Florence takes aim at Carolinas

Three storms brew behind it the Atlantic

PANAMA CITY — As a rapidly strengthening Hurricane Florence aims at Southeast coast, behind it Hurricane Helene, Tropical Storm Isaac and one other potential tropical storm are all brewing.

With September fulfilling the promises of peak hurricane season, residents are reminded to take the appropriate precautions for hurricane season — such as having emergency kits ready and knowing your hurricane plan — even if the storms are not currently projected to hit Northwest Florida.

The National Hurricane Center is predicting Florence could be a Category Storm 4 with winds of 130 miles per hour by Tuesday,

North Korea stresses building up economy, not nukes

PYONGYANG, North Korea — North Korea held a major military parade and revived its iconic mass games to celebrate its 70th anniversary on Sunday, but in keeping with leader Kim Jong Un's new policies the emphasis was firmly on building up the economy, not on nuclear weapons.

The North rolled out some of its latest tanks and marched its best-trained goose-stepping units in the parade but held back its most advanced missiles and devoted nearly half of the event to civilian efforts to build the domestic economy.

PANAMA CITY BEACH — With 58 days left until the general election, Gov. Rick Scott kicked off his statewide Make Washington Work bus tour Sunday afternoon in Panama City Beach, hoping to bolster his Senate campaign, as well as political ally Jimmy Patronis' run for Chief Financial Officer.

"You're about to see Florida take a lead to change Washington just the same way Gov. Scott has changed Florida," Patronis said during the intimate gathering of supporters at Capt. Anderson's Restaurant — owned by the Patronis family. "We're going to see the state of Florida show and lead the way."

Scott appeared relaxed and at home in the Bay County crowd, where he's been a frequent visitor throughout his two terms as governor. Patronis began the event by reminding Scott that if it weren't for Bay County, he likely would not have been elected.

"I love to remind everybody that the only reason why Rick Scott became Governor Rick Scott was because of Bay County," Patronis said, referencing the historic turnout in the area that propelled Scott past the 2010 primary.

Gov. Rick Scott kicked off his Make Washington Work campaign tour Sunday at Captain Anderson's Restaurant in Panama City with his wife, Ann Scott.

In keeping with the Make Washington Work theme, Scott leaned heavily on his jobs record, touting 1.6 million jobs added to the Florida economy during his tenure, with one out of six jobs tied to tourism and hospitality, which has seen a 50 percent increase over the last eight years. He also espoused cutting taxes to promote business growth, cutting regulations and streamlining permitting processes.

"We've made it better for business," Scott said. "That's what we need to do."

Scott also swiped at his opponent, incumbent Sen. Bill Nelson, and Democratic candidate for governor Andrew Gillum, accusing them of pushing "big government socialism" and adding that, under any government around the world, "people do worse" under socialism.

"If you think about the way the Democrats have run the federal government, they've over-promised and

NKOREA

It also brought the mass games back after a five-year hiatus. The games are a grand spectacle that features nearly 20,000 people flipping placards in unison to create huge mosaics as thousands more perform gymnastics or dance in formation on the competition area of Pyongyang's 150,000-seat May Day Stadium.

The strong emphasis on the economy underscores the strategy Kim has pursued since January of putting economic development front and center.

Tens of thousands of North Koreans waving brightly colored plastic bouquets filled Pyongyang's Kim Il Sung Square as the parade began. Residents of Pyongyang, North Korea's capital, trained for months for the anniversary and held up the bouquets to spell out words and slogans that can be seen from the VIP viewing area.

Kim attended the morning parade but did not address the assembled crowd, which included the head of the Chinese parliament and high-level delegations from countries that have friendly ties with the North.

At the end of the two-hour event he strolled to the edge of the balcony with the Chinese special envoy, Li Zhanshu, the third-ranking member in China's ruling Communist Party. The two held up their joined hands to symbolize the countries' traditionally close ties, though the absence of Chinese President Xi Jinping could indicate Beijing still has some reservations about Kim's initiatives.

Senior statesman Kim Yong Nam, the head of North Korea's parliament, set the relatively softer tone for the parade with an opening speech that emphasized the economic goals of the regime, not its nuclear might. He called on the military to be ready to work to help build the economy.

After a truncated parade featuring tanks and some of North Korea's biggest artillery, fewer than the usual number of missiles and lots of goose-stepping units from all branches of the military, the focus switched to civilian groups ranging from nurses to students to construction workers, many with colorful floats beside them.

The combining of military and civilian sections is a familiar North Korean parade format.

The past two big anniversaries of North Korea's founding, in 2008 and 2013, did not feature the Korean People's Army, only the civil defense units, which are officially called "Worker Peasant Red Guards."

Although North Korea stages military parades almost every year, and held one just before the Olympics began in South Korea in February this year, Sunday's parade came at a particularly sensitive time.

Kim's effort to ease tensions with President Donald Trump has stalled since their June summit in Singapore. Both sides are now insisting on a different starting point. Washington wants Kim to commit to denuclearization first, but Pyongyang wants its security guaranteed and a peace agreement formally ending the Korean War.

With tensions once again on the rise, a parade featuring the very missiles that so unnerved Trump last year, and led to a dangerous volley of insults from both leaders, could have been seen as a deliberate provocation. The North also refrained from immediately televising the event, though North Korean media were out in force to film it, deploying booms and — for possibly the first time — drones with cameras.

"This is a big and very positive statement from North Korea," Trump tweeted. "Thank you To Chairman Kim. We will both prove everyone wrong! There is nothing like good dialogue from two people that like each other! Much better than before I took office."

STORMS

causing South Carolina, North Carolina and Virginia to declare states of emergency. The storm is expected to make landfall by Friday, according to the NHC, likely somewhere in the Carolinas.

Local impacts from Florence are not expected, according to the National Weather Service Tallahassee.

Forecasters urged residents from South Carolina to the mid-Atlantic to get ready — and not just for a direct blow against the coast. They warned that Florence could slow or stall after coming ashore, with some forecasting models showing it could unload a foot or two of rain in places, causing devastating inland flooding.

"Pretend, assume, presume that a major hurricane is going to hit right smack dab in the middle of South Carolina and is going to go way inshore," South Carolina Gov. Henry McMaster said. The state's emergency management agency said it is "preparing for the possibility of a large-scale disaster."

Florence isn't the only storm in the sea though.

Helene intensified into a hurricane on Sunday with winds of 75 miles per hour. Right now, the storm is expected to stay out in the Atlantic, never coming near the United States.

Tropical Storm Isaac was near hurricane strength at 70 miles per hour at 5 p.m. on Sunday. The NHC currently shows Isaac heading west across the tropical Atlantic between South America and the Caribbean, but a path and intensity beyond that is unknown as it moves toward the Lesser Antilles.

A new storm has also started forming over the northwestern Caribbean Sea is producing a large area of disorganized showers and thunderstorms between Cuba and Honduras, according to the NHC. The storm is slowly moving northwest into the Gulf of Mexico.

Chances of formation over the next five days are low at 20 percent.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

under-delivered," he said.

Scott's Make Washington Work plan includes pushing for term limits, requiring a supermajority vote to approve tax or fee increases, giving the president the power of line item veto for individual budget projects, requiring Congress to forego their salary if they fail to pass an annual budget, requiring members of Congress to work full-time for full-time salary and eliminating omnibus bills.

The event drew a small crowd of local Democrat and liberal protestors clustered on North Lagoon Drive heading toward the restaurant, with signs and a megaphone urging people to "vote no for Rick Scott."

"We don't need another crazy to go to Washington," said Beverly Wall, who was rallying the crowd. "We need a leader."

Earlier in the day, Scott skipped a scheduled campaign event at The Donut Hole in Santa Rosa Beach. Campaign workers had passed out signs at the location and installed a sound system, according to the Tampa Bay Times, but a small contingency of protests calling on Scott to repeal the controversial beach access law HB 631, showed up ahead of his appearance. Walton County has become ground zero in the customary use struggle, with a public hearing on the subject Saturday night at South Walton High School drew over 800 people in attendance, according to the Northwest Florida Daily News.

Sanctions, sex abuse and silence

A look inside the saga that has engulfed Pope Francis, the Vatican

By Nicole Winfield
The Associated Press

In this Aug. 22 photo, Pope Francis is caught in a pensive mood during his weekly general audience at the Vatican. [ANDREW MEDICHINI/ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE PHOTO]

VATICAN CITY — Two weeks after Pope Francis' papacy was thrown into crisis by accusations that he covered up sexual misconduct by ex-Cardinal Theodore McCarrick, Francis has refused to respond, his accuser has changed his story and a host of new characters have entered the fray.

Cardinals, bishops, priests and ordinary faithful are demanding answers, given that the Vatican knew since at least 2000 about allegations McCarrick had bedded seminarians.

Francis is coming under increasing pressure to respond to claims by Archbishop Carlo Maria Vigano that he rehabilitated McCarrick from sanctions Pope Benedict XVI had imposed.

Here is a look at the scandal, which has split the U.S. Catholic hierarchy and further tarnished Francis' record on abuse.

What was the original accusation?

Vigano said in his Aug. 26 expose that Benedict imposed "canonical sanctions" on McCarrick in 2009 or 2010 that were similar to what Francis imposed this summer after McCarrick was accused of groping a minor.

"The cardinal was to leave the seminary where he was living, he was forbidden to celebrate Mass in public, to participate in public meetings, to give lectures, to travel, with the obligation of dedicating himself to a life of prayer and penance," Vigano wrote.

Vigano said he told Francis on June 23, 2013, that McCarrick had "corrupted a generation of seminarians and priests" and that Benedict "ordered him to withdraw to a life of prayer and penance."

But he said Francis effectively rehabilitated McCarrick and made him a trusted counselor as he sought to remake the U.S. church leadership to be less focused on the culture wars.

The public record, however, is rife with evidence that McCarrick lived a life devoid of any sanction from 2009 onwards, traveling widely for the church, attending official functions, including at the Vatican alongside Benedict and Vigano, who as Vatican ambassador in 2012 had the duty of honoring him at an awards ceremony in New York.

How has Vigano's story changed?

Faced with such evidence, Vigano altered his story to say that while Benedict's measures were in place, McCarrick "didn't obey" them and Vigano was unable to enforce them.

Vigano told LifeSiteNews, an ultraconservative site, that Benedict had made the sanctions "private" probably because McCarrick was retired and Benedict, seeking to avoid scandal, thought he would obey.

Even the conservative National Catholic Register, which originally published Vigano's revelation, acknowledged that the severity of the measures reported by Vigano is now an open question.

Citing someone close to Benedict, the Register reported that Benedict couldn't recall how he handled the matter but that there was no formal decree against McCarrick, "just a private request" to keep a low profile.

If true, that would undercut Vigano's core accusation that Francis rehabilitated McCarrick from actual canonical sanctions.

How has Pope Francis responded?

Hours after Vigano's accusations came to light, Francis told an in-flight news conference: "I will not say a word about this." He challenged journalists to investigate Vigano's claims and said, "If time passes and you've drawn your conclusions, maybe I'll speak."

That said, Francis has referred indirectly to the scandal a few times since. He has said "silence and prayer " are often the best response to people seeking scandal. He has said it is un-Christian to accuse other people, but necessary to accuse oneself to recognize sin. And he has told newly ordained bishops to work in communion — not as lone actors bent on settling personal scores.

DATELINES

SHANKSVILLE, PA.

People attending the dedication stand around the 93-foot tall Tower of Voices on Sunday at the Flight 93 National Memorial in Shanksville, Pa. The tower contains 40 wind chimes representing the 40 people that perished in the crash of Flight 93 in the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001. The dedication occurred nearly 17 years after passengers on the hijacked flight fought back against a band of terrorists who then crashed the jetliner into a rural field. [AP]

LONDON

Former British Foreign Secretary Boris Johnson is seen during a cricket match, Sunday in London. Johnson compared Prime Minister Theresa May's plan for Brexit to putting the country's constitution in a "suicide vest" and handing the detonator to the European Union — remarks that drew condemnation from colleagues on Sunday. The attack, and Johnson's choice of metaphor, widened the divide in the governing Conservative Party over Brexit. [AP]

Firefighters stand guard along I-5 north of the Pollard Flat exit as the Delta Fire flares up in the background near Shasta-Trinity National Forest, Calif. The highway running the length of California remained closed for a fifth day Sunday near the Oregon border as a wildfire smothered rural forestlands in smoke and flame. Officials were trying to determine whether it was safe to reopen a 45-mile section of Interstate 5 north of Redding. [THE RECORD SEARCHLIGHT VIA AP]

Lawyer: Cop who killed man at home should be charged

The lawyer for the family of a man who was gunned down at his home by a Dallas police officer is calling for her to be arrested and charged, saying the fact that she remains free days after the shooting shows she's receiving favorable treatment.

S. Lee Merritt, who is representing the family of Botham Jean, said Saturday that the family isn't calling on the authorities to jump to conclusions or to deny Officer Amber Guyger her right to due process. But Merritt said they want Guyger "to be treated like every other citizen, and where there is evidence that they've committed a crime, that there's a warrant to be issued and an arrest to be made."

BANGKOK
Meeting fails to finalize draft on climate change rules

An international meeting in Bangkok fell short of its aim of completing fruitful preparations to help an agreement be reached in December on guidelines for implementing the 2015 Paris climate change agreement.

The six-day meeting, which ended on Sunday, was scheduled to step up progress in the battle against rising global carbon emissions by adopting a completed text that could be presented at the COP24 conference in Katowice, Poland, three months from now. A primary objective of the 2015 Paris agreement, to which 190 nations subscribe, is to limit the global temperature increase by 2100 to less than 2 degrees Celsius and as close as possible to 1.5 degrees.

LONDON
UK says it will nab poisoning suspects if they leave Russia

Britain's interior minister says the U.K. will nab two men accused of using a nerve agent in the English city of Salisbury if they ever set foot outside Russia.

Britain has charged two alleged agents of Russia's GRU military intelligence agency in absentia with the poisoning of former Russian spy Sergei Skripal and his daughter Yulia.

Britain blames the Russian state for the attack, a claim Moscow denies.

Home Secretary Sajid Javid said Sunday that the GRU "gets its orders from the highest level of the Russian government."

Javid acknowledged that in Russia the men were beyond the reach of British law.

Jewish group in Germany condemns 'rooted' extremism

An attack on a kosher restaurant by masked neo-Nazis on the sidelines of an anti-migrant protest in an eastern German city shows there's a deep problem with right-wing extremism in the region and should be treated as a call to action, the head of Germany's Central Council of Jews said Sunday.

Josef Schuster, who had previously condemned the violent far-right protests in Chemnitz on Aug. 26 and 27 before the attack on the Jewish restaurant was even known, said "we need to call the problem by its name."

"The racist riots and the attack on the kosher restaurant in Chemnitz show how strongly rooted right-wing extremism is in the region," he said.

BILLINGS, MONT.
Rascals guitarist recovering from on-stage collapse

A publicist says Rock & Roll Hall of Fame guitarist Gene Cornish of The Rascals is in good spirits at a Montana hospital after collapsing during a concert.

Melissa Kucirek says the 74-year-old Cornish is expected to be released from a Billings hospital on Wednesday.

She said Sunday that "he's on the path to a speedy recovery" and is eager to get back on stage.

Kucirek says she didn't know what caused Cornish to collapse Friday at a show in Billings. She says that "Gene would like everyone to know that he so appreciates the prayers and well-wishes."

Lifting barriers to living organ donation explored

By Lauran Neergaard
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Surgeons turned down Terra Goudge for the liver transplant that was her only shot at surviving a rare cancer. Her tumor was too advanced, they said — even though Goudge had a friend ready to donate, no matter those odds.

"I have a living donor — I'm not taking away from anyone. I'm trying to save my own life," she pleaded. Finally, the Los Angeles woman found a hospital on the other side of the country that let the pair try.

People lucky enough to receive a kidney or part of a liver from a living donor not only cut years off their wait for a transplant, but those organs also tend to survive longer. Yet living donors make up a fraction of transplants, and their numbers have plateaued amid barriers that can block otherwise willing people from giving. Among them: varying hospital policies on who qualifies and the surprising financial costs that some donors bear.

Now researchers are exploring ways to lift those barriers and ease the nation's organ shortage.

"We just want people to be given the chance to at least entertain this as a possibility," said Dr. Abhinav Humar, transplant chief at the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center, where Goudge ultimately received part of friend Amy Aleck's liver.

Thousands of people die each year waiting for an organ transplant. Nearly 14,000 are on the waiting list for a liver transplant. Of 8,082 transplants last year, just 367 were from living donors, according to the United Network for Organ Sharing, or UNOS, which oversees the nation's transplant system. Living kidney donations are more common but still not enough to meet the need. About 95,000 people are on the kidney waiting list. Of 19,849 transplants last year, 5,811 were from living donors.

Also troubling, black and Hispanic patients are less likely than whites to receive a kidney from a living donor, and a study in the Journal of the American Medical Association earlier this year found the disparity is growing.

One hurdle is economic. The transplant recipient's insurance pays the donor's medical bills. But donors are out of work for weeks recuperating. The U.S. Labor Department last month made clear that a donor's job can be protected under the Family Medical Leave Act.

But that's unpaid leave — and donors lose income if their employer doesn't allow some form of paid time off. They also may have other expenses such as travel and hotel bills for visits to a far-away transplant center.

One study found more than a third of living kidney donors reported lost wages in the first year following donation. The median amount was $2,712, particularly difficult if asking economically disadvantaged friends or family for an organ.

"It's a strange thing to tell you that donors have to pay for the privilege of donating their kidneys. I think most of us would agree that's just fundamentally wrong," said Dr. Paige Porrett, a surgeon with the University of Pennsylvania.

Penn is one of half a dozen transplant centers testing whether reimbursing a donor's lost income could shorten the wait for a kidney.

"The community's in a real bind about how we can help them," Porrett said. "It's a fine line that it doesn't get misconstrued that we're paying people for their organs."

For black women, it's more than the Aretha eulogy

By Corey Williams
The Associated Press

DETROIT — A black pastor's controversial eulogy at Aretha Franklin's funeral laid bare before the world what black women say they have experienced for generations: sexism and inequality in their houses of worship every Sunday.

In eulogizing the beloved artist known as the Queen of Soul, the Rev. Jasper Williams Jr. declared that as "proud, beautiful and fine as our black women are, one thing a black woman cannot do — a black woman cannot raise a black boy to be a man."

The backlash was immediate, given Franklin's role as a mother and a pillar for women's rights.

Franklin's grieving family said Williams' eulogy, which also included references to stopping black-on-black crime, was offensive because it did not focus on her. Social media lit up with criticisms of his remarks as sexist and misogynist.

For many black women, Williams' eulogy reopened wounds and sternly reminded them that black churches remain male-dominated institutions, where old-school resistance to women holding leadership roles is still alive.

"Women are hurting about this issue," said the Rev. Barbara Reynolds, an elder at Greater Mount Calvary Holy Church in Washington, D.C.

"It's like we are still not equal. Women fight in every cause for everybody else, but we are not celebrated or even tolerated in sacred spaces," Reynolds said.

Women not only fill the pews in many black churches, they also serve as church nurses and ushers, and work behind the scenes. Some are trustees, keeping an eye on church finances and making sure bills get paid. Others are evangelists, or are ordained as deacons. But many are denied true leadership roles — and in some cases, women are asked to deliver sermons from the church floor, rather than the pulpit.

Some male ministers "actually deeply believe that men are supposed to be in charge," said the Rev. Cheryl Townsend Gilkes, assistant pastor for special projects at Union Baptist Church in Cambridge, Massachusetts, and a sociology professor at Colby College in Waterville, Maine.

"Their reading of the Bible does not have a vision of gender equality," Gilkes said. "Black women are very conscious of how important they are to the survival, growth and continuity of the church. Very often, to become effective, prominent leaders, they have formed their own organizations and exercised that leadership outside the pulpit."

Trade panel smart to nix paper tariffs

The U.S. International Trade Commission recently and unanimously rejected tariffs imposed on newsprint and other forms of uncoated groundwood paper imported from Canada.

The decision by the commission appropriately rejected tariffs levied by the Trump administration's Commerce Department in response to a complaint by a single U.S. paper manufacturer owned by a hedge fund. The commission currently has five members (one seat is vacant): two Republicans and one Democrat appointed by President Barack Obama; one Democrat appointed by President George W. Bush; one Democrat appointed by President Donald Trump.

In previous editorials, we cited three big problems with the tariffs:

1. The levies further threatened the financial viability of news organizations that produce print products.

Next to the price of employing people — salaries and benefits — paper remains the second-largest individual cost of a publishing company.

News organizations across the United States feared, rationally, that rising newsprint costs related to the tariffs would force publishers to cut staff, reduce the size of newspapers or raise costs to consumers — or a combination of all three. So did nonprofit organizations that rely on print newsletters.

Indeed, those impacts occurred in many markets.

We recognize our financial interest in this matter, but none of these outcomes were good for the workers, readers, advertisers and communities that depend on professional journalism published in print.

2. The tariffs didn't make sense and weren't supported by the vast majority of the affected paper producers in the United States and Canada.

Technically labeled as anti-dumping and countervailing duties, the tariffs were initiated by the U.S. Department of Commerce in response to a petition by one paper producer in Washington state.

North Pacific Paper Company (NORPAC), which has fewer than 300 employees and is owned by a hedge fund, alleged that the Canadian government subsidizes paper exports.

The Commerce Department agreed and imposed the two duties — combined, ranging up to 32 percent — preliminarily in January and March. They were subsequently decreased but only slightly.

The newspaper industry wasn't the only opponent. The American Forest and Paper Association was strongly opposed, noting that the uncoated groundwood and newsprint market is an integrated "North American market."

Two of the leading Canadian producers have a total of nearly 4,000 U.S. employees, more than 13 times the number of NORPAC, the petitioner.

3. The tariffs threatened to raise the costs of print advertising for companies with brick-and-mortar stores and businesses.

It's true that a significant share of advertising has migrated online, but print ads remain valuable to local and national companies that sell taxable products and employ millions of Americans.

The tariffs harmed the valuable newspaper industry, were opposed by all but one paper producer, and imposed unnecessary costs on businesses that rely on print. As we have stated: If the U.S. goal is to have smart trade, then these tariffs were dumb, and we credit the trade commission for recognizing as much.

Will you win the 'throw your money at Amazon' sweepstakes?

Jim Hightower

How much are you paying Amazon? I don't mean how much you're shelling out for that set of bed linens or the latest computer gizmo you bought. No, no. I'm asking how much money you and your neighbors are simply giving to the world's largest and richest online retailer.

If you live in Indianapolis; Newark, New Jersey; Miami; Austin; Philly; Chicago; Atlanta; or 13 other lucky cities, congratulations, for you're a finalist in the magnificent "Throw Your Money At Amazon" Sweepstakes! It's like Bonnie & Clyde but on a corporate scale. And instead of robbing banks, Amazon has enticed city and state officials to rob their own citizens and then hand over the loot in the form of tax breaks, cash grants, land and other bribes to Jeff Bezos, CEO of Amazon and America's wealthiest human. The locality that offers the most "wins" the grand prize of having this thieving corporate behemoth become its new neighbor.

So, again I ask: How big of a pile of your tax dollars and public assets are your officials offering?

Shhhh, it's a secret. Nearly all of the 20 official accomplices to this grand larceny are pulling it off in the dark, not even telling city council members (much less taxpayers) how many billions they're throwing at Bezos. Making the deals even shadier, many cities turned their negotiations over to such business associations as the chamber of commerce, letting this handful of unelected, self-interested private elites secretly make binding promises that would affect the entire public without consulting or even informing them. In the few cases where information has been released, it's amounted to an unfunny joke — Montgomery County, Maryland, for example, issued a 10-page document listing "incentives" it was offering, but every word on every page was blacked out!

This whole flimflam is abominable and ought to be criminal. Amazon will rake in a quarter-trillion dollars in sales this year, and Bezos is sitting on $166 billion in personal wealth. Shame on him for demanding public handouts.

The uber-rich megapeddler of everything has been hit with a long string of exposés about the corporation's nasty practices. From profiteering as a flagrant tax dodger and predatory killer of independent local businesses, to running a massive network of publicly subsidized warehouses with sweatshop labor, Amazon's carefully crafted image as a "cool" company is ... well, getting fried in negative headlines and online chatter.

Thus, Bezos has hired a flock of tweety birds who the corporation says are former warehouse workers, paying them to tweet full time about how absolutely wonderful the warehouse jobs are. The air circulation in the warehouses, the tweeters tell us, is "very good"; in a 10-hour shift, they assure us, lucky workers get not one but two 30-minute breaks; and workers are even allowed bathroom breaks. Bezos has given this select group of Twitter testifiers the title of Amazon "ambassadors," and each of their Twitter accounts looks exactly alike, complete with the corporate smile logo atop their page.

Amazon's PR flacks insist that the tweeters are not scripted or told what to write. But imagine if they were to write something "unapproved." And note that Amazon won't let reporters interview any of them.

As Sen. Bernie Sanders, the diligent corporate watchdog, put it, "If Amazon actually paid all its workers a living wage and treated them with dignity, they would not have to pay dozens of people to tweet all day."

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

'Thank you for your service'

I am a retired Navy veteran having served over 20 years of active duty. I was born and raised in Wisconsin, and after retirement from the Navy (1994), moved back to Wisconsin. I am a proud veteran, however back in the day when I joined the service, the military was definitely not appreciated.

While serving in USS CONSTELLATION (CVA-64) on Yankee Station, a friend of mine received a newspaper article from his family living outside Norfolk, Virginia. There was a photograph with the article, it was a sign in front of a home that said "Sailors and dogs keep off the grass" - and that was the way it was. The Viet Nam "conflict" was supposedly coming to an end, but the public still viewed all military with disregard. There was a point when we were told not to wear our uniform in public, especially if we used public transportation. For the better part of my career, that was the harsh reality.

After retirement in 1994, my wife and I looked forward to a slower pace. But the winters became more harsh, and in July of this year we moved to Panama City, Florida. We knew the military presence here would be high, but we looked at that as a positive thing.

While at an Outback Steakhouse a few weeks ago, my wife suggested that I ask if they had a military discount. I laughed, in Wisconsin the only time that happened was on a holiday, and it wasn't much of a discount. I said I was not going to say anything. However, she did. The bartender - "Jim" said yes, of course. I was surprised. I showed him my ID card and he said "Great, and thanks for your service" - I was floored. I had never heard that before. I thought it was just a one time thing, but it was great to hear. Then my wife suggested I ask about discounts at stores. So, while at Lowes in Panama City, I asked about a military discount - after answering a few questions and showing my ID card, the lady behind the counter said "Thank you for your service" - basically, almost everywhere I went, once the establishment found out I was a veteran, I always received the response, "Thank you for your service." It is refreshing to know that my country appreciates the sacrifice all veterans have made, and I will never grow tired of hearing "Thank you for your service"

What to consider before renting to pay the mortgage

BIGSTOCK

By Beth Buczynski
NerdWallet.com

Nearly 30 percent of homeowners say their monthly housing costs, such as mortgage payments, homeowners insurance and property taxes, are expensive, according to a 2018 NerdWallet homeownership survey. About 65 percent have experienced anxiety related to owning their home.

But some have found a clever way to dial back the financial stress: "house hacking."

This strategy isn't as new as it sounds. Owners rent out rooms in their home, or units in a multifamily property, and put the funds toward the mortgage payment or home improvements.

"Doing this has been the best financial decision I've ever made," says Amy Breyer, a 28-year-old tax accountant.

Breyer rents out three bedrooms in the Minneapolis house she bought soon after graduating from college.

"The tenants cover the whole mortgage and almost all the utilities, and I get to save extra for retirement and pay off debt," she says.

Want to hack your housing expenses? Here's what you need to know.

1 Make sure it's legal: Research local zoning laws, or contact your local government to make sure it's OK to take in boarders, says Stephen Fishman, an attorney in Olympia, Washington, and author of "Every Landlord's Tax Deduction Guide." Some laws may require a permit or limit the number of tenants allowed.

2 Double-check your insurance: Ask how renting rooms may affect your policy. Breyer has extra liability coverage and requires tenants to have renters insurance because their personal belongings aren't covered by her homeowners policy.

3 Decide if you'll rent to friends or strangers: "I prefer not being friends with the tenants because then I don't have to worry about ruining relationships," Breyer says. She interviews and runs background checks on all of her boarders, but sometimes things still get complicated. "I've had tenants expect special treatment — breaking the lease or paying less rent — when I was too friendly," Breyer says.

4 Know what to charge: Set the rent too high, and you'll have trouble finding tenants. Set it too low, and the income may not be worth the space you're giving up. Research average rent prices for your market on sites like Rentometer.com or ApartmentList.com, or look at the price of similar properties on Craigslist or in the newspaper to help you decide.

5 Use a written lease: Even if your boarder is your BFF, renting makes you a landlord and you have to behave like one, Fishman says. He recommends using a standard, state-approved lease, which you can often find online for a small fee. Even if you don't use a formal lease, be aware that state or local landlord-tenant laws still apply. Breyer prefers a month-to-month lease because it gives both parties the flexibility to part ways quickly if circumstances change or if there's a personality conflict.

6 Pay your taxes: Failure to report income from renters could mean paying back taxes, interest and penalties if the IRS audits you. On a happier note, you may also be able to deduct some of your landlord expenses, like repairs, improvements or insurance, so keep good records. Talk to a tax professional before renting out your space to make sure you fully understand how income from rent may affect your taxes.

7 Think about the future: What happens if you decide to start a family or sell the house? What if a boarder wants to move in with their significant other? Consider writing an exit strategy into your lease or creating a separate agreement. It could detail, for example, how boarders would be reimbursed if they had helped pay for permanent home improvements while renting.

You'll also need to have an honest conversation with yourself about the landlord lifestyle.

"You're always on call, and you have to be prepared to fix issues immediately," Breyer says. "No tenant will ever care about the house as much as you do, and that requires a lot of patience."

Paying for college: A case for sharing costs

By Liz Weston | NerdWallet.com

Asking teenagers to pay the whole cost of a four-year college degree probably isn't realistic or smart. Kids may be cut off from financial aid, since need-based help is largely based on the parents' resources. The debt they accumulate may be crippling, and students who try to pay for school entirely on their own are more likely to drop out.

But the open bar approach isn't wise, either. Setting limits and requiring a kid to pay at least part of the cost can actually lead to better grades while protecting parents' finances.

Find out what you'll be expected to pay

The sticker price to attend many private universities now exceeds $70,000 per year, including tuition, room, board, books and fees. The net average cost, after scholarships and grants are taken into account, was $15,367 last year, according to student lender Sallie Mae.

Many families aren't prepared for the expense: Some 4 out of 10 parents aren't saving for college. Among those who are, the average amount saved is $18,135, Sallie Mae found.

The high cost of college and the low rate of savings has led to a whole lot of debt: $1.5 trillion in student loans, at last count.

Start with the Department of Education's FAFSA4caster, an online tool that predicts your "expected family contribution" based largely on parental income and assets. Enter the cost of a college to see roughly how much need-based aid to expect. Once families have the financial aid figure, parents can add in the amount they want to contribute (or borrow) to determine how much they can help. Find the tool at https://fafsa.ed.gov/FAFSA/app/f4cForm.

Put limits on your borrowing

Parents often want to spare their kids from student loans, but the kids are the ones benefiting from the education, and they have many more years ahead of them to pay off the debt.

Having student loans typically isn't a huge hardship. Students can borrow up to $31,000 in federal student loans for their undergraduate degrees, including $5,500 for their first year. The typical college graduate can easily pay that back within 10 years.

A rule of thumb for students: Don't borrow more in total than you expect to earn in your first year out of school.

Parents usually have access to PLUS federal education loans, but those have higher rates and less generous repayment plans. Parents and students should be wary of using private student loans, since those typically come with variable rates and fewer consumer protections. Parents also may be able to borrow against their home equity or retirement funds.

A rule of thumb for parents: Don't borrow more than you can pay off before you retire, while still saving enough for that retirement.

Make sure your kid has skin in the game

The more financial help parents offer, the more likely college students are to graduate, according to a 2013 study by Laura Hamilton, a sociology professor at the University of California, Merced. At the same time, students' grade-point averages decreased as parental support increased.

Having loans didn't help grades, but scholarships, work-study and grants did. Some studies have found that working less than 20 hours per week while in college is associated with better grades. So even parents who can afford to give their kids a full ride might insist they at least get a job.

Have this conversation long before college applications are due. It will be a much more wrenching discussion later, when the student has her heart set on the dream school that would be a nightmare for the family's finances.

Never make a late payment again

By Erin El Issa | NerdWallet.com

About 1 in 5 Americans has made a credit card payment 30 or more days late, according to a new NerdWallet report. The No. 1 reason for missing payments? They simply forgot.

When you don't have the money, missing a credit card payment may be unavoidable. But forgetting to pay, which was cited by 35 percent of those who have missed a payment, is an easily avoidable, and potentially costly, blunder.

There are several ways to make it virtually impossible to forget a payment:

1. Automatic payments: The simplest way to avoid missing your due date is to set up automatic payments through your credit card issuer's website. Ideally, you'll pay off the entire card balance each month. But if that isn't possible right now, at least set up an automatic payment for the minimum amount due. A small minimum payment may not seem worth it, but it can save you money on late fees and interest while protecting your credit score.

2. Text or email alerts: Set these up through your credit card issuer's website. You'll get an alert a few days before your payment is due, and you can check your statement to make sure all charges are accurate — a good practice no matter how you handle your bill. Then, make at least the minimum payment before your due date.

3. Get your calendar organized: Another method — though this is more likely to be derailed by human error — is adding your payment due dates to a digital or paper calendar. Digital is better since you can schedule reminders to repeat every month on the same day with minimal effort. The calendar option is best combined with one of the other methods discussed, but it's a solid solution if you really don't want to deal with your card issuer's website.

Why is it so important that you pay what amounts to 1 percent to 3 percent of your balance — the typical minimum monthly payment? Because it avoids the short- and long-term costs associated with paying late:

- Fees. Even if you're just a day late, your card issuer could charge you a late payment fee. The maximum cost for a first-time late payment is $27, and subsequent late payments could cost up to $38 each time. If you forget to make a payment and get charged a fee, call your issuer and try to have the fee waived. Issuers may be willing to work with you on this, especially if it's the first time.
- Penalty APR, a higher interest rate applied to your credit card balance if your payment is 60 days or more late. This new rate could be almost 30 percent or about double the average credit card interest rate.
- Higher rates on future loans or credit cards. Perhaps the biggest financial impact of late payments is the damage they can do to your credit scores. Several factors influence your credit scores, but the biggest is payment history, which makes up 35 percent of a FICO score. Credit card payments over 30 days late are typically reported to the credit bureaus and will affect your scores. The lower your credit scores, the fewer options you'll have for credit cards and loans, and even housing. Bad credit means higher interest rates and possibly more expensive car insurance and utility deposits as well.

Judge orders Spanish language sample ballots

Bay county among those effected

By Jim Saunders
The News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — A federal judge Friday ordered elections officials in 32 counties — including Bay — to provide Spanish-language sample ballots for the November general election — but said there wasn't enough time to order more far-reaching steps to help Puerto Ricans eligible to vote in Florida.

In a 27-page ruling, U.S. District Judge Mark Walker partially sided with plaintiffs who sought an injunction to require Spanish-language ballots and other assistance for what are believed to be more than 30,000 Puerto Ricans in the counties.

"Voting in a language you do not understand is like asking this court (to) decide the winner of the Nobel Prize for Chemistry — ineffective,

Student arrested after alleged sexual assault at Mosley High School

News Herald Staff Report

LYNN HAVEN — The Bay County Sheriff's Office has arrested a Mosley High School student after an alleged sexual assault on campus Thursday.

Michael Gavin Degrazia, 17, has been charged with sexual battery and taken to the Bay County Jail.

According to BCSO, the assault occurred during school in the boys locker room while the victim and Degrazia skipped class. A friend of the victim came forward and reported it to the School Resource Deputy on Friday, who began an investigation.

Based on alleged admissions by Degrazia, physical evidence and witness statements, Degrazia was arrested.

Principal Brian Bullock said the safety of all students is his number one priority and thanked BCSO for the "swiftness" with which they addressed the complaint.

"We will continue to cooperate with the BCSO as needed but, due to privacy concerns for the victim and the nature of the investigation, we will not be commenting further other than to reassure our parents that student safety and supervision remains our focus," Bullock said in a statement.

way they are, the way God intended them to be," said Kim Cicero, social ministries director for Messiah Lutheran Church. "They are a light for others and it's a night they get to shine in that light."

Though the event is several months away, organizers are spreading the word now to get volunteers and sponsors on board. Volunteers can sign up to accompany prom guests for the night as a prom buddy, and must attend training in January beforehand. Tuxedos and dresses are encouraged, and there will be entertainment and a prayer wall.

"When it comes time to crown the kings and queens (buddies) will crown their date for the night," said Cicero. "Any high school students needing volunteer hours, they are more than welcome to volunteer."

Long-time volunteer and media coordinator Tony Super said the event gets bigger every year. He added the prom is a "magical night" where guests can be themselves and not be judged.

"Of all the things I'm involved with, this is the most rewarding," Super said. "They have such a great time, not only for the attendees but for the volunteers."

This year's theme is "Strolling Through the Decades." Over 500 churches around the world are hosting similar events.

in other words," Walker wrote. "Courts have long held that the right to vote includes not only the right to physically enter a polling place and fill out a ballot, but also the right to comprehend and understand what is on that ballot."

But with the election less than two months away, he acknowledged concerns raised by county elections supervisors about making changes at this late stage. In issuing a preliminary injunction requiring the Spanish-language sample ballots, he declined to order such things as Spanish-language ballots and hiring bilingual poll workers.

Walker wrote that granting "all of plaintiffs' requested relief would place significant hardships on election administrators."

The potential class-action lawsuit was filed in August by a coalition of groups, with Alachua County resident Marta Valentina Rivera Madera as the named plaintiff. It targeted Alachua, Bay, Brevard, Charlotte, Citrus, Clay, Columbia, Duval, Escambia, Flagler, Hernando, Highlands, Indian River, Jackson, Lake, Leon, Levy, Manatee, Marion, Martin, Monroe, Okaloosa, Okeechobee, Pasco, Putnam, St. Johns, St. Lucie, Santa Rosa, Sarasota, Sumter, Taylor and Wakulla counties.

The plaintiffs' attorneys have focused on part of the Voting Rights Act that is aimed at people who were educated in schools where the predominant language was not English and that seeks to ensure they are not denied the right to vote. A motion filed by the plaintiffs said Congress enacted that part of the law "to protect the rights of Spanish-speaking Puerto Ricans to vote stateside."

The plaintiffs also have pointed to an influx of Puerto Ricans to Florida after Hurricane Maria devastated the U.S. territory last year. Walker's ruling said Rivera, the named plaintiff, moved to Gainesville after the storm.

The plaintiffs filed an underlying lawsuit and sought a preliminary injunction to try to quickly get changes for the Nov. 6 general election. Walker's ruling dealt only with the preliminary injunction.

victory in the Democratic primary for governor helped him jump out to an early fundraising lead over GOP nominee U.S. Rep. Ron DeSantis.

Gillum collected more than $4 million right after the Aug. 28 primary, according to campaign finance reports filed on Friday. By contrast, DeSantis reported taking in nearly $522,000 during the same time period.

The new reports only cover donations given until the end of August. But it was a substantial windfall for Gillum, who was outraised during the primary campaign by his other main Democratic opponents.

Gillum's campaign also noted that it had received nearly 40,000 donations in the immediate aftermath of his victory. Geoff Burgan, a spokesman for Gillum, said the surge in donations is a signal of "unprecedented grassroots support."

Among those giving money to Gillum was the Democratic Governors Association. The DGA gave $1 million to a political committee controlled by Gillum. His committee also got $1 million from wealthy hedge fund manager Donald Sussman and $10,000 from former NBA head coach Stan Van Gundy.

A political committee controlled by DeSantis got $100,000 from a political committee controlled by the Florida Chamber of Commerce and $25,000 from U.S. Rep. Matt Gaetz's re-election campaign. Gaetz, a Republican from northwest Florida, has been a vocal backer of DeSantis.

Republicans have held the governor's mansion for 20 years and during that time period their candidates have usually raised more money than Democrats.

But leading up to the primary, it was Agriculture Commissioner Adam Putnam who had pulled in substantial financial support from Florida's business community and corporations. Putnam's cash advantage, however, did not help him and he was crushed by DeSantis in the Republican primary.

Take the money and run

In the final weeks before the Democratic primary for governor, billionaire real estate investor Jeff Greene formed the Florida Defense Fund political committee and stocked it with $5 million. He promised to use the money to help Democrats in down ballot races after the election.

"This is my vision for Florida: I will help Democrats take back the Senate, make a dent in the House, and defend Bill Nelson's U.S. Senate seat against Rick Scott," Greene said in a press release announcing the formation of the committee. "Just imagine how effective we can be together."

But Greene came in fourth of the five major candidates after spending nearly $36 million of his own money on the race, and now the $5 million pledged to down-ballot races is gone.

The day after the election, the committee repaid Greene $4,999,509.94.

The other LG Candidate

Once one of the most outspoken Republicans in the Legislature, former Sen. Nancy Argenziano will be on the Florida ballot again — as the running mate of Reform Party candidate for governor Darcy Richardson.

It's the latest in the winding path of Argenziano's sometimes unusual political career, which includes making headlines for sending a 25-pound box of cow manure to a lobbyist as payback for disrespecting her.

Argenziano was elected to the House in 1996, to the Senate in 2002 and then was appointed to the Public Service Commission by then-Republican Gov. Charlie Crist in 2007. She resigned her PSC position early, called some of her Republican colleagues "clowns" and endorsed Democrat Alex Sink for governor in 2010. In 2012, filed paperwork to challenge then-Republican U.S. Rep. Steve Southerland as a Democrat, but her candidacy was ruled invalid because hadn't been a registered Democrat long enough to qualify for the ballot. Instead she ran for the state House as an Independent Party candidate and lost.

Richardson and Argenziano will have a tough hill to climb. With two months until the election, they have $7,000 in the bank in a race where the major party candidates are expected to spend tens of millions of dollars.

Florida legislators reject Gov. Scott on school security

By Gary Fineout
The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Despite repeated requests from Florida Gov. Rick Scott, legislative leaders have officially refused to steer $58 million to school districts to help them hire more campus police officers.

Scott in late August asked that legislators shift unused money from the state's guardian program to pay for more officers. Under the guardian program school districts were eligible to receive money to train school staff to act as armed guardians on school campuses.

But most districts have opted instead to hire officers even though some districts have struggled to come up with enough money to pay for them.

The Republican governor wanted a special legislative panel, which is meeting next week, to approve the money transfer.

But state Sen. Bill Galvano, the incoming Senate president, wrote a letter to Scott on Friday telling him he would not support the request. He said the guardian program is still evolving and more districts may opt into it in the future.

"For the guardian program to truly be vetted and ultimately embraced, I believe the program should maintain its own funding rather than having its funds co-mingled with other funds available for school safety," wrote the Bradenton Republican. "I respectfully disagree with your statement that the $58 million in available funding will go to waste if the proposed budget amendment is not adopted."

Galvano did say that he was open to reviewing the idea again in the near future. Legislators will hold a special organizational session in November following this year's elections. The next regular session is scheduled to start in March 2019.

After a gunman killed 17 people at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in February, Scott and the Legislature passed a law making Florida the first state to require all public schools to have armed security on site whenever they're open.

The state's 67 countywide districts were given the more expensive choice of hiring additional police officers, also known as school resource officers, or supplementing the officers they already had with the cheaper guardian program. Any money not covered by the state had to be picked up by the districts. Legislators set aside $67 million for guardians, and boosted money for school resource officers by $97 million.

Some districts, however, have said they can't afford officers and are hiring full-time guardians. These include Broward, Stoneman Douglas' district. A police officer can cost $100,000 a year in salary and benefits, while guardians are estimated to cost between $30,000 and $50,000. Some districts, mostly in rural parts of the state, are supplementing officers with armed staff who get a $500 stipend, saying their communities support that arrangement.

So far, 22 districts have received $9.3 million out of the $67 million set aside for guardians.

Rep. Jared Moskowitz, a Coral Springs Democrat who attended Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School, said he was disappointed that legislators aren't even considering Scott's request right now.

"I still have parents who are only seven months away from putting kids in the ground," Moskowitz said. "I think there's a compromise here. Let's give the program more time, but I don't think the program will use all $58 million between now and March. Let's put more police officers in schools, let's harden more schools."

IN BRIEF

PANAMA CITY BEACH
Pedestrian critical after wreck in front of Sharky's

An early morning wreck in front of Sharky's Restaurant, 15201 Front Beach Road, left a female pedestrian in critical condition Sunday morning.

According to Panama City Beach Police, a white female was crossing from Sharky's to Origins at Seahaven Condominiums at around 2 a.m. when she was struck by a 2008 Dodge truck driven by Hoyle Alexander III of Douglasville, Ga.

The victim is currently listed in critical condition at Bay Medical Center. The wreck remains under investigation.

CRESTVIEW
Teens facing drug, gun, grand theft charges

Three Crestview teens who tried to flee in a stolen car and then hide in someone's apartment Saturday evening were arrested by Okaloosa County Sheriff's Office deputies.

According to an OCSO press release, a deputy on patrol spotted a black Kia that had been reported stolen in Panama City on Aug. 14. He attempted a traffic stop on North Pearl Street but the driver fled — speeding and disregarding traffic signs.

The car stopped in the area of South Lloyd Street and West Edney Avenue, and three males ran from the scene. They were found hiding in an apartment at Hero's Landing. When contacted, the owner said they did not have permission to be there.

Inside the apartment deputies found a Glock 9mm pistol — reported stolen to the OCSO earlier this year — partially hidden underneath a couch. In suspect Jamarcus Ollie's backpack, they found a Glock magazine and marijuana, according to the release.

Ollie later stated he hid his gun under the couch.

Ollie, who is 17, is charged with armed trespassing, grand theft of a firearm, principal to grand theft of a motor vehicle, resisting arrest and possession of marijuana.

Isaiah Durham, 18, the suspected driver of the stolen car, is charged with fleeing police with disregard to the safety of others, trespassing, principal to grand theft of a motor vehicle and resisting arrest.

Trevone Fitzgerald, 17, is charged with principal to grand theft of a motor vehicle, trespassing, resisting arrest and possession of marijuana.

Good fun, good business

The Destin Fishing Rodeo mushroomed in the late 1970s and 1980s

By Tina Harbuck

tharbuck@thedestinlog.com

EDITOR'S NOTE: For the next few weeks leading up to the Destin Fishing Rodeo in October, The Destin Log, a News Herald sister paper, will take a look back at the Rodeo over the last seven decades — from how it got started to some of the big catches and prizes, to changes and even some of the personalities that bolstered it to become one of the longest traditions in Destin.

Darlene Raim served as the Rodeo secretary in 1983 and 1984. [FILE PHOTO]

DESTIN — By the time the fourth decade of the Destin Fishing Rodeo rolled around — 1978-1988 — it was well on its way to being one of the biggest events around and one fishermen couldn't wait for.

"We were booked years in advance. It was that important to the customer," said retired Capt. Kelly Windes, who ran the charter boat Sunrise.

Windes said the Rodeo brought many benefits to the fishing fleet.

"First, it was much fun," he said. "Second, it was good business. We promoted the Rodeo all year to try to get our people to come back to fish for the bigger fish. … Go for broke, sort of speak.

"Economically it was good," added Windes, who noted that most years he would run all 31 days of the Rodeo.

Windes said he might run 100 miles just for one or two fish.

"Sometimes we got them and sometimes we didn't. It was the chase we were selling. People love that chance to catch a big one," he said.

Back in the '80s all fish were open game, from grouper, amberjack, and blue marlin to red snapper.

With the competition heating up, the number of Rodeo entries grew. In the 32nd Rodeo in 1980, 36 fish were weighed on day one and by the finish the count was at 598.

In 1982, Destin Fishing Rodeo Inc. was formed and the event no longer was run by the Destin Community Center Board.

Chairman of the board for the Rodeo that first year was Melvin Laird. Darlene Raim served as secretary.

"We had to do everything by hand," said Raim, who still serves as a Rodeo volunteer today.

As secretary, it was her job to write down the names of the fishermen, weights of fish and what boat they fished on.

Raim said Bill Sherman was the weighmaster at the time.

"He would climb up and down that post and weigh the fish. It was priceless. … I enjoyed it. It was a lot of fun," Raim said. "Now it's all computerized. It's a great thing what they do now, but it's so big."

Today, the Rodeo has more than 200 spots for anglers to win a prize. In the '80s, there were fewer than 50 spots on the leader board.

In addition to writing down the catches in the Rodeo ledger books, which can now be found at the Destin History and Fishing Museum, Raim would call the radio station in Fort Walton Beach every day and report on who was leading in the Rodeo and who caught the biggest fish.

One of those big catches was recorded in the Rodeo ledger on Day 8 of the 36th annual event. Dr. Earl Brandon of Tuscaloosa, Alabama, hauled in a 343-pound, 8-ounce Warsaw. According to the ledger, it was a Rodeo record breaker.

That same year, Capt. Tommy Klosterman on the Melanie Dawn and his Alabama angler pulled in a 59-pound, 10-ounce grouper for another Rodeo record, according to the ledger.

"In 1985, we caught probably the biggest snapper that had ever been weighed in the Rodeo, a 46-pound, 8-ounce snapper," Windes said. "It was like a freak of nature."

Windes said they caught the snapper on an octopus in 50 fathoms of water on a reef made from a car body that was put there to draw snapper.

The red snapper caught by Lane Nicholes of Clearwater held the All Tackle World Record for more than 10 years, Windes said. Today, red snapper is not even an eligible to be weighed in the Rodeo because of fishing regulations.

But there's still plenty of fish to chase.

Mini Fact: Astronauts are still learning about outer space and other planets.

Are you curious about the world around you? Do you enjoy solving mysteries? Do you like to explore your backyard or neighborhood?

This week, The Mini Page learns about famous explorers.

Good explorers

The best explorers have:

- Curiosity about the unknown.
- Courage to face danger and hardship and not turn back, unless it is wise to do so.
- Wisdom to know when it is too dangerous to continue.
- Determination to solve mysteries in spite of any difficulties they might face.
- Salesmanship to convince sponsors to help pay for their expeditions. Early explorers such as Christopher Columbus got help from a country's rulers. Modern explorers might get help from universities or businesses.

Early explorers

Leif Erikson, a Viking born in Iceland, landed in North America in about 1002.

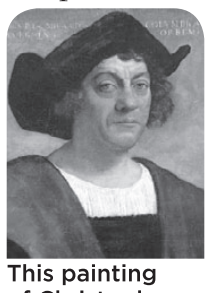
This statue of Leif Erikson stands in Seattle at the Shilshole Bay Marina.

Experts have found evidence of a settlement he and his crew built in Newfoundland, Canada.

Leif was the son of a famous explorer and fighter, Erik the Red.



This painting of Christopher Columbus was made in 1519.

Christopher Columbus made four voyages across the Atlantic Ocean between 1492 and 1506. He explored the West Indies and along the coast of South and Central America. His discoveries led Europeans to new lands.

Modern explorers

Some people think humans have discovered everything there is to find. But modern explorers are looking at:

- Outer space. However, few explorers actually get to go there. Many stay on Earth, designing probes and gathering information.
- The oceans, which are the least known places on Earth and are 99 percent still unexplored. Explorers use new technology to find shipwrecks and life forms no one knew existed.
- The human body. Using advanced tools such as DNA testing, scientists learn about us.
- Rainforests, where experts say there are thousands of species of plants and animals still undiscovered.

Eco Note

The rare sight of a southern right whale frolicking in New Zealand's Wellington Harbor forced officials to postpone the city's annual fireworks display for a week. The untimely arrival of the whale coincided with the Maori new year celebration known as Matariki. Experts worried that the flashes and sounds of the fireworks could cause the whale to harm itself or the boats in the harbor loaded with people.

All the boards this week come from the 2017 Yeh Bros Cup, which is surely the strongest invitational teams event in the world.

The tournament is sponsored by Chen Yeh, who has set up an event that attracts the best teams in the world with generous sponsorship and excellent organization.

Today's deal comes from a match where neither North-South pair could reach the ideal contract. It was up to the defenders to make them pay. If you want to put yourself in the hot seat, look only at the North and East cards.

The eventual winners of the teams event, Eric Kokish and Fred Gitelman, could not get to three no-trump after a strong club sequence where West had bid diamonds, and neither player could identify the half-stopper in diamonds opposite. The other room failed to do so on a natural auction.

Both Wests astutely led diamonds. Both Easts won with their aces and needed to put West in at once to allow him to cash the second diamond winner. In the match we are focusing on, one defender switched to a heart, while the successful defender, Huub Bertens played a spade, declarer's suit.

The spade shift is right both in theory and in practice. Yes, declarer could hold five solid spades and a singleton heart — but then the losers don't go away from dummy, do they? It is the discard from declarer's hand that East has to worry about; if declarer has the heart ace, that is a real possibility.

ANSWER: I cannot see any reason not to lead the unbid suit. In situations like this, I'm torn between leading a high card to deny an honor and a low one so that my partner can work out the count. I'd choose the two here, thinking that my partner may be able to see most of the high honors in his own hand and dummy.

DEAR ABBY

Daughter tired of indulging mom's proselyizing friend

Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: There's this woman I've known since I was a child. She's a Jehovah's Witness I'll call Beatrice. She comes by my house every so often to share pamphlets and talk about her religion. She is a casual friend of my mother's (who I live with), so I feel I have to let her inside when she's at the door. If it were anyone else, I'd say a polite "No, thank you, goodbye," and shut the door. But because it's Beatrice, I'm roped into listening to her spiel.

More often than not, Mom's not even home when Beatrice comes over with her pamphlets because they work similar hours. And each time, I find myself trapped into listening to her jabber away while I politely smile and nod.

Not only am I non-religious, but I am a member of the LGBTQ community, and I know for a fact that Beatrice shunned a family member after he came out as gay.

I don't want to keep pretending I'm interested in listening to her script, or even talking to her in general, but I also don't want to ruin my mother's friendship with her by offending her by being honest.

Is there a polite way to tell Beatrice that, with all due respect, I don't want to hear about her pamphlets, and she should come by to discuss them only when my mom's home? Or must I just continue to smile and nod politely like I always do? — NOT INTERESTED IN NEW ENGLAND

DEAR NOT INTERESTED: No rule of etiquette demands that you listen to Beatrice's religious diatribes. All you need to say to her is, "My mother isn't home, and I'm not interested in taking your pamphlets or hearing you preach. Because you're a friend of Mom's, come back when Mom is home, and be sure to call first."

HOROSCOPES BY HOLIDAY MATHIS

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Framing the truth is a social skill. As it is with all framing, there are decisions to be made about the positioning. Cropping is an option, and it's one you should strongly consider today.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — We are all stuck inside ourselves, though some seem more stuck than others. Empathy isn't just a virtue for better souls; it's also a ticket to living more lives than just the one that we live from behind our own eyeballs.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21) — There are sunk costs to consider -- money, time and energy you'll never get back. Recall them and say one last goodbye. Those sunk costs are a thing of the past and have no bearing on your next step into the future.

CANCER (June 22-July 22) — Though basic daily occurrences seem to have special meaning when you're with someone you love, this does not happen — because — you're with someone you love. Appreciate your own part in the experience.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Trust is a commodity. People who are entrusted are able to do and experience things that distrusted people cannot. Trust that is freely given won't buy much, though earned trust can open entire worlds.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — You'll become sensitive to another person's tendencies and rhythms and be able to predict this person's next move — a form of love, really, as it requires a certain quality of attention to figure out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — As your guiding planet, Venus, communicates freely today, so will you. This communication isn't restricted to loved ones or even humans. You'll be in kinship with animals, rocks, even the sky.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21) — Sociology teaches us that lying is innate. Animals evolve to deceive predators. Sign language-trained gorillas tell fibs, as do toddlers. Today you'll hear lies of little consequence, the sort you'd be gracious to ignore.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — It is said that each person is a world. Though you do enjoy tourism, you'll spend the most time with those whose worlds you understand and relate to. Bonds will be built in realities that are shared, not imposed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Protect your solitude. If you're with even one other person, you won't be completely yourself. Alone, you'll have a sense of spiritual stillness that allows you to get a better feel for what is really worth doing at this time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — It's challenging to save money when there are so many things you need and want. Your increased interests and appetites make this a good time to explore a side business.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Helping others have their fun will be much easier to do when you've helped yourself first. It's wrong, selfish even, to ignore your own need for comfort, pleasure and excitement.

Djokovic wins US Open for 14th major

By Howard Fendrich
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The U.S. Open final suddenly appeared to be slipping away from Novak Djokovic. He dropped three consecutive games. He was angered by a crowd roaring for his popular opponent, Juan Martin del Potro. He was, in short, out of sorts.

And then came Sunday's pivotal game, a 20-minute, 22-point epic. Three times, del Potro was a point from breaking and earning the right to serve to make it a set apiece. Three times, Djokovic steeled himself. Eventually, he seized that game — and del Potro's best chance to make a match of it.

A year after missing the U.S. Open because of an injured right elbow that would require surgery, Djokovic showed that he is unquestionably back at his best and back at the top of tennis. His returns and defense-to-offense skills as impeccable as ever, Djokovic collected his 14th Grand Slam title and second in a row by getting through every crucial moment for a 6-3, 7-6 (4), 6-3 victory over 2009 champion del Potro at Flushing Meadows.

This was Djokovic's third championship in New York, along with those in 2011 and 2015. Add in the trophies he has earned at six Australian Opens, one French Open and four Wimbledons, most recently in July, and the 31-year-old Serb pulled even with Pete Sampras for the third-most majors among men, trailing only Roger Federer's 20 and Rafael Nadal's 17.

"I was hoping he was going to be here, but he's not," Djokovic said about Sampras. "He's my idol. Pete, I love you."

Federer lost in the fourth round in New York, while Nadal retired from his semifinal against del Potro because of a bad right knee. That put the 29-year-old Argentine back in a Grand Slam final for the first time since his breakthrough nine years ago, a comeback for a guy who had four wrist operations in the interim.

"I believe he'll be here again with the champion's trophy. I really do," said Djokovic, who gave his pal a hug at the net, and then went over to console del Potro as he wiped away tears at his sideline seat.

Del Potro spoke this week about the low point, in 2015, when he considered quitting the sport. But supported by a dozen or so friends from back

Fitzpatrick, Bucs stun Saints 48-40

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Ryan Fitzpatrick highlighted a 417-yard, four-touchdown performance with two scoring strikes of more than 50 yards, and the Tampa Bay Buccaneers stunned the New Orleans Saints 48-40 on Sunday.

Starting for the suspended Jameis Winston, Fitzpatrick completed 21 of 28 passes without an interception and also ran for a short touchdown, bowling over free safety Marcus Williams on his way into the end zone.

Saints cornerback Marshon Lattimore, the 2017 defensive rookie of the year, had arguably the worst performance of his career trying to cover receiver Mike Evans, who caught seven passes for 147 yards, including a 50-yard touchdown that put the Bucs up 41-24 late in the third quarter.

DeSean Jackson caught scoring passes of 58 and 36 yards to highlight his five-catch, 146-yard day before leaving with a concussion.

After Jackson's second TD catch over the middle, Fitzpatrick backpedaled giddily for about 20 yards behind the line of scrimmage

Brickyard postponed by rain at Indy

By Jenna Fryer
The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Persistent rain washed out the Brickyard 400 and delayed the conclusion of NASCAR's regular season.

Rain washed out the entire weekend at Indianapolis Motor Speedway and the final race before the playoffs was moved to today. It will run at 1 p.m., after the rescheduled Xfinity Series race.

Indianapolis was drenched by three days of rain and NASCAR has not been able to get any cars on track.

NASCAR's playoffs begin next weekend in Las Vegas and the sanctioning body is eager to get the regular season finale concluded at Indianapolis. The race sets the field for the 16-driver playoffs.

Seminoles survive scare, rally past Samford

By Dustin Kent

TALLAHASSEE — The first Florida State win of the Willie Taggart era was hardly a work of art, and it may inspire even less confidence than Monday's 24-3 home loss to Virginia Tech. But a win is a win, as the saying goes, and despite a poor performance against an overmatched opponent Saturday night at Doak Campbell Stadium, Taggart's Seminoles have their first.

FSU scored 15 points in the last four minutes of action to rally past FCS squad Samford for a 36-26 victory. A 5-yard touchdown pass from Deondre Francois to Tre McKitty put the Seminoles up for good with four minutes to play, and a 63-yard interception return for a touchdown by Levonta Taylor put the game away on the ensuing Samford drive.

The Seminoles (1-1) won despite allowing 525 yards of offense to the Bulldogs and being outgained by 71 yards. They took advantage of five Samford turnovers, including four interceptions by quarterback Devlin Hodges. It wasn't exactly a stellar performance for the Seminoles

SATURDAY'S LATE COLLEGE FOOTBALL

No. 7 Auburn routs Alabama State 63-9

The Associated Press

AUBURN, Ala. — Gus Malzahn was pleased with Auburn's performance in its Week 1 victory over Washington but said in the days following that the running game left some production to be desired, and that it would be the primary focus in practices leading up to the home opener.

The Tigers left no questions on Pat Dye Field about their ability to run the ball Saturday night.

Led by tailback JaTarvious Whitlow's 122 yards and receiver Anthony Schwartz's 117 total yards and two touchdowns, No. 7 Auburn racked up 429 rushing yards and routed Alabama State 63-9.

Starting quarterback Jarrett Stidham played only into the second quarter, with the Tigers (2-0) leading 42-0. The redshirt junior finished 6 of 11 for 113 yards with a passing and rushing score.

Louisville 31, Indiana State 7

The first quarter alone seemed destined to last as long as a full game thanks to three weather delays, and their effect was evident on a Louisville squad that appeared to be treading water. A quick personnel change helped the waterlogged Cardinals regain their focus in time to end a long night on a high note.

Backup quarterback Malik Cunningham accounted for two touchdowns, right tackle Mekhi Becton rushed for a 1-yard TD and Louisville finished strong for rain-delayed victory over Indiana State.

Out of sync offensively for most of a soggy game that featured three first-quarter lightning delays totaling 2 hours, 33 minutes, the Cardinals (1-1) finally found their rhythm late in the third quarter after Cunningham replaced struggling Jawon Pass. The redshirt freshman's 1-yard TD run capped an 11-play, 83-yard drive before the 6-foot-7, 355-pound Becton leaped over the pile early in the fourth quarter to make it 21-7.

Colorado State 34, Arkansas 27

Izzy Matthews scored from a yard out with eight seconds remaining and Colorado State rallied from an 18-point second-half deficit to beat Arkansas. K.J. Carta-Samuels made the play of the night as he absorbed a hit to complete a pass to a diving Preston Williams for a 25-yard gain. It moved the Rams into scoring range and moments later Matthews powered it in. It was the Carta-Samuels-to-Williams show as the duo connected 12 times for 154 yards and two scores.

LSU 31, SE Louisiana 0

Burrow passed for two touchdowns and ran for a short score, and No. 11 LSU rode an opportunistic defensive performance to a victory over Southeastern Louisiana. While the result was never in doubt, LSU's offense lacked consistency and often struggled to sustain drives. The Tigers managed only one first down during their first three possessions of the second half. That could bode ill as LSU (2-0) heads into Southeastern Conference play against Auburn next week. With the first-team offense on the field, LSU had one first down and three punts on its first three drives of the second half.

Missouri 40, Wyoming 13

Missouri quarterback Drew Lock usually dissects defenses with his arm. Wyoming learned the hard way that his legs have a little juice, too. Lock threw four touchdown passes and ran for another TD as the Tigers won. The senior quarterback is known for his gaudy passing numbers, and he added to them against the Cowboys, completing 33 of 45 passes for 398 yards. He added a career-high 51 rushing yards, which was almost half of his total for all of last season.

UCF 38, SC State 0

Adrian Killins Jr. ran for 89 yards and two touchdowns to help No. 19 UCF rout South Carolina State for its 15th straight victory. Killins Jr. scored on runs of 3 and 24 yards in the first quarter. Greg McCrae rushed for 62 yards and a touchdown, and Otis Anderson added 42 yards and a touchdowns as UCF (2-0) racked up 315 rushing yards. UCF held South Carolina State (0-2) to 80 yards passing and 257 total yards. South Carolina State quarterback Tyrece Nick was 5 of 12 for 54 yards and an interception. Backup Dewann Ford threw two interceptions.

No. 10 Stanford 17, No. 17 USC 3

Bryce Love ran for 136 yards and a touchdown and No. 10 Stanford made talented quarterback JT Daniels look like a freshman in a victory over No. 17 Southern California. The Cardinal (2-0, 1-0 Pac-12) got an early touchdown run by Love and then tormented Daniels much of the night, holding USC to its fewest points in this series since a shutout in 1941. Stanford took control of the game late in the second quarter with a strip sack on fourth down against Daniels that set up K.J. Costello's 9-yard touchdown pass to Colby Parkinson that gave Stanford a 14-0 lead.

No. 13 Penn State 51, Pittsburgh 6

Trace McSorley threw for two touchdowns and ran for another as No. 13 Penn State pulled away for a victory over sloppy Pittsburgh.

Hamler ran 32 yards for a score and hauled in a 14-yard touchdown pass from McSorley as the Nittany Lions (2-0) bounced back from an opening week scare against Appalachian State to dominate their 99th meeting with the Panthers (1-1). McSorley finished 14 of 30 for 145 yards in the rain at soggy Heinz Field. Penn State running back Miles Sanders ran for 118 yards, and DeAndre Thompson returned a punt 39 yards for a touchdown.

Arizona State 16, No. 15 Michigan State 13

Brandon Ruiz hit a 28-yard field goal as time expired, Manny Wilkins threw for 380 yards and a touchdown, and Arizona State rallied to beat No. 15 Michigan State. Arizona State (2-0) got the Herm Edwards era off to a rousing start with a 49-7 rout of UTSA in its opener. Faced with a bigger challenge, the Sun Devils never flinched, scoring 13 points in the fourth quarter to knock off the Spartans.

Troy 59, Florida A&M 7

Kaleb Barker threw four touchdown passes and ran for another score, the Troy defense forced turnovers that led to four scores and the Trojans beat Florida A&M. Barker scored on a 1-yard keeper after Shon Spralling blocked a Rattlers' punt, then hit Damion Willis on a 2-yard TD pass after Rasool Clemons recovered a fumble. Tron Folsom's interception set up Barker's 13-yard TD pass to Willis for a 21-0 first-quarter lead. Bishop Bonnett scored Florida A&M's only TD on a 1-yard run early in the second quarter, but Troy (1-1) poured it on from there, scoring 21 unanswered second-half points.

even in victory, though Haggart said that winning in spite of their struggles said a lot for the character of his players.

"It was nice that the guys found a way to win the ballgame," Taggart said. "It wasn't pretty, but it's good to see guys find a way to come back and get a win after starting slow. It was a great team victory. The defense stepped up to get us the ball back and the offense made plays when we needed to make them to get back in that game."

Despite the turnovers, Hodges was often spectacular for the Bulldogs, completing 39 of 60 passes for 475 yards and two touchdowns. His top target, Kelvin McKnight, caught 14 passes for 215 yards and two scores. Francois led the Florida State offense with 320 yards and three touchdowns on 31 of 46 passing, with freshman receiver Tamorrion Terry catching two touchdowns. Cam Akers led the FSU ground game with 76 yards on 14 carries.

It was a disastrous start to the game for the Seminoles, who surrendered a 54-yard touchdown pass from Hodges to a wide open McKnight on the first Samford play from scrimmage. After a quick three-and-out by the FSU offense, the Bulldogs' offense again marched right through the FSU defense with a seven-play, 75-yard scoring drive. Roland Adams' 2-yard touchdown run and Mitchell Fineran's extra point put Samford up 13-0 with 7:49 on the first quarter clock.

FSU got on the board with 4:42 left in the first quarter when Francois delivered a perfect pass down the left sideline to a streaking Terry for a 27-yard touchdown to make it 13-7. After a Fineran field goal, the Seminoles scored again with an eight-play, 70-yard drive culminating in an 8-yard touchdown run by Francois to cut the deficit to 16-14 with 13:56 left in the second quarter.

Samford extended the lead by driving 87 yards on six plays two series later, as Hodges hit McKnight again with a perfect throw on a fade route for a 27-yard touchdown strike to make it 23-14 with 8:37 until halftime. A fumble by Adams in Samford territory gave the Seminoles a chance to get closer late in the first half, with FSU taking advantage of the short field to score on a 17-yard touchdown toss from Francois to Terry to make it 23-21 at the break.

The Seminoles were unable to take the lead in a scoreless third quarter, punting twice, turning it over on downs, and turning it over on a fumble by Akers. FSU had another chance to go in front with 10 minutes left in the fourth quarter, but Ricky Aguayo's 42-yard field goal attempt ricocheted off the right upright for his second consecutive miss.

His counterpart Finegan's 36-yard attempt was true with 7:58 remaining to extend the Samford edge to 26-21, but FSU answered with its best drive of the night, going 82 yards in 11 plays. Francois hit passes of 25 yards to Akers and 21 to McKitty to move the ball into Samford territory at the 29-yard line, with a pair of Akers runs giving FSU a first-and-goal from the 5.

Two plays later, it was third-and-goal at the 5 when Francois hit the sophomore tight end McKitty with a perfect strike in the end zone with 4:03 to play. Francois then hit Nyqwan Murray for the two-point conversion to make it 29-26.

Samford came back with what looked like it could be a game-winning or at least game-tying drive, as Hodges completed his first four passes for 34 yards to move the ball into FSU territory at the 41-yard line. But Hodges' next pass was his most regrettable, as Taylor stepped in front of a throw to the boundary and raced to the end zone for the touchdown with 2:23 to play. The Bulldogs turned the ball over on downs on their next and final series.

FSU will next get back into ACC play next week with a trip to the Carrier Dome to take on Syracuse. A similar effort as the Seminoles gave Saturday would likely not be enough to get their second win of the year, but that's certainly not lost on Taggart.

"We're still nowhere near where we need to be," he said. "It's hard to win a football game, so you should be excited to win when you do. I don't care how you get it. If you win, you get excited and celebrate. But we'll watch the film and try to make corrections from our mistakes and be better the next game. A win is a win, but we have to look at ourselves and try to get better before next week."

before thrusting his arm upward in celebration, seemingly oblivious of the roughing-the-passer penalty called on defensive tackle David Onyemata moments after Fitzpatrick had released the ball.

Fitzpatrick also threw a 9-yard touchdown pass to Chris Godwin.

The Saints, coming off a playoff appearance and hosting a team that won only five games last season, were among the more heavily favored teams in Week 1. They put together a frantic offensive flurry in the fourth quarter. Kamara scored on a 1-yard run and again on a 7-yard catch. Both were followed by 2-point conversions, cutting the Saints' deficit to eight points with 3:31 to go. On third-and-11, Fitzpatrick needed to make one more play — and did. He scrambled to his left for 12 yards at the two-minute warning. With New Orleans out of timeouts, Fitzpatrick was able to run out the clock.

Drew Brees was 37 of45 for 439 yards and three TDs for the Saints. Alvin Kamara, the 2017 offensive rookie of the year, caught nine passes for 112 yards and one touchdown to go with two touchdown runs. Receiver Michael Thomas caught a franchise single-game record 16 passes for 180 yards and a TD, but turned the ball over on a fumble across midfield in the third quarter.

Tampa Bay scored on six of its first seven possessions and the only drive of the first half that did not produce points was when the Bucs ran out the final 55 seconds before halftime. Tampa Bay did not punt until their eighth drive ended with Fitzpatrick overthrowing an open receiver on third down, about halfway through the third quarter.

home, whose "Ole!" choruses rang around the arena, he climbed up the rankings to a career-high No. 3 by thundering his 100 mph (160 kph) forehands and 135 mph (215 kph) serves.

Those produce free points against so many foes. Not against Djokovic, who always seemed to have all the answers.

Djokovic was better than del Potro on their many lengthy exchanges, using his trademark body-twisting, limb-splaying court coverage to get to nearly every ball, sneakers squeaking around the blue court in Arthur Ashe Stadium, where the roof was closed because of rain.

"I was playing almost at the limit, all the time, looking for winners with my forehands, backhands, and I couldn't make it," del Potro said, "because Novak (was) there every time."

Never was that more apparent than the game that stood out on this evening: with Djokovic serving while down 4-3 in the second set. They went back and forth, through eight deuces and all those break opportunities for del Potro, until he slapped one forehand into the net, and another sailed wide.

Those were high-risk shots, but, as del Potro put it: "It's the only way to beat these kind of players."

The game went so long that when it ended, with Djokovic holding to 4-all, spectators began leaving their seats, perhaps thinking it was time for a changeover, even though it wasn't. That prompted to chair umpire Alison Hughes to chastise them.

IN BRIEF

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J.

Wallets open as sports betting meets NFL season

Football fans have their jerseys on and their wallets open as pro football season arrives in places where sports betting is newly legal.

New Jersey won a landmark U.S. Supreme Court case in May clearing the way for all 50 states to offer legal sports betting if they choose.

There was an hour-long line waiting to place bets at Atlantic City's Ocean Resort Casino as kickoff approached.

Chris Matthews of Clementon, New Jersey put $50 a piece on the Browns, Patriots and Packers.

Robert Stovall of Rahway put $100 on the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Phil Henderson of Mahwah put $500 on the other side of that game, picking the New Orleans Saints to win.

Other states where sports betting is currently offered include Nevada, Delaware, Mississippi, and West Virginia.

GENEVA

Record result for clubs with 1st-time profit

In a record result for European soccer, top-tier clubs combined to make a first-time profit of 600 million euros ($694 million) last year with spending on player transfers included.

UEFA research — involving 711 clubs' financial accounts ending in 2017 — showed they turned around a 300-million euro loss ($347 million) the previous year, European soccer's governing body said Sunday.

The clubs' total revenue of 20.1 billion euros ($23.2 billion) extended a trend of annual rises at around 10 percent.

UEFA said 27 of 54 top-tier divisions in its member countries were profitable. That's up from eight in 2011 when UEFA began monitoring accounts of all clubs qualifying to enter the Champions League and Europa League.

"Thanks to Financial Fair Play, European football is healthier than ever before," UEFA President Aleksander Ceferin said in a statement.

Pinot dominates climb to win Vuelta's 15th stage

Thibaut Pinot won the challenging 15th stage of the Spanish Vuelta with a dominant charge on the iconic climb into Lagos de Covadonga on Sunday, while Simon Yates stayed close and added a few seconds to his overall lead.

Pinot broke away under dense fog with about 3.7 miles to go and the Groupama-FDJ rider held on for an impressive victory after a 110.7-mile ride through the Picos de Europa mountains in northern Spain.

He crossed the line 28 seconds in front of Miguel Angel Lopez and 30 seconds ahead of Yates. Alejandro Valverde was fourth, 32 seconds off the lead.

Stewart, Storm beat Mystics for 2-0 series lead

By Tim Booth
The Associated Press

SEATTLE — Breanna Stewart scored nine of her 25 points in the fourth quarter, and the Seattle Storm held off the Washington Mystics 75-73 on Sunday to take a 2-0 lead in the WNBA Finals.

Seattle will head to Washington for Game 3 on Wednesday night needing only a split back east to claim the third title in franchise history.

Stewart went nearly 18 minutes of game time without scoring, but was responsible for six of Seattle's final seven points as the Storm held off Washington's late rally. Seattle led 70-65 after Stewart's hook in the lane with 4:25 left, and was the Storm's last field goal. Washington's Kristi Toliver made two difficult jumpers in the final 90 seconds to keep Washington within one, but the Mystics were unable to get a shot up on their next possession trailing 74-73, when Toliver lost the ball going baseline and a mad scramble led to a jump ball Seattle won.

The ensuing jump ball between Natasha Howard and Tianna Hawkins ended up in the hands of Jewell Loyd. Seattle was able to run seven seconds off the clock before Alysha Clark was fouled and her free throw gave Seattle a two-point lead. Washington was out of timeouts and couldn't advance the ball into the front court.
