State faces prospect of recounts

Gubernatorial, U.S. Senate races with razor-thin margins

By Brendan Farrington
The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Florida faced the prospect of recounts in the razor-thin races for governor and U.S. Senate, potentially prolonging the battle over two of this year's most-closely watched campaigns.

In the governor's race,

Democrat Andrew Gillum's campaign said Thursday it's prepared for a possible recount. He conceded to Republican Ron DeSantis on Tuesday night, though the margin of the race has since tightened. As of Thursday afternoon, DeSantis led Gillum by 0.47 percentage point.

Meanwhile, Democratic incumbent Sen. Bill Nelson has already begun preparing for a potential recount in a race still too close to call against Republican Gov. Rick Scott. Nelson's lawyer called that race a "jump ball" — though Scott's campaign urged Nelson to concede. Scott held a 0.21 percentage lead over Nelson on Thursday afternoon.

The tight races underscored Florida's status as a perennial swing state where elections are often decided by the thinnest of margins. Since 2000, when Florida decided the presidency by 537 votes in a contest that took more than five weeks to sort out, the state has seen many close elections, but never so many dead heats in one year.

And like 2000, the counting process is becoming contentious.

Scott, as outgoing governor, said at a news conference Thursday night that he was asking the Florida Department of Law Enforcement to investigate elections offices in the Democratic strongholds of Palm Beach and Broward counties, questioning whether they were trying to inflate the Democratic vote. Scott's campaign filed a lawsuit demanding that the Broward County supervisor of elections be ordered to turn over several records detailing the counting and collection of ballots cast.

Gretl Plessinger, a spokeswoman for the FDLE, said by phone that the agency would follow up on the governor's request.

PANAMA CITY — Tasha Holmes gently cradled her son Caiden, barely more than an hour old, at Gulf Coast Regional Medical Center on Thursday morning.

Had Caiden been born a few hours earlier, Holmes might have been holding him in a hospital outside of Bay County instead.

"I didn't want to make that drive to Fort Walton," Holmes said with a laugh as she sat up in her recovery room bed while Caiden slept soundly in her arms. "Oh yeah, I'm glad I got to have my baby here."

Holmes of Panama City became part of local history on Thursday, giving birth to the first baby in the hospital's delivery room since Hurricane Michael knocked most of the building out of commission four weeks ago. Delivery was one of many services the hospital partially reopened on Thursday. From inpatient, pediatric and surgical services to cardiac and cardiovascular care, some normalcy has returned to the hospital since the hurricane.

"It's helping us get back to normal, our new normal," Tamika Williams, director of women's services, said of the reopening of labor and delivery services. "The staff coming back here, it's all just been really emotional."

Before Thursday, only the hospital's emergency room had been open since the hurricane hit.

Shooter kills 12 at lounge

Marine combat veteran identified as gunman; authorities search for motive in attack

By Krysta Fauria and Jonathan J. Cooper
The Associated Press

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — Terrified patrons hurled barstools through windows to escape or threw their bodies protectively on top of friends as a Marine combat veteran killed 12 people at a country music bar in an attack that added Thousand Oaks to the tragic roster of American cities traumatized by mass shootings.

Dressed all in black with his hood pulled up, the gunman apparently took his own life as scores of police converged on the Borderline Bar and Grill in Southern California.

The motive for the rampage late Wednesday night was under investigation.

The killer, Ian David Long, 28, was a former machine gunner and Afghanistan war veteran who was interviewed by police at his home last spring after an episode of agitated behavior that authorities were told might be post-traumatic stress disorder.

PCB takes first step to rein in high-rise condos

PANAMA CITY BEACH — The era of the 22-story high-rise condominium is ending.

The City Council on Thursday evening held the first of two public hearings on a proposed amendment that would cap the height of beachfront condominiums at 150 feet, or 15 stories. Ordinance No. 1475 would replace a six-year-old provision in the city's land development code that provided the opportunity for developers to build up to 220 feet by guaranteeing various "height incentives" such as public parking and restrooms, access driveways, and/or beach access points and special "Florida friendly" landscaping requiring less watering.

The ordinance states that "the public benefit arising from the height incentive options (in the current land development code) no longer outweighs the benefits of strict compliance with the city's height design guidelines"

Update from the county

Special to The News Herald

Bay County has lifted the ban on outdoor burning initiated after Hurricane Michael.

The change applies only to the unincorporated areas of the county.

"In light of recent rain events, the prohibition on outdoor burning for county residents has been rescinded," Bay County Chief of Emergency Services Mark Bowen said. "We remind the public to be cautious when conducting outdoor burning activities as we are still in a very dangerous situation."

Outdoor burning is regulated by the Florida

Forest Service (FFS). Current state restrictions on burning include a requirement to obtain permits for piles larger than eight feet in diameter and limit the pile to yard waste.

Yard waste is any vegetative debris such as grass clippings, brush, leaves, tree limbs, palm fronds, etc. Residents must meet the required setbacks and the debris must fit in an eight-foot diameter pile or non-combustible container.

Outdoor burning of yard waste is allowed after 8 a.m. All fires must be extinguished one hour before sunset.

Video hearings for detained kids slammed

By Martha Mendoza and Garance Burke
The Associated Press

The Trump administration says it is trying to speed up legal proceedings for some of the record 13,000 migrant children in federal custody by using video hearings to stream testimony from detained youths into courtrooms, The Associated Press has learned.

The problem, some attorneys and judges say, is that technical glitches — including bad audio, weak connections and pixelated screens — are actually making it much harder for the teens in shelters to have a fair hearing. It can be challenging for judges to assess children's credibility without eye-to-eye contact, they say. And it further obscures the cases, which legally are supposed to be public.

But the Office of Refugee Resettlement, which has custody of the teens, says its unannounced pilot program will save money and allows youths, some of whom are being housed at a cost of more than $775 a night, to appear before a judge more quickly.

The program for teens, piloted in conjunction with the Justice Department's Executive Office for Immigration Review, launched several weeks ago. Video conferencing already has been widely used in a variety of adult legal proceedings.

So far, about 30 youths have appeared via videoconferencing before immigration judges in Phoenix and Harlingen, Texas, said Lydia Holt, an ORR spokeswoman. Similar hearings have been conducted in immigration courts in Miami and New York City, said Kathryn

Mattingly, an EOIR spokeswoman. The AP learned they also have been scheduled in Los Angeles, Philadelphia, El Paso, Seattle, Tucson and San Francisco.

This summer, the optics of children in court became an embarrassment to the administration, with critics seizing on the fact that the immigration system requires children — some still in diapers — to appear before judges for legal proceedings.

Holt said the administration has recommended 75 more unaccompanied children for video hearings, typically migrants between the ages of 15 and 17 who have been in custody for a longer period of time and want their immigration cases heard swiftly.

"If at all possible, ORR does not want children to stay longer than necessary in our facilities while waiting for their immigration case to be heard," she said. ORR shelters are nearly full, mostly with children who immigrated without their parents and have family or friends in the U.S. willing to take them in. But the children can spend months in detention as the government arranges their deportation or release to parents or other sponsors, who are now facing stricter guidelines for vetting in the U.S.

Almost 60 percent of all migrant children who had their first court date in fiscal year 2017 still did not have lawyers by this August, according to the Transactional Records Access Clearinghouse.

In states where children have been appearing before judges via video, attorneys say the new process hasn't worked well thus far and risks rolling back due process. Much of the legal representation is pro bono, and organizations can't afford to have two attorneys at each appearance — one in the courtroom and another in the shelter.

In one case, there was no way to transmit court documents remotely, so someone had to drive to the shelter to serve the detained teen with paperwork. Another teen stopped talking and started looking around the room when the video feed coming from the court went blank, confusing the judge trying to evaluate the teen's credibility.

The government is asking shelter workers to set up mock hearing rooms, complete with a table for the child and empty tables for the judge and the government attorney.

Judge Ashley Tabaddor, president of the National Association of Immigration Judges, called the video teleconference equipment "very, very difficult to work with."

She said she recently oversaw a video hearing in her Los Angeles courtroom: It took a half-hour to set up the connection, for a proceeding that would have taken five minutes in person.

Phone lines drop, screens get fuzzy and participants have difficulty hearing each other, an issue exacerbated by language interpreters, who often aren't at both locations.

"There is nothing that can substitute for an in-person hearing," Tabaddor said.

Ingrid Eagly, a law professor at the University of California, Los Angeles, who has analyzed thousands of cases of detained adult immigrants, found that those who saw judges on a monitor were more likely to be deported than those who appeared in court.

The reason: During in-person hearings, detainees often better understood their options and sought legal counsel and other relief. Inside the detention centers, immigrants were frustrated with technical problems and felt the proceedings were unfair, so tended to give up, she found.

Immigration courts began using video hearings for adults 25 years ago, a process the federal government considers a "force multiplier" by saving time and money. It gives the government greater scheduling flexibility and allows judges in other regions to help clear dockets. And they have ramped up dramatically in the past decade.

Woman gets 18 months in prison for role in cocaine ring

A woman who authorities say was part of a drug trafficking ring that brought large amounts of cocaine into Connecticut from Puerto Rico has been sentenced to 18 months in prison.

Connecticut U.S. Attorney John Durham says Alba Filomeno-Gomez, of New London, was sentenced Wednesday in federal court in Hartford.

Local and federal authorities say multi-pound shipments of cocaine were sent through the U.S. mail from Puerto Rico to various Connecticut locations. Officials say they seized more than 26 pounds of cocaine.

Authorities say Filomeno-Gomez, 23, accepted some of the packages and was a courier for drugs and money.

Missouri tour boat captain indicted after sinking kills 17

The captain of a tourist boat that sank in southwest Missouri and killed 17 people, including nine members of an Indiana family, didn't tell passengers to put on flotation devices or prepare them to abandon ship even after waves crashed into the boat during a severe storm, according to an indictment released Thursday.

The federal indictment shows Kenneth Scott McKee faces 17 counts of misconduct, negligence or inattention to duty by a ship's officer resulting in death. The deaths occurred after the duck boat, a refurbished amphibious vessel originally used by the military during World War II, sank during a storm in July.

U of Michigan removes frat for hazing, forced alcohol drinking

A University of Michigan fraternity has been removed from the school and student-run Interfraternity Council for at least five years following allegations of violent hazing and forced alcohol consumption.

The Ann Arbor News reported Thursday that evidence of hazing was found during Alpha Sigma Phi's new member process.

Last year, the council suspended social events following allegations of hazing and sexual misconduct involving fraternity members at the Ann Arbor school. Some social activities have since resumed.

The university declined to answer questions about the Interfraternity Council statement announcing the action.

Self-styled positivity guru Emile Ratelband thinks age is just a number. And his is a number the Dutchman wants changed.

The 69-year-old TV personality has asked a court in the Netherlands to approve his request for a new birthday that officially would make him 49.

Ratelband says his legal appeal is consistent with other forms of personal transformation that are gaining acceptance and government approval in the Netherlands and around the world.

"With this free(dom) of choice, choice of name, freedom of gender, I want to have my own age. I want to control myself," he said Thursday.

Ethiopia's state affiliated broadcaster says police have uncovered a mass grave of 200 people in the troubled area between the country's Oromia and Somali regions.

The Fana report said that police were granted 14 days to unearth and do forensic examinations on the estimated 200 bodies that have been found.

BABY

A few babies were delivered in the ER in recent weeks, but most mothers who were originally scheduled to deliver at Gulf Coast Regional had to visit other hospitals in the region, Williams said.

Williams said she saw the water damage to the labor and delivery department soon after the hurricane, but wasn't surprised the hospital got services running again in just less than a month.

"We have so much support from the company that I never thought it would be a long time before we started up again," Williams said. Gulf Coast Regional is owned by Tennessee-based HCA Healthcare. Williams noted that delivery services, though open, still were at 50 percent capacity.

"We have five labor rooms available where we normally have 10," Williams said.

No date has been set for when labor services will be fully restored, she said.

Brad Griffin, CEO of Gulf Coast Regional, said all the services that reopened Thursday were in a similar situation — only at partial capacity without a set timetable for full restoration. Still, getting services even partially available will be extremely helpful for the community and hospital employees, Griffin said.

"We've got over 1,000 employees who work here and are ready to get back to the business of helping patients," Griffin said. "This sends a signal to the community that we're open and we're going to take care of you."

Griffin said the first phase of the hospital's recovery was to partially restore services. Now that the first phase is complete, the next phase will be to fully restore those services. The largest undertaking will be to reopen the hospital's third floor, which sustained the most hurricane damage, Griffin said.

"That's where most of the patients who come here are kept," he said. "Having that open will give us the most capacity to keep patients local."

Meanwhile, Bay Medical Sacred Heart also has been shut down, apart from the emergency room, since the hurricane. According to a Thursday press release, Bay Medical has primary care and specialist clinics open, but all services in the hospital likely won't return until next year.

"The hospital is anticipated to reopen in stages, with the first phase to include inpatient beds, operating rooms and cardiac cath labs," Scott Campbell, Bay Medical CEO, said in the statement. "The goal is to complete phase one at the beginning of the year."

CONDOS

The new ordinance also requires the incorporation of four design elements as mandatory features that were optional in the current code, City Planning Director Mel Leonard said Thursday.

These are creation of a distinct roof design to the top of the structure; incorporation of a "recognizable" base to the building; addition of customized lighting to illuminate the building and its landscaping, and enhanced entryway design.

"This is good" for the city, Mayor Mike Thomas said after the meeting. "Under the current code, we were picking winners and losers (by granting or declining height incentives), and that's not right."

While council members previously have expressed a dislike for the current ordinance's lack of clarity over waiving the 150-foot building height for beachfront condos, they also favor curtailing the higher buildings to mitigate street traffic and congestion on the sandy beach, Thomas said.

In the two decades since Panama City Beach in the early 2000s began its massive growth from a mid-sized tourist town to a major resort destination, various iterations of the land development code have resulted in the construction of 25 condominiums of 22 stories, and one (Tidewater Beach) of 31 stories.

The beachfront in unincorporated Bay County currently is zoned to allow a maximum height of 22 stories.

In a special meeting on Sept. 27, city council members voted on requests by developers to obtain height incentives on five proposed condominium towers to enable them to gain the full 22 stories. Voicing the same concerns over traffic and beach congestion, the council unanimously rejected one of the proposals because of its potential impact on an adjacent neighborhood. Council members then approved the others but limited the heights to 185 feet in three of the projects and 190 feet in the fourth.

With scant public comments and the briefest of discussions, the council voted 4-0 Thursday, with Councilman Geoff McConnell absent, to approve the ordinance. A second public hearing and final vote will be held at its next meeting on Dec. 13.

Nelson's campaign released a statement saying Scott's action appears to be politically motivated and borne out of desperation as he tries to win the Senate contest. On Thursday evening, President Donald Trump weighed in with a tweet on the Senate race. Trump tweeted: "Law Enforcement is looking into another big corruption scandal having to do with Election Fraud in #Broward and Palm Beach. Florida voted for Rick Scott!"

Sarah Revell, a spokeswoman for the Florida Department of State, said she didn't know of any other recount in a governor or Senate race in state history. She was researching the subject Thursday.

Under Florida law, a recount is mandatory if the winning candidate's margin is less than 0.5 percentage points when the first unofficial count is verified Saturday by Florida's secretary of state.

The Associated Press has called the governor's race for DeSantis. If Saturday's count shows DeSantis with a margin narrow enough to trigger a recount, AP will retract its call for DeSantis. It is AP policy not to call a race that is facing a recount.

The AP has not called a winner in the Senate race.

In yet a third statewide seat — the Cabinet position of agriculture commissioner — the candidates were separated by 483 votes out of more than 8 million cast — a margin of 0.006 percent. Gillum's campaign said it's monitoring the situation with an elections lawyer and readying for a possible state-mandated recount. He hired attorney Barry Richard, who represented President George W. Bush in the 2000 recount.

SHOOTING

Opening fire with a handgun with an illegal, extra-capacity magazine, Long shot a security guard outside the bar and then went in and took aim at employees and customers, authorities said.

He also used a smoke bomb, according to a law enforcement official who was not authorized to discuss the investigation publicly and spoke on condition of anonymity.

The dead included a man who had survived last year's massacre in Las Vegas, a veteran sheriff's deputy who rushed in to confront the gunman, a 22-year-old man who planned to join the Army, a freshman at nearby Pepperdine University and a recent Cal Lutheran graduate.

"It's a horrific scene in there," Ventura County Sheriff Geoff Dean said in the parking lot. "There's blood everywhere."

Survivors of the rampage — mostly young people who had gone out for college night at the Borderline, a hangout popular with students from nearby California Lutheran University and other schools — seemed to know what to do, having come of age in an era of active-shooter drills and deadly rampages happening with terrifying frequency.

For some it was not a new experience. Survivors and their relatives said several people who were at the bar Thursday had been at the outdoor country music festival in Las Vegas last year where a gunman in a high-rise hotel killed 58 people.

BREAKING NEWS...

CoQ10's Failure Leaves Millions Wanting

Use this pill to supercharge your brain and think better than ever.

BREAKING NEWS: Millions of Americans take the supplement CoQ10. It's the "jet fuel" that supercharges your cells' power generators, known as mitochondria.

As you age, your mitochondria begin to die. In fact, by age 67, you lose 80% of the mitochondria you had at age 25.1 But if you're taking CoQ10, there's something important you should know.

As powerful as CoQ10 is, there is a critical thing it fails to do. It can't create new mitochondria in your cells.

Taking CoQ10 is not enough

"There's a little-known NASA nutrient that multiplies the number of new power generators in your cells by up to 55%," says Dr. Al Sears, owner of the Sears Institute for Anti-Aging Medicine in Royal Palm Beach, Florida. "Science once thought this was impossible. But now you can make your heart, brain and body young again."

"I tell my patients the most important thing I can do is increase their 'health span.' This is the length of time you can live free of disease and with all your youthful abilities and faculties intact."

Medical first: Multiply the "power generators" in your cells

Al Sears, M.D., recently released an energy-boosting supplement based on this NASA nutrient that has become so popular, he's having trouble keeping it in stock.

Dr. Sears is the author of over 500 scientific papers on anti-aging and recently spoke at the WPBF 25 Health & Wellness Festival featuring Dr. Oz and special guest Suzanne Somers. Thousands of people listened to Dr. Sears speak on his anti-aging breakthroughs and attended his book signing at the event.

Now, Dr. Sears has come up with what his peers consider his greatest contribution to anti-aging medicine yet — a newly discovered nutrient that multiplies the number of tiny, energy-producing "engines" located inside the body's cells, shattering the limitations of traditional CoQ10 supplements.

Why mitochondria matter

A single cell in your body can contain between 200 to 2,000 mitochondria, with the largest number found in the most metabolically active cells, like those in your brain, heart and skeletal muscles.

But because of changes in cells, stress and poor diet, most people's power generators begin to malfunction and die off as they age. In fact, the Mitochondria Research Society reports 50 million U.S. adults are suffering from health problems because of mitochondrial dysfunction.

Common ailments often associated with aging — such as memory problems, heart issues, blood sugar concerns and vision and hearing difficulties — can all be connected to a decrease in mitochondria.

Birth of new mitochondria

Dr. Sears and his researchers combined the most powerful form of CoQ10 available — called ubiquinol — with a unique, newly discovered natural compound called PQQ that has the remarkable ability to grow new mitochondria. Together, the two powerhouses are now available in a supplement called Ultra Accel II.

Discovered by a NASA probe in space dust, PQQ (Pyrroloquinoline quinone) stimulates something called "mitochondrial biogenesis" — a unique process that actually boosts the number of healthy mitochondria in your cells.

In a study published in the Journal of Nutrition, mice fed PQQ grew a staggering number of new mitochondria, showing an increase of more than 55% in just eight weeks.

The mice with the strongest mitochondria showed no signs of aging — even when they were the equivalent of 80 years old.

Dr. Al Sears with fellow physician Dr. Oz at the WPBF 25 Health & Wellness Festival held in Palm Beach Gardens, Florida.

Science stands behind the power of PQQ

Biochemical Pharmacology reports that PQQ is up to 5,000 times more efficient in sustaining energy production than common antioxidants.

"Imagine 5,000 times more efficient energy," says Dr. Sears. "PQQ has been a game changer for my patients."

"With the PQQ in Ultra Accel, I have energy I never thought possible," says Colleen R., one of Dr. Sears' patients. "I am in my 70s but feel 40 again. I think clearer, move with real energy and sleep like a baby."

It works right away

Along with an abundance of newfound energy, users also report a sharper, more focused mind and memory, and even younger-looking skin and hair. Jerry M. from Wellington, Florida, used Ultra Accel and was amazed at the effect.

"I noticed a difference within a few days," says Jerry. "My endurance almost doubled. But it's not just in your body. You can feel it mentally, too," says Jerry. "Not only do I feel a difference, but the way it protects my cells is great insurance against a health disaster as I get older."

Increase your health span today

The demand for this supplement is so high, Dr. Sears is having trouble keeping it in stock. "My patients tell me they feel better than they have in years. This is ideal for people who are feeling or looking older than their age... or for those who are tired or growing more forgetful."

"My favorite part of practicing anti-aging medicine is watching my patients get the joy back in their lives. Ultra Accel sends a wake-up call to every cell in their bodies... and they actually feel young again."

Where to find Ultra Accel II

Right now, the only way to get this potent combination of PQQ and super-powered CoQ10 is with Dr. Sears' breakthrough Ultra Accel II formula.

To secure bottles of this hot, new supplement, buyers should contact the Sears Health Hotline at 1-877-353-0593 within the next 48 hours. "It takes time to get bottles shipped out to drug stores," said Dr. Sears. "The Hotline allows us to ship the product directly to the customer."

Dr. Sears feels so strongly about this product, he offers a 100%, money-back guarantee on every order. "Just send me back the bottle and any unused product within 90 days, and I'll send you your money back," said Dr. Sears.

The Hotline will be taking orders for the next 48 hours. After that, the phone number will be shut down to allow them to restock.

Call 1-877-353-0593 to secure your limited supply of Ultra Accel II. You don't need a prescription, and those who call in the first 24 hours qualify for a significant discount. To take advantage of this great offer use Promo Code NP1118UA89 when you call in.

Pelosi's return as House speaker not a given

By Lisa Mascaro
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Vilified by Republicans on the campaign trail, Nancy Pelosi emerged as President Donald Trump's preferred choice to become speaker of the House, arriving on Capitol Hill with an air of inevitability after leading her party back to the majority.

The Democratic leader is positioned to return to the speaker's office after Democrats took back the House in Tuesday's mid-term elections. Already the only woman to have held the job, she would also become one of the few lawmakers to reclaim the gavel after losing it.

Pelosi is a "smart woman," Trump said Wednesday during a nearly 90-minute news conference at the White House, and someone with whom he hopes to engage in "beautiful bipartisan" and deal-making. It was a role reversal from just days ago, when he warned voters of her "radical" agenda.

She "deserved" to become speaker again after winning the House, Trump said Wednesday, adding that he looked forward to doing "a tremendous amount of legislation" once power in Congress is divided between a Democratic House and Republican Senate.

speaker who returned to the office — Pelosi was asked if she was confident she would become speaker when the new Congress convenes in January. She said simply: "Yes, I am."

Yet ascent of the California Democrat is nowhere near guaranteed. Many younger House Democrats, including some of the newly elected, have pledged to vote against her. They are reluctant to shout the name "Pelosi" when the cameras zoom in during the first roll call of Congress, fearful of the attack ads that will be launched against them.

As Trump and Pelosi extended overtures across Pennsylvania Avenue, they also shadowboxed around the new dynamic created by the House's ability to probe the president's business dealings and his administration. The president warned Democrats not to push too hard with their investigations, or he would smack back even harder; Pelosi vowed that they would conduct responsible oversight.

The two have reasons to cooperate. Both want to score legislative wins to bring to voters ahead of the 2020 election. They talked on election night about doing an infrastructure package and lowering health care costs, particularly around prescription drugs, priorities for both sides.

"There's plenty of opportunity," Pelosi said, noting she worked productively with President George W. Bush during her last turn as speaker. She also referenced Democratic Rep. Maxine Waters of California, another favorite Trump villain, who is set to lead the powerful Financial Services Committee.

"Democrats come to this majority with the responsibility not to Democrats — it's not to Democrats or Republicans — it's to the United States of America," she said. "The fact is we'd like to work together."

Dems vow action on gun control after Calif. shooting

By Matthew Daly
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Newly ascendant Democrats are promising congressional action on gun control amid a rash of mass shootings, including a late-night assault at a California bar that killed 12 people.

Measures including expanded background checks and a ban on assault-style weapons are likely to reach the House floor when Democrats retake control after eight years of Republican rule.

"The American people deserve real action to end the daily epidemic of gun violence that is stealing the lives of our children on campuses, in places of worship and on our streets," said Rep. Nancy Pelosi of California, the Democratic leader who is running for a second stint as House speaker.

Pelosi vowed to push for a range of actions to stem gun violence, including restrictions on high-capacity magazines and a measure allowing temporary removal of guns from people deemed an imminent risk to themselves or others.

The measures could win approval in the Democratic-controlled House next year but will face opposition from the Republican-controlled Senate and the White House, where President Donald Trump has promised to "protect the Second Amendment."

Still, gun control advocates believe they have the political momentum to make guns a central issue next year.

The public's attitude

People cry as a law enforcement motorcade escorts the body of Ventura County Sheriff's Department Sgt. Ron Helus from the Los Robles Regional Medical Center Thursday in Thousand Oaks, Calif. on guns is changing, said Democratic Rep. Ted Deutch, whose Florida district includes the Parkland high school where 17 people were killed in February.

"We saw it start on Tuesday and we're going to see it accelerate in January," Deutch said.

Gun control was a major issue even before the most recent shootings. Lawmakers debated action following the Parkland attack and a 2017 shooting in Las Vegas that left 58 dead, and ultimately took modest steps to boost school safety funds and improve compliance with the federal background check system for gun purchases.

The Democrats' new majority includes dozens of candidates who support gun control, including Lucy McBath in Georgia, whose 17-year-old son was fatally shot in 2012 and who made gun violence the centerpiece of her campaign.

At least 17 newly elected House Democrats back gun control measures, including Jennifer Wexton, Abigail Spanberger and Elaine Luria in Virginia, who defeated incumbents backed by the National Rifle Association. In Colorado, Democrat Jason Crow beat GOP Rep. Mike Coffman, who received an A rating from the NRA and more than $37,000 in campaign contributions from the group.

"I do think there's new energy" on gun issues, even before the California assault late Wednesday night and an Oct. 27 shooting that killed 11 people at a Pittsburgh synagogue, said Kris Brown, co-president of the Brady Campaign to Prevent Gun Violence.

"Our base is worked up, and people are reacting in a positive way at the ballot box," said Brown, who campaigned with the three Virginia Democrats in the final week alongside a stream of volunteers. "A large number of folks showed up and knocked on doors and said they finally have a candidate who will do something about gun violence," she said.

BRIEF CASE

WASHINGTON Mortgage rates hit highest level in nearly 8 years

U.S. mortgage rates jumped this week to the highest level in almost eight years, a trend that is pulling down home sales and slowing home price growth.

Mortgage buyer Freddie Mac said Thursday that the average rate on a 30-year, fixed rate mortgage rose to 4.94 percent, from 4.83 percent last week. That is the highest level since February 2011. A year ago the rate was 3.9 percent.

The average rate on a 15-year, fixed rate loan increased to 4.33 percent, from 4.23 percent last week.

DETROIT Subaru recalls vehicles for stalling problems

Subaru is recalling about 640,000 vehicles worldwide to fix two problems that can cause them to stall.

The first recall covers about 229,000 Outback and Legacy vehicles in the U.S. from the 2018 model year. Government documents say a software problem can stop the low-fuel warning light from illuminating and make the miles-to-empty display inaccurate. The problem can cause drivers to run out of fuel and stall, increasing the risk of a crash.

The other recall covers Subaru Imprezas from 2012 to 2014 and the 2013 BRZ, XV Crosstrek and Toyota Scion FR-S.

CORONA, CALIF. Monster shares fall as Coke develops energy drinks

Shares of energy drink maker Monster Beverage Corp. tumbled after the company said its partner Coca-Cola Co. is developing energy drinks of its own.

Coke bought a stake in California-based Monster in 2014. At that time, Coke transferred its energy brands to Monster and agreed not to develop competing drinks.

But in a conference call with investors late Wednesday, Monster CEO Rodney Sacks said Coke is developing two energy drinks it believes are exceptions to the agreement.

More hikes ahead?

Fed leaves key rate unchanged but sees further increases in the near future

By Martin Crutsinger
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve has left its key policy rate unchanged but signaled that it plans to keep responding to the strong U.S. economy with more interest rate hikes. The next rate increase is expected in December.

The Fed kept its benchmark rate in a range of 2 percent to 2.25 percent. A statement it issued Thursday after its latest policy meeting portrayed the economy as robust, with healthy job growth, low unemployment, solid consumer spending and inflation near the Fed's 2 percent target.

Despite a U.S. trade war with key nations, weaker corporate investment and a sluggish housing market, the Fed is showing confidence in the economy's resilience. To help control inflation, it has projected three rate increases in 2019 after an expected fourth hike of the year next month.

Analysts saw the central bank's decision to highlight the economy's strength and to make few changes in its policy statement as a sign that it remains on track to raise rates next month.

"The Fed's economic assessment remains very upbeat, noting declining unemployment and continued strong growth," said Greg McBride, Bankrate.com's chief financial analyst. "All signs point to a rate hike at the December meeting."

The Fed's decision Thursday was approved 9-0 by its voting policymakers. Its brief statement was nearly identical to the one the Fed issued in September. It said the job market has continued to strengthen and noted that economic activity has been rising "at a strong rate."

In one of its few changes, the Fed downgraded its assessment of business investment spending, observing that it had slowed from its pace earlier in the year.

The Fed did not specify any risks to the economy it perceives. Analysts will be studying the minutes of this week's meeting, to be released in three weeks, for any insight into economic threats Fed policymakers may see, such as the trade war between the United States and China.

In deciding how fast or slowly to keep raising rates, the Fed will be monitoring the pace of growth, the job market's strength and gauges of inflation for clues to how the economy may evolve in the coming months. The brisk pace of economic growth — a 3.5 percent annual rate in the July-September quarter, after a 4.2 percent rate in the previous quarter — has raised the risk that inflation could begin accelerating.

Some economists foresee only two Fed rate hikes next year.

Others expect that economic growth will remain solid and the job market strong and that the Fed will decide that four rate increases will be justified next year to guard against high inflation. At 3.7 percent, the unemployment rate is already at its lowest level since 1969.

Last week, the government reported that the economy added a sizable 250,000 jobs in October and that average pay rose 3.1 percent over the previous 12 months — the sharpest year-over-year gain in nearly a decade. That's welcome news for workers. But it's a trend that may raise concern that accelerating wages will help fuel undesirably high inflation.

Chairman Jerome Powell has stressed that the Fed is determined to follow a middle-of-the-road approach: Keep gradually nudging up rates to control inflation but avoid tightening too aggressively and perhaps triggering a recession.

Even after three increases this year, the Fed's benchmark rate is still low by historical standards. The central bank's policymakers have stressed, and most economists agree, that these small quarter-point increases amount to a gradual pace of credit tightening.

Google bows to worker pressure on sexual misconduct policy

By Michael Liedtke
The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Google is promising to be more forceful and open about its handling of sexual misconduct cases, a week after thousands of high-paid engineers and others walked out in protest over its male-dominated culture.

Google bowed to one of the protesters' main demands by dropping mandatory arbitration of all sexual misconduct cases. That will now be optional, so workers can choose to sue in court and present their case in front of a jury. It mirrors a change made by ride-hailing service Uber after complaints from its female employees prompted an internal investigation. The probe concluded that its rank had been poisoned by rampant sexual harassment.

"Google's leaders and I have heard your feedback and have been moved by the stories you've shared," CEO Sundar Pichai said in an email to Google employees. "We recognize that we have not always gotten everything right in the past and we are sincerely sorry for that. It's clear we need to make some changes." Thursday's email was obtained by The Associated Press.

Last week, the tech giant's workers left their cubicles in dozens of offices around the world to protest what they consider management's lax treatment of top executives and other male workers accused of sexual harassment and other misconduct.

The protest's organizers estimated that about 20,000 workers participated.

The reforms are the latest fallout from a broader societal backlash against men's exploitation of their female subordinates in business, entertainment and politics — a movement that has spawned the "MeToo" hashtag as a sign of unity and a call for change.

Google will provide more details about sexual misconduct cases in internal reports available to all employees.

The breakdowns will include the number of cases that were substantiated within various company departments and list the types of punishment imposed, including firings, pay cuts and mandated counseling.

Oil prices cause stocks to sink again

By Marley Jay
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stocks in the U.S. slipped Thursday as the ninth consecutive drop in crude oil prices hurt energy companies. U.S. markets were coming off huge gains the day before.

U.S. crude oil has now slumped more than 20 percent since early October, meeting Wall Street's definition of a "bear market."

Government fuel stockpiles have steadily expanded, pushing supplies higher, and the U.S. issued waivers to a number of countries that buy oil from Iran. That allows those countries to keep importing Iranian oil in spite of renewed sanctions on that country.

Most other groups of stocks finished little changed. Banks made the largest gains. The Federal Reserve left interest rates where they are, but suggested it plans to keep raising rates in response to the strong U.S. economy.

After its steep plunge in October, the S&P had risen for six of the seven days ending on Wednesday. Stocks started sinking last month because investors worried that the Fed was going to raise interest rates to the point they slowed down economic growth. But John Lynch, chief investment strategist at LPL Research, said he doesn't think that's going to happen and that the Fed will stop raising rates in 2019.

"We do not believe they will be as aggressive as many fear," he said. "We still don't have anything approaching the wage pressures that have historically scared the Fed."

The S&P 500 index shed 7.06 points, or 0.3 percent, to 2,806.83 after it jumped 2.1 percent Wednesday. The Dow Jones Industrial Average inched up 10.92 points to 26,191.22.

The Nasdaq composite dipped 39.87 points, or 0.5 percent, to 7,530.88 after a 2.6 percent surge a day earlier. The Russell 200 index of smaller-company stocks fell 3.95 points, or 0.2 percent, to 1,578.21.

Respect voters' will on Amendment 4

A solid majority of Florida voters sought to right a wrong by supporting constitutional Amendment 4 in the elections that ended Tuesday. Titled "Voting Restoration Amendment," the citizen-driven initiative was designed to reverse Florida's discriminatory and arduous, yet ambiguous, efforts to prevent former felons from regaining their rights to participate in the fundamental practice of representative democracy — even after they have done their time.

Approval of more than 60 percent of voters is required for proposed amendments to pass and be incorporated into the Florida Constitution. Statewide, 64.5 percent of Floridians casting ballots on this measure voted in favor.

As we have written previously, passage of Amendment 4 was simply the right thing to do. Despite having fulfilled their obligations, more than 1.5 million ex-felons in Florida — the largest number of any state — have been denied voting rights.

Passage of an amendment was necessary to change the status quo because the state constitution currently states: "No person convicted of a felony ... shall be qualified to vote or hold office under restoration of civil rights ..."

What's more, under Gov. Rick Scott, it became even more difficult for former felons to receive clemency and have their voting rights restored. Florida became an extreme outlier in that regard: Only two other states, Iowa and Kentucky, permanently revoke voting rights in the absence of an official act of clemency.

Many states automatically restore the voting rights of people convicted of lesser and non-violent offenses. Passage and implementation of Amendment 4 will place Florida in the mainstream.

We recognize that many Floridians don't feel sorry for ex-felons and believe they don't deserve the ability to vote. But, despite the terms of disqualification, the state constitution extends voting rights to U.S. citizens who are at least 18 and are permanent residents of Florida.

Furthermore, denying voting rights does nothing to protect public safety or advance the common good; it erects yet another barrier that makes it more difficult for former inmates to reintegrate into society.

According to the ballot summary: "This amendment restores the voting rights of Floridians with felony convictions after they complete all terms of their sentence including parole or probation. The amendment would not apply to those convicted of murder or sexual offenses, who would continue to be permanently barred from voting unless the Governor and Cabinet vote to restore their voting rights on a case by case basis."

Fortunately, the ballot language gave voters a clear summary of the amendment's intent and provided the Legislature with a direct path to follow.

The question now, and when the Legislature convenes early next year for its annual session, is whether lawmakers will follow the direction from voters. Unfortunately, legislators have erected barriers that have hindered implementation of other amendments, including those involving access to medical marijuana and the preservation of environmentally valuable lands.

The Legislature should act with deliberate speed to implement Amendment 4 — without creating additional barriers — to respect the will of voters and to do the right thing.

Told you so!

John Stossel

Republicans held the Senate! Democrats took the House but by a narrower margin!

Did I just embarrass myself? I write this Election Day morning, before most polling places even opened. I don't know the actual results, of course.

But I'll pretend I do because I trust the betting odds.

As of Tuesday morning, ElectionBettingOdds.com, a site I co-founded, says Republicans have an 84 percent chance to hold the Senate and Democrats a 71 percent chance to retake the House.

Why trust a bunch of gamblers? Because they have the best track record!

Polls have flaws. Some people lie to pollsters or just give them what they think is the "proper" answer. Others won't even talk to them.

Pundits are worse. They often let their personal preferences skew their predictions.

Bettors are more accurate because of something called the "wisdom of crowds." It turns out that an average of many people's estimates is usually more accurate than any one person's views.

The crowd that bets on elections online (political betting is legal in Europe and at a small American

They look at more than polls. They factor in the latest news, try to sense the mood on the ground and research candidates' campaign tactics.

They try harder than pundits because their own money is on the line. You've met blowhards who confidently predict things until someone says, "Want to bet?" Then they shut up. People who put their money where their mouths are become more careful. Prediction markets, or futures markets, are not new. Stock markets are prediction markets where people bet on companies' future earnings. A hundred years ago, "More money was traded in election markets than in stock markets," says economist Robin Hanson.

Then, unfortunately, governments in America banned most betting. That deprived Americans of one of the best predictors of future events.

There were a few exceptions. Fifteen years ago, U.S. officials asked Hanson to create a betting market that might predict future problems.

As usual, some elected officials were horrified by the idea of people betting on things like possible terrorism. Sen. Ron Wyden stood up on the Senate floor to declare such betting "ridiculous and grotesque." The next day, the secretary of Defense declared the project dead.

So the Pentagon is deprived of predictions that might save lives. It's too bad, because bettors are just, well, better.

But not perfect. While the betting odds are almost always the best predictors, in the last presidential election they (along with polls and pundits) were wrong about Donald Trump. Bettors gave him only a 20 percent chance.

The betting markets also got Brexit wrong. They gave it a 25 percent chance.

But in both cases, as election results came in, the betting odds shifted much faster than the TV coverage. It was fun watching anchors try to catch up to what ElectionBettingOdds.com already predicted on my phone.

As I write, the website says this about specific states:

Republicans will narrowly win Arizona (51 percent chance) and Missouri (57), and easily win North Dakota (80), Tennessee (80) and Texas (79).

By the time you read this, say bettors, Democrats will have flipped Nevada (60 percent chance) and held West Virginia (75), Montana (65) and New Jersey (81).

Republicans will win the Georgia governor's race (64 percent chance), but Scott Walker will lose in Wisconsin (59), and Florida now probably has a new far-left governor (64). Were the bettors right?

I assume some were not. After all, a 60 percent chance of winning means winning only 6 out of 10 times.

READER FEEDBACK

Democrat Stacey Abrams' team is renewing its concerns that Republican Brian Kemp, the current secretary of state, remains the chief elections officer supervising his own election, a race already marked by disputes over the voting process.

June C. Bug: "Kemp, the current secretary of state, remains the chief elections officer supervising his own election, a race already marked by disputes over the voting process." Kemp is known for voter suppression and gerrymandering. Nothing to go wrong there! She said sarcastically! Recount the votes!"

For all the many successes among candidates of color, the midterm elections also proved to some the enduring power of racism, with minority politicians' intelligence and integrity called into question by their opponents and President Donald Trump in what were widely seen as coded appeals to white voters.

Rob Roy: "This article is ridiculous to charge racism against whites, when in a white-black race for governor of Florida, most blacks, probably over 70-80% voted for the black candidate and maybe only 60% whites voted for the Hispanic white candidate, and 40% for the black candidate. Are they charging blacks with racism? I doubt it. This is the problem with Liberal Media, and why they are becoming hated. It's their name calling, their constant Lies."

President Donald Trump, emboldened by Republican election wins in the Senate and scornful of GOP candidates he felt didn't sufficiently embrace his support, delivered a stark warning to the new Democratic House majority on Wednesday: Investigate me, and I'll investigate you — and the government will grind to a halt.

Richard Weber: "Nice try at the fear machine. The only one that has to worry is the orange liar himself. Now that the Dems are in control, trump's butt is grass! Hope he likes the orange jump suite!"

The Trump administration on Wednesday released a pair of rules that will allow employers with religious or moral objections to contraception to offer health-benefit plans without the coverage.

Terri McAllister: "Okay, no more Viagra or Cialis or penile implants for men. Congress is full of old men who need all three."

Amanda GK: "The surest way to prevent abortion is to provide access to birth control. The two main causes of abortion are fetal abnormalities and unwanted pregnancies. Want to reduce abortion? Provide birth control."

Raistlyn Scott: "Okay but wait. So what about the girls that have serious medical conditions? "Birth control" isn't just birth control? It helps with many other problems.."

Xena Lemon: "I don't understand why it's anyone else's decision besides my own on what I put and do with my body."

Summer Gilchrist: "Xena Lemon then do so... on your own expense. The business just says they won't be supplying coverage for it. That's not taking your right away. You can still go purchase it. Anyone saying a business has to provide whatever people want in healthcare is actually the ones threatening freedom."

Corinne Lyon: "So you don't think insurance companies should cover bc... you realize that bc is insurance against unwanted pregnancy, right? It's a lot cheaper than paying for prenatal and birth care. It's why some insurance subsidizes gym memberships. It's cheaper than paying for cardiac trauma care."

Expert: Acosta video doctored

WH press secretary sends tweet claiming CNN reporter was aggressive with intern

NEW YORK — A video distributed by the Trump administration to support its argument for banning CNN reporter Jim Acosta from the White House appears to have been doctored to make Acosta look more aggressive than he was during an exchange with a White House intern, an independent expert said Thursday.

White House press secretary Sarah Sanders tweeted the video, which shows Acosta asking a question to President Donald Trump on Wednesday as the intern tries to take his microphone away. But a frame-by-frame comparison with an Associated Press video of the same incident shows that the one tweeted by Sanders appears to have been altered to speed up Acosta's arm movement as he touches the intern's arm, according to Abba Shapiro, an independent video producer who examined the footage at the AP's request.

Earlier, Shapiro noticed that frames in the tweeted video were frozen to slow down the action, allowing it to run the same length as the AP one.

The alteration is "too precise to be an accident," said Shapiro, who trains instructors to use the software. The tweeted video also does not have any audio, which Shapiro said would make it easier to alter.

Sanders, who has not said where the tweeted video came from, said it clearly shows Acosta made contact with the intern.

While the origin of the manipulated video is unclear, its distribution marked a new low for an administration that has been criticized for its willingness to mislead.

The White House News Photographers Association decried the sharing of the video.

"As visual journalists, we know that manipulating images is manipulating truth," said Whitney Shefte, the association's president. "It's deceptive, dangerous and unethical. Knowingly sharing manipulated images is equally problematic, particularly when the person sharing them is a representative of our country's highest office with vast influence over public opinion."

"The irony of this White House video involving Jim Acosta is that if it is found to be doctored, it will show the administration to be doing what it accuses the news media of doing — engaging in fake information," said Aly Colon, a professor in journalism ethics at Washington & Lee University.

CNN has labeled Sanders' characterization of Acosta's exchange with the intern as a lie. Its position has been supported by witnesses including Reuters White House correspondent Jeff Mason, who was next to Acosta during the news conference and tweeted that he did not see Acosta place his hands on the White House employee. Rather, he said he saw him holding on to the microphone as she reached for it.

Several journalists and organizations — including the American Society of News Editors, the Associated Press Media Editors and the Online News Association — demanded Acosta's press pass be reinstated.

Killer gets life in 2017 PCB case

By Zack McDonald

PANAMA CITY — Despite his claims of assisting a friend commit suicide by strangulation with a commando handsaw, Rex Stewart Jr. has been sentenced to spend the rest of his days behind bars.

Stewart, 27, appeared in court Thursday for a sentence hearing after pleading no contest to second-degree murder and robbery. He was arrested after authorities arrived Oct. 19, 2017, to the Coconut Grove Motor Inn, 9725 Front Beach Road, to find Gerald Richard Breen Jr., 36, strangled and robbed of cash, a phone and a speaker. Stewart, of Callaway, hugged his mother after being sentenced to life plus 15 years in prison.

Several of Breen's family members spoke during Stewart's sentencing. They said Breen was a generous man who was willing to go out of his way to help out a stranger, and that likely led to his death. His mother, Maureen Durden, told the court that several people, including Breen's two children, will be deprived of that kindness because of Stewart's actions.

"These children miss him terribly, as do I," Durden told the court. "Our lives will never be the same. There is a hole that can never be filled because that was his place."

Breen's family called for the maximum sentence.

Stewart declined to speak during the hearing and averted his eyes during the testimony of Breen's family. His defense attorney, Brian Hill, argued for a 20-year sentence at the lower end of punishment guidelines.

"Death is difficult — it leaves us all with a hole in the place of a loved one," Hill said. "What happened that night — the why will never be known."

Volusia to allow medical pot for students

By Cassidy Alexander
GateHouse Media Florida

DAYTONA BEACH — The Volusia County School Board on Wednesday unanimously approved "Zoe's Policy," which will allow students to receive medical marijuana at school.

The policy implementation came to be after the community rallied behind 6-year-old Zoe Adams, now the policy's namesake.

"I am deeply moved," said Zoe's dad, J.J. Adams. "Her legacy will live on even after she doesn't, and I commend you guys for this."

Zoe is living with a degenerative disorder that ultimately will be fatal. Her parents found that CDB oil, a marijuana product, helps soothe Zoe's symptoms, making it easier for her to focus in class and sleep through the night.

But they hit a roadblock when they tried to get the substance to Zoe at school in March: school and district officials said it was against federal law. But under state law, the substance could be allowed.

That conflict led her parents, backed by a community that dubbed themselves "Zoe's Army" and wore purple shirts to a September School Board

Flower shop sprouts back to life in shed after hurricane

PANAMA CITY — On a patch of concrete surrounded by storm-damaged homes and businesses, flags stating "OPEN" and "FLOWERS" waved on Monday in front of what appeared to be a garden shed.

To Harrison McElheney, the owner of Hallmark Flower Shoppe, the small shed across the street from his destroyed shop was a way to keep his business blooming.

Hurricane Michael wrecked Hallmark Flower Shoppe on 15th Street. The storm destroyed flowers and ribbons

"We were able to take out some that wasn't damaged," McElheney said, while pointing at spindles of ribbon still hanging on a water-damaged rack.

Below the rack, wilted mums grew thick globs of mold. The smell of decay lingered in the humid air inside the building.

McElheney's father, Randall McElheney, said this was not the first time the flower shop had been destroyed. About 30 years ago the shop burned down, and reopened days later across the street where there is now a Walgreens pharmacy.

Man denies false name charge in homicide

PANAMA CITY — An Alabama man who slept while a marijuana robbery turned into a fatal shooting of a 16-year-old Arnold High School student has pleaded guilty to giving investigators a false name while being questioned.

Cordarell Merrell Wright, 25, appeared in court Tuesday to hear the charge of providing false information in a capital crime investigation. He was one of four Auburn, Alabama, men arrested in connection with the Aug. 20, 2017, slaying of Jason Ian Price, who was shot almost point blank in the chest with a Draco AK-47 during an attempted robbery for marijuana at the CVS, 7112 U.S. 98. Wright was arrested Sept. 22 and remains in custody at the Bay County Jail on a $15,000 bond, court records show.

The other suspects — Gertavious Montrez Canada, 25; Rodney Racquez Jones, 19; and Demarcus Montrel Giddens, 22 — have been sentenced for varying roles in the robbery and killing. Wright was not charged directly in connection with Price's death because he was asleep on a nearby bench. He now has been charged, though, because he allegedly told investigators his name was "Ladehtric Markeith Jones" during the initial investigation.

PANAMA CITY $100,000 donated to BCSO to help deputies, staff after hurricane Officials accepted donations totaling $100,000 to go toward volunteers and law enforcement officers Thursday in what they hope will be continuing outpouring of support from corporations.

Scientific Games, a technology-based gaming company, donated the money.

With a mound of supplies donated to local law enforcement as the backdrop, Bay County Sheriff Tommy Ford said the funds will go directly to deputies and staff who suffered losses from Hurricane Michael.

"This storm hit us very hard," Ford said, noting about 60 staff members and deputies lost their homes. "Their resolve has been inspiring. They didn't skip a beat in serving their community." Florida Chief Financial Officer Jimmy Patronis said that a call from Gov. Rick Scott for corporations to help the community made such donations possible.

"This is what brings the community back one day at a time," Patronis said. "The improvements have been miraculous because the people are miraculous."

PANAMA CITY 'Sheriff-Mart' giving supplies to public on Saturday

The Bay County Sheriff's Office will hold a supply giveaway Saturday until what once was called "Sheriff-Mart" has been taken by those in need.

From baby food to diapers to canned goods to pet food to clothes, BCSO will be allowing the public Saturday to take their pick from the mound of supplies the office accumulated post-Hurricane Michael. The giveaway will take place at BCSO on State 77 from 10 a.m. until everything is gone.

The supplies had once acted as a lifeline for BCSO deputies and staff in what was affectionately referred to as "Sheriff-Mart."

CHICAGO American Airlines packs food for Florida hurricane relief

American Airlines volunteers gathered Thursday to pack 5,000 boxes of food for Florida communities affected by Hurricane Michael.

Team members gathered at one of the airline's O'Hare International Airport hangars.

They worked in assembly line-fashion to pack up 75,000 pounds of food.

The event is part of a system-wide effort to aid disaster relief following devastation in several Florida communities.

American Airlines teams have met at airports in Charlotte, North Carolina, and Miami to pack food with Feeding America and thousands of hygiene comfort kits with the American Red Cross.

DAVIE Officers catch huge lizard that terrified neighbors

Florida authorities have caught a huge lizard that has terrified residents of a suburban Miami neighborhood for months.

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission said Thursday the Asian water monitor lizard measures more than 8 feet long.

The lizard is an escaped pet. It was first reported loose in August in a Davie neighborhood. Residents said it lurked in their backyards and scratched at their patio doors.

Wildlife officers and Davie police officers caught it Tuesday after getting a tip from a resident who said the lizard frequently appeared on his property about midday.

A wildlife commission statement says the lizard will be returned to its owner, who received a criminal citation for its escape. Owners must have cages to keep these lizards as pets. It's illegal to release non-native species in Florida.

GAINESVILLE Researchers: 80 percent drop in butterflies in North Florida

New research shows the number of butterflies and caterpillars in North Florida has declined substantially during the past decade or so.

The University of Florida study released this week says the number has declined by 80 percent since 2005.

The Tampa Bay Times reported researchers believe two major factors could be responsible. Milkweed is the favorite food of young monarchs, and its availability has been sharply reduced by development and by glyphosate, an herbicide widely used in agriculture to kill weeds. Researcher Jaret Daniels said Florida is a staging ground of sorts for the recolonization of butterflies on the U.S. East Coast.

“During the subsequent depositions, (Prosecutor) Bob Sombathy interviewed this man who had identified himself as Ladhetric Jones during our investigation,” officers wrote. “This man admitted during sworn, taped deposition that he had given us a false name on the night of the homicide investigation because he believed he had a warrant.”

Officials wrote that Wright’s account of the events were critical to the investigation and prosecution of the case. He had fled with the group after the fatal shooting and testified to conversations immediately after. That included when one of the suspects told Giddens he didn’t have to kill Price, which Giddens responded “I had to show them we weren’t (expletive) around,” officers wrote.

Giddens, who was convicted of first-degree murder and attempted robbery, was sentenced to life in prison for the shooting. Canada and Jones were sentenced to four and 15 years in prison, respectively, after testifying that Giddens was the triggerman.

Jones had expected to receive 20 years in prison, but prosecutor Sombathy said his testimony against Giddens “exceeded expectations.” At trial, Jones provided the jury with an account that Giddens had unveiled his plot to rob a group of teens for marijuana beforehand. As they fled the scene and went to change clothes, Giddens showed no remorse when asked why he shot Price, Jones said.

“He looked at me and said ‘(expletive) that (expletive), bro,’” Jones told the jury. “I told him he was tripping.”

The trio, along with several others, had made the four-hour drive to Panama City Beach from Auburn earlier in the day with no particular plan in mind or any hotel room booked. After a disagreement with their driver, Jones and the group walked to the Taco Bell at the intersection of U.S. 98 and Thomas Drive, where they met a group of local high school students.

Jones asked the group if he could buy some marijuana, and one of them made a call. As the group walked across Wildwood Road to the nearby CVS, Jones said Giddens hatched the plan to rob the students.

Jones was around the side of the CVS “scaling up” or weighing some marijuana when he heard a scuffle and saw Giddens confront Price — who had arrived at the CVS moments before — with a firearm, putting the gun to his chest and pulling the trigger. At the sound of the gunshot, Jones said he panicked and punched the male who delivered the marijuana, stealing his watch and his phone before fleeing with Giddens.

Jones also said in his testimony that he knew Giddens had the firearm, believed to be a Draco AK-47 pistol, in his backpack during the trip.

meeting, to lobby for a policy allowing medical marijuana.

Board members have enthusiastically supported the policy, which basically allow parents and caregivers to come to campus and administer the drugs.

“Thank you for standing up, thank you for being open and thank you for being human,” said Zoe’s mom, Kim Adams. Four other districts in Florida have similar policies, including Flagler County. At a meeting in September, board members expressed interest in establishing a policy to address staff members who need to use medical marijuana — and Zoe’s parents are passionate about that, too.

“We want to fight for the teachers as well that are suffering through illnesses of their own,” J.J. Adams said. “Hopefully we can find a common way to combat that as well. Zoe’s Policy doesn’t stop with kids.”

Zane Adams, 8, holds the CBD gummies his sister Zoe takes to soothe the symptoms of Sanfilippo syndrome alongside his parents, J.J. and Kim Adams. The Volusia School Board adopted a policy this week that will allow caregivers to administer the medicine to children while they are at school. (LOLA GOMEZ/GATEHOUSE MEDIA FLORIDA)

FLOWERS

“It was easier then, because there were still utilities across the street,” Randall McElheney said, referring to the challenges of having city-wide electricity outages.

On Oct. 30, Harrison McElheney purchased the large shed, and was ready to open Friday, Nov. 2. To make the shed into a store, he and his staff installed sheet rock, spray foam insulation and flooring.

In addition to selling flowers, Hallmark also is a wedding rental business. One of the trailers the company rents was damaged by a fallen tree during the storm. That trailer now serves as a flower cooler, after McElheney installed an air conditioner on top of the trailer and insulated it with spray foam.

Harrison McElheney said he felt he could not wait the four to six months it would take to renovate his store to reopen.

“We had to get open, we had to get business. We had employees to get paid and people need flowers,” he said.

Even with the shop closed, McElheney said he paid his employees like they were working 40-hour weeks, even though they were not working.

“They had stuff that they had to pay for, and I thought I’d take care of them,” he said.

Now, the shop is open for orders or walk-in customers. After the building is restored, McElheney said he will use the shed as a cabin at his farm.

Bay County Sheriff’s Office Inv. Amy Burnette walked the court through the course of the investigation after finding Breen strangled to death Oct. 19 inside the motel. After finding he also had been robbed of the cash in his wallet and other personal items, officers went through surveillance video that showed a 6-foot-6-inch man with a beard leaving the room that morning about 9 a.m. Burnette said they then tracked Stewart to his mother’s home in Callaway, where he was taken into custody.

Stewart’s story evolved from claiming that Breen had thought people were following him to eventually landing on a suicide pact between the two gone wrong. Stewart “said they had been talking about committing suicide together,” Burnette told the court. “One idea was slitting their wrists together, another was using the commando saw.”

Stewart told investigators that at one point Breen became upset when Stewart started to back out of assisting in his suicide. Stewart claimed a struggle ensued and he ended up strangling Breen with the commando saw. Stewart then decided to rob him of cash, a cellphone and a speaker, Burnette said.

Prosecutor Bob Sombathy told the court the story didn’t add up. Breen had children and had gotten Stewart a job the day before doing landscaping, which was where the murder weapon came from. What made more sense, Sombathy said, was the evidence that came out about Stewart’s past drug addiction.

“The strangulation in such a violent manner, it didn’t make a lot of sense,” Sombathy said. “Being addicted to methamphetamine for two years may explain some rage. It filled in some holes in my mind and in the family’s.”

Stewart had been charged with felony first-degree murder, because the robbery occurred at the time of a killing. He threw himself on the mercy of the court in an attempt to avoid a life sentence and pointed out his lack of a criminal history. Circuit Judge Michael Overstreet said neither the lack of criminal history nor his drug use factored into the sentencing decision. He said the circumstances of Breen’s death and then robbery demanded a life sentence.

LOLA BELL CLARK RUSS

Mrs. Lola Bell Clark Russ, a beloved wife, mother, daughter, sister and Christian friend. Mrs. Russ was born on Sept. 18, 1931, in Gordon, Alabama, to the late Mr. Jessie James Clark Sr. and Mrs. Louisa (Luizer) Grimes Clark who preceded her in death.

Mrs. Russ was a devout Christian and received the baptism of the Holy Spirit at a very early age. Mrs. Russ was a loving, caring and giving soul with a highly infectious laugh and smile. She was God-fearing and always kept a prayer and praise in her heart. Even after being diagnosed with dementia she never forgot how to pray and call on the Lord. She worked in her community faithfully up until the diagnosis of her dementia and early Alzheimer’s disease which impeded a lot of her memory activities. This beautiful flower will be remembered for her courage, bravery and strength through those difficult times. But, especially for her undying love she had for her mother, father, husband, children and grandchildren. Mrs. Lola was gifted musically and artistically as she loved playing the piano and keyboards. She spent most of her adult life caring for and protecting her children. She raised all of her children under the Proverbs 22:6 scripture, “Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it.” Her work stint was in the restaurant and hotel industry where she worked to help provide for her family. Mrs. Russ’ most prided career was as a beautician and entrepreneur where she was the proud owner of Russ Beauty Salon in Port St. Joe, Florida. She serviced most of the community with her infamous Press-N-Curl.

No charges coming in stabbing death

By Heather Osbourne

 dailynews.com

MILTON — Kevin Ford will not face criminal charges in connection with the Oct. 9 stabbing death of James Alson Macks, the State Attorney's Office announced Thursday.

The fight that led to Macks' death began while Ford, his girlfriend Jennifer Taylor and her 8-year-old daughter were in their home at 5132 Buggy Drive at 8 p.m., eating pizza on the living room floor, according to a report from the State Attorney's Office.

That's when Macks, Taylor's brother who was also living there, walked into the living room with an aluminum bat and began to yell at her about the power being disconnected.

Macks struck Taylor in the head and arm with the bat while they were yelling at one another, the press release said. Macks then raised the bat to strike Ford.

Taylor and Ford pushed Macks into the kitchen to get him away from the child. Macks, still armed with the bat, pushed both Taylor and Ford toward the kitchen sink.

Macks then lunged at Ford with the bat, and as he did Ford grabbed a kitchen knife from the counter and stabbed Macks one time, the report said.

The couple then pushed Macks down the hallway away from the child, who remained in the living room. Macks struck Ford in the head with the bat, causing both of them to fall.

Taylor helped her boyfriend up and they ran next door to Taylor's mother's house with the child.

It was at the home of Bonnie Brewer, the mother, where the couple called law enforcement.

Santa Rosa County sheriff's deputies who responded to the call observed multiple injuries to Ford and Taylor.

Deputies entered the home and found Macks lying on his back in the hallway, according to the report. EMS tried to treat him, but he was pronounced dead.

Macks, when he was first found by deputies, had the bat lying between his legs. He had a puncture wound under his ribs and a laceration on his back. He also had small lacerations on his knuckles and his right hand was covered in a sticky black substance consistent with the wrapping on an aluminum bat.

Deputies found the knife on the patio just outside of the door going into the hallway where Macks was found.

Major Crimes Detective Jason Denney interviewed Taylor, Ford and the child, who all gave consistent statements about what had occurred, the report said. The statements also were consistent with the evidence at the scene.

At the time of the initial interviews, they were unaware that Macks was dead.

Brewer, Macks' mother, said her son was extremely violent, and she and her husband were afraid of him. Brewer said Macks was not allowed to stay with her because he would terrorize and beat her. Detectives located multiple text messages between Brewer and Macks supporting her claim.

An autopsy report determined Macks' cause of death was a stab wound to his right torso that penetrated the liver.

The State Attorney's Office's review determined that the use of force by Ford was reasonable and justifiable, and no criminal charges will be filed.

Long-term recovery group meets tonight

By Tim Croft

The Port St. Joe Star
850-227-7827
@PSJ_Star | tcroft@starfl.com

Response transitioned into recovery as the weeks unfolded after Hurricane Michael. Beginning tonight, long-term recovery takes center stage.

State, county and FEMA officials will hold the initial meeting of the Gulf County Long Term Recovery Group 5:30 p.m. ET tonight in the Great Room at First United Methodist Church of Port St. Joe.

The church is located at 1001 Constitution Blvd.

The meeting is particularly targeted to community leaders from local churches and houses of worship, faith-based organization, volunteer agencies, community, social and human services organizations, a FEMA representative told Port St. Joe city commissioners Tuesday night.

There remain six non-profits working in the county.

The representative added that getting the Long Term Recovery Group up and running has proved challenging after other disasters, and said the initial meeting would largely revolve on organizing county organizations to share data on unmet needs.

Most pressing for many in the county, where some 6,000 structures sustained damage, is emergency housing; the county has been declared eligible for disaster housing.

Building department

During a special meeting last week followed by comments Tuesday night, commissioners are pushing for the city's building department to add inspectors, which it has, and "treat everybody fair," Commissioner Brett Lowry said. Another issue has been conflicting information provided homeowners by county and city building officials.

"I want to make sure that the city and county are giving out the same information," said Commissioner Scott Hoffman.

Scooter Hodges with the city building department said his team is committed to "trying to do everything we can to allow people to rebuild their home."

Blue Roof program

A representative of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers provided an update of the Blue Roof program, which has engendered some degree of frustration within the city due to the pace of the work. One resident said he was the first in line when the Blue Roof office began accepting applications in Port St. Joe and is still waiting on his temporary repairs.

The Army Corps also did not open an office on the north end until requested by FEMA.

Hoffman contended that the Army Corps started first in Bay County, where the most applications have been received and that in turn siphoned away roofing contractors for Gulf County.

That has also slowed the pace of repairs, he said.

Hoffman also questioned whether the percentage of roofs completed in Gulf was in line with the need.

Bay County, the Army Corps representative said, had 90 percent of the applications for the Blue Roof program in the region; Gulf County was second in the region with 10 percent of total applications. He added that the pace of repairs had picked up this week, with more than 50 completed Monday alone.

As of Tuesday, 135 roofs in Gulf County have been repaired with temporary Blue Roofs and "the number is expected to rise."

Applications will stop being collected as of Nov. 11.

Destin film festival set for Saturday

By Savannah Vasquez

Svasquez@thedinlog.com

DESTIN — The film community of Northwest Florida might be a small one, but local filmmakers celebrate in a big way with the annual Kite Film Fest at Club LA. This year, organizers have planned the free short-film festival for Saturday, with about two dozen short films for viewing.

"It was just kind of a spur-of-the-moment idea that caught fire," Kite Film Fest co-founder Nikki Hedrick said of the festival's beginnings two years ago. "We were hearing people talk about projects and their scripts, but there wasn't a really good way to show their products."

Hedrick and her mother Heather founded the first Kite Film Fest in 2016 as a platform to showcase local films.

"The first year I was very pleased with the turnout, and the second year we were scrambling to find seating for everyone," Hedrick said. "We didn't think it would grow to the degree that we have. It's a pretty cool thing that this little concept is something people look forward to."

Jason O'Brien is one of them. A filmmaker from Alabama, O'Brien has participated each year since the Kite Film Fest's Jason O'Brien, center, works on set as he directs "Heard No More," a short film on relationships that he entered into the Kite Film Fest in Destin this weekend.

inception.

"It's very rare to find festivals that are just starting out that are so well organized," O'Brien said. "I like the idea of starting out with something that is really trying to grow."

O'Brien said he will be continuing a series of films that he produced under the same theme.

"I call it 'The Relationship Trilogy,' and each one looks at relationships in a different way," he said. "I wanted to portray a more honest look at relationships on film."

Fort Walton Beach cinematographer Kevin Almodovar took a more collaborative approach to the festival.

"Last year I think I had five films that I was a part of, and this year I think I have another five," he said. "With the Kite Film Fest, it's a passion project, a laid back, collaborative project, and it's just kind of neat."

Almodovar said he looks forward every year to mingling with filmmakers, seeing local work and enjoying the collection of shorts that the Hedricks curate for the festival.

"I've been to a lot of film festivals, and this one blows them all away with what they are able to do," Almodovar said. "A lot of film festivals you may have one out of 10 films that capture your attention, but this one here has a high percentage of really good stuff that captures your interest and is entertaining."

Kite Film Fest will begin at 6 p.m. Saturday at Club LA in Destin. Entry is free and open to the public. For more information, visit <http://www.kitefilmfest.com>.

Quinn, McDaniel, Rich reclaim BOCC seats

By Tim Croft

The Port St. Joe Star |
850-227-7827
@PSJ_Star | tcroft@starfl.com

Incumbents ruled the local races in Tuesday's election.

But maybe the larger story was the turnout, as 58 percent of eligible voters cast ballots, more than half during early voting.

That was four percentage points higher than the turnout for the last midterm elections in 2014 and reflected state and national trends.

And the turnout came despite the individual voting precincts being folded into voting centers on each end of the county.

"With the hurricane and everything, I thought we'd do good to meet 2014," said Supervisor of Elections John Hanlon. "We ended up beating 2014 by four percentage points despite everything and I am pretty pleased about that."

"Our voters turned out."

The local races involved three seats on the Board of County Commissioners, each race including an incumbent and two challengers.

The outcomes were decidedly varied.

In the case of Commissioners Sandy Quinn and David Rich, the results were easy victories.

Rich, in District 1, pulled in 74 percent, or 835 votes, while neither John Nagy nor William Lawson could reach the 150 vote mark; both pulling in 13 percent of the vote.

Rich was appointed to the seat a year ago this month by Gov. Rick Scott following the untimely passing of Commissioner Freddie Whitfield.

Rich earned another two years on the job as the seat returns to its traditional cycle in 2020.

"I worked hard," Rich said. "It has been an honor and privilege to serve the people of Gulf County the past year."

"I will do my best in the next two years to recover and rebuild Gulf County."

In District 4, Quinn easily won over Amy Rogers and Ronald Pickett, winning 69 percent of the voter, or 563 votes.

Pickett drew 22 percent and Rogers 9 percent of the vote.

Quinn was also the only one of the three sitting commissioners forced to win a primary to reach the general election.

"I'm glad, grateful, thankful," Quinn said. "I appreciate the people giving me another four years."

"We will get back. One day at a time. But we will be back."

In District 2, in contrast, all three candidates garnered at least 30 percent of the vote, with Commissioner Ward McDaniel taking eight of the remaining 10 percent to secure another four-year term.

McDaniel earned 371 votes to 300 for Tom Semmes and 297 for Josh Taunton.

"I am proud of the turnout," McDaniel said. "With everything we've been through, for the voters to come out and vote was outstanding."

"I think they voted a little bit for experience. We have a tough four years ahead. It was a good clean race and I congratulate Mr. Semmes and Mr. Taunton for that."

As to state races, county voters leaned heavily Republican, which also happened to be consistently the winning side.

County voters overwhelmingly supported Rick Scott over Bill Nelson for the U.S. Senate and Ron DeSantis over Andrew Gillum for governor.

Ashley Moody (Attorney General), Jimmy Patronis (Chief Financial Officer) and Matt Caldwell (Commissioner of Agriculture) all easily won county voters.

In each of the state races, the top voter getter in the county received well over 4,000 votes in an election where 5,900 and change voted.

Likewise Neal Dunn easily took the county for Congressional District 2 with well over 4,000 votes.

County voters also uniformly favored the retention of the appellate judges up for consideration and uniformly supported, frequently by 2-to-1 margins, the amendments to the Florida Constitution put before voters.

Ready for the rematch

Rams get second shot at Bulldogs in playoff opener

By Dustin Kent

dkent@penh.com

Rutherford's return to the field for the first time in a month in last week's 26-12 loss to Marianna at Tommy Oliver Stadium saw the Rams predictably look a bit rough around the edges.

The Rams (2-6) hope the rust is fully knocked off in time for tonight's rematch with the Bulldogs in the Region 1-4A quarterfinals in Marianna (4-5) at 7:30 p.m. Marianna is the host as the No. 4 seed in the region, with Rutherford the No. 5 seed. The winner will advance to next week's region semifinal against top-seeded Raines, which has a bye this week.

With much more at stake in tonight's rematch, Rutherford coach Loren Tillman said he believes his team will be ready to give a much better representation of itself than last week.

"Two things: first of all, we hadn't been on the field for a month," he said. "We were just getting back into a rhythm at game speed, so hopefully last week is going to be big for helping us make those adjustments to the game speed. The second one was both us and Marianna were in the same boat with not having the ability to watch video and do a regular game plan.

"We've got internet back at the school now, so we were able to sit down with the boys and watch video and make the adjustments that we feel will help us this Friday night."

Rutherford scored touchdowns on its opening series of the first and second halves but struggled otherwise to sustain drives and avoid crucial mistakes. Two turnovers and a blocked punt that led directly to a Marianna touchdown proved too difficult to overcome for the Rams.

Tillman, however, said the issues for his team ran much deeper than those miscues.

"We didn't line up the way we need to on defense," he said. "Tackling was a problem. It had really been a month since we tackled live in a game situation, having our eyes down and not seeing blitzes, things we could work on this work and incorporate into our practice so we hopefully execute better Friday."

Marianna's single-wing offense is unique and a challenge to prepare for, with the Bulldogs incorporating two quarterbacks, Brady Donaldson and Caleb Torbett, and having a variety of ball carriers taking direct snaps from center. The Bulldogs had eight different runners account for their 218 rushing yards on 40 attempts in last week's win.

The Rams have seen the single-wing once this season all the way back in the season-opener against Bay on Aug. 17. Getting a look at it last week could prove an advantage for Tillman and his players as they prepare to face it again.

"Not everybody runs it. It's not an offense you see every week," he said. "Seeing it two weeks in a row will hopefully be beneficial because the boys will understand what they're trying to do and be able to counter it. Hopefully, we'll be better making those adjustments and have them understanding leverage and numbers and then going out and executing."

The Rutherford offense wasn't terribly efficient either, gaining just 179 yards on 49 plays and rushing for 89 yards on 33 attempts. Tillman said the Bulldogs have a fast and aggressive defense whose speed

Muschamp era concludes with mixed feelings

Florida will look to finally conclude the Will Muschamp era Saturday. As part of his buyout deal in 2014, Muschamp will collect his final $792,000 check this month from the University Athletic Association.

He's landed on his feet well, to say the least. A defensive coordinator job at Auburn quickly led to the South Carolina coaching gig, and the rest is current history. While some undoubtedly don't have the fondest of memories when it comes to Muschamp's up-and-down tenure at Florida, it's readily apparent his impact still exists in Gainesville.

When Florida takes the field Saturday at noon, the six Gators remaining from the Muschamp era — Khairi Clark, Kavaris Harkless, C'yontai Lewis, R.J.

Raymond, Jorge Powell and Moral Stephens — will play their penultimate game at Ben Hill Griffin Stadium. And if the reunion with the coach who brought them to town is similar to the previous iterations, the six will embrace Muschamp after the game. Aside from the freshmen and transfers, every player on Florida's roster has gone through a coaching transition. But six have gone through two.

"It's going to be a fun weekend, especially with all the guys that we've played here for. Coach (Mark) Campbell, strength staff guy. Mike P (Peterson), he's with the linebackers over there, (former UF director of football operations) George Wynn," Raymond, a former walk-on for Muschamp, said. "Coach 'Champ's got a bunch of people that were here with me. So it's going to

Gulf Coast teams back in action

The News Herald

The Gulf Coast women's and men's basketball teams will be back in action this weekend, with the Lady Commodores playing two games in Niceville and the GC men on the road for two in Barnesville, Ga.

The Lady Commodores, ranked No. 3 in the nation and No. 2 in the state, won their regular season opener 70-51 over Daytona State College on Nov. 2 at Northwest Florida State College. Freshman guard Brittany Davis was outstanding in her college debut with 23 points on 8 of 19 shooting from the field and 5 of 13 from the 3-point line. Fellow freshman Naomi Mbandu added 17 points and made 5 of 7 from long distance.

They'll next face a Vincennes team Friday that brings in a 3-0 record with lopsided wins over Olive-Harvey, Indiana Tech, and Lindsey Wilson. The two teams faced off early last season in the Billy Harrison Field House and Gulf Coast needed overtime to pull out an 84-81 victory.

The Trailblazers have topped 100 points in all three games this season and have six players averaging double figures scoring led by Jaynice Stovall at 15 points per game. Gulf Coast will also play Saturday against Palm Beach State, which is 1-1 this season with a loss to Eastern Florida State and a win over Florida State College of Jacksonville.

Gulf Coast's men lost their season opener in Pensacola 91-78 to Coastal Alabama-Bay Minette on Nov. 2 but bounced back the following day to defeat Action Sports Academy 104-50. Through two games, sophomore guard Daniel Kiely is leading the Commodores in scoring and assists with 19 points and six assists per game. Freshman guard Cameron Holden is also putting in 17.5 points per contest while shooting 56.5 percent from the field and 87.5 percent from the free throw line.

The Commodores will face Southern Crescent Tech (2-1) on Friday before playing host team Gordon State on Saturday. The Highlanders are 2-0 this season with wins over Cleveland State and Roane State. They're led by sophomore guard Oronte' Anderson, who is averaging 20.5 points and 6.5 assists while making 12 of 17 shots from the field, 5 of 11 from three, and 12 of 12 from the foul line.

Roethlisberger throws for 5 TDs; Steelers rip Panthers

By Will Graves
The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Steelers aren't playing like a team missing Le'Veon Bell.

Ben Roethlisberger threw for 328 yards and five touchdowns, James Conner ran for 65 yards and a score before leaving late with a possible concussion and the Steelers pounded the Carolina Panthers 52-21 on Thursday night for their fifth straight victory.

Antonio Brown added eight receptions for 96 yards — including a 53-yard touchdown in the second quarter — to cap an eventful day that began with the star wide receiver being cited for reckless driving after police clocked Brown's Porsche driving over 100 mph down a busy highway in the northern city suburbs.

While Bell — a three-time Pro Bowl running back who still hasn't signed his one-year franchise tender — tweeted his thoughts as he watched on television, the Steelers (6-2-1) rolled on without him. Bell has until next Tuesday to sign a contract if he wants to play this season. His teammates have long since tired of talking about Bell's status and at this point, the AFC North leaders appear to be doing just fine on their own.

Carolina not so much.

The Panthers (6-3) saw their three-game winning streak come to an abrupt halt in a city where they've never won. Carolina fell to 0-4 all-time in Pittsburgh and was never really in it after the Steelers scored 21 points in the game's first 11 minutes.

Cam Newton completed 23 of 29 for 193 yards and a pair of flips to Christian McCaffrey that the second-year running back turned into scores but Newton's show-down with Roethlisberger never materialized. The Steelers sacked Newton five times and rarely let him get comfortable.

Newton didn't help matters when he threw off his back foot out of the Carolina end zone while trying to avoid getting sacked in the first quarter. Pittsburgh linebacker Vince Williams raced under the floater and returned it 17 yards for a touchdown to give the Steelers a 14-7 lead they never came close to relinquishing.

McCaffrey finished with 138 yards total offense (77 yards rushing, 61 yards receiving) and accounted for all three Panther scores but it wasn't nearly enough.

Pittsburgh's 52 points matched the most ever surrendered by the Panthers in franchise history. Carolina allowed the same total in a 52-9 loss to Oakland on Dec. 24, 2000.

The Steelers held the 36-year-old Roethlisberger out of practice during the short week in an effort to keep him fresh. Roethlisberger responded with one of the finest performances of his career, completing 22 of 25 passes while spreading the ball to nine different players on his way to a perfect quarterback rating of 158.3.

Roethlisberger's first pass turned into a 75-yard touchdown pass to JuJu Smith-Schuster on Pittsburgh's first offensive snap and his last came on a 6-yard toss to rookie Jaylen Samuels on the first play of the fourth quarter.

In between he did a little bit of everything. Roethlisberger even showed off his legs, scrambling for 18 yards in the third quarter on a play that ended with Carolina safety Eric Reid getting ejected for targeting after Reid appeared to dive at Roethlisberger's head as the quarterback attempted to slide.

No MLB rule changes likely until eve of spring training

By Ronald Blum
The Associated Press

CARLSBAD, Calif. — Major League Baseball and its players' union likely will not decide until the eve of spring training whether to change rules in an effort to increase action on the field next year.

Deputy Commissioner Dan Halem said Thursday as the annual general managers' meetings ended that there was no consensus for change yet. More discussions will take place when owners gather next week in Atlanta, the union's executive board convenes in late November and major league executives go to Las Vegas for the winter meetings in mid-December.

Topics being discussed include the increased use of defensive shifts, the decrease in innings thrown by starting pitchers and technology that aids sign stealing. A possible 20-second pitch clock and alterations to rules for waivers, trade deadlines and disabled lists also are being talked about by a tradition-bound sport resistant to change.

"We're an entertainment product. Certainly, we want to play the game in a way that's compelling for our audience, including the younger audience," Halem said. "We're constantly looking at the way the game is changing organically and trying to balance the competitive issues with our clubs and our GMs doing everything possible to win versus what those decisions result in in terms of the product on the field.

And it's not an easy balance, but we work very hard at it."

Agreement with the union is necessary for playing rules changes, but management has the right to unilaterally implement a new playing rule with one year advance notice. Commissioner Rob Manfred had the right to mandate pitch clocks for 2018 but backed off when the union refused to agree, and he retains the ability to order clocks for 2019.

MLB did initiate limits on mound trips without pitching changes in 2018, and the average time of a nine-inning game dropped to 3 hours, 44 seconds during the regular season from 3:05:11 in 2017 — although it rose to 3:34:50 this post-season from 3:29:28 in 2017.

"It's going in the right direction," Halem said.

be fun seeing all those guys for the last time playing against them."

Much has been made of Muschamp's intense defensive preparation and rightfully so. Raymond, who converted to tight end from linebacker and is now on scholarship, had a front row seat in 2014 as Muschamp prepared UF's defense for what would be his final ride here. Suffice to say, a freshman Raymond was slightly overwhelmed at first when it came to those defensive meetings with Muschamp and Co.

"They're intense. They got a lot of stuff and they got a lot of schemes, they disguise it real well," Raymond said. "When I first got here, it was all super-fast paced, and they run their defense like an NFL defense. So we got to be prepared to see all different type of looks."

The adjustment to the collegiate level is undoubtedly tough for all incoming freshmen, but it can be an even more significant challenge for a prospect such as Raymond. While his time with Muschamp didn't last long, Raymond stressed redshirt season under his tutelage was undoubtedly beneficial in regard to his immediate and long-term development. In between positions and only able to contribute on scout team, Raymond needed to find a way to stand out in the interim if he hoped to eventually make a mark on the program.

"It definitely helped me a lot. That was the biggest learning curve for me when I got here, I guess — the speed of play and my football I.Q. — but with them it increased immensely," Raymond said. "I'm ready to show up, put it to the test."

Now, facing the coach who helped turn his dream into a reality, Raymond will show Muschamp his appreciation with his play. Any pleasantries will have to come after the final whistle.

"We're preparing to win a game against a very good South Carolina team. It means that much more to us, the six guys that are still left, to go out there and get a win, but it's going to be fun seeing him. Coach Muschamp's a

NASCAR's culture of cheating unmasked during playoffs

By Jenna Fryer
The Associated Press

AVONDALE, Ariz. — The credo in NASCAR has always been "If you ain't cheatin', you ain't tryin'," and that has never changed despite series effort to keep things on the up-and-up.

Now that culture has resurfaced again and at a most inopportune time for the beleaguered series.

There is one race to go to set the championship field, Sunday in Phoenix, and star driver Kevin Harvick has been snared in the latest scandal. NASCAR found Harvick had an illegal race-winning car — his second of the season — after his victory at Texas Motor Speedway earned him an automatic berth in the Nov. 18 title race in Florida.

The issue was with a spoiler that had been modified to give Harvick an aerodynamic advantage as he dominated and won for a Cup Series-high eighth time this season. Just how much of an advantage Harvick had is irrelevant: The levels of deceit NASCAR believes Stewart-Haas Racing went to were so devious the intent can't be questioned.

Once NASCAR had the car back from Texas and in its Research and Development Center, the spoiler was removed and determined not to be the part supplied by the vendor. Instead, NASCAR believes SHR made its own spoiler, passed it off as one from the mandatory vendor and used it to help Harvick win.

The details were unveiled late Wednesday, 10 hours after Harvick's spot in the finale was revoked. NASCAR has for several years refused to give specifics about infractions — keeping secret ideas on how to game the system — but reversed course on the Harvick penalty because of mounting criticism about the severity of his punishment. Not only did Harvick lose his spot in the final four at Homestead-Miami Speedway, but he must race the final two weeks of the season without his crew chief and car chief.

Scott Miller, NASCAR's senior vice president of competition, said he felt SHR took the notion of pushing boundaries and exploring technology "into borderline ridiculous territory."

With the stakes so high this weekend at Phoenix, where seven drivers will be vying for three open spots in the championship race, NASCAR will check spoilers at the track.

"It's unfortunate that now we'll be pulling spoilers off and having to do another inspection when the teams should really be bringing legal cars to the race track," Miller said.

SHR has not challenged NASCAR's cheating allegation. The team said it would not appeal the penalty and vice president of competition Greg Zipadelli said in a statement "NASCAR determined we ventured into an area not accommodated by its rule book." The team has not made any members available for comment, and Harvick is not scheduled to speak to the media at Phoenix, where he is a nine-time winner. One of his victories came in the spring, part of a three-race winning streak marred by an illegal car at Las Vegas one week earlier.

The latest infraction raises questions about whether SHR has "ventured into an area not accommodated" by NASCAR's rulebook with its other drivers. Its entire four-car lineup — Harvick, Kurt Busch, Clint Bowyer and Aric Almirola — is still eligible for the title race.

It wasn't just SHR last weekend, either. NASCAR took three cars back to its R&D Center after Texas and all three failed teardown inspections. Ryan Blaney's team was punished and so was the team for Erik Jones.

If the only three cars inspected failed, what about the other 37 cars in Sunday's field?

"We certainly can't bring the 40-car field back to R&D," Miller said, elaborating on how issues get missed at the track. "We're under time constraints at the race track to do these inspections. We have small windows and tight windows to get the inspections done, and we might spend in the neighborhood of five minutes with each of the 40 cars for the three-hour window that we have for inspection. To think that we can scrutinize a car as good in five minutes and we can in three hours at the R&D Center is a bit unrealistic."

great guy. He's always shown us love and waited for us after the games we've played at South Carolina, and mentioned to tell us how much he, you know, loves us and stuff like that," Raymond said. "I'm very excited to go back and see him one last time."

Trask out with broken foot

Florida coach Dan Mullen's decision on who will start at quarterback Saturday against visiting South Carolina is a moot point now after Kyle Trask suffered a foot injury at practice Wednesday and had to be carted off the field.

Trask's father, Michael, posted on Facebook on Wednesday night that his son is out for the season because of a broken foot. Trask fractured his foot practicing a trick play Wednesday, his father wrote:

"Gator Nation, I am sad to say that Kyle was injured today in practice while doing a trick play where he hands off to the RB and then goes out for a pass. The throw to Kyle was low and when he planted his foot to catch the pass he felt a pop. Unfortunately he fractured his foot and will be out for the season. Just a freak injury. The good news is that it will be minor surgery and he will be 100% for spring ball in 2019. Thank you for all the well wishes and support for Kyle, we appreciate you very much! Continue to pray for Kyle's recovery."

Calls to UF seeking comment were not returned. Trask missed last season after surgery on a foot injury.

PITTSBURGH Police: Steelers' Brown cited for going 100 mph

Police say Pittsburgh Steelers wide receiver Antonio Brown was stopped for speeding over 100 mph in his Porsche, just hours before the team's game against the Carolina Panthers.

Ross Township police tell WPXI-TV that an officer was searching for a bank robbery suspect Thursday when a black Porsche sped by.

The officer pulled the car over and the driver was identified as Brown.

He was cited for reckless driving.

SEATTLE Smith dealt to Mariners by Rays for Zunino, Heredia

Mallex Smith was made a promise by Seattle general manager Jerry Dipoto when he was acquired for a second time by the Mariners after an initial tenure that lasted less than two hours.

"Dipoto didn't guarantee anything, but he said I at least have 78 minutes," Smith joked. "We'll see."

Smith is back with the Mariners as part of a five-player deal between Seattle and Tampa Bay on Thursday that landed the Rays catcher Mike Zunino and outfielder Guillermo Heredia.

The swap continued a lengthy trade history between the teams and came as a surprise to Zunino, who said he had recent conversations with Seattle manager Scott Servais looking ahead to 2019.

"I was shocked. To see your name in trade talks, let alone this early in the offseason, was beyond my expectations," Zunino said.

Smith, 25, stole a career-best 40 bases this year and was caught 12 times. He hit .296, tied for the major league lead with 10 triples and had 40 RBIs. He is not eligible for free agency until after the 2022 season. He signed with San Diego in 2012, was traded to Atlanta in December 2014 and was dealt to the Mariners in January 2017, then sent to the Rays on the same day in a trade that shipped left-hander Drew Smyly to Seattle.

His previous Seattle stint lasted all of 77 minutes before he was sent to the Rays.

RIO DE JANEIRO IndyCar: No plan in place to return to Brazil in 2020

An IndyCar official said Thursday there is no deal in place to return to Brazil in 2020 with a road race in Rio de Janeiro.

Rio Mayor Marcelo Crivella earlier this week said he had reached an agreement with series organizers. Jay Frye, IndyCar's president of competition and operations, said that is not currently the case.

"We saw the reports and obviously we have a great history there, but IndyCar has no plans at this time to race there in 2020," Frye told The Associated Press. "We get calls all the time, which is flattering. But we have no deal to race in Brazil."

IndyCar last raced in Brazil in 2013 in Sao Paulo.

D-II school in W. Virginia brings dropkick back to college football

By Eric Olson
The Associated Press

Ruan Venter learned how to dropkick playing rugby in his native South Africa and sometimes would do it for fun during football practices at NCAA Division II Shepherd University in West Virginia.

Until a couple weeks ago, he wouldn't have fathomed dropkicking in a game.

In scenes harkening to a bygone era, Venter successfully dropkicked three extra points to the delight of teammates, fans, game officials and even opposing West Virginia Wesleyan on Oct. 27. Venter, whose first name is pronounced Roo-On, hopes to get another opportunity in his senior day game against Virginia-Wise on Saturday.

A standout punter who has drawn the attention of NFL scouts, Venter is the first player known to have scored on a dropkick since Matt Newman of Division III Illinois College did it against Grinnell in September 2013.

"I had no idea about the history of it," Venter said. "I did dropkicks my whole life, and by doing them again I thought about back home, being outside and doing the dropkicks with friends in my home country. Maybe I miss it a little bit. But it also made me excited I could bring that kind of kicking back into the game and, with that, making the people happy and making some history for them as well."

The dropkick was a staple of football back in the days of leather helmets. The kicker takes the snap, holds the ball waist high and drops it straight down as he strides with his non-kicking leg. He strikes the ball as it touches the ground or just as it bounces up.

The popularity of the forward pass led to the evolution of the ball in the 1930s, from more rounded to sleeker and pointed on the ends. That made it easier to throw but more difficult to dropkick because bounces off the drop became unpredictable. Thus, the dropkick became a novelty.

Shepherd coach Ernie McCook knew about Venter's special talent and had the team practice extra points and field goals with Venter dropkicking in case an emergency came up.

Venter's time came after the team's regular kicker, who had struggled with back tightness for a week, missed two straight extra points. McCook wanted to preserve the freshman backup kicker's redshirt year, so Venter was the next option.

Venter is a capable place-kicker, but he is the team's regular holder, and McCook wasn't comfortable with anyone else doing the holding.

"At that point," McCook said, "the dropkick was the best option for us."

McCook had given the officials a heads-up a dropkick might be coming. Venter split the uprights to give Shepherd a 32-7 lead in what would be a 58-35 win.

"As the officials were jogging up the field to set the ball for the kickoff," McCook said, "they said, 'Hey, Coach, thanks for that one, man. That's off my bucket list. I always wanted to see one.'" said that first dropkick came as a big surprise. He and his team saw four more, and blocked one. Venter pushed another one wide right.

WVW coach Del Smith

"Kudos to them for having that in their back pocket," Smith said. "In general, when I see guys get creative schematically, when you're in this business, of course you enjoy it. You just hope it's not at your expense."

Venter said he planned to ask McCook to give him another chance if Shepherd (7-2) gets a comfortable lead against Virginia-Wise (3-6).

"I would always entertain it," McCook said. "I love it when our kids get a chance to have a lot of fun. He's been a great player and a great person in our program. I won't tell you it's out of the question. It's something we would consider. We're going to just focus on winning the game first."

In this Oct. 27, Shepherd University kicker Ruan Venter drop kicks an extra point during a game against West Virginia.

NFL on pace for record-setting scoring midway through season

By Rob Maaddi
The Associated Press

It's never been easier to score in the NFL.

At the midpoint of the season, the league is on pace to set records for most points, touchdowns and touchdown passes in a single season. Teams have scored 6,440 points, 736 touchdowns and 473 TDs in the air through Week 9.

The increase in offensive production follows the lowest-scoring season this decade. Teams averaged 21.7 points per game in 2017. That's up to 24 points this season. A total of 12 teams are averaging at least 27.5 points per game led by the Chiefs (36.3), Saints (34.9) and Rams (33.2).

There are several reasons scoring has soared. A combination of new rules and rule adjustments over the past few years favor offenses. The league has banned helmet-to-helmet contact, implemented a defenseless receiver rule and a body-weight rule against players making sacks, outlawed low hits on quarterbacks and emphasized illegal contact penalties.

There's also been an influx of innovative, offensive-minded coaches — Sean McVay, Doug Pederson, Kyle Shanahan — and talented young quarterbacks — Patrick Mahomes, Carson Wentz, Jared Goff, among others.

Five quarterbacks — Mahomes, Goff, Matt Ryan, Ben Roethlisberger and Aaron Rodgers — are on pace to throw for 5,000 yards. That only happened nine times previously in league history. Ten QBs have a passer rating over 100, double the total last season.

Games are not only featuring more scoring but there's been plenty of close, down-to-the-wire action. Seventy-one games were decided by one score, eight points or less. That's the fifth-most through nine weeks. Thirty-seven games have been decided by a field goal, which was fourth-most at this point. Ten games have reached overtime and 36 teams have rallied to win or tie after trailing in the fourth quarter or overtime.

Close, high-scoring games are exciting for fans, especially the millions who spend billions of dollars to play fantasy football. All of it is good for the league's television ratings, which are up after declining in 2016 and 2017.

More folks are also watching by live streaming. According to a recent study from Conviva, a real-time measurement platform, NFL live viewing was up 72 percent in plays and 83 percent in viewing hours over the same time frame last year.

Conviva's data shows mobile NFL plays were up 95 percent and prime-time NFL saw 109 percent growth in plays and 97 percent growth in viewing hours.

Here's a look inside the numbers from the first half:

PASSING KING: Drew Brees broke Peyton Manning's record for career passing yards last month. Brees has 72,781 yards passing and counting. Manning had 71,940.

KICKING KING: Adam Vinatieri broke Morten Anderson's record for most points and most field goals. Vinatieri has 2,550 points and 573 field goals. Anderson had 2,544 points and 565 field goals.

THE 500 CLUB: Brees and Tom Brady joined Manning and Brett Favre as the only players to throw 500 TD passes. Brees has 506, one more than Brady. Manning had 539 and Favre had 508.

PATRICK THE GREAT: Mahomes has 29 TD passes and 3,185 yards passing yards, the most in both categories through the first 10 games of a player's career. He also has thrown for at least 300 yards in eight straight games, one away from setting the record he currently shares with Andrew Luck.

THIELEN'S CHASE: Adam Thielen became the first player to have eight 100-yard receiving games to start a season, tying Calvin Johnson for the longest streak of such games. The former undrafted wide receiver has 78 catches for the Vikings. He's on pace to challenge Marvin Harrison's single-season record of 143.

GURLEY GETS IN: Todd Gurley has 16 touchdowns — 12 rushing and four receiving — for the Rams. He's on pace for 28. The record is 31 by Hall of Famer LaDainian Tomlinson.

KIRK COMPLETIONS: Kirk Cousins became the first player to complete at least 30 passes in four consecutive games. Before the season, Cousins became the first player to sign a fully guaranteed contract when the Vikings gave him $84 million for three seasons.

FIRST MISS: Justin Tucker had made all 222 extra points in his career before he missed one at the end of Baltimore's 24-23 loss to New Orleans in Week 7. He hadn't missed any kick 33 yards or shorter in 300 tries his career.

GAME OF THE WEEK NO. 2 CLEMSON (9-0) AT NO. 17 BOSTON COLLEGE (7-2)

When: 8 p.m. EST Saturday Where: Alumni Stadium, Chestnut Hill, Mass. TV: ABC

KEYS FOR CLEMSON

Keep the explosion plays coming: The Tigers have been on fire offensively, racking up 240 points against their last four opponents. A total of 78 points came on scoring plays of 20 yards or more, and all but one of those touchdowns went for 46 yards or longer. Hitting a couple of those early will take the Eagles out of the game.

Avoid turnovers: Realistically, the only way Clemson loses this game is by beating itself. Take care of the ball on offense, avoid turnovers and don't take chances that could Boston College a reason to believe.

KEYS FOR BOSTON COLLEGE

A.J. must play: Sophomore running back A.J. Dillon is the kind of chain mover required to keep Clemson's vaunted defensive front honest. But after tweaking an ankle in last week's win against Virginia Tech, his status for the Tigers is uncertain. The last time Dillon sat out with an injury the Eagles lost to N.C. State, 28-21.

Control the clock: Dillon's presence is also essential to help the Eagles burn time while also keeping Clemson's explosive offense off the field. Boston College has to control the clock and convert third downs to have any chance to win.

PREDICTION

Boston College is a much improved team, and dangerous when Dillon is healthy and in the lineup. But Clemson is playing at a different level than any other team in the ACC at this point. Only by committing a bunch of turnovers can the Tigers lose this game.

When: 3:30 p.m. Saturday

POWER RANKINGS Breaking down the ACC

1. Clemson (9-0): Tigers have a real test with this game at Boston College, but seems like Clemson fans probably already have ACC title game tickets

2. Boston College (7-2): The Eagles have put themselves in position to accomplish something special

3. Syracuse (7-2): Orange has stayed on the rise and with Louisville on the docket the good times should continue

4. N.C. State (6-2): Wolfpack makes it a top-heavy power rankings for Atlantic Division team

5. Pittsburgh (5-4): Panthers must be wondering what went wrong in that North Carolina game back in September.

6. Virginia (6-3): Cavaliers failed a big test, but it's not a lost cause. They have first-ever meeting with nearby Liberty.

7. Duke (6-3): Blue Devils have done lots of good deeds, but Tar Heels will want to be spoilers this week

8. Georgia Tech (5-4): Yellow Jackets seem to move the ball OK no matter who's at quarterback

9. Miami (5-4): Hurricanes are a mystery and that turnover chain seems to have lost some magic

10. Virginia Tech (4-4): Hokies once looked so promising. Now, bowl status becomes an issue

11. Florida State (4-5): It has been rough on the Seminoles. Now, it might be even rougher going to Notre Dame

12. Wake Forest (4-5): Wake Forest lost QB Sam Hartman for rest of the regular season with injury apparently late in Syracuse game

13. North Carolina (1-7): Tar Heels have three games left, all against in-state opponents

14. Louisville (2-7): Cardinals have only two chances left — at Syracuse, home vs. N.C. State — to avoid a winless ACC slate

PLAYER TO WATCH

Travis Etienne, RB, Clemson: Ran for 153 yards and two TDs in the No. 2 Tigers' 77-16 dismantling of Louisville.

the Rams will have to match in order to produce more tonight.

that they're coming. Last week we were a step slower than what we normally play. I hope a faster gear at practice this week will help us be there to make blocks and give guys an opportunity to make plays this week."

Of course just getting to the postseason is an accomplishment for a Rutherford team that has struggled to get wins and wasn't sure it would even be able to finish the season after Hurricane Michael.

"That was our goal coming in," Tillman said of making the playoffs. "We knew we had a tough schedule, but we also realized the point system wasn't going to penalize us for playing a tough schedule and that it would benefit us.

Our goal was always to get into the playoffs because anything can happen once you get there and we're here now.

GAME OF THE WEEK NO. 19 TEXAS (6-3) AT TEXAS TECH (5-4)

When: 6:30 p.m. CST Saturday Where: Jones AT&T Stadium, Lubbock, Texas TV: Fox

Texas Tech's Zach Austin (19) scores a touchdown against Oklahoma on Saturday in Lubbock, Texas. [BRAD TOLLEFSON/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

TEXAS TWO-STEP

LONGHORNS, RED RAIDERS DANCE, COMING OFF TOUGH LOSSES

KEYS FOR TEXAS

Assignment and alignment: The Texas defense is clearly the weak link for the Longhorns and the issues begin with the fundamentals. The Longhorns simply weren't in the right positions to make plays against Oklahoma State and West Virginia. Some of that was scheme. Some was poor tackling and a lack of execution by the young and old players on the defense.

Control the tempo: A night game in Lubbock is no easy task. Oklahoma was close to an upset in Lubbock last week before the Red Raiders lost starting quarterback Alan Bowman to a lung injury before the second half. The Longhorns will be in hostile territory and the best way to quiet the tortilla tossing crowd is to run the football and keep the Texas Tech offense on the sideline.

KEYS FOR TEXAS TECH

Stay with the running game: The Red Raiders abandoned the running game in a loss to Iowa State two weeks ago and in the first half against Oklahoma. The loss of starting quarterback Alan Bowman means Texas Tech must rely on the running game to win at home. Kliff Kingsbury would rather pass the ball 40 times, but that's not how the Red Raiders can win this football game.

Force mistakes: Texas quarterback Sam Ehlinger's last interception was against Maryland. Running backs Tre Watson and Keaontay Ingram aren't fumbling the football. It's been the inability of the Texas defense to force stops that derailed momentum. Texas Tech's defense won't stop the Longhorns from moving the football.

PREDICTION

Texas 38, Texas Tech 31: This prediction is flipped if Tech could count on a healthy Bowman to lead the offense. Jett Duffey is a quality player and a great runner, but he lacks the throwing dimension to threaten the Texas defense.

BEST OF THE REST This weekend's other top conference games (all times CST)

OKLAHOMA STATE (5-4) AT NO. 6 OKLAHOMA (8-1)
When: 2:30 p.m. Saturday
Where: Memorial Stadium, Norman, Okla.
TV: ABC
Notes: Rivalry games rarely go as planned so don't expect smooth sailing for the Sooners. The Oklahoma State team that beat Boise State and Texas is capable of scaring Oklahoma, especially with the continued poor play of the defense. Mike Gundy's squad is horrendous on the road this year.

BAYLOR (5-3) AT NO. 22 IOWA STATE (5-3)
When: 2:30 p.m. Saturday
Where: Jack Trice Stadium, Ames, Iowa
TV: FS1
Notes: Baylor quarterback and former Lake Travis star Charlie Brewer threw a game winning touchdown at home against Oklahoma State and helped the Bears get one victory closer to a bowl berth. Iowa State is a dark-horse candidate to play for a Big 12 title if Oklahoma or West Virginia slip up in November.

TCU (4-5) AT NO. 9 WEST VIRGINIA (7-1)
When: 11 a.m. Saturday
Where: Puskas Stadium, Morgantown, W.Va.
TV: FS1
Notes: This should be a breeze for the Mountaineers. West Virginia needs style points to force its way into the College Football Playoff picture. The Horned Frogs lost to Kansas two weeks ago and were a missed extra point away from overtime last week against Kansas State.

POWER RANKINGS Breaking down the Big 12

1. Oklahoma (8-1, 5-1): TCU, Kansas and Kansas State combined for 329 points in 18 games in the Big 12 thus far this season. The Oklahoma offense produced 302 points in six games. The Sooners remain the class of the Big 12 despite a national championship hinging on the defense improving. Kyler Murray is magic and is putting up bigger numbers than Baker Mayfield did in 2017.

2. West Virginia (7-1, 5-1): The Mountaineers escaped Austin with a one-point win over the Longhorns after head coach Dana Holgerson followed common sense and probability by going for and converting a two-point conversion with seconds remaining in the game. Two games with Oklahoma to end the season, one in the regular season and a rematch in the Big 12 Championship Game seems likely. Good job, Big 12.

3. Iowa State (5-3, 4-2): The mighty Cyclones keep on winning. The loss at TCU is the only bad loss on the schedule and the last four games of the season are Baylor, Texas, Kansas State and Incarnate Word. If West Virginia or Oklahoma slip up before December, Matt Campbell's program is waiting to steal the crown.

4. Texas (6-3, 4-2): Texas lost its sixth game when leading entering the fourth quarter under Tom Herman. That's the most of any program in the Power Five. The Longhorns are now on a two-game losing streak with a road trip to Texas Tech and Iowa State on home on deck. Sam Ehlinger and the offense look great. It's the defense failing the Longhorns.

5. Texas Tech (5-4, 3-3): Texas Tech was exchanging blows with Oklahoma until starting quarterback Alan Bowman was forced back to the hospital with issues breathing. The Red Raiders defense simply couldn't withstand four quarters of physical football and collapsed down the stretch. A win against Texas would heal the wounds.

6. Baylor (5-3, 3-3): The Bears took advantage of an Oklahoma State squad still dreaming of victory over Texas to move to .500 in Big 12 play. The win for Baylor also made a bowl game possible and that would be a huge step forward for head coach Matt Rhule in his second season.

7. Oklahoma State (5-4, 2-4): Mike Gundy knows how to win games he shouldn't and lose games he shouldn't. It'd be impressive if it weren't so disappointing. The inconsistency is what Gundy hates lean on when he's placed on the hot seat. The Cowboys did the same thing against Kansas State earlier in the season.

8. TCU (4-5, 2-4): A missed extra point by Kansas State allowed TCU to break its three-game losing streak. It was the second win for Gary Patterson's program since beating SMU in Week 2. The offense is horrid.

9. Kansas State (3-6, 1-5): The Wildcats lost five of its last six games. Is it time for Bill Snyder to retire again?

10. Kansas (3-6, 1-5): Kansas scored three points a week removed from winning a Big 12 game for the first time since 2016. Head coach David Beaty is out at the end of the season. Good for him.

ACES ON BRIDGE: BOBBY WOLFF

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"To try to understand the real significance of what the great artists, the serious masters, tell us in their masterpieces, that leads to God."
— Vincent van Gogh

Helen Sobel was one of the world's best players of her generation. When she declared three no-trump here, West led the spade seven, his partner's suit. Sobel made two winning plays at the first trick: She called for dummy's 10, and then she ducked East's queen.

After taking the spade king continuation with the ace, she played the club queen (hoping the club honors were split). East took this with the king and played the spade nine, taken by Sobel's jack, while discarding a heart from dummy. Then came the club 10. West won and could do no better than exit with a club, taken by the jack. The diamond ace came next, then a diamond to the queen, and the hand was over. Sobel had two tricks in each major, plus a club and four diamonds.

Note the significance of the play to the first trick. If declarer does not put up the spade 10, East covers the seven with the eight. South must duck, or the spades will eventually be set up, as the defenders still have communications in place in spades. After declarer ducks trick one, if the defenders are careful not to open up hearts, declarer can take no more than eight tricks.

But once declarer puts up the 10, it forces East to cover; otherwise, declarer has a cheap trick while retaining two spade stoppers. Now, by ducking, declarer has effectively severed the defenders' communications in the spade suit.

ANSWER: Bid two no-trump here. I believe this to be a forcing auction, though not forcing to game. With one heart stopper and no reason to assume either opponent has five hearts, you should bid what is in front of you. While you might just about have a 4-4 spade fit, your partner can explore (with a cue-bid of three hearts) if his hand is unsuitable to play no-trump, but he wants to drive to game.

Yesterday's Jumbles: GLAZE AGENT DROOPY JARGON
Answer: The display at the Levi Strauss museum showed the dungarees' — "JEAN-EALOGY"

Daughter given everything gives heartache in return

Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: Ever since high school, our adult daughter has had mood swings. My wife and I thought she'd grow out of it as she matured, but she hasn't. At her request we sent her to a university far away, and we were proud that she earned her bachelor's degree. We thought independent living would do the trick, but her personality and behavior toward us didn't change.

She's an only child, and we spoiled her. I asked her to try for scholarships to help us out, but she didn't. She married and had two wonderful kids, but her mood swings persist. When I mentioned she see a counselor or therapist as a way to get some third-party advice and sort things out, she hit the ceiling and told me I was the one who needs therapy. Then she brought up my flaws and my past drinking problem.

After 10 years she divorced her husband. She got custody of the kids and the house. Her authoritative and moody behavior is affecting our grandchildren.

I love my daughter very much and always have. If you were in my shoes, Abby, what would you do for a more healthy and loving relationship for all involved? -- STILL HER DAD IN FLORIDA

DEAR DAD: I would look back and examine all the things I did to foster her behavior. An example would be paying for her divorce. Then I would stop doing them and not resume until she agreed to consult a psychotherapist about her mood swings.

DEAR ABBY: Before I met my boyfriend of eight months, I planned a 10-day Japan vacation for next year with my best guy friend, "J." We have been friends for eight years, and have never had any romantic interest in each other.

J and I were both single when we started making plans. Then I met my boyfriend. My boyfriend knew from the beginning that this trip was going to happen next year. Because the date wasn't "set in stone" or paid for until recently, my boyfriend thinks I should have called it off. He says I'm making the trip and my friend a higher priority than him.

I still want to take the trip. I feel canceling would be betraying my friend J. Am I being a bad girlfriend? -- TRIPPED UP IN THE EAST

DEAR TRIPPED UP: A "bad" girlfriend? No. An independent one, yes. You say your boyfriend has known about this from the beginning, so this wasn't a surprise to him.

HOROSCOPES BY HOLIDAY MATHIS

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Every attitude causes a chain reaction. So it's important to check in with yourself before stepping one foot into conversations, environments or projects. Where am I at? What attitude am I bringing to it?

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — A buoyant mood prevails. From here it's easier to be resourceful and open to change. Any and every thing you do to feel better will contribute to your positive vibes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21) — The real challenge will be in choosing what to believe. Assessing not only if a potential belief is correct, but also what its natural trajectory is. Who will you be if you believe it? Choose beliefs that uplift and empower.

CANCER (June 22-July 22) — Conventional approaches to self-improvement may leave you feeling resentful and rebellious against the taskmaster that is supposedly the higher version of you. Make your overall well-being a priority instead.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — The key to harnessing and maximizing your energy is to embrace your own polarizations -- the very best and worst in you, the most attractive and unattractive traits and tendencies. There's power in loving your whole self.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Productivity and joy go hand in hand. Even work you once considered to be a grind will be over quickly and done well because of the happiness in your approach.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Your brain has a way of balancing itself and today you can practically feel it at work, guiding you to the next action that will lead to your health and well-being.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21) — The earth is big, and yet in the entire world there is only one place where success exists, and that place is inside you. There are experiences you'd like to have. Whether you have them or not, you are successful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Because everyone has different values, it is sometimes difficult for people to understand what matters to you and how you want to be treated. Today you won't have that problem. They'll get it right away.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — How can you get more of the things that make you feel good being in your body? Because when your physical self is happy, the rest of you will follow in kind.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — The first time you do something, there's excitement and possibly trepidation over the unknown aspects of it. The second time you know what to expect and can relax into the process.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Learning about things makes you appreciate and enjoy them better. Your urge to go deeper into a body of knowledge is an instinct to move toward happiness.

Stay to make art for the future

Tony Simmons

PANAMA CITY — The arts community in Bay County and surrounding areas is still reeling from the hurricane. Aftershocks of a sort will continue for months as people process their mental trauma and fight their way back to a semblance of the lives they had before the storm.

Many will opt out. I know of musicians, writers, artists and filmmakers who have left the area because their rental homes were destroyed and they can't find housing; their day jobs were wiped out and they had to find work elsewhere; their investments in personal property such as musical instruments and recording equipment were irreplaceable.

And the economy for art will decline for some time, as people who struggle to pay bills for renovations or repairs are less interested in buying artwork.

(For an update on the state of area arts and performance centers, see The Artist's Touch article on page E22.)

"Given the circumstances, it is difficult to feel like creating art when, for some, tomorrow seems so uncertain," said a post at the Global Arts Society Facebook page. "We have endured life altering circumstances, but

With classes reconvening at Gulf Coast State College, students gather on the stage extension for a class in stage design. GCSC will have a special free performance Nov. 17 and 18.

with each passing day, we move closer towards becoming a stronger more united community."

However, now is the moment, when the wounds are raw, to make art for the future.

"Right now, artists are in the state of mind of, 'How do I react to this?'" said Public Eye Soar co-founder Margaret Potter Webster as we spoke outside Amavida Coffee in St. Andrews this week. "Don't leave. Start creating. Hopefully, creating things that relate to getting through this. Hopeful things. Things of beauty."

Six months after a devastating storm, Margaret said, people will begin buying art for their refurbished or rebuilt homes. So the work being done in the aftermath won't begin paying off immediately, but it will eventually.

Helen Ballance with Beach Art Group voiced a similar timeline during the monthly Cultural Arts meeting hosted by Bay Arts Alliance on Wednesday: "I've been talking to New Orleans friends who said four months after Katrina they did an arts show, and people wanted the arts. They wanted the beauty, the creativity, the energy."

To that end, she's collecting art supplies at the Palms Conference Center in Panama City Beach, where area artists can gather to work on new art, or pick up supplies to take wherever they're staying.

Jayson Kretzer at the Center for the Arts in Panama City is planning a Local Artists Expo to take over the Main Gallery later this month. The Center will reduce its commission fee in order to give the artists a place to show their work, as most area galleries are shut down. The Center will also offer some free studio days for area artists.

"We don't want our artists to leave," Jayson said. "We don't know when the disposable income will come back — but if we love our creative community then losing them is going to be worse than the damage to the buildings."

As one person at the meeting said, "The first wall that gets reconstructed will have art on it."

And for that, we need to support our area artists. Peace.

GO & DO: ART FESTIVAL

Light up the night at Public Eye Soar

Project art festival declares 'Year of the Local Artist'

By Tony Simmons

747-5080 | @PCNHTonyS

tsimmons@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY — Despite the challenges left behind by Hurricane Michael, this weekend's fifth annual Public Eye Soar projection art festival promises to outshine last year's event.

Founders John "J.D." Daniel and Margaret Potter Webster, collectively The Public Eye production company based in downtown Panama City, have designated this "The Year of the Local Artist," with nearly 150 artists represented in the show.

"We shot 22 hours at Floriopolis, CityArts, Global Art Society and Gulf Coast State College, just shooting artist who couldn't submit digitally," Webster said.

"It probably took another 100 hours to put all that content together," Daniel said, as they had to convert still images of two-dimensional art into moving images and slideshows.

The art includes jewelry, paintings in every medium, ceramics, sculptures and more. There's even some stop-motion photography involved.

Unlike last year, which included dozens of international artists in the mix, this year will include only a few from Belgium, the Netherlands, Cuba, South Africa and India. The rest are from the Panhandle area.

Daniel and Webster said it was important to focus on local artists and local sponsors this year.

"This is all we've got," Webster said, indicating the condition of the surrounding area, post-hurricane. "We're all we've got."

In addition to the projections adorning the walls of buildings downtown, the festival will have interactive elements such as "JD's Funhouse," sand art, shadow puppets, and retro video games on a projection screen.

After the hurricane, Daniel and Webster weren't certain if the event could continue.

"At first we were like, 'We can't do this.' We didn't even have a permit yet," Webster said.

"We weren't even sure if they'd let us," Daniel added, but the City of Panama City approved the event on a consent agenda after the storm, and it has been full-speed since then.

The three-night festival started with a free indoor screening of the Academy Award-winning animated film, "Loving Vincent," at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Panama City Center for the Arts, 19 E. Fourth St. Originally intended to be shown outside, the plan was changed when rain was forecast.

The film is the first to use oil paintings for each frame of film, taking more than 100 artists more than eight years to complete. Licensing costs for the movie were sponsored by Bay Arts Alliance and the St. Joe Community Foundation.

"It's a free community movie," Webster said. "It's in the style of Van Gogh's paintings. I thought it was fascinating, and for us it's a perfect fit. It goes well into our mission statement of providing art in unusual places."

Friday and Saturday nights will feature projections on the exterior walls of buildings stretching from the Center for the Arts to CityArts Cooperative on Luverne Avenue, starting at dusk. The public is encouraged to wear white shirts so they can participate in the projections as living screens.

"You can stand in front of the projectors and be part of the art," Webster said.

In addition, you can have your own shirt turned into a commemorative shirt. Artist Heather Clements is designing a stencil so the public can paint the "I helped create a Public Eye Soar" logo on their shirts.

"We never allowed anyone to have a Public Eye Soar shirt before, except for volunteers," Webster said.

Other attractions will include live music and dance performances by the Wabi Sabis, Loyal Customers, BEAM with Tara Dent, Panama City Belly Dance, and Gypsy Parvana Belly Dance. Doodlers will be stationed on the street, and Deano Minton will draw caricatures.

Each year, the free festival accepts donations to help cover costs. This year, donations will go to the United Way of Northwest Florida.

“They were here before the storm, and they’re certainly not going away any time after the storm,” Webster said. “They support the agencies that support our community.”

Russo’s Air Conditioning sponsors a cash award for the People’s Choice winner. In addition to partners already mentioned, other sponsors include Sweet Bay, Innovations Federal Credit Union and DP Audio Video.

Public Eye Soar launched in 2014 and attracted about 300 people that year. It has grown steadily.

“It was very ‘Our Gang,’” Daniel said of that inaugural event. “Sort of, ‘let’s put on a show,’ and we did, and people liked it.”

Prior to Public Eye Soar, Daniel had participated for a few years in Digital Graffiti in Alys Beach. He won the People’s Choice award there for his “JD’s Funhouse” interactive installation.

“I thought more people should see something like that, and we have all these friends that are artists,” he said.

Webster came up with the festival name, adding, “We were just looking for a challenge.”

The sand art installation is a crowd favorite.

The festival started Thursday with a free showing of the animated film, “Loving Vincent.”

Fall for fishing with private charter boats

PANAMA CITY BEACH — While Capt. Anderson's Marina head boats won't be back till March 1, several private charter boats are docked at the marina and ready for fishing.

On Nov. 6, Capt. Chris Nguyen's Reel Screamer ran its first charter since Hurricane

"He caught six or seven redfish," Nguyen said Nov. 8. "I have been helping friends and family out, and it was nice to have normalcy to get out fishing. I went out again yesterday, just playing around, and we caught 30. I had my brother and my cousin with me. We all grew up fishing with each other."

Nguyen's parents came to the U.S. in the '70s and have stayed in this area. Though Nguyen — born and raised in Panama City — has been fishing all his life, this is his first year to run his 22-foot Capehorn at Capt. Anderson's Marina, 5550 N. Lagoon Drive.

"I live at the beach, and we were scared of the storm surge," said Nguyen, who has two Capehorns and a 28-foot Contender.

He moved his boats to Southport during the hurricane, but none were damaged. Reel Screamer is back at Capt. Anderson's Marina in slot 15E, docked next to dive boats.

"I haven't been offshore to look at the wrecks, but I have heard more toward the south they have moved or are not the same," Nguyen said. "Personally, I haven't been able to get offshore, but inshore fishing is what I mostly do and it's been fine."

He charges $100 per hour for the charter fishing trip and his boat can carry up to four people — who can share the cost. For more about Reel Screamer, call 850-691-3876 or visit Facebook.com/ReelScreamerCharters.

When Capt. Bryan Jones got word it was safe to return to Capt. Anderson's Marina, he also was back with his boat, Showtime.

"We're charter fishing out of Capt. Anderson's Marina," said Jones, whose 42-foot boat was docked at Dolphin Bay Marina during Hurricane Michael. "We were lucky, luckier than most. Dolphin Bay was one of the few marinas that survived. ... Most people call us and the first question is, 'Is Panama City Beach still alive?'"

Showtime, an Ocean Yacht Sportfisher, is alive and well at Slip 1W at Capt. Anderson's Marina and accommodates up to six passengers.

"We're catching a little of everything right now. Laws require us to throw back red snapper and trigger fish — though we can still get a picture. But everything is biting — vermillion snapper, white snapper, gag grouper, red grouper, King Mackerel and Amberjack; that's our targeted species," said Jones, who added large storms also can stir up rare catches in the days following.

Jones, a father of six, was a Coast Guard licensed captain before becoming captain of Showtime.

"I've been fishing for 20 years, out of Capt. Anderson's for eight or nine and before that Treasure Island," Jones said. "It means everything to me, the fellowship. People we meet fishing, smiling and having a good time makes the whole day go by a little easier."

Trips on Showtime range from four to 18 hours. The current rate, which runs through December, is $140/hour.

"It's $140 for an hour whether it's one or six people," explained Jones, who added friends and families can go in on the price together. "Six hours is a fun trip. Bring food and a drink, and smile. We provide rods, reels and bait, and a deck-hand works with them."

Reel Screamer is run by Capt. Chris Nguyen.

For more details, visit Showtimefishingcharters.com or call 850-258-0705.

Other boats from Capt. Anderson's Marina were taken to Watson Bayou, such as the Anderson fleet, and Miller Marine in Southport. Not all boats at Miller Marine fared well, but Reel Commocean was another one that was fortunate.

"We were one of the first boats back up from Miller Marine," said Capt. Brad Foran, who had to give his boat

"a good scrubbing." "Once I put my eye on the boat, I knew it was fine. I will need to do some paint work come December."

While his main business is from April to October, he is willing to schedule fishing trips this month for anyone who's interested.

"They'll just have to work around a little bit of scheduling," said Foran, who has taken on a second job to help provide for his family — including his wife and their 5-month-old.

Fishing equipment is provided.

Reel Commocean, a 58-foot custom-built Resmondo fishing yacht, was docked back in its 4C slot at the marina by October's end.

Foran's 58-foot custom-built Resmondo fishing yacht was docked back in its 4C slot at the marina by October's end.

"Three years ago, they built a spot wide enough to accommodate the boat and I moved it to Capt. Anderson's from Lighthouse Marina," Foran said.

Reel Commocean can hold up to 24 passengers. The base price is for six people, whether it's one person or six — $960 for six hours, $1,280 for eight hours, $1,600 for 10 hours, plus an extra $100 per person after six people.

For more about Reel Commocean, call 850-630-0424 or 850-236-0056.

"The hurricane definitely changed things," Foran said. "It moves a lot of artificial reefs. They will kind of collapse. It will be like starting over when finding new places to fish. Some of it will be good. A lot of people knew places to fish before which caused them to be over-fished."

See what's going on beneath the service first-hand with Wreck-Reaction Dive Charters. Diver's Den offers daily dive charters on a Delta Dive Boat for up to 13 divers, led by a boat captain who is U.S. Coast Guard certified and a PADI dive instructor. Spearfishing and dive trips are available. For more information, call 850-234-8717 or visit DiversDenPCB.com.

Dance, dine through tragedy

Panama City studios offer free classes

By Jan Waddy

747-5072 | @PCNHJanWaddy
jwaddy@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY — Dancers know the healing power of dance and are opening their studio doors to the community.

“We start at 2½ and have an adult class — so it’s for all ages, boys and girls. If you’re not a student yet, you’re still welcome,” said Sam Tuno, dance instructor and marketing manager for Tonie’s Dance Workshop. “So many people are displaced and the kids aren’t really having normalcy with school. We wanted the kids to do something happy and fun. Dance is just good for the soul.”

Tonie’s Dance Workshop reopened its Parker/Callaway location, 5409 Hickory St., on Nov. 5 with complimentary dance classes for all ages till Christmas break.

“We are fortunate to have one studio still standing,” said Tuno, who added the Stanford Road studio in Panama City will be rebuilt. “We normally have registration and place them in a class, but given the circumstances, they can just look online at the classes and then just come, drop in. Classes are Monday through Friday. We have two rooms.”

Dancers from Parker and Stanford studio locations as well as new students are invited to decide which classes are the best fit at ToniesDanceWorkshop.com/schedule.

More than half of Tonie’s Dance Workshop instructors have been displaced, as well as many studio families.

“The teachers were just as happy to be back and dance as the students. Everybody agreed to come back and teach; it’s part of our lives,” Tuno said. “We are accepting donations for dancewear, if you have extra shoes. If they don’t have dancewear, they can come in what they can.”

Owner Tonie Bense is accepting donations for dance families through the Bense Family Foundation, a 501(c)3 nonprofit; click on the tab at ToniesDanceWorkshop.com.

Fred Astaire/Wine Knot

Fred Astaire Dance Studio and Wine Knot Tapas, 2401 Ruth Hentz Ave., will host a free concert from 5-10 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 10, with free paella while it lasts and Latin music all night — “just trying to do our part to lift everyone’s spirits,” said owner Brian Price.

The dance studio also is offering free beginning lessons and practice parties for the rest of 2018. Classes are at 7 p.m. Tuesday and practice sessions at 7:45 p.m. Thursdays. Just text your name and number to Price at 850-303-9508 to be added to the list and then show up at 6:45 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 13. If for any reason you can’t make it, your name will be automatically added to the following week.

Other area dance studios that are open include Aerial DancePC, 901 NE Ave. Unit B3 (850-630-9229 or AerialDancePanamaCity.com) and Panama City Dance Academy, 100 Jazz Drive (850-763-7191 or PanamaCityDanceAcademy.com).

GCSC plans original hurricane-centered shows

By Tony Simmons

PANAMA CITY — As the days and weeks pass, the post-hurricane status of Bay County's arts and cultural centers will continue to evolve. Here's the latest news from those we could reach.

ART CENTERS

The Artist Cove, 36 W. Beach Drive, has vacated the building to allow renovation. Founder Karen Williams said the working studio and gallery had a great first year, and landlord Maxwell Miller promised the venue could be repaired. She looks forward to returning as soon as possible.

CityArts Cooperative, 318 Luverne Ave., houses Fringe Gallery, a dance studio, and the offices of The Public Eye (which puts on the annual Public Eye Soar festival). According to Margaret Webster of The Public Eye, CityArts is "on hold" as directors work out what must be done, how much it will cost, and whether they will be able to remain in the building. The Public Eye office was inundated, and the dance floor is warped. With repairs yet to begin, it will be 2019 before they can plan for the future.

Floriopolis, 1125 Beck Ave., is closed indefinitely. While the landlord repairs the roof and other structural needs, some of the meetings that Floriopolis previously hosted have moved to the St. Andrews Civic Club on 10th Street. Founder Heather Parker hopes that a cooperative venture with other art groups might develop in 2019, but for the time being there is no plan for moving forward at Floriopolis.

Global Arts Society lost its two venues, one at the A.D. Harris facility on 11th Street and the other at the Panama City Mall, but the founders consider this merely a setback. Here's a post from their Facebook page:

"What you may not know is Global Arts Society only began occupying buildings a few years ago. We began over 12 years ago taking art into every open door. The storm has just taken us back to our roots for now. As we decipher through the rubble, take what we can salvage, and rebuild, look for us throughout the community offering art relief in every open door."

Panama City Center for the Arts, 19 E. Fourth St., has power and air conditioning, and is open for events, classes and exhibits.

The Light Room, 306 Harrison Ave., reopened Oct. 30 and already has commenced new photography classes. For details, visit TheLightRoomPC.com.

PERFORMANCE VENUES

Amelia G. Tapper Center Theatre, Gulf Coast State College, 5230 W. U.S. 98, is again hosting classes and preparing for a special performance. The college will stage an original theatre performance exploring the effects of Hurricane Michael on the community at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 17, and at 2:30 p.m. Nov. 18. The free event will be open to the public with donations accepted to aid hurricane relief measures. For details, contact Jason Hedden at jhedden@gulfcoast.edu.

In addition, the college will have auditions for its April 2019 production of "Hairspray: The Broadway Musical" at 6 p.m. on Dec. 4. Performers of all ages are encouraged to attend the audition, which is open to non-students and community actors.

Kaleidoscope Theatre, 207 E. 24th St. in Lynn Haven, has fundraisers running via GoFundMe.com Tickets.

Verdini.com (visit the page at Facebook.com/KaleidoscopeTheatrePC for links). Recently, volunteers including the Mosley High School drama department have helped the theater clean its large costume inventory.

Marina Civic Center, 8 Harrison Ave., restoration is under way, and refunds are available for any tickets purchased for shows originally scheduled through the end of 2018. Shows are cancelled for at least six months, including Panama City Pops Orchestra and Panama City Music Association. Box office staff can be contacted for details at info@MarinaCivicCenter.com.

The Martin Theatre, 409 Harrison Ave., is still being evaluated. Director Barbara McMinis was slated to meet with city officials on Thursday to discuss the situation.

"We are looking for a venue for the Presents series, and possibly 'Gypsy,'" McMinis said. "We plan to rebuild better and more beautifully than before. We may be down, but with the help of the city, community and our wonderful patrons, we're far from out!"

The Rehearsal Room, is closed and will not reopen at its former location. Founder Lauren Kolmetz said the venue "fared well in the storm," but the property has been sold.

"I've loved dancing with you all the past six years," she added. "And to those that danced here as children, I am truly heartbroken. I first came here at age 15 to take a class with Bobbie Massey. Then at 17, became a student teacher for Suzanne Nield. ... Thank you to so many people over so many decades of bringing the joy of dance to Panama City."

‘Bohemian Rhapsody’ brings Freddie Mercury to life

Each week, locals Cole Schneider and Matt Greene share their different takes on new movies out in area theaters. For podcasts and more, visit MovietownMovieClub.com

Cole: Director brings visual flair to ‘Bohemian Rhapsody’

Biopics tend to be dry and more than a bit generic, so when someone as effervescent and larger than life as Freddie Mercury is the subject of a biopic I get nervous. “Bohemian Rhapsody” only fits that tendency about halfway, but I’ll call it a glass half full.

On paper, the movie is absolutely generic. There isn’t anything particularly surprising or intriguing in the screenplay itself, although it must also be said that it does work on paper even without the richness Queen deserves. Characters act according to reason and have arcs that are sensible and fulfilling, but movies aren’t made on paper and “Bohemian Rhapsody” isn’t altogether staid.

Director Bryan Singer of “X-Men” fame has instead imbued the movie with remarkable visual flair. It’s as if he knew the words couldn’t match Freddie’s flamboyance, so he went overboard with the images. We learn about Freddie by way of narrative, but we enter into Freddie’s essence and his brilliance by way of the cinematography and the editing. It’s bold and it’s baroque, if not particularly biting.

Rami Malek plays Freddie Mercury in ‘Bohemian Rhapsody.’ [NICK DELANEY/20TH CENTURY FOX]

‘Bohemian Rhapsody’

Rated: PG-13 (thematic elements, suggestive material, drug content and language)

There is emotional investment that the movie earns despite the stated emotions being as clichéd as anything, and that’s because the cinema reinvigorates everything to become fresh.

I suspect much will be made of Rami Malek’s portrayal of Freddie Mercury come award season, and he’s great to be sure, but it’s really Bryan Singer that brings his ornate wit and artistic excellence to the movie. “Bohemian Rhapsody” isn’t a great film, but it’s a much more enjoyable one than it should be.

Matt: Rami Malek a ringer for Freddie Mercury

Inimitable rock band Queen and their once-in-a-lifetime front-man Freddie Mercury have stood apart from the fray of classic rock artists by two royally distinct attributes: their bombast and their weirdness.

Their bombast, as represented by the giant guitar crunches in “Fat Bottomed Girls” or the soaring choral harmonies in “We Are the Champions,” is on full display in “Bohemian Rhapsody.” Unfortunately, their weirdness, as represented by the opera influences in “Bohemian Rhapsody” or the uncharacteristic rockabilly in “Crazy Little Thing Called Love,” is sorely missing.

The film focuses on Mercury specifically, from his early days with the band in college, through their unlikely ascent into worldwide superstardom, to his final days fighting AIDS. Obviously, the casting of Mercury is crucial, and Rami Malek is flamboyant, magnetic and downright incredible. His movements and personality are Mercury through-and-through, and the pain underneath his larger-than-life aura is beautiful. It’s a cliché, but I honestly got lost in his performance to the point of forgetting it wasn’t Freddie himself I was watching.

As for the film in whole, it’s a typical, sing-by-numbers, greatest-hits version of a musical biopic. If you’ve seen any number of other similar films (“Ray,” “Straight Outta Compton,” “Walk the Line”), then you know the type: Set up the sad family/home life, hit the career highlights, present a downfall, then finally crescendo into a celebration. It’s a formula as old as G chord – C chord – D chord – repeat. Still, “Bohemian Rhapsody” uses its formula well.

And when it narrows in on the music of Queen, all complaints are thrown away in favor of light of sheer swaggering enjoyment.
