Husfelt: DOH took records

School district calls for state investigation into health department

By Eryn Dion

PANAMA CITY — Bay District Schools officials have accused Florida Department of Health of Bay County (DOH-Bay) employees of gaining unauthorized access to school health rooms and taking student health care records, with Superintendent Bill Husfelt now calling for an investigation by the state's Office of the Inspector General.

The accusations have come to light as part of a records request made by The News Herald.

Emails from Husfelt to the inspector general's office show 16 individuals at more than a dozen schools reporting they witnessed DOH-Bay RN's or health technicians go into their health rooms and remove items. The individuals reported they were then unable to locate the paper copies of the student health records, which are used as the basis to draft new individual health care plans (IHCPs).

The allegations are the latest in a back-and-forth after the entities failed to reach an agreement to continue their contract to provide health technicians in each of the district's schools. Because of several changes proposed in the new contract — namely the health department's refusal to treat Exceptional Student Education (ESE) students — the MEXICO BEACH — Crews might need until the end of Friday to unclog Mexico Beach Canal of fish likely killed by a toxic red tide algae bloom on Tuesday.

Mexico Beach Mayor Al Cathey said the cleanup, which began Wednesday, would be long and intensive because workers have had to remove the fish by hand with nets since machinery can't fit in the canal. Meanwhile, the dead fish and the possible threat of more from another red tide has Cathey and some tourism advocates worried about a drop in visitors to the city and their wallets.

Hollywood is still soul-searching

What's changed in the year since allegations surfaced against Harvey Weinstein?

By Jake Coyle
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — After Rashida Jones exited Pixar's "Toy Story 4" in 2017 she noted that the studio, after 25 years in business, had not made a single feature film directed by a woman, calling it "a culture where women and people of color do not have an equal creative voice."

So when Pixar co-founder and CEO John Lasseter stepped down earlier this year after acknowledging "missteps" in his behavior with employees, he was more than another casualty in the long list of film industry power players toppled by the #MeToo movement. He was a symbol of a Hollywood culture that is dying — or at least under siege.

"These giant, multi-billion-dollar companies, they all need a makeover," Jones now says. "And I think people are starting to recognize that. To me, that is a victory. Brave people have come forward and made this whole machine start to question itself."

In the year since sexual assault allegations surfaced against Harvey Weinstein, Hollywood has been soul-searching. The Weinstein case — along with those of Kevin Spacey, CBS' Les Moonves, Amazon Studios' Roy Price and many others — laid bare the painful reality for countless women in a movie industry where gender inequality was systematic and pervasive.

In this May 12 photo, 82 film industry professionals stand on the steps of the Palais des Festivals to represent what they describe as pervasive gender inequality in the film industry, at the Cannes Film Festival in Cannes, France. [PHOTO BY VIANNEY LE CAER/INVISION/ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE]

The #MeToo movement has gone far beyond the movies, but Hollywood remains ground zero in a cultural eruption that began 12 months ago with the Weinstein revelations, published by The New York Times and The New Yorker. Through interviews with actresses, filmmakers, producers and others, The Associated Press sought to assess whether it is a palpably different place today than a year ago.

"Definitely there's been a seismic shift," says Carey Mulligan, the British actress. "I feel like if I was walking down the street and someone said something or did something outside the bounds of appropriate, I would feel so much more empowered to tell them to (stop) while before I probably wouldn't. Those sort of gray area things are now no longer gray areas."

Mulligan, who played an early 20th century women's rights activist in 2015's "Suffragette" and has herself been vocal about Hollywood's pay gap, says that in every job she's had for the last year, there's been a well-known code of conduct on set. She's optimistic that more change is coming.

Researchers at the University of Southern California's Annenberg Inclusion Initiative have not yet found any marked difference in female representation on screen, behind the camera or in the boardroom.

More data after the end of the year will give a clearer picture of 2018, but the previous 20 years have shown almost zero change. At least anecdotally, studios and production companies are more aggressively hunting for female filmmakers. Salma Hayek has said her production company has been struggling to find female writers and directors. They're all already booked.

"Everybody's looking for their female content," says Jones, whose documentary "Quincy" was recently released by Netflix. "They're starting to understand that content that's created by and shepherded by women and people of color is super underrepresented in the business. And everybody's scrambling to try to fix that."

Measuring cultural change in a far-flung, $50 billion industry is difficult. Many of the epicenters of the movie business — red carpets, film festivals, award shows — have struck a different tone in the wake of Weinstein. While "who are you wearing?" has steadily crept back into the red-carpet lexicon a year after women wore black to the Golden Globes, protest has engulfed many of the frothiest events on the movie calendar, from the Oscars to the Cannes Film Festival.

But some see a limit to what such demonstrations can accomplish.

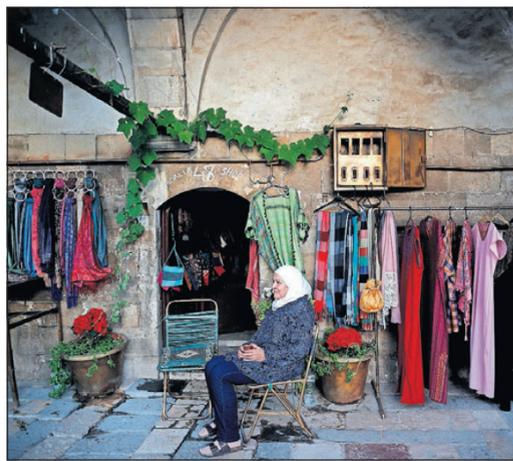

"It's a great thing when you're on the red carpet and people are talking about sexual assault. At least it's out in the open," says actress Viola Davis. "My fear is that people feel like the focus of sexual assault is just on actresses in Hollywood and studio execs like Weinstein."

She worries about the movement becoming limited to "outing the men, putting them in the court of public opinion and just destroying their careers. It's way bigger than that. One out of every 4 women — and there's some statistics that say it's 1 out of 3 — will be sexually assaulted by the time they're 18."

Like many revolutions before it, #MeToo has sought to codify permanent changes. The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences instituted a code of conduct and booted not only Weinstein but Bill Cosby and Roman Polanski.

Some Florida beaches remain shut as red tide lingers

A rare outbreak of red tide along Florida's Atlantic Coast is keeping beaches closed.

Palm Beach County officials said Wednesday that beaches will remain closed until Friday. At least six beaches have been closed since the weekend and had been expected to reopen Wednesday.

Red tide is caused by algae and is common on Florida's Gulf Coast. It was hit hard over the summer by an outbreak that caused a massive die-off of fish and other sea life. It also caused breathing problems in some humans. There have been 57 Gulf Coast outbreaks since 1953.

Red tide is uncommon on the state's Atlantic Coast, with only eight outbreaks since 1953. The last outbreak in Palm Beach County was 10 years ago.

Police: Mom fills son's sippy cup with alcohol, gets drunk

Police in suburban Atlanta say a woman filled her son's sippy cup with an alcoholic beverage, sneaked it into a movie theater and became so drunk she couldn't walk, talk or care for the 5-year-old.

News outlets quote a Cobb County police arrest warrant as saying Kristina Gibson is wanted on charges including public intoxication. Police say Gibson also possibly combined the drink with prescription drugs.

Sgt. Wayne Delk says a theater employee called police after moviegoers complained because Gibson's son was crying.

Gunman convicted of shooting at African immigrants

An Italian man with extreme right-wing views has been convicted in a shooting rampage targeting immigrants and sentenced to 12 years in prison.

The 28-year-old Luca Traini was arrested by police in the main square of the central city of Macerata following the rampage that injured six immigrants and terrorized the city last February. The sentence included an aggravating circumstance of racial hatred.

Police said the suspect claimed to have been acting out of revenge after a Nigerian immigrant was arrested on suspicion of killing and dismembering an 18-year-old woman whose remains had been found days earlier.

Putin replaces St Petersburg governor as part of reshuffle

Russian President Vladimir Putin has replaced the long-time governor of the nation's second-largest city, the latest move in the Kremlin's reshuffle of regional leaders.

The 65-year-old Georgy Poltavchenko has served as governor of St. Petersburg for seven years. Putin named longtime aide Alexander Beglov, who had been the presidential envoy to northwestern Russia, as acting governor pending local elections next September.

Putin named Poltavchenko, a KGB veteran, to head the state-controlled United Shipbuilding Corp.

In recent weeks, Putin has reshuffled many provincial governors in what was widely seen as part efforts to contain growing public discontent amid economic troubles.

4 men arrested in Virginia violence, called 'serial rioters'

Four California men described as "serial rioters" are facing federal charges after prosecutors say they flew across the country for a white nationalist rally in Virginia last year and violently attacked counterprotesters.

Federal agents arrested the men Tuesday, and prosecutors identified them as members of the Rise Above Movement, a militant white supremacist group they said espouses anti-Semitic and other racist views and meets regularly to train in boxing and other fighting techniques.

Bolton said the administration also was pulling out of an amendment to the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations that Iran or others, notably the Palestinians, could use to sue the U.S. at The Hague-based tribunal. Bolton told reporters at the White House that the provision violates U.S. sovereignty.

"The United States will not sit idly by as baseless politicized claims are brought against us," Bolton said. He cited a case brought to the court by the "so-called state of Palestine" challenging the move of the U.S. Embassy in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem as the main reason for withdrawing.

Bolton, who last month unleashed a torrent of criticism against the International Criminal Court, noted that previous Republican administrations had pulled out of various international agreements and bodies over "politicized cases." He said the administration would review all accords that might subject the U.S. to prosecution by international courts or panels.

Earlier, Pompeo denounced the Iranian case before the U.N. court as "meritless" and said the Treaty of Amity was meaningless and absurd.

"The Iranians have been ignoring it for an awfully long time, we ought to have pulled out of it decades ago," he told reporters at the State Department.

The little-known treaty with Iran was among numerous such ones signed in the wake of World War II as the Truman and Eisenhower administrations tried to assemble a coalition of nations to counter the Soviet Union.

Like many of the treaties, this one was aimed at encouraging closer economic relations and regulating diplomatic and consular ties.

been here all my life and I've never seen anything like this."

According to the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission's Wednesday report, medium concentrations of Karenia brevis, the algae responsible for red tide, were detected in Bay County near Mexico Beach. Medium concentrations of red tide are enough to kill fish and cause respiratory irritation. The algae also was detected offshore in other parts of Northwest Florida, including Okaloosa, Walton and Gulf counties. Three-day forecasts for Northwest Florida predict minimal transport of surface waters and northeastern movement of subsurface waters from Escambia to western Gulf counties, the report states.

But on Wednesday, the red tide still could be felt in Mexico Beach. "You can smell the fish stench, but you can tell the red tide is present, especially if you have respiratory issues," Cathey said.

Cathey said the city has limited manpower and had to rely on a crew of 16 inmates from the Bay County Jail to remove fish on Wednesday.

"They were picking them up and dropping them in cans and buckets, then dumping them in backhoes," Cathey said. "We talked to people who have equipment, but they can't get into our canal."

Cathey said the fish were being dumped in a nearby pit dug on city property. Based on the work done Wednesday, the cleanup might not be finished until the end of Friday, he said.

"This is a massive endeavor," Cathey said.

Bay County Sheriff Tommy Ford said he would continue to lend the inmates, usually used to clean streets, to Mexico Beach for the next few days. "We're working with them to help them out," Ford said. "This is kind of a unique situation."

Cathey noted that, in addition to the inmates, the city would have workers from a private company help with the cleanup today and Friday. He said the Mexico Beach Community Development Council would pay for the workers. "We are being proactive in our efforts to clean up the fish kills on the beach and in the canal," said Kimberly Shoaf, president of the development council, tasked with promoting tourism in the city. "We're taking all measures we can — the cleanup effort is our top priority."

Shoaf said she's concerned about how the latest fish kills and possible future kills from persistent red tide could slow tourism. "We've been filtering a good number of calls and emails the last couple of weeks and it's gotten heavier today because of the reporting of fish kills," Shoaf said Wednesday. "People are asking if it's safe and if they need to make alternate plans."

Cathey said he also was worried about tourism in his city. "October is a pretty month and there's nothing more unsightly than walking down the canal and seeing dead fish," Cathey said. "It certainly can affect the economy."

RECORDS

district instead opted in August to contract with PanCare Inc. for health technician services.

Husfelt called the situation "dangerous" on Wednesday in an interview, saying he only wants to get to the bottom of who took the records and what was done with them.

"I've been working for months to get that answer," he said of his decision to appeal to the state. "And I finally said, 'Alright, I'm going to put it in someone else's hands who has the authority.'"

Husfelt formally requested the investigation last Thursday and received confirmation that it would be looked at the following day.

Heather Kretzer, public information officer for DOH-Bay, said DOH-Bay officials were aware of the allegations and while their investigations did not bring to light any evidence to support the claim, they too reached out to the inspector general's office and asked they complete an inquiry.

"The request was granted and they are currently conducting their inquiry," Kretzer said. "The results of this inquiry will be public record."

Allegations of disappearing health records began on Aug. 14, according to both emails and a timeline provided to the Inspector General's Office, when Merritt Brown Middle School Principal Charlotte Marshall reported that the school's new PanCare health technician discovered the binder with IHCPs and emergency care plans (ECPs) was missing after a visit from a health department nurse.

Everitt Middle School sent in a similar report that same day, prompting Assistant Superintendent Denise Kelley to ask administrators to check on their records. The request yielded an additional 12 schools that reported their IHCPs missing.

"The health department came and removed those files from our campus yesterday," wrote Rutherford Assistant Principal Andrea Banks in one email.

"Health Dept. nurse came by to pick up their computer and our records are gone, too," wrote Patronis Principal Eleanor Spivey in another email.

In a series of emails between School Board Attorney Heather Hudson and health department counsel Ralph Schofield, Hudson relayed several instances of health department nurses allegedly entering campuses "under false pretenses" and removing records.

"I am assuming they are not doing this under your advice," Hudson wrote. "As I trust that you would not advise your client to steal education records from the school district. But I must ask your assistance in advising that this stop immediately and that the records be returned."

In several tense exchanges between Husfelt and health department Director Doug Kent, Kent denied knowing that any records were taken, stating several times that the records were available electronically. According to the documents, when this was checked, it was discovered that the student health plans had been ended without the district's knowledge or parent consent and all would need to be re-activated.

"Doug, the more we dig into this the more we're finding out that records have been taken all during the summer," Husfelt wrote on Aug. 14. "I don't know who or when or how but I need those records back immediately."

"As you said, I certainly hope you had nothing to do with this, but I find it immoral, unconscionable, unethical, illegal and highly suspect why this would happen!" he added later.

"As one man of faith to another," Kent wrote back on Aug. 16. "I have investigated each allegation that my nurses removed IHCP and tried to sabotage future efforts. I have reviewed items of the HST manuals removed and (then) personally investigated all situations with the nurses. No items of IHCP were removed, nor copies IHCP were removed."

Husfelt thanked the school district's new provider, PanCare Inc., for its help in identifying the lost records, bringing it to the district's attention and efforts in working with the district.

"Whoever has been playing games with these records has literally been playing with a very dangerous situation," Husfelt said. "We are just trying to take care of and protect our students."

Cost the real culprit in health care

Medicare for all is the newest Democratic Party talking point. Gubernatorial candidate Andrew Gillum has adopted the favorite line of democratic socialist Sen. Bernie Sanders.

But it's wildly unrealistic and would do little to deal with the high costs of health care without rationing.

The first reason Medicare for All is unrealistic is that it would have to scrap the entire health insurance system in the country. The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, Obamacare, was designed to deal with those uninsured Americans not covered by employer health insurance, Medicare or Medicaid. It's a relatively small number of Americans, but under the previous system, some uninsured Americans were threatened by bankruptcy with high health care bills. This is the segment that needs affordable health insurance.

There are reasonable proposals in Congress to deal with the uninsured and make Obamacare work better, but they haven't been able to gain wide support. At issue is the incredible complexity of U.S. health care. The United States actually has several different health insurance systems:

- Employer-provided insurance, funded in part with federal tax incentives.
- Medicare for those 65 and older.
- Medicaid, which covers certain low-income people.
- Military systems, including the Veterans Administration and TriCare for active military.
- Individual policies in which people often don't receive the advantages of mass discounts and negotiation.

A Medicare for All proposal was considered in Sanders' home state of Vermont but dropped because it was too expensive. The cost of Medicare for All has been estimated at $30 trillion over 10 years, which would require a doubling of federal taxes.

Beyond the gigantic tax increase, proposals resume a drop in expenses. For instance, reducing provider fees would cause a drop in access.

The real problem with the U.S. health care is that high prices are baked into the system. Cutting prices means a cut in someone's profits.

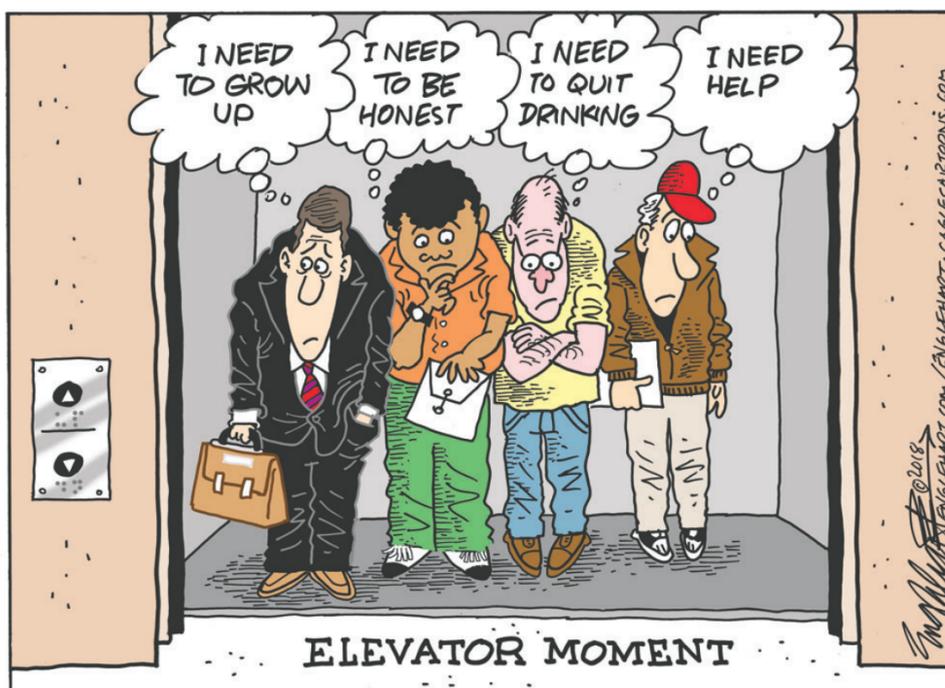

Here are some facts from The Wall Street Journal:

- Health care overtook retail as America's largest industry. That equates to a powerful lobbying force for the status quo. The only segment big enough to challenge the health care industry is business itself.
- Prices for health care started rising faster than inflation in 1960s. Drug prices have risen the fastest. In response, some large companies have started their own insurance networks and drug providers.
- Lack of transparency frustrates the effort to control prices. A consumer, faced with a diagnosis of appendicitis, does not have time to solicit bids and analyze treatment alternatives.

However, as much as 40 percent of care could allow for shopping, such as joint replacements or non-emergency MRIs, but what seems more practical is to give physicians the price and quality information and give them bonuses for recommending tests and procedures that save money.

Little lies mean a lot in court battle

Froma Harrop

Kavanaugh

Brett Kavanaugh's fraught relationship with the truth took another hit Sunday, when a classmate from Yale called the Supreme Court nominee's claim of being a moderate drinker in college a "blatant mischaracterization." Under oath, Kavanaugh said he was too busy being angelic — studying and playing sports — to get stumbling drunk.

"On many occasions I heard Brett slur his words and saw him staggering from alcohol consumption, not all of which was beer," Chad Ludington, a fellow athlete, wrote in a statement.

The drunk Kavanaugh also would turn belligerent. In one episode, Ludington recalled, he threw a beer in the face of a man who had made a semi-hostile remark.

It is a mark of the habitual liar to tell untruths that don't even advance one's cause.

I wouldn't want to saddle anyone with the stupid things they did in high school or college.

Drinking to excess is commonplace.

It's certainly not a hanging offense if the person has since shaped up.

But Kavanaugh lied and lied in a shockingly casual manner. One example was his assertion that drinking at the age of 18, which he did much of, was legal. It took no time to check the fact that Maryland had by then raised the drinking age to 21.

Sexually assaulting a female student would cross the line of forgivable high school misdeeds. On that, we await the results of an FBI probe into Christine Blasey Ford's accusation that Kavanaugh violently attacked her while in high school.

In the meantime, we can sift through the pile of fresh lies delivered under oath. And we can wonder why there are so many.

Kavanaugh told the senators his yearbook mentions of boofing and a devil's triangle referred to farting and a drinking game, respectively. Neither is true. Boofing means sticking alcohol or drugs in one's rectum. And a devil's triangle is three-way sex involving one woman and two men.

A high school boy with a dirty mind? No big deal. A man nominated for the Supreme Court baldly lying about what he meant? A big deal.

Kavanaugh's yearbook reference to being a "Renate Alumnus" was brutally cruel. Renate was a girl from a nearby Catholic school. Boys in his crowd boasted of having had their way with her.

Kavanaugh insisted his words were intended "to show affection" and that all he and Renate shared was "a brief kiss good night." The grown-up Renate rejects that explanation and insists they never kissed.

Kavanaugh's show of self-control took a dive toward the hearing's end when he flew into a red-faced tantrum. He accused Democrats — singling out the Clintons — of seeking revenge against him over Donald Trump's election.

To be sure, Democrats don't want him on the Supreme Court. It's worth noting, however, that Trump's first Supreme Court pick, Neil Gorsuch, sailed through with minimal drama.

Compare Kavanaugh's character with that of Merrick Garland, the Obama nominee Republicans refused to even interview. Garland hung in limbo for 10 months as Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell bragged about telling Obama, "You will not fill this Supreme Court vacancy."

Now we have a nominee who clearly lacks the temperament to act as an impartial justice. And that's on top of his sea of lies. Whatever the FBI does or does not come up with, Kavanaugh has shown himself clearly unfit to serve on the U.S. Supreme Court.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Cosby saga has inherent lessons

The trial and conviction of Bill Cosby is a long and sad story, although there are a few lessons that can be learned.

The first is the reality that even your heroes are fallible and that "Stranger Danger" is more likely to be "all people can be is dangerous."

It is sad that we should all be cautious of everyone as the result of a few people's actions. This is another story of the status of being celebrity, which seems to give an immunity to the normal laws and code of behavior of most people.

It is pleasing to see that this is not the legal reality and that they are subject to the same rules and, more importantly, punishments.

The 60 or more women who told similar stories shows how the #metoo movement and the need to speak up is so important, although no one should be condemned for not doing so. There is also a need to review that statute of limitations, as the crime is still an event that occurred and the consequences and pain may be never ending.

Comedians can be funny, but sexual assailants are not funny; they are evil without doubt.

READER FEEDBACK

Nancy Meither, 66, was last seen Friday at about 10 p.m. beach side. She was last seen wearing a black and gray one-piece swimsuit behind the Sunbird Condominiums, 9850 S. Thomas Drive. Anyone with information should contact PCBPD at 850-233-5000.

Jami Raulerson: Prayers for answers.

Shelly Moses: How heartbreaking. I can't believe they still haven't found her Diana Gregor: Prayers aren't going to help this lady; good police work will.

Red tide has lightened along Panama City Beach, but Crooked Island Beach and Mexico Beach are now seeing an increase.

BobbiJo Lord: Like we all do every few years.

Two children died just hours apart Friday in hot cars in separate incidents in Orange County and Sandford. One woman is facing a charge of negligent manslaughter.

Serena Rivera: All of the hot car "accidents" should carry a charge! There's NO excuses. I am a mother of two girls; ...=. They have always been my first priority. I never once forgot them. Let's say I was too stressed or in a hurry and I did forget them. You would think at some point before they died, I would have thought about my kids! "Oh, I wonder how their day is. ... Crap! I forgot them in the car!" Or at work, I talk about my kids; that would make me remember. This is an awful way to die! It breaks my heart.

Kim Collins Hutto: I can't fathom this. I just can't. I never forgot my child when he was baby or toddler or any time. He was even a good quiet baby (unless hungry) and yet STILL I always had him on my mind in the car. It could be random thoughts of your child or I wonder if he's gonna need to eat before we get there. ... Just random things go through your mind as a parent. As a mother, I don't see how you forget them. In fact, I can't tell you how many times I've gone to get him out the back and realize, "Oh, he's with grandma today."

WASHINGTON Survey: US companies added 230K jobs last month

U.S. businesses added a robust 230,000 jobs in September, a private survey found, a sign that strong economic growth is spurring companies to add more workers.

Payroll processor ADP said Wednesday that September's job gain was the most in seven months.

It followed 168,000 new jobs in August, a figure that was revised slightly higher.

Hiring was strong across most major industries. Construction firms added 34,000 jobs, while professional and business services, which includes higher-paying jobs such as engineering and accounting as well as temp workers, added a strong 70,000.

Education and health services added 44,000 jobs.

It's time to meet the farmers of the future: Robots

By Michael Liedtke
The Associated Press

SAN CARLOS, Calif. — Brandon Alexander would like to introduce you to Angus, the farmer of the future. He's heavyset, weighing in at nearly 1,000 pounds, not to mention a bit slow. But he's strong enough to hoist 800-pound pallets of maturing vegetables and can move them from place to place on his own.

Sure, Angus is a robot. But don't hold that against him, even if he looks more like a large tanning bed than C-3PO.

To Alexander, Angus and other robots are key to a new wave of local agriculture that aims to raise lettuce, basil and other produce in metropolitan areas while conserving water and sidestepping the high costs of human labor. It's a big challenge, and some earlier efforts have flopped. Even Google's "moonshot" laboratory, known as X, couldn't figure out how to make the economics work.

After raising $6 million and tinkering with autonomous robots for two years, Alexander's startup Iron Ox says it's ready to start delivering crops of its robotically grown vegetables to people's salad bowls. "And they are going to be the best salads you ever tasted," says the 33-year-old Alexander, a one-time Oklahoma farmboy turned Google engineer turned startup CEO.

Iron Ox planted its first robot farm in an 8,000-square-foot warehouse in San Carlos, California, a suburb located 25 miles south of San Francisco. Although no deals have been struck yet, Alexander says Iron Ox has been talking to San Francisco Bay area restaurants interested in buying its leafy vegetables and expects to begin selling to supermarkets next year.

The San Carlos warehouse is only a proving ground for Iron Ox's long-term goals. It plans to set up robot farms in greenhouses that will rely mostly on natural sunlight instead of high-powered indoor lighting that sucks up expensive electricity. Initially, though, the company will sell its produce at a loss in order to remain competitive.

During the next few years, Iron Ox wants to open robot farms near metropolitan areas across the U.S. to serve up fresher produce to restaurants and supermarkets. Most of the vegetables and fruit consumed in the U.S. is grown in California, Arizona, Mexico and other nations. That means many people in U.S. cities are eating lettuce that's nearly a week old by the time it's delivered.

There are bigger stakes as well. The world's population is expected to swell to 10 billion by 2050 from about 7.5 billion now, making it important to find ways to feed more people without further environmental impact, according to a report from the World Resources Institute.

Iron Ox, Alexander reasons, can be part of the solution if its system can make the leap from its small, laboratory-like setting to much larger greenhouses.

The startup relies on a hydroponic system that conserves water and automation in place of humans who seem increasingly less interested in U.S. farming jobs that pay an average of $13.32 per hour, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Nearly half of U.S. farmworkers planting and picking crops aren't in the U.S. legally, based on a survey by the U.S. Department of Labor.

The heavy lifting on Iron Ox's indoor farm is done by Angus, which rolls about the indoor farm on omnidirectional wheels. Its main job is to shuttle maturing produce to another, as-yet unnamed robot, which transfers plants from smaller growing pods to larger ones, using a mechanical arm whose joints are lubricated with "food-safe" grease.

It's a tedious process to gently pick up each of the roughly 250 plants on each pallet and transfer them to their bigger pods, but the robot doesn't seem to mind the work. Iron Ox still relies on people to clip its vegetables when they are ready for harvest, but Alexander says it is working on another robot that will eventually handle that job too.

Strong economic signs lift US stocks

By Marley Jay
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Encouraging reports on hiring and growth in the service sector sent small companies and banks higher Wednesday and knocked bond prices into a tailspin. The yield on the benchmark 10-year Treasury note spiked to its highest level in more than seven years.

Both reports were stronger than analysts expected and suggest the economy is in good shape in spite of rising interest rates and oil prices, and the ongoing trade dispute between the U.S. and China.

The S&P 500 index added 2.08 points, or 0.1 percent, to 2,925.51. The Dow Jones Industrial Average gained 54.45 points, or 0.2 percent, to 26,828.39, another all-time high. It was up as much as 177 points earlier. The Nasdaq composite picked up 25.54 points, or 0.3 percent, to 8,025.09.

The Russell 2000 index of small-company stocks climbed 15.25 points, or 0.9 percent, to 1,671.29. Those companies, which tend to be more focused on the U.S. market than large multinationals, stand to benefit more from strong economic growth at home. The Russell has fallen since the end of August as investors have grown less worried about trade tensions between the U.S. and other countries.

The survey on private company hiring by ADP raised expectations for the government's broader jobs report due out on Friday, which tends to have an even bigger effect on markets. The Institute for Supply Management, the trade group, said its index measuring the service sector reached the highest level in a decade.

The solid reports helped companies that do better when businesses and consumers spend more money, like technology and industrial stocks. Apple rose 1.2 percent to $232.07 and Caterpillar rose 2.2 percent to $158.22.

Calif. law on company boards spotlights challenges

By Alexandra Olson
and Matt Ott
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — California's new law requiring companies to include women on their boards of directors may not survive widely expected legal challenges but it has already spotlighted the entrenched practices and barriers that have helped keep women out of boardrooms.

Some of the country's best-known companies, along with many smaller ones, will have to overcome such obstacles to comply with the new measure, which requires public corporations headquartered in California to have at least one female director on their board by the end of next year. Companies with more than three board members would need three female directors by the end of 2021. Those with fewer than six members would need two women.

After years of public and internal pressure to increase gender parity at the top of the corporate ranks, few of the biggest companies have zero female board directors. But men vastly outnumber women on boards across nearly every industry, a landscape that has remained stubbornly unchanged despite years of debate and studies on the subject.

Facebook, Apple and Google's parent company Alphabet are among the several hundred companies headquartered in California that would have to add women to their boards by 2021 to comply with the law.

The law imposes a $100,000 fine for a first violation and a $300,000 penalty for subsequent violations, not huge sums for major corporations. Nevertheless, companies will likely begin efforts to comply with the law even as they keep track of — or participate in — legal efforts to block it, said Wendy Patrick, a professor of business ethics at San Diego State University.

Those efforts will push companies to work through obstacles frequently cited by corporate executives, including finding a wide pool of female talent, particularly in industries that are male-dominated from top to bottom. In the short term, Davis said the law might serve as catalyst for widening the pool if it encourages more women to seek out board positions. In the long term, the law will encourage companies to more aggressively recruit and retain women in all ranks, she said.

"Maybe this will encourage women to step up who otherwise never thought they had a shot," Patrick said.

Women held about 20 percent of board seats at Fortune 500 companies in 2016, according to the most recent census by the Alliance of Board Diversity. That was up from just under 17 percent in 2012, according to the study, which was conducted with Deloitte, an auditing, taxes and consulting services provider.

Among California-based companies, many of the top companies already have at least three women on their boards, including Walt Disney, Chevron, Oracle, HP Inc. and Twitter. Those with only two female directors include Facebook, Apple and Alphabet.

GCSC prepares future teachers

PANAMA CITY — With teacher shortages plaguing the nation and Bay County, Gulf Coast State College is reminding people looking to make a career change about programs they offer to those with an interest in teaching.

“If they’re looking for a job in education, education is really in need of them,” said Patricia Schenck, coordinator of the Educator Preparation Institute (EPI). “All of the districts that we work with tell us this. All of the districts are hurting for teachers. I can guarantee you there are positions out there. There’s a need for teachers.”

EPI offers a Transition to Teaching program geared toward anyone who already has a bachelor’s degree in any field, and is looking for a career change or has an interest in beginning a career in education.

“This is a state-approved, alternative teacher certification program which assists people that already have a four-year degree from a state-approved and accredited institution, and at least a 2.5 GPA, a way to get K12 teacher certification,” said Teresa Salter, EPI assistant instructional coordinator.

A transcript of the applicant’s earned bachelor’s degree and background clearance also are required.

The program consists of nine online courses with a required in-person session once a month. Students will be tasked with completing a field experience in their last semester, which will have students in the classroom of their chosen field under the guidance of a certified teacher “mentor” of the same discipline and will have a chance to implement their own lesson plan.

Schenck says this isn’t just an online degree program where you pay a fee and pace yourself.

“In order for a teacher to be prepared for the classroom, we have to document that Trial opens in theft of meth

PANAMA CITY — Accused of helping steal more than 20 gallons of liquid methamphetamine from a DEA crime scene, a Georgia man appeared in federal court Wednesday for the first day of his trial on conspiracy to distribute a controlled substance.

Christopher Bryan Langston, of Georgia, was in court to select a jury. He was arrested in 2017 along with Kendrick Travelle Carter, of Jacksonville, and Willie Wesley Pennywell, of Panama City, after about 20 gallons of “liquid methamphetamine” came up missing from a DEA-raided Georgia house after authorities had a chemical cleanup company, SWS Environmental Services, work the site to secure hazardous materials. Langston is the only remaining defendant to plead not guilty in the case, and Carter and Pennywell are expected to testify against him during the trial.

In November 2017, Langston denied the allegations in an FBI interview, according to official reports.

“Langston claimed that prior to departing to the chemical cleanup in Georgia, (a co-worker) informed him and Carter to acquire the methamphetamine and bring it back to SWS,” prosecutors wrote. “Langston claimed that he and Carter left all the chemicals at SWS. Langston admitted that Carter had given him $1,000 but he

BCSO: Painkillers, cash, meth, heroin seized

PANAMA CITY — A series of search warrants have resulted in the seizure of thousands of pain pills, cash and large amounts of methamphetamine and heroin, according to reports from the Bay County Sheriff’s Office.

Shawn D. Mosley, 35, of Panama City; Darnell J. Riggins, 37, of Panama City Beach; Quantavious G. Fuller, 38, of Albany, Georgia; Jason S. Plumadore, 35, of Panama City Beach; and David G. Sharpe, 31, of Panama City, were arrested in the cases. They face a litany of trafficking and possession of narcotics charges, which could expose some of them to decades in prison. BCSO reported their arrests stemmed from serving a series of “unrelated” search warrants over the course of three days.

“They got quite a bit of drugs off the streets, including some of the more dangerous drugs that we talk about,” Bay County Sheriff Tommy Ford said of the Special Investigations Division (SID). “... They’re out there doing this every day, taking drug dealers off our streets. But this was a good week with some significant seizures.”

Ford said that a recent trend among the drug-user community that has emerged through seizures are “pressed pills.” Officers had identified a couple dozen orange pills without markings suspected of being heroin. Ford said that the novelty recently has been fentanyl, a synthetic opioid that is 80-100 times stronger than morphine, combined with cocaine into a pressed pill.

According to BCSO reports,

IN BRIEF

MIAMI
State: Oriental fruit flies eradicated from Miami area
 Florida officials said an invasive and destructive agricultural pest has been eradicated from Miami-area farmlands. Oriental fruit flies were discovered in monitoring traps in Miami-Dade County's Redland area in June. In a statement

Tuesday, Florida Agriculture Commissioner Adam Putnam said the outbreak had been stopped without the need for quarantine. To kill the flies, bait was spread on utility poles, trees and other objects around the traps where the first flies were found. The Oriental fruit fly (Bactrocera dorsalis) is considered one of the world's most serious agricultural pests because of the potential economic harm. They lay eggs in more than 430 different fruits, vegetables and nuts, ruining them for human consumption. An outbreak in 2015 and 2016 in Miami-Dade County required about a 100-square-mile quarantine zone. Wire report they can demonstrate mastery on all the state competencies," she said, which is why the program ensures "connection with the instructor of the course and the specific feedback that the students get for program mastery." The first step for potential candidates is to visit the GCSC website and fill out the online application to the program, which will be reviewed by EPI coordinators. Although the official cutoff date for the next semester has passed, applications to the program are accepted continually and occasionally the program offers an off-session. Schenck said the program also can assist teachers in their transition from Florida's temporary certificate for educators, to the permanent and renewable professional certificate. Classes for the next semester will begin Oct. 13.

 officers first served a search warrant Sept. 27 at Stanford Point apartments in Panama City. During their search, investigators found more than 2,800 prescription Xanax pills, 154 prescription oxycodone pills and a small amount of powder cocaine. BCSO officials reported they believe the oxycodone pills contain fentanyl. Additional lab tests will be conducted to obtain additional evidence the pills contain fentanyl, an opioid believed responsible for many overdose deaths. "That one causes us particular concern, especially when we see it mixed with what appears to be another drug," Ford said. "We've seen it pressed to where it looks like a Xanax, so that somebody could be buying a Xanax off the street and actually be taking a deadly fentanyl." Investigators also seized $8,828 in cash. Inside the home at the time of the search was Mosley, who is the registered occupant of the apartment, officers reported. A day later, BCSO served a search warrant at a Hilltop Avenue home in Panama City Beach. During the search, investigators found about 1.5 pounds of crystal methamphetamine. Investigators also found about 110 assorted pills. Some of the pills had imprints on them, and some did not. Field tests of the pills showed positive results for powerful opiates such as heroin and fentanyl. Further laboratory testing is needed to positively identify these substances, officers reported. Riggins and Fuller were taken into custody during the search. Riggins currently is on state probation for previous drug crimes. On Sept. 29, served another search warrant on a Joan Avenue home in Panama City Beach. During the search, investigators found about two ounces of heroin. Investigators also found several handguns, one of which was reported stolen out of a neighboring county, BCSO reported. Plumadore and Sharpe were taken into custody at the time of the search warrant. Plumadore, a convicted felon, is the listed resident of the home and is on inmate release status with the Florida Department of Corrections from previous charges in 2012 and 2013. Sharpe was put on felony probation in July for previous drug-related crimes. "All of these people will be facing very serious charges," Ford added. "I'm very proud of the work our SID does to get all this stuff off the streets. It's critical because it can be deadly. It has proven to be deadly."

 thought it was a bonus. He then began crying and said he wished he had not gotten involved." The case began June 15, 2017, when the DEA executed a search warrant on a Palmetto, Georgia, home. Officers discovered two methamphetamine extraction labs and seized about 11 containers of liquid methamphetamine needing to be processed through the labs. The DEA determined there was a total of 118 grams of pure meth and 217 grams of a mixture substance containing meth in the containers on-site, officials wrote. "When meth-labs are discovered, DEA secures any finished product, but only takes samples of other substances found at the meth labs," officials wrote. "Because the material is considered hazardous, and cannot be stored at DEA storage facilities, environmental clean-up companies are contacted to dispose of the remaining substances." The DEA has a national contract with SWS to secure the materials, and Carter and Langston were employed with the company and dispatched to the site. Authorities documented when they arrived, when they left and what they left with. However, SWS uses their own buckets to collect the material logged that the "waste" material was all placed into a single container, officials wrote. The missing meth went unnoticed until an August 2017 investigation in a separate case in Panama City. Officers had arrested a repeat drug offender and found he had a gallon of liquid methamphetamine in his vehicle. He claimed that the source of the meth was Pennywell, officials reported. As the investigation unfolded, officers staked out Pennywell's home and eventually established probable cause for a search warrant. Inside they found thousands of dollars in cash and a 5-gallon container of liquid methamphetamine — "identical to containers used by SWS," officers noted. "He initially lied and stated that he received the liquid meth from two employees with whom he worked with at a lawn service," officials wrote. "He finally disclosed that he actually received the liquid meth from his brother-in-law, Kendrick Carter. ... Pennywell stated that in June or July Carter came to his house with six to seven five gallon containers." During the next few months, they converted and sold about $100,000 in methamphetamine, Pennywell told officers. Authorities then arrested Carter, who told them the origins of the liquid meth. He admitted that he and Langston had been sent to gather the liquid methamphetamine and they hatched the plan to steal it after leaving the scene. "Carter stated that while in transit, he took some of the meth that had been crystallized, and smoked it," officials wrote. "He said that is when he decided to steal the liquid meth." Langston then allegedly contacted a friend with questions about how to convert the liquid meth to crystals. Prosecutors said they intend to show the jury pictures of the meth from Langston's phone combined with the testimony of the two co-defendants to show his role to the jury.

Nelson, Scott square off in lively debate

By Curt Anderson
The Associated Press

Scott Nelson

MIRAMAR — Democratic Sen. Bill Nelson and Republican challenger Gov. Rick Scott met Tuesday in a spirited debate in their campaign for Florida's highly competitive U.S. Senate seat, with Scott labeling his opponent as a do-nothing senator and Nelson claiming the governor was distorting his record.

Scott, who must leave the governor's office because of term limits, repeatedly said in answering questions that Nelson had accomplished little on issues ranging from the environment to immigration to Cuba relations, despite decades in the Senate. Nelson is seeking his fourth Senate term.

In response to a question about immigration reform, Scott said Nelson "has had 40 years to do something about immigration and he has done nothing."

Nelson, however, pointed out that he voted for a comprehensive immigration bill that passed the Senate six years ago but died in the Republican-led House. He said nine of Scott's television ads on a variety of subjects have been declared false by fact-checking organizations and many of the state's newspapers.

"The governor keeps coming up with one whopper after another. Apparently you never got your mouth washed out with soap for telling a lie," Nelson said.

The two also clashed sharply on gun violence issues, with Nelson stressing he favors a ban on military-style assault weapons and implementing a comprehensive system of background checks. He noted that Fred Guttenberg, whose daughter was slain in the Parkland school shooting, was in the audience.

Scott, Nelson said, "has passed more (National Rifle Association) legislation that any other governor in the history of this state."

Yet Scott noted he and the Florida Legislature enacted a broad gun and school safety bill only weeks after the Feb. 14 Parkland shooting. It imposed new age limits on some gun purchases, created a "red flag" provision allowing guns to be seized from someone deemed a threat and sought to get more armed security personnel in Florida schools, among other things.

"We passed a comprehensive bill," Scott said. "All these things we did, Sen. Nelson has never done."

Given the large Hispanic audience, many questions from the moderators dealt with Cuba relations, the situation in Venezuela and repression in Nicaragua. Both Scott and Nelson sought to underscore their support for helping Puerto Rico recover from Hurricane Maria, with Nelson noting he was just endorsed Monday by the island's governor, Ricardo Rossello.

Both campaigns have strongly courted Puerto Ricans, an important voting bloc in Florida.

Scott noted he has visited Puerto Rico eight times since the storm and has taken numerous steps to help, including dispatching National Guard troops, making it easier for Puerto Ricans in Florida to register for school and providing them an in-state tuition waiver for college.

"It was never about politics; it was about helping our fellow citizens," Scott said.

Nelson, however, said the administration of President Donald Trump "has treated Puerto Rico and its people as second-class citizens." The administration's response to the hurricane, he added, "has been terrible and everybody knows that."

The two also differed on the Affordable Care Act, which Nelson wants to keep and strengthen, but Scott calls deeply flawed and costly. They also sparred on environmental problems that Florida has faced for months, such as fish-killing red tides and algae blooms caused by release of polluted water to the coasts from Lake Okeechobee.

Nelson said Scott has "disassembled" Florida's environmental regulations and agencies, heightening the problems that beset Florida beaches.

"You see the result. You put pollution in the water; it will grow the algae in the summer," the senator said.

Scott contended that Nelson hasn't done much in Congress to tackle many of these same problems, including adequate federal funding to fix the aging dike around Lake Okeechobee.

"Sen. Nelson has got no money to fix the dike at Lake Okeechobee. Zero dollars," Scott said.

The pair also disagreed on the nomination of Judge Brett Kavanaugh to the U.S. Supreme Court, with Scott in favor and Nelson saying he will vote no over the sexual assault allegations leveled by Christine Blasey Ford and other women.

Their next debate is scheduled for Oct. 16 on CNN.

PANAMA CITY BEACH — Summer tourism in Panama City Beach was up 25.4 percent from last year in August, according to Tourist Development Tax data.

"We have used (August) for the last two years to target families with young children, welcoming them to the beach for an end of summer vacation,"

Dan Rowe, Visit Panama City Beach President and CEO, said in a press release. "For the second straight year, we saw an uptick in visits from young families, as the destination offered deals and packages catered specifically to this demographic."

The Tourist Development Tax, also known as a bed tax, is a 5 percent tax collected from the short-term rentals of condos and hotels and goes toward the funding of beach cleanings and renourishment, marketing, and promotional activities hosted by the Panama City Beach Convention & Visitors Bureau.

This past August, Panama City Beach was host to the annual music festival, Pepsi Gulf Coast Jam, at Frank Brown Park. Visit Panama City Beach also hosted young families for the second year of Preschoolers in Paradise.

The collections for the fiscal year, which began tracking in October 2017, has surpassed that of last year by 10.2 percent.

GOP's Scott and DeSantis split on Trump

By Tim Craig
The Washington Post

SARASOTA — At a recent rally for Ron DeSantis' campaign for governor, it looked as if there was just one true leader of the state's Republican Party.

More than 500 people crammed into an airport hangar adorned with "Trump 2020" banners.

Many wore red "Make America Great Again" hats. And as DeSantis spoke, the crowd quickly began to mimic Trump's 2016 campaign rallies, including chants of "lock him up" aimed at DeSantis' Democratic opponent, Tallahassee Mayor Andrew Gillum, who is seeking to become Florida's first African-American governor.

Amid all of that cheering and jeering, DeSantis never mentioned Florida's actual Republican leader, Gov. Rick Scott, the party's nominee for the U.S. Senate seat now held by Democrat Bill Nelson. Scott has in turn appeared to be just as hesitant to embrace DeSantis or Trump.

Days after the rally, Scott appeared before the Florida Chamber of Commerce, which claims 139,000 employer members and represents the sort of moderate voters both candidates need to win over in a state renowned for its close elections.

But as Scott talked, he did not speak of Trump and mentioned DeSantis only once — as part of an offhand mumbling reference about how being governor was "a great job."

Scott's and DeSantis' different paths reflect the strategic options facing Republican candidates this year as they decide whether to run away from or embrace Trump, their party's dominant figure.

It's a conflict that is especially dramatic this year in Florida, where Scott is trying to rebrand himself as a consensus builder, which requires some distance from a president known for his unpredictability. DeSantis, meanwhile, is more dependent on energizing the state's conservative, Trump-supporting base.

"It creates a dissonance where, ideally, there really shouldn't be any," said J.M. "Mac" Stipanovich, a veteran Florida Republican strategist and lobbyist. "Scott's apparent desire to distance himself from Donald Trump, without repudiating Donald Trump, makes it difficult for him to embrace Ron DeSantis without reservation because DeSantis is so closely identified with Trump."

Both the Florida governor's race and the U.S. Senate battle are among the most closely watched contests in the country this year. A Gillum victory over DeSantis would give Democrats control of the governor's mansion for the first time in two decades; Republicans hope a Scott victory over Nelson would dash Democrats' hopes of regaining control of the U.S. Senate.

Scott is hoping his two terms as governor, beginning in 2011, have crafted a state-wide image independent of Trump.

After campaigning vigorously for Trump during the 2016 presidential election, Scott began tempering his outspokenness for the president during the past 18 months as he geared up to challenge Nelson.

It's a strategy that GOP strategists say is built around political necessity, because of Trump's relative unpopularity among some Florida voters, as well as Scott's own desire to move beyond the divisive political and cultural battles that defined part of his tenure as governor.

Instead of talking about budget cuts or battling labor unions — items that dominated his early years as governor — Scott has instead sought to play up the state's 3.7 percent unemployment rate, which is at a 12-year low. He has been casting himself as a bipartisan leader, citing his widely praised response to the hurricanes in Florida and Puerto Rico last year.

"I think about: How do you create the best education system? How do you grow the best economy? How do you keep people safe?" Scott said in an interview.

But Scott's strategy, which has included aggressive outreach to Latinos and support earlier this year for some gun-control measures, has been clouded since DeSantis won the GOP primary after campaigning as a steadfast supporter of Trump. DeSantis' pitch included a campaign commercial in which he and his young daughter used blocks to build a mock-up of Trump's proposed border wall, and he read Trump's book aloud to his baby son.

Scott's relationship with DeSantis has been further tested by the gubernatorial nominee's general election campaign.

During the past six weeks, DeSantis has been hobbled by questions about racial sensitivity and past associations with some far-right activists who have made controversial comments about race.

The controversies are overshadowing DeSantis' message while limiting public focus on Gillum's potential vulnerabilities, including support for some tax increases and an ongoing federal public corruption investigation in Tallahassee.

According to several recent polls, Gillum has a narrow lead over DeSantis, who resigned from Congress in September to focus on his campaign.

Scott and Nelson have been essentially tied in most public polling, while Trump's approval rating has hovered just below 50 percent.

Adam Goodman, a veteran Florida Republican strategist, said recent polling has shown Florida independents — a critical component of any winning GOP strategy here — appear to be "breaking for Democrats."

Democrats in Florida have an almost 250,000-voter registration advantage over Republicans, but more than a quarter of the electorate, about 3.5 million people, has no party affiliation.

"Unless there is a sudden reversal in fortunes, this midterm election in Florida will truly be historic and will buck everything the Republicans have come to count on in the last 12 midterm elections," said Goodman, citing Republicans' relative strength in statewide races dating back to Jeb Bush's 1998 bid for governor. "Independents have tended to break Republican in midterms here, and they are just not doing that this year."

In most swing states, that erosion of support among nonaffiliated voters probably would be a fatal blow to Republican candidates. But Scott and DeSantis both began their careers as political insurgents, and that pedigree gives both candidates room to try to adapt individually.

In his 2010 race, Scott prevailed in the GOP primary running as a tea party darling who defeated Bill McCollum, then the state's attorney general and a former congressman.

Scott maintained unsettled relationships with rank-and-file GOP activists throughout much of his first term. That tension came to a head shortly after 2014 re-election campaign, when party activists rejected his handpicked candidate to lead the state party.

Scott responded to the embarrassing political setback by withdrawing his financial support from the party, which left it cash-strapped until midway through the 2016 presidential election.

In his almost three terms in Congress, DeSantis also separated himself from mainstream Republicans. He was a founding member of the Freedom Caucus, a small group of conservative House Republicans who have frustrated party leaders who have not yielded to their anti-tax and budget-slicing agenda.

"These are two very political isolated candidates," said former congressman David Jolly, a Republican who represented the St. Petersburg area from 2014 to 2017. "The idea of either one of them running on a ticket is probably not something they are comfortable with, and neither one has a history of it."

In an interview, Scott and DeSantis denied any friction.

"I'll do anything I can to make sure Ron DeSantis wins," Scott said. "I built a really great grass-roots effort to help get our vote out, and hopefully that's helpful to him."

When a reporter approached DeSantis recently to ask him about his relationship with Scott, he briskly walked away after saying, "Good, good, good. He's a good guy."

Political analysts say each man is weighing how the other — as well as Trump — will affect his campaign.

Although a recent Quinnipiac University poll showed Trump with a 44 percent approval rating among likely voters in Florida, the president has been consistently underestimated in the state. During the 2016 campaign, Trump defeated the home-grown candidate, Sen. Marco Rubio, R-Fla., in the Florida primary. Trump went on to win Florida by 113,000 votes in the general election.

Scott's approval ratings, meanwhile, have steadily increased during his second term. But Scott has faced withering criticism in recent weeks over the state's "red tide" algal blooms, which have killed millions of fish and threaten the state's tourism industry.

DeSantis has made the crisis a top campaign issue, vowing a heightened response to the crisis.

"This is a barely implicit criticism of Gov. Scott's leadership over the past eight years," Stipanovich said.

Despite the discomfort, many Republicans believe DeSantis and Scott will work in tandem this fall by driving out different segments of voters.

At DeSantis' Sarasota rally, Lorna Sammoury showed up wearing a "Trump Girl" T-shirt. In an interview, she described herself as an unapologetic DeSantis supporter and said she is particularly angry over media reports questioning his racial sensitivity.

She also plans to vote for Scott, even though he "frustrates" her.

"I am not saying he has to be Trump, but sometimes he is too mild-mannered, and you can't always be mild-mannered," she said.

At the Chamber of Commerce in Orlando, meanwhile, support for Scott appeared far more robust than it was for DeSantis. After almost a decade of job growth, Florida's business community is antsy about Scott's departure amid a rapidly changing, divisive political environment, said Mark Wilson, president of the Florida Chamber of Commerce.

"Florida is going to go in a different direction, regardless of who the voters pick," said Wilson. "There is only one Rick Scott."

Nonetheless, a day after Scott appeared before the group, the Chamber endorsed DeSantis, citing Gillum's support for higher corporate income taxes. Wilson said the group's political arm could spend as much as "tens of millions of dollars" supporting DeSantis.

"I think people know who Rick Scott is, and I think you are going to hear people saying, 'Hey if you want more Rick Scott, then (vote for) Ron DeSantis,'" Wilson said.

CHIPLEY Deputy stun guns man pulled over on stolen tractor

A sheriff's deputy used a stun gun on a man who tried to flee after he was pulled over while riding a stolen tractor.

The dashcam video posted on Facebook by the Washington County Sheriff's Office had almost 50,000 views by Wednesday morning.

The Facebook post says the deputy spotted the tractor driven by Charles McNeil swerving on Sept. 28 and initiated a traffic stop, during which McNeil provided a false name and invalid driver's license.

McNeil ran to avoid being handcuffed and the deputy chased after him. The video shows McNeil dropping to the pavement after being hit by a stun gun. The sheriff's office said McNeil hit his head and lost consciousness. When he came to, he provided his real name.

WASHINGTON Emergency alert test goes to cellphones nationwide

About 225 million electronic devices across the United States wailed and buzzed Wednesday afternoon as the Federal Emergency Management Agency conducted an emergency alert test.

A tone sounded at 1:18 p.m. CDT, similar to that of an Amber Alert or flood watch warning, and the subject of the alert read: "Presidential Alert" and the text said: "THIS IS A TEST of the National Wireless Emergency Alert System. No action is needed."

It was the first test of the national wireless emergency system by FEMA. The message was broadcast by cell towers for 30 minutes, so it's possible some people got the test at a different time.

A second alert on television broadcast and radio went off at 1:20 p.m. CDT. The TV and radio alert has been tested for several years.

The system test was for a high-level "presidential" alert that would be used only in a nationwide emergency. FEMA officials said Tuesday they would share test result data on how the testing went with mobile carriers to help ensure the system works well in a true emergency.

Phones with mobile carriers that participate in the wireless emergency alert system, which sends out information on hazardous weather, or missing children, got the alert. FEMA officials estimated it reached about 75 percent of all mobile phones in the country, including phones on all of the major carriers.

PORT ORANGE Police: Man tried to buy girl from mother at store

Police said an 81-year-old attempted to buy an 8-year-old girl from her mother for $200,000 at a Florida Walmart.

Port Orange police said Hellmuth Kolb was arrested Saturday and charged with simple battery and false imprisonment. Police said Tracy Nigh was sitting with her daughter on a bench inside the Walmart when Kolb

Nigh said she got up to leave but Kolb grabbed her daughter and kissed her wrist. An arrest report says Nigh left with her daughter and alerted store security. Authorities said the exchange was caught on camera and Kolb was identified through his credit card transaction and social media, where another woman described a similar experience.

Candidates get record amount of matching funds

By Jim Turner
The News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — With slightly more than a month to go before the November election, Florida statewide candidates have topped a matching-funds record from the 2010 election.

Bolstered by small-dollar fundraising in the race for governor, $6.08 million has been sent by the state to candidates this year, according to figures provided Tuesday by the Florida Division of Elections.

A little more than $400,000 was sent out

Friday to five candidates in the Nov. 6 general election.

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Andrew Gillum's latest check from the state was for $246,965, and former Congressman Ron DeSantis, the Republican nominee for governor, received a check for $140,037.

In 2010, the state doled out $6.065 million to 10 candidates in the controversial matching-funds program, which voters approved in 1998 with the intention of diminishing the importance of special-interest money.

Some lawmakers continue to push for repealing the program, but the Legislature has not put the issue back before voters since a 2010 effort failed when it only gained 52.5 percent of the vote, short of the required 60 percent for adoption.

House Speaker Richard Corcoran, R-Land O' Lakes, called the program a "gross waste of taxpayer money" in 2017, when he called for the state Constitution Revision Commission to propose a measure to remove public financing from the Constitution.

Even before this year's

Aug. 28 primary, candidates seeking the taxpayer money shot past the 2014 matching-funds total of $4.3 million.

The program matches individual contributions of $250 or less to the campaign accounts of candidates for statewide offices. Candidates do not have to take part in the program.

With the latest check, DeSantis has received $1.37 million from the state.

Gillum, the mayor of Tallahassee, has landed $1.1 million from the program.

In all, nine statewide candidates this year decided to dip into the fund, though four of those candidates — including gubernatorial candidates Gwen Graham and Adam Putnam — lost their primaries.

The two remaining candidates in the race for agriculture commissioner, Republican Matt Caldwell and Democrat Nikki Fried, have not tapped the program. Caldwell, who won his primary with 34.6 percent of the vote, decried the use of the matching-funds program as "campaign welfare."

In the race for attorney general, Democrat Sean Shaw got a check for $12,152 on Friday and has received $251,578 from the program.

Republican Ashley Moody received $1,580 in matching funds Friday and has received $384,026 from the state.

In the race for state chief financial officer, incumbent Republican Jimmy Patronis received a check for $840 on Friday. Patronis has received $310,600 through the program.

Democratic CFO candidate Jeremy Ring has not taken part in the program.

Fla. Supreme Court grapples with judicial appointment

By Jim Saunders
The News Service of Florida

TALLAHASSEE — With some justices appearing torn between legal precedents and the circumstances of the case, the state Supreme Court on Tuesday weighed whether Gov. Rick Scott should be able to appoint a replacement for a Northeast Florida judge who is stepping down at the end of the year.

Jacksonville attorney David Trotti filed the case, arguing voters should choose a replacement for outgoing Circuit Judge Robert Foster in the November election. But Scott contends — and the 1st District Court of Appeal agreed — he has the power to appoint a new judge.

Justices Barbara Pariente and R. Fred Lewis pointedly expressed concerns during oral arguments Tuesday that Foster had manipulated the process to try to make sure his replacement would be appointed instead of elected.

Foster was expected to leave office Jan. 7, 2019, which would be the end of his term, because of a mandatory retirement age. But on April 2, Foster sent a letter to Scott making the resignation effective Dec. 31, four business days ahead of schedule.

The Scott administration argues the governor's acceptance of a judicial resignation before the start of an election-qualifying period creates a vacancy that should be filled by appointment, rather than election. If Foster retired Jan. 7, the post would be filled by election. "My problem is with the charade that's being played," Lewis said. "He's not really resigning; let's face it."

But earlier, in questioning Trotti's attorney, Philip Padovano, Lewis pointed to Supreme Court precedents he indicated would back the appointment of a replacement for Foster.

"The jurisprudence of this court has interpreted the resignation as being effective when accepted," Lewis said. "So in this case ... what we would have to (do) is overrule a number of cases to get to the point where you would like us to be."

Padovano, a former appellate judge, agreed legal precedents exist but tried to draw a distinction with the Foster resignation.

"I think these cases, your honor, basically were founded on a principle of good faith — that a resignation was actually going to be a resignation in the near future," he said.

But Daniel Nordby, general counsel for Scott, called it "long-settled law" that a judicial vacancy occurs at the time a resignation letter is submitted to the governor and accepted — not at the time the judge leaves office. He also said the court has not based its decisions on the lengths of judicial vacancies.

Pariente, Lewis and Justice Peggy Quince asked questions during the oral arguments that appeared to be probing for ways to change the process to reduce what Pariente described as "arbitrariness."

Nordby, however, said basing resignations on when letters are sent and accepted can help provide a "seamless transition" to new judges. That transition includes providing time for judicial nominating commissions to review and recommend replacements to the governor.

Similarly, Chief Justice Charles Canady said that if judicial resignations were effective immediately when submitted, it would "essentially guarantee that there will be probably at least a two- to three-month physical vacancy before the merit-selection process and appointment process can do its work."

Foster is a judge in the 4th Judicial Circuit, which is made up of Duval, Clay and Nassau counties. Trotti, who wanted to run for the seat in November, also filed a similar lawsuit in 2014 because of a different judicial opening but lost at the 1st District Court of Appeal.

Cook returning to food championships

CRESTVIEW — Pan-handle cook Sherri Williams is preparing for her return to the World Food Championships on Nov. 8-11 in Orange Beach, Alabama.

She is cooking in the sandwich category this year but hopes to eventually defend her 2017 WFC Granny Grilling win.

"I don't know if they're going to have that this year, but I hope they do because I want to defend my title," Williams said, laughing. She especially enjoyed that their Grilling Granny judges were 20 middle- to high school-age children.

Area residents got a taste of her competitive chops when the Army veteran cooked and shared simple recipes Saturday and Sunday at Walmart in Niceville. Some people might have recognized Williams from her appearances on Food Network competitions such as "Guy's Big Project" and "All-Star Academy."

"It went really well. I love it! I loved talking to them about food," Williams said. "It was a lot of fun."

She made sweet and spicy pulled pork sliders with mild peppers and ranch dressing Saturday morning and a pecan pumpkin mousse parfait that afternoon. Sunday's recipes included Asian-inspired pork fried rice and piña colada slaw with pecans.

She also showed her audience how to make substitutions for recipe requirements that might not be in stock at the grocery store. For instance, sausage crumbles were an ingredient in the fried rice recipe.

She showed people how they could buy sausage patties, chop them up and use them instead.

Williams also spoke about her love of cooking competitions and the challenges that go with it. She said you have to be able to think fast, make food that tastes good, cook it, plate it and put it in front of the judges.

"You've gotta be a real fast thinker. You've got to think on your feet and just do it," she said.

Williams said one grilling competition had huge red snappers that had to be scaled, cleaned and prepped before contestants could cook them in the limited time available.

And the weather was not cooperating.

"You have to have a back-up plan" and adapt to the conditions in which you're working, she said. With the rainy weather not helping, she wound up flaking the fish she prepared instead of serving the fillet portion she had planned on.

Arnold easily takes county title

By Dustin Kent

dkent@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY BEACH — Mosley's Danielle Humphrey and Bay's Taylor Moody battled it out to be the low individual golfer at Wednesday's Bay County Championship at Bay Point Golf Club, but it was Arnold that cruised to the team title.

The Marlins finished with a team score of 349 to comfortably take the county title, defeating Mosley by 119 strokes and Bay by 155. Ruthford didn't have enough golfers to qualify for the team competition.

"This is one of our better rounds and tournaments," Arnold coach Brian Cornelius said. "We've been in the 350s, around 353 to 355, but this is the first time all year we've broken the 350 barrier, which is good, and we left a few out there. We don't have any superstars on the team, but we've got five solid girls and four of them could be the low person on any given round. I was very pleased with the way they played today."

Humphrey was the low individual golfer with a score of 81, as she edged past Moody, who finished just one stroke behind at 82. The two friends and competitors have gone back and forth for much of the season as the low individual girl in the county, but neither was particularly happy with their round Wednesday.

Taggart wants FSU faster

Coach says no extra motivation needed against Miami

Florida State quarterback Deondre Francois (12) throws a pass while being pressured by Louisville defensive lineman Henry Famurewa (96) during the second half of an NCAA college football game Saturday.

In its 28-24 road win over Louisville last week, a Florida State offense that had been struggling to find itself through a sluggish start to the season found a spark in the right arm of sophomore quarterback Deondre Francois.

With the running game still sputtering and the Seminoles trailing 21-7, Francois brought his team back with a big play passing attack that led to touchdown passes of 55 yards to Tamorrin Terry, 25 yards to Tre McKitty, and the 58-yard game winner to Nyqwan Murray in the fourth quarter.

Francois finished the game with 294 passing yards, four touchdowns, and no interceptions. However, FSU coach Willie Taggart said the key to truly unlocking his spread offense isn't necessarily taking more shots down the field as much as it is speeding up the pace.

"I think personally the last couple of weeks we haven't been ... the tempo hasn't been what we want it to be," he said. "So we've got to get back to doing the things we say we're going to do and being who we want to be."

"I think that's probably what makes the offense go, is the tempo, and we haven't been as consistent with it and a lot of that has to do with us with penalties and things we do to ourselves and then execution."

Yankees rout the A's 7-2 in wild-card game

By Ronald Blum
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Aaron Judge got the party started with a two-run homer nine pitches in. Luis Severino let out a primal scream after escaping a bases-loaded jam with 100 mph heat. Giancarlo Stanton capped the mauling with monstrous drive in his postseason debut.

From the first inning on, there was little doubt. Next stop for the Yankees: Fenway Park and the rival Red Sox.

Going ahead quickly against reliever-turned-starter Liam Hendriks, the Yankees pounded the Oakland Athletics 7-2 Wednesday night to win their second straight AL wild-card game.

Severino atoned for flopping in his postseason debut last year, and late-season spark Luke Voit added a two-run triple off Blake Treinen in a four-run sixth,

LSU, Kentucky undefeated starts only part of surprises

By Teresa M. Walker
The Associated Press

Under Nick Saban, the Alabama Crimson Tide always seems to start the season racking up wins.

The Georgia Bulldogs also seem to be starting that trend with Kirby Smart in charge.

But not everything is going according to plan in the Southeastern Conference.

LSU coach Ed Orgeron, the odds-on favorite to be the first SEC coach fired before the season, has his Tigers cruising as one of the league's last undefeated teams in October. And Kentucky, yes the SEC school best known for its basketball team, also is 5-0 along with Alabama, Georgia and LSU. The Wildcats are also enjoying their highest football ranking at No. 13 since 2007.

Kentucky coach Mark Stoops isn't surprised at his Wildcats' success.

"I was very confident in the team, just in what we were doing and our approach and the way we've been going about our business," Stoops said. "I knew we had some good players that were really working hard and focused, and good leadership. My thoughts weren't on (the) record. My thoughts were on the preparation on where we were at through the summer, and getting ready to go."

Even Alabama is winning in a way few could have predicted.

Making Tua Tagovailoa the Crimson Tide's starting quarterback after his walk-off touchdown pass last January to help Alabama win its fifth national championship under Saban has sparked Alabama's passing game.

The Crimson Tide still can run all over opponents and smother them with defense. Now the Tide leads the nation scoring 54.2 points a game and Tagovailoa is the nation's top-rated passer with 14 TDs and no interceptions.

Both he and the Tide have been so good that the quarterback has thrown only 19 passes in the second half. He has yet to play in the fourth quarter of any of their first five games.

"He's been very, very efficient and played very, very well," Saban said.

"I expect every player to play that way. But he's probably exceeded that to some degree, in terms of his consistency. Hopefully we'll be able to do the things we need to do to help him continue to play with that kind of consistency."

Orgeron certainly has been helped by having quarterback Joe Burrow, a transfer from Ohio State, running LSU's offense. Burrow said he heard all the predictions that the Tigers would go 6-6 this season.

"Coming from Ohio State, I know what talent is, and I knew coming in, people told me we didn't have a lot of talent on offense," Burrow said. "And I walk in in the summer and you see all these big, fast, strong guys, and I knew we had the capability to be something special. And then you see Coach (Steve Ensminger) E's offense I knew that we could do it."

Kentucky may have the SEC's biggest surprise not only this season but for the decades by handing Florida the Gators' first loss in the Swamp to Kentucky since 1979 and first in the annual series since 1986.

"I played OK today, could've been better, but I did make some good saves," Humphrey said. "My drives were pretty good, and I managed to stay out of the trees for the most part. It's kind of disappointing to be on the green and have five three-putts, so I left a lot of shots out there."

Humphrey shot 40 on the front nine and 41 on the back, though that number could've been better if not for three-putts on No. 12, 16, and 18. With the district tournament just two weeks away, she said that's an area she will devote a great deal of attention to in her preparation.

"I've got next week off, so I'll get to practice and get some things on my game worked on. I'll definitely be on the putting green a lot," she said. "But I'm excited and looking forward to it."

Moody had a harsher appraisal of her performance Wednesday afternoon, calling it "awful."

"The front nine was OK, the back nine I had two doubles and a bogey and couldn't get a par to fall," she said. "On 17, I hooked my 3-wood into the water and had to double."

She also shot 40 on the front nine and 42 on the back, scores which didn't quite measure up to what Moody said she was anticipating on a course she is extremely familiar with.

"This is my home course. I've been a member out here for a couple of years now," she said. "This course is hard, but my last couple of rounds have been 70s; 73, 73, 79, and I just expected more of myself. I think I got a little tired on the back (nine). Other than that, it was just me being jittery and not really slowing down and taking my time."

The county golfers will be back at the Meadows Course at Bay Point for the District 2-2A tournament Oct. 17. For those that qualify, the Region 1-2A tournament would follow Oct. 24 at Tiger Point Golf Club in Gulf Breeze.

missing a home run by inches. Stanton added 443-foot drive off the Oakland closer in the eighth that landed in left field's second deck, completing a power show by the team that set a major league record for most home runs in a season.

After one of those boisterous Bronx celebrations that used to be an October staple, the Yankees will take a train to Boston for a best-of-five Division Series starting Friday, a matchup of 100-win heavyweights. By the late innings, the sellout crowd was chanting "We want Boston!"

For Oakland, it the latest disappointing defeat in what has stretched into decades of disappointment.

The A's have lost eight straight winner-take-all postseason games since beating Willie Mays and the New York Mets in Game 7 of the 1973 World Series, and dropped all four of their postseason matchups against the Yankees.

New York became the first team since the 2001 A's to reach triple digits in wins and fail to finish first — the Red Sox set a team record with 108 victories.

Yankees fans fretted about an all-or-nothing knockout match, thinking back to last year when Severino fell behind Minnesota 3-0 just 10 pitches in. New York rallied for an 8-4 win against the Twins, but the memory was still raw.

Severino was 14-2 at the All-Star break this year but slumped badly in the second half, and rookie manager Aaron Boone's decision to start the 24-year-old right-hander against the A's instead of J.A. Happ or Masahiro Tanaka was intensely debated — the type of argument Boone used to enjoy as a television analyst who broadcast last year's wild-card game. Severino made the move look like genius. He threw nine fastballs in a 10-pitch first inning, then relied on sliders and chaneups. He struck out seven his first time through the batting order, got in trouble in the fourth before striking out Marcus Semien on his fastest pitch of the night — 99.6 mph at the letters. He showed his emotion and looked spent despite not having allowed a hit. And he was.

Jonathan Lucroy and Nick Martini singled leading off the fifth, and Boone signaled for Dellin Betances to relieve. This time, he had no decision to savor.

Betances retired Matt Chapman on a liner to right and Jed Lowrie on a fly to center, then struck out big league home run champion Kris Davis with a slider. Betances gleefully backpedaled off the mound.

New York opened a 6-0 lead in the bottom half.

Betances (the winner) pitched a perfect sixth and David Robertson a 1-2-3 seventh. Davis hit a two-run homer off Zach Britton in the eighth, and Aroldis Chapman finished the five-hitter.

Hendriks, coming off seven straight shutout starts of one inning in September following his return from the minor leagues, walked Andrew McCutchen leading off, and Judge drove a fastball over the left-field scoreboard.

Hendriks (the loser) had not allowed a home run since June 24, the night before he was cut from the major league roster.

What to watch for Short order: Swanson's status might not be known until Wednesday due to soreness in the upper part of his left hand. He partially tore a ligament on a swing during the final week of the regular season and left the game. Culberson, who has hit .282 with eight homers in the second half, would be the replacement at shortstop. Kenley the closer: Jansen allowed 18 homers this season, more than twice as many as his previous career high. He gave up back-to-back home runs in the division tie-breaker against the Rockies, although he was pitching with a comfortable lead. Super Max: Muncy got called up in mid-April, homered in his second game and has been the Dodgers' big basher ever since. It's quite a turnaround for a player who was released by Oakland and spent 2017 in the minors. The Associated Press

What to watch for

Story time: It's been a big season for Story, the first shortstop in major league history with at least 40 doubles, 30 homers and 25 stolen bases. He hurt his elbow late in the season at Los Angeles, missing five games, but has quickly picked up where he left off. Show stopper: Yelich is making his first playoff appearance after spending first five seasons with Marlins. He hit .458 with five homers and 17 RBIs during Brewers' eight-game winning streak to end regular season. Flashing leather: It seems almost every game, Arenado turns in a highlight-reel play at third base. He's won five straight Gold Gloves. The Associated Press

IN BRIEF

ST. ANDREWS, SCOTLAND Koepka heartbroken over wounded Ryder Cup fan

Brooks Koepka is thinking about more than just golf these days.

The 28-year-old American, the U.S. Open and PGA Championship winner, said Wednesday he was heartbroken to hear a woman struck by his tee shot at the Ryder Cup last week might lose vision in her right eye. Koepka's wild shot on the sixth hole at Le Golf National hit Corine Remande in the head. According to French media reports, doctors say she has lost sight and she is considering legal action.

"No one feels worse about this than I do. It's a tragic accident," said Koepka, adding he has been trying to get in touch with Remande. "I'm heartbroken and all messed up inside. It's sad and I really am torn up about it. She's not going to be able to see out of her eye ever again. All because I hit a golf ball. This is definitely the one shot in my career that I am going to regret."

GAME OF THE WEEK MARYLAND (3-1, 1-0) AT NO. 15 MICHIGAN (4-1, 2-0)

When: Noon EDT Saturday Where: Michigan Stadium, Ann Arbor, Mich. TV: ABC

TURTLES IN THE HOUSE

WOLVERINES WILL LOOK TO AVOID UPSET AGAINST PESKY TERPS

Michigan running back Karan Higdon runs the ball against Nebraska on Sept. 22 in Ann Arbor, Mich. [PAUL SANCYA/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

KEYS FOR MARYLAND

Establish the run: Interim coach Matt Canada will ride Ty Johnson and Anthony McFarland for the second straight week after running back Lorenzo Harrison III sustained a season-ending knee injury in practice. Johnson and McFarland ripped Minnesota's defense for 235 yards on the ground and accounted for three touchdowns in a 42-13 win last week.

Make defensive adjustments: Maryland may have to make major changes in its secondary after safeties Darnell Savage Jr. and Antwaine Richardson left last week's game due to injury. Canada said midweek that he is hopeful Savage and Richardson can return against Michigan.

KEYS FOR MICHIGAN

Curb penalties: The Wolverines have committed a conference-worst 46 penalties in five games, including 11 penalties for 100 yards last week in a narrow win against Northwestern. Michigan might get by with a high penalty rate against teams like Northwestern and Nebraska, but Jim Harbaugh must find a way to mitigate penalties before entering his toughest stretch of the season against Michigan State, Penn State and Ohio State.

Play solid defense: While Michigan's offensive execution hasn't been pretty, its defensive efficiency has pulled the struggling offense through some tough wins, particularly in the 20-17 win against Northwestern.

PREDICTION

Michigan 24, Maryland 21: Maryland's explosive offense will be pitted against Michigan's scrappy defense. The Terrapins' offense has flourished outside of the loss to Temple, and the Wolverines defense remains the best in the nation. The Wolverines may be in for another tight battle because to their stagnant offense, but if the defense can secure some takeaways and the offense can control penalties, Michigan should have enough athletic talent to escape.

BEST OF THE REST This weekend's other top conference games (all times EDT)

NORTHWESTERN (1-3, 1-1) AT NO. 20 MICHIGAN STATE (3-1, 1-0)

When: Noon Saturday Where: Spartan Stadium, East Lansing, Mich. TV: FS1

Notes: Michigan State leads the series 37-19, but Northwestern pulled off a 39-31 upset win last year in Evanston, Ill. The Spartans' stingy defense held Central Michigan to just a field goal through the first three quarters and forced a couple of turnovers in Michigan State's 31-20 win.

INDIANA (4-1, 1-1) AT NO. 3 OHIO STATE (5-0, 2-0)

When: 4 p.m. Saturday Where: Ohio Stadium, Columbus, Ohio TV: Fox

Notes: Ohio State leads the series 73-12-5, with the Buckeyes winning in the last 23 meetings since a tie in 1990. The Hoosiers started strong last week against Rutgers, but nearly failed to put away the Scarlet Knights and dodged a disastrous loss to arguably the worst team in the Big Ten.

IOWA (3-1, 0-1) AT MINNESOTA (3-1, 0-1)

When: 3:30 p.m. Saturday Where: TCF Bank Stadium, Minneapolis TV: BTN

Notes: Minnesota leads the series 62-47-2. The Hawkeyes have won five of the past six meetings and edged the Golden Gophers 17-10 last season in Iowa City. The Hawkeyes hung with Wisconsin for as long as they could in their last game, on Sept. 22, but a turnover margin of minus-3 derailed them.

POWER RANKINGS Breaking down the Big Ten

Last week: 1

1. Ohio State (5-0): The Buckeyes made a major announcement in Happy Valley: "Never count us out." Nitpicking? The defense needs to step up.

Last week: 2

2. Penn State (4-1): If not for a head-scratching call on fourth-and-5, the Nittany Lions might be elite instead of great — at least according to their coach.

Last week: 3

3. Michigan (4-1): Two ways to view the tight win against Northwestern: The Wolverines rallied, or they never should have trailed in the first place.

Last week: 4

4. Wisconsin (3-1): Hard to tell how good the Badgers really are. They had the weekend off and now face an open-book test in Nebraska.

Last week: 5

5. Iowa (3-1): The Hawkeyes travel to Minnesota for a must-win game in the West. One of the contestants will be exposed as a pretender.

Last week: 6

6. Michigan State (3-1): The unpredictable Spartans resemble their coach's stoic expressions. One never knows how to read this bunch.

Last week: 7

7. Maryland (3-1): As turmoil swirls around the program, the Terrapins may be about to encounter more angst in Ann Arbor.

Last week: 8

8. Purdue (2-3): The Boilermakers have found their legs — or at least their arm. Quarterback David Blough is looking good.

Last week: 9

9. Minnesota (3-1): P.J. Fleck has the Golden Gophers believing in themselves. Outside observers are not quite there yet.

Last week: 10

10. Indiana (4-1): Nothing like a visit to No. 3 Ohio State to make the Hoosiers prepare for the hand grenades headed their way.

Last week: 11

11. Northwestern (1-3): The Wildcats are the classic close-but-not-close-enough program. They play good teams tough but usually lose.

Last week: 12

12. Illinois (2-2): You hate to say jobs will be on the line with the upcoming trip to Rutgers. But jobs will be on the line.

Last week: 14

13. Rutgers (1-4): The Scarlet Knights at least made things respectable against Indiana. Up next: a winnable game against Illinois.

Last week: 13

14. Nebraska (0-4): Scott Frost went off on his team, calling them soft and undisciplined. Who are we to argue with him?

PLAYER TO WATCH

Trace McSorley, QB, Penn State: Had 461 total yards, including a career-high 175 rushing, and threw two TD passes in the Nittany Lions' 27-26 loss to Ohio State.

ROUNDING IT OUT This weekend's other games

SATURDAY

Time (ET)	Matchup	TV
Noon	Illinois at Rutgers	BTN
7:30 p.m.	Nebraska at #16 Wisconsin	BTN

Part of those execution problems can be directly attributed to the struggles with health and performance on the offensive line. The much-maligned unit showed improvement against the Cardinals and Taggart said further progress will go a long way in being able to play at the pace he prefers.

"I think it starts with not giving up any sacks in that game," he said. "That's a big-time improvement for our guys. We threw the ball well in that game."

FSU could be getting back closer to full health on the offensive front, with left tackle Landon Dickerson returning last week and Derrick Kelly, who has played at both left guard and right tackle this season, anticipated back for Saturday's clash with Miami.

With a talented and athletic defensive front for the Hurricanes coming up, Taggart said his offensive line will need all the help it can get.

"I think you always want to have your best players with you," he said. "So to be able to get them back and play always will be helpful, especially for us where we're trying to go with our offense. But if they're not, then the guys behind them have got to be ready to play just like they would."

"So I know they will be and, again, it will be great to have them and it will be great to have all our guys back. We've been beat up there."

'Not many rivalries like this'

A Bradenton native and lifelong FSU fan, Taggart has seen his share of battles between the two state rivals and said he is "excited" to finally get to be a part of it directly.

"There's not many rivalries like this game and I know growing up watching Florida State and Miami, it always came down to who is going to win the championship," he said. "The national championship came down to that game when I was growing up.

"But you've got two storied programs that have very talented young men on their teams and they dislike each other and it will be one exciting, physical, talented football game being played on Saturday."

No extra motivation is needed

While Miami players have had fun at the expense of FSU's new tradition of rewarding defensive players for turnovers with a backpack representing "securing the bag," Taggart said he doesn't consider it bulletin board material.

"I don't think you need any bulletin board material for a game like this," he said. "Picking at our bag, we had our own fans picking at our bag. So those things don't matter to us."

"It's a bag that we like and appreciate and we're proud of and we're going to continue to be proud of. So we don't need any of that, just go out and play ball."

ACES ON BRIDGE: BOBBY WOLFF

"I know I have the body of a weak and feeble woman, but I have the heart and stomach of a king."
— Queen Elizabeth I

The U.S. scored decisive victories in both the pairs and teams events at the Hua Yuan women's tournament last October in Beijing. Today's deal shows a spectacular play by a member of the American team — with a rather unexpected outcome. The deal came up in the round robin, when USA faced France.

At our featured table, Pam Granovetter (North) could not open a weak two diamonds, so she sensibly chose to pass, influenced by her excellent support for either major suit. Benedicte Cronier could open one heart, but nonetheless Sylvia Shi ended up declaring three no-trump.

As West, Catherine Mus found the best opening salvo when she led the spade two, which went to the six, eight and three. Cronier returned the spade jack. Shi won and took stock. Her left-hand opponent was known to have led from a suit that was only four cards long, and was also known to have at most one heart. It made sense, therefore, that Mus' distribution was exactly 4=1=4=4. So, Shi cashed the diamond ace and finessed the diamond 10. Well done, for a sparkling plus-400. How many IMPs do you suppose she gained for her play?

In the other room, the French North opened three diamonds; can you blame Irina Levitina for overcalling three hearts? I cannot. Anne-Laure Huberschwiller found an incisive penalty double and led the ace and another diamond. When declarer incorrectly guessed the location of the spade 10, she could do no better than take four trump tricks and a club for down 800 and a 9-IMP swing to France.

ANSWER: Your partner's call suggests extras in high cards or playing strength, and you certainly have something in hand for your first call. It seems logical to advance with a bid of three spades. You might be able to make game in diamonds, spades or no-trump; let partner know where you live.

Yesterday's Jumbles: HASTY BEGUN INFLUX TRIVIA
Answer: After a nasty divorce, she started referring to her ex-husband as her — "BITTER" HALF

DEAR ABBY

Couple looking to the future differs on starting a family

Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I have been in a strong relationship with my girlfriend for five years. We are very much in love.

I have told her I don't want to get married and have kids until I have attained some level of success. She understands my desire to be a good provider, but she's 29 and worried about her biological clock if she waits much longer.

I work full time, take night classes and I'm trying to put myself on a promising career path. Is my request unreasonable? We want it to work, but being able to provide at least a middle-class lifestyle is very important to me. — AMBITIOUS GUY IN SAN DIEGO be wonderful if there was a blueprint for success in life and marriage, but too often, "life" intervenes. You and your girlfriend should have a serious discussion about the future, because you both have to be comfortable with what happens next.

If she wants to start a family right away and you feel you can't afford it, neither of you will be happy. If she's willing to wait another few years to start a family (her biological clock should still be ticking), then it's important you agree about what needs to be in place financially in order for that to happen.

DEAR ABBY: My parents like to visit us and bring along their little dog, "Truffle." We are happy to have them and their dog, however we have an issue. My parents allow Truffle on the furniture. We have a dog and love her to pieces, but feel that furniture is for humans. Because our family likes to relax by sprawling on the couch at times, it's not as pleasant once a pet has been lying there.

My husband has voiced this concern but has been ignored. We are going to visit my parents soon, and I'm wondering how to handle this. We love everyone and don't want to hurt their feelings. I appreciate your advice. — OFF THE COUCH IN COLORADO

DEAR OFF THE COUCH: If you and your husband prefer that animals stay off the furniture in your home, that's your privilege. In your home, your rules should be respected. If your parents choose to ignore your request, they should stay in a pet-friendly hotel or leave Truffle at home.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Contact Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

HOROSCOPES BY HOLIDAY MATHIS

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — If we thought it happened a certain way and it happened another way instead, that will matter very little today. What matters is what works. Do what works even if it doesn't make sense.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Your giving nature is obvious, but what's not so obvious is that the one who most needs it today is you. Be generous to yourself. If you're not, the rest will be robbed of your generosity, too.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21) — The voice of higher morality gets fainter every time it goes unheeded. Strong people do what's right even when they don't feel like it and it becomes easier and easier for them to do so with every repetition of the right thing.

CANCER (June 22-July 22) — Self-image is so tricky, and much deeper than an opinion you have about your mirror reflection. Others see you in a more favorable light than you see yourself today. If only you could know your own beauty.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Strangers rarely sing together. That's why it's so powerful when it happens -- a reinforcement of our shared humanity. No other creature has on earth a voice so complex. Enjoy yours today. It will be your signature.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Avoid accidentally giving your power away, for instance by letting someone else handle what you really should be handling yourself. Or by asking for permission when you don't need it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — There once existed a sense of neighborliness that has been since replaced with aggressive anonymity. Meeting strangers is important to your sense of community and overall trust in society. Where can you go for this to happen?

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21) — There's a psychological effect going on in your life and it's creating a certain result. The question is not whether or not beliefs make a difference. They clearly do. The question is how can you make this work for you?

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — The ideas that won't let go of you? Share them. They matter. They may seem random, personal, too whimsical to likely connect with many of the types of people you know... share them anyway. They matter.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — When you pursue your own enjoyment, your friends will get some, too. This may come in the form of a game, or some intellectually stimulating entertainment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Your heart speaks a language that sometimes you can translate, and sometimes you can't. All will not be revealed in time, but at least you can appreciate a good mystery.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — While attempting to make a personal connection, don't forget that one of the most attractive qualities a person can have is the ability to make other people feel attractive.
