Trump sees 'new future' for N Korea

By Zeke Miller, Catherine Lucey, Josh Lederman and Foster Klug
The Associated Press

SINGAPORE — President Donald Trump wrapped up his five-hour nuclear summit with North Korean leader Kim Jong Un with surprisingly warm words and hope for “a bright new future” for Kim’s isolated and impoverished nation. Yet he immediately faced pointed questions at home about whether he got little and gave away much in his push to make a deal with the young autocrat — including an agreement to halt U.S. military exercises with South Korea.

Meeting with staged ceremony on a Singapore island, Trump and Kim signed a joint statement Tuesday agreeing to work toward a denuclearized Korean Peninsula, although the timeline and tactics were left unclear. Trump later promised to end “war games,” with ally South Korea, a concession to Kim that appeared to catch the Pentagon and Seoul government off guard and sowed confusion among Trump’s Republican supporters in Washington.

The head-scratching was a fitting end for a meeting marked by unpredictability. The face to face was unthinkable just months earlier as the two leaders traded insults and nuclear threats. In agreeing to the summit, Trump risked granting Kim his long-sought recognition on the world stage in hopes of ending the North’s nuclear program.

While progress on the nuclear question was murky, the leaders spent the public portions of their five hours

PANAMA CITY — Ask Elaine Bryant what’s the best thing on her farm stand table and the answer is quick and resounding — the tomatoes.

“The taste, the flavor they got,” Bryant answered, cutting open a ripe specimen. “That right there, when we cut it, you can smell it. If you taste it, it tastes like both fruit and vegetable. And it’s healthy.”

Starting this week, morning visitors to the Bay County Health Department office at 597 W. 11th St. will have a chance to buy ripe tomatoes, along with dozens of other fresh fruits and vegetables as part of a new farmers market hosted by the Health Department.

The purpose of the market is two-fold, said Heather Kretzer, spokesperson for the Bay County Health Department. Individuals who receive WIC (Women, Infants, Children) nutritional supplement benefits already get coupons redeemable at local farmers markets for fresh fruits and vegetables. Unfortunately, however, many of those individuals don’t have transportation to get to the farmer’s market, Kretzer said. Putting the market right outside the WIC office at the Health Department creates an opportunity for those clients to instantly redeem their coupons before heading home.

The market also brings fresh fruits and vegetables to an area with low access to fresh foods, Kretzer said. There are no grocery stores within a half-mile of the Health Department office, and in the census tract next to the office, there are no grocery stores within a mile. For many people in that area who don’t have transportation,

Bay District report cards delayed

District awaiting end of course exam results from state

By Eryn Dion

PANAMA CITY — Report cards for Bay District Schools secondary students will not be released until the state releases EOC (End of Course) exam reports, district officials said Tuesday.

With parents growing curious, the district issued an IRIS alert Tuesday about the report cards for grades 6-12. The district’s calendar calls for the report cards to be printed Wednesday, but with no EOC scores, the grades would not be complete.

“We don’t want to print report cards that just have 'I' (incomplete) on them,” said Sharon Michalik, the district’s director of communications.

Elementary report cards are available through Parent Portal, and printed versions are available for pick-up during school hours Monday through Thursday.

The state has until June 30 to release the EOC scores. Michalik said delays like this have happened before, and the state has not said when the scores will come out. When they are released, though, the grades will updated immediately on Parent Portal and the report cards printed.

“As we have access to more, they will have access to more,” Michalik said of parents.

While they’re on Parent Portal, Michalik reminded parents to make sure their addresses are up to date in the system, so the transportation department can create bus routes for the next school year. If there has been a change of address, it has to be updated in Parent Portal, and two proofs of address must be brought to the child’s school before the bus stop can be moved.

READER FEEDBACK

With state schools facing largely uncharted territory next year as part of the Marjory Stoneman Douglas Public Safety Act — which provides funding and restrictions for both school safety and mental health — education and law enforcement officials from the 14th Judicial Circuit met Monday morning in Bay County to share resources and ideas.

Jay Wright: “Active participation and support from parents is vital to any success any new programs would have.”

Zac Thomas: “I’m just glad school’s out soon.”

Two teenage brothers were apparently heading indoors after mowing lawns this morning when one was struck by lightning.

Rhonda Tingler: “My boyfriend was hit last week, Sunday, indirectly, and although it knocked him out and he awoke with ears ringing, tingling throughout body and increased heart rate he was okay. It hit our garage and blew several sockets out of the wall, all electronics plugged in, and a piece of the concrete foundation while he was walking through the doorway. All he remembers is a flash. He didn’t go to the ER as I encouraged but did finally go to the doctor that Friday so I imagine there are probably others unreported and occur more frequently than people think.”

Rather than the punishment summer school has traditionally been framed as, Clint Whitfield, principal at Breakfast Point Academy, and other administrators in the district look at summer school as an opportunity for students who need extra help to get that support.

Dillon Miller: “I would like to know what the percent of Bay County 3rd graders fall into this category. Specifically, what were the 3rd grade FSA reading test results for Bay district schools and specifically Breakfast Point Academy? I had heard that the percent of students who did poorly were pretty high; like 49%. If this is true, then something is not working; The curriculum, the testing, the teaching methods, the school, the district, etc...”

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, June 13, the 164th day of 2018. There are 201 days left in the year.

Today’s Highlight in History: On June 13, 1978, the movie musical “Grease,” starring John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John, had its world premiere in New York.

On this date:
In 1525, German theologian Martin Luther married former nun Katharina von Bora.
In 1789, during the French Revolution, the National Assembly convened.
In 1842, Queen Victoria became the first British monarch to ride on a train, traveling from Slough Railway Station to Paddington in 25 minutes.
In 1911, the ballet “Petrouchka,” with music by Igor Stravinsky and choreography by Michel Fokine, was first performed in Paris by the Ballets Russes, with Vaslav Nijinsky in the title role.
In 1927, aviation hero Charles Lindbergh was honored with a ticker-tape parade in New York City.

In 1935, James Braddock claimed the title of world heavyweight boxing champion from Max Baer in a 15-round fight in Queens, New York. “Becky Sharp,” the first movie photographed in “three-strip” Technicolor, opened in New York.
In 1942, a four-man Nazi sabotage team arrived on Long Island, New York, three days before a second four-man team landed in Florida. (All eight men were arrested after two members of the first group defected.) President Franklin D. Roosevelt created the Office of Strategic Services and the Office of War Information.
In 1957, the Mayflower II, a replica of the ship that brought the Pilgrims to America in 1620, arrived at Plymouth, Massachusetts, after a nearly two-month journey from England.

AP FACT CHECK: Trump distorted history on North Korea

By Matthew Pennington and Calvin Woodward
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump celebrated his historic summit with North Korea's leader Tuesday with remarks that twisted history and raised false hope that the remains of all missing Americans from the Korean War will be coming home.

A look at some of his statements at a news conference following his meeting in Singapore with Kim Jong Un and how they compare with the facts:

TRUMP: "Chairman Kim and I just signed a joint statement in which he reaffirms his unwavering commitment to complete denuclearization of the Korean Peninsula. We also agreed to vigorous negotiations to implement the agreement as soon as possible, and he wants to do that. This isn't the past. This isn't another administration that never got it started and, therefore, never got it done."

THE FACTS: He's wrong in suggesting his administration is the first to start on denuclearization with North Korea. The Bill Clinton and George W. Bush administrations both did so.

Clinton reached an aid-for-disarmament deal in 1994 that halted North Korea's plutonium production for eight years, freezing what was then a very small atomic arsenal. Bush took a tougher stance toward North Korea, and the 1994 nuclear deal collapsed because of suspicions that the North was running a secret uranium program. But Bush, too, ultimately pursued negotiations. That led to a temporary disabling of some nuclear facilities, but talks fell apart because of differences over verification.

TRUMP: "He actually mentioned the fact that they proceeded down a path in the past and ultimately as you know nothing got done. In one case, they took billions of dollars during the Clinton regime. ... Took billions of dollars and nothing happened." He said of Clinton: "He spent $3 billion and got nothing."

THE FACTS: His numbers are incorrect. The Clinton administration, which he calls a "regime," and the Bush administration combined provided some $1.3 billion in assistance from 1995 to 2008, says the Congressional Research Service, a nonpartisan arm of Congress. Slightly more than half was for food aid and 40 percent for energy assistance.

He's also wrong in saying "nothing happened" in return. North Korea stopped producing plutonium for eight years under the 1994 agreement. Just how much was achieved, though, is in question, because of the suspicions that emerged later that North Korea had been secretly seeking to enrich uranium.

together expressing optimism and making a show of their new relationship. Trump declared he and Kim had developed "a very special bond." He gave Kim a glimpse of the presidential limousine. Kim, for his part, said the leaders had "decided to leave the past behind" and promised: "The world will see a major change."

Soon, Kim was on a plane headed home, while a clearly ebullient Trump held forth for more than an hour before the press on what he styled as a historic achievement to avert the prospect of nuclear war. Before leaving himself, Trump tossed out pronouncements on U.S. alliances, human rights and the nature of the accord that he and Kim had signed.

The details of how and when the North would denuclearize appear yet to be determined, as are the nature of the unspecified "protections" Trump is pledging to Kim and his government.

The Singapore accord largely amounts to an agreement to continue discussions, echoing previous public statements and commitments. It does not, for instance, include an agreement to take steps toward ending the technical state of warfare between the U.S. and North Korea.

Nor does it detail plans for North Korea to demolish a missile engine testing site, a concession Trump said he'd won, or Trump's promise to end military exercises in the South while negotiations between the U.S. and the North continue. Trump cast that decision as a cost-saving measure, but also called the exercises "inappropriate" while talks continue. North Korea has long objected to the drills as a security threat.

It was unclear whether South Korea was aware of Trump's decision before he announced it publicly. U.S. Forces Korea said in a statement Tuesday it was unaware of any policy change. Trump phoned South Korean President Moon Jae-in after leaving Singapore to brief him on the discussions. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo flew to Seoul Wednesday for follow-up meetings.

The U.S. has stationed combat troops in South Korea since the end of the Korean War in the 1950s and has used them in a variety of drills. The next scheduled major exercise, involving tens of thousands of troops, normally is held in August.

The Pentagon said Tuesday it was consulting with the White House and others, but was silent on whether the August exercise would proceed. Mattis' chief spokeswoman, Dana W. White, told reporters he was "in full alignment" with Trump.

Lawmakers, too, were looking for details. Republicans emerged from a meeting with Vice President Mike Pence wanting more information on which exercises were on hold. Colorado Sen. Corey Gardner said Pence told them that small-scale exercises would continue, but "war games will not." Pence's spokeswoman later denied that comment.

"There will be certain exercises that will continue," Gardner told AP, adding he hoped "there's further clarification what that means."

North Korea is believed to possess more than 50 nuclear warheads, with its atomic program spread across more than 100 sites constructed over decades to evade international inspections. Trump insisted that strong verification of denuclearization would be included in a final agreement, saying it was a detail his team would begin sorting out with the North Koreans next week.

The agreement's language on North Korea's nuclear program was similar to what the leaders of North and South Korea came up with at their own summit in April. Trump and Kim referred back to the so-called Panmunjom Declaration, which contained a weak commitment to denuclearization but no specifics on how to achieve it.

But Tuesday's meeting was as much about theatrics as the details of a deal.

The U.S. president brushed off questions about his public embrace of the autocrat whose people have been oppressed for decades. He did say that Otto Warmbier, an American who died last year just days after his release from imprisonment in North Korea, "did not die in vain" because his death helped bring about the nuclear talks.

MARKET

that leaves convenience stores as a main source of food.

"I wish that those kind of stores could offer more, but there are not a lot of options," Kretzer said. "When you're talking about convenience, people are going to go for that."

Two farms will be vending at the markets throughout the week, alternating days. The U.S. Department of Agriculture helped coordinate with the farms, and Kretzer said both have different offerings, so people should come several times a week for the best variety. The market's opening day was Monday, and beyond the WIC clients, Kretzer said the market was a surprise hit with Health Department employees, who were lining up waiting for it to open.

"The employees, I think, are the most excited," Kretzer said.

Bryant also was excited, spending Tuesday morning cutting up tomatoes, oranges and squash so customers could "see the freshness of it." Everything was either brought in from local farms or grown by the Bryants themselves, including a massive zucchini at the end of the table display.

"You could make 20 good meals from that," said Bryant's husband, John Bryant.

For Bryant, whose parents farmed and "raised us up on it," there's no substitute for fresh produce, either grown yourself or at a local farm. At a store, she said, you just don't know what you're going to get, where it came from, or, most importantly, what it's going to taste like.

"It tastes better," she said. "The taste, the smell. If you can't smell it, you ain't going to be able to taste it. It's just water."

That logic doesn't just apply to produce. Bryant and her husband also offer a selection of homemade sweets, including her own invention — Key Lime Pistachio cake.

"It's something to experience," she said. "I call it jazzy Key Lime." The farmers market will run 9:30-11:30 a.m. Monday through Thursday in the Health Department parking lot. On Thursday, Bryant promises she'll have fresh blueberries and Georgia peaches.

"But you better come early," she said. "Because when I cut those peaches and you can smell them, they'll be coming from all around to get them."

Puerto Rico still tallying hurricane deaths

New data indicates hundreds or even thousands died as indirect result of Maria

By Danica Coto
The Associated Press

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Eight days after Hurricane Maria devastated Puerto Rico, Efrain Perez felt a pain in his chest.

Doctors near his small town sent him to Puerto Rico's main hospital for emergency surgery for an aortic aneurysm. But when the ambulance pulled into the parking lot in the capital, San Juan, after a more than two-hour drive, a doctor ran out to stop it.

"He said, 'Don't bring him in here, I can't care for him. I don't have power. I don't have water. I don't have an anesthesiologist,'" Perez's daughter, Nerybelle, recalled.

The 95-year-old Perez died as the ambulance

Nerybelle Perez poses with a portrait of her father, Efrain Perez, who died inside an ambulance after being turned away from the largest public hospital when it had no electricity or water, days after Hurricane Maria passed, in Guaynabo, Puerto Rico. [CARLOS GIUSTI/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS] drove him back to southwestern Puerto Rico but he is not included in the island's official hurricane death toll of 64 people, a figure at the center of a growing legal and political fight over the response to the Category 4 storm that hit Puerto Rico on Sept. 20, 2017.

Facing at least three lawsuits demanding more data on the death toll,

Puerto Rico's government released new information on Tuesday that added detail to the growing consensus that hundreds or even thousands of people died as an indirect result of the storm.

According to the new data, there were 1,427 more deaths from September to December 2017 than the average for the same time period over the previous four years.

Additionally, September and October had the highest number of deaths of any months since at least 2013. But the statistics don't indicate whether the storm and its aftermath contributed to the additional deaths.

The Puerto Rican government says it believes more than 64 people died as a result of the storm but it will not raise its official toll until George Washington University completes a study of the data being carried out on behalf of the U.S. territory.

The issue is clouded by the fact that the federal government and U.S. states and territories have no uniform definition of what constitutes a storm-related death. The National Hurricane Center counts only deaths directly caused by a storm, like a person killed by a falling tree. It does not count indirect deaths, like someone whose medical equipment fails in a blackout.

Court's voter roll decision may have limited impact

By Christina A. Cassidy
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — A U.S. Supreme Court ruling has cleared the way for states to take a tougher approach to maintaining their voter rolls, but will they?

Ohio plans to resume its process for removing inactive voters, which was affirmed in Monday's 5-4 ruling, after the November elections. It takes a particularly aggressive approach that appears to be an outlier among states.

Few appear eager to follow.

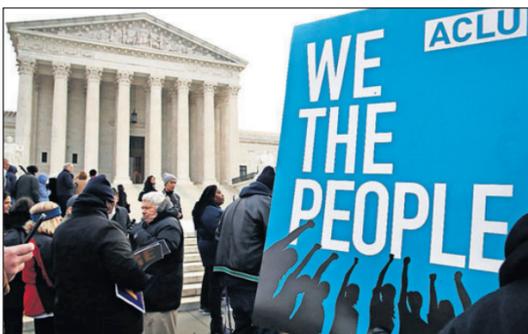

"Our law has been on the books. It hasn't changed, and it isn't changing," said Oklahoma Election Board spokesman Bryan Dean.

At issue is when a state begins the process to notify and ultimately remove people from the rolls after a period of non-voting. In most states with similar laws, like Oklahoma, that process begins after voters miss two or more federal elections.

In Ohio, it starts if voters sit out a two-year period that includes just one federal election. They are removed from the rolls if they fail to vote over the following four years or do not return an address-confirmation card.

Opponents of the laws

say their intent is to purge people from the rolls, particularly minorities and the poor who tend to vote Democratic. Supporters say voters are given plenty of chances to keep their active status and that the rules adhere to federal law requiring states to maintain accurate voter rolls. Democrats and voting rights groups have expressed concern that other states will be emboldened by the ruling and adopt more aggressive tactics to kick voters off the rolls. In addition to Oklahoma, Georgia, Montana, Oregon, Pennsylvania and West Virginia have laws similar to Ohio's.

But even Republican-led states where officials are concerned about voter fraud may be wary when it comes to following the Ohio model.

One hurdle is likely to come from local governments, where election administrators would have to deal with disgruntled voters and manage an increase in the number of people placed on inactive voter lists, said Myrna Perez, who has studied voter list practices in her role as deputy director of the Brennan Center's Democracy Program.

"Using one election as an indicator is going to lead to a whole lot of false positives," she said. "There are plenty of states that clean their voter rolls successfully without being as aggressive as Ohio."

West Virginia is more lenient in targeting inactive voters than Ohio. Among other things, it requires counties in the year following a presidential election to mail an address confirmation to people who have not voted in any election during the previous four years.

Julie Archer of the watchdog West Virginia Citizen Action Group said the process appears to be working as it should.

"There is not a need to do something more aggressive," she said.

The controversy over Ohio's approach arose from apparently conflicting mandates in the National Voter Registration Act, which became law in 1993. It requires states to maintain accurate voter registration lists but also says they should protect against inadvertently removing properly registered voters.

Charitable giving in U.S. tops $400 billion for first time

DAVID CRARY
AP National Writer

NEW YORK — Fueled by a surging stock market and huge gifts from billionaires, charitable giving in the United States in 2017 topped the $400 billion mark for the first time, according to the latest comprehensive report on Americans' giving patterns.

The Giving USA report, released Tuesday, said giving from individuals, estates, foundations and corporations reached an estimated $410 billion in 2017 — more than the gross domestic product of countries such as Israel and Ireland. The total was up 5.2 percent in current dollars (3 percent adjusted for inflation) from the estimate of $389.64 billion for 2016.

"Americans' record-breaking charitable giving in 2017 demonstrates that even in divisive times our commitment to philanthropy is solid," said Aggie Sweeney, chair of Giving USA Foundation, which publishes the annual report. It is researched and written by the Indiana University Lilly Family School of Philanthropy.

Giving increased to eight of the nine charitable sectors identified by Giving USA. The only decline was for areas related to international affairs.

The biggest increase was in giving to foundations — up 15.5 percent. That surge was driven by large gifts from major philanthropists to their own foundations — including $1 billion from Dell Technologies CEO Michael Dell and his wife, Susan, and $2 billion from Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg and his wife, Priscilla Chan.

Other sectors with increases of more than 6 percent included education, health, arts and culture, environment and animal welfare, and public-society benefit organizations — groups which work on such issues as voter education, civil rights, civil liberties and consumer rights.

record-setting total, Americans' level of generosity is no higher than it was decades ago. For 2017, giving by individuals represented 2 percent of total disposable income — down from 2.4 percent in 2000 and the same as the rate in 1978. Similarly, total charitable donations have hovered around 2 percent of the gross domestic product for many years; for 2017, that figure was 2.1 percent.

Una Osili, a dean and economics professor at the Lilly Family School of Philanthropy, says the school's research shows that the percentage of U.S. households making charitable donations has declined steadily in recent years, from about 67 percent in 2000 to 56.6 percent in 2015 — the latest year for which data is available.

She said giving rates for lower- and middle-class families had dropped significantly since the 2008 recession, while the giving rate for the wealthiest 20 percent of households was relatively steady.

McDonald's Archways to Opportunity offers tuition aid

By Collin Breaux
747-5081 | @PCNHCollinB
CollinB@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY BEACH — Regional McDonald's franchises are not only hiring but offering educational incentives to sweeten the deal.

Costa Enterprises, the regional franchise owner, hopes to hire 200 people in the Panhandle this summer, part of the fast-food chain's statewide drive to add 18,000 jobs. Costa, which owns 20 restaurants from Navarre to Panama City Beach, is offering a starting wage between $11 and $12.50 for crew members and $15 for some managers, according to a news release.

"We look to promote from the inside," Roslynn Snyder, Costa Enterprises' director of marketing and community relations, said in a phone interview.

Jobs are being added across the region and state because of the sheer amount of business McDonald's is doing, Snyder said.

In addition to hiring people, McDonald's is also offering tuition assistance and free education advisory services to employees and their family members through the Archways to Opportunity program.

"Tuition assistance has increased to $2,500 per year, up from $700, for eligible crew members and $3,000 per year, up from $1,050, for eligible managers," a news release stated. "Additionally, the minimum hour requirement to work each week dropped from 20 hours to 15 hours to enable restaurant employees more time to focus on studies."

JoAnn Wickham, human resources manager for Costa Enterprises, said staff is eligible after only 90 days of employment. As for the advisory services, Wickham said the company takes into account employees' goals and what they want to do.

"It's about the quality of life and increasing their potential," Snyder said.

Nationally, McDonald's plans to allocate $150 million over a five-year period to Archways to Opportunity.

SKY'S THE LIMIT

Telecom giants expected to rush to expand after AT&T purchase of Time Warner given go-ahead

By Mae Anderson
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Now that a federal judge has cleared AT&T's $85 billion takeover of Time Warner, other companies are likely to rush to consolidate.

Tuesday's ruling signaled that federal regulators will have a hard time stopping companies from getting bigger by gobbling up rivals and the content they own. Even if a company doesn't need to get bigger right away, it might need to do so to prevent a competitor from doing so.

For starters, expect Comcast to make a bid for Fox's entertainment business as early as Wednesday.

These mega deals — some in the works, some still to come — will transform the media landscape and change how people consume entertainment.

Here's a look at some of the pending and possible combinations:

Fox with Disney or Comcast

Disney has made a $52.4 billion all-stock offer for

Clouds are reflected in the glass facade of the Time Warner building Oct. 24, 2016, in New York. The judge presiding over the government's legal effort to block AT&T's purchase of Time Warner delivered his verdict on Tuesday, clearing AT&T to move forward with the deal. [MARK LENNIHAN/ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE PHOTO]

the bulk of Twenty-First Century Fox, including the studios behind the "Avatar" movies, "The Simpsons" and "Modern Family," along with National Geographic. Marvel would get back the characters previously licensed to Fox, reuniting X-Men with the Avengers.

But Comcast has said it is preparing an all-cash offer that is superior to Disney's. It will likely make an offer soon, now that the judge has ruled on AT&T.

Fox previously rejected a bid from an unnamed suitor, widely believed to be Comcast, because of potential regulatory roadblocks. AT&T's favorable ruling would seem to clear those objections. U.S. District Judge Richard Leon rejected the government's argument that AT&T's takeover of Time Warner would hurt competition in pay TV and cost consumers hundreds of millions of dollars more to stream TV and movies.

If Comcast succeeds in outbidding Disney, a major cable distributor would control even more channels on its lineup and those of its rivals. That could lead to higher cable bills or make it more difficult for online alternatives to emerge, though there is not yet evidence of either happening following other mergers. For Disney, a successful Comcast bid could make Disney's planned streaming service less attractive.

ARBOR OUTLOOK

Sequoias, berries and the high cost of housing

Margaret McDowell

"California has worn me quite thin... I just can't wait to see you again."
— "Come Monday" as performed by Jimmy Buffett

When I was 17, I took a trip to California that included a visit to San Diego; stops at Disneyland, Knott's Berry Farm and the Hearst Castle; and a drive up that state's spectacular coastal highway. The turns were both frightening and exhilarating, especially around Big Sur. Monterey, Pacific Grove and Carmel were gorgeous; the air was clean and fresh, the quality of light remarkable. The sequoia trees near Mount Whitney were awesome, and John Muir's redwoods were equally majestic.

The climate was wonderful. When we landed, it was 55 degrees with no humidity. In August! Most of us, I think, especially those of us who spend a lot of time in the South, dream about being able to enjoy a summer afternoon without stifling heat and bugs. You can do that in California. There was a sense then that California was a special place, a desired location to visit or live.

Times change, though. A dozen mudslides and twice as many wildfires later, the Golden State has lost some luster. Especially if you want to own a home there. Consider this: The median price for a home in San Francisco recently rose to $1.6 million, or double the cost from only five years ago. Are wages keeping up, so that most folks can afford that increase? No way.

So it's no surprise that Californians are bailing. In addition to being one of the most highly taxed states, most folks simply can't afford to buy a home. Home prices are high throughout the state. So where are Californians moving? Everywhere, apparently. But especially to places like Las Vegas. It's close by, and home prices are still rebounding from the Great Recession. The median list price for a home in Vegas in April of 2018 was about $280,000. Eight percent of those Californians who left the state in the first quarter of 2017 landed in Las Vegas.

From 2006 to 2016, California experienced a net decrease of a million residents. Contrast that with a state like, say, Florida, which over the same ten-year time span grew from a population of 18.17 million to 20.66 million, a net increase of almost 2.5 million residents.

Many people still desire to own a house, and paying a million dollars for a two-bedroom starter home is unappealing to most, even if you've landed a high-paying tech job.

The price of progress heavier for some Progress comes with a price and most people are OK with that — unless they are the ones having to pay it.

In a story headlined “Businesses brace for U.S. 231 Flyover” on page B1 of Tuesday’s News Herald, John Henderson reported that a flyover project for U.S. 231 at Harrison Avenue is funded for acquisition of right-of-way for the project. Numerous businesses will be affected, some more strongly than others, some in a positive way (more traffic poured near them) and some in a negative way (traffic diverted).

Center stage from both a geographical and a historical perspective is Tally-Ho, where the sign proudly proclaims “SINCE 1949.” Owner Johnny Branch said he’ll have to move and while he won’t miss a day of business, the building so many love will disappear from Harrison Avenue where it has sat for some 69 years.

Branch doesn’t think the flyover is necessary and fears it will discourage people from turning off U.S. 98 and driving downtown, a concern that deserves addressing. The project is slated to have new bridges that will separate traffic through multiple intersections with flyovers bypassing Harrison and Jenks avenues.

“The flyover at this location will improve safety, commerce, reduce travel delays, and allow better access to downtown Panama City, U.S. 231 and Jenks Ave.,” said Department of Transportation spokesperson Ian Satter.

Branch and other nearby business owners aren’t necessarily happy but seem pragmatic as the state and city address Panama City’s own version of Spaghetti Junction. It will change the face of Panama City’s entrance, and mean the loss of the iconic Tally-Ho sign, used by generations as both a landmark for directions and a destination. But like the great sputnik that used to famously sit at 23rd Street and Jenks Avenue, its memory will someday fade as well, we suppose.

It’s a conundrum for elected officials, who one hand are criticized for messing with the layout while at the same time take criticism for not moving faster on other major projects.

We recall the debate over the new Hathaway Bridge, with many not believing it was necessary. Those who remember the old span bridge and its metal-grid surface at the top and the peculiar sounds your tires made while crossing it likely have trouble imagining what a trip to the Beach would be like now without the new bridge. And its eastern flyover, which will make it even smoother, remains under construction.

For us, Los Antojitos, a popular Mexican restaurant owned by Matt and Mynta Haribson comes to mind when we look at Tally-Ho’s dilemma.

For decades the popular (particularly among locals who knew the food inside the beaten-down appearing building was superb) restaurant sat east of the bridge on the south side of U.S. 98. It had to be demolished because of the new bridge’s flyover.

The Harbinsons rebuilt, bigger and better in St. Andrews on Beck Avenue, and have seen a surge in popularity ever since as higher visibility draws tourists, locals keep coming, and they have a new, modern, uniquely designed building.

Change is not easy and some people pay a higher price for progress than others, but let’s hope our beloved Tally-Ho arises in its new location stronger, better and with, if we’re lucky, even bigger sour cream logs.

Way to Talks between U.S. and North Korea

Giuliani and Trump Blunder Toward the North Korea Summit

Stephen Chapman

Rudy Giuliani, who knows as much about North Korea as he does about growing kumquats, has granted an inside glimpse of U.S. relations with the regime. With a historic summit meeting between Donald Trump and Kim Jong Un Tuesday in Singapore, Giuliani wants the American people to know exactly how it came about.

Last month, Trump responded to unwelcome statements from North Korea by abruptly canceling the summit. This decision came because the North Koreans “said they were going to go to nuclear war against us and they were going to defeat us in a nuclear war,” Giuliani said at a conference in Israel. “Well, Kim Jong Un got back on his hands and knees and begged for it, which is exactly the position you want to put him in.”

It’s safe to assume that Giuliani, being Trump’s personal lawyer and not his secretary of state, is pristinely devoid of any firsthand knowledge of this matter.

It was actually the Trump administration that was talking about destroying the North Korean regime.

National security adviser John Bolton recommended “the Libya model” for denuclearization. In 2011, as the North Koreans vividly remember, NATO bombed Moammar Gadhafi’s forces and he was soon toppled and killed.

The Pyongyang government, which had candidly expressed its “repugnance” for Bolton, called the vice president “a political dummy” whose comments were “ignorant and stupid.”

Trump was not about to tolerate this insult to his most faithful lap dog. “Trump and his aides were infuriated by the statement and wanted to respond forcefully,” CNN reported. “The specific and personal targeting of Pence is what irked U.S. officials, three people familiar with the matter said.”

Giuliani says the summit was saved only when Kim came crawling back. This claim is not terribly credible, given the regime’s long record of threats, defiance and immovability on matters it cares about. And when Trump met at the White House with a high-level North Korean envoy, the president did not give the impression of a tough negotiator.

Even Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell warned Trump, “You have to not want the deal too much.” Trump is the guy who vowed that Mexico would pay for a border wall and then, realizing it would never happen, pleaded with the Mexican president to go along with the ruse.

But let’s suppose Kim did kowtow to Trump in an attempt to resurrect the summit. Let’s suppose Trump’s fierce determination left the North Koreans no choice but to capitulate. In that case, the last thing he and his minions should do is do an end-zone dance before a satisfactory deal has even been reached. This is not a football game.

Such trash-talking not only encourages Kim to up his demands at the bargaining table to prove he’s no wimp but also discourages any regime from making concessions to the U.S. — or even negotiating with this administration, which feels free to disclose or even invent facts about behind-the-scenes bartering.

Anytime you interact with Trump in private, you have to worry that he will publicly misrepresent what happened as part of his ceaseless quest for self-glorification.

In a normal administration, functioning with a modicum of discipline and direction, the president’s personal attorney would not be braying on national TV about critical matters of foreign policy, and the president would not be letting him.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A concern for Canadians

First and foremost, thank you to the Visitors Bureau, Chamber of Commerce, and Citizens, for welcoming Canadians to your beautiful city, and country. We enjoy your natural resources, your spectacular beaches, restaurants, shopping and mostly your warm hospitality.

My husband and I worked very hard our working lives. When we reached a retirement age to enjoy the fruits of our labor, we chose to spend winter months in Panama City Beach enjoying the lovely Northern Florida weather.

Thus far, we have enjoyed 11 years. We are not wealthy Canadians, just hard working people who had a goal, as most do, and finally were able to reap the benefits of our hard work.

We have been 3 to 4 month residents of Panama City Beach for several years. We have co-existed with our fellow American retirees (many have become close friends) and Canadian retirees, who we have met and also become friends. We have not distinguished US friends from Canadian ... our likes and values are basically the same, and our countries we thought, had an almost invisible border dividing us.

After President Trump has spoken at the G7... it makes us feel that we are not going to be welcome in your country this winter.

This is a serious concern for us when we make our decision to return for our 12th winter in Florida.

We do spend money living for several months, i.e. food, accommodation, entertainment, dining, and of course all the exciting shopping the US has to offer.

If we are feeling this way, how many other Canadian retirees are feeling not comfortable about spending their winters in the USA?

Are Canadians going to be made welcome in Florida this winter? Also how will we be treated crossing the border?

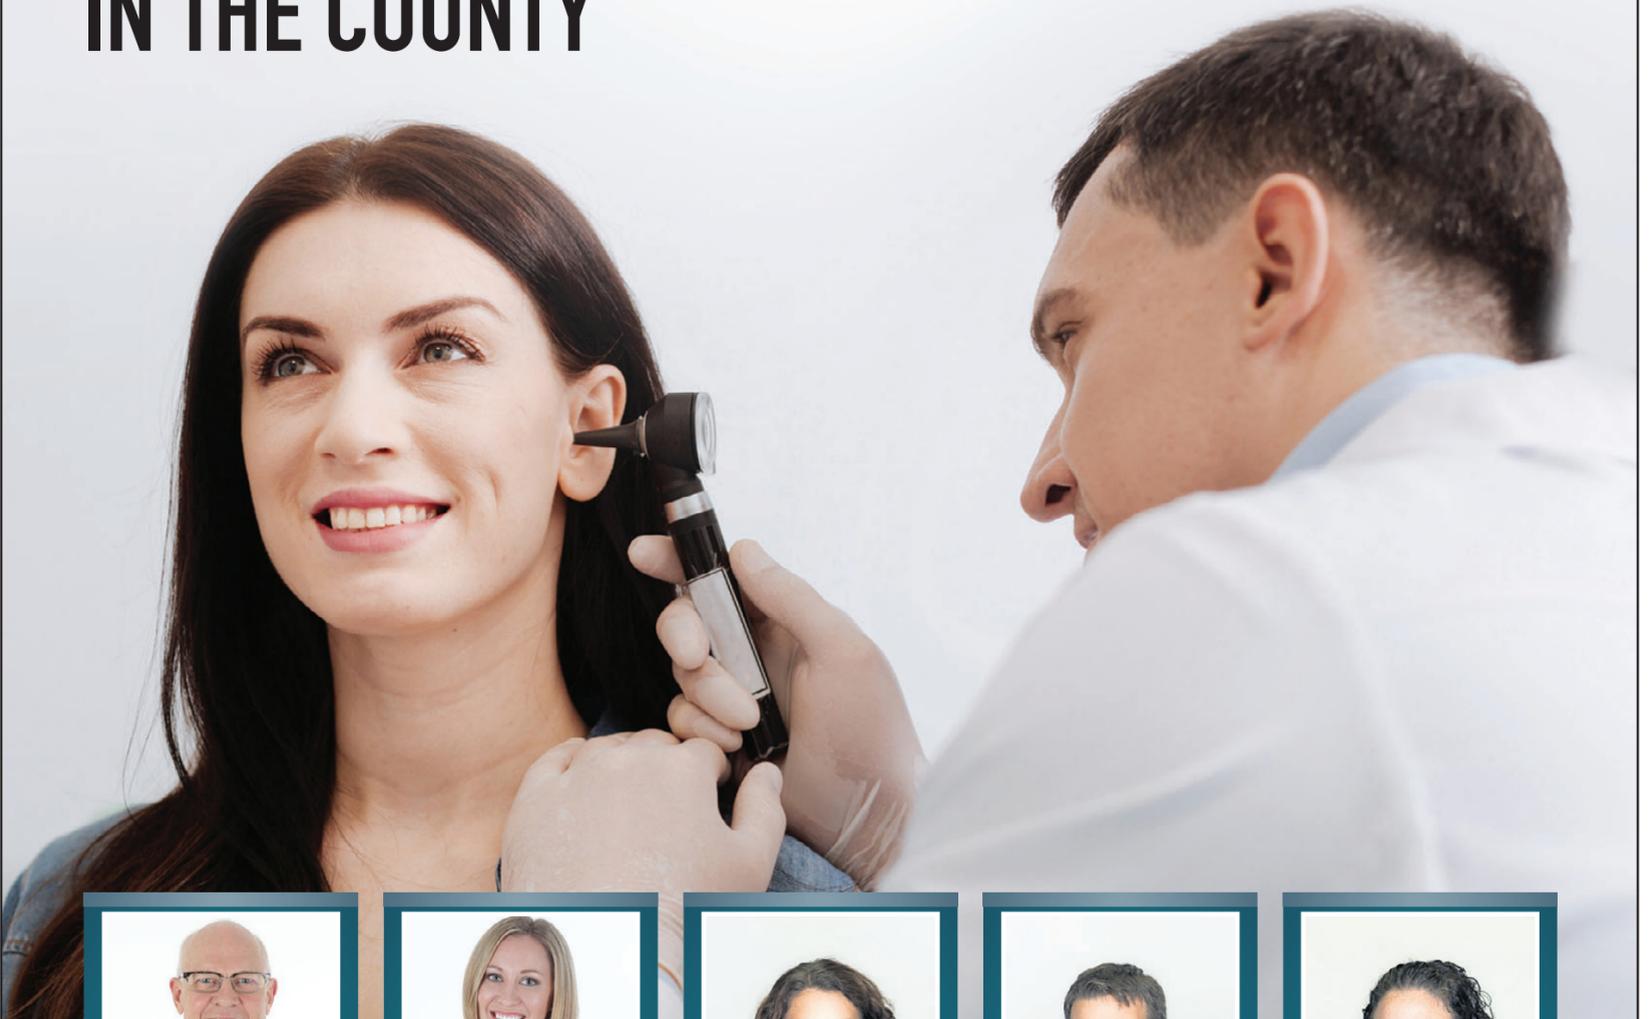

Wendy and Steve Morgan,

'I didn't think he was alive'

Neighbor, twin brother helped revive teen after likely lightning strike

By Zack McDonald
747-5071 | @PCNHZack
zmcDonald@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY — A Bay County teenager remains in critical condition but is showing signs of recovery from injuries he sustained from apparently being struck by lightning, according to hospital officials.

Joseph Thompson, 16, remained hospitalized Tuesday in critical condition. He had been rushed to the hospital about 8:30 a.m. Tuesday after a thunderclap shook houses on Inverness Road in Lynn Haven while he and his twin brother, James Thompson, raced to get home against a storm front. Joseph Thompson sustained critical injuries possibly caused by a lightning strike, but hospital staff reported Tuesday afternoon that he was showing progress.

The Thompsons could not be reached for comment, though several friends and family members were sending messages of support to his social media accounts.

Michael Neita, who lives a few doors down, said he had been expecting the twins to show up and cut his grass the coming weekend. When he heard the sound of a lawnmower meandering around in his yard, Neita assumed they'd come early. Only a few moments later, Neita heard rain begin to fall outside followed by an earth-shaking thunderclap. "It literally shook the house," Neita said. "I looked outside and saw him and his brother. He looked bad. I didn't think he was alive."

James Thompson was standing over his twin as Neita called 911 and rushed outside to help with CPR. Neita said after a few seconds of chest compression, Joseph Thompson regained his breath, albeit irregular.

According to Lynn Haven Police Department reports, fire crews and EMS arrived on the scene and continued CPR as officers interviewed witnesses. James Thompson told officers the teens had been cutting grass and their father had told them to come home as the storm approached. But they stayed to finish the front yard before returning -- when the storm hit, LHPD reported.

"James advised Joseph was pulling a metal wagon containing the lawn mower and other equipment when he jogged ahead of his brother," officers wrote. "James was separated from Joseph when he heard an unusually loud crack and turned around to check on Joseph."

James Thompson reportedly told officers his brother was on the ground next to the wagon when he turned around, his eyes rolled back in his head.

When Neita arrived, he and James Thompson dragged Joseph Thompson to a covered front porch nearby and began performing CPR. Joseph Thompson was "turning purple" before they began doing chest compressions but eventually began breathing again, officers reported.

LHPD noted that Joseph Thompson had signs of discoloration on one arm and an opposite leg, which "could have possibly been caused by lightning as entry and exit locations."

Neita said he didn't know the brothers very closely. They are known in the neighborhood, though, as "the Trump brothers" for basically having a monopoly on lawn care. Neita said he was glad to hear the teenager was starting to show signs of recovery.

"When I woke up that morning, I definitely didn't expect something like that to happen," he added. "I'm glad he survived, and I'm glad he is getting better."

Connectivity, interaction part of the plan for neighborhood

PANAMA CITY — Another Panama City neighborhood has received approval for golf carts.

At the request of residents, the Panama City Commission voted unanimously Tuesday to make Sweet Bay the city's third golf cart-friendly neighborhood, joining the Cove and Millville.

"It's about what people enjoy," said Commissioner Billy Rader, who represents the relatively new community. "They enjoy walking. They enjoy riding bikes, and they enjoy golf carts. It just makes sense to do this."

Jones named new Callaway commissioner

CALLAWAY — Mike Jones is the new Ward 4 commissioner in Callaway.

The other four commissioners voted 3-1 to approve Jones — a different Mike Jones than the school district's security chief — during Tuesday's meeting. Jones replaces former commissioner Joe Townsend, who resigned in May, and after being sworn in took his seat at the commission podium and voted on agenda items.

Jones was one of four applicants for the seat. David Agosta, Frank Mancinelli and Cobb Wynn also applied, while

Jones

Adrian Brown-ing withdrew an initial application.

"I've been a resident of Callaway since 1987, after being assigned to Tyndall AFB," Jones wrote in his application. "I feel like I know our city, the city's history, most of the concerns facing our city, the city's finances and budget and our city's operations. And, I understand the city manager type of government."

Jones also said he intends to work with other commissioners to make the best decisions possible for the citizens and city's future and realizes not every decision will be a consensus. Jones will not run to keep his seat after his term expires in April 2020. Agosta plans to run for the seat in 2020.

Callaway Mayor Pam Henderson said the four applicants were "outstanding candidates."

Gas station

During Tuesday's meeting, Code Enforcement Officer Bill Frye also mentioned a gas station coming to the intersection of Tyndall Parkway and Highway 22. The commission approved ordinances annexing and rezoning the area to allow a gas station there.

Commissioner Ron Fairbanks said the city envisions "big improvements" for Tyndall Parkway, while Agosta said the gas station means more business for Callaway.

Also Tuesday:

- The commission unanimously approved a change to how they're paid. Commissioners will now be paid at the end of the month for work done instead of at the beginning of the month. Henderson suggested the change after former commissioners were paid for a full month despite not working one after being voted out or resigning.

- Shirley Shoemaker was given an award for Yard of the Month.

Cultural center demolition delayed after city forgets permit

By Katie Landeck

klandeck@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY — A planned teardown of the former African American Cultural Center was abruptly halted Monday by the Department of Environmental Protection when Panama City staff forgot to pull a necessary permit.

“A Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) permit was not initially requested due to an oversight,” Panama City public information officer Caitlin Lawrence confirmed.

The city failed to file a “Notice of Demolition or Asbestos Renovation,” which is required because the property being torn down is a commercial property. Lawrence attributed the oversight to two departments — leisure services and the Downtown North Community Redevelopment Agency — working on the project.

“It slipped through the cracks,” she said.

While the permit name mentions asbestos, a survey conducted by Southern Earth Sciences Inc. in April actually determined no asbestos-containing materials were in the building, according to Lawrence.

After being informed of the issue, the city requested the permit Monday, but there is an estimated 10-day wait period, pushing the demolition back to the week of June 25.

Lawrence said she the delay will not cause any additional costs. The work, being done by ECS Inc., which stands for Erosion Control Specialists, will still cost $14,750 despite the setback.

Carl Jr. Roberts, 59, of Panama City, Florida, passed away Friday, June 8, 2018.

Left to cherish his memory are his parents, Carl and Mary Roberts; his son, C.W. Roberts (Ashley Sewell); grandson, Carter Roberts; brother, Wayne Roberts; aunts, Ann Russ, Eva Sprinks and Shirley Duke; uncles, Earl Roberts and Buddy Sprinks; numerous nieces, nephews and cousins; and special friends, Greg McCleskey, Timmy Matthews and Jayne Matthews.

He was preceded in death by his brother, Mike Roberts.

Carl was a big man; he was big in spirit and heart. If you were lucky to be his friend, you knew he would always be there for you. He had a large circle of friends which he considered family. We will never see anyone like Carl again, and so many people are hurting. He would not want us to be sad for too long. He knew we loved him. We can only hope he is with Steve Mills now. He missed his friend every day. They were best friends and brothers. Now they are together again. Hope they behave themselves!

For those he left behind: “Feel no guilt in laughter, he’d know how much you care. Feel no sorrow in a smile that he is not here to share. You cannot grieve forever, he would not want you to, he’d hope that you could carry on the way you always do. So, talk about the good times and the way you showed you cared, the days you spent together, and all the happiness you shared. Let the memories surround you, a word someone may say will suddenly recapture a time, an hour, a day, that brings him back as clearly as though he were still here, and fills you with the feeling that he is always near. For if you keep those moments, you will never be apart. And he will live forever locked safely within your heart.” – Author Unknown

Family and friends of Carl’s would like to thank Greg McCleskey for his friendship and devotion. He made it possible for Carl to live at home and took great care of him. We all love you, Greg, and appreciate everything you did for Jr.

Thank you, Covenant Hospice, for all you did for Carl. We appreciate you all very much.

A special thank you to Bruce Hebert. You took time to visit with Carl and play music for him. He loved music of all kinds and he appreciated you playing for him. Bless you!

There will be a celebration of Carl’s life on Thursday, June 14, 2018, at 11 a.m. at Heritage Funeral Home, 247 N Tyndall Parkway, Panama City, FL 32404, with Pastor Eddie Pitts officiating. The family will receive friends beginning at 10 a.m., prior to the service.

JOHN VALCOURT, III

John Valcourt III, “Lucky” to family and “Val” to most everyone else, was born March 6, 1941, and died June 10, 2018.

He is preceded in death by his father, John Valcourt, Jr.; mother, Myra E. Valcourt; brother, Jay Valcourt; sisters, Valerie Hargreaves and husband, Bill, and Nanette Mercer and husband, Fred; and brother-in-law, Tom Stark.

He is survived by his loving wife, Martha “Marti” Valcourt; sons, Jay Valcourt and Jarrod Valcourt and Misty Valcourt; grandson Devon and granddaughter, Sydney; two stepsons, Mike Kliewer and Jason Kliewer; granddaughters Kylie, Jordan and Claire; as well as two sisters, Renee Stark and Vicki Helms; and several nieces and nephews and many cousins throughout the South.

Val was born in Bergenfield, N.J., and went to school there until his high school years, when he went to and graduated from New York Military Academy. He then went on to college at the University of Connecticut before joining the Army in the early 1960s. He served two tours in Vietnam, once as a paratrooper and next as a pilot of cargo and troops planes. After that, he served most of his career as a helicopter pilot. After 20+ years in the Army, he retired as a Major and was a helicopter instructor at Ft. Rucker, Ala., for more than 20 years.

Val loved serving in the Army and traveling to many countries. After retiring, he was a Mason, and a member of both the Elks and the Shriners. He volunteered at the local Panama City USO, also.

Most of all, he loved spending time with his wife, Marti, traveling and visiting their family and friends. They spent many Thanksgiving holidays in Irondale, Ala. — just east of Birmingham — meeting up with all the family that could make it there each year. He loved his family and to have fun, he LOVED Alabama football “ROLL TIDE,” but he really loved fishing from his boat and off the dock in his back yard.

Val brought joy and laughter to so many people. The stories he could tell! He never met a stranger. He loved his country and gave it his all. He lived life to the fullest and was always happy and maybe just a little crazy. Val will be missed by all who knew and loved him. He made the world a better place. Rest in peace, Val.

In lieu of flowers, please make donations to the local USO in Panama City or to your favorite military organization. Val’s memorial service, or rather, celebration of life, will be held at the Forest Park United Church at 1 p.m. Saturday, June 16, 2018, with Dr. John Friedman officiating. A community of new & custom homesites now open in Panama City, Florida.

It's beautiful outside.

Feels like the perfect day for a bayfront run after walking the kids to school—and treating them to poolside popsicles when they get out.

SweetBay is a new master-planned community in Panama City, Florida with miles of coastline to get in touch with nature and neighbors. Our bayfront village will foster a healthy lifestyle we like to call, "relaxed living with a dash of Southern charm." It's a friendly neighborhood with everything you need just a short walk away.

Academy Park, our first neighborhood, features University Academy (UA)—a free public K-6 charter school, with expansion plans to 8th grade. UA placed 1st in the district based on 2014 state standard scores. And our location is an easy drive to nearby universities, hospitals, military bases, and many other work centers.

PCPD: Stabbing leaves 'small laceration' in woman's chest

By Zack McDonald
747-5071 | @PCNHZack
zmcdonald@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY — A Bay County woman was taken to the hospital Monday night after police responded to a call that she'd been stabbed in the chest while walking near 23rd Street, according to official reports.

A suspect has not been identified in the case. The woman has been treated for "a small laceration" to her chest and released from the hospital, the Panama City Police Department reported.

What led to the assault remained unclear Tuesday. PCPD reported arriving about 11:45 p.m. Monday to Captain D's, 225 W. 23rd St., to find a woman with a stab wound to the chest. Hospital staff from the nearby Gulf Coast Hospital were already assisting her with "a small laceration" when officers arrived, PCPD reported.

What led to the laceration was not clear from police reports. But PCPD, from talking to the woman and her boyfriend at Captain D's, identified two scenes where incidents occurred.

"During this time, it was determined a scene was located in the grassy area between Wells Fargo Bank and the Express Lane on the north side of 23rd Street at Jenks Avenue," officers wrote. "Another scene was located behind Pet Supermarket."

Police reported the woman had been walking to the hospital from the scene of the incident when officers were called to Captain D's. She was taken to the hospital, treated for her injuries and released.

AREA BRIEFS

PANAMA CITY BCSO: Man gains charges after threatening officer's family

A man in custody on narcotics charges is facing an additional felony charged for allegedly threatening the family of a detention officer, according to official reports.

Anthony Taylor, 30,

Taylor

appeared in court Tuesday in connection with the case. The Bay County Sheriff's Office had been holding him in jail since March on methamphetamine and paraphernalia charges. But Taylor now has a new charge of making threats to harm a public servant's family after recent statements he reportedly made toward a jail officer.

According to BCSO reports, Taylor's cell was being searched when he made the alleged threats to kill several members of the officer's family. Taylor gave details about the officers and plans, which included making the officer's house "look like a nuclear bomb went off," BCSO reported.

Taylor "said enough information about his family and where his family's home is that he could carry out the threats made," officers wrote.

Staff Report

CARTS

Ever since the Sweet Bay community first was planned in the footprint of the old airport, the ability to drive golf carts was part of the plan to create the community feel the developers are aiming for.

"It just adds to that open community feel," Sweet Bay spokeswoman Holly Pituch said. "People can get around (with the golf carts) and still interact with each other. It's just a nicer, more personal way to get around."

Right now, the subdivision features a charter school, pool, boathouse, miles of coastline and trails, and parks for amenities, and Pituch said they sold 142 homes. The long-term plan calls for the community become much larger, including adding a town center with some small-scale retail.

The overall idea is to create a community with a taste of the planned feel of 30A, but more affordable and less touristy.

Holly Pituch, Sweet Bay spokeswoman

"We want this to be a place with a lifestyle where you know your neighbors, interact with nature and have a nice location within the city," Pituch said. "It's the connectivity. We really like to say it's a place to be connected to what matters."

Rader said he the golf carts will help the community meet that goal.

"I know it will be nice," Rader said. "There are plans to have a pier, and that's a long walk."

Because the community was built with this goal in mind, Police Chief Scott Ervin said he has no issue with the proposal. Officials noted the lighting and width of the roads make this a comfortable change.

The new policy is effective immediately.

PCB: Parking ordinance is still 'a dead issue'

Proposal resurfaces on planning board agenda for review

By Tyra L. Jackson
850-522-5121 | @TyraJackPCNH
tjackson@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY BEACH — A previously dismissed parking ordinance has shown up on an upcoming Panama City Beach meeting agenda, but city officials said Tuesday the measure will only be discussed for review purposes and is not under consideration.

Last year, Bid-A-Wee residents contested a proposed ordinance that would have prohibited people from parking cars, trailers, RVs and other vehicles on front lawns in neighborhoods.

In March 2017, the planning board had recommended the city council approve the law, which would have allowed people to park vehicles only on the side of homes or in backyards if there were no streets near the homes — not in front yards or grass.

Debbie Ward, PCB public information officer, said the ordinance was placed on Monday's planning board agenda for discussion, in case new council members wanted to revisit it.

"It is a dead issue and will not be heard again by the city council," she said.

The planning board ultimately was canceled Monday for lack of a quorum. Bid-A-Wee resident Richard McMahon said he's happy the proposed law won't be heard again because many residents had already established lifestyles in the community before the ordinance was proposed.

"It was a very broad ordinance," he said. "It prohibited a lot of things that were existing, and people had already built and constructed things in their yards."

Germany looks to repeat as World Cup champs

By Ronald Blum
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — After raising the World Cup eight miles from Copacabana Beach four years ago, Germany hopes to lift the trophy four miles from the Kremlin on July 15 and become the first repeat champion in more than a half-century.

The soccer world gathers at 12 stadiums in 11 cities across the European portion of Russia starting Thursday for a 32-day, 64-match championship. Much has changed since Die Mannschaft humiliated the host Selecao 7-1 in the 2014 semifinals, then left Rio de Janeiro's Maracana Stadium with a 1-0 extra-time win over Argentina on Mario Goetze's 113th-minute goal.

The United States will be missing from soccer's showcase after seven straight appearances. Four-time champion Italy will be watching from home for the first time since 1958, its streak of 14 consecutive appearances

Florida sophomore left fielder Austin Langworthy is developing a knack for coming up with big hits in big spots.

None was bigger than Monday night for Langworthy, a Williston native who grew up dreaming of playing for the Gators.

Langworthy will forever go down in Florida postseason lore with his walk-off home run to lead off the bottom of the 11th inning that lifted UF to a 3-2, series-clinching win over Auburn in the NCAA Gainesville Super Regional. The line drive shot to right field, which caromed off the glove of Auburn right fielder Steven Williams and over the right field fence, was Langworthy's fourth home run of the season and fourth career postseason home run. It sent the defending national champion Gators to their fourth straight College World Series appearance and 12th trip to Omaha in school history.

"Right when I hit it I knew it had a chance," Langworthy said. "I wasn't sure I quite hit it high enough, but once I saw it go over the fence I was just ecstatic for myself and my teammates to get back to

Woods seeks win, the final piece of his return

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. — Tiger Woods returned to the U.S. Open for the first time in three years and hardly anyone noticed.

Then again, it was late Sunday afternoon. Shinnecock Hills was practically empty.

"A bizarre experience," said Jordan Spieth, who played nine holes with him.

Such a quiet moment was rare for Woods in his celebrated return following four back surgeries. A year that began with intrigue soon gave way to hysteria over anticipation of his first victory in nearly five years.

That time has not arrived as Woods heads into the second major of the year.

"Golf is always frustrating," Woods said Tuesday after going nine holes with Dustin Johnson and Bryson DeChambeau, winners of the last two PGA Tour events. "There's always something that isn't quite right, and Omaha."

Florida coach Kevin O'Sullivan said he felt confident with Langworthy heading to the plate in the 11th inning with the game still in the balance.

"I'm not sure I'm expected him to hit a walk-off home run, but I thought he would give us a really good at-bat," O'Sullivan said.

Replays showed the ball would have probably cleared the fence whether or not Williams had his glove on the ball. But Williams was in position to rob Langworthy of an extra-base hit for the third time in the game. Auburn center fielder Jay Estes made a diving catch in center field on a towering Langworthy fly ball to right center in the sixth inning, while left fielder Judd Ward caught a low line drive from Langworthy to end the eighth.

"In this game, everything comes back to you eventually," Langworthy said. "A few bad at-bats and then you will have some good at-bats. That's how this game works."

Auburn players huddled around Williams in right field and consoled him following the game.

"He's a really good ball-player and he's got a bright future ahead of him," said Auburn reliever Davis Daniel, who pitched 5.1 scoreless innings out of the bullpen for the Tigers. "One play doesn't define him."

Langworthy's home run ended more than three hours of tense baseball. A standing-room only crowd of 5,958 at McKethan Stadium watched the Gators (47-19) outlast an Auburn (43-23) team that made spectacular defensive plays throughout the game to keep the score tied in the late innings.

Florida junior closer Michael Byrne (3-1) pitched four scoreless innings to earn the win. Freshman righty Cody Greenhill (6-3) took the loss for Auburn, serving up a home run to Langworthy for the second straight game. Langworthy said he was hunting for a fastball and got one that he turned on.

"He's a fastball heavy guy," Langworthy said.

Byrne allowed one hit and one walk and struck out five over his four-inning stint. He struck out the first four batters he faced and was able to work out of a first-and-second jam in the 10th inning by getting catcher Brett Wright to ground into a force out to third base.

"I thought Byrne was a huge difference in the ballgame," Auburn coach Butch Thompson said. "We just couldn't get anything going against him."

On his 21st birthday, Daniel matched zeroes with Byrne in the late innings before giving way to Greenfield, who worked out of a first-and-second jam in the 10th.

Auburn tied the score at 2 in the seventh due to a pair of Gator miscues. Luke Jarvis led off the inning against UF freshman reliever Tommy Mace with a single and moved to second on an error when Wil Dalton failed to field the single cleanly in right field. Jarvis then moved to third with one out on a wild pitch by Mace. Dalton nearly atoned for his mistake, firing a strong throw home on a fly to right by Joel Anthony. But Jarvis barely beat the throw to tie the score at 2, with his left hand touching the corner of home plate before catcher Jonah Girand applied the tag.

The winner-take-all Super Regional matchup began with Auburn starting fifth-year senior lefty Andrew Mitchell against Florida freshman righty Jack Leftwich. But it came down to both bullpens.

Florida third baseman Jonathan India put Florida ahead quickly, launching an 0-1 fastball from Mitchell over the right-center field fence in the bottom of the first inning to put Florida up 1-0. It was India's team-leading 20th home run of the season.

Auburn answered with a two-out rally off Leftwich to tie the score at 1 in the third. Auburn shortstop Will Holland reached on an infield single, stole second and scored on Williams' RBI single.

Florida took a 2-1 lead in the fourth on a sandlot play, with second baseman Blake Reese scoring the run on a nifty double-steal. Reese had hit a double in the left-center field gap with one out in the fourth and moved to third on an infield single by Nick Horvath. But after freshman first baseman Brady Smith struck out with runners on the corners and one out and catcher Jonah Girand fell behind in the count, O'Sullivan called for the crafty baserunning play. Horvath broke from first and stumbled on purpose, which temporarily distracted Mitchell and the rest of the Tigers as Reese broke for home. Reese beat the throw home from Mitchell with a head-first slide, putting the Gators up 2-1.

"It's just something that we work on and it very seldom happens," Reese said. "But when you get the chance to do something like that, the timing has got to be perfect and credit Nick too on the other end of that, for selling it the way he did. It doesn't work without him."

Florida will face Texas Tech in its first College World Series game Sunday night in Omaha, Neb. Following the game Monday, O'Sullivan hinted that senior catcher JJ Schwarz could be back for the game. Schwarz has been out the last three-plus weeks since suffering a broken hand May 18 at Mississippi State.

O'Sullivan has led Florida to seven of its 12 College World Series appearances.

"I appreciate it more because I know how hard it is to get there," O'Sullivan said. "The parity in college baseball is second to none. You have to have good players, you have to stay healthy, there's a sense of luck involved. It's not easy."

round for the first time since 1986, but El Tri opens against Germany and its likely second-round opponent is Brazil.

There also has been a generational change within FIFA. Many of its leaders have moved from penthouses to prisons following indictments by the U.S. Department of Justice that detailed kickbacks to be as much a part of soccer as free kicks.

Expect controversy on a regular basis.

FIFA's Congress votes June 13 on the host of the 2026 tournament, and a joint bid by the U.S., Mexico and Canada is competing against Morocco — where most of the infrastructure would have to be built — on a ballot that includes a none-of-the-above option.

Following the drug-tested scandal that engulfed the 2014 Sochi Winter

Olympics, FIFA's medical committee chairman said no Russians will be involved in collection of urine and blood samples, which will be flown to Lausanne, Switzerland, for analysis.

VAR will be the acronym of the moment: video assistant referees in soccer speak, instant replay for most viewers at home.

And as soon as the final whistle of the tournament is blown at Moscow's Luzhniki Stadium, attention will shift to the 2022 World Cup in Qatar, moved to Nov. 21 through Dec. 18 because of summer desert heat and compressed to 28 days because it is in the middle of the European club season. Gianni Infantino, who succeeded the disgraced Sepp Blatter as FIFA president in 2016, has discussed increasing the World Cup field from 32 to 48 in 2022, four years ahead of schedule.

Falcons' Jones has Quinn's support while sitting out

The Associated Press

FLOWERY BRANCH, Ga. — Julio Jones remains in coach Dan Quinn's good graces even after missing the opening day of the Atlanta Falcons' mandatory minicamp.

Quinn said Tuesday he thought Jones, who missed voluntary offseason workouts, would participate in the minicamp. The coach said he found out Monday that Jones would skip the minicamp.

Quinn wouldn't share details of his conversation with Jones but said "Sometimes football and business intersect and that's OK and that happens a lot."

Jones has three years remaining on his five-year, $71.3 million deal with $47 million in guaranteed money but could soon have the deal tweaked. Quinn said the team is "right in the middle" of talks with Jones, a five-time Pro Bowl selection.

Quinn has emphasized "brotherhood" and making sure players do everything as a team. Players stood together as a team on the sideline during the national anthem for all games after two players kneeled in protest early in the 2017 season.

Could Jones' absence hurt the Falcons' unity?

"No," Quinn said. "I recognize the question, for sure. Do we want everybody here all the time? Hell yeah, like all the time.... What I'd say is if you ask to a man, the guy is a hell of a teammate and the time he spends here, the way he mentors people, how hard he plays, there is plenty of brotherhood in Julio."

Receiver Mohamed Sanu said he and other players were not impacted by Jones' absence.

"Whether he's present or not, we were just focused on what we have to do today," said Sanu, the team's No. 2 receiver behind Jones.

Jones, 29, remains one of the league's top receivers. He earned his fourth straight Pro Bowl berth last season when he had 88 catches for 1,444 yards. It was his fourth straight season with at least 80 receptions and 1,400 receiving yards.

Jones' salary cap figure of $12.9 million for 2018 ranks seventh among NFL receivers, well behind recent deals signed by Tampa Bay's Mike Evans ($18.252 million in 2018) and Cleveland's Jarvis Landry ($15.5 million).

Falcons general manager Thomas Dimitroff said Monday he has been in talks with Jones and Jones' agent, Jimmy Sexton.

Sexton did not return a message from The Associated Press.

Jones' holdout comes after the Falcons made quarterback Matt Ryan the league's top-paid player this offseason with a five-year extension that could be worth $150 million.

Quinn said he was not disappointed in Jones' decision to miss minicamp because Jones remained in constant communication and explained why his plans changed.

"Sometimes circumstances change and as long as players communicate with me on why circumstances change, then I never am disappointed as long as communication with me is very clear," Quinn said. "... The things that jam me up are when people don't communicate."

WOODS

that's where we as players have to make adjustments. You've seen the tournaments I've played this year. There's always something. Hopefully, this is one of those weeks where I put it all together and even it out. And we'll see what happens."

It has been 10 years since Woods won his last U.S. Open, his 14th and last major. All it takes for him to temper any frustrations is to look back at last year, when he didn't know if he would even play another U.S. Open.

He was at a low point in his career and his personal life. While recovering from fusion surgery — his fourth surgery on his back in three years — he was arrested on a DUI charge and found to have a mixture of two painkillers, the sleeping aid Ambien, the anti-anxiety drug Xanax and the active ingredient for marijuana in his system. He entered a clinic to get help and pleaded guilty to a reckless driving charge that kept him out of jail.

Asked about the video of his arrest and how his life has changed, Woods replied, "It's gotten better."

That seems like longer than a year ago because Woods has been such an active part of the PGA Tour again. In some instances, he looks like the same Woods.

He hit one drive past Johnson on the par-5 fifth hole Tuesday that left him a 2-iron to the front of the green. He had two chances to win in March, missing a long birdie putt on the last hole in Innisbrook and hitting a drive out-of-bounds on the 16th hole at Bay Hill the following week.

But no trophies. No fist pumps.

"There's two ways of looking at that," Woods said. "I've given myself chances to win, which I didn't know if I was ever going to do again. And then again, not happy with the fact that I didn't win because I loved how it felt being there.... And so, yeah, I've had my opportunities. Also, I'm very thankful to have had those opportunities. I didn't know if I was going to have them again."

ROUNDUP/MATCHUPS

Yankees 3, Nationals 0: Didi Gregorius ended a long power outage with a pair of home runs, Washington slugger Bryce Harper left in the eighth inning after he was hit by a pitch for the second time, and the New York Yankees beat the Nationals for their 10th win in 12 games.

Marlins 3, Giants 1: Trevor Richards pitched six effective innings for his first major league win, helping the Miami Marlins beat the San Francisco Giants 3-1 on Tuesday night. Richards (1-3) allowed two hits in his seventh major league start.

Rays 4, Blue Jays 1: Wilson Ramos homered, six Tampa Bay relievers combined for a five-hitter and the Rays beat the Toronto Blue Jays. With right-handers Chris Archer and Jake Faria on the disabled list, Tampa Bay is using relievers to start three times through the rotation.

Phillies 5, Rockies 4: Aaron Nola struck out 10 in another dominant performance, Scott Kingery hit a three-run homer and the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Colorado Rockies. Nola (8-2) allowed one run and four hits, lowering his ERA to 2.27.

Braves 8, Mets 2: Ozzie Albies hit a grand slam to propel Atlanta into sole possession of first in the NL East. Freddie Freeman also homered.

IN BRIEF

Toronto assistant Nick Nurse to coach Raptors

Nick Nurse spent almost three decades paying his coaching dues, toiling with teams in Britain, Italy and Belgium, college basketball and the G League.

The chance he's long coveted has finally arrived.

Nurse has agreed to become the next coach of the Toronto Raptors, a person with direct knowledge of the hire told The Associated Press on Tuesday. Nurse will be replacing his former boss, Dwane Casey — under whom he spent the past five seasons as a Raptors assistant. Casey was fired after the Raptors were swept out of the second round of this year's playoffs by Cleveland.

Nurse and the Raptors were completing contract terms Tuesday, according to the person who spoke to AP on condition of anonymity because the agreement had not been announced. ESPN first reported the hiring.

The move seems to suggest there will be at least some continuity between what the Raptors have been doing and what they'll do on his watch. Toronto went 59-23 this season, the best record in the Eastern Conference and second-best record in the NBA behind only Houston — and Nurse was in charge of the offense, led by All-Star guards DeMar DeRozan and Kyle Lowry.

BUFFALO, N.Y. Sens assistant GM due in court, to miss part of draft

Ottawa Senators assistant general manager Randy Lee will miss at least part of next week's NHL draft because he is due in court to face a harassment allegation, his attorney said Tuesday.

Lee is charged with harassing a hotel shuttle driver in Buffalo during the NHL's pre-draft scouting combine two weeks ago. In a text to The Associated Press, Paul Cambria said his client is expected to attend his next court appearance in Buffalo on June 22, the day the league holds the first round of its two-day draft in Dallas.

ACES ON BRIDGE: BOBBY WOLFF

"How did I respect you when you dared to speak the truth to me? Men don't know women or they would be harder to them."
— Anthony Trollope

On this deal from the 2017 European Open Championships, the bulletin remarked that just because the double-dummy analysis (a computer program called Deep Finesse) tells you something, that doesn't mean it is "true." The program tells you what should happen on best play; but how often do you encounter that?

For example, Jovanka Smederevac declared four spades doubled on this deal, where the analysts had indicated that nine tricks were the limit — but no one told declarer!

Smederevac, playing with Matilda Popililov, received a diamond lead; East won and cashed her heart king, then continued with the heart jack. Smederevac ruffed, led a club to the king, which was ducked, and led a club back. East took her ace but shifted to a low diamond, which turned out to be fatal. Smederevac won her queen, took the spade king, ruffed a diamond to dummy, and cashed the third club to pitch a diamond.

She had reached a four-card ending where dummy had the spade ace, a losing heart and two club winners, while East had three spades and the diamond ace, and South the Q-J-6 of spades and a losing diamond.

When declarer led a club from dummy, East could ruff in with the seven, but declarer could overruff, ruff a diamond to dummy, and be in position for the trump coup.

East had needed to notice that declarer has only nine tricks: five spades and four clubs. If you play a trump at every turn, declarer can take diamond ruffs, but in turn you can kill her club tricks by ruffing in.

ANSWER: You doubled to show a good hand, typically with the unbid suits, and your partner reverted to two spades. This doesn't guarantee a sixth spade, but does suggest a minimum hand with no clear fit for clubs or hearts. You are certainly close to a pass, and I might do that at pairs; but at teams and vulnerable, I'd stretch to raise to three.

DEAR ABBY

Couple's plans hit a snag over detour to a strip club

Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I have been dating for a year and a half. We are planning on moving to California together in a few months.

I flew to Monterey to job hunt, and he is supposed to be flying in soon. However, last night I found out he and his buddy went to a strip club. My boyfriend knows I'm uncomfortable with him going to strip clubs, and he assured me that they would not be going when we spoke on the phone earlier in the evening.

He says I'm controlling and childish for being angry at him. I told him it's either me or the strip clubs — mostly just to see how he would react. His response was that freedom of choice is very important to him. I even went as far as to say if he feels the need to go to strip clubs, then I would start stripping on the side to spite him.

I'm tempted to cancel his ticket to California. I don't want him flying here if we are just going to fight. Is this situation worth the cost of a relationship? How do I deal with someone so stubborn to the point he can't see when he's in the wrong? Abby, he is in the wrong, isn't he? — CHOICE IS CLEAR

DEAR CHOICE: A wise woman chooses her battles carefully. If your boyfriend spent more than an occasional evening hanging out in strip clubs, I can see why it would be a deal breaker. But unless you left something important out of your letter — like the fact that he did more than look — it doesn't appear that he does.

You escalated the situation and you shouldn't have. However, if you feel so strongly about strip clubs, perhaps you should consider finding another man to spend your life with because it really isn't possible to control the actions of another adult.

HOROSCOPES BY HOLIDAY MATHIS

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — You'll be caught in the shuffle of shifting priorities and redistributed responsibility. Indecision at higher levels will influence your destiny. Even so, the main determinations of the day will be yours to make.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Emotions are invitations to greater strength and power. Every time you accept and stick with an emotion through its lifespan (which can last months or minutes), you increase your capacity to manage your feelings.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21) — What's left undone is left out of fear. There's no pleasant way to face it, but if you don't face it eventually, the result will be most unpleasant indeed. Come on. It won't be that bad. Just dive in and get it done.

CANCER (June 22-July 22) — History has lessons it can only teach to the willing. The tendency is to say, "Well that was then; this is now." But the correlation will be rather obvious to the awake people of this class. It always repeats! Who's ready?

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — You may engage in frivolous pursuits, but solving sartorial problems of the day isn't among them. Clothing choice matters. It requires thought and discernment. Dress for style and respect, not attention.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — You speak kindly of yourself and those around you; say thank you and return favors; and make time for those who need a friend. These quality habits will be their own reward, and yet other rewards spring forth, too.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — There are those who can't help but think in terms of finding a scapegoat. To own up to their own faults would cause unbearable shame. They fear being cut off for their mistakes. But mistakes are lessons, not death sentences.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21) — The most ingenious comment in the world repeated over and over in an annoying tone will start to sound like idiocy. Even the brightest insights come across as wrongheaded to those predisposed to think of them as such.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — The new rule of thumb for those seeking to reach their maximum attractiveness quotient is to cultivate at least three hobbies that do not involve a screen. Energy spent in this direction will quickly repay you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Teenagers aren't the only ones prone to thinking that a problem is the worst thing ever in one moment and then in the next moment finding that it's not even worth thinking about. This is a human thing. Bear with it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — It is said that essence and life cannot be seen, but today you feel like you can see it — and hear it and dance to it. Furthermore, there are certain people and places that occur to you like springs, gushing pure vitality.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Thanks to internet search engines it's easier to know what millions of people around the world think about a subject than it is to ask your own mom. But ask your own mom (or maternal influence) anyway.

HEALTHY HABITS

Struggling with picky eaters? The more that kids are exposed to meals prepared with fresh ingredients in their homes, the more likely they are to develop healthy eating habits.

Start by brainstorming new recipes to try. Use a cookbook like "A Chef Walks Into a Cafeteria." The cookbook honors the flavor values of scratch cooking, while highlighting global culinary influences — with recipes actually served in school cafeterias.

Then bring your kids shopping to select new produce to try.

These tips come from Penny De Los Santos of National Geographic.

1. Consider showcasing the ingredients as well as the finished product.
2. Think about how people relate to food, and take photographs of the food vendors and chefs.
3. Give yourself time to get a feel for the subject.
4. Think about how to tell a story with food, including the messy spoon.

Milkit

A good blender and some nuts and spices — you've got a homemade treat

By Ari LeVaux
More Content Now

In preparation for summer, I have purchased a high-speed blender. Green smoothies was the stated goal, and soon enough, the heat of summer will bring multitudes of harvest goodness that my blender will help me sip through a straw.

But now, at the start of the growing season, that machine seems like overkill. The greens of spring are tender. Even curly kale, which can usually double as steel wool, crunches delicately.

But my Vitamix is hardly gathering dust. It's grinding nuts. And water. And spices.

What you need

There's currently heated debate over whether plant-based beverages like soy milk or almond milk can legally be advertised as "milk," which is legally defined by the FDA as material from the glands of lactating mammals. The dairy industry wants the FDA to enforce that definition, hoping it will help its fortunes. But whatever term is ultimately applied, these plant-based beverages do a lot of what milk does, and are growing in popularity for a variety of reasons.

The homemade versions, especially of nut milks, are spectacular. Properly made, they are superior to store-bought on every metric, including flavor, texture, all around milkiness, even cost. And they don't take long to prepare.

The blender doesn't have to be a Vitamix like mine. But it must be a high-speed unit. The Blendtec does a good job. The Ninja does, too, though it's harder to clean. I really like the speed control of the Vitamix, being a dial rather than buttons. It's akin to the difference between driving stick vs. automatic, or cooking on gas vs. electric. But the point is: A regular blender won't cut it. Which is all by way of saying: A good blender is worth the investment.

The other thing you need is a food-grade cloth strainer. I have an official nut milk bag, which was made for this purpose and purchased at the local hippie food store. It's for straining out the skins and fibers and other grainy interruptions to the milky experience.

And of course you need nuts. Raw and unsalted. My four favorites are almonds, hazelnuts, coconut and cashew, which isn't technically a nut.

Each of these nut milks has its strengths. If you can find almonds that haven't been steamed or irradiated, you can get them to sprout before making the almond milk, which is fun.

Fresh, sprouted almond milk has the most aromatic flavor of any nut milk except perhaps coconut. Hazelnut milks are creamy with a slightly bitter flavor. Cashew milk is the silkiest, with the creamiest feel, while coconut milk has actual fat you can skim.

How to make

To make a batch of nut milk, soak a cup of nuts in a quart of water. Almonds can soak for a few days to sprout them (changing the water every 6 hours), while other nuts can soak for about four hours to overnight. Coconut doesn't need to soak — just pry out the meat, then into the blender.

Put the soaked nuts in a high-speed blender with about six ice cubes and 3-6 cups of water, depending on how thick or thin you want it to be. Start on low speed, and raise the speed incrementally until it's going full blast. Let it go on high for about 30 seconds, and turn off. Pour it into your nut milk bag or whatever system you have, and filter out the solids.

That's it. You can lightly season it with sweetener, a pinch of salt, a drop of vanilla. Start light, and explore the possibilities.

My own explorations led me into the fragrant arms of golden milk, an Ayurvedic (ancient Indian) beverage that is having a moment. A milk-based drink with turmeric, ginger, black pepper and other spices, the flavor is a bit reminiscent of chai tea, and each cook will have a different formulation. It can be served hot or cold, mild or spicy, raspy or smooth.

IN THE KITCHEN

Capturing the three flavors of Turtles in a cake

Prudence Hilburn

When I'm talking Turtles, I'm not thinking about the creepy, crawly kind. No, my palate is mentally tasting those wonderful candies of my youth.

These tasty treats originally were made by the Johnson Candy Company, which later took the name of DeMets. DeMets has marketed this candy shop classic for many years.

Although Turtles have been produced since the early 1900s, they have changed hands several times. In 1943, Nestlé owned the trademark, but in 2007 DeMets got it back.

DeMets is well known for its specialty chocolates, including Turtles. We are told that they use as much as 7,000 tons (yes, tons) of chocolate and 13,000 tons of nuts each year. Just this week, news came out that these two food items are going to be more expensive this year. Better get a supply now.

Not wanting to infringe on DeMet's trademark, I decided to call the following cake Chocolate Caramel and Nut Cake. This trio of popular flavors comes forth in this cake, but let's be real. A cake can never truly give us the flavor we want when we think of the great candy that uses the same ingredients.

The cake of course is chocolate, and there is a ribbon of caramel and nuts in middle, making it delicious. When the cake is sliced, I suggest topping it with a dollop of whipped topping or whipped cream, sprinkled with chocolate chips and nuts and drizzled with caramel.

For those who prefer to bake from scratch, you can use the recipe for the cake layer of the popular German Chocolate Cake.

Chocolate Caramel and Nut Cake

- 1 box German chocolate cake mix
- 1 stick of butter (1/2 cup)
- 1 (11 oz.) bag of caramels
- 1 can sweetened condensed milk (like Eagle Brand)
- 1 (6 oz.) pkg chocolate chips
- 1 cup chopped nuts (I prefer pecans)

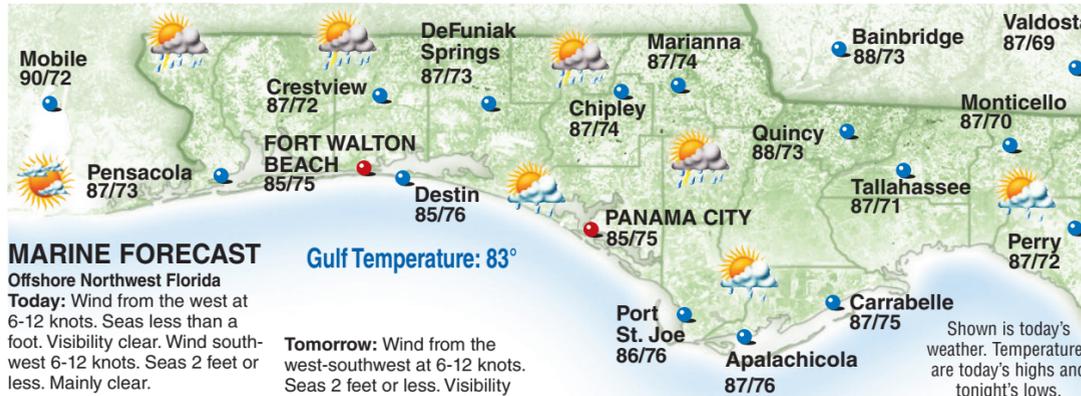

Mix cake as box directs. Pour half of the batter into a 9x13 pan. Bake 15 minutes at 350 degrees. Cool 10 minutes. Melt butter, caramels and milk together. Pour over cake mixture. Sprinkle chocolate chips and nuts over caramel mixture. Pour rest of cake batter on top. Bake 20 minutes longer at 350 degrees.

Sip through summer with homemade iced tea

By Becky Krystal
 The Washington Post

If you're tuned in to what's trendy these days, it may seem your options for what to drink this summer have been whittled down to two: Cold-brew coffee or rosé. But if you want something in between the caffeine jolt of the former and the celebratory nature of the latter, you need look no further than a classic.

Iced tea. Sure, there are plenty of bottled and canned options vying for your cash and attention, but making your own is a lot less expensive — especially if you're brewing for a crowd — and a whole lot more satisfying. It's also remarkably easy.

Here are a few expert tips to get you started.

- Begin by making hot tea. Michelle Brown, co-owner of Washington's Teatism family of cafes and shops, says many of the same guidelines apply to iced tea as hot tea. The general rule is about one teaspoon of loose-leaf tea per 1 cup of water; for large quantities, aim for 1 to 1½ ounces of tea per gallon of water.

Your tea's packaging should offer guidance on water temperature and steep times (generally, black tea is brewed for four to five minutes with 212-degree water, with greens in the one- to three-minute range at lower temperatures, from 160 to 180 degrees). If you're going to be pouring the tea over ice, Brown suggests doubling the steep time for a more robust flavor that can account for the dilution that occurs as the ice melts.

Forget the special tools. "You don't need to buy a bunch of things" to make iced tea, says Ben Byrd, microbiologist-turned-founder of Washington-based iced tea brand Runningbyrd Tea.

- Don't totally discount cold brew. Yes, like coffee, you can certainly go the cold-brew route. Although Brown somewhat cheekily notes that "there may not be a reason to cold-brew other than laziness," she acknowledges that there is a place for it.

Brown recommends steeping cold-brew tea in the refrigerator for 12 hours and then consuming it within a day or two to avoid possibly exposing yourself to bacteria growth.

- Forget the special tools. "You don't need to buy a bunch of things" to make iced tea, Byrd says.

Brown says, "Really, all you need is a pot and tea and some way to get the tea out of the water."

A stainless-steel tea ball is a cheap investment. Other items in your kitchen can pull double duty for iced tea: Think a pasta pot or Dutch oven in combination with a fine-mesh strainer. Disposable tea sacs are another possibility.

- Sweeten with restraint. Byrd, who grew up in iced-tea-swilling Georgia, said Southern sweet tea originated when tea was very expensive. People would oversteep the leaves to extract as much as they could, but of course that would lead to a bitter beverage. So they'd cover it up with much more affordable sugar.

He takes a lighter approach to his tea, some of which he sells unsweetened. "People from Georgia would probably say my tea isn't sweet enough," he says. In his jars, available at Taylor Gourmet, & Pizza, Whole Foods Market and many other area locations, the primary sweetener is organic cane sugar, although agave syrup and honey would work well for home use, too. Add sweeteners while the tea is hot so that they dissolve.

Loud music at restaurants could be leading you to order burgers over salads, study says

By Maura Judkis
 The Washington Post

Noisy restaurants are a source of perennial complaints, but it's not just diners' ears that are affected — it's their waistlines, too. A new study published in the Journal of the Academy of Marketing Sciences has found that if ambient music played in a restaurant is louder, the customers are more susceptible to choose unhealthy foods.

Dipayan Biswas, a marketing professor at the University of South Florida, conducted the study at a cafe in Stockholm, where various genres of music were played on a loop at 55 decibels and 70 decibels at different times, for several days. When the music was louder, researchers found 20 percent more customers ordered something that was not good for them, compared to those who dined during the lower-volume times.

Softer music is calming, and louder music gets us amped up. "Volume is proven to directly impact heart rate and arousal," according to the study. And it impacts our decision-making, as well: In the soothing quiet of some gentle jazz, we have better self-control, and we make better decisions about which foods would be better for us. But in the excitement of some loud rock music, we want meat and cheese on a bun and some french fries on the side. Oh, and a beer . . . or three.

Though the study is new, it reinforces conventional wisdom that restaurant owners have known for quite some time: Creating the right atmosphere is essential.

Music "creates a vibe. Your body starts tingling," said Alex McCoy, the chef/owner of Lucky Buns, a burger restaurant in Washington. "The more essential you make the experience, the more your brain just starts going crazy. You want to buy things, you want to eat, you want to meet people."

McCoy's internationally inspired burgers and fried chicken sandwiches have been lauded as some of the best in the city, and his restaurant is, according to Yelp reviewers, "wicked loud," "but worth it!" He typically plays loud Euro house music or reggae, letting the thumping beat pulse through the restaurant, "a playlist that allows (guests) to get lost in the music."

"Different songs, mixtures, genres of music, it creates this chaotic setting," he said. "And to me, those create the best bar vibe, when a song comes on and (diners are) like, 'Oh yes! That's the song! Get a round of drinks.'"

McCoy says he has never compared his sales during periods of different volumes of music. But there are four side salads on the menu, and any burger or fried chicken sandwich can be served on a bed of lettuce with no bun. You will not be surprised to learn that these options have not proven to be top-sellers, especially compared to the burgers served with bacon jam and Gouda, or the fried chicken with pickles and Sriracha.

Restaurants weren't always this loud. New York Magazine food writer Adam Platt pinned the origin of the "great noise boom" to the late '90s, when now-disgraced Mario Batali's restaurant Babbo was known for blasting Led Zeppelin, the Who and the Pixies. (The chef is now facing a criminal investigation after he has been accused of sexual assault.)
