PANAMA CITY BEACH — Mayor Mike Thomas cruises the streets of the city each night to see what he can see and during the three nights of SandJam he liked the view: heads in beds, revenue and locals coming together to have fun. All without the toxicity, he said, was a byproduct of the old spring break.

And it looks like he'll get

Report: Middlemas abused VAC credit card for years

Prosecutors say she purchased designer items, airline tickets

By Eryn Dion

PANAMA CITY — Prosecutors in the federal fraud case against former Visual Arts Center (VAC) Executive Director Vicki Middlemas have asked to admit evidence they say establishes a pattern of her using the VAC's accounts for personal purchases.

Middlemas

Filed in federal court last week, the new documents reference over two dozen transactions where Middlemas allegedly used debit cards tied to the VAC bank account and the VAC's refurbishment account for spending sprees at retail outlets like Nordstrom, Louis Vuitton, Dolce Gabbana and Burberry. Some of the transactions topped $2,000.

The documents include two airline tickets purchased with Southwest Airlines, which Assistant United States Attorney Aine Ahmed wrote in the motion were allegedly for Middlemas and her husband to travel to Las Vegas "where she again used the VAC debit card to purchase personal items."

It also appears that, according to the transactions, Middlemas was using the VAC debit card to possibly pay her personal cell phone bill, which some months topped $400. In all, the transactions total over $14,400.

Because the transactions all occurred between January 2012 and March 2013, the five-year statute of limitations has expired on the offenses and Middlemas will not be charged in relation to the purchases. However,

Program to offer free birth control to addicted women

Healthy Start, Avicenna Clinic partnering to provide IUDs

PANAMA CITY — A local group is taking a new approach to try to curb the number of local babies born with addiction issues — offering free long-term birth control to woman with known substance abuse issues.

"That cry and the pain the baby goes through is just horrible," said Sharon Owens of Healthy Start. "It's just heart-wrenching. If we can stop that, (we should)."

The Healthy Start Coalition of Bay, Franklin and Gulf counties has partnered with the Avicenna Clinic, one of the two free health clinics in town, to offer women who are using services at the methadone clinic or in the Bay County jail an IUD (intrauterine device) to prevent pregnancy for four years.

The program, called My Baby Free Friends (BFF), is meant to take advantage of the effectiveness and low maintenance of IUDs as a form of birth control. Healthy Start has similar programs throughout the state.

"We want to make sure if any woman is susceptible to

READER FEEDBACK

Bay District Schools will contract with local law enforcement for the Security Officers until the district can hire its own officers to guard elementary schools. We asked out readers how they feel about armed guards at elementary schools. Here's what a few had to say:

Greg Cobb: "I prefer trained LEO's to anyone less familiar with target identification."

Joe Marshall: "I favor gun control, but I see no problem with a sworn law enforcement officer on each campus. But, no one else there should be armed."

Andrew Higgins Jr.: "All public schools should have armed security not just the elementary schools."

Mike Hatch: "As long as these new guards only duty is over watch - no interaction with student or teachers outside of security. The SRO's can keep the interactions they have in Schools. In other words, they can't be LUNCH monitors or any other task in the School. They shouldn't even stop fights unless weapons are involved."

Billy Bowen: "I'm all for it! But add some highly trained teachers with concealed carry permits as well and post signs on school grounds that the schools are secured with concealed armed employees and those schools will be safe as can be."

Connie Reynolds: "I hate that it has come to this but we must keep our schools safe.. By the same token we need to address all of the problems in the culture we have created in the past decades."

Flora Sturgill: "I don't think we have a choice because of recent happenings."

Amanda Snowden: "Springfield elementary has been having this. They've even been standing at the front gate in the mornings!"

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, May 1, the 121st day of 2018. There are 244 days left in the year.
Today's Highlight in History:
On May 1, 1898, Commodore George Dewey gave the command, "You may fire when you are ready, Gridley," as an American naval force destroyed a Spanish squadron in Manila Bay during the Spanish-American War.
On this date:
In 1893, the World's Columbian Exposition, celebrating the 400th anniversary of Christopher Columbus' voyage to the Western Hemisphere, opened to the public in Chicago, beginning a six-month run.
In 1918, TV personality Jack Paar, the second host of NBC's "Tonight Show," was born in Canton, Ohio.
In 1931, New York's 102-story Empire State Building was dedicated. Singer Kate Smith made her debut on CBS Radio on her 24th birthday.
In 1941, the Orson Welles motion picture "Citizen Kane" premiered in New York.
In 1960, the Soviet Union shot down an American U-2 reconnaissance plane over Sverdlovsk and captured its pilot, Francis Gary Powers.
In 1967, Elvis Presley married Priscilla Beaulieu at the Aladdin Hotel in Las Vegas. (They divorced in 1973.) Anastasio Somoza Debayle became president of Nicaragua.
In 1978, Ernest Morial was inaugurated as the first black mayor of New Orleans.
In 1982, the World's Fair in Knoxville, Tennessee, was opened by President Ronald Reagan.
In 1998, Eldridge Cleaver, the fiery Black Panther leader who later renounced his past and became a Republican, died in Pomona, California, at age 62. Former Rwandan Prime Minister Jean Kambanda pleaded guilty to charges stemming from the 1994 genocide of more than half a million Tutsis. (Kambanda was later sentenced to life in prison.)

Election Commission finds complaint against Thompson insufficient

Solis

PANAMA CITY BEACH — The Florida Elections Commission has determined an elections complaint filed by Beach Councilman Hector Solis against then-Beach Ward 3 candidate Burnie Thompson is "legally insufficient.

The complaint revolved around a series of advertisements and posts on "The Burnie Thompson Show" Facebook page that Solis felt should be considered in-kind contributions, as Thompson had charged others in the past for spots on his show. Solis filed a complaint in February saying the Ward 3 candidate had violated election laws by failing to report "excessive" in-kind contributions.

The Florida Election Commission did not agree, writing in an April 24 letter to Solis that "because Facebook is a free service, the ads and post at issue do not have monetary value and, thus, did not amount to contributions that could be considered excessive or needed to be reported."

The letter also said, "since the alleged in-kind contributions didn't have any attributable monetary value, no fair market value had to be set for them, and even if there was an attributable monetary value to be set, the duty to do so would belong to the contributer."

Thompson said he is satisfied with the commission's verdict and will speak with officials about whether he has any further remedy.

"I will ask the commission about Councilman Solis submitting a bogus complaint in the middle of the election, in an effort to influence the election. I'm not sure it's over," Thompson said.

Solis was not happy with the investigation, saying it wasn't thorough.

"Although Facebook is free, Mr. Thompson has created a media business through this free service and charges for advertisement as proven in the provided attachments," he said.

Solis referred to campaign

FROM STAFF REPORTS

PANAMA CITY BEACH
Cat burglar roams free

A deputy was sent to investigate a burglary and met with the complainant.

The woman said she returned home from vacation and noticed her house had been broken into via her back door. She looked inside and noticed several things missing.

"Shortly thereafter she (saw) her ex-boyfriend a few houses down," the deputy wrote. "She confronted him about the break-in due to him having done it in the past. He told her that he only broke in this time because he heard her cats inside and wanted to make sure they were all right."

The deputy wrote that the man had "fled the area … prior to my arrival … on a blue 3-wheeled motorcycle."

The case remained under investigation.

FOUNTAIN
Baby daddy source of friction between women

A Facebook dispute threatened to blow over until a deputy finally was called to a Fountain residence to sort things out.

The complainant told the deputy she's had an ongoing issue with a "former female friend" for the last 18 months or so. She produced screenshots of a "a conglomeration" of private messages and individual messages involving her and the other woman.

The deputy noted there were some "status posts" that mentioned the complainant in a "negative way," and one in particular "hinted at physical violence but that appeared to have been after a mutual negative conversation between the two trying to decide whose residence to begin the altercation at. The point of contention between (the two women) seems to originate with having a male in common that has impregnated them both."

The deputy contacted the second woman who admitted being upset with the complainant "for calling DCF and her landlord on her."

The deputy essentially told both women to knock it off or they could face harassment charges.

PANAMA CITY BEACH
Taxing drive for cabbie with a drunk

A Bay County sheriff's deputy on routine patrol heard yelling and turned in time to "observe the above listed defendant punching a cab driver in the parking lot."

The deputy jumped out of his vehicle to help the cabbie, but meanwhile the puncher stumbled into the path of the cab, which was trying to leave, but was not hit.

The man was drunk enough that he has difficulty walking and his balance was off, the deputy noted, and it took him a few commands to get the man to get down on the ground so he could take him into custody.

The taxi driver "stated he was giving the defendant a ride home when the defendant told him to just continue driving and he would tell him when to stop," the deputy wrote. "The victim stated on sworn taped statement the defendant began punching him against his will for no reason while he was driving."

Finding this intolerable, the taxi driver pulled over and told the man to get out, but instead, "the defendant starting hitting him on his head and shoulder area with his hand through the driver side window."

The deputy then spoke with the defendant, who "denied ever striking the victim and even after I explained I witnessed it myself and so did most of the people at the (bar). The defendant's actions caused a public disturbance and affected the above location's business as to see it again next year.

"That was an awful lot of heads in beds for the TDC and a lot of local tax," Thomas said Monday. "They brought what I thought was a well-behaved crowd, everybody knew each other, and that's the way the successful festivals start. I think when it builds it will develop, with more people traveling to it, into what we need it to be: one of the weekends that solves the problem of not having to go back to something the community's ashamed of."

Executive Producer Rendy Lovelady was happy as well, announcing from the stage Saturday night before Incubus performed that there would be a SandJam 2019 and thanking the TDC, Panama City Beach, the County Commission and those in attendance for their support.

"You never know what to expect with a first-time event like this, and we were thrilled with the turnout we had," he said. "Pepsi Gulf Coast Jam brought in people from (across the country). Panama City Beach and Florida Panhandle residents kept asking for a rock festival, so we listened and responded."

In fact, a lot of locals were among a crowd that Lovelady estimated at over 20,000 people filtering in and out during the three-day festival that included performances from Sublime with Rome, Incubus and more, as well as food and beverage vendors. The crowd size marked a success for Tourist Development Council executive director Dan Rowe, who felt the national ticket sales could mean a boost in visitors whomay beback for next year's event — or sooner if they had never seen the beach before.

Comments from those in attendance ran the gamut, but tended toward being pleased with the event with mixed reviews on exit strategies. Some had smooth transitions from venue to parking via bus, others said there wasn't enough signage and they didn't know parking was available across the street from the event for $20.

"I think it was pretty well-attended and they did a good job with control," Thomas said, noting other events have created a lot more traffic headaches. The only complaints Thomas said he received were two emails and phone calls about fireworks kicking off too late at night.

Lovelady said officials won't know exactly how much money came in until after the accountants are done, and that might be a while, but he's confident enough in the numbers to look ahead to 2019.

Panama City Beach Police Chief Drew Whitman said officers from the department and the Bay County Sheriff's Office had no major incidents to report. He said there were no notable arrests associated with the concert. Concertgoers saw a clear law enforcement presence, but it was mostly in the background, there if needed but not meandering through the crowd looking for minor offenses.

"SandJam was a great event for our community, bringing thousands of people into Panama City Beach over the weekend," Whitman said. "We had great weather for the event and people seemed to really enjoy the music."

Thomas said he's not oblivious that there were those who over-indulged on alcohol, but it was isolated and did not define the event.

"For a festival, I thought there was less intoxication than I've seen at others," Thomas said. As for the occasional whiff of odor that some might describe as "marijuana-like" wafting through the air, Thomas said, "I thought it was seasoning on the hamburgers they were cooking up there."

On a serious note, Thomas said, "I saw things where there could've been an arrest but there didn't need to be an arrest, everyone seemed to be behaving pretty well."

The festival's promoters are always looking for ways to improve, Lovelady said. They receivefeedback from artists, fans, tour managers, vendors, first responders and more to know what worked and what didn't.

"We will definitely be back with SandJam next year," Lovelady said. "We're planning to release the dates as soon as we get them locked down, and we're already looking into headliners and support acts for 2019."

MIDDLEMAS

Ahmed contends that the transactions prove "proof of intent, and lack of mistake."

The evidence, according to the prosecution, helps build the narrative that Middlemas allegedly began misusing VAC funds shortly after her appointment to the executive director position in May 2010 and after she fired the former VAC treasurer, Bennett Golden, in 2011, the motion reads.

"Moreover, the admission of the evidence would show the jury that the Defendant's unlawful conduct did not abruptly start in the midst of her appointment as Director of the VAC, but rather began soon after her appointment as Director," the motion reads.

As of press time, a judge has not yet ruled on the motion

Middlemas was charged with fraud and wire fraud in February, with additional charges being levied against her earlier this month. In total, she is facing 20 counts of wire fraud relating to fraudulent wire transfers from the VAC bank account for personal use, along with four counts of falsifying VAC reports to continue receiving the annual city stipend of $89,964 for years after the entity had lost its required nonprofit status, and four counts of fraud and false statements regarding income tax returns filed in 2012, 2013, 2014, and 2015 that allegedly misrepresented her income.

Middlemas' trial will begin June 4.

struggling with substance use, because it is a disease, they know they can come to us and we can help them," Owens said. "So if they are going to use, they won't get pregnant."

Recent data received from the Agency for Health Care Administration ranked Bay County as having the second highest rate in the state of newborns affected with noxious influence and drug withdrawal syndrome. The term includes babies born to mothers on substances other than opioids.

The babies born dependent on drugs face a difficult detox that can mean months in the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit at local hospitals. It can also inhibit brain development in the womb, according to Owens, which can lead to problems down the road.

While the dependency is treatable, it's painful, and Owens said a baby's life shouldn't start with detox. It's better to wait to have children.

With a grant from the Bay Health Foundation, Healthy Start is aiming to serve between 100-200 women in Bay County who are using the methadone treatment or are in correctional facility for drug use.

Starting in May, they are hoping to do at least 10 a month, according to Owens.

Once the grant expires, Owens said Healthy Start will apply again for another grant if needed.

LYNN HAVEN

Lynn Haven man facing marijuana charges

A Lynn Haven man is facing charges after police allegedly found hydroponic marijuana, cannabis concentrate, THC candies and e-cigarettes with THC oil in his New Jersey Avenue home.

Joseph Paul Parker, 38, was arrested Friday and charged with possession of marijuana with intent to distribute, possession of cannabis concentrate and possession of a firearm in the commission of a felony.

According to a news release, Parker was arrested after a three-week-long investigation, which included information from citizens about illegal activity at the residence. In serving a search warrant on the residence, police located 940 grams of marijuana, 170 grams of DAB, or cannabis concentrate, and "several" packages of THC candy in a backpack, Parker's arrest affidavit reads. Inside the refrigerator, investigators allegedly found bags containing more cannabis concentrate. Investigators also seized $16,800 in cash and a Remington model 700 .243 caliber bolt-action rifle and ammunition.

After his first appearance Saturday, Parker was held on combined $25,000 bond. Lynn Haven Police say the investigation is ongoing.

Mortenson Chiropractic named 'Business of the Quarter'

Mortenson Chiropractic recently was named "Business of the Quarter" by the city of Lynn Haven for the first quarter of 2018. The city's Economic Development director, Ben Janke, presented a plaque to Dr. Dale Mortenson, owner of Mortenson Chiropractic, during a recent City Commission meeting.

"Dr. Dale is a true business leader in our community. He runs a successful business and gives back to the community by getting involved in civic organizations," Janke stated in a press release from the city.

The new award recognizes "outstanding local businesses that do extremely well in the area of community involvement, economic growth, customer service, and/or professional relationships" through the award, the press release stated. Businesses receive a plaque and will be recognized during a City Commission meeting.

Mortenson Chiropractic has been in business for 33 years and was selected for the award since they recently completed the renovation of their business storefront on Ohio Avenue.

"Any Lynn Haven resident can submit a nomination to City Hall for consideration. Forms are available online on the city website," the press release stated. "For more information, please contact Ben Janke, Economic Development director, City of Lynn Haven, at 850-265-2121 or via email to bjanke@cityoflynnhaven.com."

BAYOU GEORGE

Deputy's good deed solves crime

A deputy dispatched to a report of a suspicious person walking north in the southbound lane of U.S. 231 located the man and got out to have a word with him. The man, just on the other side of 60, provided his identity and said he was just walking home to Fountain.

"I advised him I would give him a ride, a weapons pat-down was performed and he was secured in the rear of my patrol vehicle," the deputy wrote.

The deputy was still mid-good deed when he receives a call about a criminal mischief at a convenience store not too far south of where the deputy had picked up his passenger.

"I returned to (the convenience store) with (him) and advised him of his Miranda rights at 18:17 and he refused to talk to me," the deputy wrote. "After reviewing surveillance footage, it was clear that he had entered the store and tried to use the restroom. However, it was locked. He then exited the store and walked away; however, a short time later he is seen on camera again in the same area as the trash and cigarette receptacles and you can clearly see him shove something and then run away (toward) Highway 231."

The store's manager decided not to press charges but did ask that the man be tresspassed (forbidden to return to the property) by the deputy. The deputy, keeping his word, gave the man a trespass warning and then took him home.

PATH

between, St. Andrews," she said. "It is part of the whole quality of life we are trying to give the city."

After a plan for a multi-use path along Beach Drive dead-ended a little over a year ago, the city has gone back to the drawing board to find a way to connect the city's two marinas. A new design, still in early stages, would chart an 8 to 12 foot wide path from the Panama City Marina to Oaks by the Bay Park, mostly running alongside 10th street on the right of way.

In phase two, it would be extended to follow the old railroad beds up to 231 and another branch would go to Oakland Terrace. A ring around Lake Caroline is also a possibility, but Haligas cautioned they wouldn't "force it" if to the community was opposed.

"We want to get it out there so people can start chewing on it," Haligas said. But, she added she feels moving forward with the path is the "right thing" for Panama City.

"It absolutely is a huge draw. We find it's family friendly and connects businesses."

David Demarest,
communication director
for Visit South Walton

To do this the city has found a somewhat unlikely partner: Georgia-based developer George Kingston. Local real estate agent Dwight Hicks, who often acts as Kingston's representative, said Kingston will give the city an easement along Beach Drive and the train depot property to make the path possible and show his support.

Hicks said based on his research, adding amenities such as the path represent the future for Panama City, appealing to younger people and adding value to the neighborhoods. Not moving forward with the path that was proposed for Beach Drive, in part because some homeowners feared it would lower values, Hicks felt was a mistake.

"This will not hurt the value of the property," Hicks said. "It will enhance it."

If the becomes necessary to move the path to make way for a development, Hicks said they would relocate it to another spot on the property.

Multi-use paths, large enough to accomodate walkers, skaters, bikers and more, have become somewhat of a buzzword in urban planning and revitalization efforts both local and nationally.

Locally, Panama City Beach created Gayle's Trails and Lynn Haven has been working on a significant rails to trails project. Nationally, cities like Atlanta have created trails that have transformed neighborhoods and appealed to both locals and tourists.

One of the best examples in the county, however, might be 30A in Walton County, where the desire to plan thoughtful, walkable communities led to a bike trail that draws both tourists and locals outside and helps drive the economy.

"It absolutely is a huge draw," said David Demarest, the communication director for Visit South Walton. "We find it's family friendly and connects businesses."

The 19-mile trail is dotted with bike rentals for people looking to explore the various town squares, nature, neighborhoods, shops and restaurants without driving. Demarest said it's "something everyone can agree on" and the only complaints seem to be when parts are "closed down for construction."

This is the success Haligas wants to bring to Panama City, saying her research indicates this would be one of the key ways the city could help spur more activity and bring residential to both the downtown and St. Andrews.

"I can't make people develop, but I can create areas and space that make them want to develop," Haligas said. "It's an attraction, and it's an amenity for residential."

The project is still in early days and nothing is set in stone. The city is still in talks with McNeil Carroll Engineering Inc. to design the project for an estimated $275,000, according to a task order approximating the price sent to the city on April 16.

The city would be seeking grants and Florida Department of Transportation to help fund the project if they go through with it.

finance records showing where Beach mayoral candidate Jim Barr was charged $335 for a service from Thompson. He showed similar records for county Commission candidate James Morris.

Thompson said he did charge Barr and other candidates for advertising their campaigns on his show, but Solis is comparing "apples to semi-trucks" when he brought forth the allegation.

"I never ran my campaign over my shoulder [on screen] because I thought it would have value," he said. "I never ran my billboard over my shoulder, ever. He was making accusations without providing any evidence."

Solis said it's his opinion the posts do have value and should be seen as in-kind donations.

"How can he charge other candidates, but then give this same service to himself for free and not report as an in-kind donation?" Solis said. "I also believe that is why after the original complaint was filed, Mr. Thompson went out of his way to start advertising other candidates for free on his Facebook page to avoid future problems."

Thompson believes the complaint stemmed from discord between the two, regarding Solis's law enforcement profession which Thompson has questioned.

The commission invited Solis to submit additional information that would "correct" the ruling within 14 days of the letter's date. Though Solis said he has more proof Thompson charged for his services on Facebook, he thinks it is best to move forward.

"The citizens chose not to elect Mr. Thompson to represent them. Now, it is time to continue to move forward with the business of the city," Solis said.

4-year-old nearly dies from pool accident

By Cleve R. Wootson Jr.
The Washington Post

BRADENTON — As 4-year-old Elianna Grace sat in the back seat of the SUV, battling her second fever in three days, her mom flashed back to the coughing and vomiting fit the preschooler had the previous weekend — and to a niggling fear about the girl's sudden illness.

Elianna had spent April 14 playing in her grandparents' pool in Bradenton, Florida. She blew a geyser of water at family members with a pool noodle. One of them tried to spray her back, but Elianna was already inhaling and got a mouth full of water.

The preschooler coughed, vomited and retched for the next few minutes, her mother, Lacey Grace, told The Washington Post, trying to expel a lung and a stomachful of chlorinated water.But half an hour later, Elianna was happily splashing in the pool. The next day, she seemed fine on a shopping trip with mommy. The crisis seemed averted.

On Monday the girl's preschool called her parents. Elianna had a fever. She'd have to go home and, per the facility's policy, stay out at least 24 hours. Elianna spent a day with her mother at the family's business, coloring quietly in a corner. On Wednesday, she was back at preschool with no ill effects.

But the preschool called again that afternoon. The fever was back.

This time, her mother took her straight to Urgent Care, but even then, Lacey Grace worried she was overreacting. She and her husband have two daughters — 4 and nearly 2. Fevered trips to the doctor are not unusual.

"There are so many times I have taken my kid to the doctor, saying I'm being a worried parent, and they say it's a viral thing; give it a few days," Grace told The Post.

But she had read about Frankie Delgado Jr., who died last summer under similar circumstances. Frankie, also 4, inhaled a large amount of water while splashing at the Texas City Dike with his family. His family worried the symptoms that manifested a few days later were "dry drowning," an imprecise term to describe water trapped in the respiratory system that ultimately can make it difficult for a person to breathe. But experts say it may have been a bacterial infection. Whatever the cause, the outcome was tragic: An otherwise healthy child, dead in a matter of days.

"I never would have correlated that fever to the pool incident if I hadn't read that story about Frankie," Grace said. "I was like, this is not going to happen to Elianna."

Grace noticed worrying signs as she looked at her overheated daughter on the way to Urgent Care. The girl was shivering. And there were purple spots on the girl's skin as she was getting X-rayed.

"The doctor came out and said, 'You have to find the nearest emergency room,' " she recalled to The Post. "'You need to pick the closest one. Just go.'"

At the more advanced facility, doctors gave Elianna's worried parents the prognosis: Their daughter had an uncommon but severe bacterial infection in her lungs and was struggling to get enough oxygen into her bloodstream. It all started with the water she'd breathed in at the pool.

The doctors said there was nothing they could do to remove the fluid, that it had to happen on its own. At the moment, they had to fight the infection and the inflammation it was causing. More X-rays followed. And every five minutes, it seemed, someone in a white coat was holding a stethoscope to Elianna's chest.

The scariest moment happened sometime between Wednesday night and Thursday morning. Mother and daughter were snuggled in Elianna's hospital bed when doctors and nurses rushed in. Elianna's oxygen level had dipped to dangerous levels, according to a monitor clipped to her toe.

Grace said the monitor's warning was the only sign that something was wrong with the child sleeping in her arms.

Her doctors "were saying things like, 'This is why she's here. Thank God you brought her in. This is why you're here. Nothing's going to happen to her with all these resources here.' "

Will there be a Nobel in literature this year?

By Jari Tanner and Jan M. Olsen
The Associated Press

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — For the first time since 1943, there's a notable risk that no Nobel Prize in literature will be awarded this year.

And that's not because the world's authors, poets, essayists and other writers have been found wanting.

The painful, though not unprecedented possibility arises from sex abuse and financial crimes scandals involving the Swedish Academy, the body that chooses the Nobel literature winner. The august academy has admitted that "unacceptable behavior in the form of unwanted intimacy" took place within its ranks, but its handling of unseemly allegations has shredded the body's credibility, called into question its judgment and forced its first female leader to resign.

A debate over how to face up to its flaws also divided its 18 members — who are appointed for life — into hostile camps and prompted seven members to leave or disassociate themselves from the secretive group.

The latest defection, announced Saturday, has left the prestigious institution with only 11 people to consider who should win the 2018 Nobel Prize in literature.

At its upcoming weekly meeting in Stockholm on Thursday, the Swedish Academy could decide to postpone or cancel awarding the prize this year — because it's in no shape to pick a winner. Anders Olsson, the permanent secretary of the academy, hinted at that scenario in remarks to Swedish public broadcaster SR last week.

If the academy does go ahead and choose a winner for 2018, some experts say the laureate's accomplishments could be tainted or overshadowed by a mess they had no hand in creating.

"It really depends on who gets it. That person needs to know what the academy has gone through and maybe respond to the crisis," Mads Rosendahl Thomsen, a literature professor with Denmark's Aarhus University, said.

The world's most prestigious prizes in science, medicine, literature and peacemaking have been withheld 49 times in all since the honors based on the will of Swedish inventor Alfred Nobel began in 1901.

Quit delaying hurricane money

What's it going to take for the state to pay the disaster-relief money it should have dispersed to city and county governments months ago for cleanup from Hurricane Matthew?

That's right, Matthew, in October 2016. A massive storm that did massive damage, despite the last-hour "wobble" that kept the eye just off the coast. Some residents were holed up behind towering piles of debris for weeks as cities scrambled (and sometimes bid against each other) to bring in garbage trucks, mulchers and other implements of mass tidying.

We say this to remind everyone of what life was like, way back 18 months ago.

Another date to keep in mind: Sept. 21. That's when the state Division of Emergency Management released a report from its own Inspector General, finding "preventable delays" in paying out federal emergency-management dollars to the cities and counties waiting on reimbursement from Matthew and Hurricane Hermine, which hit the Panhandle in September 2016. (That's the insult added to injury: Most of this isn't even state money. It's federal, and the state is just a pass-through.) The audit didn't get a lot of notice because it came out a few weeks after another major hurricane — Irma — struck Florida, doubling the strain on local budgets and the burden of even more paperwork.

Many local governments have had to raid trust funds or dip into reserves, and it made it harder to cope when, 11 months later, Hurricane Irma buzz-sawed up the East Coast.

The Sept. 21 audit is worth a look because it describes in the driest possible terms an agency seemingly unprepared to handle the finances of a big-deal storm. Just one example: The Federal Emergency Management Agency requires local governments to document expenses on a standard form that accompanies requests for reimbursement.

Yet the state didn't require its "subgrantees" to use that form. As a result, many cities and counties made up their own formats — which in turn made it tough to evaluate the requests for reimbursement. It's a mindboggling tangle of bureaucracy, especially in a state where hurricanes are a well-known hazard.

Granted, before Hermine and Matthew struck in 2016, Florida enjoyed a long stretch of relatively quiet weather. But the state Division of Emergency Management's various bureaus have one job: Get ready for "the big one" — be it flood, fire or storm — and deal with the inevitable aftermath. That includes the boring but necessary paperwork.

State officials promise they're going to do better. In September, a Division of Emergency Management spokesman told the Miami Herald the agency was "laser focused" on getting communities reimbursed. And yet, so many across Florida are still waiting — for Matthew and Hermine money.

Scott's already lost in the weeds – of West Virginia

Carl Hiaasen

Gov. Rick Scott has kicked off his U.S. Senate campaign with a strange commercial that pitches a long-doomed concept — term limits in Congress.

"There's more than 41,000 zip codes in America," the governor begins, writing with a red marker on a blank white-board map of the United States. "In all but one zip code, they want term limits on Congress. It's common sense.

"The only place that doesn't want term limits on Congress is right here — Washington — where all the career politicians are."

At which point the governor boldly draws a large X on the approximate longitude and latitude of Greenwood, West Virginia — not Washington, D.C.

All right, so he's not the smoothest or most electrifying presence on television. Neither is his Democratic opponent, Sen. Bill Nelson.

But, considering the massive tonnage of money Scott has accumulated for this campaign, you'd think he could afford to do one extra take of his debut ad, just to get it right. At least put your big dramatic X somewhere within Uber-ing distance of the District of Columbia.

Scott's choice of congressional term limits as a topic is as safe as it is cynical. He proposes a 12-year cap on tenure, which would be six terms in the House or two terms in the Senate.

The idea is popular with many voters of both parties, but especially with conservatives. Enactment requires a constitutional amendment and, before that can happen, two-thirds of both houses of Congress must pass the measure and send it to the states for ratification.

Don't hold your breath.

Kanye West will be approved as the next CIA director before term limits are ever embraced by the full Senate. Majority Leader Mitch McConnell has been there 33 years and has no interest in voting himself or his creaky pals out of a job.

Since Scott's own party controls the House and Senate, the reaction of many fellow Republicans to his term-limits proposal could best be described as good-humored indifference. They know it's a non-starter, dead as a doornail.

But they also know it plays well on the campaign trail, where Scott likes to rant against "career politicians." (To be fair, he doesn't really rant. His android style of delivery peaks at modulated complaining.)

It will be surprising if we don't also hear about the term-limit crusade from DeSantis, who's now running to take Scott's place in the governor's mansion. DeSantis is one of only four members of Florida's 27-member House delegation who as candidates signed a pledge supporting term limits.

Only 15 states restrict the time served by their legislators, and Florida is one of them. The law went into effect here 18 years ago, yet there's no evidence it has drained the political swamp in Tallahassee.

If anything, the swamp is deeper and smellier. Lobbyists wield as much clout as ever, which is why many ex-lawmakers end up as lobbyists.

A measure that would have extended the legal waiting period from two years to six years died in the last session of the Legislature. Clearly, some term-limited senators and representatives were contemplating future employment options, after their political careers come to an end.

When asked about Scott's promise to impose term limits on Congress, Rep. Mario Diaz-Balart, a Miami Republican, said there's already a healthy turnover in Washington and no need for a constitutional amendment.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thanks for life-changing experience

I just want to thank the community for their outpouring of love and gratitude toward my husband and all the wounded warriors who risked (and continue to risk) their lives to keep our country safe at the Warrior Beach Retreat parade yesterday. The love we saw was amazing. It was overwhelming. It was life changing.

I am so grateful to the community for making my husband feel that all of his sacrifices have been worth it. For reminding him and the other warriors that there are those out there that remember and appreciate their sacrifices.

My husband served in the U.S. Army for 22 years and did five tours in Iraq. Yesterday he shared with me that in all of his 22 years of service, he had never beheld a welcome like the one he saw yesterday. His heart was so full, he cried and I cried with him.

Thank you to the Cope family for their ministry. Thank you, Panama City and Callaway. Thank you. Thank you all for giving your time in turning out, making signs, waving and shouting "thank you" as we rode by. We will never forget it. It was truly "a sight for sore eyes and hearts." Thank you to the service men and women who saluted all the wounded warriors also and the helicopters that showed up and showed out. Words cannot express what you have done to uplift our hearts and our spirits for a lifetime. God bless you.

And may God bless America.

Pending home sales tick up for 2nd straight gain

Slightly more Americans signed contracts to buy homes in March, yet higher mortgage rates and a shortage of available houses are weighing on sales.

The National Association of Realtors said Monday that its pending home sales index ticked up 0.4 percent last month to 107.6. It was the second straight increase, but the index is still 3 percent lower than it was a year ago.

Pain at the gas pump

Get ready for the most expensive driving season in years

By Alex Veiga
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Get ready for a little bit more pain at the pump this summer.

Crude oil prices are at the highest level in more than three years and expected to climb higher, pushing up gasoline prices along the way.

The U.S. daily national average for regular gasoline is now $2.81 per gallon. That's up from about $2.39 per gallon a year ago, according to Oil Price Information Service. And across the U.S., 13 percent of gas stations are charging $3 per gallon or more, AAA said last week.

"This will be the most expensive driving season since 2014," said Tom Kloza, global head of energy analysis for Oil Price Information Service.

Gas stations display the price of gasoline Monday in Englewood, N.J. [SETH WENIG/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

The price of U.S. crude oil has been on a mostly steady incline since last June and last week hit $68.64, the highest since December 2014. Benchmark U.S. crude closed Friday at $68.10. Oil prices near $70 shouldn't put the brakes on economic growth, however. While they're boosting costs for some sectors of the economy, the energy sector and related industries have more money to spend on equipment and workers.

But higher oil prices are certainly an inconvenience for drivers, especially those with lower incomes.

"The good news is, both at the global level and the U.S. level, this is occurring at a time when growth is fairly robust," said Nariman Behravesh, chief economist at IHS Markit. "But consumers as whole will be hurt, mostly because gasoline prices are going up."

Kevin Lanke, a motion picture lighting technician in Redondo Beach, California, says he's now paying about $3.39 per gallon to fill up the 25-gallon tank in his 2000 Land Cruiser SUV. That's about 20 cents more per gallon than a couple of months ago.

"I would fill up my car and it would be $52 or $53," said Lanke, 51. "Now it's in the mid $60s for the same amount of gas."

Lanke keeps the recent increase in perspective, noting the three years ago he and his fellow Californians were paying over $4 per gallon. But he's already weighing his options, saying if gas goes to $4 a gallon he'll buy a more fuel-efficient car to use as his main ride and drive the Land Cruiser only when he needs it.

Several factors have helped drive oil prices higher. A wave of global economic growth has driven up demand for oil. At the same time, production cutbacks initiated by OPEC last year have helped whittle down oil supplies.

In the U.S., oil supplies were running 1.1 million barrels lower at the start of this summer's driving season, which runs from April through September, than a year ago, according to the U.S. Energy Information Administration.

That has amplified the typical increase in gas prices seen this time of year. Pump prices normally rise as demand increases from families going on vacation and taking to the highways on road trips. Already, U.S. consumer demand for gasoline hit a record high for the month of April, according to the EIA.

Drivers in Western states such as California, Oregon, Washington, as well as Alaska, Hawaii, Connecticut and Pennsylvania, are paying the most at the pump. The average retail price in those states is running from $2.95 to $3.61 per gallon.

Walmart to sell UK unit as it focuses on other markets

By Danica Kirka and Anne D'innocenzio
The Associated Press

LONDON — Walmart is selling its British unit, Asda, to local rival Sainsbury's for 7.3 billion pounds ($10.1 billion), a deal that lets the world's largest retailer focus on online sales in countries where it has stronger growth prospects and faces less-intense competition.

The cash and stock deal will reshape Britain's supermarket industry. It combines the No. 2 and No. 3 supermarket chains, with a total 31.4 percent share of the market that would put it ahead of the current leader, Tesco, according to data from Kantar Worldpanel.

Walmart overall is building fewer big stores and increasing its focus on internet businesses as people shop more online and at sites like Amazon. The company is expanding services like same-day delivery in the U.S., while focusing on big prizes overseas like China and potentially India. Walmart is reportedly in talks to buy a majority stake in Flipkart, India's leading e-commerce company, which would give it a foothold in an exploding online market.

"Given the competitive landscape in U.K. grocery retail, profitable growth and expansion opportunities are limited, so reducing resources makes sense — especially when there are other geographies and channels" with more opportunity for growth, said Moody's Lead Retail Analyst Charlie O'Shea.

In Britain's grocery market, discounters have taken market share from traditional chains such as Sainsbury's and Tesco. Asda was also fighting to compete with no frills German-based discounters Aldi and Lidl, which offer sharp discounts but limited assortments.

The deal with Sainsbury's is "consistent with our strategy of looking for new ways to drive international growth," Judith McKenna, CEO of Walmart's international business, said in a statement.

Walmart will receive 4.3 billion pounds worth of Sainsbury's stock and 2.98 billion pounds in cash. It'll own 42 percent of the combined company, with 29.9 percent of the voting rights.

The combination joins Asda's strong presence in northern England with Sainsbury's larger operation in the south, creating a company with more than 2,800 stores across the country and 51 billion pounds of annual revenue.

Sainsbury's said it will retain both brand names, has no plans to close stores, and could lead to prices that are up to 10 percent lower. Britain's Competition and Markets Authority said it will "likely" assess whether the deal could reduce competition and choice for shoppers, but Sainsbury's shares jumped as much as 21 percent in London.

Walmart, which operates stores under 55 banners in 27 countries outside the U.S., has taken some lumps as it tries to import its low-price strategy overseas.

The Bentonville, Arkansas-based company gave up in Germany and South Korea in 2006, and it closed 10 percent of its Brazil stores in 2016 as it looked to restructure its operations. In many overseas markets, Walmart has lacked the scale to press local suppliers on price as it does in the United States.

Twin bombings in Afghanistan kill 25

Attack is latest in string of large-scale assaults; victims include nine journalists

By Rahim Faiez and Amir Shah
The Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — Two Islamic State suicide bombers struck in Afghanistan's capital on Monday, killing 25 people, including nine journalists who had rushed to the scene of the first attack, in the deadliest assault on reporters since the fall of the Taliban in 2001.

An Agence France-Presse photographer, a cameraman for the local Tolo TV station and several reporters for the Afghan branch of Radio Free Europe were among the fatalities, police said. At least 45 people were wounded in the attacks, according to Kabul police spokesman Hashmat Stanekzai, who said four police were among those killed.

The attack was the latest in a relentless string of large-scale bombings and assaults in the capital and elsewhere in Afghanistan this year.

A few hours later, in the southern Kandahar province, a suicide car bomb targeting a NATO convoy killed 11 children from a nearby religious school, police said. The children had gathered around the NATO convoy for fun when the bomber struck, said Abdul Rahim Ayubi, a lawmaker from Kandahar. Eight Romanian NATO soldiers were wounded.

The Islamic State group claimed the Kabul bombings in a statement posted online, saying it targeted the Afghan intelligence headquarters. The statement did not say anything about specifically targeting journalists. The blasts took place in the central Shash Darak area, home to NATO headquarters and a number of embassies and foreign offices — as well as the Afghan intelligence service.

Stanekzai said the first suicide bomber was on a motorbike, while the second targeted those scrambling to the scene to aid victims. He said the second attacker was on foot in a crowd of reporters, pretending to be a member of the press, when he set off his payload.

AFP said the news agency's chief photographer in Kabul, Shah Marai, was among those killed. Hundreds of people attended his funeral later on Monday.

Media watchdog Reporters Without Borders said it was the deadliest attack targeting reporters since the U.S.-led invasion that overthrew the Taliban in 2001.

The Paris-based group named the nine journalists killed, who worked for media organizations from multiple countries, and said another six reporters were wounded. The group, also known by its French acronym RSF, said 36 media workers have been killed in Afghanistan in attacks by IS or the Taliban since 2016.

In a separate attack in the eastern Khost province, a 29-year-old reporter for the BBC's Afghan service was shot dead by unknown gunmen.

The BBC confirmed the death of Ahmad Shah, saying he had worked for its Afghan service for more than a year. BBC World Service Director Jamie Angus called it a "devastating loss."

Survivors of the attacks in Kabul recounted scenes of mayhem.

"When the explosion happened, everywhere was covered with dust and fire, it was such a horrific scene," said Jawed Ghulam Sakhi, a 28-year-old taxi driver. "I saw journalists covered with blood."

Masouda, a young woman who was with her husband when he was wounded in the attack, lashed out at the authorities.

"I don't know who is responsible for all these attacks. Every day we lose our loved ones and no one in this government is taking responsibility for the killing of these innocent people," she said. Like many Afghans, she has one name.

Afghan President Ashraf Ghani condemned the attacks, as did the U.S. Embassy in Kabul.

"We extend our deepest condolences to the families, friends, and colleagues of all the victims, including a number of brave journalists among the dead and injured," the embassy said. "Where media are in danger, all other human rights are under greater threat."

In other violence Monday, insurgents killed at least four Afghan policemen in an ambush in the northern Balkh province, said Sher Mohammad Abu-Tariq, the district chief in Nahri Shahi. In the eastern Nangarhar province, an explosion killed an Afghan police officer and wounded four other people, said Attuhullah Khogyani, spokesman for the provincial governor.

No one claimed responsibility for the attacks. The IS affiliate in Afghanistan first emerged in Nangarhar a few years ago, then expanded its footprint across the country.

An Interpol officer writes documents during a raid in night clubs in Georgetown, Guyana. A 13-country police operation freed nearly 350 people from human trafficking networks and arrested 22 people across the Caribbean and South America. International police agency Interpol said Monday those rescued included children and adults working in night clubs, farms, gold mines, factories and open-air markets. Report: Ex-Brazil gymnastics coach accused of sexual abuse

A community center fired a former coach of the Brazilian national gymnastics team Monday after a news report revealed that dozens of athletes he worked with have accused him of sexual abuse.

Reporters for the "Fantastico" news show on Globo TV spoke to 40 gymnasts and former gymnasts who said Fernando de Carvalho Lopes had abused them while they were minors, including watching them shower, touching their genitals and asking them to masturbate in front of him. The Sao Paulo state Security Department confirmed police are investigating but would not provide any more details because the case is under judicial seal.

Hindu leader delivers opening prayers in Oklahoma Senate

A spiritual leader from Nevada has delivered a Hindu prayer to open the Oklahoma Senate as the legislative body observes an interfaith week.

Universal Society of Hinduism President Rajan Zed visited the Oklahoma Senate on Monday as part of an effort to pray for lawmakers in state Capitols across the country. Zed also delivered a prayer Monday to the Grady County Board of Commissioners and planned to also pray before the Oklahoma County Board of Commissioners and the Enid City Council later in the week.

A guest of Republican Sen. Stephanie Bice of Oklahoma City, Zed read verses from ancient Sanskrit scriptures that he said date to 1500 B.C.

Juvenile detention officer charged in teenager's death

An officer at a Florida juvenile detention center was arrested Monday on federal civil rights charges after a 17-year-old died in a beating by other inmates that was allegedly encouraged by the officer using a bounty and reward system. An indictment unsealed Monday accuses Antwan Lenard Johnson, 35, of conspiracy and deprivation of the teenager's rights under color of law. Johnson had an initial court hearing Monday but did not enter a plea. His lawyer declined comment.

The indictment claims Johnson used bounties and rewards so inmates at the Miami-Dade Regional Juvenile Detention Center would use violence to punish bad behavior by other inmates.

McConnell: Senate likely to consider anti-opioid package

The U.S. Senate is working on crafting a comprehensive package to combat the nation's opioid addiction problems and ease the transition from treatment to the workforce, Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell said Monday.

The Kentucky Republican attended discussions in Louisville that included business representatives and executives on the front lines of treating people battling drug addiction. McConnell emerged to promote his recently introduced measure aimed at helping people make the successful journey from treatment to the workplace.

"We're likely to put together an opioid package in the Senate," he told reporters.

Four climbers die in Swiss Alps after unexpected storm

An unexpected snowstorm coupled with high winds killed four climbers in the Swiss Alps and left five others in critical condition early Monday after they became trapped overnight and couldn't reach shelter, officials said.

A total of 14 hikers from France, Germany and Italy were left stranded in the Pigne d'Arolla region, police in southwestern Valais canton said. Authorities deployed seven helicopters as part of rescue efforts. The climbers were caught off-guard by high winds, snow and bitter cold, and were forced to spend the night outdoors, Valais police spokesman Markus Rieder said.

Missile strikes in Syria kill over a dozen fighters

In this photo released by the Syrian official news agency SANA, Syrian President Bashar Assad, right, meets with Alaeddin Boroujerdi, left, the head of Iran's parliamentary committee on national security and foreign policy, Monday in Damascus, Syria. The meeting came as a missile attack targeting government outposts in Syria's northern region killed at least 26 pro-government fighters, mostly Iranians, amid soaring Mideast tensions. [SANA VIA THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

BEIRUT — A missile attack on government outposts in northern Syria killed more than a dozen pro-government fighters, many of them Iranians, a war monitoring group and an Iranian news agency said Monday. The strikes came amid soaring tensions between regional archenemies Israel and Iran.

There was no official confirmation of the death toll or what was the target. The Sunday night strikes sparked speculation on who carried it out, with most reports suspecting Israel was behind it.

Syrian state TV called it a "new aggression on military positions" in Hama and Aleppo provinces but was not specific. Activists said there was a spectacular explosion at an arms depot and military compounds where Iranian fighters are based. The explosion was large enough to be picked up by monitors as a magnitude 2.6 earthquake.

The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said 26 pro-government fighters were killed, most of them Iranians, with only four Syrians among the dead. It said the arms depot contained surface-to-surface missiles belonging to Iranian militias in Hama province. Another attack hit near a military air base in Aleppo province, the Observatory said.

It added that the death toll could rise, since 60 fighters were wounded and several others remained missing.

A member of an Iranian-backed Iraqi militia operating in Syria confirmed the attack on the Hama facility and put the death toll at 36, including 10 Iranian advisers. The official spoke on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to talk to the media.

Iranian media gave conflicting reports: One semiofficial news agency said there were no Iranians killed, while a second one said 18 were killed.

The arms depot in Hama, known as Brigade 47, is one of the largest bases housing Iranian-affiliated forces and equipment, according to Jamil al-Saleh, commander in the opposition Tajammu al-Ezzat rebel group. He said the province has at least five other bases where Iranians are deployed alongside Syrian- allied militias.

The two airstrikes were near rebel areas, he added.

"It was like an earthquake hit Hama," al-Saleh said by telephone from Hama province.

He and the Observatory said they suspect Israel was behind the attack.

Lebanon's Al-Akhbar daily, considered close to the militant Iranian-backed Hezbollah group and the Syrian government, said the attack targeted "important arms depots used by the (Syrian) army and Iran's Revolutionary Guards." It said the missiles used appear to have been bunker busters.

Like a showman, Trump suggests DMZ for 'big event' with Kim

By Matthew Pennington
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Like a consummate showman, President Donald Trump began rolling the drum Monday for his summit with North Korean leader Kim Jong Un, suggesting the "big event" take place in the Demilitarized Zone that divides the Koreas. That's where Kim just met his South Korean counterpart.

But Trump said that the Southeast Asian city state of Singapore was also in the running to host what few would have predicted when nuclear tensions were soaring last year — the first face-to-face meeting between the leaders of the United States and North Korea.

While policy experts, and even his own national security adviser, voice skepticism that North Korea is sincere about giving up its nuclear efforts, Trump sounds like he's gearing up for a date with history, and clearly wants the backdrop to be just right.

First by Twitter, and then at a press conference in the White House Rose Garden, Trump said he likes the idea of going to the southern side of the demarcation line that separates the Koreas, where South Korean President Moon Jae-in met Kim on Friday.

"There's something that I like about it because you are there, you are actually there," Trump said. "If things work out there's a great celebration to be had on the site, not in a third-party country."

There's been much speculation about where Trump and Kim might meet. Countries in Europe and Southeast Asia, in Mongolia and even a ship in international waters have all been suggested as possible venues. Monday was the first time that Trump had publicly named potential locations.

His planned meeting with Kim will be the crucial follow-up to the summit between Kim and Moon on Friday where they pledged to seek a formal end this year to the Korean War — a conflict that was halted in 1953 by an armistice and not a peace treaty, leaving the two sides technically at war. They also committed to ridding the peninsula of nuclear weapons.

Former reality television star Trump now has to help turn the Korean leaders' bold but vague vision for peace into reality. Undaunted, he gave the impression Monday that governments were vying to host his face-to-face with Kim and share in the attention it would bring.

"Everybody wants us. It has the chance to be a big event," the president said on a bright spring day in Washington, alongside Nigerian President Muhammadu Buhari, whom he'd just met at the White House. "The United States has never been closer to potentially have something happen with respect to the Korean Peninsula that can get rid of the nuclear weapons, can create so many good things, so many positive things, and peace and security for the world."

Archaeologists find ancient mass child sacrifice in Peru

LIMA, Peru — Archaeologists in northern Peru say they have found evidence of what could be the world's largest single case of child sacrifice.

The pre-Columbian burial site, known as Las Llamas, contains the skeletons of 140 children who were between the ages of five and 14 when they were ritually sacrificed during a ceremony about 550 years ago, experts who led the excavation told The Associated Press on Friday.

The site, located near the modern day city of Trujillo, also contained the remains of 200 young llamas apparently sacrificed on the same day.

The burial site was apparently built by the ancient Chimu empire. It is thought the children were sacrificed as floods caused by the El Nino weather pattern ravaged the Peruvian coastline.

"They were possibly offering the gods the most important thing they had as a society, and the most important thing is children because they represent the future," said Gabriel Prieto, an archaeology professor at Peru's National University of Trujillo, who has led the excavation, along with John Verano of Tulane University.

"Llamas were also very important because these people had no other beasts of burden, they were a fundamental part of the economy," Prieto said, adding that the children were buried facing the sea, while the llamas faced the Andes Mountains to the east.

Excavation work at the burial site started in 2011, but news of the findings was first published on Thursday by National Geographic , which helped finance the investigation.

Prieto said that besides the bones, researchers also found footprints that have survived rain and erosion. The small footprints indicate the children were marched to their deaths from Chan Chan, an ancient city a mile away from Las Llamas, he said.

Verano said the children's skeletons contained lesions on their breastbones, which were probably made by a ceremonial knife. Dislocated ribcages suggest that whoever was performing the sacrifices may have been trying to extract the children's hearts.

Jeffrey Quilter, the director of the Peabody Museum of Archaeology & Ethnology at Harvard University, described it as a "remarkable discovery."

In an email, Quilter told the AP the site provides "concrete evidence" that large scale sacrifices of children occurred in ancient Peru.

"Reports of very large sacrifices are known from other parts of the world, but it is difficult to know if the numbers are exaggerated or not," Quilter wrote. Quilter is heading a team of scientists who will analyze DNA samples from the children's remains to see if they were related and figure out which areas of the Chimu empire the sacrificed youth came from.

Several ancient cultures in the Americas practiced human sacrifices including the Mayans, the Aztecs and the Incas, who conquered the Chimu empire in the late 15th century. But the mass sacrifice of children is something that has rarely been documented.

The Las Llamas site is located in a shantytown, and has been fenced off to stop illegal developers from building homes on it.

Prieto says the site shows how in Peru history can be just around the corner.

"This site surrounded by houses in a working class neighborhood can tell us a lot about a macabre event that is perhaps one of the darkest moments in our history," Prieto said. "But this is also part of our cultural heritage."

Popova, VanDeMark eager for state

By Dustin Kent

The first trip to Altamonte Springs for the 2A state tennis tournament last year was both fun and slightly unsatisfying for Arnold's Alisa Popova and Elizabeth VanDeMark, with the pair going out in the quarterfinals in doubles and Popova falling in the semifinals of the singles competition.

Popova and VanDeMark return to Sanlando Park today and will get another shot at making a state run when competition begins Wednesday. Once again, the two will compete in doubles and Popova in singles after taking wins over Pensacola in both competitions in the District 1-2A tournament April 20 at the University of West Florida. They'll find out today who their next opponents will be at the pre-tournament meetings. Whoever they end up facing, both players said Monday that they believe they're more prepared for the challenge than they were a year ago.

"We are very excited," VanDeMark said. "It's nice to be able to go in a second time and kind of know what the competition will be like so we can play our best. Last year, I really had never played at that level and I wanted to get experience from that match. It was a close match, which means we're capable of winning it. Now, we're just going down there with the mindset of being able to win it and we believe we can go further in the tournament."

That doubles defeat came at the hands of Elise Ballantyne and Lily Edwards of Bolles in two sets: 6-3, 7-6. Ballantyne/Edwards went on to lose in the semifinals to

North Bay Haven faces Episcopal School of Jacksonville as softball enters region round

By Pat McCann
The News Herald

PANAMA CITY — North Bay Haven softball coach Butch Bernard probably was in the same position as many in the media, as well as supporters of the Lady Buccaneers when trying to mine information on their first-round region opponent.

Episcopal School of Jacksonville brings a 12-6 record into a Region 1-4A semifinal against North Bay Haven 6 p.m. Thursday at Harders Park.

The other side of the bracket has Florida High, 10-16, traveling to play Trinity Christian Academy, 14-10, in Jacksonville.

In other classifications, Mosley (11-15) plays a Region 1-6A quarterfinal at Gulf Breeze (15-11) on Wednesday, the same day that highly regarded Marianna, (24-3) hosts South Walton in 1-5A.

Bozeman (19-6) is among the Region 2-1A hopefuls and plays at Jay on Thursday while Wewahitchka (22-4) hosts Northview on the opposite side of that bracket.

Sneads, Holmes County and Bethlehem still are alive in 1-1A.

Episcopal plays a Jacksonville-based schedule, so Bernard figures the Lady Eagles meet stout competition. The Region 1-4A hopefuls are the same teams as last year, but NBH traveled to play at Trinity Christian in 2017 while Florida High hosted Episcopal.

"I've been looking all weekend, looking at what their pitcher's done," Bernard said Monday. "I was able to compare the matchup on MaxPreps and on paper they match up pretty good with us.

"Based on batting average and slugging percentage we're pretty close. And you go down the important stats like runs and left on base, we're pretty close across the line."

Brown hopes Good Magic earns him win

By Gary B. Graves
The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Chad Brown acknowledges he has lacked either the right horse or the right luck to win the Kentucky Derby.

Until now.

Brown almost gushes when talking about Good Magic, which might position him to finally break through in Saturday's 144th Run For The Roses at Churchill Downs. If the chestnut colt's name alone doesn't suggest a positive vibe, then consider his resume' that includes last year's Breeders' Cup Juvenile and the Eclipse Award as the top 2-year-old male.

Good Magic is hitting stride at the right time entering horse racing's marquee event, standing second in Derby points with 134 after claiming the Grade 2 Blue Grass at Keeneland on April 7. Five career starts have yielded two wins, two seconds

Gulliver Prep's eventual state title team of Lindy Lyons and Ysabel Gonzalez Rico, with Gonzalez Rico also defeating Popova 6-0, 6-1 and going on to win the singles championship as well. VanDeMark said that she and Popova are a stronger team this year, mostly due to their increased familiarity with each other and maturity on the court.

"Last year, I believe in the second set we went into a slump and were not able to recover from that," she said. "We're better friends this year, which has helped us and makes it easier to get out of slumps. We just motivate each other throughout the match."

Said Popova: "I think we learned that we've got to stop getting frustrated with each other on the court and keep our focus on the game and not be like, 'oh God, I can't believe we missed that shot,' and just move on to the next point."

Frustration wasn't really the issue for Popova in her singles loss last year, as she fell to a senior in Gonzalez Rico who has since gone on to play college tennis for Emory University where she posted a 29-6 record as a freshman. Popova said she wasn't quite ready a year ago to challenge a player of that caliber.

"Her level of play was amazing and I wasn't really surprised because down south everyone is just awesome," she said. "I was not ready to play someone like that in the semifinals, but it's OK. You live and you learn. I definitely feel like I've improved since then because if you practice a lot you're obviously going to improve. My shots are harder and more consistent and that's what comes with practice."

Popova did register a singles victory in the quarterfinals, knocking off Rickards' Charitha Moparthy 6-2, 6-0. While saying she would love to make it one step further in her return to the state tournament, Popova said she's not judging her success by what round she finishes her tournament in.

"Honestly, it's not that big of a deal if I don't make the finals as long as I know I played well and didn't give up," she said. "I would be super mad at myself if I played a person and said, 'well, I'm going to lose anyway' and start tanking. Basically, my bar is just to play as well as I can and if I do that then it doesn't really matter where I finish."

She and her doubles partner seem to be on the same page as expectations are concerned.

"Personally, it's just going down there and knowing that we played to the best of our capabilities," VanDeMark said. "That's where I would be happy. Last year, it felt like we could've played better, so it was an unsatisfying feeling. Just knowing we went down there and played our best would be nice."

Arnold coach Kelli Wright said she believes the year of experience at state will serve both players well in the doubles competition and Popova in the singles.

"I think Alisa has a chance this year to take it a step further than last year. She has a year under her belt and knows what to expect," she said. "Obviously, the competition is elevated at state, so she has to be on her game, but I just think having the experience of playing last year, she knows what to expect. I think she'll be ready and have a good mindset.

"In doubles, I think they're pretty sour about getting bounced in the first round last year, so I think they're going to compete and do their best to take it further than last year. Lizzy is a senior, so I think she'll be really hungry to get further this time."

The key breakdown in softball, of course, is in the pitchers' circle. Episcopal's Maddie Latta, a freshman, matches up well with Lady Bucs sophomore Katie Walters.

Both have done a vast majority of pitching for their team, and whereas Latta's ERA might be a little higher her strikeout ratio is formidable.

"Something that did surprise me and keeps me cautious about Episcopal is that they upset Providence, which at the time was No. 1 in 4A, so they're definitely a team not to overlook," Bernard said.

He is expecting Latta to be one of the best pitchers his team has faced, but despite NBH having only two players on its roster who isn't a sophomore or younger Bernard believes that his ballclub is tested.

"I feel pretty good this year, we've been in some real close games, real competitive games," Bernard said. "I think they have grown up. They're not typical sophomores.

"Most of them have got the experience of juniors or first-part-of-the-year seniors. Most of these girls have been with me four years and they're sophomores. Katie was starting as a seventh-grader. I feel pretty good, especially with it being at home."

Latta also leads the Lady Eagles in doubles (6), triples (4), home runs (1) and runs batted in (19) while hitting .455.

Kami Epply tops Episcopal in runs (26), hits (28), stolen bases (28) and batting average (.491.)

North Bay Haven needs just two victories in the region to advance to the state semifinals. Classifications 5A-9A must win three regional games to advance.

Rozier, Tatum help Celtics beat 76ers

By Jimmy Golen
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Terry Rozier scored 29 points and first-year Celtics forward Jayson Tatum scored 28 to outplay redshirt rookie Ben Simmons and lead the Boston Celtics to a 117-101 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers in Game 1 of the Eastern Conference semifinals on Monday night.

With much of the attention focused on Philadelphia young guns Simmons and Joel Embiid, Boston's youth movement of Tatum and Rozier led the way. Rozier, in his third year, added eight rebounds and six assists, and Al Horford had 26 points and seven rebounds for Boston.

Embiid scored 31 points with 13 rebounds for Philadelphia. Simmons, the likely rookie of the year, scored 18 with seven boards and six assists.

Game 2 is Thursday night in Boston.

The Celtics are hoping to have guard Jaylen Brown back from a hamstring injury he sustained in the first-round series against Milwaukee. He had been "very doubtful" for the second-round opener and was ruled out about a half hour before the tipoff, adding to injury woes that had already cost Boston Gordon Hayward and Kyrie Irving.

Playing point guard in place of Irving, Rozier was a star for Boston in Game 7 against Milwaukee and he came out hot again against the Sixers. He had 10 points and six assists in the first quarter and was 7 for 9 from 3-point range overall, overshadowing the lottery picks accumulated by Philadelphia during The Process.

The first overall pick in the 2016 draft who sat out all of last year with an injury, Simmons was heckled by the Boston crowd with chants of "Not a Rookie!" In the fourth quarter, as Tatum stepped to the free throw line to protect a double-digit lead, the chant turned to "He's a Rookie!"

Lightning rebound to beat Bruins

The Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — Brayden Point had an empty-net goal and three assists and Tampa Bay Lightning found a way to slow Boston's high-scoring line of Patrice Bergeron, David Pastrnak and Brad Marchand to beat the Bruins 4-2 in Game 2 of their second-round playoff series Monday night.

The victory evened the best-of-seven matchup between the top two teams in the Eastern Conference. Game 3 is Wednesday night in Boston.

Point assisted on Tampa Bay's first three goals before sealing the win with his empty-netter with 25.2 seconds left.

Yanni Gourde, Tyler Johnson and Ondrej Palat also scored for the Lightning, which rebounded from a 6-2 loss in Game 1.

Bergeron, Pastrnak and Marchand combined for three goals and 11 points in the opener. They had four more points in Game 2, but were unable to take over the game.

Charlie McAvoy scored for the Bruins late in the first period. Torey Krug's late goal trimmed Tampa Bay's lead to 3-2 with just over four minutes remaining.

Tampa Bay's Andrei Vasilevskiy stopped 18 shots. Tuukka Rask finished with 27 saves for Boston.

BROWN

and a third for Good Magic, allowing Brown to envision winning horse racing's crown jewel after falling short four previous times.

Brown would like to remove himself from conversations about which up-and-coming trainer is due to break through.

"We have to think that with all the opportunities that keep coming our way, we have a good shot of doing this," said Brown, 39. "Whether that happens or not remains to be seen.

"I'll say this: for me this is our best chance. Seems that way, anyway."

Brown earned his first Triple Crown series victory in last year's Preakness with Cloud Computing before Breeders' Cup wins with Good Magic and filly Rushing Fall helped claim his second consecutive Eclipse award as top trainer. His success has stoked a belief that beating 19 other horses over 1 1/ 4 mile is just a matter of time and opportunity.

Having a special horse is most important, and Brown's bright outlook speaks volumes after previous entries have finished out of the money on racing's biggest stage.

Practical Joke was fifth last May. Normandy Invasion led after a mile and in the stretch in 2013 before fading at the end and finishing fourth, leaving the trainer to ponder some what-ifs with his strategy.

"I think sometimes about our first try, some things I could've done a little bit differently in the race and maybe got a little bit more out of him," said Brown, from Mechanicville, New York.

Two other entries were forgettable. Shagaf didn't even finish in 2016, a day in which Brown's other pupil, My Man Sam, was 11th.

To be fair, even the top trainers have endured their share of Derby disappointments before everything came together.

Consider Todd Pletcher, who has often brought multiple entries to Churchill Downs. Before winning in 2010 with Super Saver — one of four entries that year — 24 other pupils yielded a best of second in 2001 with Invisible Ink.

Pletcher earned just two thirds among 17 horses dating back to 2011 before Pletcher won his second Derby last year with Always Dreaming from a trio of entrants. The struggle to get there, even with the numbers, is why Pletcher takes nothing for granted.

"I've always said that I had a tremendous appreciation for the race itself and how difficult it is to win," said Pletcher, who will try to go back to back with four horses this year. "To have won it twice is beyond anything we could have hoped for."

Brown meanwhile aims to join the exclusive club with a horse he believes is developing right on schedule. The promising factors don't stop there.

Jockey Jose Ortiz, who won last year's Belmont Stakes on the way to earning the Eclipse as top rider, will make his fifth consecutive start atop Good Magic.

With Brown's confidence comes a bit of caution not to get ahead of himself with so much needing to fall in line in the Derby. The challenge for him is waiting until the weekend to see how everything plays out for Good Magic.

"He's giving me all of the right body language that I've seen from other horses going into big races over the years," Brown said of Good Magic. "In a way, you try to treat this race like any other big race and that's what we're doing, and he's giving us all of the right signs."

ROUNDUP/MATCHUPS

Nationals 3, Pirates 2: Tanner Roark pitched seven efficient innings and drove in his first run since 2016, and the Washington Nationals beat the Pittsburgh Pirates.
Indians 7, Rangers 5: Jose Ramirez's RBI double broke an eighth-inning tie and the Cleveland Indians rallied for a win over the Texas Rangers.
Cubs 3, Rockies 2: Jon Lester pitched effectively into the sixth inning, continuing an impressive stretch for Chicago's rotation and helping the Cubs beat the Colorado Rockies for their season-high fifth straight victory.
Rays 3, Tigers 2: C.J. Cron and Brad Miller each homered in the ninth inning and the Tampa Bay Rays held on for a victory over the Detroit Tigers.
Brewers 6, Reds 5: Homers by Manny Pina and Lorenzo Cain ended the Milwaukee Brewers' historically bad slump, and Domingo Santana doubled home the go-ahead runs in the seventh inning for a victory over the Cincinnati Reds.
Red Sox 10, Royals 6: Xander Bogaerts hit a grand slam over the Green Monster and the Boston Red Sox finished April with their most wins ever by beating the Kansas City Royals.
Marlins 8, Phillies 4: Brian Anderson homered, drove in four runs and made a diving catch in right field with the bases loaded to preserve a lead, helping the Miami Marlins beat Jake Arrieta and the Philadelphia Phillies.
Astros 2, Yankees 1: Charlie Morton pitched two-hit ball into the eighth inning.

THIS DATE IN BASEBALL

MAY 1
1884: Toledo's Moses Walker became the first black player in the major leagues, appearing in the Blue Stockings' 5-1 loss to Louisville.
1901: Herm McFarland hit the first grand slam in American League history, powering the Chicago White Sox to a 19-9 rout of Detroit. The Tigers committed an AL-record 12 errors, 10 by the infield.
1906: John Lush of the Philadelphia Phillies pitched a no-hitter at Brooklyn, beating the Dodgers 6-0.
1920: Joe Oeschger of the Boston Braves and Leon Cadore of the Brooklyn Dodgers pitched 26 innings each in a 1-1 tie, the longest game by innings in major league history.
1920: Babe Ruth hit his first home run as a Yankee, and 50th of his career, sending New York past Boston 6-0 at the Polo Grounds.
1924: Chicago's Bill Barrett stole home twice, in the first and ninth innings, against the Cleveland Indians.
1944: George Myatt of Washington went 6-for-6, and the Senators beat the Boston Braves 11-4.
1951: New York's Mickey Mantle hit his first major league home run in an 8-3 loss at Chicago. The first of Mantle's 536 homers came in the sixth inning off Randy Gumpert.
1968: Philadelphia Phillies pitcher John Boozer was ejected by umpire Ed Vargo at Shea Stadium for throwing spitballs during his warmup pitches. Boozer was the second major league pitcher to be ejected from a game for this.
1969: Houston's Don Wilson beat the Cincinnati Reds with a 4-0 no-hitter at Crosley Field, one day after the Reds' Jim Maloney no-hit the Astros and nine days after Wilson absorbed a 14-0 pounding by Cincinnati.
1973: The San Francisco Giants scored seven runs with two outs in the ninth inning to beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-7.

IN BRIEF

IN BRIEF

ASHBURN, VA.
Williams says Redskins had 'inside information'

If other teams worried about LSU running back Derrius Guice's character, prompting his fall from first-round prospect to late-second-round pick, Washington Redskins senior VP of player personnel Doug Williams figures he had "inside information."

The Redskins, Williams said at a post-draft news conference Monday, did not share the concerns that apparently were behind Guice's slide until Washington took him with the 59th overall choice after trading down from No. 44 and adding a third-round selection in the process.

Williams called him "a value pick."

MINNEAPOLIS
University of Minnesota settles harassment claims

The University of Minnesota paid nearly $300,000 to settle sexual harassment complaints related to former athletic director Norwood Teague, newly released documents show.

Teague resigned in 2015 after two high-ranking administrators said he sexually harassed them at a senior leadership retreat at Breezy Point Resort in Pequot Lakes. He apologized for what he said was his "offensive behavior." Teague said he'd had too much to drink at the retreat and that his behavior doesn't illustrate his true character.

Ann Aronson, former deputy chief of staff in University President Eric Kaler's office, and Erin Dady, special assistant to the president, said they reported Teague's actions because they were frightened and feared others would be subject to such behavior.

Rodchenkov seeks dismissal of libel lawsuit

The whistleblower who exposed Russian cheating at the 2014 Olympics filed a motion Monday to dismiss a libel lawsuit against him, which his lawyers portrayed as a ploy led by the Russian owner of the Brooklyn Nets to reveal his whereabouts.

Former Moscow lab director Grigory Rodchenkov has been living in hiding in the United States, fearful of Russian retribution since revealing his country's elaborate scheme to cheat at the Sochi Games.

Rodchenkov seeks dismissal of the libel lawsuit supported by Nets owner Mikhail Prokhorov on behalf of three Russian biathletes whose medals from the Sochi Games were stripped for doping.

He also filed a countersuit against Prokhorov, the former president of Russia's biathlon federation. Rodchenkov's lawyers say Prokhorov's support of the biathletes is part of a scheme to flush out Rodchenkov from hiding.

LOUISVILLE, KY.
Monomoy Girl is 2-1 Kentucky Oaks favorite

Monomoy Girl is the early 2-1 favorite for the Kentucky Oaks but must do so from far outside if she is win the marquee race for 3-year-old fillies.

Monomoy Girl drew the No. 14 post Monday and is one of three Brad Cox-trained entries in Friday's $1 million race at Churchill Downs. Monomoy Girl has five wins and a second in six career starts. She won the Ashland Stakes at Keeneland on April 7.

Cox clearly would have preferred a better draw in the 144th Oaks. Florent Geroux will make his sixth consecutive start aboard Monomoy Girl, who has won her past two races by a combined eight lengths.

"It is what it is. It's horse racing," said Cox, whose other Oaks fillies are Kelly's Humor and Sassy Sienna. "Monomoy Girl is a good filly, and good horses overcome things. She's ready to run."

Midnight Bisou is the 5-2 second choice and will start from the No. 10 post. Trained by Bill Spawr, she is going for a fourth straight graded stakes win in 2018 beneath Hall of Fame jockey Mike Smith, including the Santa Anita Oaks.

Co-owner Jeffrey Bloom believes Midnight Bisou is in the "perfect" spot.

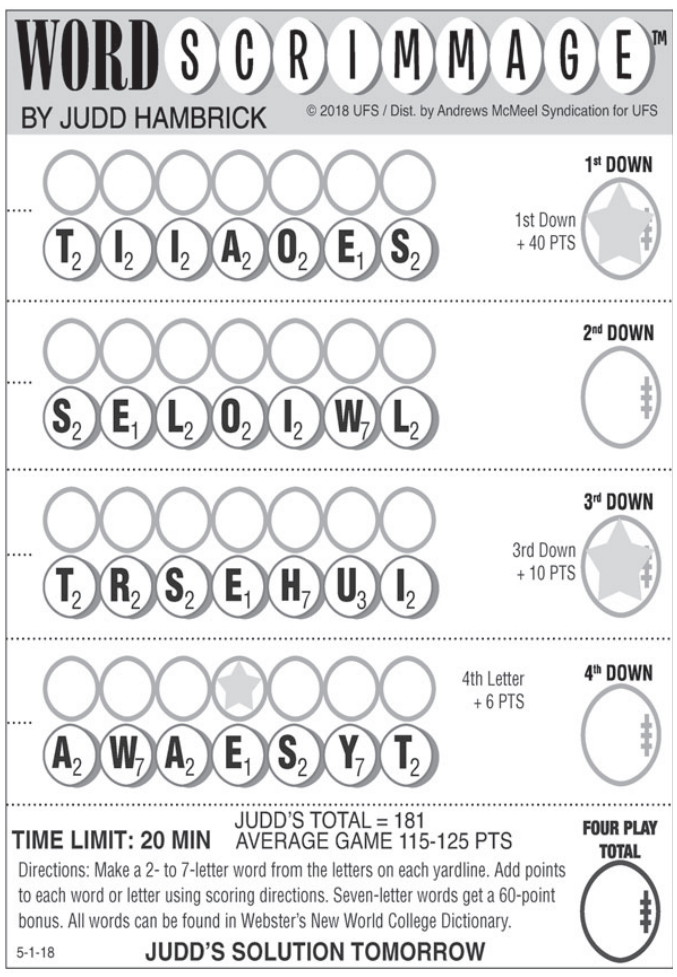
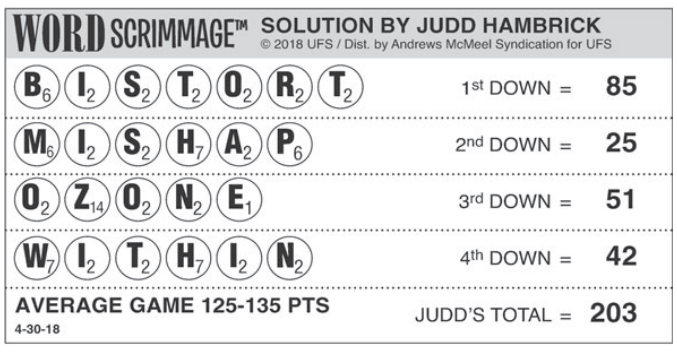
DIVERSIONS

WORD SCRIMMAGE: JUDD HAMBRICK





ACES ON BRIDGE: BOBBY WOLFF

"Art is not a mirror to hold up to society, but a hammer with which to shape it."
— Bertolt Brecht

Most partnerships these days use a 15-17 no-trump opening bid rather than 16-18. The logic is that if you open most 12-counts, you do not want your rebid of one no-trump to be 12-15; that is an uncomfortably wide range for exploring game and slam.

In today's deal, South has a little too much for the no-trump opener, despite his square pattern. Of course, any action South chooses should lead to his declaring a contract of three no-trump on a low heart lead.

The contract may appear to be in jeopardy, but South can prevail by using a maneuver that should be in everyone's armory: the holdup. He merely delays taking his heart ace, playing small hearts on the first and second tricks and taking his ace on the third round of the suit.

What is the result of this approach? South knows that he will eventually finesse in diamonds into what he imagines will be the safe hand, East, since it is West who appears to have long hearts.

Note that when South leads the diamond queen, if East wins the finesse to shift to a spade, declarer will have to decide whether to take the spade finesse or play for diamonds to behave. Rising with the ace feels right to me.

However, when the diamond queen is covered with the king, as it is today, declarer comes back to hand in clubs and runs the diamond eight. Whether the finesse of the diamond 10 wins or loses, he has nine tricks and does not need the spade finesse.

ANSWER: Had East not bid one heart, you would probably have bid two spades. As it is, should you bid two spades anyway, or is one spade enough? I think it is right to bid two spades, since you would compete to one spade on the same hand without one of the aces — that call really doesn't show anything more than four-plus spades, though it denies weakness.

DEAR ABBY

Nurse knocked into emotional tailspin by cancer diagnosis

Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: A few weeks ago, I was diagnosed with stage 4 colon cancer. I'm only 34. That's what I keep repeating to myself — I'm only 34. I feel lost. I'm mad at God and have lost my faith. I keep wondering "Why me?" "Why my family AGAIN?" "Why stage 4?" I cry alone in an empty house because I don't want to stress out my kids and my husband.

The support groups are 30 minutes away and feature mostly breast cancer patients and survivors. I'm a nurse, and I feel out of control. All my decisions are being made when I'm unconscious or barely out of anesthesia. My world has been turned upside down. I'm not hanging on well at all. Because my control is slipping, I have lost my grasp on the person I once was. I was a strong woman. I don't know what to do. Help! — NURSE WHO IS NOW THE PATIENT

DEAR NURSE: Right now you are feeling vulnerable, which, under the circumstances, is normal. You should not be crying alone or isolating yourself as you have been doing. You need more emotional support than the support group you belong to can give.

It may help you to contact the American Cancer Society because it provides support and information 24 hours a day, 365 days a year to those facing cancer. Trained cancer specialists are available via phone or live chat and can offer you not only accurate, up-to-date information, but also connect you with valuable services and resources. The phone number to call is (800) 227-2345, and the website is cancer.org. Please don't wait to reach out. My thoughts are with you.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Contact Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

HOROSCOPES BY HOLIDAY MATHIS

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Undoubtedly, your reaction can give power to an action; In fact, it is sometimes the one and only power source of the thing to which you are reacting. Therefore, if you want a situation to discontinue, consider trying a non-reaction as your next reaction.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Unpleasant circumstances are the ones that teach the most valuable lessons. For instance, had you never been neglected or abandoned, you wouldn't be so self-sufficient. You'll be celebrated for your strength.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21) — You'll have to pivot from the usual in order to embrace new possibilities. This next turn will have to be made in faith.

CANCER (June 22-July 22) — The demands of the day won't be burdensome. If the day's tasks are trying, either you misunderstood what was required or someone is asking way too much of you. Mountains invite you to climb them, not carry them.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — The minute you feel yourself competing, pull back and ask whether the situation is really a good match for you. Those who appreciate what you bring to the table won't ask you to compete for your spot.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Not all inaction is alike. There's doing nothing out of fear, laziness or confusion; then there's doing nothing out of principle — having the discipline to be still when inaction is the best choice for the moment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — To contrive for self-advantage is the folly of children and those who behave like them — an individual is usually best served within a thriving group. You'll work toward making the group great and be lifted along with it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21) — Today it may seem that your loved ones think of you as a genie in service to them. They make their requests and expect you to magically fulfill immediately. But what about the other plans you had made? Drop them at your own risk.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Since comparison and judgment have no place in today's proceedings and can only lead to anger, you'll be looking for ways to appreciate the contributions of others without putting yourself in a position to rate them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — You know what it's like to stand amongst a group that you don't truly belong to. Because you've tasted that unique kind of loneliness, you can really appreciate the abundant warmth in the bonds you have now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — You've done the work; now enjoy watching your plan play out. It will be satisfying to see things go off without a hitch because you implemented the lessons of the past.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — The way you talk to yourself in your own head will be extremely important. The level of kindness of your inside voice will dictate the level of kindness in your outside voice.
