Local opinions mixed on evacuating

PANAMA CITY — Hurricane Michael doesn't scare Fyderrick Bush.

The Millville resident and his family loaded about 10, 20-pound bags full of ice from an automated machine on Fifth Street Tuesday afternoon into their car — part of their preparations to ride out the hurricane set to hit the area today.

"I'm not going anywhere," said Bush, who has lived in the area the past 15 years. "I don't run from nothing."

The county issued a mandatory evacuation for much of Panama City and Bay County that began Tuesday morning. And while many motorists clogged streets or packed their cars to evacuate, a quick tour of the city revealed plenty of people who chose to ride out the latest hurricane.

Bush said he, his wife Amber and their four children were prepared for the impending hurricane, which could generate flooding and produce winds strong enough to damage homes and uproot trees.

Xavier McKenzie, 7, puts a 20-pound bag of ice into his family's car as Hurricane Michael approaches on Tuesday. Xavier and his family do not live in a storm surge area, so are prepared for possibly losing power and will not evacuate.

PANAMA CITY BEACH — As thousands of people evacuated Bay County ahead of Hurricane Michael, first responders prepared to stay in place.

Most — if not almost all — law enforcement, firefighters and hospital personnel began working staggered, 12-hour shifts across the county as the storm tracked toward Bay County.

Bay County Sheriff's Office Lt. David Higgins had been on duty Tuesday since 4:30 a.m. He said there had been only minor squabbles over gasoline and sparse wrecks leading up to the 6 a.m. evacuation. When traffic began thinning and

BAY ASKED, WE ANSWERED

New Herald staff report

PANAMA CITY — Before, during and after the storm, The News Herald is answering reader questions as part of our Bay Asked, We Answered series.

Have a question you want us to investigate? Something you've always wondered about? Ask us at news Herald.com/bay-asked-we-answered.

Will Domino's still deliver?

All open and close times are dependent on weather.

Domino's, 1111 W. 15th Street, Panama City: This location has a generator and will try to open today.

Domino's, 519 N. Tyn-dall Parkway, Panama City: Today's hours are dependent on storm.

Domino's, 9528 Front Beach Road, Panama City Beach: Not planning to open today.

Domino's, 272 S. State 79, Panama City Beach: Might open later today.

How bad will the storm surge be on Panama City Beach?

The storm surge in Panama City Beach is estimated between 6 and 9 feet. City officials are urging residents to take this storm seriously.

What time is the local airport closing?

Because of mandatory evacuations, airport administration will be closed today. Upcoming flights scheduled to and from ECP will be affected so check with your airline for specific updates before heading to the airport.

Would Orlando be a good spot to evacuate to?

Congressman Neal Dunn recommended people head toward Birmingham, Alabama, saying that would keep people out of the "bad side" of the storm.

fuel reserves were bought out, all that activity dropped off, Higgins said.

As of later Tuesday, Higgins was driving the streets and announcing that emergency responders would not be able to help those remaining behind during the hurricane. Higgins said that early today officers will be helping, for as long as possible, people get to shelter who need transportation.

"It's not in our blood to quit," Higgins said. "We'll stay until we can't do it any more, or the job is done."

When the hurricane is bearing down on Panama City Beach, emergency crews likely will be pinned in impromptu shelters themselves. Hospitals are prepared to care for people before and after with all doctors, nurses and "non-critical staff" in-house at Bay Medical Center.

"We are very blessed to have a staff that fully responded," said Martha Crombie, spokeswoman.

Once Hurricane Michael passes over Bay County, emergency responders will be on the streets in full force. Many people staying behind announced their presence to emergency responders, but many others have not. In the aftermath of the storm, Higgins said, they will be checking on the people they know about and looking at damage to get medical treatment to any people in need.

"We're hoping for the best," he said. "If it's as bad as it seems, we'll rescue however many people that are still here."

As of press time Tuesday, the hurricane had reached Category 3 strength with wind gusts of 120 mph, with a chance for 8 to 12 inches of rain and as much as an 8-foot storm surge.

Congressman Neil Dunn said the intensity could reach up to wind speeds of a Category 4 hurricane by landfall. As of noon, Dunn was warning that traffic leaving Panama City Beach did not reflect the amount of people who ought to be evacuating the approaching hurricane.

"If you live in Panama City Beach," Dunn said, "you need to be leaving."

Dunn encouraged people to either head for western parts of Alabama or retreat to the storm shelters of Northside Elementary School and Deane Bozeman School.

Dunn said people need only to prepare about three days worth of clothes to stay at the shelters, where food and water will be provided.

The major concern during this "catastrophic storm," as Dunn described it, would be the storm surge, or the amount of water above sea level to be pushed inland. Some of the projections, depending on where Hurricane Michael makes landfall, show about 8 feet.

"That's an awful lot of Bay County," he said.

Sea levels along the immediate coast line early Tuesday already were much higher than average and were lapping at the bases of beachfront condos on the east end of Panama City Beach.

"We've even got a boat too and a dinghy, so we're not worried about flooding," Amber Bush said as she fed the ice machine more money.

Bush, who owns A&F Services, a janitorial and handyman business, said he recently bought extra chains and fuel for his chainsaws to help others after the hurricane passes.

"We're preparing for cutting trees," he said.

Antionice Chancellor also got a couple of bags of ice from the machine as part of her preparations to live through the hurricane. Chancellor, who lives in Hiland Park, said she has been in the Bay County area all her life and made it through several major hurricanes, including Opal and Ivan.

"I really don't think it's going to be that bad," she said. "Also, most of our family lives in Georgia and we're not prepared to go down south because everything happened so quick."

Chancellor's 7-year-old son, Xavier McKenzie, said he had been busy helping his mom get ready.

"We've got flashlights and candles and tons of bottled waters," McKenzie said.

A few miles away in the Cove, Julie Logsdon and her husband packed their SUV with clothes, musical equipment and other supplies, along with their two dachshunds, Tobias and Luna, and two Russian blue cats, Fennel and Sake. The crew planned to evacuate and bunk with family in Jacksonville for a few days.

"I'm hoping the pets don't kill each other," Logsdon said with a laugh. "One of the cats is not good with the dogs."

Logsdon said she has lived in Florida for 30 years, but can't recall ever being in a mandatory evacuation before.

"There's a lot more older trees around here," Logsdon said, pointing to trees around her home. "I feel like it's more of a safety issue here, and I don't want to get stranded."

The couple wasn't totally unprepared to travel, with Logsdon noting that they had planned to visit Jacksonville this weekend anyway.

"We are just going a little earlier," Logsdon said.

Barbara and David Hays will experience their first hurricane today. The couple retired and moved from Washington to a home in the Cove two years ago.

Barbara Hays said they moved to Florida to be closer to their daughter, who lives in Valdosta, Georgia. She said their only evacuation option would be to their daughter's home, but it too is in the path of the hurricane.

"If we're going to be without power or anything, we might as well stay here," she said.

Hays said she and her husband had plenty of supplies, from coolers full of water, ice and sodas to dehydrated food and a generator.

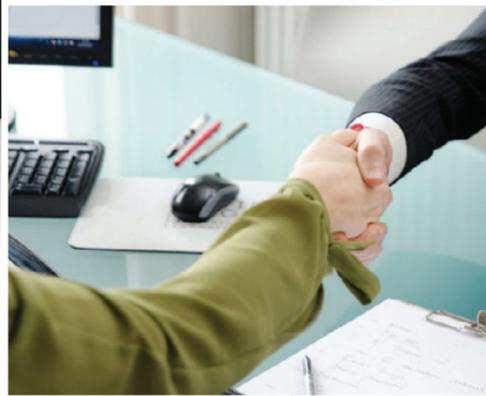

"And we've got a lot of propane and barbecue," David Hays said while taking a break from boarding up his home's front window.

On Springfield Avenue,

Tammy Cherry on Tuesday afternoon was checking and securing two rental homes she owns. Cherry said she lives in Panama City, but wasn't sure yet if she would evacuate.

"I'm not scared, to be honest, because I believe it's not going to be as bad of an impact," Cherry said. "But I still might head to the Mobile area."

Haley's exit: For reasons unknown

By Aaron Blake
The Washington Post

Nikki Haley is resigning as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations. And the timing is raising eyebrows.

Trump and Haley held a quickly arranged media availability Tuesday morning in the White House, shortly after Axios Jonathan Swan of Axios broke the news of her impending exit. Haley said her resignation was simply about needing a break after six years as South Carolina governor and two at the U.N., and President Donald Trump said Haley had even previewed a desire to leave as long as six months ago.

The two were eager to downplay the idea that this was hasty. But if it wasn't, that might make the timing even odder.

If this was long-planned, it was apparently the best-kept secret in Trump's White House. The news reportedly blindsided those in the foreign policy establishment and even members of Haley's staff.

Haley's exit is due before the end of the year, which means she could be around for as many as 12 more weeks. But she and the White House chose to announce this just four weeks before the 2018 election? The White House is effectively announcing the exit of its most popular Cabinet-level official — the extremely rare one who has strong approval among both Republicans and Democrats — just before voters vote. If Haley's exit isn't imminent, why not wait till after the election so it doesn't look like the administration is shedding one of its best-liked, steadying forces?

U.N. Ambassador Nikki Haley will leave her post at the end of the year. (ZACH GIBSON/BLOOMBERG)

The breaking news also comes as Trump and Republicans appeared to be on the front foot when it comes to the aftermath of Brett Kavanaugh's Supreme Court confirmation. Republican enthusiasm is up, and a poll late Monday even suggested that independents viewed Democrats' actions surrounding Kavanaugh more dimly than Republicans'. The GOP had a clear interest in keeping things focused on Kavanaugh, yet the White House inserted this the morning after Kavanaugh's ceremonial swearing-in.

Haley's is also the first major administration exit since that anonymous New York Times op-ed in which a still-unknown "senior administration official" talked about how officials were working to check Trump's impulses and even undermine him in certain ways. Haley's name quickly rose to the top when it came to potential authors of the op-ed — given her well-established independence within the administration — but she issued perhaps the strongest rebuke of the author in an op-ed of her own.

The timing is also odd given a headline that popped up just a day before the announcement. A Washington watchdog group, Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Washington (CREW), called for an investigation into her use of private travel on the government's dime. We don't know whether there is anything untoward going on, but resigning so shortly after that headline drops wouldn't seem to be optimal — especially given that similar ethics allegations took down Cabinet officials such as Tom Price and Scott Pruitt.

Rep. Mark Sanford, R-S.C., raised that story with MSNBC shortly after Haley's resignation. Sanford, a fellow former South Carolina governor who has been allies with Haley in the past but is now an administration critic, said of the story: "Something doesn't smell right. Something's weird."

Sanford's speculation could just be Sanford being Sanford — he's one of the most quixotic politicians in the country — but it's not unreasonable to wonder what's going on. So much is unknown. About the only reason for the timing we can rule out at this point is that this is all about 2020. Haley in her availability with Trump said she won't run against Trump and will instead campaign for him. She also offered glowing praise for Ivanka Trump and Jared Kushner, calling the latter a "hidden genius."

But if there was a simple, good reason for this departure being announced now, we don't know it yet.

Law enforcement will determine bridge closures

It's the most talked about question every storm — when will the bridges be closed?

The plan in Bay County is a little different than during past storms.

For the Hathaway bridge, instead of a set wind speed, law enforcement will determine where or not it's safe to cross the bridge as the storm goes on. Officials emphasized during the storm that people shouldn't be driving on the roads unless it's an absolute emergency.

As for the Dupont Bridge, Tyndall Air Force Base has said the Florida Highway Patrol plans to close the DuPont Bridge when winds reach 40 miles per hour.

[PATTI BLAKE/ THE NEWS HERALD]

Rescue Mission will continue to serve meals at both of its centers at Bethel Village, 1313 East 11th St., and at the Mission, 609 Allen Ave. for as long as supplies last, according to a news release. Both locations have gas stoves, and gallons of water have been filled-in the event water has to be boiled.

“Both centers can take up to a total of 60 extra people, and no sexual offenders are allowed.

Those with medical needs are advised to seek shelter at another location because no medical staff will be available, but people in wheelchairs will be accommodated,” a news release stated. “Women and children are to go to Bethel Village, and men can go to the mission on Allen Avenue. If someone leaves the shelter, then they will not be guaranteed a bed. People with transportation and homes are encouraged to look for shelter elsewhere, and only use the Panama City Rescue Mission as a last resort.”

Police and mission officials will direct individuals to a different shelter once the Panama City Rescue Mission reaches capacity.

For more information, call Bethel Village at 850-914-0533 or the Panama City Rescue Mission at 850-769-0783.

Foes stall push to fix foreign lobbying law

By Richard Lardner
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A push to give the Justice Department more enforcement authority over the lucrative and at times shadowy world of foreign lobbying is stalled amid opposition from pro-business groups, nonprofits and privacy advocates.

Organizations that range from the influential U.S. Chamber of Commerce to the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers have raised objections to legislation that would sharpen the teeth of the Foreign Agents Registration Act. The law, enacted 80 years ago to expose Nazi propaganda, requires people to disclose when they lobby in the U.S. on behalf of foreign governments or political entities.

bipartisan support for cracking down on unregistered foreign agents, several of the changes proposed in congressional bills could backfire by sweeping in a host of unintended targets, according to critics. That pushback has effectively kept the legislation from advancing as lobbying groups press for revisions.

One of the most contentious provisions would eliminate a popular loophole that permits lobbyists representing foreign commercial interests to be exempt from the law, known as FARA. That shift, one business group has warned, could extend the rigorous disclosure requirements to U.S. subsidiaries of global companies, stigmatizing them as foreign agents even though they employ thousands of Americans. Congressional interest in fortifying the law comes in the aftermath of Russia's meddling in the 2016 election and a special counsel investigation that's drawn greater attention to the inner workings of international influence peddling.

Most recently, Paul Manafort, the former Trump campaign chairman, admitted in a plea deal that he'd failed to register as a foreign agent when he directed a lobbying operation for Ukrainian interests. Prosecutors said he concealed millions of dollars in income for the work from the IRS.

Earlier this year, federal prosecutors unveiled an indictment against a Russian troll farm accused of interfering in the 2016 election through bogus Facebook posts that revealed how foreign parties can weaponize social media to influence public opinion.

10 minutes of terror in Indonesia

A quake, a tsunami and a missing son among tragedies faced in Palu

By Todd Pitman
The Associated Press

In this Oct. 5 photo, Musrifah, left, cries beside her husband Hakim and daughter Syafa Ramadi as they visit the area where their house used to stand before a massive earthquake and tsunami hit their seaside village in Palu, Central Sulawesi, Indonesia. [AARON FAVILA/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

PALU, Indonesia — The Muslim call to prayer had just started echoing across the Indonesian city of Palu when Musrifah's home began to shake violently.

Family photos fell from the walls. Dishes and glasses crashed to the floor. A television smashed onto the white tiles of their living room, prompting Musrifah to scoop her 2-year-old son into her arms.

Seconds later, the concrete sides of their one-story house cracked, then crumbled, filling the air inside with pale clouds of dust.

"Mommy!" the terrified boy cried, his body trembling as his hands pressed into her back.

"Don't worry," she told him. "I'm here."

It was 6:02 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 28, and what followed over the next 10 minutes was a catastrophe remarkable even by the standards of disaster-prone Indonesia. The magnitude 7.5 quake triggered not just a tsunami that leveled coastal neighborhoods but also a geological phenomenon known as liquefaction in which the soil began to move like a liquid and swallowed entire neighborhoods into the earth.

The disasters would kill nearly 2,000 people. Thousands more would go missing. Among them was Musrifah's son, Bima Alfarezi.

The ground always trembles

Growing up on the island of Sulawesi, where Palu is located, Musrifah had grown used to earthquakes. Indonesia, a vast archipelago of 260 million people, is located along one of the most seismically active regions of the world, an arc of volcanoes and fault lines in the Pacific Basin known as the Ring of Fire.

Though they could be scary, quakes in Palu rarely caused severe damage.

After a 2004 tsunami killed 230,000 people in a dozen countries, more than half of them in Indonesia, the threat of deadly waves was seared into the national imagination. But Palu had not experienced one in Musrifah's lifetime, and most people believed the city was safe because it sits at the base of a long, relatively narrow bay shadowed on both sides by lush mountains.

"We thought that would protect us" from the violence of the sea, said Musrifah, a nurse who like many Indonesians uses a single name.

And few here, if any, had ever heard of liquefaction.

Devastating walls of water

The shallow quake was 200 times more powerful than the atomic bomb U.S. forces dropped on Hiroshima during World War II, according to Indonesian authorities, and it triggered a massive tsunami that was barreling straight down Palu Bay.

Cellphone video aired on local TV showed the moment the wave's long white crescent, clearly visible in the dark green water, approached the shore.

A man filming the scene from a parking garage yells to those below: "Tsunami! Tsunami! ... Run! Go!"

BRIEF CASE

WASHINGTON IMF downgrades outlook for world economy

The International Monetary Fund is downgrading its outlook for the world economy, citing rising interest rates and growing tensions over trade.

The IMF said Monday that the global economy will grow 3.7 percent this year, the same as in 2017 but down from the 3.9 percent it was forecasting for 2018 in July. It slashed its outlook for the 19 countries that use the euro currency and for Central and Eastern Europe, Latin America, the Middle East and Sub-Saharan Africa.

The report comes on the eve of the Oct. 12-14 meetings in Bali, Indonesia, of the IMF and its sister lending organization, the World Bank.

BERLIN German industry urges breakthrough at Brexit talks

German's main industry association says political leaders need to make a major breakthrough at upcoming negotiations on ending Britain's membership in the European Union.

The Federation of German Industries, known as BDI, cautioned Tuesday that a so-called hard Brexit with Britain leaving the bloc with no trade deal would be a "disaster" for businesses on both sides of the English Channel.

BDI head Joachim Lang says "Europe needs to prevent a worst-case Brexit scenario" and be prepared to compromise at the upcoming talks. At the same time, "the prerequisite is that London finally grasps reality."

ISLAMABAD Pakistan's currency dips as it seeks IMF loan

Pakistan's currency plunged by about 7 percent on Tuesday after the government said it would seek emergency bailout loans from the International Monetary Fund.

The Pakistani rupee briefly weakened to 138 to the dollar on Tuesday before settling at 133.6. The rupee was trading at 124.3 at close of business Monday, before the announcement was made.

Going for an edge

Google brings camera twists, bigger screens to its latest Pixel phones

By Anick Jesdanun and Michael Liedtke

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Google's new Pixel phones mirror an industry trend toward lush, bigger screens and add twists on the camera for better pictures.

The third generation of Pixel phones unveiled Tuesday at an event in New York features screens that span from one edge to another. It's the first time Google has embraced the format, which Samsung has had for a few years and Apple adopted last year.

But Google is undercutting Apple on price. The Pixel 3 will be available Oct. 18 starting at $799 — $200 below the least expensive iPhone XS. A larger version, the Pixel 3 XL, costs $100 more.

Google is also hiring photographer Annie Leibovitz to take pictures with the new Pixel in an effort to persuade consumers that its camera is superior.

The camera, for instance, promises better low-light and close-up shots by using artificial-intelligence software to combine multiple shots taken in succession. It will also warn you if someone blinked or if the shot is otherwise poor. The camera automatically takes about three seconds of shots, at lower resolution, and will recommend an alternative.

The Pixel joins LG's V40 in sporting a second front lens to fit more people into selfies. But it lacks a zoom lens on either side, something available on some iPhones and Samsung phones. Instead, Google uses software to mimic that effect.

Beyond the camera, Google is using artificial intelligence to help screen calls. Just tap on a button for Google's voice assistant to ask the caller about the purpose of the call. You see a transcript of the response on the screen. You can choose to pick up or ignore the call. Callers are warned that they are talking to a robot and that a transcript would be made.

Although the Pixels have barely made a dent in the market since their debut two years ago, Google uses them to highlight what it considers to be the best features of its Android operating system. A previously announced feature in which software will call businesses to make appointments and restaurant reservations for you will debut on the Pixel first, for instance — initially in New York, Atlanta, Phoenix, Arizona, and the San Francisco Bay Area.

IDC analyst Ramon Llamas said the Pixel 3 doesn't break new ground on hardware, but "software is a different story. It's mostly about convenience here."

As usual, the Pixel phones focus heavily on Google's search engine, maps, digital assistant and YouTube video service.

Google has sold an estimated 7 million Pixels over the past two years, almost imperceptible next to the 3.6 billion phones shipped during that time, according to IDC. Apple alone sold 388 million iPhones during the same period.

Tuesday's announcements come a day after Google disclosed a flaw that could have exposed personal information of up to 500,000 users of its Plus social network. Google declined to address that further Tuesday, though executives emphasized privacy and security throughout the event in New York.

For instance, the camera's features for better shots will take advantage of software on the device itself, so that nothing gets sent to Google's servers — unless you enable a backup feature with Google Photos. The Pixel 3 will have a new chip, called Titan, to store keys to the most sensitive information, including those needed to unlock the phone and scramble stored data. Many other phones already have similar hardware for security.

In boon for farmers, Trump to lift restrictions on ethanol

By Matthew Daly

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Trump administration is moving to allow year-round sales of gasoline with higher blends of ethanol, a boon for Iowa and other farm states that have pushed for greater sales of the corn-based fuel.

President Donald Trump is expected to announce he is lifting a federal ban on summer sales of high-ethanol blends during a trip to Iowa on Tuesday.

"It's an amazing substance. You look at the Indy cars. They run 100 percent on ethanol," Trump said at the White House before leaving for Iowa.

He said he wants more energy production and to help farmers and refiners.

"I want more because I don't like $74," Trump said referring to the current price of a barrel of crude oil. "If I have to do more — whether it's through ethanol or another means — that's what I want. I want low prices."

The long-expected announcement is something of a reward to Iowa Sen. Chuck Grassley, who as Senate Judiciary Committee chairman led a contentious but successful fight to confirm Brett Kavanaugh to the Supreme Court. The veteran Republican lawmaker is the Senate's leading ethanol proponent and sharply criticized the Trump administration's proposed rollback in ethanol volumes earlier this year.

Grassley called the proposal "a very good victory for agriculture," ethanol workers and the environment. "Everything about this is good, good, good," Grassley said Tuesday after he and Sen. Joni Ernst, R-Iowa, met with Trump at the White House.

A senior administration official said Monday that the Environmental Protection Agency will publish a rule to allow high-ethanol blends as part of a package of proposed changes to the ethanol mandate. The official spoke on condition of anonymity ahead of Trump's announcement.

The change would allow year-round sales of gasoline blends with up to 15 percent ethanol. Gasoline typically contains 10 percent ethanol.

The EPA currently bans the high-ethanol blend, called E15, during the summer because of concerns that it contributes to smog on hot days, a claim ethanol industry advocates say is unfounded.

In May, Republican senators, including Grassley, announced a tentative agreement with the White House to allow year-round E15 sales, but the EPA did not propose a formal rule change.

The Trump administration official said the proposed rule intends to allow E15 sales next summer. Current regulations prevent retailers in much of the country from offering E15 from June 1 to Sept. 15.

Stocks mixed as rates take a pause

By Stan Choe
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — U.S. stock indexes ended Tuesday nearly where they began, as interest rates let off the accelerator following their sharp rise last week. But the modest moves for indexes masked some roiling underneath.

Raw-material producers plunged on worries that inflation and weaker demand are eating into their profits. On the opposite end were technology stocks and other sectors, which recovered some of the sharp losses caused by last week's rapid rise in interest rates.

Altogether, the cross-currents left the S&P 500 down 4.09 points, or 0.1 percent, at 2,880.34. It had waffled between small gains and losses for most of the day, and roughly three stocks fell in the index for every two that rose.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 56.21, or 0.2 percent, to 26,430.57, and the Nasdaq composite added 2.07, or less than 0.1 percent, to 7,738.02.

At the center of the movements were interest rates, which sway how quickly the economy grows, how expensive it is for companies and households to borrow and how high a price investors are willing to pay for stocks. The yield on the 10-year Treasury dipped to 3.20 percent from 3.22 late Friday in the first day of trading after bond markets were closed for a holiday on Monday.

The pause came after bond yields surged last week following several encouraging reports on the economy. The 10-year Treasury yield was just 3.05 percent last Tuesday, and the speed of the recent rise has been more concerning to investors than the level. If rates go high enough, they can hurt profits for companies and drive investors away from stocks and into bonds.

Tuesday's ease in rates helped technology stocks, which have been leading the market, both on the way up for most of the past year and on the way down over the last week. Technology companies are producing some of the biggest profit growth in the market, but their stocks are also trading at relatively high prices relative to those earnings.

System does not have 'design flaws'

The ugly, brutal battle to confirm Judge Brett Kavanaugh — now Justice Kavanaugh — to the U.S. Supreme Court will leave exposed wounds in our political system that won't soon heal. But those are tied to ideology.

We must be more concerned about the now-emerging gripes from anti-Kavanaugh forces that attack the structure of our political system. If those gain a toehold in the popular consciousness, we might lose something far more precious.

On Saturday, The Washington Post ran an article that noted Kavanaugh will be the "first justice nominated by someone who lost the popular vote (President Donald Trump) to earn his seat on the bench with support from senators representing less than half of the country while having his nomination opposed by a majority of the country." The Post followed up that analysis with a piece on Monday that noted "a palpable, growing sense among the Democratic base that the system is rigged against them."

"(I)t's 100 percent true that Democrats are increasingly on the short end of how the U.S. government is set up," columnist Aaron Blake noted, while revisiting the aforementioned article by Post reporter Philip Bump.

Along these lines, tweets appeared on Saturday from folks like MSNBC host Lawrence O'Donnell and influential Harvard Law School professor Laurence Tribe. O'Donnell, who was a Democratic strategist before he became a host on the liberal cable network, noted, "Founders' design flaws in democracy — electoral college & 2 senators per state no matter the size of population — have created the current Supreme Court."

These comments suggest that because of the circumstances, Kavanaugh and our system of government are both illegitimate.

Don't buy into it.

Such comments are nothing short of an attack on the American political system that has proven extremely durable to threats, foreign and domestic, for 230 years — a system that, by restraining the raw power of government and respecting the rights of those in the political minority, has created more freedom and respect for the individual's rights than any that came before it or that currently exists.

What these fevered takes on Kavanaugh conveniently avoid is that the system they disparage sent two of their heroes to the high court.

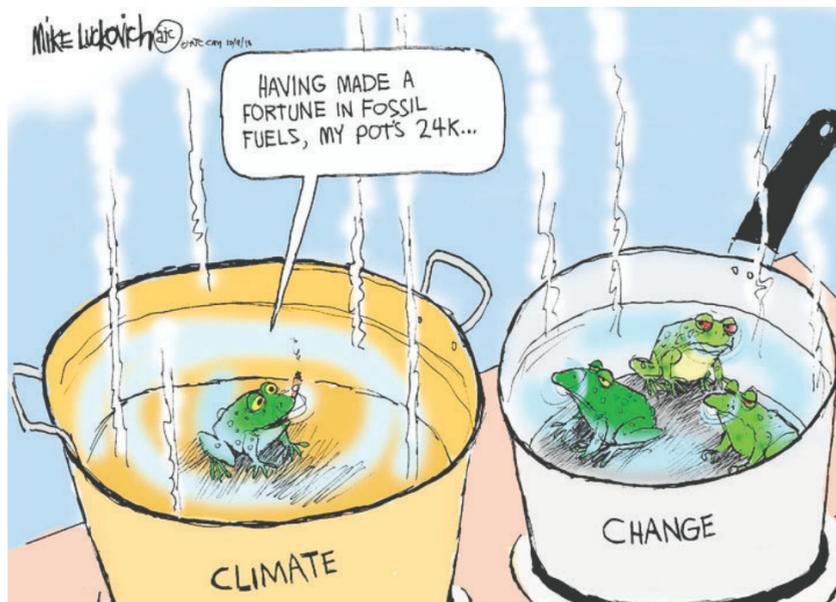

Bill Clinton won the White House in 1992 with just 43 percent of the vote. To put that in perspective, Clinton's 1992 popular-vote percentage was not only lower than Trump's (46 percent), it was also the lowest secured by the winner of a multi-candidate race since 1912. Yet Clinton nominated, and the Senate confirmed, Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Stephen Breyer, both of whom lean heavily to the left.

Moreover, since we began tracking the presidential popular vote in 1824, we've had 27 elections with more than two candidates who received a noticeably measurable amount of votes. So Trump is more aligned with historical norms than his critics allow.

Additionally, yes, Hillary Clinton received almost 2.9 million more votes than Trump. But one state — California — supplied that margin. Trump was more popular nationally than his critics care to admit.

As the libertarian philosopher Ludwig von Mises wrote nearly 70 years ago, "It is not true that the masses are always right and know the means for attaining the ends aimed at. ... Majorities too may err and destroy our civilization."

We tempt that fate if we surrender to the idea that our system's "design flaws," as O'Donnell put it, must be fixed.

On NAFTA, Trump averts the danger he created

Stephen Chapman

It's an old theme of movies, TV dramas and even cartoons: A nasty villain ties an innocent damsel to a railroad track, and her terror mounts as a train hurtles toward her — until at the last moment, a hero comes to the rescue. It's also a regular theme of the current administration. The twist is that the villain and the hero are the same person: Donald Trump.

The revised NAFTA, christened the United States-Mexico-Canada Agreement, is the product of his peculiar approach to disputes. First he heaps scorn on the status quo. Then he emits a torrent of demands and threats, some of which could be disastrous, generating anxiety and uncertainty. Finally, he extracts some modest changes, for better or worse, and invites the praise of a grateful nation. (In the case of North Korea, he then proceeds to fall in love with his negotiating partner, but that may be a one-time fancy.)

As a candidate, Trump reserved special disgust for NAFTA, which he called "the worst trade deal maybe ever." He vowed that he would withdraw if Mexico and Canada wouldn't accept major changes.

But last month, the administration reached an agreement with the Mexican government, allowing Trump to crow about his deal-making prowess. "A lot of people thought we'd never get here," he said. He also indicated that if the Canadians didn't want to accept the same terms, they were welcome to climb onto an Arctic iceberg and float away. The Oct. 1 deadline the U.S. imposed on Canada raised the prospect that the whole package could collapse, to the detriment of the entire North American economy.

Letting Trump conduct negotiations with foreign governments is like leaving teenagers unsupervised at home for a weekend. You don't expect to find the place in better condition when you return; you just hope it hasn't burned down.

The most important fact about the new version of NAFTA is that it would preserve more and destroy less than Trump led his followers to believe. But making a few changes and giving it a new name lets him strike a heroic pose.

Congress still has to decide whether to approve the agreement, but in general, it would preserve the North American free trade zone, with zero tariffs on the vast majority of goods crossing national borders.

There are some actual upgrades, as Gary Hufbauer, an economist at the Peterson Institute for International Economics, notes.

But most of what the administration got would impede commerce, restrict businesses and harm consumers. By 2023, at least 40 percent of the components in every vehicle would have to be made by workers earning at least $16 an hour. The administration demanded that provision to force manufacturers to move production out of Mexico.

Republicans generally oppose minimum wage increases — which is what this mandate would amount to — but if the change were to cause layoffs in Mexico, the Trump administration would count it as an achievement. Hufbauer worries that the precedent will mean "Democrats will put minimum wages in every future trade agreement."

The deal would also weaken protections for U.S. businesses operating in many sectors of the Mexican economy, making them vulnerable to onerous regulations that diminish or destroy the value of their property. Why would the administration want to expose American firms to greater risk in Mexico? Simple: to discourage them from investing in Mexico.

Still, the outcome could have been much worse.

READER FEEDBACK

A Supreme Court with a new conservative majority takes the bench as Brett Kavanaugh, narrowly confirmed after a bitter Senate battle, joins his new colleagues to hear his first arguments as a justice.

Pelvo White: "Judge Kavanaugh will do his master's bidding. His master is President Donald Trump. Trump will try to use the law to continue to rape and pollute the earth, disenfranchise the aged, women, minorities and children. Kavanaugh will declare that he will follow the doctrine of stare decisis relative to case law, and not make new law, but every certiorari he get the opportunity to address will be his attempt at undoing case law established via the doctrine of stare decisis that helped the earth, aged, women, minorities, and children thereby making new law more in keeping with the will of the super capitalist Donald Trump who is seeking to unfetter capitalism to its fullest extent so that the super rich and the rich may stuff their pockets at the expense of the underpaid poor man's labor."

President Donald Trump apologized to Brett Kavanaugh for the bitter battle over his confirmation to the Supreme Court and declared him "innocent" of the sexual assault allegations that nearly derailed his nomination.

Richard Weber: "During his remarks straight from Bizarro World, Trump falsely claimed Kavanaugh was "proven innocent" just days after the conclusion of an FBI investigation that failed to interview dozens of witnesses that likely could have validated the multiple allegations against the new Supreme Court justice. While Republicans take a victory lap over the confirmation of an accused sexual predator that the majority of the country doesn't support, Joy Reid warned them that evidence against Brett Kavanaugh could jeopardize his position on the United States Supreme Court. From the thousands of unreleased documents from Kavanaugh's time in the Bush administration to the possibility of more accusers coming forward, the new Supreme Court justice is still not out of the woods. Ha, Ha, Ha! If Trump wants to declare Kavanaugh innocent he should have at least have a trial."

In a recent letter to the editor, Paul Wright, director of the Human Rights Defense Center, said, "Do you think Dr. King would approve of Amendment 4? I don't, because you can't fight discrimination and bigotry by perpetuating it. I encourage Florida voters to vote against this ballot initiative."

Joshua Hicks: "I agree with you...on principle. But you're throwing the baby out with the bathwater. It's interesting you bring up Dr King. I'm sure everyone will agree the Civil Rights Acts wasn't optimal, but it was better than most of the alternatives. We sometimes pass imperfect legislation because it's actually the best option at the time. The same applies to this amendment. You're angry because your group wasn't included in this, and rightfully so. In a truly free society, it's never acceptable to restrict voting rights - EVER, for ANY reason. But your solution is to maintain the status quo and continue to disenfranchise the very voters that would actually assist you in restoring yours. Your heart is in the right place here, but your thinking is short-sighted."

PC advances on City Hall suit

By Patrick McCreless
522-5118 | @PCNHPatrickM
pmccreless@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY — City leaders declared a consulting firm in default of contract on Tuesday for allegedly misleading officials on the cost to renovate a building for a new city hall.

The notice of default is the latest step toward the Panama City Commission possibly suing ZHA Inc. regarding its handling of the project to renovate the former Trustmark Bank building on Harrison Avenue. At stake are millions of dollars in taxpayer money possibly lost needlessly.

The commission also directed its attorneys to continue evaluating damages the city might have suffered and develop a potential lawsuit.

"We can't ignore this," Mayor Greg Brudnicki said. "It's not just our money, its taxpayers' money."

The commission approved a formal notice of default of contract and directed attorneys to continue litigation efforts during its regular Tuesday meeting. Any possible lawsuit still must be approved by the commission at a later meeting.

"We're placing ZHA on notice that they're in default with the city ... that their performance was unsatisfactory," said Nevin Zimmerman, city attorney.

Zimmerman said he predicted a potential lawsuit would be recommended to the commission for approval. He also said the damages the city could receive in a lawsuit are potentially higher than the few millions it might have lost in the deal.

"It's unknown what the damages are at this time, but it's not the difference between $4 million and $8 million," Zimmerman said. "That's not how you calculate that."

In question is what ZHA told the city the cost would be to renovate and move into the Trustmark building. According to a report presented Tuesday at the meeting by attorney Clifford Higby, who the city hired to pursue the case, ZHA told the city that for about $4.03 million, the Trustmark building could be turned into a new city hall. It repeated that claim from 2016 through 2017, the report states. Combined with the building purchase price of

South Walton readies for Hurricane Michael

MIRAMAR BEACH — Along Scenic Highway 98 in Walton County, parking spots in front of the condominiums lining the Gulf of Mexico were largely empty Tuesday morning.

A few tourists walked under gray and threatening skies to take a look at the pounding surf crashing toward the dunes in and around Miramar Beach.

Olivia Trammell and her husband, Jason, visiting from Knoxville, Tenn., stood on the boardwalk near the eastern end of Scenic 98 with their school-age children and a friend, watching the surf and trying to calculate when they would leave for home.

They had been on vacation for several days, and had heard nothing of the approaching hurricane before leaving Tennessee.

"I think we're going to head out later this afternoon," Olivia Trammell said. The family had gassed up their car a couple of days ago, and was just waiting for traffic to clear out before heading home.

"We didn't want to get stuck in all the tourist traffic," Trammell said.

Late Tuesday morning, traffic was flowing smoothly on Walton's U.S. Highway 331 Clyde B. Wells Bridge and the Midbay Bridge farther west in Destin as visitors responded to a mandatory call to evacuate coastal areas. Two Walton County Sheriff's Office deputies were stationed at the foot of the Highway 331 bridge.

Sheriff Michael Adkinson reported early in the afternoon that tourists and residents were responding well to the evacuation order and that a widening of the 331 Bridge completed in late 2016 had "noticeably" improved the ability to move traffic.

"Traffic has been heavy at times, but it has never been at a standstill," Adkinson said.

The 331 Bridge will be closed when sustained winds from Hurricane Michael reach 40 mph, according to Jeff Goldberg, the director of Walton County Emergency Management. Adkinson said he was expecting the bridge closure would occur sometime late Tuesday night or early Wednesday morning.

Earlier in the day, at a press conference with Gov. Rick Scott, Adkinson offered assurances that his agency and the South Walton Fire District would remain on duty and at work during the storm crisis.

He asked residents "to honor and respect their commitment to protect you" and reiterated Scott's warning that rescue operations won't be conducted while the hurricane is blowing through the region.

"We're going to have to ride this out," Adkinson said.

He said the Sheriff's Office and county will do everything possible to keep the populace notified on the status of evacuation routes, and made it clear that when the decision is made to close the 331 Bridge there would be no turning back.

"There will be no negotiation," Adkinson said. "When that bridge is closed, it is closed. I will not reopen the bridge."

Hurricane Michael is expected to pummel Walton County with six to 10 inches of rain and winds estimated to reach somewhere between 74 and 110 mph. The storm is also expected to batter the county's coastline with a storm surge between three to six feet, a mid-day

A look at some of the worst hurricanes to have hit Bay County

By Katie Landeck
522-5114 | @PCNHKatieL

Editor's Note: This is a rerun of an News Herald story we thought was fitting ahead of Hurricane Michael.

PANAMA CITY — The first female named storm in the history of United States plowed right into the western edge of Bay County on June 6, 1953.

Her name was Alice.

There were no reports of damage associated with the tropical storm, according to National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) records, just a lot of rain — 13.48 inches — that ended a dry spell in the region.

The record for hurricane and tropical storms in the United States, however, goes back further than Alice to the mid-1800s. Up until 1951, storms simply went unnamed, then there was a brief period where the international phonetic alphabet was used. During these unnamed years, 18 storms came within 25 nautical miles of Panama City from 1851 to 1939, which included 10 hurricanes.

Since Alice, eight named storms have come within 25 nautical miles of Panama City. See all of their paths through the county here. If that number seems low, it's because some of the area's most remembered storms, such as Opal in 1995 and Eloise in 1975, technically hit farther away even though the county felt the impact.

Agnes: June 20, 1972

Tales of this storm were

Perhaps the most iconic photo after Hurricane Ivan ravaged Northwest Florida in 2004 was the destruction of the bridge on Interstate 10 leading into Pensacola. Ivan killed 64 people, 14 in Florida. [AL.COM] much exaggerated.

At least that's how Panama City Beach officials saw it when they decided to sue the National Weather Service and the media after the much-hyped storm swept through the county with little damage as a Category 1. The Beach Council vote 3-1 to file a $100 million lawsuit for lost tourism after "exaggerated reports."

"They do this just about every year, and it's costing us untold millions," PCB Mayor Dan Russell said at the time.

The lawsuit, as far as anyone can tell, never was filed.

Other areas of the state and country were less lucky. There was an estimated $3 billion worth of damage and 128 fatalities, according to reports, causing the name to be retired. Agnes was the next big storm to hit the area after Alice.

WAYLON GRAHAM

Waylon Graham of Port St. Joe, Florida, passed away suddenly on Oct 7, 2018, at the age of 82.

Waylon moved from Clarksville, Florida, to Port St. Joe in 1957 and established his home and raised a family. He worked at Sylvachem Corporation, now Arizona Chemical, until his retirement in 1997. Throughout his life, Waylon was involved in various civic activities such as volunteering for almost 30 years as the time clock operator for the Shark basketball team, being a member of the Quarterback Club for 25 years (many of those as president), serving as a member of the Lions Club, coaching and umpiring little league baseball and umpiring men's softball for many years.

Waylon also served as a volunteer firefighter for 30 years, some of those years as fire chief. He proudly served on the Gulf County School Board for almost 20 years and was honored to be inducted into the Shark Hall of Fame in 2016. Waylon served on the board of directors for the Gulf Coast Co-op since 2005, and served as president for one year. He considered one of his proudest accomplishments being a member of the Co-op where he fostered many lifelong, cherished friendships. He was an unbelievably generous father, grandfather, and great-grandfather and believed he was most blessed for having the time in retirement to fulfill his true passions in life which were his family, fishing and supporting the University of Florida football program.

Waylon was a humble man who came from very humble beginnings. During his working career he developed a reputation for loyalty and dedication to his employer. He considered his relationships, friends and acquaintances to be more precious than gold and will be sorely missed and remembered fondly by all.

Waylon was preceded in death by his parents, Duncan Graham and Exal Graham Holley. He is survived by his son, Waylon (Tony) Graham of Panama City; his daughter, Dianne Graham Mock and husband Jimmy of Port St. Joe; grandsons, Michael Mock and family and Chris Mock and family; granddaughter, Jessica Mock Brock and husband Jordan; a very special great-granddaughter, Gemma Graham Brock, all of Port St. Joe; his sister, Joanne Holt and husband, Raymond; and his longtime companion, Betty Jo Smith of Panama City.

Friends will be received from 6-8 p.m. EDT Friday, Oct. 12, 2018, at Hope Family Worship Center in Port St. Joe. Funeral services will take place at 1 p.m. EDT Saturday at the Port St. Joe High School gymnasium. Interment will follow the service at Clarksville Baptist Cemetery in Clarksville. Kent-Forest Lawn Funeral Home is assisting the family with arrangements.

report from the county said.

The early afternoon projections were based on the increasing likelihood that the storm would make landfall somewhere in the vicinity of Panama City, but recognized the possibility an unexpected shift to the west could wreak even more havoc upon Walton County than is already anticipated.

Major shopping centers were mostly empty Tuesday morning and coastal communities like Grayton Beach were like ghost towns, with tourists and locals headed out of town or hunkered down quietly.

The Trammell's daughter, Aliah, who turned 17 just last week, was a little reluctant to cut short a vacation that had originally been scheduled to last through Saturday.

"I want to stay," she said, "but no one else does."

"I want to experience something like this," she said.

A little farther west, at the public beach access at Pompano Joe's restaurant, young Chris Wise looked out at the rolling waves, trying to decide whether he might try a little surfing later in the day.

"It looks good," he said. Asked how likely it was that he'd be surfing later in the day, Wise looked out once again and said, "I'd say, 'Yeah.'"

Also surveying the beach Tuesday morning were Conner Fears and Cory Hill, lifeguards with Destin Fire Control District Station 10. They were at the beach to check on the surf condition flags — double red flags were up all along local beaches — and to check on surf conditions.

Both stressed that area lifeguards would respond to calls for assistance, but would not be regularly patrolling the beaches as weather conditions deteriorated.

Lifeguards train in surf conditions like the ones exhibited on Tuesday, but making a successful rescue in those conditions isn't necessarily a sure thing, they said.

"We would make the attempt" to rescue a floundering swimmer, but with no guarantees, Fears said.

"It's clear that the potential damages are substantial," Higby said of the possible lawsuit.

The report, which includes research from an engineering expert, states that the fundamental problems that increased the project cost stem from the planning and pre-construction period and ZHA's actions and inactions. According to the report, ZHA failed to evaluate the building and performed only a fraction of the roles and responsibilities it was contracted to perform.

The company also never provided the city a report on the $4 million renovation estimate, the report states.

$5.5 million, the entire project was supposed to cost about $10 million.

"It wasn't until January of this year that it became evident that the $4 million baseline was not an option," Zimmerman said.

To date, the city projects it will have spent $16 million on renovating the building when it opens in November. The city also expects to pay another $4 million in debt service on the project.

Eloise: Sept. 23, 1975

Eloise might be the worst storm in Bay County's history.

As the eye of the storm went over Walton County as a Category 3, Panama City Beach took the worst of it with more than $50 million in damage. The National Guard had to be called in to control sporadic looting, according to the next day's front page, and 130 mph winds and torrential rains leveled buildings. Many people had evacuated before the storm to Dothan, Alabama, or took advantage of shelters.

"I remember our mother packing us up and going to Mosley to ride out Eloise — we lived in Forest Park — since Mosley has no windows it was the safest place to go," Vicki John Wood-Smallman said on Facebook. "Afterwards, we drove out to the beach and saw all the destruction. Total businesses gone, nothing but concrete slabs."

The winds from the storm cracked open people's homes, spilling personal belongings everywhere.

"My mother-in-law got a new dishwasher that somehow landed nearby and used it for years," Anne Hodges said.

Damage to hotels was so severe there was concern they would not be ready to open in time for snowbirds.

After the storm, Eloise also was retired as a name.

Kate: Nov. 21, 1985

A late season storm, Kate was the next hurricane to make landfall in the Panhandle after Eloise.

The storm made landfall right on the Bay/Gulf County line, bringing 11-foot storm surges to the east, according to NOAA. This is yet another storm where Bay County officials said they were lucky to be on the west side of, as the counties to the east fared far worse.

Only six buildings (two single-family dwellings, one motel and one fishing pier in Panama City Beach, and two single-family dwellings in Mexico Beach) were damaged in Bay County, while 159 homes were damaged in Franklin County, according to a Florida Department of Natural Resource report.

Opal: Oct. 4, 1995

After Hurricane Opal hammered Bay County, The News Herald's headlines described an apocalypse. The Panama City Marina looked "like a war zone," homes sold as "flood safe" flooded, and much of the county was without power for three days.

But perhaps this headline plastered over a story describing the utter destruction to people's homes and businesses described it best: "Now people know what a Category 4 storm looks like."

Many people heeded the warning and evacuated before it.

"When we — Mama, Pop, my grandmother and I — evacuated for Opal (something we didn't usually do) it took us nearly an hour to get a few miles and my Grandmother grumbling the whole time," Brandi Barnes recalled on Facebook. "At one point she said 'I don't know how ya'll get to Massachusetts (where my Pop's family lives) driving like this!'"

Mama turned around and said, 'Mother, that's because the entire State of Florida generally doesn't drive with us.'"

But after the storm passed, people came back, the businesses described in the story rebuilt, and life went on almost immediately.

"Shortly after Opal was my youngest daughter's wedding day, which has been planned to be on the beach, which was a mess," Pat Sabiston said on Facebook. "We ended up having the wedding, with heaters on, at the Holiday Inn Sunspree's back deck, but had to have workers silence their power saws for the vows."

Ivan: Sept. 16, 2004

Ivan was a storm that could not be stopped.

It charged through the Gulf of Mexico on a winding path that brought it from the coast of Africa, over the tip of Cuba, up through Mobile, Alabama, then up to Washington, D.C., and out to sea where it turned around and came back down the coast over South Florida and back into the Gulf before making another landfall near Houston.

It was weird.

When it hit Mobile, however, the impacts to Bay County were devastating as tornadoes spun through Panama City Beach and Parker.

"We rode out Ivan since the tornadoes started before we could evacuate," Mercie Brassfield said on Facebook. "When the power went out that night, I remember being about to see the Milky Way."

About 80 percent of homes lost power during the storm, and two people were killed in Bay County. It took months to rebuild.

Space telescope sidelined by serious pointing failure

The Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL — The Hubble Space Telescope has been sidelined by a serious pointing problem.

NASA announced Monday that one of Hubble's gyroscopes failed on Friday. While that was expected — that particular gyro was expected to go sometime this year — the surprise came when a backup did not kick in properly Saturday.

As a result, Hubble remains in so-called safe mode and all science observations are on hold.

The 28-year-old telescope has had trouble with its gyroscopes before. Spacewalking shuttle astronauts replaced all six in 2009 during the final servicing mission. Three of them are now considered unusable.

"I think Hubble's in good hands right now, I really do," said Kenneth Sembach, director of the Space Telescope Science Institute, which operates Hubble. "The fact that we're having some gyro problems, that's kind of a long tradition with the observatory."

Gyroscopes are needed to keep the 340-mile-high Hubble pointed in the right direction during observations. Precise pointing is crucial: Astronomers use the telescope to peer deep into the cosmos, revealing far-away solar systems as well as galaxies and black holes. Just last week, astronomers said they might have discovered the first moon outside our solar system, with Hubble's help.

The Hubble Space Telescope can be seen as it is suspended in space by Discovery's Remote Manipulator System following the deployment of part of its solar panels and antennae in 1990.

[NASA]

Since its launch in 1990, Hubble has made more than 1.3 million observations.

Two of Hubble's gyroscopes are working fine, Sembach said. The last one was in reserve; it was turned off some years ago after exhibiting some "funny behavior" even though it was getting the job done, he said. That's the one that flight controllers turned on Saturday as a backup; as of Monday, it still wasn't working as expected.

Sembach said everyone wants to be careful in attempting a repair.

"Obviously, we don't want to make things worse," he said.

Hubble normally uses three gyroscopes to function, but could get by with one or two, something it's done before. But that leaves little room for additional breakdowns. In addition to redundancy, three functional gyroscopes also provide more flexibility in pointing, Sembach said.

"We'll be fine," he said from the Baltimore institute. "I'm sure Hubble has many years of good science ahead of it."

Drug dealer in beard contest receives 20 years in prison

The Associated Press

MIAMI — A Frenchman who was arrested when he arrived in the U.S. for a world beard-growing championship was sentenced Tuesday to 20 years in prison for online drug trafficking using the alias "OxyMonster."

The sentence was imposed by U.S. District Judge Robert Scola on 36-year-old Gal Vallerius. He pleaded guilty in June to drug conspiracy and money laundering convictions.

Vallerius admitted in his guilty plea that he sold drugs and orchestrated other sales on an online platform for virtual currencies such as bitcoin called the Dream Market. The drugs included cocaine, heroin, methamphetamine, oxycodone and fentanyl.

Investigators said Dream Market is one of the largest criminal sites for anonymous buyers and sellers to do illicit transactions. Three days before Vallerius was arrested in August 2017, authorities said there were more than 47,000 illegal drug listings on Dream Market.

"This is a very serious offense involving a huge amount of drugs," Scola said at a hearing.

Vallerius, who sports a long brownish-red beard, already was under investigation by the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration when he was detained at Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport while en route from Paris to the World Beard and Mustache Championships in Austin, Texas. He had entered the full-beard category.

Vallerius, who is from the Brittany region of France, did not speak at the hearing. His lawyer, Anthony Natale, said Vallerius is cooperating with authorities in a continuing investigation into illicit online drug transactions.

That eventually could lead to a lower prison sentence, although prosecutor Juan Gonzalez said he hadn't provided enough information yet to merit such a reduction.

"He has pled guilty. He has accepted responsibility," Natale said.

Yasmin Vallerius, who is Vallerius' wife, pleaded in a letter to the judge that he show mercy on her husband.

"Gal is a very caring person, very loving, and friendly with everybody," Yasmin Vallerius wrote. "He is also a very fragile and sensitive man, who is now in a foreign country far away from any family members. His arrest has broken him mentally."

Undercover DEA agents made numerous purchases through Dream Market of drugs such as crystal methamphetamine, LSD and hydrocodone, according to court documents. The drugs were shipped via mail to various addresses in the Miami area.

DEA also discovered that Vallerius had Instagram and Twitter accounts. They compared the writing style of "OxyMonster" on the Dream Market forum to the writing style of Vallerius on his social media accounts.

"Agents discovered many similarities in the use of words and punctuation, including: the word 'cheers,' double exclamation marks, frequent use of quotation marks, and intermittent French posts," court documents say.

Alabama has shown knack for scoring fast

Team discusses scoring on first offensive drive of every game scored on its first offensive drive of every game. The most it has taken is eight plays.

Two touchdowns came out of the first snap.

"Trust me, as an offensive player, sometimes it's even frustrating how fast we can score," UA tight end Hale Hentges said. "It's like, 'OK, let's get in a rhythm, let's get in a groove.' You throw a block and you're like, 'OK, that was one play.' The second play, I'm getting my

Avoiding the letdown

Fresh off big win, Gators travel for SEC road game at Vanderbilt

By Robbie Andreu
GateHouse Media Florida

Now that they're winning and ranked again, the Florida Gators are about to encounter something they haven't had to contend with in quite some time.

A trap game.

That's certainly what's waiting for the Gators on Saturday in Nashville.

This game with Vanderbilt has all the makings of a trap game.

The Gators have won three big SEC games in a row, two on the road in hostile environments, and are coming off an emotional upset of then-No. 5 LSU in The Swamp, a win that has vaulted UF to No. 14 in the nation.

And now the Gators go to Vanderbilt for an 11 a.m. local time game in a stadium that will be less than full and lacking noise and atmosphere.

And, well, Vanderbilt is Vanderbilt. The Commodores are 0-2 in the SEC and coming off a 41-13 drubbing at the hands of Georgia.

Given the circumstances, the tendency might be for the Gators to relax, have a little bit of a letdown this week. They could be looking ahead to next week's open date before facing Georgia on Oct. 27.

That's what makes this a trap game.

And if there's a letdown this week, there will be a loss on Saturday, Florida coach Dan Mullen said Monday.

"We talked about it this morning," Mullen said. "I've played in games up there. It's going to be a different atmosphere than what we've seen. It doesn't have to affect our performance on the field and how we play and how we execute and how we practice all week.

"It's not going to affect that. So, for our guys to have any thought, except for how hard I can go on the next play, would be us taking a step backward as a team. That has to be the focus of everybody within the program."

Last week, when Nick Saban said No. 1 Alabama's game at Arkansas was a trap game, everyone just chuckled. Because that wasn't really a trap game. For one thing, is there even such a thing for a team as talented the Tide? Especially going against a team that has already lost to Colorado State and North Texas.

EARLY DEADLINE

Due to the approach of Hurricane Michael, many sports scores were not available Tuesday

Arnold football game postponed due to Michael

The News Herald

Arnold High School's scheduled football game against Pensacola High at Gavlak Stadium on Friday night has been postponed due to the looming threat of Hurricane Michael.

Marlins athletic director Rick Green and head football coach Josh Wright cited concerns over logistics and travel as reasons for the cancellation, as well as the risks of severe weather and mandatory evacuations.

The game is a District 1-5A contest and therefore must be played, although no official makeup date has been set. Both Green and Wright said listed Oct. 29, which would be a Monday, and Oct. 30, as target dates to play the game.

As of press time Tuesday afternoon, no other Bay County football game had been cancelled, according to Bay County athletic director Kirk Harrell. Bozeman and North Bay Haven are scheduled to play games in the county Friday.

The Bucks are scheduled to host Hamilton County at Bozeman High School, while NBH is set to face Liberty County at Tommy Oliver Stadium. Both Bozeman head football coach Jason Griffin and NBH athletic director Kevin Jacobs expressed a preference for playing if it all possible. Bay High is scheduled to play at West Florida.

Bay District Schools are closed through Thursday, with the district saying Tuesday that it would await the passing of the storm before making a determination about Friday.

Dolphins, Rams still in playoff position

The News Herald

The latest high school football playoff points standings were released by the FHSAA on Tuesday afternoon, and Mosley and Rutherford both find themselves with postseason-qualifying positions in their regions.

Mosley is fifth in Region 1-5A with a point average of 40, which is five points shy of No. 1 Trinity Christian (45), and 1.4 points behind fellow District 1 team West Florida. The Dolphins defeated West Florida earlier this season and are 2-0 in league play. They can clinch a playoff berth outright with district wins over Pensacola on Oct. 19 and Bay on Oct. 26.

If Mosley doesn't win the district, it would need to finish in the top four among non-district champions in the point standings to make the playoffs. Arnold (34.83) is No. 10 in Region 1, while Bay (32) is No. 18 of 19 teams.

Rutherford is No. 4 in the point average as No. 3 South Walton - followed by Marianna (33.33) at No. 5. Both Rutherford and Marianna have a fairly sizeable lead over No. 6 Andrew Jackson (28.83) and No. 7 Gadsden County (28.67).

The Rams' final three games are against Region 1 opponents: South Walton on Oct. 19, Gadsden County on Oct. 26, and Marianna on Nov. 2. North Bay Haven is 10th out of 11 teams in the region with 24 points.

In 1A, Blountstown (38.14) stands atop Region 2, followed by Jefferson County (37.83), Sneads (37.67), Port St. Joe (37.33), Wewahitchka (34.43), and Cottondale (34.33). Liberty County (31.5) and Franklin County (29.33) are on the outside looking in.

In Region 1-1A, Baker (40.14) is No. 1, followed by Jay (38.57), Northview (37.67), Vernon (37.4), and Graceville (35.33). Holmes County and Bozeman are tied for sixth at 34.5, while Chipley and Freeport are both outside the top six at 31.5.

There are no districts and thus no automatic bids for any teams in classes 1A-4A, with only the top six teams in each region qualifying.

Astros put on spectacular show in sweep

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — When the challenge arose in August, the Houston Astros responded like champions.

They're doing it again in October.

Two months ago, last year's World Series winners hit one of those predictable lulls that every team encounters during the dog days of a season. Maybe feeling a bit overconfident and invincible, the Astros were caught atop the AL West by the Oakland Athletics, a scrappy squad that sneaked up on everyone in 2018.

But just when it appeared the Astros might be in some trouble, they switched on their after-burners. After Aug. 18, Houston went 29-10 to finish with 103 wins.

"There is an extra gear that our guys have," explained manager A.J. Hinch. "And once we hit the postseason, it looks like, as of right now, our guys really, really turned it on."

Showing no weaknesses while exposing Cleveland's flaws at every opportunity, the Astros took another step toward defending their crown Monday by finishing off a surprisingly easy three-game AL Division Series sweep with an 11-3 blow-out of the Indians, who were overmatched on the mound, at the plate and in the field.

Houston outscored Cleveland 21-6. The Astros outhit the Indians .327 to .144 and banged out eight homers with making an error.

"They beat us in every area of the game," said Indians reliever Trevor Bauer, whose two throwing errors in the seventh inning of Game 3 propelled Houston's convincing clincher. "They're tough, man. They keep coming. We didn't play our best. I'm not sure if they played their best either, but they played much better than we did. And so, the better team won."

The Astros, who have some time to relax and get ready for the Boston-New York series survivor in the ALCS, can win in so many different ways.

They have one of baseball's best rotations, anchored by Justin Verlander and Gerrit Cole, a devastating 1-2 pitching punch that staggered the Indians in Houston. The Astros can play long ball, small ball and any kind of ball needed with a balanced lineup loaded with contact hitters.

Sure, they've got All-Stars in Jose Altuve and Alex Bregman, but the Astros are a selfless group that plays as one.

"We have the most complete team in baseball," Verlander said between puffs on a cigar as his teammates showered each other with champagne in the clubhouse. "I've been part of really special teams, but the drive to win here trumps everything else. Everybody is OK with whoever is the hero."

It was Verlander in Game 1, Marwin Gonzalez in Game 2, and George Springer was among a number of deserving candidates with two homers in Game 3.

Springer has found his groove at just the right time. The 2017 World Series MVP was sidelined by a sprained left thumb that landed him on the disabled list in August. He struggled after returning and connected on just three homers over the final six weeks of the regular season.

The postseason is his playground.

Springer hit three homers in the final two ALDS game, giving him a franchise record 10 postseason homers.

"I said this to our team in there — special teams do special things in October," Hinch said. "And I believe that about players. George is one of them. We've seen him come up as an uber-prospect, produce at an uncanny level, hit the lowest of the lows in the World Series and then be the World Series MVP."

"I don't think this should surprise anyone. He's a really special player."

On a really special team.

Before his team was pushed aside by the Astros, Indians manager Terry Francona sat at his office desk and described what makes them so good.

"Well, besides the talent, because they are obviously really talented, I do think they do a really good job of playing until the game's over," he said. "Like it's been noticeable for a while. You know some times, like I think I said this the other day, when you beat them, sometimes they just run out of time.

"You gotta have talent, but when you have talent and you play the game the right way, so that's why they have a lot of ways to come at you."

Oddly, the Astros seem to get overlooked, lost deep in the heart of Texas amid the endless debate about whether the Yankees or Red Sox are the league's best.

Houston makes its case on the field.

"That's a big-time rivalry and I understand that," Springer said, adding the Astros aren't craving publicity. "But it's all about us and our task at hand. That's all we focus on. We're going to sit back and watch and see what happens."

While he watched his young teammates party after another postseason triumph, Verlander looked like a proud father. He arrived last season to help the Astros get over the hump, and now that they have, there's no going backward.

"At no point this season was there any complacency with this team," he said. "If I had been traded here after they won the World Series, instead of before it last year, I would have assumed this was a young and hungry team when I walked in the clubhouse."

"No one takes anything for granted here. That's the DNA of the guys in this clubhouse. This team has a propensity to do big things in big spots."

Florida's situation is much different. The Gators are winning, but they're still in the early stages of program development under Mullen. And this is an SEC game against a team the Gators have traditionally struggled with on the road.

Mullen was asked if he believes in trap games.

"I'm a believer in that if you don't prepare the right way you can't expect to win the game," he said. "I can look at our guys this week and say, 'We've played three really tough games in a row and we have a bye week the following week.'

"And the mindset can be, 'Coach, I can't wait to catch my breath. I can't wait to just take one play off at practice.' That's where a definition of that could come. More than the opponent you're facing, it's yourself and your own attitude of the mental toughness of can we continually improve and get up every day."

Mullen has already talked to the players this week about mental toughness and staying focused and continuing to strive to get better, something the Gators have done from week to week. Mullen's message apparently has gotten through to the players.

"We definitely understand," junior wide receiver Josh Hammond said. "We're going to prepare, treat it as a national championship game, and come out today ready to practice and continue to get better every day.

"The thing that will be the biggest thing is to not let our improvement that we keep making slip up. We've got to continue to get better, get better, get better and let that propel us into the game on Saturday."

Quarterback Feleipe Franks said the Gators aren't going to have a letdown against the Commodores.

"It's another SEC road game," he said. "It's not easy, it's not easy to win road games, let alone an SEC game in general. We can't take them lightly. We're just got to keep on preparing, keep on having really good practices."

"And like Coach Mullen said, you've got to prepare for every team and if you don't prepare you have the potential of losing a game. You've got to prepare for whoever you're playing."

ALABAMA

feet wet and all of a sudden we score and it's like, 'Well, off to the sideline again.'

He's not complaining. Neither are the defensive players, even though it means they have less time to rest.

"We don't want them to stop scoring, we want them to light up the scoreboard," Alabama defensive back Deionte Thompson said. "We just have to be ready. Like sudden change, they score fast it's a sudden-change situation and we have to be prepared for it."

There has been a variety of scoring plays, too.

Wide receiver Jerry Jeudy was the first in the end zone against both Louisville and Arkansas State, scoring on receptions from 11 and 58 yards out, respectively. But then running back Damien Harris had a 43-yard run against Ole Miss. Wide receiver DeVonta Smith caught a 30-yard pass against Texas A&M. Running back Josh Jacobs ran in a 9-yarder. Then, most recently, tight end Irv Smith Jr. shimmied his way down the sideline with a 76-yard reception-turned-touchdown.

"We've always had a good plan," Alabama coach Nick Saban said Monday. "The coaches have done a really good job of developing those first plays in the game you want to run from a script standpoint. That has been able to take advantage of some situations that we see from defense."

And Alabama sure take advantage of those situations. The Crimson Tide is outscoring opponents 124-21 in the first quarter alone. Through two quarters, it's 238-34, and Alabama is 123-7 under Saban when leading at the half.

Hentges said the offense normally goes into a game with 15-20 plays it wants to call right from the start. The Crimson Tide hasn't had to deviate from that script just yet.

"But we're going to play better and better defenses as we go," Saban said, "so that will become more challenging."

Alabama, which is averaging 56 points per game to lead the nation, is about to face a Missouri team that's allowing an average of 28.8 points per game. The Crimson Tide has scored 336 points overall, 276 of which are from touchdowns. The Tigers have given up a total of 144 points this season, 96 from touchdowns.

"As an offense, our job is just to score," Hentges said. "I know we sometimes probably don't give the defense enough break as we should."

Allen still impressed with Indiana's improving defense

The Associated Press

Indiana coach Tom Allen could have been upset after watching his defense allow 49 points last weekend at No. 3 Ohio State.

Instead, Allen saw encouraging signs on tape.

The Hoosiers forced three turnovers, consistently pressured quarterback Dwayne Haskins Jr. and slowed down the Buckeyes' vaunted ground game — a solid performance from a young, improving group of players who have often been overshadowed by the Hoosiers' usually high-scoring offense in previous seasons.

"I've coached this game on defense, and I've been such a huge takeaway guy, so sometimes they come more than they do others," Allen said Monday. "We sure make a big deal about it. We should make a big deal about it, and we make videos about it, and we talk about it. We've got to keep doing it."

Make no mistake: Allen's preference would have been to cut that point total at least in half.

But the reality was Indiana (4-2, 1-2 Big Ten) held Ohio State to its season average, kept the Hoosiers within striking distance through three quarters and demonstrated their defense possesses some key cornerstones against one of the nation's top teams.

At the midway point of this season, the Hoosiers have a league-high 13 takeaways — matching their 12-game total from 2017.

Ohio State entered the game averaging 210.4 yards per game and 5.0 yards per carry but was limited to 154 yards in 48 attempts, a 3.2 average. And though the Hoosiers only finished with one sack they harassed Haskins into some errant throws.

Allen believes all of those elements bode well for a potentially brutal second half of the season, which officially begins Saturday when Iowa comes to town.

"I think we have a more athletic defense as a group, and I said that going in," he said. "I think when you have a more athletic group, you create more takeaways.

Because No. 1, you get to the ball quicker to force them, and you're around the ball more to recover them. We've got to take advantage of it as a team, and that's what we do as a program."

Indiana needs to create turnovers and do a better job converting into points given what lies ahead.

After facing the Hawkeyes, Indiana hosts No. 8 Penn State before heading to Minnesota on a short week. Following their bye week, the Hoosiers host surprising Maryland and visit No. 12 Michigan before closing out the regular season at home against rival Purdue, which has won two in a row.

Indiana needs at least two wins to become bowl eligible for the third time in four years. While the improving offense remains more than capable of winning shootouts, Allen knows what the Hoosiers need most is balance.

"I was concerned in the beginning about us stopping the run, and that's continued to grow and improve," Allen said. "Holding them to 3.2 yards a carry on 48 attempts is a big step for us."

The Hoosiers aren't just getting better as a unit, either.

Linebackers Reakwon Jones, a redshirt junior, and Cam Jones, a freshman, have combined with fifth-year senior Dameon Willis Jr. to solidify the middle of the defense after losing Tegray Scales and Chris Covington to graduation.

Marcelino Ball and Jonathan Crawford remain big-play threats in the secondary, and if the front four continue to pressure opposing quarterbacks, Allen may finally have a defense that can measure up against the best of the Big Ten.

"I think for me to approximate what I think about defensively, I think, 'Hey, I'm going to score on defense. Get those interceptions and go score. Just create that momentum that that kind of play creates for your team,'" Allen said. "I just think it's a never-ending process of continuing to create pressure, and you get more sacks and more pressures, and that's the objective each and every week."

ACES ON BRIDGE: BOBBY WOLFF

"In the perfect chess combination, as in a first-rate short story, the whole plot and counter-plot should lead up to a striking finale, the interest not being allayed until the very last moment."
— Frederic Yates and William Winter

At teams, South's decision to bid game was influenced by his partner's voluntary raise to three hearts, plus the expectation that relevant missing high cards were more likely than not to be onside, as East had opened the bidding. Still, it was an overbid, and it led to a fairly poor contract, but one that was not without play, given the favorable lie of the opponents' cards. Against four hearts, West led the diamond 10. When East won with the ace, he had a choice of defenses, but only one winning move.

If East had unthinkingly returned a diamond, declarer might have found his way home. When South wins the diamond king, he next leads a spade. West must rise with the ace, and he can do no better than exit with a diamond. South ruffs, then leads a low heart to dummy's eight or 10. East wins, but will be endplayed. Either a club or heart lets South reach dummy, allowing both finesses to be taken in one order or the other.

So, with that said, can you see the defense? Sitting East was my former partner Bob Hamman, who found the ingenious return of a spade, preserving diamonds as the suit in which the defense could exit at a later stage. West won with the ace and exited with a diamond to South's bare king. Now, when declarer led a heart to the 10, Hamman won his queen and still had a safe diamond exit. South could ruff, but was stuck in hand and had no way to avoid losing at least one more trick.

ANSWER: This hand is on the cusp of passing, trying to settle for a plus score, or bidding three clubs to show your 5-5 pattern and non-forcing extras. I'd take the latter route — if for no other reason than that three clubs may be easier to make than two hearts if your partner has two hearts and three clubs.

Answer: The math teacher was very methodical and taught math — BY THE NUMBERS

DEAR ABBY

Man learns he may have a son he never knew about

Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for 27 years and have three wonderful kids. The youngest is 16. I recently found out I may have another son from a relationship prior to my marriage. The woman never notified me or asked for child support. I found out through someone else a couple of months ago and, thanks to social media, was able to find him and look at his picture. He looks exactly like I did 25 years ago. The problem is, when I mentioned it to my wife, she did not want to discuss the possibility. She acts like nothing happened and asked me not to bring it up again. What would you recommend in a situation like this? Should I say nothing and let it be, or risk ruining my marriage? — VACILLATING IN VIRGINIA

DEAR VACILLATING: I find it interesting that someone would know you possibly had another son all this time and didn't say anything sooner. If it's true, the young man might like to know, if only so he can have a complete familial medical history. I don't see how establishing the truth could "ruin" your marriage unless your wife is self-centered and immature. However, rather than suddenly appear out of nowhere with the news, it might be better to reach out to the woman you had the relationship with, tell her what the friend told you and ask her if it's true. If she concealed the information from her son or from the man who raised him, possibly thinking the boy was his, it could be traumatic for everyone concerned. So, if you do decide to move forward on this, explain that if it's true, you think it might be in her son's best interests to know.

HOROSCOPES BY HOLIDAY MATHIS

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Becoming you is a never-ending process. There's something you once would have thought of as a creative risk that now seems like a natural part of who you are. Acknowledge your growth.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — The irony is, now that you've stopped working for a favorable response, you've fallen into a state of extreme favor, to the extent that it almost seems you can do no wrong.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21) — Would you believe some people find talking harder than physical work? Though you gravitate toward connection, community and conversation, you'll be dealing with people who don't. They'll be glad you came along.

CANCER (June 22-July 22) — You are feeling rather sure of yourself, and why shouldn't you be? You've put in the time, the practice and the professional hours, and you're about due for some serious payback.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — You probably won't be able to shake the sneaking suspicion that a move in any direction will land you in a place that's better than where you currently stand. You're right. This isn't bad, but better is on the horizon.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — It's not what you know; it's when you say it. And keep in mind that for some bits of knowledge, the best time may very well be never. Anyway, you won't be sorry you used discretion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — A place for everything and everything in its place may work for home organization or a desk drawer, but it doesn't work for your heart. Emotions are messy and sometimes defy compartmentalization.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21) — You'll be the great mediator today, and your methods are pretty straightforward. You will ask good questions, listen carefully to the answers and get right to the crux of the problem. Then you sort it out.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Maturity, compassion, selflessness -- they need no reward. These are transcendent ways of operating in the world, and you don't have to wear the behavior long to figure out that it's just who you are.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Just as core strength is a foundation of overall fitness, character strength is the base from which a good life is built. It's pretty simple to fortify your strength of character. Just do the right thing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Feeling good will happen one list item at a time. So take out that long page of directives and start working it. You'll be amazed at how ticking off the smallest item can lift your spirit high.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — The recurring question has to do with what you owe your loved ones, your community and the world at large. It's actually the same thing on the small, personal scale as it is on the vast one.

PROTEINS

NOT ALL ARE EQUAL

Not all proteins are created equal; “incomplete” proteins must be combined with other foods to build the nine essential amino acids your body can’t produce on its own, according to Muuna.

Animal-derived products are complete proteins. Some plant proteins are “incomplete” and must be combined with other foods to achieve their full nutritional value.

SECRET SAUCE

The dry technique that creates super-juicy tomatoes

By Ari LeVaux
More Content Now

At the farmers market this spring, I found myself gushing to a grower friend about dry-farmed tomatoes. Dry farming is a practice that’s been popular in California and parts of the East Coast for years, and is now spreading to the middle of the country, and even to the dry, high plains of Montana. Not just tomatoes, but melons, squash, potatoes and many other crops can be dry farmed — that is, grown without any supplemental irrigation.

In the case of California, not a drop of rain or puff of fog touches the plants all summer, and still they produce. It sounds impossible, and the produce, accordingly, is impossibly delicious, I was telling my farmer friend. He nodded impatiently.

“Hang on a sec,” he said in an impish Jersey accent, and scuffled to a tray of tall, spindly tomato plants in 4-inch pots. “Plant this where it won’t get any water and tell me what happens.”

“What variety?” I asked in vain. This farmer, whom I will call Steve, is secretive, grouchy and loath to discuss any of his practices, beyond assuring you that his produce is “clean.” “Is it an Early Girl?” I pressed. Silence.

Most dry-farmed tomatoes are Early Girls, a variety that was introduced as the Better Boy in the early 1970s by PetoSeed, purchased by Burpee and rebranded as the Early Girl soon after, then acquired by Seminis seed company, which was acquired by Monsanto, which was acquired by Bayer.

Dry-farmed Early Girls look like the most normal tomato you can imagine. It’s a perfectly red round orb, the size of a tennis ball, an emoji symbol of a tomato. When you take your first bite, the skin is tough and leathery, and requires more force than usual to pierce. You’d better be leaning forward when your teeth finally break through, because what happens next is explosive. There seems to be more water inside than the total volume of the tomato could mathematically hold, and five times the intensity of flavor.

It was a cool spring day when I brought home Steve’s little plant. I had a lot of things to put away, so I stashed the little pot in a sunny spot by the shed and proceeded to completely forget about it until, months later, I was weed-whacking a tangle of plants by the shed and this 4-inch pot flew out of the bramble. I grabbed the pot, intent to shake out the dirt and toss it, when I noticed a freshly whacked stump protruding from the dry, cracked dirt. “Darn,” I thought, “Steve’s tomato plant.” I was about to toss it when I noticed the severed stem revealed an angry shade of green inside. I reconsidered.

Built to last

I learned what I know about dry-farmed tomatoes while researching a story on the subject for National Geographic. I toured several dry-farm tomato fields in California, and they are a sight to behold. The young seedlings had been transplanted when the soil was still wet from the winter rains; when I showed up, six dry months later, the fields were full of yellow, dead-looking plants that hung from their trellises like scarecrows, each weighted down by multiple bright red orbs.

I looked at my little green weed-whacked plant stub and thought about those tough plants. It was late July, but I planted it. It sprouted leaves, almost before my eyes, and grew to about a foot tall before flowering. Today it sports a single, round, green tomato.

One thing about dry-farmed Early Girls: That tough skin holds moisture and keeps out infection and other agents of spoilage, so they last a long time. After my trip to the dry-farm tomato fields, I went camping on the coast, and those tomatoes lasted for a week before I took the remainder home. They retained their juiciness and flavor.

Roasted Tomato Juice Bruschetta

- Early Girl or similarly sized tomatoes, sliced into quarters
- Slices of a good crusty bread
- Balls of soft mozzarella, sliced
- Fresh basil
- Olive oil
- Salt
- Garlic powder
- Fresh garlic, crushed
- Butter (optional)

Set the tomatoes on a baking tray, with a sliced side down. Sprinkle with salt and garlic powder, drizzle with olive oil and a few pieces of crushed garlic. Broil, about six inches below the fire.

As the wedges collapse and release their juices, place pieces of bread among them to soak it up. Put a little pad of butter atop each slice, if you wish. When the slices brown, turn them over. Scoop tomatoes from the pan and lay them on top of the slices, and broil until the bread slices are almost toasted. Pull the tomato skins for a smoother outcome if you wish, and lay the mozzarella slices atop the tomatoes. Close the oven door and turn off the heat, allowing the cheese to slowly melt.

When melted, serve the cheesy, tomato-soaked slices garnished with basil, salt and a drizzle of olive oil.

FLEUR DE LOLLY

Build a slaw around some crunchy jicama

Laura Tolbert

Mahi-mahi is a lean fish with a mild, sweet flavor. And the perfect side for it is the following jicama slaw.

Jicama Slaw with Cilantro Lime Vinaigrette

Jicama is sometimes referred to as a Mexican yam, but it also resembles a turnip. This root vegetable’s exterior resembles a potato or turnip, and once peeled, the interior reveals a creamy white color.

Use your chef’s knife to peel the jicama instead of your trusty potato peeler. The best method is to cut a thin slice from the top and bottom so the jicama will sit evenly on a flat surface. Just slide your knife under the upper peel and follow the curve of the jicama downward. Repeat the process all the way around.

Jicama’s texture resembles a cross between an apple and a potato. It’s very crunchy!

It’s typically eaten raw with maybe a sprinkling of salt or chili powder and a spritz of lemon or lime juice. However, for this recipe, it’s the star of the show.

Not only is the slaw delicious, but it’s also filled with a variety of colors, shapes and textures.

A bonus is you’re getting a healthy serving of vegetables.

- 4 cups peeled, matchstick-cut jicama
- 1 English cucumber, halved lengthwise and sliced into ½-inch pieces
- 1 green bell pepper, seeded and chopped
- 6 radishes, ends removed and thinly sliced
- 2 medium carrots, peeled and coarsely grated
- 2 cups grape tomatoes, halved
- 1 bunch green onions, thinly sliced diagonally (white and some green)
- ¼ cup finely chopped red onion
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped jalapeno (seeded)
- ¼ cup finely chopped cilantro

For the dressing:

- 1/3 cup fresh lime juice
- 1/3 cup extra virgin olive oil
- Zest of one lime

- 3 cloves of garlic, minced
- ¾ teaspoon honey
- ½ teaspoon each ground cumin and coriander
- Dash of salt
- 2 tablespoons minced cilantro

Combine all the slaw ingredients in a large bowl. Whisk the ingredients for the vinaigrette together in a small bowl. Drizzle over the slaw and toss gently to combine. Refrigerate until ready to serve. Give the slaw one last toss before serving.

FOOD

Whoopie pies to put a smile to your face

Another season, another reason for making whoopie pies.
 [TOM MCCORKLE/FOR THE WASHINGTON POST FOOD STYLING FOR THE WASHINGTON POST BY LISA CHERKASKY]

Super soft whoopie pies

INGREDIENTS FOR THE COOKIES

- 1-½ ounces (42 grams) dark chocolate, 60 to 62 percent, chopped
- 1 cup (125 grams) bleached all-purpose flour
- Scant ¼ cup (19 grams) unsweetened Dutch-process cocoa powder
- ½ teaspoon baking powder
- ½ teaspoon baking soda
- ½ teaspoon fine sea salt
- 2 tablespoons unsalted butter, at room temperature
- 2 tablespoons canola or safflower oil
- ½ cup plus 1 tablespoon (120 grams) packed dark brown sugar
- 1 large egg, at room temperature
- ½ cup buttermilk

FOR THE FILLING

- 1 cup heavy cream
- 1 tablespoon superfine sugar
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract bowl of a stand mixer; beat on medium speed for about 5 minutes. The mixture should be smooth and paler in color. Add the melted/cooled chocolate; beat on low speed until well incorporated. Add one-third of the flour mixture along with one-third of the buttermilk; beat on low speed until just incorporated. Repeat with another third of the flour mixture and a third of the buttermilk, then the final third. Increase the speed to medium; beat for about 15 seconds, until smooth. Measure the batter into a 2-inch cookie scoop, gently rounded, or use two spoons to drop 6 rounded mounds (about 42 grams each) of batter, evenly spaced, onto one of the prepared baking sheets. The mounds should be about 2 inches wide by 1 inch high. Bake one sheet at a time (middle rack) for 6 minutes, rotating it from front to back halfway through. Then bake for 2 to 4 minutes, or just until the caky cookies spring back when pressed lightly with a fingertip. Allow the batch to cool (on the baking sheet) on a wire rack for 5 to 10 minutes. Then use a thin metal spatula to transfer the cookie cakes directly onto the rack to cool completely.

- For the filling: Combine the heavy cream, superfine sugar and vanilla extract in a medium metal mixing bowl; a handheld electric mixer is easier for this amount of cream. Cover and refrigerate for at least 15 minutes; refrigerate the beaters of the handheld mixer as well. Beat the mixture, starting on low and gradually increasing the speed to medium-high as it thickens, until stiff peaks form. To assemble the whoopie pies, place a mound of the filling (about 3 rounded tablespoons) on the flat sides of 6 cooled cookies. Press the flat sides of the remaining 6 cookies lightly on top of the filling, just until the filling is forced to the edges. You might not use all the filling. Serve right away, or refrigerate for up to 8 hours

Tips to make you a confident, better baker

By Becky Krystal
 The Washington Post

More than any other type of cooking, baking dishes out as much heartbreak as joy: Fallen cakes. Soupy pies. Cookies that crumble. If you've been burned by baking — or simply burned your baked goods — you may wonder whether it's just you. It probably is. Just joking, of course — but even if you are in fact doing something wrong, that doesn't mean you can't fix it. And who better to learn from than Rose Levy Beranbaum? She's been writing authoritative, comprehensive baking cookbooks for almost 40 years. Her latest, though — "Rose's Baking Basics" — takes special aim at beginning bakers, complete with step-by-step photos, concise and clear directions, and a wealth of "baking pearls" that share tips, hows and whys. Here is some big-picture advice from Beranbaum to help you become a better, more confident baker:

- Follow the directions. Real talk: "If you don't want to follow directions, it's better to make savory dishes," Beranbaum says. "Baking is best for precise people," or people who give up their idea of how a recipe should be made at least the first time they attempt it. Do you really need to whip those egg whites separately? Does the dough really have to be kneaded that long? The answer is probably yes.
- Be wary of substitutions. I know it sounds like we're being sticklers here, but baking is often so much about chemistry that ingredients aren't necessarily interchangeable. If you are bound and determined to swap things in a recipe, "The first time, make it the way it's written," Beranbaum suggests. "Otherwise you'll never know what you're supposed to be getting." Flours and sugars are two main baking ingredients that can have a dramatic effect on your results. Changing flours, for example, can alter the structure and density of a baked good. Sugars differ in flavor, texture and how they interact with water, so using the wrong one can also mess up the bake.

- But don't be afraid to make a recipe your own. Have I killed your intrepid spirit yet? I hope not, because there are plenty of ways you can tweak a baking recipe. In fact, Beranbaum's new book is heavily sprinkled with "Make This Recipe Your Own" sidebars that provide suggestions on A-OK substitutions. Some of the best places to start playing around are add-ins: chocolate chips, dried fruit, nuts. You can experiment with different extracts and simple syrups. Spices, within reason, are ripe for personal preference.
- Pay attention to temperature. It's more than just a matter of how comfortable you feel. "Temperature is everything in baking," Beranbaum says. It's important to follow the directions when a recipe calls for ingredients to be at a certain temperature. Often, that means room temperature. Beranbaum says the sweet spot for room-temperature butter is 65 to 75 degrees. Eggs are another ingredient frequently brought to room temperature (if you forget or are in a rush, you can place the eggs in a bowl of warm water for 5 minutes).

WELCOME TO THE COUNTS REAL ESTATE TEAM

How Long Have You Worked For Counts Real Estate Group, Inc?
I have worked for Counts a little over a month now and still loving it!

What Made You Decide to Choose Counts Real Estate Group, Inc and What Has Been Your Experience Thus Far?
I made the decision to move to Counts so that I could get superior mentoring and training and learn from the biggest local real estate company on the beach. My favorite thing about working for Counts is that my broker, Jason Smoker, guides me through question I bring to him and my fellow agents offer to help in any way. Jill Woody is a marketing wizard and has been extremely helpful in designing materials for my business. I really enjoy all the comradery within the Counts organization.
