenses if the two of them live in an apartment and go to school at a college nearby. Financially, this would be very helpful for my daughter, but I'm worried that moving in with a boy at such a young age would be a mistake, and she wouldn't get the full college experience.

Her boyfriend is wonderful, and she is very happy in the relationship. She has a scholarship for free room and board at a college three hours away. I can tell she's very conflicted. What do you think I should encourage her to do? — STUDENT'S MOM IN MISSOURI

DEAR STUDENT'S MOM: Your concerns are valid. The boyfriend's parents made a generous offer, but although your daughter may be crazy about their son, she should not accept it.

She and this young man are starting new chapters in their lives. They will be meeting people and forming all kinds of new relationships. Forgive me for seeming negative, but what if the romance sours? Will his parents still be willing to pay for room, board and your daughter's education at the same college?

Your daughter has earned her scholarship. Three hours' distance isn't insurmountable. They can still see each other if they wish. But the separation will allow them more time to concentrate on their studies as well as enjoy the full college experience.

HOROSCOPES BY HOLIDAY MATHIS

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — The stakes increase, both for failure and for success. It's not a reason to back off. If anything, this is the moment to step up and take on even more responsibility.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Asking for things takes courage. Sometimes you ask with your words, but more often you ask with your spirit, your expectations and your ideas about what you can handle and what you deserve.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21) — Tom Petty suggested that the waiting is the hardest part. But the pain of waiting is nothing next to the pain of regret. Remember that today when you're working for something that's taking its sweet time to get to you.

CANCER (June 22-July 22) — Age isn't everything, but it isn't nothing, either. Your awareness of where you are chronologically will enrich you today. Whatever your age, you can do things that you couldn't do at other times of life, and that's beautiful.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Your imagination is sometimes your playground, where you stretch and toy around and get silly. Other times, such as today, imagination is your gym, where you work out the reps to get strong and ready to face a challenge.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Your reality is coming into being with all the choices you are making today, plus some wildcards that get thrown into the mix. A prescient image will pop to mind tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Things that you thought were fixed — biology, laws, age-old rules — will be more malleable than you believed. Social and environmental factors will influence what you thought to be an unchangeable fact of life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21) — You've been the big fish in a small pond, and it felt pretty great. You're not in that pond anymore, and there are actual sharks around. This is exciting and pretty great, too, but stay alert and swim fast.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Meeting new people will release a flood of intuition in you pertaining to current and future endeavors. You'll be able to apply these inexplicable insights over the next several days.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — The ones who sign up to help people don't always realize what this will entail. They are not always equipped or responsible enough for the role. You realize this and try to fill in the gaps where you can.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Some gifts are not intended as such. They earn their status as "gifts" only in the manner in which they are received. Today people will give gifts to you without knowing that's what they are doing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — There's no question this is precarious business. The risk-averse see the slip-and-fall inevitability of a slippery slope. The risk-inclined see a slalom run and the potential for glory and gold. What do you see?

Patrick Reed celebrates after winning the Masters. [CURTIS COMPTON/ATLANTA JOURNAL-CONSTITUTION VIA AP]

Reed wins Masters

By David Lee
The Augusta Chronicle

Patrick Reed was not to be denied his shot at a green jacket.

Reed, playing in his fifth Masters Tournament without a prior top-20 finish, withstood one of the most dramatic comeback attempts in tournament history Sunday to slip on the green jacket. He shot 1-under-par 71 to finish 15-under, one stroke ahead of Rickie Fowler and two ahead of Jordan Spieth.

"It's almost impossible to put into words," Reed said. "Just to make the putt on the last and watch the ball go into the hole and win my first major, and finally end the drought and not only contend in majors but get in the winning circle, it just meant so much to me."

The final round was billed as a 2016 Ryder Cup rematch between final-pairing companions Reed and Rory McIlroy, with the potential for a heavyweight bout between bulldogs.

Spieth had other plans in the form of pure second-nine drama at Augusta National Golf Club.

The 24-year-old Spieth, already with his name in the tournament record book from a historic 2015 victory, gave a fellow Texan all he had by shooting 64 to erase a nine-stroke deficit entering the final round.

Spieth posted nine birdies and elicited the Sunday roars made famous around Augusta National's pine trees as he matched shot for shot with Reed on the second nine. The

Tiger finds progress in sub-70 round

By Scott Michaux
The Augusta Chronicle

AUGUSTA, Ga. — While the big picture of Tiger Woods returning for his first competitive major weekend in three years is encouraging, the little picture didn't particularly please him.

"I think things are progressing," Woods said in a muted attempt at positive spin after his 3-under 69 on Sunday at Augusta National. "And it was a little bit disappointing I didn't hit my irons as well as I needed to for this particular week. You miss it just a touch here, it gets magnified. And I just didn't do a good enough job this week in that regard. But overall I'm five or six tournaments into it, to be able to compete out here and to score like I did, it feels good."

Woods' tie for 32nd is his second worst finish in 19 professional starts at the Masters, ahead of only his 40th-place finish in 2012. But considering it's his first made cut in a major since the 2015 Masters a couple of back surgeries ago, the fact that he is back on the big stage is a major accomplishment.

"This is one of the greatest walks in all of golf," Woods said of Augusta National. "And I had missed it for the last couple of years I hadn't been able to play in it. So now I'm glad I'm competing in this tournament. And to face the challenges out there. I missed it. I really did. I missed playing out here. I missed competing

Busch wins at Texas, 1st this season for Joe Gibbs Racing

By Stephen Hawkins
The Associated Press

FORT WORTH, Texas — Kyle Busch finished ahead of Kevin Harvick and the rest of the field this time, winning at Texas Motor Speedway on Sunday to give Joe Gibbs Racing its first victory of the season.

Busch stayed in front of Harvick the last 24 laps after the final restart. It was Busch's third win at Texas , and the 44th of his career. He led 116 of the 334 laps at the 1 1/ 2-mile track.

While Busch hadn't won in the first six races, he had finished second three times — twice to Harvick — and is the NASCAR Cup Series points leader. He also had a third-place finish in the No. 18 Toyota.

Harvick, who won at Texas in November, led 87 of the first 129 laps and won the first stage. But he had issues on pit road, including a strange incident during a caution when a lugnut popped loose and into the jack. He dropped from first to ninth on that stop, then had to come back in a few laps later because of a loose wheel.

There was another stop when Harvick, who dropped back as far as 27th place and a lap behind the leader, got a penalty for an extra man over the wall when a tire got loose in the pit.

Jamie McMurray finished third, ahead of Erik Jones. Ryan Blaney was fifth a day

SAN FRANCISCO
Police: Ex-Raider Smith violated bail conditions

Authorities say former Oakland Raiders and San Francisco 49ers player Aldon Smith is back in a California jail after violating a condition of his bail.

Online records show the 28-year-old Smith is being held Sunday in San Francisco County Jail on $500,000 bond. A message seeking comment from his attorney, Joshua Bentley, was not immediately returned.

Sheriff's spokeswoman Nancy Crowley tells the San Francisco Chronicle that Smith was booked Friday for violating a condition of his electronic monitoring while on bail.

CLEVELAND
Indians play coldest game in ballpark history

The temperature was 32 degrees, the lowest for the start of a game in the 25-year history of Progressive Field, when starter Cleveland Mike Clevinger threw the first pitch to Kansas City's Jon Jay on Sunday.

The previous record was 33 degrees for games against Toronto on April 5 and April 7, 1996.

Neither club took batting practice, and players on both teams were bundled up when they came on the field. Several wore hoods under their caps to try and stay warm to combat the frigid conditions, which have been fairly common throughout Major League Baseball in the season's first two weeks.

The Royals have already had two games postponed due to weather.

Saturday's temperature was 34 at first pitch, and the game's only run came on Lucas Duda's seventh-inning homer off Trevor Bauer. The teams combined for nine hits and Royals starter Ian Kennedy said the ball felt like an ice cube before he rubbed it up.

CHARLESTON, S.C.
Bertens tops Goerges to capture Volvo Car Open

Kiki Bertens of the Netherlands overpowered Germany's Julia Goerges to cap a long Sunday at the Volvo Car Open with a 6-2, 6-1 victory for her fourth career WTA title and third of the past 11 months.

No. 12 seed Bertens and fifth-seeded Goerges each had a pair of matches to play with rain washing out Saturday's semifinals. Bertens had a grueling, three-setter to oust American Madison Keys while Goerges completed her match with Latvia's Anastasija Sevastova — the two got to 4-all in the opening set before the rains came — in about 25 minutes.

But it was Bertens, ranked 27th in the world, who showed fire and drive on center court in the finals. She broke Goerges' serve twice to take a 3-1 lead and never let up.

When Goerges sailed her shot long on match point, Bertens threw her racquet in the air and held her arms up high in celebration of her latest title.

NHL playoff format to oust top teams early

By Stephen Whyno
The Associated Press

Two of the top four teams in the NHL are guaranteed to be out the playoffs after the second round.

Goodbye Nashville or Winnipeg. Goodbye Boston or Tampa Bay. Thanks for playing.

That's the reality under the divisional playoff format that could pit the top two teams in the Eastern and Western Conferences against each other in round 2 after Pittsburgh and Washington were forced into that predicament in back-to-back playoffs.

"There's not a whole lot of logic there," Capitals defenseman Brooks Orpik said.

How's this for logic? If ranking teams 1 through 8 in each conference like the old format that was in place from 1993-94 through 2013, the No. 2 seed is facing the No. 4 seed, 3 versus 7, and 5 versus 6 in the first round in the East and the West this year.

A Penguins-Capitals style repeat could happen this year with the Central's Predators and Jets on a crash course for a second-round showdown and the Boston Bruins and Tampa Bay Lightning locked into a stacked Atlantic bracket with the Toronto Maple Leafs.

"You'd think that'd almost be a third-round series kind of thing, but so be it," Predators defenseman Ryan Ellis said. "It is what it is. You're going to have to see a team like that eventually. There's not much you can do to change it."

Maybe this spring will be enough to spark a change in the oft-criticized format in its fifth season that is agreed to between the league and NHL Players' Association through the 2019-20 season. The Capitals getting knocked out in the second round by the eventual Stanley Cup-champion Penguins didn't lead to much debate.

"I would assume after his year there'd be a bigger appetite to do it," Washington general manager Brian MacLellan said. "In the past it hasn't affected as many teams as might be required to get that movement. It's basically been us that's been the team that's not benefited from the 1 through 8. But we'll see what happens this year with a couple more really good teams being beat out in the second round."

Deputy Commissioner Bill Daly said the playoff format is not a burning issue for owners, wasn't discussed by GMs and should be looked at over a long period of time instead of focusing on "anomalies."

"It's worked I think for the most part as we anticipated it would work," Daly said. "I do believe in terms of the matchups in the first two rounds of the playoffs, they're better with this format. They're just more intense and more familiar with this format than they were in the old format."

Reigniting and creating new rivalries was the goal of this playoff format, which mimics the one in place for most of the '80s and early '90s. Inequities have happened, but so has plenty of drama on Cup runs by the Los Angeles Kings, Chicago Blackhawks and the Penguins twice.

"I think that as a fan, you want to see matchups against rivals," said New Jersey defenseman Ben Lovejoy, who won the Cup with Pittsburgh in 2016. "I think that that pits archenemies against each other more often and it can backfire every once in a while. You can get two high seeds playing each other in the first round or the second round and perhaps that's not fair but I think ultimately it's good for the game to have heated playoff series against teams that don't like each other and see each other a lot."

Heated playoff series make this time of year fun, but Predators versus Jets and Bruins versus Lightning would be just as compelling, if not more so, in the conference finals. Hockey people reluctant to fault the system typically take an approach like Winnipeg GM Kevin Cheveldayoff, who said, "Whether the format itself is right or wrong, if you want to win the Cup, you have to find a way to get through this format."

The difficult part is the format isn't created equally, making one road to the third round or the Cup Final potentially easier than another.

"I don't necessarily agree with how it is, but it's the way it is," said winger Wayne Simmonds, whose Flyers open against the Penguins. "You have to have a mindset that you're going to play teams in your division first and foremost and that's just the way it is."

Orpik said players can't wait to revisit the format when the agreement is up, which could be part of the next round of collective bargaining talks. But there's no consensus on what would be better — a return to 1 through 8, league-wide 1 through 16 or something else. The expected addition of a 32nd team in Seattle could spur change, too.

"You can play a 1-to-16 playoff pool, but I would suggest to you that there'll be inequities in that," Predators GM David Poile said, referencing travel among the issues. "Pick your poison. I think you change that and you come up with the next idea, you'd run into the same thing. ... I don't think there's any exact playoff plan that everybody would say is perfect."

Study: Risks rise if Mexico co-hosts WCup

By Rob Harris
The Associated Press

FIFA inspectors begin evaluating Mexico's suitability to stage World Cup matches in 2026 on Monday after a study commissioned for the North American bid highlighted concerns about violent attacks on female fans, human rights activists and reporters in the country.

Mexico City is the first stop on a five-day trip by the FIFA task force, which also will visit Atlanta, Toronto and the New York metropolitan area, where the bid committee proposed the 2026 final be held at East Rutherford, New Jersey.

The FIFA delegation will score the rival Moroccan bid the following week before delivering assessments, which could disqualify a contender ahead of the June 13 vote in Moscow by the FIFA congress. The evaluation of bids is more stringent following concerns about the votes for the 2018 and 2022 World Cups, and rights abuses in Russia and Qatar.

FIFA mandated 2026 bidders to commission and submit independent human rights reports that weigh risks linked to the tournament. Morocco has denied repeated requests from The Associated Press to release its report.

The North American document, prepared by human rights assessors Ergon, stated the likelihood of worker abuses is significantly reduced in the U.S., Canada and Mexico because no stadiums or significant additional infrastructure must be built. Morocco, by contrast, plans $15.8 billion in construction projects to prepare the country for what would be its first World Cup, including $3 billion to build or renovate every stadium or training facility.

But Ergon identified key risks associated with Mexico hosting 10 of the 80 games in 2026 in Mexico City, Guadalajara and Monterrey, which the bid has proposed solutions to address.

"The majority of women in Mexico City have experienced some form of sexual violence (including verbal harassment and unwanted touching) in their daily commute," Ergon wrote, citing the United Nations, "which raises issues in relation to the safety of women workers, fans and spectators when they commute to, or are inside competition buildings and spaces."

The report also identifies a "key risk relates to discriminatory incidents," pinpointing gay slurs by Mexican fans at matches, including one chant that translates as "male prostitute."

Auburn's Stidham plays spectator role in spring

The Associated Press

AUBURN — Jarrett Stidham threw a few passes in 7-on-7 drills before Auburn's spring game and then headed to the sideline as a spectator and "encourager".

Stidham's role Saturday pretty much summed up his spring. The Tigers' starting quarterback opened it with his left arm in a sling after surgery to repair a partially torn labrum in his non-throwing shoulder that bothered him most of last season.

Stidham was limited in spring practice, which concludes Tuesday, and spent much of it observing and working with his young backups.

"Obviously, I love playing. But it's nice to kind of sit back and kind of see everything from Coach (Gus) Malzahn's perspective," said Stidham, adding that he was injured against Missouri a month into the season.

"I would always be back behind everything with him during practice, so I'm kind of able to see what exactly he's seeing. We talk about things. It was kind of good to get that coach's perspective."

It's a positive spin on a spring that did limit Stidham's ability to build on his first season as a starter, when he passed for 3,158 yards and 18 touchdowns.

He led the Tigers to the Southeastern Conference championship game with upsets of national runner-up Georgia and eventual champion Alabama.

REED

train ran out of steam on the final two holes, however, as Spieth made par on 17 and bogey on 18 to miss tying the 18-hole tournament record by a stroke and fall just short of a potential second green jacket.

"It was a phenomenal day," Spieth said. "I think I've proven to myself and to others that you never give up. I started the round nine shots back. I came out with the idea of playing the golf course and having a lot of fun doing it, and just shooting a low round and finishing strong."

The 27-year-old Reed, with ties to Augusta as a former All-American and two-time national champion at Augusta State University, never wavered through a round that saw his lead disappear as late as halfway through the second nine.

Reed, with nerves of steel proven throughout his career, buckled down on the biggest stage by holding off a fiery Spieth and clutching to a tight lead over the final four holes.

Fowler, who trailed a few shots behind Reed throughout the day, reached his closest point to the lead after a birdie on 18 to get to 14-under while Reed split the fairway behind him. For Reed, it just meant another test to pass, and he did so with flying colors with a par on the last hole by making a four-foot putt.

"Gave it our all and left it all out there," said Fowler, who shot 67 for his best Masters finish. "Made (Reed) earn it.

"There's been a few majors where obviously I've played well enough to where that score held up, but that's golf. You have to beat everyone."

For his day, Reed carded four birdies and three bogeys, his first round above 70 over the four days. He fell just shy of becoming the first player to record all four rounds in the 60s, but it didn't prevent him from slipping into the green jacket in the 82nd Masters.

While Spieth made his charge, Reed chugged along at an even-par pace, swapping out a 13- and 14-under total for most of the day.

Ahead by one stepping to the intimidating 12th tee, Reed stared down any potential trouble by hitting the back fringe and draining a 22-foot birdie putt to get to 14-under and two ahead.

Spieth made birdie on 13 to take over second place alone at 12-under, and then drained a six-footer for birdie on 15 to reach 13-under, one back.

Reed's second shot on 13 nearly found the tributary in front of the green but stayed up by blades of grass. He recovered to make par and stay ahead by one.

The latest roar to echo through the pine trees around the 16th hole was produced by Spieth when he drained a 33-foot birdie putt to reach a tie with Reed at 14-under. For a minute, the talk of a comeback of historic proportions was real.

As Reed has often done in his career, he played stopper and hushed the conversations. A birdie from eight feet on 14 put him back on top at 15-under with four holes to play.

"I knew it was going to be tough," Reed said. "Any time just trying to close out a golf tournament is really hard, but to close out your first major and being a place that's so close to me, it's where I went to college. The only way I felt like I could get that done was to make sure the putter was working."

As Reed and Spieth battled, it became clear that McIlroy wouldn't participate. His putter failed him by missing a short eagle attempt on 2, a five-footer for par on 5 and a nine-footer for birdie on 9. Bogeys on 11 and 14 essentially took him out of the running.

McIlroy shot 74 to fall into a tie for fifth at 9-under. He was joined by Cameron Smith, Bubba Watson and Henrik Stenson.

Jon Rahm finished fourth alone at 11-under. Tony Finau shot 66 in the final round to inch into the top 10 at 7-under along with Dustin Johnson. Marc Leishman finished 8-under for ninth.

Despite a bogey on 18, Tiger Woods ended his first Masters appearance since 2015 in strong fashion with an eagle on 15 and birdies on 13 and 17 to shoot 69 and finish 1-over for the tournament.

Woods crept along the first three rounds to enter Sunday at 4-over and out of the picture, but a more positive fourth day put him in a tie for 32nd. It was his worst finish since a tie for 40th in 2012.

Phil Mickelson also ended his Masters on a positive note by shooting 67 to finish 2-over in a tie for 36th. Paul Casey nearly made tournament history by going to the 16th hole at 9-under for the day, but he bogeyed the final two holes to shoot 65 and finish 5-under in a tie for 15th.

BUSCH

after winning the Xfinity Series race.

A different 1.5 Winner

Harvick and reigning Cup Series champion Martin Truex Jr. had won the previous eight Cup races on 1 ½-mile tracks.

Truex had won five and Harvick the other three, including the first two this season.

But Truex wasn't even around for the finish of this one. The first 85-lap stage ended under caution after a front right tire blew on his No. 78 Toyota, which shot up the track and slammed hard into the outer wall. Truex, second to Harvick at the time, finished last in the 37-car field.

"Just blew a right-front tire out of nowhere. Not sure what happened there, if we run something over or what," Truex said. "All in all we were going to be in for a good day. We were making the car better and still had room to go. We were as fast as anybody. At least that's a positive."

Top 10 for SHS with top 3

Kurt Busch, the pole sitter, finished seventh. Stewart-Haas Racing had the top three starters in a race for the first time with Harvick, Busch and Clint Bowyer, and all finished their Fords in the top 10. Bowyer, coming off a win two weeks ago at Martinsville to end his 190-race winless streak, was ninth.

Champ's streak turns 30

Jimmie Johnson's career-long winless streak reached 30 races after the seven-time Cup Series champion was taken out in a seven-car incident.

Johnson, who has a record seven Cup wins at Texas, was running in the middle of the pack when he was caught in the melee on the first lap after the restart following the completion of the second stage. Denny Hamlin got loose and spun in front of Johnson, who has 83 career wins but hasn't been to Victory Lane since Dover last June.

"Unfortunate circumstances, but a lot to build on from this weekend. A strong Friday, a fantastic Saturday and then not the best Sunday," Johnson said. "We are getting closer each and every week. ... We will get back to our winning ways soon."

Others cars involved were Brad Keselowski, Austin Dillon, Trevor Bayne, Aric Almirola and David Ragan.

Up next

The series is back to short-track racing next Sunday at the half-mile Bristol Motor Speedway, where Johnson and Kyle Busch both won races last year. Johnson won in the spring and Busch in the fall night race.

TIGER

against these guys. Such a great event. Best-run event in all of our sport."

Sunday provided glimpses of the old Tiger at Augusta. He finally found his touch on the par-5s after failing to capitalize on them all week, making birdies on Nos. 2, 8 and 13 before draining a 29-foot putt at No. 15 for his only eagle of the week.

"That will be going onto the mantle at home," Woods said of the 14th pair of crystal glasses he's collected for eagles in his Masters career.

His effort to match his career-low Masters round of 65 was derailed by four bogeys Sunday.

"Yes, today would have been one of those low rounds," Woods lamented. "I certainly had the opportunity to do it. I was close to really, really getting it rolling."

Now Woods will go underground for a few weeks of gym work before getting his game geared up for an expected return at Quail Hollow in Charlotte, N.C., before the Players Championship.

"Generally after this tournament I put away the clubs for a while," Woods said. "I usually take three to four weeks off, throughout my entire career, and usually the clubs are put in the closet and I just kind of get away for a while. The run-up to this event is pretty hard and pretty grueling. I pushed myself pretty hard to get ready. And I peaked at it four times over the course of my career and it's tiring."

The list

Sunday's final round of the Masters clearly lived up to the hype — producing a riveting afternoon of television. Here were a few of the storylines we followed:

It started chilly, but improved throughout the day: Brian Mull, who covered the tournament for Augusta.com, tweeted this after walking the grounds on Sunday morning: "No advantage to playing early at Augusta National. Current conditions: 45 degrees and overcast with 12 mile-per-hour winds. Feels like 40." Still, after the threat of rain was largely dodged on Saturday, the conditions were ripe for some decent afternoon scores on Sunday, and that's exactly what happened.

The Reed-Rory pairing was nothing new: In a rematch of their legendary 2016 Ryder Cup match, Patrick Reed and Rory McIlroy started the day in the final group. Reed hasn't been shy about explaining how important that previous match was for him. "It's probably one of the best matches we ever played," Reed said. "It was probably also one of the most exhausting matches we ever played." The rematch didn't turn out to be much of a competition; McIlroy pulled within a single stroke on the second hole, but slipped a bit with a 37 on the front nine. Things got worse from there, as McIlroy bogeyed Nos. 11 and 14 to fall all the way into a tie for fifth, finishing with a 74 on the day. Reed, known in circles as a ferocious match play competitor, moved on from McIlroy to answer every challenge thrown at him by others.

Spieth was serious about making a run: Jordan Spieth wasn't thrilled with his 71 on Saturday, especially in light of the low numbers that others put up. The Texan said he was hoping to "shoot 7 or 8 under" on Sunday. He wasn't kidding. Spieth started with a birdie on the first hole, then added others on Nos. 2, 5, 8 and 9 to get back into contention by the turn. His final round 64 was magical, although he ran out of gas after pulling even with Reed at 14-under.

Bubba's confidence grew throughout the week: He needed a little warming up, but after struggling through the front nine on Thursday, Bubba Watson put together a nice run through the last three rounds, and he finished in a tie for fifth place. He carded 14 birdies over the final three rounds, and added an eagle Sunday on No. 13. Watson's length again kept him in the field — he finished third in driving distance for the week with an average of 306.5 yards per drive.

Fowler's putter had him shining brightly: Rickie Fowler had been a standout all week, and we're not just talking about the eye-popping orange pants he was sporting on Sunday. Fowler headed into final-round action alone in third place, needing to make up five strokes on Patrick Reed. He pulled within two of Reed by posting birdies on Nos. 8, 9 and 12, and later used a birdie on No. 18 to get within one. The affable Fowler was able to stay afloat by using a hot putter, finishing tied for ninth in that category through the week.

Redick scores 18 as Sixers beat Mavs

The Associated Press

J.J. Redick scored 18 points, and the surging Philadelphia 76ers matched a franchise record with their 14th consecutive victory, 109-97 over the Dallas Mavericks on Sunday.

Ben Simmons added 16 points, nine assists and seven rebounds, and Robert Covington had 15 points and 10 rebounds. Two years after going 10-72, the Sixers (50-30) clinched home-court advantage in the first round of the playoffs and secured their first 50-win season since Allen Iverson's 2000-01 team, which lost in the NBA Finals.

The only other time the Sixers won 14 straight in a single season, Dr. J and Moses Malone delivered Philadelphia its last NBA title in 1983.

Harrison Barnes scored 21 points on 9-of-25 shooting, and Dennis Smith Jr. added 20 points for the Mavericks, who have lost three straight and six of seven.

PACERS 123, HORNETS 117: Domantas Sabonis scored a career-high 30 points, Victor Oladipo had 27 points on 12-of-15 shooting and the Pacers beat the Hornets to keep alive their slim hopes of winning the Central Division title. Lance Stephenson, a former Hornet, had 10 rebounds, 10 assists and eight points for the Pacers, who have won seven of their last nine games. Rookie Malik Monk led the Hornets with 22 points in their final home game of the season. For Indiana (48-33) to win the Central and earn home-court advantage for the first round of the NBA playoffs, it needs to beat Charlotte on Tuesday night and have the Cleveland Cavaliers (49-31) lose their final two games against the New York Knicks. The Pacers have the tiebreaker advantage over the Cavaliers after taking three of four in the season series, including a 124-107 win in November.

HAWKS 112, CELTICS 106: Taurean Prince scored 33 points, and the Hawks rallied for the road win. Isaiah Taylor and Dewayne Dedmon scored nine straight points for the Hawks after they trailed 103-101 with 2 minutes remaining. With the No. 2 spot in the Eastern Conference already locked up, Celtics coach Brad Stevens left Al Horford, Jayson Tatum, Jaylen Brown and Terry Rozier on the bench for the entire fourth quarter. Rozier had 10 points, nine assists and eight rebounds for Boston, which had beaten Atlanta in the other three meetings this season. Tatum scored 19, Horford had 16 and Greg Monroe scored 17 as the Celtics lost for the third time in four games.

GRIZZLIES 130, PISTONS 117: MarShon Brooks scored 25 points, Dillon Brooks added 22 and Memphis beat Detroit to snap a four-game losing streak. Marc Gasol and Kobi Simmons added 20 points apiece for Memphis. Gasol also had nine rebounds and nine assists. Anthony Tolliver led the Pistons with 19 points, and Luke Kennard added 18.
